Glasscock man gets ag honor

COLLEGE STATION — Clifford Hoelscher, who farms cotton in Glasscock and Pecos Counties, has been named a "Man of the Year in Texas Agriculture" for 1981 by the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association.

One of seven Texans selected for the honor, Hoelscher was nominated by county agents in the Far West District of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Other recipients include Donnell Echols, Dawson County farmer and rancher; Dr. David Smokler, Lancaster dairyman and veterinarian; State Senator Tom Creighton of Mineral Wells; State Representative Dan Kublak of Rockdale; U.S. Congressman E. "Kika" de la Garza of Mission; and Raetzsch Wagener, Yoakum rancher.

Hoelscher will receive his award during the state county agents association annual meeting Aug. 2-5 in Orange.

Hoelscher has been farming in the St. Lawrence Community of Glasscock County since 1960 and began farming operations in Pecos County in 1977. He is known as a leader for the cotton industry across Texas and the nation.

He is a strong advocate of integrated pest management systems and currently serves as president of the Texas Pest Management Association.

Hoelscher is a charter member of the St. Lawrence Cotton Growers Association, Glasscock Co-op Gin, Coyanosa Co-op Gin and American Marketing Association. He also was a director of the Texas Pecos Cotton Growers Association.

He currently is a director of Cotton, Incorporated, Texas Association of Cotton Producers Organization and Plains Cotton Cooperative Association.

Hoelscher also serves as executive director of the St. Lawrence Cotton Growers Association, president of the Coyanosa Co-op Gin board of directors, and textile pool committeeman of American Cotton Growers.

He and his wife, Joyce Ann, have five children.

Oil security firm cleared of charges

A local oilfield security company has been cleared by an investigation into whether it had operated without a license, state officials told the Herald.

Oil Safe, owned by Howard Kloss, had been operating without first securing a license, according to Don Smith of the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies.

Kloss admitted that he had gone ahead and obtained clients for his business without obtaining the necessary permit from the board.

He was not penalized by the board because he "obtained compliance by his going ahead and getting a license," said Smith.

To get the license, Kloss had to pass a written examination of 200 questions. The board did not divulge his score; Kloss said he had been told it was "above average."

He said the test had been scheduled for July 7 at the board's Austin offices but was moved up to July 3 "because of the controversy."

He could have faced a maximum penalty of a $500 fine and/or a year jail term, had he been convicted by local prosecutors of violating licensing law.

Now that he is licensed, Kloss says he is ready to offer "quality service and quality personnel" to battle the increasing crime in the oil fields.

His license enables him to offer an unarmed guard service and to carry out private investigations.

CELEBRATES — Walter Kelly, 84, and his wife Stella, 85, were on hand Saturday to celebrate the Martin County Old Settlers Reunion. The Kellys moved to the county with their families in 1907 and married in 1915.

Stanton couple has 65-year love affair

By ANDREA COHEN

When Stella and Walter Kelly were married in 1915, Mrs. Kelly says, "He made six bales of cotton and we married on that."

On Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Kelly, who have been residents of Martin County since 1907 were celebrating with other residents at the Martin County Old Settlers Reunion.

"The first year we were married," Walter added, "I made 16 bales of cotton and then the drought hit in '17."

"Me and my daddy hauled ice in wagons that year from Big Spring. There was a factory that made it there and we'd haul 2,400 pounds by wagon."

He added that they would leave at approximately 3 a.m. and arrive home in Stanton just before sundown.

"We'd line the bottom of the wagon and cover the ice and it kept it pretty good. After we'd return, the ice would be delivered around town for 20 cents a chunk."

"I remember some cowboys were camped out with their cattle," he continued, smiling, "and they told someone that hell fell in 20 cent chunks."

"We hauled about every three or four days for about a year."

"That was enough," his wife added, laughing. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly both arrived in Martin County with their families in 1907. Stella arrived from Haskell County and Walter moved there from Hereford. They have one son, four grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

They both remember the county as a small town with many parties and where Saturday was "a big day."

"More people came in on Saturdays in buggies and wagons to buy groceries, sell produce and do their banking," Walter said.

His wife remembers going 10 to 15 miles by wagon for parties.

"There was no TV, but I don't remember wanting for anything to do," her husband added.

Mrs. Kelly remembers sleeping on the porch or the yard through the summers. "We never locked our house and no one ever bothered us," she said. "You can't do that now."

In those years, the Kellys made and sold dairy products.

"We'd sell the eggs and butter, buy some groceries and have a little extra spending money," Walter said.

"And I remember," Stella added, "that we just had a broom and a mop. I washed clothes in the wash tub and heated the water in the pot. I'd get under the tree and rub and I used lye soap. There were no ready-made clothes. My mother and I sewed. I made my children's clothes and shirts and underclothes for my husband. The underclothes a lot of times were made out of flower sacks."

The Kellys have seen Martin County go through many changes including "seeing it go from a one-road town to a 12-road town."

"Everything has been improved so much," Walter continued.

"Tractors are far ahead of the mule. It was lots of hard work then that you don't have to do now. The cotton stripper was a great invention."

He also remembers buying his first automobile, a Model-T "in 1922 or '23. It was really a good one," he added.

With the exception of two years just before the 1920s when they moved to Grayson County, they have both lived in Martin County for 74 years. What made them stay so long?

"I don't know," Stella said. "I guess we just got stuck with it. I liked the people."

A friend, Calvin "Bud" Jones who heard the question replied, "We were all so poor, we couldn't get out."

In December, the Kellys will celebrate their 66th wedding anniversary.

Is there a secret to their long marriage?

"We might fuss and fight, but wind up still living together," Stella said. "We never have gotten mad enough to separate."

Added her husband, with a twinkle, "I guess she's a good cook."

Four-year-old boy rescued from well

MILO CENTER, Texas (AP) — Virginia Artho rejoiced Saturday and gave thanks that her 4-year-old son had both the courage and the strength to hang on to a rope while rescue workers hauled him from the depths of an abandoned irrigation well.

"This is just the best day of my life," Mrs. Artho said Saturday after she was reunited with her son Jared, who was not seriously injured when he toppled 260 feet to the sandy bottom of the well Friday morning. "We are planning a thanksgiving mass, but I don't know when it will be."

Mrs. Artho, who gave birth to a daughter on Thursday, said she was in her hospital room watching television with her husband when she saw a news report about the rescue attempt of her father-in-law's farm.

Shaw-Heatly pairing may be affected House redistricting plan ruled unconstitutional

AUSTIN — A state district judge declared unconstitutional Saturday the Texas House redistricting plan — the only one of three redistricting plans to survive the legislative process this year.

Judge Harley Clark ruled that House redistricting must follow the Texas Constitution's prohibition against cutting county lines except to meet two requirements:

— Keeping population deviations among counties statewide to 10 percent or less.

— Complying with the federal Voting Rights Act by not drawing a district so that the voting strength of minority groups is lessened.

The judge's decision did not directly apply to any West Texas districts other than El Paso County, but a rippling effect from there and from Potter County in the Panhandle probably would knock out the delicate balance of low-population districts in the area.

In particular, the judge's ruling easily could cause a shift that would remove the pairing of Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring and Bill Heatly of Paducah in the same district. Shaw is a freshman and Heatly is the Dean of the House.

Some pairing of incumbents is required because West Texas grew at a slower rate in the 1970s than the rest of the state.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs who filed the suit against the plan said Clark's ruling could cause a rippling effect in the area.

Brazos County (Bryan-College Station) is about the only county in the state that would be totally safe from a rippling effect caused by the ruling if it is upheld on appeal. That's because Brazos County by itself has 93,588 persons, or just under the ideal 94,856 for a district.

Clark ruled that urban counties such as Harris County (Houston) should be divided into districts without putting part of the counties into outside rural districts. That would force a realignment of other districts to adjust to this change.

The state is expected to appeal the decision directly to the Texas Supreme Court.

If that court agrees with Clark, the job of modifying districts involving the boundaries apparently will fall to the State Redistricting Board, consisting of the lieutenant governor, House speaker, attorney general, and comptroller.

The Texas Legislature was unable to reach an agreement on congressional districting in regular session and will try again in special session beginning Monday. Thus, Clark's ruling jeopardizes the only redistricting plan to survive the legislative process last spring.

The Texas House suit was filed by three urban county legislators and six citizens from across the state, challenging many of the 34 county-line cuts made by the House in drawing new districts.

Attorneys for the state defended the plan in a five-day hearing in 250th District Court, saying the legislature had the authority to split county lines in order to better balance population differences between districts.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs argued that a plan could have been drawn with only 19 cuts instead of the 34 made.

The principal issue was whether the excess population of urban counties after division of districts should be spread among those districts or to fill out adjacent counties' districts through the cutting of counties.

Clark said such cuts could be made only when the excess population would give the urban county's districts more than 10 percent in deviation or when they were necessary to avoid reducing minority groups' voting rights.

Clark said he would meet with attorneys for both sides next week in an attempt to obtain an early formal order for appeal to the Texas Supreme Court.

Assistant Attorney General Rick Gray said time is important because the Supreme Court normally takes off the month of August for vacation.

Clark first attempted to rule only on whether specific county-line cuts were proper, but plaintiffs and Rep. Bob Davis told him that any changes would cause a rippling effect into other areas.

House mortgage relief possible

By BILL ELDER

It's not clear when it will happen — and it might not happen at all — but there's a chance would-be homebuyers in Big Spring will get some financial relief in the form of low-interest mortgage loans.

How low? Indications are that the interest on these loans would be fixed at 13 percent. With mortgage interest rates soaring to nearly 17 percent, according to recent news reports, a homebuyer's monthly payments would be sharply reduced.

But before you run over to your neighborhood Savings & Loan and grab an application, sit tight for a minute — there are restrictions which limit your eligibility.

On top of that, the program has been stalled by legislators for a long time, so there's no guarantee when you can utilize the program to buy your new home. And finally, Big Spring might not be able to participate at all.

A little background. Back in the late 1970s, when the American dream of owning a home began to really appear to be just that — a dream — local governments began issuing tax-exempt mortgage revenue bonds (MRBs) to pump new financing into the increasingly depressed single-family marketplace. State housing agencies had been doing this for nearly a decade, but it wasn't until 1978 that local governments began to get in on the mortgage revenue bond action.

In 1979, Texas legislators introduced the Texas Housing Finance Corporation Act, which allowed cities and counties to form non-profit corporations which would issue MRBs on the local government's behalf and use the proceeds to finance low-interest loans to homebuyers.

Eighteen local governments in Texas jumped on the bandwagon and formed local non-profit housing corporations. Some of them acted fast enough to get their bonds on their market; with the proceeds of the bond sales they began financing mortgages at rates well below the rates prevailing in the conventional market.

The other cities got hit with a formidable obstacle named Al Ullman, an Oregon Congressman, who chaired the powerful House Ways and Means observer, was disturbed to find the market "glutted with tax-exempt bonds" and introduced legislation to revoke the tax-exempt status of the MRBs.

Committee. Ullman, according to one

That had the effect of halting sale of the MRBs, since no one could assure bond-buyers that the MRBs would continue to be tax-exempt — which was one of the major reasons investors purchased them.

After more than a year of wrangling in both the House and Senate, Ullman's much-amended bill finally passed — with the MRBs still tax-

Special session will keep legislators busy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas legislators end a six-week vacation Monday and start work on unfinished business they left behind when the regular session ended June 1.

Gov. Bill Clements has limited the special session to five subjects. But he is under pressure to open the gate to dozens of other topics and might have to yield to get needed votes on matters that are important to him.

The initial five topics are controversial and complicated enough to keep lawmakers busy for the 30 days allowed by the Texas Constitution for special sessions.

Clements submitted these issues:

- Congressional redistricting to draw election boundaries for the three new congressmen Texas receives because of population gains and rearrange all districts to conform to the 1980 census.
- Re-enactment of the Medical Practices Act, which automatically expires this year under the Sunset process unless extended by the Legislature. If the act dies, there will be no regulation of doctors and the practice of medicine.

- A constitutional amendment repealing the 10-cent state property tax dedicated to building construction at certain state universities. The Legislature effectively repealed the tax in 1979 by imposing it on 0.0001 percent of the value of property, but a pending lawsuit contends the action was unconstitutional.
- "Fine tuning" the 1979 Peveto Bill, which mandated countywide appraisal of property for tax purposes, with all taxes imposed on full market value.
- Saving half the state's treasury surplus each biennium in a fund to guarantee bonds to build dams and other water projects. The guarantee supposedly would lower interest rates and make the bonds more attractive to investors.

Most legislators would agree that the first four items are urgent. All passed the House and Senate, and conference committees were trying to settle differences over details when the clock ran out on the regular session.

There is disagreement, however, whether lawmakers should submit the constitutional amendment creating the water fund, which is Speaker Bill Clayton's top legislative goal.

Clements shares Clayton's enthusiasm and set up a water task force whose chief aim seems to be generating support for the water fund amendment.

Clayton needs a two-thirds vote in both chambers to put the water amendment before the voters. He had no trouble in the House during the regular session, but opponents of the measure predict he will have more difficulty this time.

One reason, they say, is that House redistricting no longer hangs over members' heads, taking away much of Clayton's leverage over individual representatives.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, opposed the measure and says he will fight it again in the special session. Environmentalists have stepped up their attacks on it.

Congressional redistricting probably will strike the most sparks.

Clements and the Republican Party will go all-out to increase the number of GOP congressmen. State Republican Chairman Chet Upham has a plan that he says could give Texas 10 GOP congressmen instead of the present five.

U.S. Rep. Martin Frost of Dallas has drawn lines protecting Democrats. He says 19 of the 24 Texas congressmen support his plan. Clayton has seen it and calls it "interesting" but has not committed himself.

A bipartisan group of businessmen have formed Texans for a Conservative Congress to lobby for a plan similar to one passed by the House in the regular session. That plan tipped toward the GOP and damaged the reelection chances of Democrats Frost, Bill Patman of Ganado and Jim Mattox of Dallas.

Leaders of the Texas Medical Association are touring the state trying to build support for their version of the Medical Practices Act. Clayton was behind two House amendments that resulted in the end-of-session deadlock. One would let optometrists, who are not medical doctors, use diagnostic drugs. The other prohibits hospitals from excluding osteopaths from their staffs.

The TMA says optometrists are not trained to handle possible side effects from the use of diagnostic drugs. It also believes hospitals should be free to decide whom to admit to their staffs.

Repealing the state property tax hung up during the regular session over issues of a replacement fund for college construction and Prairie View A&M's desire for a guaranteed slice of the Permanent University Fund.

University of Texas and Texas A&M regents favor creating a dedicated fund from general revenue for the 17 colleges that get no money from the Permanent University Fund.

"Fine tuning" of the Peveto bill snagged in conference over methods for evaluating agricultural land. The issue is complex, but the special session should allow time for a compromise.

The proposed revisions include structural changes in the boards of countywide appraisal districts, delays in implementation for Houston and other metropolitan areas and one-time application for old-age homestead exemptions.

Other issues Clements has been asked to submit include:

- Exemption of gasoline from the nickel-a-gallon motor fuels tax, a step that backers say is a must to create a market for gasoline made with Texas-produced alcohol.
- Increasing the oil and natural gas production taxes in retaliation for Montana's 30 percent severance tax on coal. The proposal, advanced by Attorney General Mark White, is not likely to be submitted to the session.
- Southwestern Bell Telephone's request for a change in the new wiretap law. The law prohibits unauthorized taps, and Bell fears its employees might be accused unfairly. It wants to require prosecutors to prove a telephone company employee was not acting under a court order when installing an allegedly illegal tap.

Pay raise discussions are planned

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Mitchell County commissioners met Friday for a budget workshop, the thrust of which was centered around establishing guidelines for employee pay raises.

Commissioners told Auditor Dwayne Feaster to project a possible 10 percent average increase, however, that doesn't mean all employees will get exactly 10 percent. For example, the county's 12 elected officials received checks totaling approximately $192,000 last year, 10 percent of which would mean an increase of $19,200 for the 12; however, not all 12 received the same pay.

Commissioner Paul Hunter commented, "With the proposed 10 percent increase, not each official will receive an across-the-board 10 percent raise due to variances in the salaries. Some will receive a little more, some a little less."

Commissioners will discuss further the budget during a meeting Monday.

$7.8 million in mortgage loans

exempt but saddled with a number of restrictions.

During the Congressional testimony, in September, 1980, Big Spring got wind of the program and promptly formed the Big Spring Housing Finance Corp., autonomous from the city council which created it but serving on its behalf. Five members serving six-year terms were appointed by the council — not to go out and sell the bonds, according to Assistant City Manager Paul Feazelle, but "just to get our foot in the door."

The problem was that the door appeared to be closing, and it wasn't until January of this year that the new, restricted version of the MRB program went into effect. Then the federal government got bound up in its own red tape, and postponed the issue of regulations for the new version of the program. The U.S. Treasury reportedly was supposed to issue the paperwork in March. According to Earline Jewett, executive administrator of the Texas Housing Agency, those regulations are expected to be issued any day now.

The total sale of MRBs in Texas could reach as high as $1.5 billion, Jewett told the Harte-Hanks wire service.

Big Spring, according to a formula based on population, would be in a position to offer about $7.8 million in mortgage loans — and indications are that, if it was offered today, it would be available at nearly four percentage points lower than the current loan interest rate.

Will Big Spring snatch the offer? "You're doggone right," says local realtor Jeff Brown. "Let's face it, you put $7.8 million in here at a workable interest rate."

Brown figured out that during the first six months of this year, 158 single-family homes were sold in Big Spring (he calculated this from the Multiple Listing Service he shares with other realtors) and the median price for those homes was $38,000. At that price, he said, 205 homes could be sold with the $7.8 million generated by the bonds. Big Spring, in other words, would exhaust the total amount of money available under the MRB program in eight or nine months.

But only if there weren't restrictions. The biggest change in the program since its original form is that now the loans are available only to first-time homeowners, or those who haven't owned a home in three years.

Additionally, there'll be more competition for the money, since the income limits, which had restricted the loans to persons with a moderate income, have been lifted.

Brown estimates that it will take "one or maybe two years to satisfy the supply" of loan money available with the new restrictions put on it.

The city's financial advisor, Joe Smith of 1st Southwest of Abilene, has a different opinion of Big Spring's possible bonanza.

"We're eligible, sure, but where's the demand? Big Spring is just not big enough," he says. The bonds are issued all at once, he explained, and if lenders don't see $7.8 million worth of demand for loans, they won't buy $7.8 million worth of bonds.

Smith also is worried about the effect that news of a pending loan bonanza might have on the local housing market.

"If you know that six months from now you can get a loan at three or four points below the current interest rate, you're not going to buy a house now," he says.

Smith said he would like to explore the possibility of Big Spring merging with other local governments and forming a regional housing finance corporation that would ensure demand for the loans.

Mortgage revenue bonds help depressed market

When the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development goes before a national news program, as Samuel Pierce recently did, and advises would-be homebuyers to wait two or three years before buying a home, you can assume that high interest rates are going to continue to put the brakes on home sales for quite a while.

And when the National Association of Home Builders figures out that with a $20,000 down payment on a single-family home and monthly payments of $800 including 16.75 percent interest, only four percent of the families in the U.S. can safely afford to buy a home, you can assume there's a housing crisis in the nation.

Mortgage revenue bonds (MRBs) have been offered as a way to inject relief in the depressed market for single-family homes. The MRB program has proved popular with just about everyone except Uncle Sam, because the bonds are exempt from taxes.

Here's how they work:

A city or county forms a non-profit housing corporation and sells a certain amount of bonds to local financial institutions, who then retail them to investors. The amount of bonds is determined by the population of the city or county (whichever has formed the housing corporation).

By taking the bonds, the financial institution (a Savings & Loan, for example) commits itself to making out an equal amount of loans.

Proceeds from the bond sale go into a bank acting as a trustee. As the homebuyer makes his monthly payment, one percent of the interest is skimmed off by the S&L for administrative costs and the rest forwarded to the bank, which holds it as the interest due the bond holders.

Every homeowner gets the same amount, which is determined by figuring out 90 percent of the purchase price of an average home in the housing corporation's area (in Big Spring, it would come out to about $34,000).

The bonds are backed by the monthly mortgage payments of the participating homeowners, rather than the faith and credit of the issuer. And, should a homeowner default on his loan, the city may have (although it doesn't have to) set aside a portion of the bond proceeds to cover the default.

Heritage Museum visitors Big Spring Rodeo Gang snares praise

It's always a pleasure to say "Congratulations" to the Big Spring Rodeo Gang. They do such a bang-up good job staging a rodeo, and we sincerely hope it continues to a ripe old age!

***
The Styrker Rodeo Photograph Collection from the UTPB was exhibited June 19-30 at the Heritage Museum. It consisted of 25 39x20 mounted prints of famous names in rodeo action shots. The exhibit was most interesting and well attended.

***
The month of July produced a record number of tourists — but no campers; we assume because of the cost of gasoline. Most of the visitors were just passing through or spending the night here.

Those visiting local people include: Edith and Pamela Talley from West Germany, visiting in the E.P. Driver home.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tanard from Sharon Pa.; visiting Virginia Farland, Margaret Hamson from Westmont, N.J., visiting Hazel Klein.

Mrs. Mignon Peterson, and children, Quenby and Jarl of Tacoma, Wash., visiting their relatives: Mrs. Gladys Ogle, Odell LaLonde and the Bob Utleys.

Jim Lavelle of Troy Ohio, visiting his aunt, Irene Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Anderson of Victoria, Tex., visiting Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Anderson.

Mary Kleper from Winsted, Minn., visiting Juanita Madewell.

Paul Bluha, Chris Crown, Tom Powell and Chris Patten, from London, England, just touring the country.

Other drop-in visitors from Texas towns of: Amarillo, Fredericksburg, Lubbock, Burleson, El Paso, Raymondville, Midland, Sanderson, Angleton, Houston, Snyder, Brownwood, Troup, El Campo, San Angelo, Colorado City, Groveton, Stanton, Abilene, Athens, Pasadena, Floresville, Elgin, Irving, Dallas, Fort Worth. The following states were represented: Florida, Oklahoma, Connecticut, Canada, Illinois, New Mexico, Wisconsin, Maryland, North Carolina, West Virginia, Arizona, California, Kentucky and New Jersey, Mississippi and Nebraska.

The Second Quarter Heritage Museum Newsletter will be mailed to the membership in the near future.

Council to swear in Larry Miller Tuesday

Speed limits, water and sewer rate hikes, and the swearing in of new Councilman Larry Miller are among the items on the agenda for the Big Spring City Council's July 14 meeting.

Miller was appointed by the council last Tuesday to replace Hal Boyd, who recently was appointed to the post of manager at the city industrial park.

Miller will serve out the rest of Boyd's term — until April — and must then enter the municipal election in order to keep his seat.

Councilmen will hear the first of two scheduled readings of an ordinance which would hike the minimum monthly water bill to $5.75. Councilmen also will consider a hike in the charges for sewage service.

Acting on the recommendation of the city Traffic Commission, councilmen will consider increasing by 10 miles per hour the 35 mile-per-hour speed limit on F.M. 700 between Parkroad 8 and the exit ramp west of Gregg St. — a distance of about four tenths of a mile.

The meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the City Council Room of City Hall.

Woman hurt in auto mishap

An Interstate 20 automobile accident Friday morning involving a Pecos man and a local woman resulted in the woman being sent to Malone-Hogan Hospital.

Betty Sue Schmidt of 1106 Birdwell was admitted to the hospital with a broken rib, minor lacerations and bruises after her car collided with a pickup truck driven by James W. Fletcher of Pecos.

Fletcher was not injured, according to a DPS spokeswoman.

A hospital spokesman said Schmidt was in fair condition Friday afternoon and her doctor said he planned to release her Saturday.

Reagan economic forecast predicts little growth, then improvement

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a new forecast, the Reagan administration predicts the economy will show no growth for most of the remainder of 1981 but will begin to improve by the end of the year as inflation continues to drop, a White House official said Saturday.

"We're not forecasting a recession," a White House spokesman David Gergen, "and we're saying the inflation outlook has improved."

He said the unemployment rate will "hover around the mid-7s and conceivably could go a little higher" in the balance of the year but would decline in 1982.

Details of the administration's latest economic pulse-taking will be released Wednesday, but Gergen gave a broad-brush preview in a meeting with reporters.

Reagan, meanwhile, spent the weekend relaxing at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., where he saw the movie, "Raiders of the Lost Ark."

Gergen also acknowledged the administration faces a major battle in trying to get its tax cut program through the House, and does not have the solid Republican backing that was the foundation of its victory in the battle over budget cuts.

"There are at least a dozen or so Republicans who are wavering" on Reagan's prescription for a 25 percent, across-the-board tax cut, spread out over three years, Gergen said.

"We don't have the requisite number of Democrats," he added. "We're still short. We're going to be engaged in a fairly intensive (lobbying) effort over the next three or four weeks."

In the budget fight, 29 conservative Democrats broke with their party's leadership and supported the Republican plan.

Kat's Meow opens in Big Spring

"What is in this store turns a house into a home," says Jackie Casey, owner of Kat's Meow which opened at the Highland Mall Friday.

"Opening a store like this is something I've always wanted to do," she continues. "Now I have the time in my life to do it and do it well. I never felt I had the time to devote to it and now I do."

The store specializes in "class for the home" products including bath accessories, silk flower and plant arrangements, brass and items for the wall.

"I enjoy my home and always have and that's why I like to do this. I'd rather sell this than anything else."

Services offered by Mrs. Casey include a bridal registry and decorating advice.

"I want to emphasize," she added, "that this is a friendly store. The coffee pot and Cokes will always be here. I want you to feel welcome and come back."

YMCA Programs set records

The 1981 Summer Programs at the YMCA have set record breaking enrollment this summer. The summer staff at the YMCA has undergone extensive training to provide the youth and adults of Big Spring good quality programs to make their summer a time for learning and fun.

For the working families the Y is having the Muskrat and Adventure camps which have allowed parents to drop children off by 7:30 a.m. and pick them up by 5:00 p.m. The boys and girls go to different places, learn new skills, participate in swim lessons, and get to meet new kids. They have a great time and they're home every night. This program has proved to be very rewarding for the kids and an inexpensive answer to child care worries for parents. All sessions this summer have had excellent enrollment. A YMCA Lock-in was held for the parents and children of the first two sessions of day camps. The children and their parents enjoyed a barbecue at the park, then returned to the Y, locked the doors and began a fun-filled evening of swimming, racquetball, volleyball, games, and a film before spending the night at the Y. To end the lock-in the children were awakened at 6:30 a.m. to a continental breakfast and picked up by their parents by 8:00 a.m. It proved to be an all around fun evening for both kids and their parents.

The YMCA Athletic Programs this summer consist of certified experienced instructors and has been said to be the best program the Y has had in years. The enrollment in swim lessons has been so tremendous that the Y is recommending that you enroll your child in advance to insure a spot in a class.

Have you seen the 6 months to 3 year olds jumping off the diving board at the Y? It's hard to believe, but babies in the YMCA waterbabies class are doing just that. The class is for babies and their mothers. There is an instructor to help the mothers teach the babies to overcome the fear of water and develop a feeling of ease in the water. The Y is very proud to have the only program for babies and their mothers in Big Spring.

This summer people seem to be more and more concerned about our growing population of overweight and physically unfit adult. So to help change this the Y has many adult fitness classes to offer. Fitness Fantasia to Aquatic Aerobics the Y has a program for all adults.

For any information about any of the YMCA's activities call 267-8234, or drop by the YMCA for a visit and pick up a schedule of all the summer programs.

Old habits 'still' hard to break

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — He was once Tennessee's chief agent on the Alcoholic Beverage Commission, and, by his own count, made raids on at least 5,000 moonshine stills.

Now that he's retired from that job after 20 years, William Frogge is in business for himself selling stills: legal ones, of course.

He is sales manager of United Alcohol Fuels Inc.

Agribusiness big in Texas

Texas has always been identified with livestock, and for good reason. Even in bad years (like 1980, when an extended hot spell and drought killed off a lot of animals), the impact of the industry on the state's economy is tremendous.

Cash receipts from Texas livestock in 1980 was down $800 million from the previous year but still totaled an estimated $5.2 billion. Those estimates include receipts from meat animals, dairy production, poultry, eggs and livestock products. The estimated agribusiness impact on the Texas economy exceeded $19 billion.

DOWNWARD PRESSURE ON beef and hog prices and fewer cattle marketings accounted for most of the decline in cash receipts last year, according to Dr. Carl Anderson, marketing economist with the Texas Extension Service in College Station.

Combine those figures with the state's income from crops and agriculturally related income and the state's estimated agricultural income climbs to the $9.7 billion mark. That is down from the 1979 figure of $10.4 billion but is still tremendous. (Receipts from crops within the state totaled $3.9 billion while the state's agriculturally related income brought in another $633 million).

California and Iowa still outrank Texas in total agricultural production but Texas leads all other states in marketing cattle and calves, sheep, wool, and mohair. The state also accounts for 12 percent of the nation's cattle and calf herd and 15 percent of all beef cows.

CASH RECEIPTS FROM cattle and calves totaled about $4 billion in 1980, representing about 40 percent of the state's total agricultural sales. The South Plains, The Panhandle and Southwest Texas led the state in cattle and calf sales.

Cash receipts from milk totaled $505 million in the state in 1980, second only to beef in the Texas animal industry. Poultry ranked third in cash receipts from animal agriculture with almost $500 million in sales. Egg sales alone totaled $165 million. Turkey isn't served on Texas tables with any regularity but turkey raisers sold $57 million worth of them last year.

Texas leads the nation in production of sheep, wool, goats and mohair. Honey sales in the state totaled $5 million.

The agricultural receipts could hardly be considered all gravy for farmers and ranchers. High interest rates and inflation serve to put them in a continuous squeeze between costs and receipts, however.

The last taboo

Art Buchwald

There are TV talk shows and there are TV talk shows. The celebrity talk show deals with such heavy topics as what type of pajamas an actress sleeps in at night, and what it is like to make a movie with Mel Brooks.

And then there is the other talk show which deals with such taboo subjects as wife-beating, child abuse, incest, homosexuality, and nymphomania.

THE SECOND CATEGORY, popularized by Phil Donahue, who I must say does it very well, has brought on a string of imitators. The problem is that there are just so many subjects that can be discussed openly on TV, five times a week, and then you run out of taboos.

"Hello, everyone, this is Hal Dorfman and today we're going to take up the subject of one of the last taboos in the country — gypsy-moth-beating. With us today is Roderick Crawford, who has just written a book titled, 'Confessions of a Gypsy Moth Sicker.'

"First, Mr. Crawford, why have you come out of the closet at this time and decided to admit you were a gypsy-moth killer?"

"Because I believe there are more moth killers in this country than anyone will admit. No one talks about it, and I felt I could help other people who had the same problem."

"In your book, Mr. Crawford, you say you are responsible for killing over 10,000 gypsy moth caterpillars."

"That is correct. Once I killed one, I couldn't stop myself and just kept going. Every time I saw a caterpillar I had this urge to squash it before it became a moth."

"Did anyone in your family know about your compulsion?"

"My wife did, but she couldn't stop me. No one could stop me."

"When did you realize you needed psychiatric help?"

"When I quit my job and decided to devote my entire time to killing caterpillars and gypsy moths. I couldn't keep my mind on anything else. I was full of hate for the little buggers, and all I could think about day and night was smashing them to pieces."

"And when you went into therapy, what did you find out?"

"It all went back to my childhood. I once saw a bunch of gypsy moths destroy a whole woods behind my house, and I had developed a hatred for them I never was able to overcome."

"Was it then that you discovered that there were many people like yourself who couldn't stand gypsy moths?"

"YES, I FOUND OUT I was not alone. My doctor told me he personally knew of many people who had the same terrible secret, and caterpillar-squashing was much more prevalent in this country than anyone would dare to admit. It was only recently that enough people were willing to talk about it, so that what had been considered an isolated case was really a national social problem that had been ignored."

"Let's take some questions from the audience. This lady here."

"Mr. Crawford, when your wife saw you killing caterpillars, why didn't she leave you?"

"She threatened to several times, but I think she was afraid to. I was in such a state that I told her if she left I would do to her what I was doing to the caterpillars."

"This lady over here."

"One more question from this lady up here."

"What do you do now when you see a gypsy moth on your property?"

"I pretend it's a butterfly and say to myself 'God loves all creatures great and small.'"

Refugee tells his side

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — When I reported last month on Tschermir Soobzokov, a resident of Paterson, N.J., who was accused of Nazi activities in Europe during World War II, is stimulated protests by anti-Nazi activists outside his home and threats against him and his family.

Although my associate Bill Gruver interviewed Soobzokov and his lawyer extensively before our first report on him, and obtained information from immigration authorities and the Justice Department, I feel Soobzokov is entitled to more space to tell his side of a complicated story.

The controversy over Soobzokov centers on statements he made when he applied for entry to the United States in 1953 from Jordan, where he had fled after World War II. A native of the Soviet Union, Soobzokov, now 57, became an officer in what was allegedly a Caucasian unit of the Waffen SS — the combat arm of Hitler's storm troopers.

SOOBZOKOV ACKNOWLEDGED THIS questionable past when he applied for immigration to the United States. But he insists, vehemently, that the SS unit he joined actually existed only as a cover and only on paper, and was organized by a former Albanian colonel who befriended him. Soobzokov says he used his SS officer's uniform and travel documents to go to Hungary with a group of stateless refugees who were fleeing both the Nazis and the oncoming Russians in the closing months of the war in Europe.

He blames his troubles on an attempt to discredit him by a political rival in the Circassian refugee community in New Jersey, where he settled on arrival in the United States.

Soobzokov claims, with some justice, to be the most investigated individual in the country. Yet the Immigration and Naturalization Service dropped its case against him last year, and the Justice Department ended its investigation last January, informing Soobzokov that it intended to "take no further action against him."

One Justice Department official expressed the opinion that too much time and effort had been expended on the Soobzokov investigation, "when there are many ex-Nazis living in this country with far more damaging evidence against them."

For Americans, it is hard to figure out the truth in the charges and countercharges that seem to fly continually among members of the European refugee communities who found haven in this country after the nightmare of World War II. Memories fade after 36 years, and dry official documents are not always reliable.

PERHAPS THE MOST striking thing about Tschermir Soobzokov is his determination to seek public vindication. Most of those who have been accused of having Nazi skeletons in their closet are only too happy to keep a low profile. But Soobzokov insists that the allegations against him are totally false, and he aims to prove it, no matter how long it takes.

HEADLINES & FOOTNOTES: The latest government figures on handgun-related deaths show that in 1979, 10,728 Americans were killed by handguns, compared to 52 such deaths in Canada, 48 in Japan, 42 in West Germany, 34 in Switzerland, 21 in Sweden and eight in Great Britain. Meanwhile, the National Rifle Association reports that in the two months following the attempted assassination of President Reagan, it had enrolled 111,550 new members, bringing its total membership to 1,954,552.

Officials at the Belmont Federal Trade Commission were outraged recently at what they took to be no-subtle pressure by attorneys for the American Veterinary Medical Association, who were upset by the FTC's investigation of possible monopolistic practices by the association. The law firm wrote that it "is now considering the forceful submission of its positions to Congress and possibly other audiences." What the AVMA attorneys didn't realize was that the FTC had already closed off its investigation.

Costa Rica's energy minister, Fernando Altmann, at a recent luncheon with Saudi Arabian oil minister Ahmed Yamani, was discussing Costa Rica's hopes of solving its economic woes by searching for suspected oil reserves. He found the Saudi incredulous at the fact that Costa Rica has no army. Yamani held this over and observed: "Costa Rica has no army and no oil. But if it finds oil, it will have to have an army."

Members of the National Organization for Women had more than Supreme Court decisions to get upset about recently — a new tenant in the building where their national headquarters is located. The new tenant, a newsstand, had sold pornographic materials at its former location. A NOW staffer circulated a warning memo and petition deploring the presence of a smut dealer on the premises. The news dealer cleaned up his act before moving in, but the building managers are keeping a close watch on him for NOW.

With drug prices going up along with everything else, one pharmaceutical manufacturer — Merck — has found a way to increase income without directly raising prices. Merck has simply eliminated its 5 percent discount to wholesalers. On $300 million in wholesale trade per year, that will put $15 million in Merck's pocket. The company claims it is merely trying to increase its direct distribution to retailers. But industry officials say the move will ultimately result in higher costs for consumers.

Around the rim Three stages

Walt Finley

My "hippie" son, Kim Finley, is presently honoring me with a visit, and about a tavern in his neighborhood in Northridge, Calif., called "Deja Vu."

"He was going to check it out but he had the feeling he had already been there."

CURVACEOUS CARLA Walker and Paul Harold wed two years ago next Tuesday. I'm pretty sure it was NOT Carla who said:

"Marriage is like a midnight phone call. You get a ring and then you wake up."

It was Carla's brother, Ryan, who will observe his birthday Monday, he remarked:

"Freeway traffic moves at two basic speeds — so fast you can't get on and so slow you can't get off."

FORMER HERALD ad-visor, Mike Edwards, now an ad pro for a weekly in Bryan and who plans to live it up on his birthday Friday, who observed:

"A man goes through three stages: he believes in Santa; he doesn't believe in Santa; he is Santa."

One of my leaders, Herald Editor Tommy Hart, provides a bulletin:

"I hear the gas war is over and gas won."

THERE'S ONLY ONE more year to carry the ERA. That means Oklahoma will be on the map in the months ahead, even if the OU football team has a poor season.

If ERA ratification looks promising in Oklahoma, its opponents will have to play their ace. They'll invite Bella Abzug to come in and work for it.

My wood chopping' aunt, Alta Harris, who plans to celebrate her birthday Thursday in Oklahoma City, insists it must be 'confusin' to the Lord for so many Okies and Texans to pray for rain without telling Him how much.

INTREPID REPORTER John Edwards, former Herald staffer, has resigned as Fort Worth Star-Telegram federal courthouse reporter, to seek a masters degree in business at the University of Texas. John notes money-saving coupons have transformed American life. "Before they became popular, all you could get for nothing was advice and kittens," he said.

My wonderful aunt, Mildred Ladd, who will mark her birthday Saturday by mowing her lawn, reports Rosalynn Carter says Jimmy pitches in on domestic chores. "But that doesn't mean she's thanking voters for giving her such good household help," remarked "Doogie."

ABILENE REPORTER-NEWS editorial writer James Werrell, former Herald city hall reporter, who is making plans for a birthday party Saturday, overheard:

"No, I didn't get a Christmas card from Jimmy Carter. But how did he know I voted for Reagan?"

I think it was former Herald Publisher J. Tom Graham, who observes his birthday Saturday, who recalled Amos and Andy's definition of "status quo."

"The mess we is in."

Former Herald wire editor, Marie Homeyer Canning, now a Lubbock Avalanche-Journal staffer, whizzed into the Heraldnewsroom Thursday and remarked before departing:

Men's clothing stores are putting in their own pet shops. You can get any animal emblem you want for your knit shirts.

A ONE-HOUSE TEXAS Legislature wouldn't be any better than the one we have now. But how about a plan making one House for work and the other for what we're used to?

The trouble with the legislating plan is — who would volunteer for the working House?

Classified employee Lisa Walker, reports students at the University of Wisconsin can earn college credit by watching soap operas.

"Sometimes I think educators have gone clean out of their minds," Lisa laments.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My boyfriend pressured me into having an abortion recently, and now I feel very guilty about it. Do you think there is any way God would accept a person like me? — G.L.T.

DEAR G.L.T.: You know what you did is wrong, both in having sexual relations with your boyfriend before marriage and then allowing the abortion to take place.

But all of that is behind you and you cannot undo the mistakes of the past. What you can do, however, is give your life to Jesus Christ and let him forgive you as you come to him for cleansing.

The point is this: no matter who you are or what you have done, God loves you and wants to forgive you and welcome you into his family. I know that may seem difficult to accept, because right now you think God is probably angry with you and could not possibly forgive you for what you have done. But you are wrong! Yes, God is displeased when we sin, but he yearns to see us turn to him and love him.

You see, God does not love us only when we do right, or when we avoid sin. God loves us all the time. How do I know that? I know it because God sent his only Son into the world to die for our sins. "This is how we know what love is: Jesus Christ laid down his life for us" (1 John 3:16). All your sins — not just those you have mentioned, but every one you have ever committed — were placed on Jesus Christ, and he took them away. He loved you so much that he was willing to die for you so you could be forgiven.

Do you remember Jesus' attitude toward those who crucified him? Here were men who were doing the worst thing imaginable — they were nailing God's Son (who was completely innocent of any crime) to the cross.

And yet Jesus prayed, "Father, forgive them, for they do not know what they are doing" (Luke 23:34). You, too, can know God's forgiveness, if you will only confess your sin to God and trust Christ as your personal Lord and Savior. And then seek to live each day for Christ in all you do.

Handlebar palsy: A biking problem

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Since I've been riding my bike I have had this tingling in my little and ring fingers. Can this be related to the biking? — B.P.

There is a condition called handlebar palsy. No, I didn't just make that up. It begins almost unnoticed, with numbness and loss of coordination in one or both hands after several days of biking. Tingling in the fingers is prominent. Undue pressure on the ulnar nerve as it passes down to the hand is blamed. You have probably experienced the little electrical shock you get when you strike your elbow just the right (or wrong) way. That is the ulnar nerve (funny bone) reacting. That nerve is close to the surface at the back of the elbow.

You have to stop riding until your fingers feel normal. If that doesn't happen, see the doctor. Then you have to check your bike for fit to your body. You should be able to barely straddle the top of the horizontal bar with both feet flat on the ground in stocking feet. Your saddle should be level. Wear padded gloves and pad the bars to prevent shock from jars and jolts.

Change hands position frequently.

Dear Dr. Donohue: A friend told me that when you bat right-handed with your left hand on top you can break your wrists. I bat this way very good and can barely hit the ball the other way. — J.G.

If your friend can give me a good reason for what he says I might buy it. I know none. I have tried it with a bat to see if there might be some reason. It felt awkward for me, especially in trying to complete the swing, so I don't think I would want to use it. I had to bend my left wrist more than when it was in the normal position (below). But that extra bend will not break a healthy wrist.

Why are you batting this way? Do you have any problem that makes your right wrist weak? Bjorn Borg, the tennis player, has an unorthodox swing and he does pretty well. If this is a comfortable swing for you, go right ahead, as unorthodox as it might be. What I really would suggest, though, is that you try to become a left-handed batter. You might make a great one.

High U.S. interest rates may hurt Ottawa Summit

By The Associated Press

President Reagan and the leaders of the six other richest industrial democracies gather in the serenity of the Canadian woods next Sunday to try to put some harmony back into the off-key economic policies of the Western nations.

Few expect the seventh annual Western economic summit, convening in a log "chateau" outside Ottawa, to produce broad agreement on how best to boost the lagging economies of Europe, Japan and the United States.

One factor alone — the resentment of America's economic partners over high U.S. interest rates — should prevent it.

But the host, Canada's Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, indicates he hopes the two-day conference will be an important "get-acquainted" session for the leaders.

Several are strangers to each other. Besides Trudeau, only West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher were in power for last year's summit in Venice, Italy.

For Reagan, this is his first major multilateral conference and only his second presidential trip abroad — the previous also was to Canada, March 9-10.

The other newcomers are President Francois Mitterrand of France, Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini and the president of the European Common Market, Gaston Thorn of Luxembourg.

The setting could hardly be more peaceful — the Chateau Montebello, a sprawling resort along the Ottawa River 40 miles east of the Canadian capital.

Trudeau says the secluded hotel was selected to give the leaders an opportunity for a relatively informal conference. Most of the news media, any protesters and the curious will be miles away.

On Tuesday, July 21, the leaders will fly by helicopter upriver to Ottawa for the final hours of the talks.

Reagan met with Trudeau Friday in Washington and noted afterward that the summit participants face the tasks of "reducing inflation, increasing employment and improving long-term economic prospects for our people."

But one perennial problem, energy, will recede into the background this time because oil supplies are plentiful and prices have declined.

Libraries equipped to offer varied, in-depth information

By REBBECA TAYLOR
Reference Librarian

Why do you go to the library? For many individuals, that is truly a rhetorical question; they don't go to the library. For many others, the answer to the above question is very limited. "I go to check out mystery books; to read the Wall Street Journal; to use the Xerox copier; to take the kids; to do my homework," etc.

Regular library users are often surprised to learn of specific services, on-going programs, or just how "in-depth" our information can be in certain areas. Many, who come several times a month to indulge in their favorite fiction reading or use our really great (and cheap) copier, are amazed by our wide selection of magazines and journals. Few are aware that we subscribe to "Hotel and Motel Red Book," which lists many facilities across the country, and pertinent information, such as: room rent, acceptable credit cards, phone numbers, etc. Businessmen and private individuals alike could profit from our collection of phone books from across Texas and the country, plus a small assortment of city directories. Also in our Business Room, you can find corporate addresses and investment information; up to the minute tax information and forms. West's Texas Statutes, are in a nearby reference shelf to help you find out what the law in Texas says about a matter.

Regular library patrons are not difficult to inform about these matters. A casual walk around the facility will reveal some while "in-house" advertising highlights others. Those of you who "don't read" are another matter. Whether you "read" or not, the library still holds promise for you.

The library is a comfortable place to go on Saturday afternoon and watch short films or a movie for free.

Only your wealthiest and most generous friend could afford to loan you the latest record albums of all kinds or tapes of old time radio programs, 15mm films or sound filmstrips. For a small fee, the equipment is available for use with all of these things.

Don't forget that Xerox copier to make copies of paid bills (always keep the originals), cancelled checks and important papers.

Now, about the "not reading" business, give it another thought. You can learn to do almost anything from books: repair your car, replace a light fixture, balance your budget, build a computer, play the guitar, etc.

Les Paul is a famous guitarist and inventor. He conceived and designed the first eight track recorder, designed solid body electric guitars years ahead of the industry, and invented such techniques as echo delay, sound on sound, overdubbing and multiple track recording. He truly revolutionized recorded music.

Guitar Player Magazine asked, "Did anyone help you? Any teachers?"

Les Paul responded, "Just the Library. I'm a real book man. I used to spend hours in the library. Still do."

O'Neill called 'big, fat, out of control'

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — The nation's youngest congressman told young Republicans on Saturday that House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill Jr. was "big, fat and out of control — just like the federal government."

In a virulent attack on the veteran Democrat, Rep. John LeBoutillier, a Republican, said the speaker "personifies everything about politics that the public hates today."

The 27-year-old freshman congressman lambasted O'Neill as "obstructionist" and "out of sync with the public mood" before about 250 enthusiastic delegates at the Young Republican National Federation's biennial convention.

"People ask me what I do when I walk by Tip O'Neill in the halls of Congress," LeBoutillier said. "You don't walk by him, you walk around him. And it's a long trip."

LeBoutillier, who began his talk by pasting a "Repeal O'Neill" bumper sticker on the podium, ran on the Republican, Conservative and Right to Life tickets in 1980, defeating the incumbent Democrat by 10,000 votes in the Long Island district.

He criticized O'Neill late last month for opposing President Reagan's budget proposals. The speaker responded in characteristic fashion, telling reporters: "I wouldn't know him from a cord of wood."

LeBoutillier wrote O'Neill, inviting him to visit his district, and O'Neill ignored the letter. LeBoutillier then issued a press release saying that since O'Neill first was elected to the House in 1952, the price of a cord of wood had risen from $25 to $125.

LeBoutillier told the young Republicans on Saturday that he believes Reagan "wants to take the gloves off and blast O'Neill." He said Reagan told him, "We've got to fight 'em."

As to other liberal Democrats, LeBoutillier called former Sen. George McGovern "scum," and in an interview accused the Kennedy family of "snobby, elitist, condescending politics."

"The liberals have had 40 years of unchecked power," LeBoutillier told the young delegates. "President Reagan has had less than five months and already they're saying he's a failure. The media doesn't want us to succeed."

He added: "The people don't want more federal spending of taxes. Guys like O'Neill don't buy that — they border on socialism."

"We're at the edge of a revolution," he said. "It's up to the young folks — we're the ones who can save this country."

Haig debates economic aid at Caribbean meet

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. met Saturday with his counterparts from Canada, Mexico and Venezuela to hammer out the framework for a joint development plan for the Caribbean.

However, diplomats from all four delegations cautioned that no detailed plan was expected from the meeting, which will have to deal with the economic, political, cultural and social disparities of a region that includes 31 countries speaking four major languages and numerous minor dialects.

A senior State Department official called the meeting "a first stage effort to achieve a higher level of cooperation in dealing with the problems of the Caribbean basin."

"We're attempting to lay the basis for a long-term partnership among those countries most interested in assuring the economic success of the area," he said.

After the current meeting of donor countries, the official said, there would be a meeting of the Caribbean recipient nations.

He noted that while no country could be automatically excluded from aid, neither could any donor nation be forced to assist any particular country against its own policies. The official asked not to be identified.

The United States has security concerns about the region, which it is pursuing separately, the official said, adding that the joint effort will be limited to the economic and social conditions of the region.

Haig told reporters on his aircraft while flying down from Washington Friday night that he brought ideas but no definitive plan. "We want it to be a regional plan under which donors and recipients can coordinate together."

Haig's counterparts present were Merk MacGuigan, Canadian minister of state for foreign affairs, and Foreign Ministers Jorge Castaneda of Mexico and Jose Alberto Zambrano Velasco of Venezuela.

Any multinational development program must also overcome differences in approach and philosophy among the four nations present in Nassau.

Q. In an older home, how can a prospective buyer determine adequate insulation?

A. Many older homes vary greatly in amounts of insulation. To determine how much insulation is required your area, check with a builder or insulation specialist. If an attic or crawl space exists, a measurement can usually be made. If you cannot easily measure the insulation, you might want to make a comparison of the heating bills between the house you are considering and neighboring homes. An area contractor can give you a pretty good estimate of how much it should cost to heat or cool a house. Two other items to look at are windows and caulking around doors and windows. Single pane windows are poor insulators, and a well-caulked house will mean less heat and cooling loss.

Judge rescues his wife from kidnapper

VIDOR, Texas (AP) — A quick-thinking municipal judge rammed his big luxury car into the rear of his wife's compact car and enabled her to escape from a man who had held her hostage for six hours, police said.

Sandra Price and family friend Bob Merrill were abducted at knifepoint from her home about 10 a.m. Friday by a man demanding that authorities release an Orange County jail inmate, said Vidor Police Chief J.L. "Butch" Reynolds.

Merrill was released unharmed about two hours later, but Mrs. Price remained a captive while her abductor, driving her car, drove through two Southeast Texas counties, stopping to negotiate with her husband by phone for the release of jail inmate Andy Carroll Simmons, said Reynolds.

Mrs. Price escaped when her husband, Vidor

Municipal Judge Rodney Price, used his Lincoln Continental to ram his wife's Toyota on a rural road where the judge had agreed to exchange the prisoner for his wife, said Reynolds.

"It worked better than in the movies," said Orange County chief deputy Jim Adams.

Frank Mikeska, 21, of Houston, was arrested and arraigned before State District Judge Pat Clark on two counts of aggravated kidnapping, and single counts of aggravated robbery and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

Clark set bond for Mikeska, who remained in Orange County jail Saturday, at $275,000.

Two deputies hid in the back seat of Price's car, unmarked police cars preceded and followed the judge's vehicle and a police aircraft watched from above as the judge drove to the exchange site near Silsbee, about 20 miles north of Beaumont, said Reynolds.

The police chief said when the judge, with the shackled prisoner in the front seat, arrived at the scene, the suspect began backing up toward the judge's car in an apparent attempt to look inside.

"The judge was using his head and started backing up too," said Reynolds, who was in the unmarked car that preceded the judge.

He said Mrs. Price then tried to escape through the passenger door, but the suspect grabbed her and was reaching in the back seat for a gun when the judge decided to ram the car.

The impact knocked the suspect forward and allowed Mrs. Price to escape unharmed.

The police chief praised Price for thinking clearly under pressure and credited the judge with saving his wife.

Reagan's foreign policy: Inviting questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a presidential candidate, Ronald Reagan said the United States should have a clear and predictable foreign policy.

As a resident of the White House, President Reagan said he has a foreign policy but doesn't want to spell it out.

By refusing to talk about it, though, Reagan may be inviting questions about whether he really has a workable policy at all.

Reagan and key foreign policy advisers are facing mounting criticism for not yet announcing a comprehensive foreign policy, even though they have been in office nearly six months.

Reagan responded in a speech in Chicago last Tuesday that while he does have a policy, he doesn't think he needs to spell it out.

"We know where we are going and think it might be counterproductive to make a speech about it," he said.

By that, he appeared to mean one of two things: either he wants to keep the rest of the world guessing, or he wants to keep his options open to respond to particular situations as they develop.

Either approach would raise questions on whether Reagan has adopted the "principled, consistent American foreign policy" he promised during the campaign.

But Reagan's reluctance to go public also may hint that some key elements of his foreign policy are still missing, including his policy toward strategic arms limitation talks with the Soviet Union.

Reagan promised in a televised campaign speech Oct. 19 that upon taking office, "I will immediately press for negotiations on a SALT III treaty." But nothing has happened yet.

Officials now say the earliest date for initiating SALT discussions with the Soviets will be sometime next spring. Other major unresolved policy questions include relations toward underdeveloped nations of the Third World, East-West trade issues, relations with Taiwan, the process for achieving an Arab-Israeli peace and nuclear proliferation.

Jody Powell, press spokesman and a key aide to former President Jimmy Carter, prefers the missing policy explanation as the reason Reagan hasn't made a foreign policy speech. "He would have to address matters he doesn't want to address," Powell told a reporter.

Although Powell's criticism of Reagan isn't surprising, his statement that "it's getting past the point where they ought to be ready to address these things" reflects a widely held view. Reagan has been urged by some of his own advisers to speak out.

The purpose of a foreign policy is to provide guideposts for taking positions and acting in situations as they arise. If the administration isn't willing to lay out those guideposts, it leads to doubts that it has them.

Such doubts exist in Europe on U.S.-Soviet policy. The administration's hostility toward the Soviets is well known, as is its plan to sharply increase military spending. But where it will lead has become a guessing game both at home and abroad.

A senior State Department official said last Wednesday that there is concern in Europe that "the United States is headed toward confrontation with the Soviet Union and we are not interested in negotiations or discussions or dialogue."

While he said such a concern is unfounded, "we must be more articulate in describing how we see the process of our relationship with the Soviet Union, and more importantly how we see Western Europe fitting into the relationship with the United States and in the East-West context." The official asked not to be identified.

Carter was faulted for an inconsistent foreign policy performance.

At The Movies 'The Fox and the Hound' brings back magic of Disney animation

The magic of Disney animation is back, and its even better than ever. "The Fox and the Hound" is Disney's 20th full-length animated feature and combines all the techniques and craftsmanship that have made Disney famous.

The story centers around Tod, an orphaned fox, and Copper, a puppy, who meet and become good friends not knowing that they are natural enemies. Their friendship is tested, however, when Copper is taught to be a hunting dog.

Other main characters in the story include Big Mama, a wise owl who helps Tod and gives him advice; Widow Tweed, a kindly old farm lady who takes care of the orphaned fox; Amos Slade, an irritable old hunter determined to kill Tod; Chief, the old hunting dog who reluctantly teaches young Copper the tricks of the trade; and Vixey, a flirtatious fox who falls head over tail in love with Tod.

EYE TO EYE — A fox and a hound strike up an unlikely friendship in Walt Disney Productions' feature, "The Fox and the Hound". It is a classic tale of two young animals who are born enemies but sworn friends, based on the book by Daniel P. Mannix.

ventures with an elusive worm. The film utilizes an impressive slate of vocal talents including Mickey Rooney, Kurt Russell, Pearl Bailey, Jack Albertson, Sandy Duncan, Jeanette Nolan, Pat Buttram and others. "The Fox and the Hound" cost Disney Studios $12 million, making it the most expensive animated feature ever produced. The film was 4½ years in the making, and required more than 360,000 total drawings.

The results are well worth the effort. From the standpoint of animation, the film is a masterpiece. But more important to the audience, is it is a beautiful blend of comedy, drama and warmth. Be prepared for a few tear-jerking scenes, and don't be surprised if some of the sniffles you hear are your own.

MGM deletes Bo Derek 'Tarzan' nude scenes

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — With a federal judge calling the shots, most of the nude scenes by Bo Derek in MGM's "Tarzan the Ape Man" have been left on the cutting room floor, the studio said Friday.

U.S. District Judge Henry F. Werker in New York had asked for the cuts earlier this week and MGM executives took a tentatively re-edited version of the R-rated movie to the judge's chambers Thursday in an attempt to head off a possible injunction against the movie, which is scheduled for July 24 release.

In a year-old suit, the estate of Tarzan author Edgar Rice Burroughs, who licensed film rights for MGM's original "Tarzan the Ape Man" in 1931, is trying to halt the Derek movie for its nudity and because it allegedly does not stick to the original storyline.

The estate also said it does not want Miss Derek — who became famous for her work in the movie "10," and twice was featured nude in Playboy magazine — in a Tarzan film, with or without clothes.

"The judge yesterday (Thursday) asked for additional trims. We're complying with the judge's request," said an MGM

The one thing no cattle herd is immune to is fly problems. But, there are some steps you can take to significantly reduce the problems and now, early in the fly season, is the time to take those steps. Most effective control, of course, is through mist-blown, water based insecticide, especially in protection of pastured cattle. Entomologists say the effectiveness is due to the exposure of insects resting on grass, fences, in and around trees, as well as on the herd. Impregnated ear tags will help to control hornflies and face flies, although not effective against stable flies. Insecticide dust bags and back oils are also popular in some areas, and provide protection against some pests. Whatever particular fly problem you have, now is the time to take steps effective into the fall.

Reporter 'disinvited' to Tower party

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sarah McClendon, a longtime Washington correspondent for Texas newspapers, was invited and then later "disinvited" to a Marine reception Friday evening honoring Sen. John Tower's 20 years in Congress, according to a Washington gossip columnist.

Tower sent her an invitation, but it was withdrawn after his wife, Lilla Cummings Tower, said she'd rather Ms. McClendon not come, said "The Ear," in Friday's Washington Star. "No comment," an aide to Tower said Friday. Attempts to reach Ms. McClendon by telephone failed.

Ms. McClendon has been a reporter in Washington during the administrations of seven presidents. Speculating on why Mrs. Tower didn't want Ms. McClendon to attend, the column went on: "Could it have been that piece she wrote? The one about Lilla sitting home running Tower's office? Saying who should be hired and fired? Adding $65,000 to the office's operating costs?"

The column said Ms. McClendon — after being politely asked by one of Tower's aides, "Would you please not attend? — hurried over to the office of Texas' Republican senator to hear the request from Tower himself.

'Innocent' plant mistaken for marijuana by officer

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — U.S. probation officer Mike Williams says he is "really embarrassed" after informing on an "innocent" plant that he thought was marijuana.

The weed lost its life after Williams called the Baytown police and told them marijuana was growing outside his office in the federal building. Williams' picture appeared on the front page of a Baytown newspaper, along with the remnants of the supposedly illicit weed.

Williams said for more than a year he has casually observed the plant growing along a sidewalk. But on Thursday, he said, he noticed its leaves had been meticulously trimmed back, leaving only a five-foot stalk.

"At first, I thought maybe a caterpillar had gone wild. But it was too perfectly manicured to preserve the stalk, not like something had been chewing it," Williams said.

He said the few remaining leaves on the stalk resembled pictures he had seen of marijuana, so he called the Baytown police.

Medical Practice prognosis uncertain

Marle-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Although some doctors appear optimistic, the prognosis of the Medical Practice Act for the special session remains uncertain.

Legislative surgeons from lobbyists to senators have been working through the session to revive the regulating sunset legislation that died on the negotiating table during the regular session's final hours.

However, two of the major bones of contention that crippled the act — diagnostic medicine for optometrists and non-discrimination for osteopaths — still lack the compromising sutures necessary for quick passage.

Texas osteopaths want to eliminate discriminatory practices that are sometimes employed against them by hospitals and hiring agencies that specify applicants be an M.D.

Failure to pass the bill would result in abolishment of the Texas board of Medical Examiners on Sept. 1, leaving medical practice unregulated.

Additionally, doctors whose licenses expire in January would be unable to practice medicine or write prescriptions for medicine, Texas Medical Association legal counsel Greg Hooser said.

A rule of legislative procedure requiring a two-thirds vote by each house for a law to become effective immediately also endangers the Texas doctors. If a two-thirds vote is not reached, there is a 90 day waiting period before the bill becomes law. With the Sept. 1 expiration date of the medical board, such a vote could mean a 30 to 60 day period without medical regulation.

Big Spring Rep. Larry Don Shaw said he hasn't heard much reaction from the general public on the bill but several doctors have asked him to support it. He said he supports the Medical Association stand.

With the generic drug bill and the legislation for nurses, I thought the session was very balanced in what it did for the medical profession," he said.

Wichita Falls Sen. Ray Farabee, who supported the original Senate bill, said, "My concern is for the rural areas that are short doctor and medical help. Alternate systems of medical care need to be developed that can work within the structure of the act," he said.

"We all must be concerned over the rising cost of health care. The act needs to be flexible enough to face that issue for the next 10 or 20 years," he said.

Farabee said he supports the non-discrimination clause for osteopaths and believes the optometry issue is a valid one that needs further study.

Sen. John Wilson of LaGrange, who introduced the Medical Practice Act in the regular session that was passed by the Senate, said he plans to introduce a similar bill in the special session.

"It will contain virtually what the conference committee had agreed to," he said. "The non-discrimination and diagnostic medicine clauses will not be in the bill — I don't think they ought to be."

Wilson contends that the Board of Medical Examiners does not regulate hospitals and medical schools and therefore should not have the non-discrimination clause in its sunset bill. Likewise, he opposes including the optometry clause, because he feels the issue was covered in the optometrists' act that was passed.

Rep. Bill Messer of Belton, who introduced a medical association-approved bill in the House, said he plans to introduce a bill "very much like the Senate bill that passed."

"I feel certain the act will pass," he said. "We all know better now what parameters we have to work within in order to reach a compromise."

Sen. Chet Brooks of Pasadena, who accused the medical association of "heavy-handed lobbying" during the session, said he is "guardedly optimistic" that a satisfactory act will pass.

Brooks, who favors the optometry and osteopathy clauses, said he believes the new president and directors of the medical association elected in May are more realistic than previous leaders.

Texas Medical Association members and lobbyists, who oppose inclusion of the optometry and osteopathy clauses, have been meeting with representatives from those groups in an effort to reach a compromise.

Association president Dr. William Ross called the meetings encouraging and said, "We're making a thorough attempt to work things out, and I'm confident that we'll have an act."

Bob Gammage, legal counsel for the Texas Osteopathic Medical Association was not as confident in his comments before the House Government Organization Committee during a preliminary meeting Thursday.

"All we are seeking is a clause that says 'we're all the same under the law,'" Gammage said.

Representatives of the medical association have refused to discuss specific language for the clause in formal or informal meetings, he said.

Texas optometrists, thanks to the amending hand of House Speaker Billy Clayton, are seeking the right to use diagnostic drugs to determine if their patients have certain diseases such as glaucoma.

Currently ophthalmologists, who are licensed doctors specializing in eye diseases, can use the drugs, but optometrists cannot.

The two groups battled vehemently over the issue during the 1977 legislative session. As part of a temporary truce, the optometrists promised not to introduce legislation on the issue during the 1979 or 1981 sessions.

Mengden makes session proposals

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston, asked Gov. Bill Clements on Friday to allow the special session of the Legislature to consider five measures, including one outlawing "social promotions" of public school students.

The social promotions bill was passed by the Senate during the regular session but did not reach a floor vote in the House although it was approved by the House Public Education Committee.

It would require students to achieve in accordance with their abilities before being promoted to the next grade.

Mengden also asked the governor to submit to the special session that begins

Monday bills that would:
— Require the State Health Department to conduct its unannounced inspections of nursing homes on an irregular, unpredictable basis and prohibit department employees from tipping nursing homes in advance.

— Increase penalties for persons convicted more than once of promoting obscene materials.

— Give local governments greater authority to control pornography, including the zoning of areas where it could be sold to limit access to minors.

— Require counties to rearrange commissioner precinct lines after every census.

Sunbelt, Frostbelt to fight over water act

WASHINGTON (AP) — A battle will be fought in Congress between Sunbelt states and Frostbelt states over a proposal to change the formula for distributing funds under the Clean Water Act, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Saturday.

He said a new formula proposed in a bill requested by President Reagan would take about $72 million out of Texas next year and distribute it primarily among states in the Northeast and Midwest.

States like Oklahoma and Georgia also would be hurt by the change, while states like New York, Connecticut and Minnesota would get increases "and I just don't think that's fair," Bentsen said in remarks taped for weekend television use in Texas.

Recent population figures have shown Texas and other states in the Sunbelt to be gaining people from other urban states, many of them in the Frost Belt. A lot of the construction in water facilities in these Sunbelt states has been aimed at anticipated future growth.

S. 975, a bill introduced by Sen. John H.

Chafee, R-R.I., at the request of the administration, would prohibit future growth from being considered in giving priority to construction projects.

The formula urged by the EPA would give more weight to backlog needs — facilities that should be built to justify present needs. There are also certain rural set-asides that would be eliminated, another change that would favor older, urban-type systems.

Texas will lose some construction funds as part of an across-the-board cutback the administration is calling for. That doesn't bother him because "I think we have to do that in trying to get back toward a balanced budget," Bentsen said.

"But what I am objecting to is the fact that they are now changing the formula as far as how those funds go to the different states, and they're using some figures from what I believe to be a very distorted study," the Texas Democrat added.

"As a member of the Public Works Committee, I'm going to do everything I can to put a stop to that. What you're seeing is the old deal of the fight between the Sunbelt and the Frostbelt and trying to use the formula to send more money — federal money — to the Frostbelt."

At a recent hearing on grants for construction of pollution-control facilities, a Texas official complained that the Environmental Protection Agency never conferred with the state in a report it made on needs across the country.

There has apparently been no request for state input, and the EPA's analysis became the primary analysis for determining how much a state should get in future construction, he added.

Dick Whittington, deputy director of the Texas Department of Water Resources, said the EPA list for needed construction left out $65 million that is necessary in Texas. The survey didn't even mention a big wastewater facility in San Antonio, which accounts for much of the $65 million difference, he said.

Stewart-Cox shoot 65 to lead Carl Small golf

Howard Stewart and Royce Cox combined for a consistent round of 63 to hold off the hard charging duo of Jerry Barron and Jimmy Roger and take the first round lead in the Carl Small Partnership Golf Tournament yesterday at the Comanche Trail Course.

The final round is set for today, with golfers going for their respective championships in five flights.

Stewart and Cox fired a 32-31 for their round of 63, but if Barron and Roger play today's round like they finished yesterday, their score would undoubtedly set a record.

Barron and Roger were eight under par on the final six holes, recovering from a front nine start of 37 for a back nine 28 and 65 total.

Roger started the rally in dramatic fashion, firing a hole-in-one on the par three 13th hole. That hole measures 175 yards, and the red hot redhead used a seven-iron.

The hard charging duo then finished the round with a birdie, eagle and three birdies to shoot themselves within two shots of the team of Stewart and Cox.

Barron and Roger are the defending champions.

San Angelo's Chris Adkins and Ronnie Fletcher are in contention with a first round of 66, while Bruce Carroll and Tom Spillman had a 67 to stay close.

Softball auction big success

HE'S OUT ... Big Spring Fire Department's Harry Money (24) is out in a cloud of dust at home plate as KMID-TV catcher Brud Gunn applies the tag. The contest was the first of four during Saturday's action at the Comanche Trail Park field, as these two teams, along with units from K-95, the Big Spring Police and OIL gathered to help raise money for charitable causes. Gunn's heroics in applying the tag were in vain in this game, however, as the Firemen rolled for a 21-9 triumph.

It wasn't Slow-Pitch at its best, but it was still great fun and a prosperous day for the Firemen's Fund, as five area teams matched powers in four games yesterday at the Comanche Trail Park diamond.

The teams gathered to both play softball and help raise monies that will be used in helping people in distress. The day's activities were organized by the Big Spring Fire Department, which appropriately played in three of the games and ran the auction and concession stand.

A total of $1645 was raised in the auction, with everything from kitchen utensils to TVs on the block. The money received from the concession stand had not been counted at press time.

The Fire Department also came out as the winners on the field in two of their contests. Other winning teams included K-95 radio and the Big Spring Police Department.

US takes 2-1 Davis Cup advantage

NEW YORK (AP) — Stan Smith and Bob Lutz crushed Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl and Tomas Smid Saturday to give the United States a 2-1 advantage in their Davis Cup tennis series.

Smith and Lutz, the U.S. Open doubles champions and runners-up in the doubles at Wimbledon last week, posted a 9-7, 6-3, 6-2 victory.

The decisive singles matches in the best-of-five Davis Cup format will send John McEnroe against Smid and Jimmy Connors against Lendl on Sunday.

"It ain't over yet," U.S. Captain Arthur Ashe said after the doubles victory. The U.S. jumped out to a quick 2-0 lead to start the match, breaking Smid in the second game. But the Czechoslovakians broke Smith to stay on serve.

The two teams, mixing exciting tennis with some sloppy points, held serve until the 16th game when Smith put away a forehand volley to pull the Americans to deuce. Lendl's long forehand gave the United States the advantage, then Smith closed out the first set with a backhand volley down the middle — a classic doubles move.

Smith and Lutz broke Lendl in the eighth game, then Lutz held serve as the Americans captured the middle set and moved into high gear. The third set took only 17 minutes.

"We didn't know what to expect from them, even after the Nation's Cup," said

Smith, referring to the Czechoslovakians' victory in Dusseldorf, West Germany, in May. "I was worried that they would be blasting returns. It was also unknown whether Lendl could serve and volley.

"Fortunately he didn't do as well as I dreamed he

Arnie excites army by moving to lead

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Arnold Palmer turned back the hands of time with one of his patented charges Saturday, firing a splendid 2-under 68 to grab a share of the third-round lead in the U.S. Senior Open.

Palmer's charge, the only sub-par round this week over the 6,796-yard Oakland Hills course, vaulted him from six strokes off the pace into a three-way tie for the lead with Billy Casper and Art Wall at 216.

When it was over, the 51-year-old Palmer, one of the youngest players in the tournament, called it his best competitive round in some time.

"I said after the first round that I was hitting the ball solid and I was encouraged by that," Palmer said. "Then, after a practice session (following the second round), I had that same good feeling. I felt I would play well, even if I didn't score that well.

"I was so unhappy with my game (before coming here) that I was considering pulling out of the British Open (scheduled for next week). But, I definitely go to England now!"

As always, Palmer was followed by a tremendous army of fans who cheered every swing, putt and hitch of the pants.

"The gallery was tremendous," Palmer noted. "The folks were very enthusiastic. I could almost feel what they were thinking. They were nervous, as I was, hoping I could make a couple, more."

Palmer's round included five birdies and three bogeys despite playing with what he describes as a "dull pain" in his left knee which nagged him through the first four holes before going away as suddenly and mysteriously as it came.

Casper, 50, who has a pair of U.S. Opens and a Masters title to his credit, called himself "totally under control" following a 1-over 71 Saturday.

"It feels neat," said Casper, the youngest player in the $150,000 tournament for players 50 and over. "I don't know when I've enjoyed a round more."

Wall, the 1969 Masters champion, said he was pleased with his solid 216, but felt he would have to put on a charge of his own in order to

Coe shatters another mark

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Sebastian Coe, Britain's great middle distance runner, smashed more than a second off his world record in the 1,000 meters, with a time of 2 minutes, 12.18 seconds Saturday night in the Oslo Games international track and field meet at lightning-fast Bislett Stadium.

Coe's mark was one of two world records broken during the early events. The other mark came in the women's 5,000 as Ingrid Christensen of Norway was clocked in 15:28.43.

Coe, the Olympic 1,500-meter champion, bettered the world 1,000 mark of 2:13.40 he had set July 1, 1980 at Bislett.

It was the sixth outdoor world record he has established during his brilliant career. Last month, at Milan, Italy, he lowered his 800-meter world record from 1:42.80 at Bislett in 1979 to 1:41.72.

Hurdler James King of the United States set the early pace in the 1,000, running the opening 400 meters in 51.14.

Cowboys sign top pick

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys signed three rookies, including their first-round draft choice, to contracts Saturday, just one day before the rookies were to report to the team's training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif., player personnel director Gil Brandt said.

Brandt said Missouri offensive lineman Howard Richards, 21, agreed to terms, but did not disclose details of the pact. Richards, 6-foot-6 and 262 pounds, was the first player chosen by the Cowboys in the National Football League's recent draft of college players.

Also signed Saturday were 7th-round pick Ron Fellows, a 6-0, 173-pound defensive back from South Bend, Ind., and defensive back Tim Morrison, an 11th-round choice from Georgia.

The Cowboy's second-round choice, Ohio State wide receiver Doug Donley, still had not signed a contract late Saturday, team officials said.

Brandt said that the three signings left only four holdouts among the Cowboys 14 draft choices. The rookies must sign contracts by Sunday, or cannot participate in the training camp.

All-Star Tourney nears

The Texas District III Little League All-Star Tournament will begin tomorrow evening with 11 teams from four towns working toward the title and a possible berth in the state tournament in August.

The District III winner, which will be crowned August 25, will meet the District IV winner (San Angelo area), with the survivor of that match advancing to the state tournament.

The other two Big Spring teams, the Texas League and American League, play on Thursday and Tuesday, respectively.

The American League All-Stars face Midland Tower on Tuesday in the National League Park, while the Texas League All-Stars will tangle with the winner of that game on Thursday night off against Midland Mid-City in the American Park.

Defending champion Midland Eastern returns, and will face the Big Spring National League on Tuesday evening in the double elimination affair.

First round games tomorrow find Big Spring International meeting Midland Western at the National League Park, while the Stanton All-Stars square in the NL Park.

All teams dropping their first games will move into the loser's bracket, and thereby place themselves into a position of quick elimination from that point.

All games begin at 8:00 p.m., with the American League and National League serving as the host sites on every occasion.

Running for my sanity

"Hey, you dumb (bleepity-bleep), when your time comes, all that running won't help," screamed the man in the car as he passed by.

I smiled, growled as if in pain, and jogged on. Something similar happens most everytime I run, as I'm sure it does with the increasing number of joggers in our country. The question is, "does running really help."

Some say yes, some no. And for those that say yes, each has his own different philosophy on how much running is good, and how much is too much. Or if jogging is worthless, while sprinting is the only type of running which will help the heart.

Personally, I don't know. I've heard so many different philosophies that if I tested each one of them, it would probably be the year 2000 before I could make a proper deduction.

I haven't always been a jogger. For most of my life, which spans just over 26 years, I was involved in some sport on a competitive level. From Little League baseball through college football, there was always something to be played, and that kept me in shape.

But after my football playing eligibility ran out at Rice in the fall of 1976, things began to change. I realized that I needed something to do on an everyday basis in order to keep my body both healthy and good looking.

Fortunately, my last head coach in college was a running buff.

Coach Homer Rice believed in the benefits jogging as much as he did the passing game of Tommy Kramer and the Christian religion. He made everyone learn to run distance.

I may not have felt highly of his coaching abilities, but I believed in what he said about running for your health. I haven't stopped since.

From talking with most runners, I have learned that they do it for three reasons. The most popular reason is for their health, while the other two are to keep down their body weight and for the simple love of running.

But what is the best method? I feel there is not one single method for each individual person. Many highly successful runners have different philosophies, yet they still all achieve top marks in their field. That's no different than the contrasting coaching styles of Tom Landry and Bum Phillips. They are both different, but both have been consistent winners.

One person on the local scene that undoubtedly would have to be listened to is Sherrill Easterling. Easterling teaches math and also directs a running course at Howard College, as well as running an average of 70 miles per week.

She has been a very successful runner on the area and state level, good enough to qualify for the Boston

Marathon the past two years. And for those people that don't believe in the benefits of running, Easterling will definitely disagree.

"My opinion, of course, is that it is good for the heart," Easterling said a couple of weeks ago. "The heart is just a muscle, and it makes sense that if you want a strong heart, you need to exercise it. I don't think anyone will dispute that."

Of course, it has been said many times that most people jog too much, overworking the heart and causing fatal attacks. But Easterling will not believe that theory.

"I've heard a lot of doctors say that someone died because they were running too much and that people should cut out running, but that's hard for me to believe," Easterling philosophized. "Of course, people die when they are asleep. They say that 60 percent of people dying from heart attacks die in their sleep, but I don't think that we're going to cut out sleep."

Easterling's class at HC emphasizing running is to help people get on a program of proper running and diet. She encourages them to eat more fruit, and that way they will receive more potassium and vitamin C into their bodies, which will help their muscles for running.

Her program calls for a person to build up to five hours of running per week, with the person doing at least 30 minutes of continuous running at each session.

In Easterling's running class, she also will emphasize stretching, and her theory is different than many running instructors.

"Many people stress that you stretch before you run, but I feel it's really more important if you stretch after you run. Another idea," explained Easterling, "is if you're going to run a long distance, run a mile or two and then stretch after you've loosened up. It's after you run that your muscles are tight, and it's then that you need to stretch and loosen them back up."

The running professor of Howard College feels that while some physicians and many people still won't recognize the benefits of running, the jogging craze will continue. At least if she has anything to do with it.

"I think the doctors that say it's not good, some of them are fat and they don't want to exercise," she philosophized. "They just really don't care. But most of the modern doctors that have any sense see the importance of running."

As for me, I believe in running, but there are many other ways to exercise and keep the heart healthy and the body beautiful.

But usually, I find running to be more of a mental outlet than physical. A chance to let the mind wander, like it is now. A chance to run from the phone or my poison of the night before. Or from my crazy mind.

New strategy didn't help

Lendl, ranked fourth in the world in singles, had given Czechoslovakia a 1-0 lead Friday when he demolished McEnroe 6-4, 14-12, 7-5 just six days after the American left-hander had defeated Sweden's Bjorn Borg to capture the singles title at Wimbledon. Connors then evened the Davis Cup at 1-1 by stopping Smid 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

Smid said he and Lendl tried to change their strategy, "but they didn't miss many volleys. They were going for corners and making them."

Game point came when Lendl hit a vicious, high-kicking serve which Lutz rocketed back across the net. Lendl barely got his racket on it, setting up Smith's forehand volley winner.

The winning point sent two spectators — Connors and his wife, Patty — leaping into the air in excitement, Patty waving her small American flag.

The winner of the U.S.-Czechoslovakian match advances to the semifinals against the winner of the Sweden-Australia rubber. Australia leads 2-1 after losing Saturday's doubles.

MEDIATOR REACTS — Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett, left, reacts to a demonstrating baseball fan Saturday outside New York's Doral Inn after talks in the 30-day-old baseball strike were recessed.

Owners reject proposal

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiations in the 30-day-old baseball strike broke down again Saturday after management rejected a settlement proposal presented by federal mediator Kenneth Moffett.

The two sides met for about two hours Saturday morning and for about the same period of time Saturday afternoon before talks were recessed.

"We're temporarily stalemated — broke down," said Moffett, whose proposal which had been presented Thursday had seemed to signal the first sign of progress in the strike which has canceled 377 games since June 12.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the striking players union, said, "The meeting this afternoon was as close to being useless as possible."

Miller said that after rejecting the mediator's proposal, which the union had previously accepted, management sent word through Moffett that unless the players had a new proposal, "they did not care to meet."

"Consider that," said Miller. "It was an exercise in futility, the whole afternoon."

There were reports that management bargainers believed that Moffett had not offered the compromise proposal, but that it had come instead from union sources. Miller bristled at that suggestion.

"I don't appreciate people casting doubt on the mediator's impartiality," he said. "That is a low, scurrilous tactic."

Ray Grebey, chief negotiator for the Player Relations Committee, reportedly made that suggestion to a newsmen covering these talks.

"He said it to a reporter," Miller said. "I labeled it the biggest lie in a period of willful lies."

Moffett denied that his proposal had come from either side.

"One of the things a mediator does is gather information trying to work out the best road to reach a settlement in bargaining," Moffett said. "The owners had a hangup on a couple of hangups, but it was our work."

Moffett said he thought his plan appeared dead after Saturday's sessions.

Specifically, management has voiced objections to two parts of Moffett's plan — the formula for determining free agent compensation and a price tag ranging from $150,000 to $200,000 for each compensation claim.

The owners' latest proposal would limit to 10 the number of free agents requiring compensation in any one season.

Moffett said he would probably be back in touch with the two sides Monday.

Asked about the tone of the negotiations, Moffett said, "It's getting nastier."

Goalby has tough day

"I'm going to have to make a couple of birdies," Wall said. "I've been out here a lot of years and I realize Billy and Arnold are better players than I am. I don't sell myself short. I just respect them."

Saturday's biggest disappointment had to be Bob Goalby. After taking the 36-hole lead with a 2-over 142, Goalby soared to a 6-over 71 in the third round to drop back to 218 for the tournament.

"I'm still not out of this thing," said Goalby, whose biggest mistake was a triple-bogey on the par-4 14th where he four-putted. "I played a lot better out there than the score indicates."

One stroke back of the leaders at 217 was Bob Stone, a club pro from Independence, Mo.

"I've played in over 100 events on the tour," Stone said, explaining his relative anonymity. "I think I have a chance Sunday. Of course I always think I have a chance to win when I go out there."

Debbie Austin making Mayflower LPGA a joke

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Debbie Austin shot a 3-under par 33 on the front nine Saturday and had an eagle on the 426-yard, par-5 16th hole to open a commanding 9-stroke lead over Myra Van Hoose and Louise Parks after three rounds of the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Mayflower Classic.

Austin, a veteran of 13 years on the tour who hasn't won since 1978, finished her third round with a 4-under-par 68. Her third consecutive below-par round on the 6,101-yard Country Club of Indianapolis course gave the leader a 54-hole score of 205.

The 33-year-old Austin, who ranks 21st on this year's money list, pulled away from the pack with four birdies and a bogey on the front nine. That gave her a 6-stroke lead over Beth Daniel as the leaders made the turn.

Daniel's dreams of catching Austin died when she scored a triple-bogey 6 on the 160-yard No. 13 hole. Daniel hooked her tee shot left and it landed under a tree on a slope. Her second shot flew up the slope and over the green, and her third shot went over the green to a position near where her first shot landed.

The nightmare continued as last year's LPGA Player of the Year sent her fourth shot past the green before she lifted the ball 10 feet from the cup and sank the putt for her six.

Cathy Reynolds, who shot a career-best 66 in the second round to move to within one stroke of Austin, never got her game going. The 23-year-old Springfield, Mo., resident had four bogeys on the front nine. She had only one birdie all day and had three more bogeys and a double-bogey on the back side.

The 7-over par 79 left Reynolds one shot over par for the tournament at 217.

Oilers ink ex All-Pro McCutcheon

HOUSTON (AP) — Veteran running back Lawrence McCutcheon has signed a contract with the Houston Oilers for the 1981 season, Oiler general manager Ladd Herzog announced Saturday.

McCutcheon last played with the Seattle Seahawks in the final nine games of the 1980 season, after being released by the Denver Broncos, who had gained his services through a trade with Los Angeles.

The Plainview, Texas native began his National Football League career as a third-round Los Angeles draft choice, and made the NFC Pro Bowl squad five times during his career with the Rams.

His best season was 1977, when he gained 1,238 yards on 294 carries and scored seven touchdowns for Los Angeles. Team officials said he would report Thursday to the Houston training camp in San Angelo.

After 14 years in NFL Preston Pearson retires

DALLAS (AP) — Veteran running back Preston Pearson, a Dallas Cowboy for six years and a National Football League player for 14, said he is through with professional football.

The Cowboys have officially notified Pearson he will not be invited to training camp this summer and Pearson said flatly he would not consider returning to the team on any other basis, such as a temporary replacement in case of injury.

"Absolutely, positively not," said Pearson. "I would like to be treated just like any other individual who is competing for a job. Otherwise, I will go about my life as I normally do."

Pearson, 36, used mainly as a pass receiver the last two years, has joined several other Cowboys in outside business ventures, which he said would now occupy his time.

"I have done for myself what any smart businessman would do," he said. "I am prepared for the ups and downs of everyday life. Once I get into that, I should stay there."

Dallas coach Tom Landry said Pearson was not invited to camp because he did not figure in the team's plans and deserved better treatment than being cut during the preseason.

"Of course, we hate to lose him because of his great contributions in the past," said the coach. "We would rather face it this way than have him come to camp with intentions to play. I don't like to do that with veteran players who have contributed, who have done so much."

Pearson said he would not try to sign with another NFL team and would pursue his business career fulltime.

Soviet women spark win over US tracksters

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Russian women overwhelmed their American rivals Saturday, pacing the Soviet national team to a 204-178 victory over the United States in their first dual track and field meet since 1978.

It was the Soviets' 13th victory in the series that began in 1958. The Americans have won three times and one meet ended in a tie.

The 1981 meet in this northern Russian city was close for the first day. The Russians led 97-93 after Friday's opening 18 events. But Saturday, the powerful Russian women's team won seven of nine events, including the first two places in the 200-meter dash, 1,500-meter run, long jump, 400-meter intermediate hurdles and 3,000-meter race, breaking open the competition.

The Russian women overwhelmed their American counterparts 99-60, easily overcoming the 118-105 triumph of the American men.

Afterward, U.S. Coach Harmon Brown told a news conference that the American team was hurt by the absence of some of the American champions, some of whom are competing in other meets in western Europe.

Later, however, he told The Associated Press that the United States would have to revise its training regimen if it hoped to compete successfully against the Soviets, particularly in women's events.

"Socially and cultural in America, women's sports have been accepted only in the last five years," said Brown. "We're working at a real disadvantage... the training has not been intensive enough."

Even many of America's men athletes, who recorded their 12th victory of the U.S.-Soviet series, have had "frighteningly little training," Brown said.

The Russian women have won 16 of the 17 meetings. Anatoly Yefimenko, a leading Soviet track official, said at the news conference that the result of the two-day meet — the first major athletic competition between the two countries since the United States led a boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics — was "proof once more that our athletes are better."

The Americans registered only six victories in the 18 events Saturday after splitting the first 18 events Friday. The Soviets finished with 21 victories in 36 events.

The U.S. team fared best Saturday in the 3,000-meter steeplechase and the men's 10,000-meter run, taking the top two places in each event.

Mark Nenow of Lexington, Ky., and Jim Stintzi of Franklin, Wis., broke away from their Russian rivals with three laps to go in the 10,000 and ran the last lap side-by-side, crossing the finish line together. Nenow was awarded the victory in 28 minutes, 45.86 seconds. Stintzi's time was .01 slower.

John Gregorek of Northport, N.Y. led a somewhat surprising sweep in the steeplechase. He was timed in 8:22.88, finishing about 10 meters ahead of Ken Martin of Eugene, Ore.

Other American winners Saturday were: Karin Smith of Venice, Calif., with a toss of 207 feet, 2 1/2 inches (63.16 meters) in the women's javelin; Jeff Phillips of Whitehall, Ohio, 20.50 in the 200 meters, and Louise Ritter of Denton, Texas, who cleared 6-4 1/2 (1.94 meters) in the high jump for a meet record.

Phillips had won the 100 in 10.21 Friday and was named the most valuable men's athlete on the American team by the Soviet meet organizers. Ritter won the honor for the American women.

American track officials said afterward that instead of a dual U.S.-Soviet meet next year in the United States, a quadrangular meet probably would be held, including West Germany and one African nation.

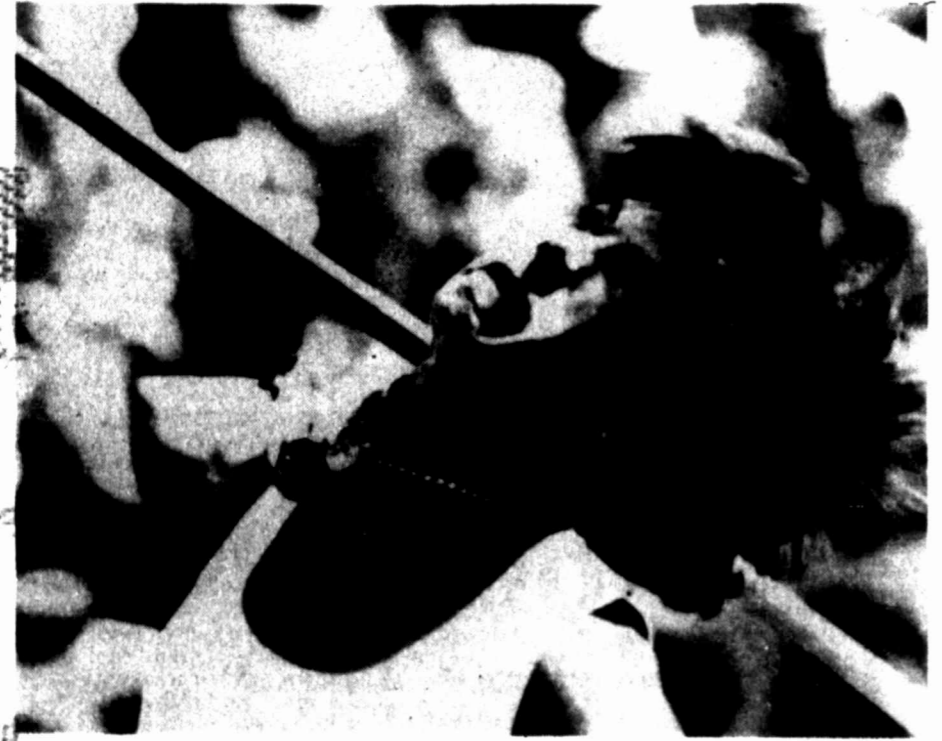

No reason was given for the expected change, and a Soviet track official said it was the first he had heard about the proposal.

The Americans were warmly received at the two-day meet by a partisan but politely appreciative Soviet crowd. Friday's crowd was about 25,000, some held in warm, sunny weather.

As is usual at Soviet sports events, security was heavy. Hundreds of policemen and Army troops were posted inside and around the stadium during the meet.

STRAINING TO WIN — Karen Smith, of Venice, Calif., grimaces as she throws her javelin Saturday, during the U.S.-Soviet dual track and field meet at Leningrad. The Russians overwhelmed their American rivals, scoring a 204-178 victory.

In Milwaukee Open Haas' big lead not invincible

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jay Haas owns a five-shot lead, the largest of the year for the PGA Tour, but one of his closest pursuers, Rex Caldwell, refuses to concede the Greater Milwaukee Open title.

"He's got a big lead, but it could be done," said Caldwell Saturday after shooting a 5-under-par 67 for a 54-hole total of 206, 10 under at the Tuckaway Country Club.

Caldwell shared the runner-up spot with another nonwinner, 30-year-old rookie Mike Smith. Smith posted his second straight 69 for his 206.

"There are a lot of good players on that leader board. He's got to pay attention. I'm not playing for cash. I'm playing to win," said Caldwell.

Haas, bidding for his second victory in his fifth season, fired a 5-under-par 67 and assembled a total of 201, 15 under for three trips over this wide-open, 7,010-yard course.

His third-round margin was the widest of 1981 along with the 5-shot leads for Bruce Lietzke in the Bob Hope and Hale Irwin in the Hawaii Open.

Haas, in a dramatic reversal of his poor performances of late, strung together six birdies in his first 15 holes before bogeying the 17th.

Haas, 27, a former collegiate champion at Wake Forest and winner of the 1978 Andy Williams-San Diego Open, had missed the cuts in his last two tournaments.

Smith was amazed he was so far behind after playing so consistently well.

"It feels funny to be five back after three good rounds," he said. "I may be more back than that if Jay keeps playing like that. I'm going to make a run at it. Sure, I'm going to try for birdies, try to catch him."

"I'm sure I'll feel the pressure, but I love the big galleries," said Smith, the winner of just $500 last fall after earning his PGA Tour card.

Lyn Lott, after shooting a 68, was alone in fourth place at 207, 9 under. Another shot came colorful veteran Chi Chi Rodriguez with 71-208.

Among those at 208, 7 under, was former U.S. Open champion Andy North. Also at that figure were Tim Simpson, Rod Curl, Roger Maltbie, Jim Colbert and Bobby Cole.

The field is playing for a first prize of $45,000 in this $250,000 tournament.

Girls Camp of Champs ends with championship play

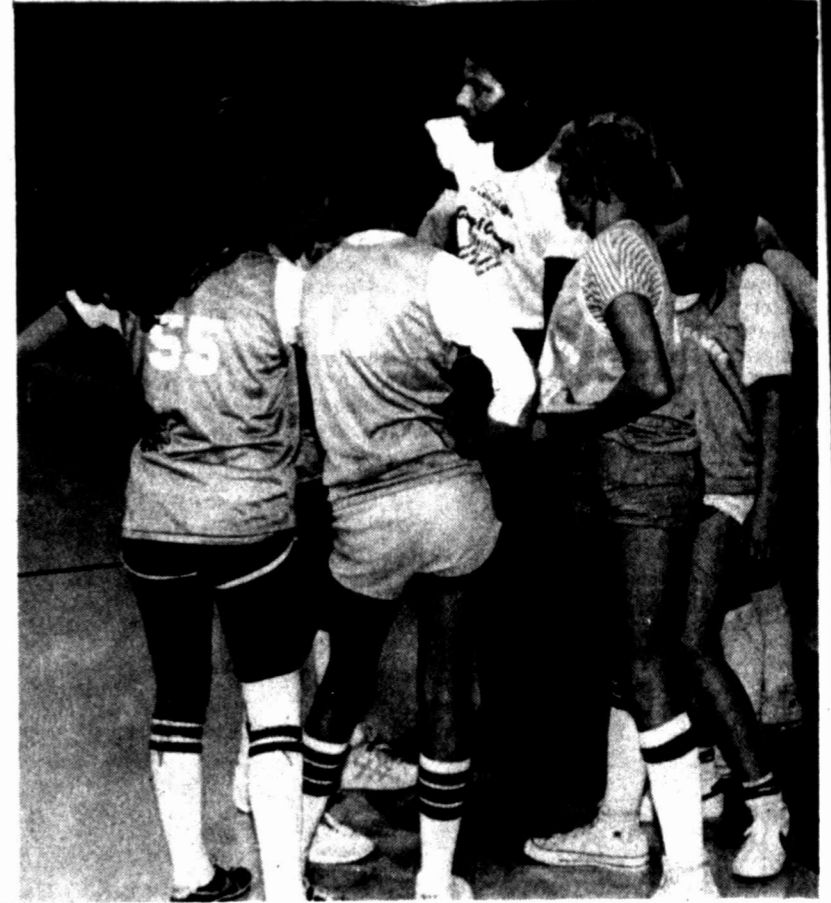

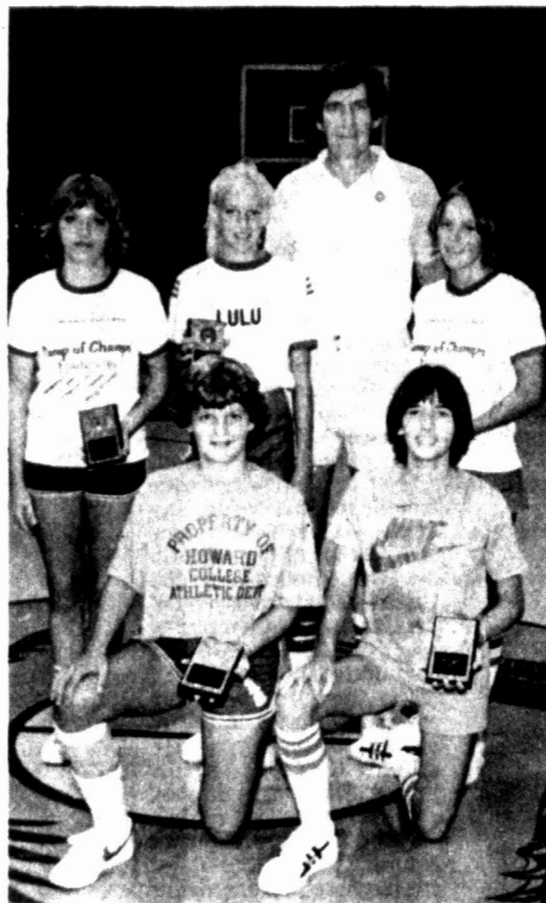

The Howard College Girls Camp of Champs came to a close Friday afternoon with a pair of championship games, with the young females heading back to their respective homes.

The boys Camp of Champs will begin Monday, with over 100 expected to fill the HC dorms and learn more about the game. At the girls camp, a total of 98 girls from 21 towns enrolled.

The three pictures shown exemplify action during Friday's championship round. In the photo at left, an unidentified player shoots for two points during the Little League title games.

In unique competition

Real cowboys set for ranch rodeo

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. — The fabled ranch rivalries of the Old West are being fanned to a hot competitive edge again today.

The question to be settled is which of Texas' biggest ranches owns the bragging rights ... cattle country today — which one is the best.

It'll be settled August 21-22 when real workin' cowboys from the big spreads gather in Wichita Falls for the big shootout — the first annual Budweiser Texas Ranch Roundup.

These won't be urban cowboys. They're the kind whose boots are made for workin', not dancin'. And their wide-brimmed hats show the wear and tear of long, hot days in the saddle, not air-conditioned designer chic.

They'll compete peacefully in rodeo style competition with the spotlight on working ranch skills, a talent contest where anything goes, a ranch queen contest for the ladies, and, naturally, a chili cookoff. After the hard work in the corral, they'll change from ranching gear to polished boots for a dash of dancin' to country-western music.

Participating ranches include the R.A. Brown Ranch, the Cowan & Son Circle Bar Ranch, Lewis Ranches, Pitchfork Land & Cattle Co., Scharbauer Cattle Co., Renderbrook-Spade Ranch, Swenson Ranches, Tongue River Ranch, U Lazy S Ranch, U U Hereford Ranch, and W.T. Waggoner Estate.

The Roundup opens Friday evening, August 21, with the first rodeo performance at 8 p.m. Teams of cowboys from each ranch will compete in team roping, saddle bronc riding, team penning, team branding, and wild cow milking. A wild horse race will be a bonus event. A dance at 9 p.m. featuring Mountain Smoke will conclude Friday's events.

On Saturday morning, the ranches will compete in a 9 a.m. jackpot roping event. A chili cookoff, the talent contest where anything goes, and the ranch queen contest are featured Saturday afternoon before the final rodeo events that evening at 8 p.m. Popular C&W entertainer Red Steagall will perform at a dance that evening at 9 p.m.

Points will be awarded to ranch teams and individual cowboys in each event to determine the best ranch and the top all-around cowboy. The winning ranch will take home a traveling trophy, a bronze sculpture by Lex Graham, and the winning cowboy will receive a hand-tooled saddle. Grand prize for the winner of the chili cookoff will be a trip to the World's Championship

Chili Cookoff.

Budweiser Rodeo Six Pack members Jack Ward, T.J. Walter and Bobby Brown will judge the rodeo events.

Rodeo tickets are: box seats, $6; reserved seats, $4; general admission, $3. Tickets to the dances are $3 per person each evening, and tickets to the Saturday afternoon contests are $1 general admission. Tickets will be available at the gate or at Wichita Western World, Sears, The Cow Lot and Holt's Sporting Goods in Wichita Falls. Tickets can also be obtained by writing Falls Distributing Co., 3811 Tarry, Wichita Falls, Texas, 76708.

Coahoma's Meyer on Tarleton list

STEPHENVILLE — Michael Meyer is one of eight basketball recruits named this week by Tarleton State University Coach Sherman Perry.

Meyer helped direct the Coahoma team to the District 6-AAA title the past year, averaging 17 points and nine rebounds per game. He also had a 59 percent field goal average.

The 6'5" former Coahoma roundballer joins Eric Aaron of Alvin, Roger Adamson of Duncanville, David Kates of Amarillo Palo Duro, Robert Edwards of Joshua, Robert Woodard of Fort Worth Dunbar and Al Leathers of Waco LaVega as incoming freshmen. All were high school seniors last year except Woodard, who has been out of school for two years.

"I'm pleased with the way recruiting has gone this year," said Perry. "We have better height than last year and we should have better depth and scoring potential coming off the bench."

Tarleton finished 6-20 last year after losing 12 games in the closing seconds. The team won five conference games, however, and finished third in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Martinez the missing Tiger name

Anatolio Martinez was the member of the old Big Spring Tigers that was not identified in last Sunday's Herald. He was in the picture of the team that told of the Old-Timers game.

Martinez passed away four years ago in El Paso.

With Connors, McEnroe's loss doesn't hurt

NEW YORK (AP) — How important is it to have Jimmy Connors back on the U.S. Davis Cup team? Nobody knows better than teammate John McEnroe. "It's good to have a guy like Jimmy around, especially after you lose a match," said McEnroe, who did just that in his first court appearance since winning Wimbledon, bowing to Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl

6-4, 14-12, 7-5 Friday in the opener of the best-of-five quarterfinal series. Connors, making his first Davis Cup appearance since 1976, bailed out the U.S. squad by beating Tomas Smid 6-3, 6-1, 6-2 in Friday's second match to even the series at 1-1. "Knowing John had lost the first match made me more eager, more up," said Connors. "I didn't want to end the day with us behind 2-0 — especially not on Arthur's birthday." Arthur Ashe, the non-playing captain of the U.S. team who was celebrating his 38th birthday, said he sensed Connors would come out like a tiger. "Jimmy loves to play in New York," said Ashe. "He loves the New York crowds and he feels that center court belongs to him." It certainly did Friday. Smid was no match for the aggressive, tenacious Connors, who scored nine service breaks and was in complete control throughout. In one stretch of the third set he reeled off 16 consecutive points. "It was pretty inspired tennis," said Connors, a satisfied smile on his face.

"With Jimmy on the team, I don't think it really matters what I do here," said McEnroe, who won Wimbledon a week ago to end Bjorn Borg's five-year reign and replace the Swede in the No. 1 spot in the world computer rankings. "Jimmy should win his two matches, and we should also win the doubles."

The 28-year-old Connors, currently ranked third in the world behind McEnroe and Borg and one notch ahead of Lendl, sat out Davis Cup competition in recent years because of differences with former captain Tony Trabert. But Ashe replaced Trabert as the non-playing team captain this year, and in January Connors agreed to be available for the series against defending champion Czechoslovakia.

All-Star game postponed; Kuhn apologizes

CLEVELAND (AP) — The indefinite postponement of the 1981 baseball All-Star Game has not seriously dampened the spirits of the mayor of the host city. A series of downtown outdoor events will go on as scheduled despite the announcement by baseball

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Friday that the 52nd All-Star classic would not take place on Tuesday as scheduled, Mayor George Voinovich said. "We're going ahead with our plans because game or no game, this city has a lot of things to celebrate," Voinovich said. "Because of the continuing strike by the players association, it is no longer practical to play the game as scheduled," Kuhn said in a statement issued from his

New York office. Kuhn heads the 11-member executive council that reached the decision. "This is a tremendous disappointment for all of us in baseball, as I am sure it is for fans everywhere," he said.

UT roundballer quits for son

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Thanks to a 6-8 reserve center who decided his wife and new son were more important than basketball, the University of Texas is now down to the NCAA limit on scholarships.

Rob Cunningham, a junior from Connecticut, said Friday he would not return to Coach Abe Lemons' squad next season. "I want to watch my son

C-City Jaycees hosting Slow-Pitch Tourney

The Colorado City Jaycees will hold their fourth annual slowpitch softball tournament July 31, August 1 and 2. The twenty-eight team open tournament will begin play at 7:00 p.m. Friday July 31 and will continue through the Radio KVMC broadcast final game Sunday afternoon. The C-City Jaycees expect teams from San Angelo, Lubbock, Abilene, Sweetwater, Snyder, Midland, Odessa, and Big Spring and invite all interested teams from the surrounding area to come and participate. Tournament brackets will be drawn on a first come basis with an $80 entry fee charged to play for over $1,000 worth of trophies and prizes.

Anyone interested in playing in the C-City Jaycee tournament is asked to contact Woody Anderson at 915-728-5720 or Brian Bassham at 915-728-2233 for more information. July 24th is the deadline for entering.

New 76ers owner promises to trim budget and still win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The new owner of the Philadelphia 76ers, a millionaire who made his fortune in the diet business, says he plans to trim the fat from his National Basketball Association team.

"We will make cuts in the front office, and even in player salaries," Harold Katz said Thursday, after announcing that he was paying more than $12 million for the Sixers. Katz, who owns a nationwide chain of diet centers, said his lifelong ambition was to own an NBA team and that he has been in the market for two years.

"Many people have called me a little bit crazy," said the 44-year-old Katz at a press conference. "I guess you have to be a little bananas to buy a sports franchise."

"Since I can't play for the Sixers, and can't coach them, the next best thing was to buy them," Katz said. "My youngest son plays high school basketball and he was the driving force for me to buy the club. He said money isn't everything."

But the business of running the team will be important to Katz. "I am in this to enjoy myself, but I do not intend to lose millions of dollars," he said. Katz's first official act, even while lawyers prepared the necessary papers for the transfer, was to make it clear that Billy Cunningham would stay as coach. "It's going to be a very easy transition," Cunningham said. "We met casually and just talked about everything. I see no problems."

Katz agreed: "I am going to depend heavily on Billy, and also on Pat Williams (the general manager). I am not going to run this team myself. I definitely understand the game and I will be involved."

Stripers back at Spence

The striper is back at Lake Spence — not that they have really been away but in recent weeks channel catfish, white bass and other species have crowded them from the spotlight.

Biggest catch of the striped bass was a 16-lb. specimen landed by Joyce and Bob Dawson of Lubbock. The largest fish at Lake Spence, however, was a 32-lb. yellow catfish.

Reports from Lake Spence included: Wanoreck's Paint Creek Marina — Edith Rowe, Lubbock, nine striped bass, the largest 13 lbs.; Jack Purcell, Lubbock, two striper to 6 lbs.; Larry Knapich, Odessa, three striper to 7 lbs.; Tommy McCann, Odessa, 28 channel catfish to 2 1/2 lbs.; Bob and Joyce Dawson, Lubbock, 12 striper to 16 lbs.

Triangle Grocery and Bait — Jeanne Preston, Odessa, an 8-lb. striper; John and Emma Pitts, Big Spring, 30 channel catfish and 20 white bass.

Skinny's Hillside Grocery — James and Dennis Counts, Robert Lee, a 32-lb. yellow catfish. A 25-lb. yellow catfish was caught on a trotline at Lake J.B. Thomas on July 2 by Freddie Nix, Big Spring.

DE-BUGGING
In the old days fishermen had some foul-smelling concoctions to ward off insects. Often these repellents offended other humans more than they did mosquitoes.

Today, thankfully, things have changed. The bugs are still around, and in plentiful numbers, but the wizardry of chemical engineering has produced a group of insect repellents that really work. Still, it's not pleasant to have a mosquito zipping around three inches from your ear waiting for the repellent to wear off so he can zoom in and hit the target. Here are some tips from the outdoor recreation department at Mercury outdoors that will be helpful to fishermen, campers and others who enjoy being outdoors, but who don't want to fight insects.

Insect repellent sprays or oils should be applied to clothing rather than to your skin. Sweat soon breaks down the composition of the repellent and it quickly becomes ineffective. It will last much longer when applied to cloth, so a long-sleeved shirt, trousers, and a hat make sense when in mosquito country.

Boat campers should pitch their tent where the wind blows. Stay away from heavily-forested areas, and try to find a site where the prevailing breeze is from the water.

Campfire smoke also helps keep bugs away. Although no one likes to be in the direct path of smoke, you can locate the fire so smoke from it will drift through the campsite.

Spray the inside of your tent with insect repellent about 30 minutes before going to bed. This will rid it of any mosquitoes that may have sneaked in and are waiting, and will provide relief most of the night.

Summer rains are almost too much of a good thing

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Summer rains are continuing to blanket much of Texas in sharp contrast to last year's drought — but in some areas, it's getting to be too much of a good thing, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The rains are delaying hay making over much of the eastern half of the state and are starting to affect cotton and grain sorghum crops in some areas, he said.

Much hay has been lost in eastern and coastal areas, and hay that has been harvested is suffering in quality due to the inability of growers to cut it at the right stage of growth. Of course, good moisture conditions mean that there will be additional cuttings, Pfannstiel said.

Some cotton has started to suffer from excess moisture and has shed squares. Also, the wet weather is causing a favorable environment for insects such as fleahoppers, bollworms and boll weevils.

Recent rains have slowed grain sorghum harvesting in southern areas, and some farmers in the Coastal Bend are concerned that the grain may start sprouting if fields don't dry soon, Pfannstiel said.

While most of the wheat crop is in, some wet fields remain to be harvested. A few fields may not be harvested due to weather damage, but this year's crop has been good to excellent in most areas.

Peach harvesting continues and the luscious fruit is plentiful, Pfannstiel said. Pecan prospects also remain good although recent wet weather is causing an increase in disease and insect problems.

Watermelon harvesting is about complete in the Rio Grande Valley and Winter Garden but cantaloupes and other vegetables continue to move to market.

Texas livestock continue to enjoy an abundance of forage and stock water except in the Panhandle and parts of the South Plains, Rolling Plains and Far West Texas, which are dry.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions:

PANHANDLE: Wheat harvesting is complete, with yields from irrigated fields better than expected. Dryland yields were generally poor. Corn, sorghum and cotton are making good progress, with insects increasing in cotton. Most farmers are about ready to cut alfalfa for the third time. Onion harvesting is active. Pastures and ranges remain short due to dryness.

SOUTH PLAINS: The wheat crop is in, with good yields on irrigated acreage. All crops are making good progress, with irrigation in full swing. Dryland cotton will need rain soon. Scattered rains and some hail hit the area over the weekend but the region remains dry. Onion harvesting is nearing completion while potato harvesting is about ready to start.

ROLLING PLAINS: Some parts of the area are getting dry, and grasshoppers are becoming a problem in cotton, grain crops and home gardens. Trips and fleahoppers also are increasing in cotton. Good forage sorghum hay is being baled in some counties, with rain needed for regrowth. Most ranges need rain. Peach harvesting is active.

NORTH CENTRAL: Rains have once again halted the completion of small grain harvesting. Yields of both wheat and oats has been good. Cotton, corn and sorghum are making good growth. Most peanuts have been planted and are up to good stands. Livestock have plenty of forage for grazing and stock ponds are full.

NORTHEAST: Some wheat remains to be harvested due to scattered rains. Sorghum is turning color and cotton is squaring. Corn is being harvested for roasting ears. Soybean planting continues along with hay making as weather conditions permit. Hay yields have been excellent. Peaches, peas and beans are also producing excellent yields.

FAR WEST: High winds have depleted soil moisture in most counties, with cotton irrigation in full swing. Some farmers also are irrigating alfalfa. Most wheat and oats have been harvested, with generally excellent yields. Onion harvesting is complete in Pecos County. About half the peach crop is in.

WEST CENTRAL: A good small grain crop has been harvested after frequent rain delays. Cotton planting is complete. Grasshoppers have caused heavy damage in cotton in Nolan County. Peach harvesting continues, with good yields. Many pastures and ranges would benefit from additional rainfall.

CENTRAL: Grain sorghum is maturing rapidly and an excellent harvest is in prospect. A few fields of wheat still remain to be harvested due to rain delays. Most peanuts are planted and up to good stands, and a good peach harvest continues. Hay making is active as weather conditions permit, with yields excellent but quality down.

EAST: Scattered rains have again hampered hay making, but prospects remain good. Most crops are making good growth but a considerable amount of grain sorghum was lost due to flooding by the Trinity River. Some peanuts remain to be planted, with some replanting due to poor stands caused by bad seed. Some growers are planting a second vegetable crop or are planting fall crops. Freestone peaches are ripening.

UPPER COAST: Some sorghum harvesting is under way where fields are not too wet; good yields are in prospect. The corn crop also looks good to excellent and rice is making good progress. However, cotton is in fair to poor shape due to excess moisture, and some replanting of soybeans continues due to heavy rains.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Soil moisture is plentiful over the area, with most crops and forages making good progress. However, cotton in particular needs open weather. Some hay baling and peanut planting continues as field conditions permit. Peach harvesting remains active, with a good crop. Pecans look good.

SOUTHWEST: Scattered rains continue to interfere with field work and harvesting of potatoes, onions, cabbage, cantaloupes and hay. Grain sorghum is about ready to harvest while harvesting of water-melons and peaches is about complete. Livestock have plenty of grazing.

COASTAL BEND: Excess moisture is hurting cotton and may cause some sprouting of grain sorghum which is ready to harvest. A record corn crop is in the making. Hay crops are producing good to excellent yields where weather conditions permit cutting and baling.

SOUTH: Scattered rains have hampered grain sorghum harvesting in some areas.

Saving energy workshop set

Area specialists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service will be covering information concerning cotton irrigation scheduled for a Monday meeting, to be held at Turner's Farm Store in Welch. The store is on SH 137.

A workshop on Energy Conservation in New Building Construction will be held at the Dora Roberts Community Center Tuesday, beginning at 8 a.m.

The workshop will be conducted by the Texas Engineering Extension Service and the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council. This free training is directed toward building designers, contractors, financial institutions, and city personnel.

Project 1. Remodeling of two classrooms in the Adm. Curriculum Center Building, Air Conditioning and Heat.
Project 2. Remodeling of choir-band hall in the Colorado Middle School, Air Conditioning and Heat.
Project 3. Cleaning of the windows at Hutchinson Elementary School.
Project 4. Paving-curbting of parking area around Administrative Curriculum Center Building.

At this time the bids will be publicly opened and read aloud in the Board Room of the Administrative Curriculum Center Building located at 534 East 11th Street, Colorado City, Texas for the furnishing of all labor, materials and equipment for performing all work required for the remodeling projects in accordance with plans, specifications and contract documents.
A Cashier's Check, Certified Check or acceptable Bidder's Bond payable to the Colorado ISD in the amount of not less than 5 percent of the largest total for the bid submitted must accompany each bid.
The successful bidder will be required to enter into a contract with the Colorado ISD, Colorado City, TX and furnish a Performance and Payment Bond in the amount of not less than 100 percent of the contract price, conditioned upon the performance of the contract.
The bidder acknowledges the right of the Owner to reject any or all bids and to waive any informality or irregularity in any bid received. In addition, the bidder recognizes the right of the Owner to reject a bid if the bidder failed to furnish any required bid security or to submit the data required by the bidding documents, or if the bid is in any way incomplete or irregular.
Specifications for the remodeling projects may be obtained from the School Superintendent's Office located at 534 East 11th Street, Colorado City, Texas or by calling 815-726-9771.

MITCHELL COUNTY MEMORIES

Fancy Whing-Ding of 1885 recalled

By MARGARET BAUM
Herald Correspondent

Mitchell County is preparing for its 100th birthday celebration July 18-25. Three natives of the county recently relived some of the "old days" — days that included hardships, dangers and hard times, but an era also brightened with entertainment for all ages.

Ford "Smokey" Merritt's parents came to Mitchell County in the 1880s. "Smokey" was born in Colorado City in 1903, elected city secretary in 1937, appointed director of finance in 1950 and appointed city manager for Colorado City in 1962, a position he resigned in 1968 after 30 years of service in City Hall.

"After the Ball is Over," Merritt remembers that, "I recall my parents, aunts and uncles telling about a real whing-ding held in 1885, after the completion of the St. James Hotel. It must've been a real fancy deal. Had a band out of St. Louis and all the prominent cattlemen from all over Texas and New Mexico were invited. Al McFaddin, R.J. Kleberg, Col. Parrymore, Burk Burnett, Clabe Merchant ... all those old-time cattlemen."

Three thousand people attended the ball. According to Merritt, "It was divided between the St. James Hotel and the Frenkel Opera House just down the street, where they shored up the floor to accommodate the weight of as high as this guy could."

Jones was a drummer and music has always been a part of his life and still is. He reminisces, "My brother and I played in the Town Band. We were fortunate to be invited to play in the 'Old Gray Mare' band in St. Paul, Minnesota, for the 1923 National American Legion Convention. We used to play with Harley Sadler's Tent Show when it came to town ... the Mollie Bailey Circus band, too. They were always glad to have extra members to recruit. That was 'way before 1923, of course."

Early Colorado had a Town Team. "A mighty good baseball team, too," Jones remembers. "Adults, except three of us high school boys ... Edgar Holt and I as regulars and John Prude as a utility player, more or less. We played all the surrounding towns, including Big Spring."

Playing Lubbock was a big game. Jones remembers, "On the way to the ballpark, we passed the hospital. There were several nurses ... pretty cute, we thought ... sitting outside on benches. Old John said, 'now, that's where I want to wind up.' And that's exactly what happened. He caught a high, hard ball on the temple ... that was 'way before batting helmets ... just dropped like an ox. Terrible concussion, but he got all right."

Tremendous rivalry accompanied every game. Jones recalls, "There always was money on the side. We would bring in ringers ... players from out of town. Every team did it ... the battery, pitcher and catcher ... so the other guy didn't know who was going to be on the mound and who was going to be behind the bat. We even had little Dickie Kerr one time from the Chicago White Sox. One game, D.H. 'Pop' Snyder bet a certain number of cattle against a drug store owned by an out-of-towner. 'Pop' won that drug store because of the one and only run of the game, hit by Jim Dobbs."

World War I affected Colorado youngsters before the United States entered the conflict. "Right before we got into the war," Jones recalls, "we had our own slingshot battles. We were about 12 or 13. There was an old garage that had burned down, along with several automobiles. We'd take the reflectors off the headlights and make helmets out of them ... go out around Round Rock where the pea gravel was just right. It's a wonder we didn't really hurt each other, but we didn't."

Rattlesnakes were in abundance in Mitchell County. "I have a great respect for snakes, but I'm not nearly as afraid of rattlers as I am of copperheads," Jones relates. "We used to hunt rattlers by leaning over a cliff and dangling a cut-off cane pole with a noose at the end. That was in the winter, when the snakes were sluggish, but we could get 'em stirred up ... plenty of them. Used to find 80 or 90 at a time out where the old Col-Tex Refinery used to be. We never got bitten ... and, no, my mother didn't know what I was up to."

Rattlesnakes weren't all Jones and his young friends hunted. There were skunks, as well. "We learned the hard way a skunk couldn't be gotten safely with a little spade," Jones remembers. "My mother had to burn my clothes and just about disowned me after one particular skunk came out backwards and let me have it."

Spinning tops was fun, but Jones and his compatriots modified the game. Jones tells us, "We got our tops from what was called the racker store ... sort of a five-and-ten establishment. We'd remove the spindle and insert a screw we filed off to a needle-sharp point. The object of the game was to flip the top down and split the other fellow's top in half. The best top string in the world was that beautiful blue cord around Armour's and Swift's bacon and ham. Talk about hummin' tops."

Marble shooting for "keeps," Jones remembers that very well. "We each had a law ... and if we caught a guy pushing his law, instead of using his thumb to thump it, we really let him have it! Our favorite laws were 'steelies' ... ball bearings. My mother didn't like it one bit, my playing for 'keeps.' I guess she was the regular Carrie Nation with a hatchet around here. She wouldn't even allow a deck of Bicycle playing cards in the house. She sewed up my pants pockets so I couldn't carry around my marbles. Can you believe it? Sewed up my pants pockets! But I got my friend, George Slattery, down at the bank, to give me two coin bags to carry my marbles in. I hid my marbles under the same tomato vine my father kept his Four

"GILDED CAGE BALL" — Past and present meet as Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Lemons, left, and Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Fuller ready themselves for Mitchell County's Centennial "Gilded Cage Ball," to be held Saturday at 9 p.m., in Colorado City's Civic Center. Lemons is Mitchell

County's Centennial Chairman and Mrs. Fuller is chairman of the ball. The couples are pictured at the Ford Merritt home, an official Mitchell County historic residence, built in 1899 by Merritt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.G. Merritt.

Sweetwater. The reason for that route was the fact that with no maps, the pilot took a logical route ... he followed the railroad tracks.

That landing was a crowd gatherer, according to Jones. "All of Colorado turned out to watch the airplane land. Great preparations had been made ... a space had been roped off, about the size of a boxing ring, and cotton had been laid on the ground to make the landing softer. The people who'd made the land preparations thought the plane would come straight down. They'd never seen a plane before and just didn't know, so they went to great lengths to provide what probably would be called a heliport today, complete with cotton to soften the landing."

The pilot certainly must have seemed friendly to Colorado residents ... Jones adds, "Nobody could understand why the pilot kept making funny waving motions and kept on circling when the citizens had gone to so much trouble to mark off a special landing space for him. There he was ... no cockpit, flimsy wing, a foot-operated rudder and, probably, not much fuel. Finally, someone realized, even though the pilot was friendly, he couldn't land on cotton, so the crowd moved back and the plane landed, although its bicycle wheel-like landing gear almost scraped a head or two. I remember that landing well. It was in the ballpark's right field."

And there is Mrs. Witt Hines, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. C.P. Killough, came from Comanche County in 1891 to the Conaway Ranch, six miles south of Westbrook. Mr. Killough and the oldest son drove the stock through, while Mrs. Killough and five children rode in a covered wagon. Mrs. Hines was born in 1900, one of ten children, and received her master's degree 30 years after obtaining her bachelor of arts degree.

Living on a ranch meant Mrs. Hines' family's entertainment was centered around their church and school activities. She recalls, "At first, there was no school. My father bought an old building, had it moved and hired a teacher, my mother's niece from Hill County, in 1896. There wasn't any community at all ... just three families lived in the area. There wasn't even a road from the ranch to Colorado City. As my father said, 'we just drove as the crow flies and started our own road into town ... fifteen miles.' Much later, when families came in from East Texas, people got money together to build a school and my father donated the land. As a result, the school and the community were named after him and my mother. At one time, there was an enrollment of one hundred and ten students and it was declared a rural high school."

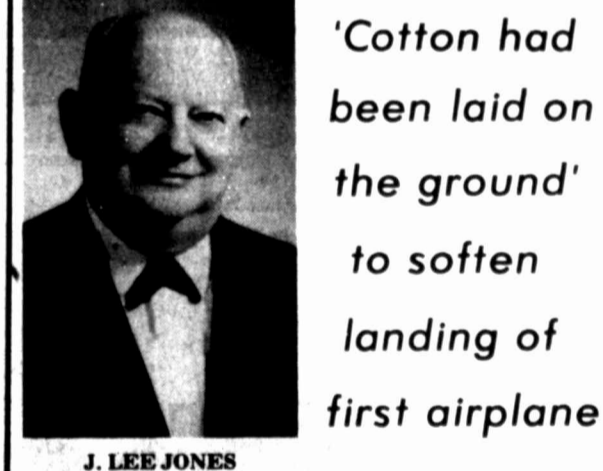

Living away from town called for area residents to make their own entertainment. Mrs. Hines remembers, "In school, we had literary societies every third Friday evening. The parents participated, too, and on some of the programs, we had spelling bees. It was a lot of fun to stand up and spell against your parents. We had declamations and at the end of the school year, we always put on a play ... built a platform out from the building for the stage. We thought our plays were excellent."

Outdoor games were fun for rural youngsters. "We played softball and basketball," Mrs. Hines stated. "Boys and girls together. Of course, our basketball court was right on the dirt. 'Wolf Over the River' was a popular game and I especially remember 'Pop the Whip,' because once I was on the end and took the consequences. I won't forget that game and getting popped off. It really hurt."

Church services were important to Mrs. Hines' family and other rural residents. She remembers, "The school also was the site for church services during the regular school term. Ministers would come through and preach for all of us. In the summer, we'd build a brush arbor and have services for about a week at a time. There were carbide lights on poles because we had no electricity. Groups would get under the trees and have prayer meetings before the services."

Going the 15 miles into Colorado City was one of the highlights of Mrs. Hines' early life, for it was an in-greedy event. "My father raised fine horses," she recalls, "so we always had the best rigs. I remember my older sisters telling my younger sister and me that the big rocks where the lake is now were going to turn over when they heard us coming. We believed that for years and years and would watch every time we went by. Now I know they told us that just to keep us still."

"Mother and we children were 'let off' at C.M. Adams Dry Goods Store," Mrs. Hines adds, "while daddy took the rig to the O.K. Wagon Yard to water and feed the team. Of course, we stayed all day. We always bought new hats for each season and I remember trying on, as a little girl, whatever was the latest in millinery for the ladies. Of course, we always took home plenty of ice wrapped in blankets to make ice cream with several other families."

J. LEE JONES

'Cotton had been laid on the ground' to soften landing of first airplane

Roses whiskey. Now, my father was a wonderful man ... a kind, consistent disciplinarian and certainly, a moderate drinker, but he enjoyed a 'toddy for the body' once in a while.

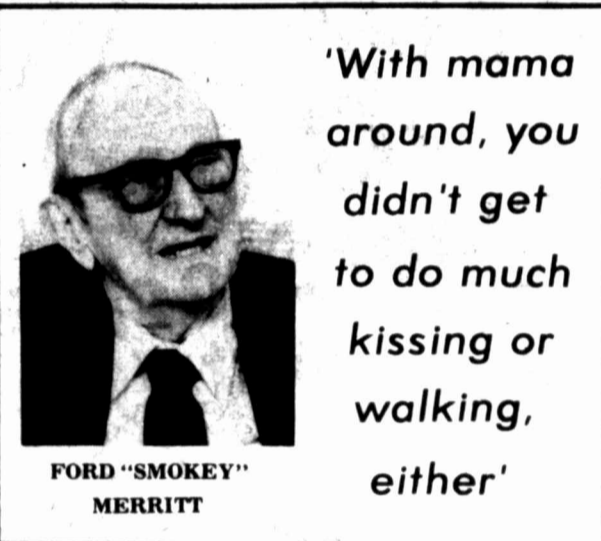

Agates got Jones into trouble, too. "We liked agates for laws. Of course, they'd get chipped when they hit against each other. Often, I'd soak my agates in the lard can at the house. That didn't go over too well with my mother, either, because those agates had dirt on them."

There were plenty of swimming holes to keep Colorado youngsters cool. Jones remembers, "We liked to go swimming ... I always wanted to go. One particular time, I just had to go swimming and mother said I could ... after I did the churning, I wanted to swim more than I wanted to churn, so I hurried things up by spreading a little butter from the icebox around the dash in the churn. It looked convincing to me, but it didn't to my mother and father. After I got home, I faced my father's peach switch and had to do the churning, as well."

Jones also remembers, "We'd roll hoops ... those old hoops that came from around barrels. We had racer wagons. We'd cut a neck in a piece of 1 by 4 lumber and guide it with cords, like reins. We built Indian tepees in a mesquite pasture, which now is a residential area ... we'd camp out and roast potatoes on the ground."

Early movie serials kept youngsters on the edge of their seats. "I've seen many an episode of 'The Clutching Hand,' 'The Perils of Pauline' and 'Diamond in the Sky.' I played drums with the piano player for the sound effects," Jones remembers.

1911 saw the first airplane try to land in Colorado. "It almost didn't land," according to Jones. "I was only six years old, but I remember it as though it were yesterday. The craft was a biplane making a transcontinental flight with planned stops in Big Spring, Colorado City and crowd and removed the seats from the theater. That was easy to do because the seats were just fastened together from behind in fours and sixes. There was Brussels carpet run between the two locations so the ladies' gowns wouldn't get soiled and their slippers wouldn't get dirty. The streets weren't paved then.

The ball overflowed with refreshments. "1,800 bottles of champagne were on hand," Merritt recalls being told, "so I guess everybody got a sip. Then they had a catered meal. Of course, that was before my time, but I remember hearing about it for a long time after I was born."

Early Colorado City young people climbed a stairway over Mr. Burns' Dry Goods Store to dance. "It was a club ... a place to dance," Merritt remembers. "There'd be orchestras and the dances were by invitation. Certainly wasn't any drinking there ... that just wasn't allowed ... it was understood before you took any young lady to that kind of affair. 'Course there were always two or three mothers sittin' around to supervise. There were some dances in homes, too ... those with phonographs ... small affairs, you might say. Around 1915. Now, I was old enough to go to those."

Clubs and games were popular in early Colorado. (The city was originally named "Colorado.") According to Merritt, "Some of the ladies belonged to clubs and one of the most popular games was Whist. I guess a forerunner of bridge. The ladies and men would get together and enjoy that. Young couples would get together and enjoy games I guess have been going on for years ... like 'spin the pan,' which is like 'spin the bottle.' 'Course, if the handle landed in front of a certain girl, you got to kiss her. We played another game in one home that had a knothole between two of the walls. We'd take out the knothole. Boys in one room and girls in another. If the boy could guess whose finger he was touching through that old hole, he got to take the girl walking. With mama around, you didn't get to do much kissing or walking, either."

Picture shows came to early Colorado, too. As Merritt remembers, "the first picture shows I went to were in an old building that had burned and had just two sides ... called the Air Dome, because we saw the movies under the stars. Cost a dime for those matinees on Saturday that ran over and over, no talking pictures, of course. At first, there was a young lady who played the piano to make the music fit the movie. Then there was a real nice lady who came to Colorado City when the picture show got an organ ... one with pipes and that really was 'go in' to town. 'Course, that was later, and when you took a girl, that cost about a quarter, and after the show ... why, you took her for an ice cream 'sody' at the old Colorado Drug, Mr. Doss' Drug Store, or Ben Morgan's Confectionary. Always had to have our girls home by 10 o'clock. Really had to time it, too, since we were walking."

Talking pictures really impressed "Smokey" Merritt, although he remembers, "Most of the time, the talkin' didn't match whatever they were doing."

Sunday school classes had lots of entertainment for all ages. "We had a men's Methodist Sunday school class here," Merritt remembers ... "called Stoneroad's Sunday School Class. Mr. Stoneroad was my uncle and we had a barbecue every year in the park. Everybody came from all over Mitchell County. Why, we'd barbecue five bees. Otto Jones would give a beef ... the Wulfjens would give bees ... Charlie Thompson ... Howard Rogers ... others."

Merritt comments, "Mr. E.H. Winn was really a fine barbecue man ... he'd supervise the whole thing. I guess the pit was twenty-five feet square and it's still down there. That meat would cook all night long before the picnic, then the other members would furnish all the trimmings. We'd feed hundreds of people. Mr. Winn taught a Sunday school class for young men and young ladies and we had lots of picnics and parties. Mrs. Winn went along. Sometimes we'd go to the Spade Ranch for the day. I had a Model 'T' sedan by that time, so I really had all the girls flocking 'round me ... I guess it wasn't me ... just my car. We never lacked for entertainment ... always something to do."

J. Lee Jones, Jr. Mitchell County historian, born in Colorado City in 1904, received his Doctorate of Jurisprudence from the University of Texas in 1934 and is a nationally-recognized authority in the field of oil, gas and mineral law. He served as a Commander in the United States Navy during World War II, from 1942-1946.

"My father came to Mitchell County in 1890, married my mother, Mary C. Cox, of Eastland, in 1900, married a self-taught musician and we had a great band here. He was a member of the Stockman's Band, a very famous band here that played back in the 1890s. The director was a Mr. Cox, an old Barnum or Bailey man ... before Barnum and Bailey combined. He played on a first concert and I mean he really could play it. Al Hirt couldn't even reach Eating out was fun back in early Colorado, for Mrs. Hines remembers, "The biggest treat of all was to eat at Jake's Restaurant. I saw my first round crackers there served with soup."

Music played an important part in the lives of rural residents. "We had a pump organ at first," Mrs. Hines states. "You really had to work to get it going. Then we had a piano ... we'd sing hymns, patriotic songs and, of course, 'In the Gloaming,' 'In the Good Old Summertime,' 'Shine On, Harvest Moon' and others. We were fortunate to have been taught at school the beautiful English ballads such as 'Annie Laurie.'"

"Once a month, the first Sunday in May, we'd come into town for the annual singing convention that was attended by residents of all the communities in the County ... an all-day affair where we'd sing, spread our lunches on the ground and really enjoy ourselves. I'll have to admit, as a young girl, I was always more interested in what the ladies were wearing."

As a young lady, Mrs. Hines recalls another popular game, "Snap." She relates, "We'd gather in someone's home and play 'Snap,' as well as 'Fruit Basket Turn Over.' 'Snap' was a favorite because it was a couples' game. Two couples would form an arch and the couple 'caught' was out, which meant another young man got to snap his fingers at a young lady and she was his partner. Of course, there was lots of giggling when we played that particular game."

Picnics were always fun for everyone in Mitchell

MRS. WITT HINES

'We just drove as the crow flies and started our own road into town.'

County. "We had picnics at Wild Horse Creek," Mrs. Hines remembers. "All the women and even the little girls were in their best bonnets ... we'd take food in all sorts of containers, even dishpans covered with table cloths. We always had lots of fried chicken. The adults would sit and visit after we'd finished our meal, which we spread all together on the cloths, and the children would play."

Famous Seven Wells served as another popular picnic place for Mitchell County. "We'd go on picnics there," Mrs. Hines recalls, "and most important to me was remembering carving our names in the sandrock ... some of the names still are visible, in spite of the lake's now covering some of the site."

Circuses, traveling theaters and balloons all came to Colorado. And the biggest balloon of all in 1910, is remembered by Mrs. Hines. "Everybody was on hand to see it. I was just a little girl, but I remember not only the balloon, but that occasion was the first time I'd seen any pink lemonade."

What kind of balloon? Mrs. Hines and J. Lee Jones recall, "It was a hot air balloon with a woven basket, or gondola, to hold two men. A hose fed hot air into the balloon, men held it down with ropes ... there were sandbags for ballast and when the balloon was full, the men let go of the ropes, the balloon soared upward and the ballast was dropped."

This particular balloon didn't go around the world in eighty days. Mrs. Hines and Jones remember, "The balloon made its ascent with no difficulty. Its landing seemed equally safe, for as the men turned down the heat in the coal oil stove they had on board, the balloon slowly deflated. By utilizing stress and wind drifts, they landed within one hundred fifty yards from their point of ascension ... an open, grassy area south of town."

Chataqua Company traveling shows ... sing songs around the piano ... the zing of sling shots ... boulders turning over on the way into town ... the whirr of a biplane's propeller whose pilot was frantically trying to wave people out of the way ... "After the Ball is Over" ... Happy birthday, Mitchell County.

Garden ceremony unites couple in Dumas Saturday

MRS. TERRY DON ROBERTS

Sherri Diane Minchew weds Terry Don Roberts

The Baptist Temple Church was the setting for the Saturday evening wedding of Sherri Diane Minchew and Terry Don Roberts. The Rev. William Irwin, pastor of the Courtney Baptist Church, near Stanton performed the 7 o'clock ceremony before an altar centered with a brass, double heart candelabra entwined with greenery. Two seven-branch candelabra, accented by blue bows and entwined with greenery, flanked the heart.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Minchew, 3306 Drexel, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Norman Roberts, Coahoma.

Jay Lane Phinney performed vocal selections for the ceremony, accompanied on the piano by Melinda Vassar.

The bride was attired in a formal-length gown of sheer must organza and Chantilly lace centered with seed pearls. The natural waist bodice featured a sheer yoke, and the high collar was fashioned in lace. The Bishop sleeves ended in cuffs of lace, and the full skirt fell to a deep flounce of lace that formed the chapel-length train. She wore a waltz-length mantilla which fell from a headpiece edged in matching lace.

A silk nosegay of navy blue roses, pale blue carnations and baby's breath completed the bridal ensemble.

Mrs. Gene Adamson, Crane, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. Laurie Daniels and Susan Smith were bridesmaids.

Randy Parker, Bronte, cousin of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Danny Dodson, Coahoma, and Tim Greenfield.

Lighting candles for the ceremony were Stephen Whitten, Eldorado, nephew of the groom, and Melinda Parker, Bronte, cousin of the groom. Chelsea Jones,

Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Don Doss are on a wedding trip to Las Vegas, Nev. following their marriage Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the garden of the bride's parents' home. Gary German, minister of the Church of Christ of Dumas, performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride, formerly Debra Gayle Corse, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Corse, Dumas. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Doss, 2112 W. 3rd.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose to wear a formal-length gown of chiffon over satin. The molded bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline which formed a stand-up lace collar. The sheer sleeves ended in wide lace cuffs, and the full skirt, falling from a natural waistline, formed the chapel-length train.

A bouquet of white daisies and pompoms completed the bridal ensemble.

Tanna Yates, Calif., attended the bride as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Gina Burns, Colleyville, and Sissy Doss, Big Spring, sister of the groom. Kam James, Sunray, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

Best man was Jackie Buchanan, and James Doss, brother of the groom and Bill Stockton, all of Big Spring, were groomsmen. Cory Homer, Lubbock, Denise Williams, Hamilton, Mrs. Lee James, and Mrs. Jan Homer, Sunray, cousins of

Seating the guests were Eddy Corse, Lubbock, and

MRS. JESSIE DON DOSS

Kenny Corse, Dumas, brothers of the bride.

Raymond Root, Dumas, performed wedding selections on the organ.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception in the home of the bride's parents. Serving the guests were Carol Hickman, Lubbock, Denise Williams, Hamilton, Mrs. Lee James, and Mrs. Jan Homer, Sunray, cousins of

The bride is a graduate of Dumas High School and is presently attending Texas Tech University, Lubbock.

The groom is a graduate of Big Spring High School. He is presently attending Howard College and is engaged in the cattle industry.

Following the wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Big Spring.

Rebekahs to hold installation of officers

Members of John A. Kee met June 23 at the IOOF Hall. Twelve members were present. Melissa R. Santellan, noble grand, was the presiding officer. LaVerne Rogers, recording secretary, read minutes of the previous meeting. Seven visits to the sick were reported. Odelle LaLonde, district deputy president of District

II, installed Beatrice Bonner as Vice Grand for the ensuing term. LaVelle Hill assisted.

Rosendo C. Santellan was nominated for a 2-year trustee.

Mrs. LaLonde announced that she would hold installation of incoming officers for the ensuing term at Big Spring Rebekah Lodge No. 284 July 7.

Under the Good of the Order, several talks were made. Melissa R. Santellan, noble grand, thanked her pro-tems. The meeting closed in regular form.

Four times more women than men are returning to college

Numbers of women ages 24-34 returning to college rose 187 percent between 1975 and 1978, Cindy Wilson, a family life education specialist, points out.

This is almost four times higher than the number of men who returned to college during the same period, she notes.

Mrs. Wilson is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

MRS. STEVEN N. GLASS

Catholic rite joins Hoelscher-Glass

Trudy Hoelscher became the bride of Steven N. Glass in an afternoon ceremony Saturday in the St. Lawrence Catholic Church. The Rev. Russell Schultz, pastor of the church, officiated the 4 o'clock rite.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hoelscher, St. Lawrence. The groom's parents are Lester Glass, Miles, and Janie Berry, Canada.

Wedding music was performed on the guitar by Mike Hillger and Mrs. Loretta Schaefer on the organ. Vocal selections were provided by Mrs. Nancy Hillger, Mrs. Linda Schwartz and Kathy Livingston.

The bride was attired in a formal-length gown of white organza and chantilly lace. The fitted bodice was fashioned with a high neckline and Cameo inset, and the full, Bishop sleeves were gathered at the wrists with wide lace cuffs. Deep, lace scalloped edged the hem of the full skirt and formed the cathedral-length train. She chose a fingertip-length veil of illusion edged in matching lace and accented with seed pearls.

A bouquet of apricot daisies surrounding a white orchid, and a rosary of mother-of-pearl beads completed the bridal ensemble.

Mrs. Debra Halfmann, Lake Thomas, attended her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Rose Pelzel, St. Lawrence, Mrs. Mary Kay Ripple, Wall, sisters of the bride, Mrs. Connie Glass, Miles, Wanda Lange, Rowena, Mrs. Nikki Lewis, San Angelo and Mrs. Lynette Jansa, St. Lawrence.

Kerry Glass, Miles, brother of the groom, was best man. Groomsmen were Brent Heinze, Steve Hayes, Stanley Werner, all of Miles, James Ripple, Wall, Dennis Hoelscher, brother of the bride, and Mitchell Jansa, both of St. Lawrence.

Ushers for the ceremony were Rich Halfmann, Lake Thomas, Pat Pelzel, St. Lawrence, Emelio Puente, Miles, and Jeffrey Fischer, Mereta, Audrey Strube and Angela Strube, both of St. Lawrence, were flower girls.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception in the St. Lawrence Parish Hall. A dinner and dance followed the reception, also in the Parish Hall. The bride's table featured a traditional wedding cake, surrounded by brass candelabra from Jerusalem.

The bride is a 1979 graduate of Garden City High School and attended Angelo State University. She is currently employed by the Farm Bureau Insurance Company in San Angelo.

The groom is a 1975 graduate of Miles High School and a 1980 graduate of Angelo State University. He is presently employed at the Mereta Co-op Gln.

Mr. and Mrs. Glass will make their home west of Miles.

Article gives hints for flea market shopping

To help you haggle with the best of them at flea markets, keep these negotiating tips in mind from the current Family Circle magazine's "Cashing In" column:

The answer may be "no." Don't be a "price butcher" — offering a vendor $10 for something marked $100 may be so offensive the seller will refuse to let you buy the item at any price.

Assume most vendors will go down at least 10 percent on an item — unless it's something costing $1.00 or less.

The best times to "go flea-ing" are early in the day to snap up choice items before they're gone, and late in the day to coax good buys from vendors who don't want to lug their wares home.

Don't be ashamed to ask a dealer "Is that the best you can do?" on a price.

Young women presented at Debutante Ball

Jamie Kay Phillippe was one of 18 young women presented to society in full military tradition at the Military Debutante Ball June 27. The ball was held at the Officer's Club at Offutt Air Force Base, Neb. She was formally presented by her father to General and Mrs. Richard H. Ellis. General Ellis is commander-in-chief of Strategic Air Command USAF.

The young women were honored at various parties before their formal debut. Mrs. Ellis opened the social events on June 15 with a luncheon in her historic Victorian style home, built in 1896 on general's row.

Many activities for the Debs took place during the month of June, including a seminar on "Today's Women in the Modern World" and workshops on career counseling, etiquette update, college objectives and a mini modeling course.

Miss Phillippe is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Ross W. Phillippe, Bellevue, Neb. The granddaughter of Mrs. D.W. Powell Sr., Bellevue, Neb., and the niece of Mr. and Mrs. Desmond W. Powell Jr., 608 Aylford.

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TODAY, JULY 12, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to study your environment and to make plans for improvement. The most tranquil time is early in the day. Your good judgment can be called upon later.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Make worthwhile plans for the days ahead. Conditions are not favorable in the afternoon so be alert at this time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): A good day to take care of accumulated tasks and improve your surroundings. Take needed health treatments.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Make plans with friends and relatives for the recreational activities you want to engage in later. Count the cost.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You are able to analyze your affairs today and gain praise from others. Express true happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): The morning is the best time for meditation. Later get together with good friends. Make the right preparations for the new week.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You are able to make plans now that could give you more abundance in the future. Follow the advice of a successful person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Get together with family members and plan the future wisely. The social side of life is best in the afternoon and evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Attend the services of your choice early in the day. Accept a worthwhile invitation in the evening. Be wise.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): A good time to get together with friends and relatives and discuss mutual aims. Get out of that worrying person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Let family members know that you have their best interests at heart. Engage in hobby in the afternoon. Relax tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You have fine progressive ideas now that should be expressed to others. A new acquaintance can be helpful to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): You have fine hunches during the day and can see through any pretenses. Come to a better understanding with loved one.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have ideas of a progressive nature and can become very successful provided you give encouragement early in life. A fine religious training can be the guidepost throughout life. Little interest in sports here.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be able to solve just about everything of a mechanical nature, but if your property becomes involved in emotional affairs, there could be headaches. Teach to be objective. There's a deep spiritual nature here.

EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS HOTLINE

Area Extension Homemakers Clubs held their final meetings until September during the month of June. Devotionals were read from Ephesians 3:14-20, and roll call was answered with "My car license plate number". Programs for the month were on the topics of appliances, losing weight and filing systems.

FAIRVIEW

The Fairview Extension Homemakers held their first meeting of the month June 2 in the home of Mrs. Bernice Micallef. The 2 p.m. meeting was called to order by Mrs. Dorothy Earhart, vice president.

The meeting was attended by seven members and one guest, Pam Wood of Albuquerque, N.M.

The thought for the day was "If you lie down, people will walk all over you." The devotionals were read by Mrs. Norma Lee Autrey, and roll call was answered by nine members. Mrs. T'Nell Smauley gave the T.E.H.A. Council report.

Mrs. Earhart presented a program on losing weight, and Mrs. Ina Richardson won the door prize.

The next meeting was held at 11:30 a.m. June 16 at Furr's Cafeteria. A short business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Smauley. Mrs. Micallef spoke to the group about appliances and the question of having them repaired or replacing them. She stated the importance of considering the condition of the appliance and the estimated cost of repair.

The next meeting will be held Sept. 1 in the home of Mrs. Rudelle Rogers.

Homemakers elected new officers at their June 10 meeting and salad luncheon. The club met in the home of Mrs. A.D. Martin, with Mrs. A.C. Hale as co-hostess.

Mrs. Hale presented the devotional and roll call was answered by eight members. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and a finance report was given.

New officers for the 1982 club year are Mrs. Ray Swann, president; Mrs. Robbie O'Daniel, vice president; Mrs. Rufus Parks, secretary; Mrs. Joe Nixon, treasurer; Mrs. B.A. Bunn, reporter; and Mrs. B.L. Mason, council delegate.

The hostess' gift was won by Mrs. Noel Reed.

The club's next meeting will be Sept. 9 in the home of Mrs. Fred Adams. The salad luncheon and work day will begin at 11 a.m.

CENTERPOINT

The June 9 meeting of the Centerpoint Extension Club was held in the Kentwood Older Adult Activity Center. Jen Davidson, president, presided. Olga Stamp and Zan Ryan were hostesses.

Tony Rock, Coahoma 4-H Club, and Nina Mahon, of the County Extension office demonstrated the art of making wool and mohair into thread for arts and crafts materials. The fibers are combed, washed and spun into threads. Of the two, mohair is softer and silkier, but also more expensive.

The annual picnic for Big Spring State Hospital patients is scheduled July 14. Approximately 60 patients will attend the event which will be held in Comanche Trail Park. Sandwiches, chips, cake and punch will be served.

The yearbook committee will meet with the T.E.H.A. Council in August. Each club will submit a program for the 1982 club year at that time.

Members were reminded of the Brown Bag Luncheons in the Texas Electric Reddy Room. The one-hour meetings, which began June 24, are on current issues and topics and their effects on homemakers. Area residents are invited to the Wednesday noon luncheons, and drinks are provided.

Members were also invited to participate in the Tour of Homes, which took place June 30. Two homes were toured, with emphasis on low-cost, energy-efficient ideas.

Lucille Petty, vice president, presented the program at the June 23 meeting.

Hostesses for the meeting were Frankie Walker and Mattie Wren. Mrs. Norma Harmon from California was awarded the door prize.

In her program, "Family Life", Mrs. Petty stressed the importance of a good filing system for family records and business items. Quick access to these records is vital in a time of crisis, and a current will is one of the most important documents to have.

The next club meeting will be held at 2 p.m. Sept. 8 in the Kentwood Center.

MRS. JAMES MARCEL COLVIN

Saturday morning rite unites couple

Vows were exchanged Saturday morning in the Holiday Inn Patio Room between Sharon Leigh Dwire and James Marcel Colvin. Chaplain Lee Butler, Big Spring State Hospital, performed the 9 o'clock ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Potter, 1103 East 15th, and Ronald Dwire, Detroit, Mich. The groom is the son of George R. Colvin and Mrs. Nelda Colvin, Lamesa Highway.

The altar was decorated by candelabras adorned with arrangements of blue and white daisies. Vocal selections were performed by Leslie Coffman, accompanied on the piano and flute by Jim Fisher.

The bride chose to wear a formal-length gown of white satin overlaid with organza featuring a Victorian neckline and long, fitted sleeves. The sheer, fitted bodice was accented with lace and seed pearls, and a band of matching lace edged the hem of the full skirt.

She wore a crown of blue and white daisies in her hair, and carried a bouquet of matching flowers.

Amy Dwire attended her sister as maid of honor, and Shain Howard was best man.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored with a reception, which was also held in the Patio Room. The bride's table featured a two-tiered cake decorated with blue and white daisies. Tatia and Shawna Colvin, sisters of the groom, served at the reception, and Tonya Shortes registered the guests.

The bride is a 1980 graduate of Alamosa High School, Alamosa, Co. and is presently attending Howard College. The groom is a 1980 graduate of Big Spring High School and is currently employed at the Big Spring State Hospital.

Following a wedding trip to Taos, N.M., Mr. and Mrs. Colvin will make their home in Big Spring.

Low-cost vacation suggestions given

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Don't put off a vacation because you don't have a lot of cash. Here are some tips for a low-cost, fun vacation, from a recent "Seventeen" Magazine.

Travel off-season. While New Hampshire's lake region hits peak prices in August, rates in Florida are low at that time. Avoid holidays — costs are too high.

Check such options as train, bus, and car travel, but comparison shop before you decide. Trains and buses are not always significantly cheaper than flying.

Go to college for a night or two. Some 160 colleges and universities rent dormitory rooms during the summer months for anywhere from $2 to $18 per night.

Plan in advance. Economical fares and accommodations must be booked early.

SUN FINISH

New liquid makeup with PABA

A great makeup for the contemporary woman who is active, sports-oriented or just enjoys being outdoors. Very sheer but excellent coverage in a liquid makeup containing PABA sunscreen to protect skin from the drying effects of the sun which cause premature aging. In 8 sun shades. 1.0z. $10.00

Nothing beats the smoked flavored taste of something from the grill... and no grill can beat the fun, convenience and economy of a versatile gas grill.

Gas Grilling is versatile.
You can grill a steak, grill a burger, smoke a ham, barbecue a bird, roast an ear, even bake a potato. You can cook many different foods a variety of ways, many at the same time on a versatile gas grill.

Gas Grilling is delicious.
You get that great outdoor smoked flavor without the charcoal mess. No lighter, fluid is needed and a gas grill requires very little clean-up. There's no wait either, because gas grills reach cooking temperature fast.

Gas Grilling is economical.
You can cook a full family meal for just pennies. Gas grilling costs less than a third of what it would cost on an electric grill and less than a tenth of the cost for charcoaling. A national survey proved it.

Gas Grilling is cooler.
It keeps the heat out of the kitchen so your air conditioning won't have to work so hard. That's important during the summer — plus a gas grill is the perfect meat maker for any season of the year.

And Gas Grilling is now 20% off.
Buy now and you'll save 20%. The purchase price has been reduced 20% but only until August 1, 1981 — and you have eight styles and sizes to choose from, with all the features to make grilling fun, convenient and economical.

TO WED — Mr. and Mrs. Earl Coates, Snyder Hwy., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Mona (Punkin) to Rusty Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Davidson, 1905 S. As computers "invade" many large grocery markets, consumers may need to adjust a few shopping habits. Computers may force consumers to rely more heavily on shelf pricing information.

When the computerized pricing system replaces traditional methods, a price scanner reads a code of black and white lines printed on the product which the computer translates into prices.

The system offers numerous advantages to the store, but consumers may also benefit from it. Consumers receive a more complete record of everything charged because the computer "prints a note" about each item on the register tape.

Also, check-out should be faster since checkers do not have to ask for prices not marked or remember them. This system also should minimize check-out errors.

And, the system may lower or control prices if the reduced store labor costs are passed on to consumers.

On the other hand, consumers may experience certain concerns when shopping in stores using the computerized system.

You can't always be sure of the price of an item until you get to the check-out counter. If the price is not indicated on the product, shelf labeling should provide details.

However, confusion can arise if shelf labeling is missing, inaccurate, or misaligned with the product. Also, discount or sale prices may not be reflected in prices marked. Or, sale prices no longer in effect still may appear on the shelf.

In addition, lack of product labeling may cause greater difficulty for consumers in comparing prices between different products.

To be sure you are charged the correct price for goods purchased, watch the cash register display screen during check-out as each item is scanned. Also, check the detailed register tape when you get home. Report price discrepancies to the checker or store manager.

BSHS Band Boosters to discuss carnival plans

Big Spring High School band boosters will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Wayne Basden home, 1100 Thorpe Road. Band boosters are again sponsoring the Gene Lindel Carnival which will be at College Park Shopping Center Aug. 24-29.

Plans for conducting this major project will be discussed at the Tuesday meeting.

Officers guiding the organization for the 1981-82 year are: Ned Crandall, president; Bill Schaffner, first vice-president; Jimmy Wood, second vice-president; Charlene Wool-dridge, treasurer and Johnita Hinton, secretary.

Jack Alexander and Annie Basden will serve on the board of directors.

Parents of band members are invited to attend the Tuesday meeting.

Protect outdoor furniture investment with tailored special-care tactics

COLLEGE STATION — Outdoor furniture is an investment you can keep for many years with protective special-care tactics, says Dr. Jane Berry, a housing and home furnishings specialist. Berry, on the economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, explains that although a plain soap-and-water rinse is "good for cleaning," applying a protective finish will extend the furniture's life.

For example, the patina and shine of aluminum furniture can be restored by wiping with fine steel wool and kerosene and then buffing with a soft cloth. However, if the furniture will be exposed to direct sunlight as well as rain, it needs a protective finish of auto paste wax.

Protecting outdoor furniture is the key to its long life, the specialist stresses. Even redwood furniture, with its special properties that make it ideal for outdoor use, will benefit from a special protective treat- ment.

For redwood, the im- portant thing is to use a "penetrating finish," Berry says, rather than a "surface sealer" such as varnish. In the case of other woods, you can extend their lives with special-care tactics, but it's wise to realize they won't last as long as redwood if they're used in direct sun or exposed to rain, Berry ad- vises.

For non-redwood furni- ture, use varnish or polyure- thane sealers that sit on the surface, she says. Also, marine-type paints and varnishes made for use in water will hold up well on outdoor wood furniture.

In protecting wrought-iron furniture, the main "care- needed" signal is chipped paint. Rub any spots — where bare iron shows — with steel wool and paint them with both an anti-rust primer and enamel.

To extend wicker furni- ture's life, do not use it outdoors. Both rattan and wicker "like" to be in humid conditions rather than dry ones.

foods will clean teeth

Try "detergent foods" for your teeth, suggests Mary K. Sweeten, a foods and nutrition specialist. Crisp, crunchy vegetables, such as celery, carrots or radishes are "detergent foods," because they remove food particles from the teeth, she says.

Mrs. Sweeten is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

MRS. BRETT RANDALL MORTON

Evening candlelight rite unites couple

Mr. and Mrs. Brett Randall Morton are on a wedding trip to an undisclosed destination following their wedding Saturday evening in the 14th and Main Street Church of Christ, Randall Morton, father of the groom, performed the 7:30 p.m. ceremony before an altar decorated by a white column topped with an urn. The urn contained white gladiolas, and carnations, and was accented with white satin bows. Flanking the column were 15-branch candelabra.

The bride, formerly Cynthia Kay Mullins, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curt Mullins, 2829 Hunters Glen. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Randall Morton, 2204 Merrily.

Acapella music was performed by a choral group directed by Marjorie Dodson. Members of the chorus were Pat Moore, Laura Moore, Pam Thompson, Evelyn Elrod, Rhonda Willbanks, Mark Warren, Rodney Smith, David Elrod, Walt Stroup and Don Green.

The bride chose to wear a formal-length gown of white Quiana knit and Venice lace. The gown featured a Victorian neckline of lace and seed pearls, and a sheer V-yoke edged with a wide lace ruffle. The long Bishop sleeves of chiffon ended in wide cuffs of silk Venice lace. The pleated skirt fell from a natural waistline and featured a wide lace ruffle at the hem which ended in a chapel-length train.

She wore a lace covered, small brimmed hat sprinkled with seed pearls, and a tulle bow formed the chapel-length streamers. A cascading bouquet of pink Sweetheart roses, feathered white carnations, stephanotis and silk fern with pink streamers completed the bridal ensemble.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was Jan Whittington. Bridesmaids were Mariann Mullins, Abilene, Karen Mullins, San Antonio, sisters-in-law of the bride, Toni Cline, Joni Cline, Tanga Cain and Gwen Clark.

Best man was Brian Rossos. Groomsmen were Ritchie Priddy, Tim Hunicutt, Mark Taylor, Mike Eckley, Danny Nolting and Hardy Wilkerson.

Seating the guests were Reggie Mullins, Abilene, Curtis Mullins, San Antonio, brothers of the bride, Craig Shipman and Donny Stevens. Sterling Cave was flower girl and Matthew Cave was ring bearer.

Following the ceremony, the couple was feted with a reception in the Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table featured a three-tiered cake decorated with sweetpeas and shades of pink. Crystal appointments were used.

A chocolate cake was featured at the groom's table, and brass appointments were used. Serving the guests were Carol Morehead, Nancy Porter, Jean Pierson, Karen Adams, Debbie Wiley, Connie Welch and Lynette Greak. Kem Stevens registered the guests.

The bride is a 1978 graduate of Big Spring High School and attended Abilene Christian University and Angelo State University.

The groom is a 1978 graduate of Big Spring High School, and is currently the supervisor of both One Hour Martinizing Cleaners in Midland.

Following their wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Midland.

Dear Abby

'No Gifts' Policy Can Be Said Politely

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I will celebrate our 40th wedding anniversary soon. Our children plan a party for us in the social hall of our church.

A few years ago you ran a sample invitation in your column that I liked very much. It was a nice way of saying "No gifts, please."

Will you please run it again? I'm sure others will find it helpful, too. Thank you.

ABBY FAN

DEAR FAN: Here it is:

DEAR READERS: I have stated many times that any mention whatsoever of gifts was improper on an invitation. This includes the forthright "No gifts, please," as well as the tasteless (in my view) suggestion that cash is preferred to any other type of gift.

Many sent sample invitations in which gifts were mentioned. Below are two that changed my mind: "Jane and Bob Smith invite you to dine with us on the evening of June 1 at our home at 7 p.m."

"It is in celebration of our 20th wedding anniversary. Your friendship is a cherished gift. We respectfully request no other."

"The children of Iver and Helen Dahl invite you to celebrate with them the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents. A reception will be held May 7, at 2 p.m., at the Elmhurst Country Club."

"We request your help in compiling a book which recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or experience that you have shared with them and return it to us by April 26. We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

DEAR ABBY: I would like to pass on some very valuable experience to women who might find themselves in the same situation I was in 10 years ago.

As an attractive 55-year-old widow, I was winoed, dined and courted by a very desirable widower in his early 60s. He proposed marriage to me on the condition that his children approved of me.

Well, I passed their inspection with flying colors, but now I wish I hadn't. When he was well, his children came first. Now that he's sick, he's all mine.

STUCK

DEAR STUCK: Nobody gets a lifetime guarantee of good health. You could have become sick and been all his.

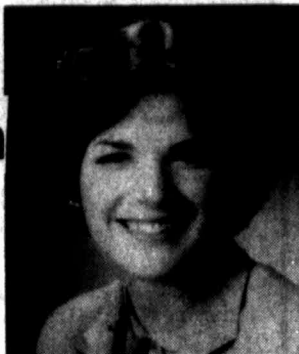

...

CONFIDENTIAL TO S. AT HONEYWELL: Be careful—on every conceivable occasion.

...

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby: 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Bride is feted with shower

Sherri Minchew, bride-elect of Terry Don Roberts, was honored recently with a bridal shower in the home of Mrs. Stan Partee, 2811 MacAuslan.

The honoree and honored guests, Mrs. Bill Minchew, her mother and Mrs. Norman Roberts, mother of the prospective groom, were presented with white daisy corsages tied with blue ribbon.

The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of multi-colored spring flowers and white tapered candles. Silver and crystal appointments were used to serve the cake decorated in pale blue and white, the bride-elect's chosen colors, punch and coffee.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. Melvin Daniels, Mrs. Betty Huff, Mrs. Wayne Beene, Mrs. Jack Minchew and Mrs. Don Smith.

The hostess gift was an electric skillet. The couple was married Saturday in Baptist Temple Church.

ENGAGED — Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Perry, Dallas, formerly of Big Spring, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Mary Martha, to Henry Lee Mitchell III, son of Mrs. Betty Worley Mitchell, Silsbee. The couple will exchange vows October 17 in the Preston Hollow Presbyterian Church, Dallas. The Rev. Jerold Shuler, pastor of the church, will officiate.

Thank-yous For Checks and Duplicate Gifts

You know how to write a proper thank-you note—for a proper wedding gift. However, here at the ACCENT SHOPPE, we suggest you pay particular attention to how you acknowledge checks and how you thank people for duplicate gifts. When you write to thank someone for a gift of money, do try to refer to the item you bought or plan to buy with the money. In the case of a duplicate gift, write each person as though the present they sent was the only one received. A prompt, sincere thank-you note from you is like a gift itself.
