

Clayton's water trust fund called 'a mirage'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton's water trust fund plan, a complex proposal to pay for Texas' future water needs, is "the ultimate mirage," according to the Sierra Club.

"It is a false image of unlimited supplies of water into infinity if only we taxpayers give the water development interests a blank check to build reservoirs and import water," said Ken Kramer, Sierra Club legislative policy chairman.

Kramer's comments came after Clayton asked the House Committee on Constitutional Amendments on Thursday to back his plan, which failed to win approval during the recent legislative session.

Gov. Bill Clements put Clayton's bill on the menu for the special session that starts Monday. Three House committees got a head start on the session by holding Thursday meetings.

Clayton said his legislative colleagues would be remembered as "wise" if they vote to use the state revenue surplus to pay for needed water projects.

"The water crisis is almost on us. If we don't act now the cost is going to be many times what it is today," he said.

The money could be used to guarantee bonds issued by local governments for water projects needed as the state grows. Officials from several river authorities and the Texas Farm Bureau testified for the measure.

The Sierra Club says more reservoirs are not the answer to the water problem. The club, with 6,000 members in Texas, believes the estimates of future water needs for Texas are inflated.

Kramer said, "The water trust fund would perpetuate the emphasis on reservoir construction ... taking away some of the impetus for other perhaps more advisable, more appropriate, and less costly approaches for dealing with water quantity, water quality, and flood control issues."

Texasans should learn how to curb their expensive water habit rather than spend money to support it, he said.

"We do not need to lock up massive amounts of money for tired old approaches to water resource issues when the need for that money has not been demonstrated," Kramer said.

Catherine Perrine, water resources director for the League of Women Voters of Texas, testified against the dedication of state money for any specific purpose. She also said using $500 million in state money to back local bonds could eventually weaken the state's fiscal position.

The League supports raising the interest ceiling on state bonds as a way to generate more money for water projects.

The natural resources committee also worked on a bill that would implement the constitutional amendment creating the water trust fund if lawmakers and voters OK the amendment.

Showers expected in parts of Texas

By the Associated Press

Showers and thunderstorms were forecast today for portions of South Texas and West Texas.

The heaviest shower activity was expected in Southeast Texas and in the area of West Texas west of the Pecos River, the National Weather Service said.

The remainder of the state was to have partly cloudy skies and continued warm temperatures. Highs were to be mostly in the 90s with readings in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas expected to be near 103.

Some shower activity was reported during the night and early today across portions of Southwest Texas northward into southern sections of the Panhandle. Reese Air Force, located near Lubbock, received .11 of an inch in a thundershower early today.

Early morning temperatures were in the 70s statewide.

Body of girl identified as missing 11-year-old

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Pathologists still have not determined the cause of death of an 11-year-old girl whose body was found Tuesday in a creek outside Tyler, but Smith County Sheriff J.B. Smith says he assumes the girl was murdered.

"This case will be investigated as a capital murder," Smith said. "This is one of the worst crimes we have investigated since I became sheriff (five years ago), and the first I recall involving a child this age."

He said the investigation has yielded "several leads" but no suspects.

Trisha McRoy was missing from the couch where she slept when her family awoke Saturday morning. A hole had been cut in the screen door.

A fisherman found her decomposed body lying face down and covered with mud in a creek five miles from her parent's house outside of Tyler.

The girl's blind father, Gene McRoy, said Thursday he was "relieved" that Trisha's body had been identified.

"All I want to do is remember Trisha the way she was," he said. "I just hope they (authorities) catch this individual so it won't happen again to some other little girl."

Peace Justice Mary Guthrie of Trroup said pathologists had asked her to delay ruling on the cause of death, but she said she was "100 percent certain this is a homicide."

The funeral is tentatively set for 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

Gov. Brown orders spraying to begin following federal quarantine threat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., saying his hand was being forced by the federal government, today announced he would order immediate aerial spraying of areas infested by Mediterranean fruit flies.

His announcement came about two hours after U.S. Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said California fruits would be quarantined Monday unless Brown approved "immediate action" to spray affected areas.

The spraying of the pesticide Malathion will begin in northern California as soon as safety procedures can be worked out and the residents are informed, Brown said.

Brown said he reversed his earlier decision not to implement aerial spraying after speaking with Block by telephone.

"The decision of the U.S. Department of Agriculture to quarantine statewide 200 types of fruits and vegetables leaves California with no alternative. We are being forced into aerial spraying," he said at a news conference in Century City.

"The quarantine would require a massive fumigation program imperiling the lives and health of thousands of produce workers. That is not acceptable," said Brown.

Currently, only produce from a 630-square-mile area of Santa Clara, San Mateo and Alameda counties, south and east of San Francisco, is under quarantine.

Entomologists from 11 southern states and Puerto Rico were to meet in Atlanta today to discuss the problem.

Brown was not immediately available for comment. But Block said he had spoken with the governor by telephone this morning and commented, "I'm not convinced he's ready for aerial spraying ... but he may change his mind after the California legislature meets today."

Police on Thursday stopped cars to look for fruit, and volunteers stripped peaches and plums from backyard orchards. A state official blamed much of the outbreak on the release of flies erroneously thought to be sterile.

Brown called out the National Guard, and up to 1,000 Guardsmen are to begin spraying trees and destroying fruit next week. Brown refused Wednesday to allow aerial spraying to combat the fruit flies and said he might go to court to fight a move to expand the quarantine.

Harvey Ford, deputy administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the situation is so critical that the "only solution" is rapid and direct control of the pests, meaning aerial spraying of malathion.

Not all agricultural products would be quarantined, officials said, only those crops that are prime host plants, such as citrus fruit, apples, avocados, cherries, dates, grapes, olives, peaches, pears and some types of tomatoes.

A statewide quarantine would prohibit movement from California of those kinds of crops unless they had been inspected and found free of medflies or fumigated.

California now has a 630-square-mile area east and south of San Francisco under quarantine. Brown has called out the National Guard and used volunteers to stop cars leaving the area to look for fruit and to strip backyard fruit trees.

The state's growers, who have sought the aerial spraying, say the quarantine "easily can be an economic disaster" for the state's $14-billion-a-year farm industry.

And state officials have predicted that if the medflies, about one-third the size of a common housefly, break out of the quarantine area into the Napa, San Joaquin, Salinas and Sacramento valleys, the entire state could be "permanently infested within a year, with little likelihood of later eradication."

Dear Abby

Saying It with Flowers Could Take All Night

DEAR ABBY: You said when a woman wears a flower over her left ear it means "I'm available." A flower over the right ear means "I'm taken," and a flower over both ears means "Let's negotiate." Actually, a flower over the left ear means "I'm taken." But you failed to mention that a flower worn on the back of the head means "Follow me," and a flower worn on the top of the head means "Let's fool around."

PUA LILA IN HONOLULU

DEAR PUA: Thanks for the correction. My Hawaiian "expert" gave me cockamamie information. But I'm intrigued by the additional flower signals. Now all the tourists will be on the lookout for ladies wearing three flowers: one over the right ear, another on the back of the head and one on top!

DEAR ABBY: I'm 40 and have been divorced for seven months. My husband left me for another woman. She has six kids. (I have five, but only three are at home.) My 22-year-old daughter lives at home. We get along fine, but here's the problem. She has a boyfriend, and I also have a boyfriend. Her boyfriend comes over about five nights a week and they sit in the living room, talking or watching TV until 2 a.m. My boyfriend comes over maybe once or twice during the week, and only every other weekend. My younger kids (13 and 16) have the good sense to go to their rooms and leave us alone, but my daughter and her boyfriend don't budge. Abby, we need a little privacy. I'm afraid my boyfriend will quit coming around if he can't see me alone. He takes me out to dinner now and then, but afterward he can't even kiss me goodnight without an audience.

My daughter's boyfriend goes out two or three times a week, spends his money, then tells her he can't take her anywhere. I'm beginning to think maybe my daughter is jealous of me. What should I do?

NO PRIVACY

DEAR NO: Have a frank talk with your daughter and agree to some ground rules stating which nights the house will be exclusively yours and which nights will be hers. Period.

Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Tour demonstrates money-saving ideas

Twenty homemakers participated in the County Extension Service Tour of Homes, June 30. The purpose of the tour was to show homemakers that they can do many housing related projects themselves and save on the family budget. Construction of the Esco Hamlin home was a family affair. Mrs. Hamlin drew the house plans herself. The main consideration was to plan an energy efficient home, and the family did a great deal of research on building materials and energy efficient techniques. They implemented several ideas such as 6 foot spacing of studs instead of the traditional 4 feet, and the use of double paned wood windows. The Wayne Rock home was a re-decorating project. Mrs. Rock changed the living area from a paneled, dark area into a bright, cheerful area. Her objective was to re-decorate on a shoe-string budget, and she did just that by laying carpet, wall papering, making lamps, and creating interesting displays of collectables and other items. Cost of her re-decorating project was $427.54. She estimated that she saved $1,389 by doing the work herself. Mrs. Rock was the Home Economics result demonstrator for 1980.

Local representatives to attend Austin seminar

Texas Parent-Teacher Association's summer leadership seminar in Austin next week will include three representatives from Big Spring, according to the Big Spring Council of the Parent-Teacher Association. They are Leslie Earnest, PTA City Council president; Nelda Reagan, Marcy PTA president; and Janet Murley, Marcy PTA vice-president. Mrs. Reagan and Mrs. Murley will attend as special representatives of PTA District 17. More than 400 participants from across Texas are expected to attend the annual training and information seminar for local, council and district state leaders. It will be held at Jester Center of the University of Texas. The seminar, "Bright Ideas for the 80's," will feature workshops on such topics as program planning, parenting, family stress, dealing with peer pressure, alcohol and drug education, time management, and cooperation between home and school. "The focus will be on leadership training, materials, information and inspiration to ensure a successful 1981-82 year for local PTAs," said Mary Tippin of El Paso, general chairman of the seminar.

Rebekahs hear semi-annual report during regular meeting

Big Spring Rebekah Lodge heard the semi-annual report of Lila Holland, treasurer, at their regular meeting Tuesday evening. Lillian Rhyme, noble 40, presided over the 14 members present, 12 of whom were past noble grand. Visits to the sick totaled 19. Plans were made for open installation of new officers next week, followed by a short business meeting. Members were instructed to attend in formal attire. Birthdays will be celebrated at this meeting for those having birthdays in July.

Couple attends infantry reunion

Mr. and Mrs. James Vineyard, 1704 Laurie, have recently returned from the National 4th Infantry Division Association Reunion in Colorado Springs, Colo. The event took place in the Antlers Hotel in that city. Pa. Anyone who served in the 4th Infantry Division is urged to attend. For more information, Mr. and Mrs. Vineyard may be contacted at 263-9999.

Those attending the reunion were entertained by the Fort Carson Mechanized Division, who took the group on tours of Fort Carson, the base museum, and a combined arms orientation and barbecue at the Turkey Creek Ranch.

Next year's reunion is scheduled for the latter part of July in King of Prussia.

Single parents doing fine, attitude survey indicates

Single parent families are doing well and the children know it. This is the consensus of almost 75 percent of the single parents participating in a nationally-representative attitude survey conducted by National Family Opinion, Inc. and commissioned by the Kentucky Fried Chicken Time Out Institute. The survey represents just one of the activities sponsored by the Kentucky Fried Chicken Time Out Institute. Founded in 1977, the Institute examines each year a different aspect of the changing role of today's American women and contributes to the information available about her problems, attitudes, needs and concerns. About 84 percent of all custodial single parents are women.

Surveyed were 768 single parents across the country, and 483 children (ages 10 to 18) of single parent homes, to determine the impact of becoming a single parent household on their attitudes and feelings, their employment and financial status; and to understand the children's changes in attitudes.

Almost 70 percent of the single parents said they "basically like being a single parent." "A solid majority of single parents seem to have adjusted well to their new lifestyle, and we can credit this to a number of factors," noted Charlotte Rettinger, Kentucky Fried Chicken Time Out Institute research consultant.

These factors include: a network of support — 84 percent of survey respondents said they receive emotional support from friends, with 75 percent reporting such support from their family; a feeling of control and direction — an impressive 79 percent of single parents say they have more control over their life since becoming a single parent; and satisfactory living arrangements — 77 percent of respondents are proud of the fact that they maintained the same or comparable living quarters, which contributed to a feeling of security for themselves and their children.

Many of the lifestyle changes experienced by single parents centered around their children. Two-thirds of the parents feel they are closer to their children since becoming a single parent family; more than half felt they now do more things with their children, spend more time with the kids, and generally do a more effective job as a parent.

Single parents work because they need the money, the sense of independence and the adult companionship that working brings. Despite the fact that the overwhelming majority of single parents work (74 percent), the median income for a female-headed single parent family was only $6,844, which is significantly less than the $14,816 median income for all families.

Employment takes on new dimension and meaning for these solo parents. Seventy-four percent of the single parents studied are employed, and they credit their job with making them a happier person (63 percent), a more interesting person (60 percent), and with providing them an opportunity for having more friends (44 percent).

Single parents fall into four almost equal segments by shared attitudes. Each group holds similar feelings and attitudes toward their single parent status. These segments show that almost 75 percent of single parents have made, by their own assessment, a satisfactory adjustment to single parenting. The groups are: (1) doing OK — 28 percent of all respondents; (2) full life — 24 percent of all respondents; (3) child-oriented — 23 percent of all respondents; and (4) unhappy in every way — 25 percent of all respondents.

The "doing OK" solo parents feel they have an active social life, more time for their own interests, and express few money worries, feeling free to spend money on their children and themselves. The "full life" group tells us they have opportunities to do fun things, that they have become more interesting people, and that they are doing a more effective job as a parent.

Members of the "child-oriented" segment share three dominant attitudes, two of which are child-related. They spend more time with their children and indicate they are effective parents. Additionally, they feel capable of handling all their responsibilities.

Those single parents identified as "unhappy in every way" resent fulfilling the responsibilities of both parents, feel their social life is limited, mention feelings of irritability, and note that people are critical of them and feel free to offer unsolicited advice on running their lives.

Single parents were given the opportunity to proffer one piece of advice to prospective single parents in the study. The vast majority of responses involved child-rearing, and the most frequently mentioned advice was "listen to your children, spend time with them, and above all, show your love for them."

Goldwater blasts anti-abortion groups

O'Connor's confirmation seems assured

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative groups trying to mount a political offensive against Sandra D. O'Connor's nomination to the Supreme Court are finding a fight and seeing no support in a Senate inclined to confirm her.

At a Capitol Hill news conference backed by 21 conservative and anti-abortion organizations, a spokesman said Thursday that the Reagan administration may have "covered up" information about Mrs. O'Connor's alleged pro-abortion stance.

They claimed that as a member of the Arizona Senate in 1970 she co-sponsored and voted in committee for a measure that would have legalized abortion on demand. The bill never was enacted.

Within hours of the news conference, conservative Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., took to the Senate floor to denounce criticism of the Arizona appeals court judge as "a lot of foolish claptrap."

Later, in a television interview, Goldwater stepped up his counterattack by accusing the Moral Majority and the National Right to Life Committee, two groups in the forefront of the battle against the nomination, of "taking more of a fascist line than a conservative line."

Howard Phillips, spokesman for the groups and head of the Conservative Caucus, told reporters that the O'Connor nomination was a "major blow" to the conservative bloc that helped elect Reagan last fall.

"It can be expected that the O'Connor nomination could diminish the prospects for Republican gains in the House and Senate in 1982," he added.

Phillips noted that several senators have expressed a desire not to be "railroaded" into voting for Mrs. O'Connor, while acknowledging, "I'm not aware that any senator has taken an unequivocal position against the nomination."

An Associated Press survey Wednesday and Thursday found 33 senators committed to vote for Mrs. O'Connor and 20 leaning that way. There were no declarations of opposition, with 45 senators undecided and two not responding to the survey.

"I don't like to see a talented person crucified because of one position she took 11 years ago."

Phillips said the conservatives are urging the Senate Judiciary Committee, which is tentatively set to begin confirmation hearings later this month, to wait until October. He said the conservative groups would start asking grassroots organizations to work against the nomination or at least for a delay in considering it.

Meanwhile, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., joined Goldwater in defending

Mrs. O'Connor's record on abortion.

Baker said she never had supported the concept of abortion on demand, and he predicted the conservative attacks would not stand in the way of her confirmation.

Goldwater, in a Senate speech, labeled the conservative criticism "a lot of foolish claptrap (from) people who do not know what they are talking about."

In an interview Thursday night on Washington television station WDVM, Goldwater said of the Moral Majority and National Right to Life Committee: "I don't think they can call themselves conservative when they're really taking more of a fascist line than a conservative line."

He added: "You are not arguing with conservative philosophy when you use the ERA or abortion because they can't be judged conservative or liberal."

Goldwater said the nominee should be "the best person to serve on that court whether she's a woman, black, brown, Christian, Jew...I don't like to see a very talented person who can improve the court crucified because a few people are opposed to one position she took 11 years ago."

The conservative groups held their news conference in a room arranged by Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H.

However, Humphrey spokesman Paul Carrier said the senator was undecided on Mrs. O'Connor and had made the arrangements without knowing what the groups intended to say.

Minister shocks students for God

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The minister places the child on a small stool. As the Bible school class watches, he counts down from 10 and pushes a button, sending piercing shocks from a 6-volt battery into the child's buttocks.

The Rev. Dwight Wymer says he has been pushing the button for six years now as his way of teaching children how to "hear the word of God," and says the practice "is not dangerous."

"I've done nothing wrong — I'm teaching God's word," he said.

But Dr. Richard Potter, director of the city health department, said he thought the shocks did the children no good, physically or mentally.

"It seems to me like it would have the opposite effect and cause the child to reject the teachings because of the association with pain," Potter said.

Three children received shocks Monday night at the opening session of the one-week summer Bible school at Wymer's Immanuel Baptist Church. At Thursday night's class, some parents said they were uncomfortable with what was going on, but were not pulling their children out of the class.

"Sometimes God talks to you and calls you and we just don't listen," Wymer told the children that first night. "But sometimes he can shock you into hearing his word, and this just makes that demonstration clear."

Brian TenHopen, 8, said the shock he received "hurt me until I went home and got in the tub. But it was fun, everybody was laughing, and I wanted to do it."

Seven-year-old Pat Popma said he volunteered for the shock but "wouldn't do it again. It hurts. I was going to cry, but all my friends were watching me."

Wymer said he has received no complaints from parents.

Choate Company opens in September

The new headquarters for the Choate Company is currently under construction at 1205 Eleventh Place, former site of the Gold Bond stamp redemption center. The modern 3,400 square-foot facility, which has been enlarged from the former redemption center, is scheduled to open in September and will house the Choate Company, Spring Energy Company, and Ben Bancroft, a local attorney.

The facility will deal mainly with oil and gas leasing, consulting and operating. The Choate Company is owned by Wade Choate, with the Spring Energy Company being a partnership between Choate and Bancroft, who will also be officed in the building, but still in partnership with the law firm of Bancroft and Mouton of Big Spring.

The Choate Company is slated to open an office in Midland later this year.

Troops might be used to quell street riots in British cities

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Home Secretary William Whitelaw said today army troops might have to patrol Britain's cities if the street rioting of the past seven nights gets worse.

Whitelaw, the government minister responsible for police and public order, said he opposed deploying troops or creating a special police riot squad, but that the use of soldiers could never be ruled out to deal with outbreaks of "extreme ferocity."

"It is not impossible they would be used in certain circumstances, but I hope it would never arise," Whitelaw said in Warrington, Cheshire, 30 miles from Manchester's trouble-torn streets which he was to tour later in the day.

He added that the experience in violence-torn Northern Ireland proved that sending troops in as a "last resort" created another problem: "How to get the army out."

Whitelaw said the government was "perfectly prepared" to reintroduce the Riot Act, repealed 14 years ago, to strengthen police powers to break up mobs and make arrests before violence erupts.

He said the government will certainly propose a law making parents responsible for criminal actions by their children.

Police Federation Chairman Jim Jardine, who met Whitelaw Thursday, said he has asked for police to be supplied with body armor, armored personnel carriers, water cannons and plastic bullets to combat rioters. Most officers now have only steel-reinforced helmets and plastic shields.

"If the police don't win, the rioters will take over the whole of the centers of Liverpool, Manchester or London. Then God help us," Jardine said.

On Thursday night, rioting spread across 11 London neighborhoods and broke out again in Manchester. But the police struck back forcefully and seemed to be getting the upper hand.

Scotland Yard said it met jeering mobs in strength with bobbies carrying riot shields, arrested more than 50 people in London and dispersed the gangs of white and black youths who were roaming the streets and looting shops.

The worst of the violence was in Woolwich, in the southeast, where 27 people were arrested, two cars overturned and shops damaged. Other areas experiencing window smashing, fights between rival gangs and some looting were Fulham, Stoke Newington, Tooting, Balham, Notting Hill, Hammersmith, Catford, Deptford, Brockley and Lewisham.

"We're just looking for some action," one teen-ager told a reporter in Fulham, where youths smashed bottles in the streets and one police officer was injured.

In Manchester, 180 ves to the north, steel-helmeted riot police patrolled on foot in bands of 30 to 40 or rode in convoys of wire-shielded trucks. Police Chief James Anderton said his officers faced urban guerrilla warfare and abandoned their traditional low profile because it "clearly did not work."

Police officers shouted to youths and reporters to get off the streets. Police trucks, engines roaring, drove toward fleeing groups of youths at high speed.

One group of about 30 disappeared up a side street before an advancing police patrol with the senior officer shouting, "Go home or get locked up!"

White House says further compromise is out

WASHINGTON (AP) — While Senate Republicans say yes and House Democrats say maybe to one last pass at a tax compromise, the White House insists that President Reagan is unwilling to give any more on his plan for a 25 percent cut over three years.

In the meantime, less than a month from the president's deadline for getting a bill to his desk, the Senate will defy tradition and go ahead with its own, Reagan-like measure without waiting on the House.

To the White House's surprise, talk of reopening negotiations was resurrected Wednesday by Senate Finance Chairman Bob Dole of Kansas. He said Republicans could give up an extra share of relief for low- and middle-income workers while Democrats could give Reagan the three-year tax cut he wants.

But there were no immediate takers.

House Democrats, battered in earlier confrontations with Reagan, were skeptical, although Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski will meet with Dole, his Republican counterpart, to explore the possibilities.

At the White House, however, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes issued a carefully worded statement saying Reagan "will not compromise on the basic plan... across-the-board cuts for three years and 25 percent."

"That's what he agreed to," Speakes said. "He wants a tax cut for all Americans, not just some Americans."

Even that did not quiet Senate Republicans.

After the Speakes statement, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said he still thinks there is room for savings and investment. That would fit any compromise envisioned by Dole.

Rostenkowski did not react publicly to Dole.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said he thought talk of a compromise was "over-exaggerated."

And O'Neill, who already has lost three major tests over budget policy, did not sound excited about the prospect of another round of negotiations. He recalled that Democratic leaders tried for several weeks to negotiate a tax bill with the White House, only to have those efforts abandoned after Reagan struck a deal with conservative Democrats.

"Well, we got shot down so quickly when that tried to happen that I don't know whether it's worthwhile trying now or not," the Massachusetts Democrat said. "But Rostenkowski will talk to Dole again."

Meanwhile, Baker announced that the Senate — tired of waiting on the House — will go ahead with its own tax-cut bill next week. In fact, he told a news conference, his plans call for the Senate to complete action on the measure by the end of the week. That version, written by Dole's committee, is very close to what Reagan recommended.

FRESH WATER FROM AN OLD WELL

A century ago gold seekers in Montana struck gold in a lonely spot. Because they needed additional supplies and equipment they went to the nearest town after swearing each other to absolute secrecy. Though the vow was faithfully kept, when they started their return to the gold, no less than 300 other gold seekers tagged along. Who had given them away? No one. They had given themselves away, for their beaming faces had betrayed the secret.

Christlikeness is a potent apologetic for the Christian faith. People would rather see a sermon than hear one. If we belong to Christ, we ought to live like Him. "He that saith he abideth in Him ought himself also so to walk, even as He walked" (1 John 2:6). Wearing a button announcing our Christian faith, or carrying a Bible to advertise our belief, or verbally declaring our allegiance to Christ are legitimate ways of witness. But the indispensable method without which all others are useless and sometimes even harmful is living Christ so people can readily see Him in us. So often what we are speaks so loudly people cannot hear what we say. We must live Him as well as talk Him.

CAPITOL UPDATE

John Tower

U.S. SENATOR for TEXAS
142 RUSSELL OFFICE BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

The President has won some important battles in his fight to bring the federal budget under control, winning crucial votes recently in both houses of Congress that will pave the way for his budget reforms.

Questions have been raised, however, about the effect a combined program of tax and spending cuts will have on our goal of a balanced budget. I'd like to show, in the limited space available, how these programs will bring about a balanced budget and how they fit in the President's overall economic program.

These tax and spending cuts do represent integral parts of the President's program. The Federal Reserve, as another part of the program, must not permit inflationary expansion of the money supply, a direction in which the independent Fed seems to be moving.

The President's proposed tax rate reductions are needed to offset rising tax rates due to the inflationary policies of the past. The tax reductions will be more than paid for, however, (1) by reductions in spending, (2) by additional revenue generated from faster economic growth and (3) by higher levels of private saving.

As to balancing the budget, that will be impossible without the tax reductions. It has become clear in recent years that the budget cannot be balanced simply by taxing at higher and higher levels.

No, what is needed is less government spending and increased production in the private sector which the tax cuts will generate. Without the tax cuts, the economy will continue to stagnate.

This continuing stagnation will increase pressure for spending on welfare programs at the same time that tax receipts are beginning to fall because of reduced work and investment.

On the other hand, if tax rates are cut, the incentives mentioned earlier will stimulate additional work. Unemployment and welfare spending will fall. Tax receipts will rise. More goods will be produced, easing pressure on price levels.

Reduced inflation will ease government spending, as cost-of-living adjustments become smaller. Interest rates will also fall, lowering the burden of financing and the national debt, all leading toward a balanced budget and less inflation. Indeed, without such a program there is little hope of ever balancing the budget.

It is true that deficits will continue for the next two or three years. This is simply unavoidable given the fantastic growth in government spending programs which has occurred in the past few years.

To end the deficits any sooner than the President's economic program projects would require the absolute abolition of many essential programs, including some in the defense field.

The solution today, then, is to cut taxes and stimulate work, investment and saving. If enough saving occurs, and it is believed that it will, then the temporary governmental deficits will be financed from that saving rather than through the inflationary process of Federal Reserve money creation.

Astronauts test shuttle

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly dodged solar flares, tested the space shuttle Columbia's radiator system and operated the remote-controlled manipulator arm that will unload the craft's freight bay.

But the crew's 33-hour mock flight, completed late Wednesday, didn't go off without a hitch.

The simulated malfunctions were delayed for nearly two hours when the computer which designs the simulated malfunctions developed problems, said a Johnson Space Center spokesman Steve Nesbitt.

Midwives move 'underground' after court fight

LINCOLN, Vt. (AP) — Midwife Carol Warnock smoothes her daughter's hair and gazes out at the mountains beyond her remote farmhouse. Three weeks after her acquittal on a charge of practicing medicine without a license, she is pensive.

"I don't really feel bitter," she said, "but I feel like I always have to look over my shoulder."

Dr. Alan Ayer drums a pencil on his desk. After serving as the prosecution's star witness against Ms. Warnock, the obstetrician is angry.

"What they're doing is folk medicine," he said. "The lives of mothers and their babies are being endangered, and I'll continue to work to prevent that."

Ayer and Ms. Warnock were the central figures in a court case that brought supporters of Vermont's growing home birth movement out of the hills and raised questions about the need to regulate the practice of midwifery.

Charges were brought against Ms. Warnock by the state attorney in response to a complaint filed by Ayer. He was the physician on duty at the hospital when Ms. Warnock arrived with a woman who was bleeding heavily after giving birth.

The midwife told Ayer at the time that she had administered two drugs to try to staunch the bleeding. Ms. Warnock was found innocent on a defense of having reacted properly in an emergency.

Lay midwives are not formally recognized by the state, but until Ms. Warnock was cited, midwives had maintained an uneasy truce with the medical establishment. Now, however, some midwives are reluctant to speak with outsiders about their practice and will deal only with clients referred by close friends.

"I guess you could say we've gone underground," said one midwife, once a frequent public speaker on home birth, who refused to grant an interview or permit her name to be used.

The midwives say their ancient practice of home birth has been twisted by opponents who portray midwives as ignorant and superstitious.

"During the trial, the prosecutor wanted to know if I carry incense in my bag," said Ms. Warnock.

Both midwives and physicians say they would like to see midwives formally licensed. But midwives want a regulatory board made up of midwives; doctors want doctors to oversee the licensing process.

Another area of disagreement concerns the ability of lay midwives to cope with emergencies and difficult births. Ms. Warnock, who said she has attended about 130 births, insisted that if trouble arises, she calls for help.

"It's very hard for a woman who has planned for nine months to have the baby at home to go to the hospital," she said. "There are always tears. But I don't hesitate to make the decision."

But Ayer claims that midwives feel that they "lose face" when they must call on doctors for help. "Rather than do that, they try to handle it alone," he said. "People just don't know what they're in for when they choose to rely on a midwife," he added.

Yet it is an option chosen by more and more Vermonters.

"The number of home births is definitely increasing," said Dr. David Jillson of the state health department. "There are a lot of people in this state who want to live in a low-technology environment, and want to give birth in that kind of environment."

In 1950, Jillson said, 600 babies were born at home in Vermont, a state whose ruggedness, harsh climate and rural poverty then made medical care inaccessible to many. In 1969, 20 home births were registered. But in 1980, the figure had risen to 155.

"It's not a matter of people not being able to get to a doctor or afford medical care—it is a deliberate choice by well-educated, well-off people," said Jillson.

Man accused of murder for hire

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — A Longview man was in custody Thursday after being accused of hiring an undercover agent to kill his father-in-law, officials said.

Shukri M. Salem, 34, of Longview, was charged with solicitation of capital murder. Peace Justice Henry McKinney set bond at $100,000.

Salem is accused of hiring Texas Department of Public Safety undercover agent Charles V. Moore to kill Ismail Suleiman of Texas City, Texas.

Officials said Salem was apprehended by Longview Police, the Gregg County District Attorney's office and DPS officers when Moore went to Salem's residence in downtown Longview Thursday to get paid for the alleged contract.

Gregg County District Attorney Rob Foster said Moore had convinced Salem that he had carried out the murder.

Foster said Moore originally met with Salem July 1. Salem, unaware of Moore's identity, said he wanted Moore to "kill either" Suleiman or his wife.

Foster said Salem was upset apparently because his wife had left him to live with her father-in-law.

Man who changed baseball unaffected by strike

By the Associated Press
Peter M. Seitz, the man whose arbitration ruling changed the face of baseball, sits in his book-lined Central Park West apartment, peacefully smoking his pipe and pouring over new papers while the game lies dormant in the throes of a labor stalemate.

He would be the last to regard himself as the "Trigger Man" although the current 29-day-old strike by players can be traced indirectly to the landmark decision he made two days before Christmas in 1975.

"I decided it as a lawyer and an arbitrator," said the grandfatherly, scholarly New Yorker, a self-styled onetime Brooklyn Dodger fan, who ruled that pitchers

Dave McNally and Andy Messersmith, their contracts terminated, could offer their services to another club.

This epic finding, upheld later in the courts, shattered baseball's century-old reserve clause, binding a player to one club for life or until traded or sold, and opened the door to free agency, spawning scores of instant millionaires.

It is the owners' efforts to recover some of the power they lost 5 1/2 years ago that has shuttered big league ball parks in the first midseason strike in the game's long history.

Seitz today is disinclined to talk about it. Once outspoken on the case and its consequences, he has discovered that his statements often are taken out of context and given the wrong interpretation. So, lawyer-like, he insists that he not be quoted.

Apparently the veteran arbitrator, who has handled numerous important cases unconnected with the playing fields, sees bigtime, well-heeled sports suffering the same growing pains that has plagued all aspects of private industry during the past century.

It's a tug-of-war of economic strength, listing from side to side like some huge ocean liner caught in a stormy sea.

The clout, it only happens, now belongs to the players. They have had it only since Seitz's decision in 1975 and are reluctant to give too much of it back. After all, the owners exercised dogmatic control for decades, resisting every effort for change.

Seitz was fired by baseball owners two minutes after he made his decision.

It didn't shake him at all.

"What I did was inevitable," he said at the time. "The owners were too stubborn and stupid. They were like the French barons in the 13th Century. They accumulated so much power they wouldn't share it with anybody."

Then he added: "What I did was no Emancipation Proclamation. 'Involuntary servitude had nothing to do with it.' It was strictly law.

The Carl Small Partnership Golf Tournament, a 36-hole low-ball tournament, gets under way Saturday and continues over Sunday at the Comanche Trail Golf Course.

Any amateur in the area is eligible to take part in the tournament. Entry fee is $60 per team. Merchandise awards will go to the low tandems.

Bobby Maxwell, Comanche Trail pro, said prospects are that enough players likely will be on hand for four or five flights.

Deadline for entry is tee off time tomorrow. Those planning to play should contact Maxwell as soon as possible and pay their entry fees.

First day scores will determine which flights the teams will compete in.

A free barbecue for tournament entries is scheduled after play has been completed Saturday.

Carl Small, a local business man who is sponsoring the tournament, is furnishing the barbecue and putting up part of the prize money.

Major league All-Star game will be played in Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — Baseball strike or not, the All-Star game will crackle over the Seattle air waves Tuesday, thanks to a cleverly programmed computer and two big-league announcers.

Because of the prolonged strike by major league players, hope dimmed that the real game will be played on schedule in Cleveland's Municipal Stadium.

Enter Barry Neuhaus, 34, a lanky, nervous-looking scientific computer programmer for the University of Washington Bio-Electromagnetic Radiation Effects Research Group of the Rehabilitation Medicine Department.

And baseball fanatic Neuhaus, who ruefully recalls he failed to make the UW baseball team in years gone by, hates to see fellow fanatics go without.

He's hunched over the keyboard of a computer terminal in a small back office at Seattle radio station KVI, feeding vital statistics on All-Star players to the plug-in brain.

What he'll come up with in time for next week's big game is a substitute, electronic pinch-hitter for the washed-up All-Star game.

The show will air at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, with now idle Seattle Mariners play-by-play announcers Dave Niehaus and Ken Wilson doing the breathless play-by-play. Canned crowd cheers and the occasional cry of a vendor will add realism.

Station sports gurus Grayle Howlett and J. Michael Kenyon chose the lineups on the basis of All-Star balloting to date and season performance.

The only change is that Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench was scratched as a starter because he's on the disabled list and replaced by Montreal's Gary Carter.

Howlett and Kenyon will manage the teams. Based on their decisions and lineups, the computer will spit out quick pitch-by-pitch accounts of what would be most likely to happen in the actual game.

When he's not programming UW computers to track the effects of microwave radiation, Neuhaus might be found with a cluster of pals, drinking beer, munching pretzels and playing computerized baseball at his home terminal.

Neuhaus is commissioner of the Northwest Computer Baseball Association, which has eight teams that exist only in the integrated circuits and diodes of the computer.

"When I was about 13 we lived near Philadelphia and I got interested in the Phillies, who were busy losing 22 games or something. I liked the way they hung on," said Neuhaus.

"I like the statistical aspect of baseball a lot, too," he added.

There will be no rainout or walkout in his make-believe game. It will be played and taped Monday under strictest secrecy for airing a day later.

Ground breaking for 84 Olympics begin

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — Shovels full of dirt gave evidence that physical preparations for the 1984 Summer Olympic games are under way.

A ground-breaking ceremony for the cycling velodrome at California State University-Dominguez Hills, the start of a $4 million privately financed structure, was held Thursday.

Actually, ground preparation had started a few days before the officials applied their shovels to the soil.

Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, commented, "Southern California now has the potential of being the cycling center of the United States."

Money for the velodrome comes from the Southland Corporation of Dallas, which operates the 7-Eleven stores throughout the nation.

The firm's board chairman, John P. Thompson, said while he wasn't a cyclist, he "hopes this will mean a resurgence of the sport in the United States. We haven't made very good showings."

The velodrome will be an outdoors facility with a paved course.

Emphasis was placed on the fact the LAOOC has asked private industry to finance the games so there would be no cost to the taxpayers. The velodrome was the first facility to be started although several corporations have made commitments in other fields.

The oval will be 333.3 meters (11,093 feet) and will have 30-degree banking. There will be permanent lighting and seating for 2,000.

Ueberroth said 50 nations were expected to compete in cycling with about 550 individuals entered. The sport includes both the track racing and road racing with individual and team events.

Neuhaus, who ruefully recalls he failed to make the UW baseball team in years gone by, hates to see fellow fanatics go without.

He's hunched over the keyboard of a computer terminal in a small back office at Seattle radio station KVI, feeding vital statistics

Do mysterious envelopes mean strike is over

By the Associated Press
The contents of mysterious envelopes delivered to representatives of club owners and players could hold the key to settlement of the baseball strike that ended its fifth week today.

Hours before the start of a meeting of all 28 club owners in New York Thursday night, federal mediator Ken Moffett delivered large envelopes to the adversaries' chief negotiators, the player union's Marvin Miller and management's Ray Grebey. Moffett also arranged for the negotiators' first bargaining session in six days for today at 2 p.m.

The New York Times said the envelopes contained a proposal designed to lead to an end of the strike.

"He didn't come all the way from Washington just to arrange a meeting (for today) and those envelopes did not contain engraved invitations to the meeting," the Times quoted an unnamed source as saying.

"I'm going to be very disappointed if nothing good happens" in upcoming sessions, Moffett said after returning home to Washington, D.C.

Both sides in the strike have claimed a united front after meeting among themselves this week. Player representatives had met in New York on Tuesday.

Ed Fitzgerald of the Milwaukee Brewers, chairman of management's Player Relations Committee, said after Thursday night's meeting that the owners had engaged in "a full discussion" and said

Will tennis etiquette change?

The past few weeks, one of the main topics in the world of sports has been John McEnroe. Winning both the singles and doubles at Wimbledon is quite an accomplishment, but it seems that "Super Brat" has received the most ink for his hellraising antics with the judges and hierarchy at the most famous tennis tournament of them all.

But why? Because that's not tennis etiquette as it has been known for years.

Sure, McEnroe's crybaby arguing with the umpire is usually ridiculous, but is he that abnormal from many other sports. Is he any different than many athletes and coaches from the more-physical sports?

But that's tennis, a sport in which etiquette is still considered a must. Should etiquette change?

If McEnroe must stay mad at himself in order to play at his best, as many football players do, why must the crowd act reserved?

The times change, and so do certain sports. A player as controversial and as talented as McEnroe is good for tennis, even though I cheered hard for the classy Swede (Bjorn Borg) last Saturday in the Wimbledon finals.

And if McEnroe is good for tennis, then why is not a change in the fans allowed? If a tennis fan wants to pay the big bucks to watch such a match as Borg-McEnroe, an Evert-Navratilova, etc., then why can't the fans cheer when they want, and as loudly as they desire?

Quotables
JOHN MCENROE, in a rare moment, describing his feelings toward umpires: "I never want a job as an umpire. It's the worst job in the world. You do a good job and you're not noticed at all. That's the best you can hope for — not being noticed."
PETE ROSE, after being criticized as an un-American by endorsing Japanese products: "If there was ever a war, I'd fight for the United States."
DON COOPER, rookie pitcher with the Minnesota Twins, describing his feelings on the baseball strike: "It's like when your mother tells you something, and you don't want to do it. Then she tells you, 'There are lots of things in life you don't want to do, but you have to do them.' That's the way I feel about this."
RED AUERBACH, Boston Celtics GM who also coached the Celtics to many NBA championships, on why he smokes a cigar constantly: "When the league was picking on me, I tried to think of something that would aggravate the higher-ups. I wasn't having much luck until one day I lit up a cigar during a game. After the game, I got a note saying, 'It doesn't look good for you to be smoking cigars on the bench.' I haven't been without one since."
Will McEnroe practice today for his Davis Cup matches? I doubt it. Said McENROE recently when it was suggested by Billie Jean King that he work out more: "Too much practice is bad for your game."

Oiler coach no comment on Playboy gossip

Playboy magazine had an interesting couple of paragraphs during their NFL preview in their latest issue. It concerned the firing of Bum Phillips.

You can believe it if you want, but here goes. Playboy says that Oiler Owner Bud Adams fired Phillips when he found out that many of the Oilers went out the night before their Wild Card Playoff game with the Oakland Raiders into the wee hours with "some of the Bay area's leading party girls — old friends of quarterback Ken Stabler."

That story never made the newspapers, and new Oiler Coach Ed Biles didn't put much stock into it, either. "I think Playboy is better known for its centerfold than its knowledge of pro football," said the new Oiler chief.

That may be true, but Biles' comment won't help the next time I tell my wife I'm a Playboy subscriber because I like the stories.

Incidentally, Playboy picks the Cowboys to beat the San Diego Chargers in the Super Bowl next January.

England won't invite McEnroe

LONDON (AP) — Wimbledon champion John McEnroe will not be invited to become a member of the All-England Lawn Tennis Club because his on-court behavior "brought the game into disrepute," the Wimbledon Championship Committee announced.

The honor is traditionally accorded to all Wimbledon champions, but the All-England Club decided Wednesday night to deny membership to McEnroe following a series of outbursts from the 22-year-old American during this year's tournament which finished Saturday.

SEEKING PERMANENCE — Body builder-turned-actor Arnold Schwarzenegger says filming his starring role in new movie "Cohan" was a tough six months, filled with physical discomfort, but he admitted "Cohan" was the best step forward in his career. About the demands of film making and his future in it, Arnold says "Suffering is temporary, film is permanent."

Royals GM defends excessive salaries

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball club owners have far from complete control over how much they pay their players, according to General Manager Joe Burke of the Kansas City Royals.

Burke told a hearing before a National Labor Relations Board administrative law judge Thursday that there are many pressures — some direct, others more subtle — on salary decisions by management.

"We do not have absolute control over salaries," Burke testified under questioning by Al Blyer, an NLRB attorney.

The Royals' GM pointed to salary arbitration, where an independent third party chooses between wage proposals from the player and the club, and also noted more indirect influences on how much to pay.

"If you stop signing the players that make up the nucleus of your club, you come under tremendous pressure from your fans and the press," Burke said.

Burke was among five witnesses called during the fourth day of testimony before Judge Melvin Welles involving the Major League Players Association's charge of unfair bargaining by the owners.

The union, on strike since June 12, wants Welles to order the owners to open the club's financial records. The players argue that the books are needed for examination because they feel the owners' plans to change the free-agent compensation system is based on financial need. The owners deny that money is involved.

The final witness in the case — Los Angeles Times sports writer Harry Bernstein — was expected to be called today. There was no indication when Welles would rule.

Sam Snead still shoots par at 69

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Sam Snead, still a formidable golfer at age 69, figures it's way too early to call the dogs and go home.

Snead, showing flashes of the brilliance that enabled him to chalk up 84 PGA tour victories during a long career, fired a 2-over 72 Thursday and was just two strokes behind first-round leader Lionel Hebert going into today's second round of the U.S. Senior Open at Oakland Hills.

"You've got to have strength and you've got to have that touch to play this game," Snead said following a round which was twice delayed by thunderstorms for a total of 55 minutes in this affluent suburb north of Detroit.

"Most of all, you've got to have desire and keep your head in it. If you can't keep your head in it, you might as well call the dogs, wet on the fire and go home!"

Snead's round Thursday included an eagle 2 on the 358-yard, par-4 sixth hole when he hit a 7-iron and watched as the ball bounced once and jumped into the hole.

Still wearing his familiar straw hat, Snead told reporters he thought the rugged terrain over the 6,798-yard golf course — site of many major championships over the years — would likely take a toll on the legs of the players, all of whom must be at least 50 years old to enter this $150,000 championship.

"I didn't know, myself, whether I'd be able to walk this much. I generally play out of a cart now," Snead explained. "I've walked only five rounds since the Masters (in April). It's not over yet."

Wimbledon, McEnroe should compromise

By the Associated Press

Before wrapping up the John McEnroe vs. Wimbledon case and putting it into the archives to rest, we would like to offer one final plea:

Drop the hatchets and recriminations, fellows. Light up the peace pipe. Shake hands and come out smiling. Acknowledge you both were wrong. Then get on with it.

The All-England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club has been around for 103 years and it will be around for 103 years more multiplied by 10 to 100. It is, in a way, sacrosanct, the cradle and the beacon of tennis.

"Profaning Wimbledon," says Arthur Ashe, one of the former champions and the current U.S. Davis Cup captain, "is like profaning the Royal Family."

John McEnroe is one of the rare talents that come along perhaps once every 50 years. He is a marvel in innate athletic ability — speed, quickness, reflexes, anticipation — and has natural instincts that few, if any, of his predecessors ever possessed. Only the eroding factor of his volatile temperament has prevented him from completely dominating the sport.

He is only 22, meaning he has many years of championship tennis ahead of him. Big Bill Tilden never really matured until he was in his late 20s, yet won seven U.S. titles and three Wimbledon. McEnroe's prospects are phenomenal.

It doesn't make sense that he and Wimbledon should use those years in an adversary relationship. Not that the so-called Super Brat must douse the fire that burns within his chest, not that Wimbledon change its moss-covered traditions.

Each should respect the other for what the other is — Wimbledon, the dowager queen, austere and regal, mystical, zealously resistant to change and McEnroe, the racket Houdini who can make the faded grass of the Center Court come alive like a rose garden.

It's simply a case, on the one hand, of a young, obstreperous guy bursting with live-wire intensity being nice to a cranky old lady who has refused to step into the 20th Century. And, on the other, a haughty, crusty dame accustomed to having her way bending a little to accept the precocious kid who, with all his personality faults, has many redeeming attributes.

Neither would have to swallow too much pride.

Wimbledon is Wimbledon. It's archaic. It's stiff-backed. It's intransigent. It's moss, strawberries and cream, the Duke and Duchess of Kent in the Royal Box, green-jacketed linesmen marching in like the Seven Dwarfs, the Chelsea Pensioners, screaming teenyboppers with autograph pads and sagging socks. But it's also the greatest tennis tournament on earth, and there is some charm — with all its frustrating arrogance — in its Old World facade.

McEnroe is a firebrand — cocky, outspoken, intolerant of error, irreverent of tradition. But he is the mad genius of the age, and Wimbledon needs him as much as he needs Wimbledon.

Calling minor league games can be fun

Major league announcers get game practice

By the Associated Press

It isn't often that someone is sent to the minor leagues and is glad about it.

But that's been the situation recently for several baseball announcers employed by major league teams. In the past few weeks, while major league players have been on strike, the broadcasters have journeyed to places like Columbus, Ohio, Richmond, Va., Indianapolis, Ind., and Pawtucket, R.I., to do what they do best: announce baseball games.

"People miss the majors but baseball fans like to watch and listen to baseball games," said Ernie Johnson, who has been working International League games involving the Richmond Braves. Johnson, a former major league pitcher, is the director of broadcasting for the Atlanta Braves. "We've gotten quite a bit of mail from all over thanking us for telecasting the Braves' games."

While the parent Braves are on strike, the Triple A Braves are being seen on WTBS, which originates in Atlanta but, through cable systems can be seen throughout the United States. Johnson believes viewers are getting used to watching the minor league version of the national pastime.

"We don't have to go with continuous reminders any more that they are watching the International League," he said. "We try to be informative about the minor league teams in the Braves organization anyway and, even though the fans aren't as familiar with the Richmond team they have seen some of the players there."

"This is the first time I've done the minor leagues during the regular season. I have to talk more to coaches and the writers who follow the Braves or the team they're playing, to get background."

"During the strike, anything we can tell them about the league is important. A lot of people are looking for baseball. It's live in a season of reruns."

Bob Murphy, who hadn't broadcast a minor league game since 1953, has felt comfortable behind the mike at Tidewater, where the New York Mets' International League affiliate is located.

"You have to do your homework, get to the park early and talk to people to have yourself covered," said Murphy. "Out of 22 players on the Tides' roster, I'd had contact with seven or eight in spring training. So it's not like I'm in a land of total strangers."

"I don't feel like I'm out in the boonies somewhere. The Mets built the Tides' park in Norfolk and it has the same dimensions as Shea Stadium. The big difference has been that the teams have their own local radio broadcast crews, which take up the only two booths. So they set up a table outside in the crowd for us. And they rigged a plastic covering over our heads in case of rain."

The Tides' contests have been carried by just less than half of the stations on the Mets' radio network. And the ratings, Murphy said, "were amazing. I was told that management was shocked and that one game drew a higher rating than some Mets games."

JR Richard will set own timetable

HOUSTON — Houston Astros pitcher J.R. Richard, attempting a comeback from a stroke last July, is making progress despite the major league baseball strike, his agent says.

"This strike is having less an effect on J.R. than on some other people," Tom Reich said Thursday. "He is going about his business as usual. I watched him pitch a couple of weeks ago and he's doing fine."

Richard had been throwing batting practice during Astros home stands, but the strike ended that part of Richard's workout.

"It would have been helpful to pitch batting practice, but I don't think it will have a serious effect on his progress," Reich said.

McCoy McLemore, a former member of the Houston Rockets basketball team who trains daily with Richard, said Richard's control also was improving.

"He's throwing up in the 90s (miles per hour) and his control is better," McLemore said. "He looks like he's ready to pitch to me."

Reich said no decision had been made whether Richard would start his comeback with the Astros or in the minor leagues.

"I've said 1,000 times we will cross that bridge when we come to it," he said. "Nobody is going to impose anything on J.R. that he doesn't want to do."

"When the time comes that J.R. is ready to pitch competitively, the decision on where he will pitch will call for a unanimous decision of the club, Dr. William S. Fields, myself and J.R."

DALLAS (AP) — Former Southern Methodist University basketball coach Bob Prewitt has been named supervisor of basketball officials for the Southwest Conference, the SWC office announced Thursday.

Since leaving his coaching post following the 1975 season, Prewitt has served as Director of Intramurals and the Dedman Athletic Center at SMU. He will remain in that job while taking on the part-time position of basketball supervisor.

Prewitt's teams at SMU posted an 88-115 record between 1968 and 1975. His teams were 56-56 in Southwest Conference play. He coached six All-SWC players including Gene Phillips, the second all-time leading scorer in conference history.

Prewitt, 56, took the Mustang head coaching job following the retirement of E.O. "Doc" Hayes. He had been Hayes' only assistant at SMU for 18 years. From 1947 to 1949 he played for the Mustangs, serving as captain of Hayes' 1949 team.

Prewitt replaces Jimmy Earle, who recently left the supervisor's job to accept the post of Director of Athletics at Middle Tennessee State University.

EX-HEAVYWEIGHT boxing champion George Foreman will never fight again.

No boxing for Foreman; He works for the Lord

HOUSTON (AP) — Flashback is inevitable as the huge man pours his 280-pound frame out of the compact station wagon, spelling great relief to the car's tires as it returns to a level position.

As he slams the car door and starts for the porch of the run-down clapboard church, a visitor wonders if this could be the same 217-pound George Foreman who startled the boxing world Jan. 22, 1973 by slamming Joe Frazier down six times in two rounds to win the heavyweight championship.

Surely this isn't the same George Foreman who had fans fearing for Ken Norton's life as his ferocious punches sent Norton jerking about the ring like a helpless rag doll on March 26, 1974.

"When I was a boxer, I'll be honest with you, I fought man, woman and children," he would say later. "When you saw me in the ring that was the good side of me. That was the way it was, I just stayed angry."

Now, dressed in jeans and work shirt, he walks to the steps and offers a gentle handshake with a huge hand, grown soft by four years of lifting a Bible instead of knocking down opponents.

The devastating power seems gone. That malevolent glare seen on boxing posters has been replaced by the contented smile of a man who says he now fights for God.

Foreman has not fought since March 17, 1977, when he lost to Jimmy Young. After the fight, Foreman says he had a vision from God in which he died, was returned to life and spouted scripture although he knew nothing about the Bible at the time.

Now Foreman says his only opponents are the devil and men he calls false prophets. Not even an offer from Muhammad Ali for a title fight, six months after retirement in 1977, induced Foreman to fight again.

Foreman, the wisest of Nancy Foreman's seven children, fought his siblings and took money from his mother. He says he used to fight daily, robbing drunks to buy cheap wine and cigarettes. But now he says to return to the ring or even to remove his shirt in the presence of women would be a sin for him. He would not fight again, he says, not even to earn money for his church or to help a sick friend.

While involved in a recent church dispute, Foreman said a church member grabbed his arm and would not release him. Rather than revert to his instincts, Foreman filed assault charges against the smaller man.

"I don't never want to hit a man anymore," Foreman said. "That's something that we live by. If somebody smites you on one cheek, you turn the other. Since I've been out of boxing, I've had people come up and blow cigarette smoke in my face. I've had them actually push me out of buildings."

"It's just what I believe. There's no use selling Avon and using some other product. I'm selling Jesus and turning the other cheek, so that's what I use."

Foreman readily admits he was once among the worst delinquents in Houston's poor Fifth Ward, roaming the streets looking for fights. Still troubled after he became a title contender Foreman enjoyed the company of women and the good life.

Two marriages have failed, each lasting six months. Foreman has four children, one by his first wife and none by his second. Two of Foreman's children are spending the summer at his home in nearby Humble.

Foreman's turbulent years often come back to haunt him when he goes to preach in the Fifth Ward, the area he once terrorized.

"I run into that all the time," he said. "They say 'yeah, you can give your life to God, look what you've had. You been all over the world.' I tell them to stop running around with all these different women and they say 'yeah, but you tired of them, look how many you had.'"

"They all saw me when I was courising so they always go back to my past. I tell them they are telling the truth (about his past). They are right in what they say, but I'm right in what I say now."

Foreman says he has the same fervor as the night of his vision, but he's learned patience.

"I took it the same way as boxing," Foreman said. "I was aggressive. I tried to knock them out in two or three rounds. When I come to you with the Bible, I want to get you right then. Some people... that I talked to four years ago (tell me they) have just started to come to church. I didn't realize that it sometimes takes five years to win a soul."

For at least one month after his vision, Foreman said he tried to convince himself that he had been hallucinating, had been hit too hard, dehydrated — he struggled against the idea of becoming a preacher.

"I didn't want to be no preacher with a Bible running around telling people about God and Jesus. Five years ago that seemed the silliest thing in the world. I thought religion was just a trick to get poor people's money."

"I mean it was a battle but it got clearer and clearer. Finally I just started to pray and asked God to help me and He did. I know what I saw."

Foreman says that when he announced his retirement, promoter Don King and Ali, champion at the time, thought he was trying to build a promotion.

"Don King called me and said 'yeah, we're going to put a cross on your robe and a cross on your trunks. Yeah, we got it man.' The promoters wanted to eat that up. It would be the Christians against the Muslims."

As for Ali, Foreman said, "I chased him (Ali) from 1974 to 1977 and was trying to fight him and he wouldn't fight me," Foreman said. "So after I retired... he actually called me and begged me to come back and fight for the title."

"I guess we could have split us a cool $8 million apiece. But I told him I wasn't fighting for no championship. I didn't do it. I realized that I needed the Lord."

McEnroe to only play singles

US Davis Cup strategy complete

NEW YORK (AP) — The weather was expected to play a major role in the quarterfinal round of the Davis Cup tennis match between defending champion Czechoslovakia and the United States, which started today.

The National Weather Service predicted sunny weather with temperatures in the 90s and high humidity. "It was in the 80's in England," newly crowned Wimbledon champion John McEnroe said Thursday. "You can be in shape to play in England, but the heat and humidity here will definitely be a factor."

Czechoslovakia, the defending Davis Cup champion, announced it planned to use only two players throughout the three-day match — Ivan Lendl, the world's fourth-ranked player, and Tomas Smid. The United States will retaliate with McEnroe, ranked No.1 in the world, and third-ranked Jimmy Connors in the singles, while Stan Smith and Bob Lutz will play the doubles.

"McEnroe and (Peter) Fleming are the best doubles team in the world," Ashe said in explaining why he picked Smith and Lutz. "But I don't want to have McEnroe playing all three days. I want him fresh for Sunday."

Under the Davis Cup format, there were to be two singles matches today, the doubles on Saturday and two singles on Sunday. Today's matches sent McEnroe against Lendl and Connors against Smid. The two Americans will change opponents on Sunday, while the McEnroe-Smith match leading off the final day of the best-of-five format.

ESPN, the all-sports cable network, will televise all of the matches in their entirety. Each day's matches begin at 1 p.m. EDT.

McEnroe said the draw was unfavorable, but noted it was made before Czechoslovakia defeated Argentina and then went on to beat Italy in the 1980 Davis Cup finals.

McEnroe, who with Fleming won the Wimbledon doubles title, defeating Smith and Lutz, refused to say whether he would have preferred to play the doubles along with the singles.

The surface at the National Tennis Center at Flushing Meadow is just the opposite — a fast, hard surface. With the sun beating down, temperatures on the court were expected to rise about 100 degrees.

Czechoslovakia advanced to the quarterfinals with a 3-2 victory over Switzerland. The U.S. defeated Mexico 3-2 in the opening round.

In other quarterfinals this weekend, Sweden meets Australia, New Zealand takes on Great Britain and Argentina plays Romania.

If the United States defeats Czechoslovakia, it will advance to the semifinals against the Sweden-Australia winner at Portland, Ore., Oct. 24.

McEnroe had no comment Thursday when he was told that the Wimbledon Championship Committee had announced that he would not be invited to become a member of the exclusive All England Lawn and Tennis Club. All previous singles champions have automatically been accorded honorary membership.

The club, in a statement, said its decision was made "because his on court behavior brought the game into disrepute."

McEnroe was embroiled in controversy throughout the two-week tournament.

Stockton's familiar in leading

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Flag-whipping wind gusts of nearly 20 mph troubled much of the field in the Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament Thursday, but they suited Dave Stockton just fine.

That's because Stockton, who won the GMO in 1968 and 1973, is familiar with the vagaries of Tuckaway Country Club's course.

Stockton, battling what he said is his worst putting slump of his 18-year career, compensated with superb woods and iron play and shot a first-round 65, 7-under par for the 7,010-yard layout.

Tour rookie Rod Nuckolls was one stroke back at 66, while Thomas Gray, another rookie, and Bobby Wadkins had 67s.

George Archer, whose 12 tour victories include the 1960 Masters, had a 68. So did David Sann, Jay Haas, Lyn Lott, Bob Gilder, Rod Curl, Chi Chi Rodriguez, John Fought, Tim Simpson, Skeeter Heath, Mike Smith and Tom Storey.

Defending champion Bill Kratzert shot a 72. Lon Hinkle, 16th on the tour's 1981 earnings list at $116,004 and top money winner entered here, was in danger of missing the cut after his 76.

The GMO, bypassed by many of golf's big names because of next week's British Open, lost one of its best draws when Bobby Clampett was disqualified after he failed to sign his scorecard. Clampett, who had a 71, is 26th on the earnings list at $92,564.

Stockton, who set Tuckaway's competitive course record with a 63 enroute to his victory here in 1973, flirted with that mark Thursday. He was 8-under par through his first 17 holes before he missed an 11-foot putt and took his only bogey on No. 18.

Moses a no-show in Russian meet

LENINGRAD (AP) — American star hurdler Edwin Moses failed to arrive in Leningrad only hours before the start of the U.S.-Soviet track meet, and a team manager said another American has been substituted for tonight's 400-meter hurdle race.

Moses's absence reduced to 11 the number of U.S. national champions who will take part in the two-day meet at Lenin Stadium, the first between the two track squads in three years and the first major U.S.-Soviet athletic competition since the American-led boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

Assistant team manager Fred Newhouse said Moses had been expected to fly in from Western Europe by this morning at the latest, but the 25-year-old hurdler from Laguna Hills, Calif., had not appeared by midday and was no longer expected to start.

Newhouse said Moses would be replaced in his event by David Lee of University City, Mo., who finished third in last month's U.S. national championship meet in Sacramento, Calif.

Moses, undefeated in nearly four years, was regarded as close to a sure winner for the U.S. team. His last defeat was in August 1977, and he has won more than 60 consecutive races since then.

Among the 30 American champions, others who passed up the U.S.-Soviet meet included teen-age sensation Carl Lewis, the U.S. titlist in the 100 meters and long jump, and Evelyn Ashford, U.S. women's champion in 100 and 200 meters.

Wild Bill Hallahan dies

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — "Wild Bill" Hallahan, the National League's starting pitcher during the first All-Star Game in 1933, died Wednesday night at the age of 78, it was announced.

Hallahan played for the St. Louis Cardinals for the majority of his 12-year major league career which began in 1925. He had a 111-108 career record and led the league in strikeouts in 1930 and 1931.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JULY 11, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you are able to find out more readily just where you are headed. It's advisable that you handle any questionable matters in the right manner. Study to gain knowledge.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take time to make plans for the future. Be more sociable with persons of character and influence. Show that you have poise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Engage in activities today that appeal to you the most. Put prejudices aside for best results. Show devotion to loved one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Getting together with good friends today is worthwhile. Show that you are a wise and considerate person.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure you carry through with agreements you've made with others. You can easily handle a civic affair now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Ideal day to start building on a new foundation that could increase your income. Be more willing to accept change.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study the promises you have made and be sure to carry through conscientiously. Come to a fine accord with loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good time to improve your surroundings. Don't permit an opponent to take unfair advantage of you. Be happy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take care of matters you were unable to do earlier in the week. A good time to catch up on your reading. Be more optimistic.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A day to engage in recreations you really enjoy. Showing more affection for loved one is wise at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If the situation is tense at home, don't make matters worse by using the wrong words. Count your blessings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle communications in a most intelligent way and remain cool at all times today. Obtain important data you need.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study new ways of advancing in your line of endeavor. Look to a successful person for new ideas. Relax at home tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be full of ideas, but should be taught to differentiate between the good and the bad. Your progeny requires a good academic training in order to become successful. Religion is a must in this chart.

Publishers jump on bandwagon

Cable TV explosion likely to date many daily habits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cable television is more than fun and games, banking and business. It's burglar alarms and mug shots. It's news and advertising. It's restaurant menus and movie reviews.

And it's more. Sermons and morality plays. Classes for doctors and lawyers — even schoolchildren. Research information. Home energy management. And, perhaps, one day medical screening.

"We all have lot of habits that are going to be very dated habits in a couple of decades, all because of what is happening now in the world of communications," said Charles D. Ferris, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

"The very fact that we like to feel a newspaper to get our information; that we like to go to the bank to cash our check; that we like to get in our car and drive down to the center city to conduct our business — those are just some of the habits that are going to become dated."

Publishers, for one, don't think their product will disappear. "Newspapers are going to be strong and healthy for as far as the eye can see," James K. Batten, vice president for Miami-based Knight-Ridder Newspapers Inc., recently told an American Newspaper Publishers Association seminar on new technology recently.

But publishers, too, are getting into cable.

Technological advances have made it possible to build cable systems with more than 100 channels capable of offering plenty of movies and entertainment, sports and news — and still have many channels left.

As the audience grows, experts say, non-entertainment programming for special interests will replace mass entertainment.

"We already have the video magazine equivalent of Sports Illustrated, Time and Newsweek, and Ebony and Jet," said Thomas Wheeler, executive director of the National Cable Television Association.

Consider:

The Columbus (Ohio) Dispatch, The Associated Press and 10 other newspapers are making their news stories available to the roughly 10,000 home computer subscribers of CompuServe, a subsidiary of H&R Block Inc.

American Telephone & Telegraph this summer wants to test a home electronic information service in Austin, Texas, revolving around Yellow Pages advertising. Newspaper publishers oppose the service.

Cable operators in several cities now offer home security systems, which monitor for burglars and fire and report problems to a central computer and police or fire officials.

The Hampton, Va., cable company has a daily feature on mug shots of wanted criminals. Warner Amex Cable Communications Inc. says the program has led to convictions.

Telephone directory listings are being provided electronically in France. Airline schedules, movie listings and restaurant menus are already offered by several cable systems in the United States.

In LaCrosse, Wis., Teleprompter Corp. broadcasts videotapes prepared by the Lutheran Church of America for weekly services. Subjects include what pastors do and the role of music in the church.

American Health Consultants Inc., a medical publishing and communications company, recently announced plans for a national network offering 40 hours a week of continuing education in medical education and news.

MANY USES FOR CABLE TV — Mark and Sonja Sheriff, homeowners in the Columbus, Ohio area, were photographed in 1978 communicating with their city planning board from their home. Cable TV will facilitate this kind of communication in many parts of the country. (AP LASERPHOTO)

Jailed woman denies leftist connection

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A 32-year-old Salvadoran woman arrested for illegally entering the United States says she's a devout Baptist, not an exiled member of a leftist organization operating in war-torn El Salvador.

Ana Estela Flores Guevarra, 32, who has been questioned repeatedly by FBI officials about her identity, denied Thursday that she was "Commander Norma Guevarra," a member of a Communist-front organization who fled El Salvador in 1978.

Ms. Guevarra has been in the Nueces County jail since July 1, serving a 90-day sentence for violating U.S. immigration laws. U.S. Border Patrolmen in Cotulla arrested her and 12 others June 24 after finding them hidden in a railroad freight car.

FBI agents have confirmed interviewing her in Cotulla after being told by border patrol agents that she possessed documents that indicated she might be a leftwing activist in El Salvador.

A Washington expert on Central American guerilla activity who asked not to be identified has quoted investigators as saying Ms. Guevarra was believed to be "Comander Norma Guevarra."

And newspaper reporters for El Dia Hoy in San Salvador have said a woman using that name was a leading member of the UDN or Union Democratica Nacional (Democratic National Union), a front for the Partido Comunista Salvadoreno (the Salvadoran Communist Party).

"No, I am not a Communist," said the Spanish-speaking Ms. Guevarra during a 20-minute interview in the county jail chapel with the Corpus Christi Caller. "I am a Christian."

She said she came to the United States to make money so she could attend theological school in Mexico and she has no idea why the FBI has questioned her at least four times.

"It is a possibility that due to my last name, Guevarra, they've confused me. I don't know how this could have happened... because all we do is study the books about the role of Christian women... and participation in the church."

Norma Guevarra fled El Salvador in 1978 after being arrested at a house where several members of the UDN were staying. She was released because of a lack of evidence.

"I heard (of Norma Guevarra) when they had her in prison and they (protesters) took over the embassy to ask for her freedom," Ms. Guevarra said.

She said documents confiscated from her after her arrest in Cotulla were a copy of a sermon by Monsignor Oscar Romero, a taped cassette of church music, and two books — one dealing with the role of Christian women in the church and another about unity in the church.

Romero was assassinated March 24, 1980 outside a small chapel in San Salvador. He had been an outspoken critic of the junta regime and had called for an end to civil strife.

Julian De La Rosa, assistant agent in charge of the FBI's San Antonio office, declined to comment on what documents had been taken from Ms. Guevarra.

Airline employees await OK of stock deal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Continental Airlines stockholders were to get a hearing in Superior Court here today on their class action suit aimed at blocking a plan by Continental employees to take over ownership of the airline.

The stockholder suit seeks a temporary restraining order against the employee stock ownership plan.

Meanwhile, at a rally Thursday, Continental Airlines employees threatened to demonstrate their anger at the ballot box if state officials do not approve their plan.

The 11,000 employees of the El Segundo-based airline want to purchase Continental stock to avoid a takeover by the Houston-based Texas International Airlines.

"If we lose this... we're gonna have a real good memory of who our friends are," said Paul Eckel, chairman of the Continental Airlines Employees Association.

He added that employees fear that the Houston airlines would dismiss thousands of workers if the takeover occurs.

"If TI wins control," he said, "within four months we'll be out of work."

The head of the state Corporations Commission, Geraldine Green, must approve the plan before it can go into effect. She was expected to make a decision on the matter early next week.

THE LIGHT TOUCH
By Sherry Wegner

We just returned from Ruidoso where we spent a few days "roughing it" at the cabin. My idea of "roughing it" is having only one bath room.

Bob's idea of "roughing it" was my not cooking & him eating cold cuts & split pea soup for 3 days.

Our daughter's idea of "roughing it" is not being able to telephone us for 3 days. (Fortunately for her we have a phone & she didn't have to "rough it.")

Murphy's law, "if anything can go wrong it will" holds true. Not only did the van "hop" & resist going after we were 70 miles down the road after dark, but the cabin had a leaking pipe underneath & had to be fixed. One thing about it the top speed for the van was 45 mph & one tank of gas lasted from Big Spring to Ruidoso, plus 2 days driving.

Speaking of tanks — have you heard about the new plastic tanks for your "3" wheeler spray attachment? It prevents clogging & corrosion. Monsanto advertised it — we've got it — the all new "rope wick kits" at Big Spring Seed & Chemical, 602 N.E. 2nd.

WCG has figures program

The Women of the Church of God met Monday at the First Church of God for its monthly meeting.

Arah Phillips, finance director, presented the program, titled "Cold Figures To Warm the World". Objectives were to familiarize members with the national WCG Budget; review projects by which local units together raised the amazing sum of $1,286,000 and to generate enthusiasm for participation in projects by emphasizing that this money goes far beyond the Cold Figures.

Cold figures — that's how any budget may be described, but Cold Figures To Warm the World is how the WCG Budget might be described.

The budget had several truths to tell the group in the following voices: Eulis Phillips revealed how Christ's Birthday offering was received, and how it was distributed for Missions. Kathryn Thomas spoke on Spiritual Birthdays and how $33,000 was realized through the locals for this worthy project. Also, how $14,000 was raised through Honorary Gifts and another $14,000 by Gifts in Memoriam. Each of these gifts honor individuals by sending $25 to Missions in the respective person's name.

Donna Lee revealed how the Penny-A-Day in which $62,226.17 was raised by giving a penny a day and a prayer a day for our Missionaries and Missions in General. The latter money was raised through various fund raising projects of local units who together raised $91,000 for Missions.

Disbursement of the budget to its various areas of service reveals its warmth and compassion to those in need, and reflects the love and dedication in Christian people working together to join hands and hearts in this worthy cause.

Jean McCray, spiritual life director, took the worship from II Cor. 9:7 and 8:7.

What is my money but my other self — either hard, cold and metallic, like cash in a cash box — or warm, exciting and compassionate — tenderness in action? It is my Christian life!

The next meeting will be a joint Prayer Retreat with the Ira Church serving as the host church Aug. 7.

Former pastors to speak in revival

Baptist Temple Church, Eleventh and Goliad, will be conducting revival services Sunday-Wednesday. Four different pastors will be preaching during the five services.

The Rev. Mike Patrick, the church's new pastor, will be preaching both Sunday morning and Tuesday evening. The Rev. Patrick came to Big Spring from Elmdale Baptist Church in Abilene. He holds degrees from Hardin-Simmons Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

Rev. J.E. Meeks, pastor of First Baptist Church in Muleshoe, will speak at the Sunday evening service. Rev. Meeks pastored Baptist Temple from 1973-1974. Originally from Merkel, he holds degrees from Hardin-Simmons and Southwestern Seminary.

Dr. James Puckett, pastor of First Baptist Church in McKinney, will speak at the Monday evening service. Dr. Puckett pastored Baptist Temple from 1968 - 1972.

Bible stories for children rebroadcast

NEW YORK (AP) — A lively and entertaining series of Bible stories for children, "Marshall Eron's Illustrated, Animated and Dramatized Bible Stories," is being rebroadcast on CBS-TV network.

The award-winning series "responds to the modern child's sophisticated humor and benevolent iconoclasm," says Pamela Dett, vice president of CBS religious and cultural affairs broadcasts.

'God's Woman Today' is title of seminar

Golf Course Road Church of Christ, 3300 West Golf Course Rd., Midland, announces its Ladies Seminar featuring the theme "God's Woman, Today" on July 18 from 10 a.m. until 11:30 p.m.

Three guest speakers will be present and speaking in the Golf Course Road Family Center. Carolyn Evanson of Tulsa, Okla., will speak on "Building Each Other Up"; Jeanie Foy of Abilene will speak on "Responsibility of Mothers to Teach Their Children"; Carolyn Semmler of Dallas will speak on "The Single Woman in God's Service."

The Greeting and Devotional will begin at 10 a.m. followed by Session I. A break for juice and coffee at 11 a.m. will be followed by Session II at 11:30.

A luncheon will be served at 12:30. For details contact Shirley Thomas at 267-2211. Interpretation for the hearing impaired will be provided.

Family is being held at Birdwell Ln.

With classes for "Mom," "Dad" and all the children, Vacation Bible School Monday evening at Birdwell Lane Church of Christ, 267-2211, will be a family affair. The minister, said, "We will encourage all members of the family to attend. It becomes a learning experience for all. It's one of the most meaningful things a family can do together."

All children ages 3 to 12 will be invited to attend. The classes will be held from 7:00 to 8:30 p.m.

Primary Latter Day Saints hear of law from officer

Primary Children under the leadership of Mrs. Barbara Thomas and the parents of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, 1200 Wagon Rd., at 9:30 a.m. July 4 for their Annual Flag-Raising Ceremony.

This Flag-Raising Ceremony, combined with Early Bird Breakfast, is celebrated in honor of our country's freedom and is held all over the world. Latter Day Saints Primary children, ages 3 to 12, are invited to attend. The children, along with their parents, gather at sunrise for a small program, followed by a parade and a pancake breakfast cooked and served by fathers of some of the children.

This program opened with a hymn and an opening prayer. Bob Glenn of the City Police Force was the main speaker. Glenn's topic was "Where the Law Begins and how it can help you with your understanding of the legal law. He told the young children that although they might not understand sometimes the "why" of the law, that if they were raised in a home that functioned under an ordered set of rules, when they grow older they would have a better understanding of the foundation of understanding of city law. He said, "rules are the laws by which we live and without them, if they are broken by children, they are growing up being able to govern themselves."

Theaters test more detailed ratings code

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The people who brought you the G, PG, R and X movie ratings for simpler days are testing a sequel designed for an age in which even Superman leapt into bed with a single leap.

Since the movie Classification and Rating Administration was formed 13 years ago in an effort to head off local censorship, a six-member panel has been giving ratings.

G means "General" and X still means sex, but PG and R are a little trickier. PG, for example, means parental guidance suggested, but many people have taken to asking theaters for guidance on what their children could expect to see on screen.

Now, as an experiment, the Motion Picture Association of America is providing additional comments at 200 movie theaters in Kansas and Missouri in an effort to help parents understand why some movies are PG and others are rated R, for restricted.

"The additional comments explain, for example, that we've rated something PG because of salty language, mild violence, war action or western action," said Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America.

"With the R rating we're just using three words: sensuality, violence and language. It's just so that people will have that additional knowledge."

The G and X ratings haven't been much of a problem. G —

Confirmer fained in Glasscock County

A wildcat has been scheduled in Howard County and a confirmer fained in Glasscock County.

Paul DeCleva, Wichita Falls, will drill the No. 1 Franks, an 8,100-foot wildcat 1/2 mile west-northwest of an 8,210-foot failure, 3/4-mile southeast of the current four-well 7,950 Luther, North (Canyon reef) field, separated by a 10,369-foot failure, 1 1/2 miles southwest of the Vealmoor field, separated by a 8,145-foot failure, and five miles southeast of Vealmoor.

Location is 1,400 feet from the south and 660 feet from the west lines of 45-32-3n-T&P.

The Vealmoor field produces at 7,973 feet. The failure, Cabot Corp. No. 1 Franks, was abandoned Dec. 30, 1958.

The Gordon Street South (lower Wolfcamp) field gained its current third producer and a 3/4-mile west extension with completion of Gulf Energy Producing Co., San Antonio, No. 1 Houston-Smith (corrected from No. 1 Glasscock-Houston-State), Glasscock County project, eight miles southeast of Stanton, to pump 37 barrels of 39.2 gravity oil, plus 24 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 27-1.

Production was through perforations at 8,739-9,485 feet, which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons and fractured with 33,700 gallons and 32,700 pounds of sand.

Location is 2,000 feet from the north and 1,000 feet from the east lines of 7-35-2n-T&P.
