Screenings of all 100 Haitians set to begin

By BILLELDER

Ten Haitian refugees scheduled to be brought into the Federal Prison Camp Tuesday arrived a little after 2 p.m., according to the camp's superintendent, John Allman.

The 10 were part of the original Big Spring allocation of 100 refugees moved out of the crowded Krome North detention camp in Miami, Fla. The Haitians were transferred to Big Spring by U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officers acting on orders from a White House task force on immigration. The 100 were part of a group of 286 refugees moved out of Miami to holding facilities around the U.S.

The refugees — all men — fled the Caribbean island of Haiti because they could not find work there and hoped for better luck in the U.S. One of the camp refugees, who said he was a welder from the island's capital, described Haiti as having a "problem economy" with too many people looking for too few jobs.

Camp officials say they have been told the refugees were transferred here on a temporary basis. The men reportedly will undergo INS hearings to determine whether they can stay in the country or will be deported. The first step in the process was set to begin Thursday.

Allman told The Herald.

"The screener and processor will be here today and we'll start tomorrow morning," Allman said this morning.

He said the INS offered no time frame for how long the screening process might last or what form it might take. A news report said the men would go before an administrative judge in the employ of the immigration service, and part of the criteria determining the refugees' fate would be whether he entered the country at a port of entry and requested entry or else entered illegally, making him a candidate for deportation.

The 10 new arrivals were identified and given physical exams like their counterparts, then joined their fellow refugees in the Sunset dorm, where the Haitians are kept separate from other prisoners in the minimum-security, white-color-criminal facility.

Allman described their mood as one of confusion. "They're concerned with what is happening to them. We're saying, 'Hey, it's okay — nobody is going to bother you.'"

Because of the furor raised in Big Spring and the intense news media attention given the refugees, Allman said he intended "to let things cool down" and allow INS personnel to screen the refugees quietly.

Meanwhile, the city released the letter of protest it voted Monday to send to "those who represent us," said Councilman Jack Y. Smith. The letter is addressed to Rep. Charles Stenholm and says the city opposes the continuation of sending refugees to Big Spring.

"Further, we would like to protest the fact that the city was not given any advance notice of this transfer; consequently, we were unable to act accordingly."

"(We) do not want this minimum security facility to become a refugee camp," the letter concluded.

Allman told the council just before the protest vote was taken that the decision to accept more refugees was his decision and if he felt he could not handle an additional influx, they would not be shipped to his facility.

The letter was signed by Mayor Clyde Angel and written after the council voted three to two to issue a protest against the refugees.

Stenholm may be the right person to carry such a protest to the federal government, since he is said to have President Ronald Reagan's ear due to being one of the Democratic lawmakers who fought for the Republican President's proposed budget.

Stenholm's Washington office told The Herald the Congressman was "upset" by the fact that he wasn't told of the transfer of the refugees into his district until it happened.

Big Spring's state representative, Larry Don Shaw, said yesterday he thought it was "poor policy" that Stenholm wasn't notified sooner, "especially because of all the help he's given the President in the budget work."

Shaw added that he thought the council's 3-2 vote reflected the split within the community on the unexpected arrival of the Haitians.

Local church leaders interviewed yesterday expressed a willingness to help the refugees and pointed out their efforts in getting Vietnamese refugees resettled in the community when there was a wave of refugees from that country several years ago.

Allman indicated it was unlikely the refugees would be released in Big Spring, although it's possible some of them could be sponsored by local citizens.

"I really don't understand it," said Guy White, pastor of the E. 4th Baptist Church, of the negative reaction to the refugees. "Perhaps people are afraid they'll (the refugees) take away some of their freedoms. Perhaps they're afraid they'll take away some of their jobs — but there are jobs everywhere that are left unfilled."

Search warrant not needed, says Almond

By CAROL HART

STANTON — Texas Ranger Eddie Almond testified today that he did not possess or need a search warrant when he undertook surveillance of two men accused of delivering less oil to Cosden Oil and Chemical than they said they had delivered.

Almond took the witness stand all morning in the Stanton County Court-house as the second day of testimony unfolded in the oil scam case. The two men accused of selling less oil to Cosden than they actually delivered are John Theford Sims and D.C. Wheeler, owner of Jaco Oil Co.

Former Odessa District Attorney John Green, attorney for Sims and Wheeler, questioned Almond about the surveillance. Almond said he and former Herald photographer Bill Forshee stationed themselves on an oil lease adjacent to the lease where the scam is alleged to have occurred.

He said the surveillance was carried out on January 1 and January 5, 1981. He identified Wheeler and Sims, a pumper for Jaco, as being on the lease on those two days.

Almond said he was about 175 yards south of the Duncan-Currie Lease, on the Continental Lease, and was too far to observe exactly what Sims and Wheeler were doing. The Duncan-Currie Lease, where the scam is alleged to have happened is about 12 miles south of Big Spring.

Photographs taken by Forshee with a telephoto lens allegedly show an oil-flow indicator registering less oil being pumped into Cosden pipelines than Cosden paid for.

Green attempted to stop Forshee's photos from being admitted as evidence on the grounds that Almond didn't have a search warrant, but District Judge Jim Gregg ruled against the motion and allowed the photos to be admitted.

Tuesday afternoon, Archie Farr, district director for the Railroad Commission, was called to testify about how the investigation began.

During four hours of testimony, Farr explained the complexity of oil lease regulations. He said Cosden had not requested the Texas Rangers to investigate Jaco and that it was his own suspicion in October of 1980 that led to his asking the Texas Rangers to step in.

"This investigation was started on your own opinion?" Green asked Farr.

Farr replied that he had no evidence that the scam had occurred and that it was "just my observation" based on information he had about the lease.

WAITING FOR APPROVAL — Three members of the Big Spring United Way Executive Council discuss with the Big Spring United Way board of trustees the goal for the 1981-82 campaign. The trustees approved a $200,000 budget for

UW has $200,000 goal

'Realistic' budget adopted

After a week of extensive study, the Big Spring United Way board of trustees approved a $200,000 budget Tuesday for the 1981-82 United Way campaign, according to Russ McEwen, campaign chairman for the United Way.

The United Way Budget Committee, which consists of Ron Medley, chairman, Russ McEwen, Drew Mouton, Joanne Poyner, Dana Moore, Dr. Charles Hays and Sid Clark, held budget hearings recently and asked that each agency provide them a realistic budget of their agency within which they could operate and would not have to carry on any additional campaigns outside of the United Way.

After the agencies provided the Budget Committee with their request, the committee studied their requested budget and granted each agency what they felt was a figure that the United Way could meet for each agency. The budget committee then presented the budget to the trustees for their approval.

Last year the United Way raised more money than had every previously been raised. The campaign drive netted $162,000, which was $40,000 more than the previous year and $20,000 more than any year of the campaign.

"We feel that the goal is a realistic and reachable goal," said McEwen. "We raised $160,000 last year, which was the most we have ever raised, and we feel that with aggressive campaigning we can exceed that mark and reach the $200,000 goal. I can assure you that we will not be able to obtain this without a lot of dedicated people and hard work. The executive Board, the Campaign Committees and myself are dedicated to reach this goal. We feel that by October, our campaign month, we will be well organized, well planned and enthusiastically prepared to accomplish this task."

Ron Medley, president of the Big Spring United Way, told the trustees, "This is a realistic goal and can be reached if the people of Big Spring all pull together and support these agencies that help so many of our citizenry. I feel that we can achieve this goal. We need to get together and help support those less fortunate than us. Inflation and recession affect us all, but it affects those less fortunate than us more," said Medley.

The agencies supported by United Way and what each agency was granted are: American Red Cross — $10,000; West Side Community Center — $5,000; Girl Scouts — $10,000; Dora Roberts — $20,000; YMCA — $20,000; YMCA Lakeview — $2,500; Salvation Army — $37,000; Big Spring Boy's Club — $31,500; Boy Scouts — $19,000; and the Day Care Center — $14,500.

Coahoma's tax rate to drop for 3rd consecutive year

COAHOME — For the third year in a row, the tax rate in the Coahoma School District has been lowered by the board of trustees.

The trustees met Monday to approve a plan to reduce the rate from 81 to 72 cents per $100 valuation. That figures out to 12 percent.

Increased oil play in the school district enabled the board to take such action and still meet all its obligations on the $6 million bond issue voted earlier this year.

The oil industry pays 94 percent of the taxes in the district, another 2.7 percent comes from residential property, 1.8 percent from farm and ranch property and 1.5 percent from personal property.

The Coahoma bonds, approved by the electorate by a 460-150 margin, were sold for 7.87 percent interest. K.A. Sparks of Hamilton won the contract on a bid of $5,140,500. Work began on the new construction May 1 and will likely continue for two years.

The construction will include a new kindergarten through fifth grade elementary school building, gymnasium and central cafeteria.

The bond rating is considered excellent in view of today's interest rates.

Such items as $213,530 worth of improvements to the football stadium, new press boxes in the amount of $25,815, stage band instruments in the amount of $4,350, a $12,000 school van, a $3,000 20X20 building for the band and $2,800 for baseball equipment have already been paid for.

In other action, the trustees voted to appeal the decision handed down by 118th District Court Judge Jim Gregg ordering a new trustee election, which would pit Clovis Phinney against Ken Cobb.

The appeal will be heard by the Court of Civil Appeals in Eastland. Cobb had sued to have results of the election thrown out, claiming irregularities in the vote count.

Redistricting plan approved

Clements gets his way

AUSTIN — After more than a week of juggling numbers, Texas Senators passed a constructive-packed bill Tuesday that gives Gov. Bill Clements what he wants from congressional redistricting.

Highlights of the plan are a black-majority district in Dallas County and a Hispanic-majority district in South Texas.

A coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats barely turned back a last-minute counterproposal by some Democratic leaders before approving Sen. John Wilson's design of Texas' 27 congressional districts for the 1980s. Senators last week gave the plan tentative approval.

The LaGrange Democrat's plan gives Dallas County a 63 percent minority in that city's heavily black-populated Oak Cliff area. Some Democrats objected because the plan endangers the re-election chances of Democratic incumbent Reps. Jim Mattox and Martin Frost.

It also gives South Texas a new incumbent-less congressional district with a 56 percent minority population, but leaves the 17th Congressional District including Taylor County basically unchanged from previous plans.

Sen. Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls voted against the plan, saying that minority groups would have more access to the voting process in two districts rather than one.

Farabee added he thought it would be wiser to go ahead and approve a compromise plan. Unless the House adopts the Senate plan, differences will be worked out by a conference committee of this special session.

U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, whose district includes Abilene, could not be reached for comment but an aide said Stenholm was satisfied with the district.

The main focus in the Wilson plan was on Dallas County. Gov. Clements who said before the special legislative session convened that he would not approve a redistricting plan that didn't draw a black-dominated district in his home Dallas County.

The governor was observing National Guard training at Fort Hood in Killeen Tuesday and could not be reached for comment on the Senate plan. But at his weekly press conference last week, Clements praised Wilson's proposal and urged prompt Senate action.

END OF SIEGE — Members of Houston's Special Weapons and Tactics team escort Charles Robert Reas, 33, from apartment in northwest Houston after he allegedly threatened three persons with a rifle and barricaded himself inside his apartment for about five hours

Tuesday, Reas, scheduled for trial Thursday on a murder charge, fired a stray shot when police set up a field light. Officers lobbed tear gas canisters into the apartment. He came out quietly, saying, "I didn't do anything." He was charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Focalpoint

Action / reaction: Skin game?

Q. I heard about some type of sun-tanning pill on TV. I recently saw them in a local discount store and was reading the label when I noticed that no specific directions precautions were given than "take one to four tablets a day." Is this a skin game?

A. An employee of the store said that the tanning pills are not a medicine and that how tanned one wants to get determines how many pills one should take. If one has any questions about the product there is a pamphlet by the store's cash register, giving complete information.

Pope's assailant Agca given life sentence

ROME (AP) — Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca was convicted today of the attempted murder of Pope John Paul II and two American women and sentenced to life imprisonment, the maximum term under Italian law.

The court gave Agca an additional 10-year prison sentence, which will run concurrently with the life sentence, for illegal possession of arms, giving his name falsely to police and carrying a false passport.

Agca, who admitted he shot the pope in St. Peter's Square May 13, was not in the courtroom when the verdict was announced. He boycotted the last two days of the proceedings as a protest against his trial in an Italian court instead of the Vatican.

The six-member jury and two judges deliberated for 6 1/2 hours. Chief Judge Severino Santiapichi read the verdict and the sentence.

Agca's court-appointed lawyer, Pietro D'Ovidio, said he would meet with his 23-year-old client Thursday and ask whether he wanted to appeal the sentence.

D'Ovidio said Agca could technically apply for parole in 26 years but he said it was extremely unlikely a parole board would grant him liberty because "of the severity of the crime."

Economy falls back

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national economy fell back quickly in the April-June quarter from the strength it showed earlier this year, with the inflation-adjusted gross national product sinking at an annual rate of 1.9 percent, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department report raised anew the possibility of at least a minor recession this year. Economists generally define a recession as two consecutive quarters of negative GNP, and both the administration and private analysts are forecasting a flat or possibly negative third quarter.

Inflation, as measured by the GNP implicit price deflator, also declined in the second quarter from 9.8 percent to 6 percent, the report said.

But inflation-adjusted national output, hit hard by high interest rates, plunged below the zero-growth mark after soaring at an annual rate of 8.6 percent in the first quarter.

The housing and auto industries were among those performing poorly in the second quarter, the Commerce report said.

Madam joins play

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Theresa Brown, the brothel madam who ran an unsuccessful write-in campaign for city council earlier this year, says she thoroughly enjoyed the musical, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," which opened Tuesday night at the Majestic Theater.

However, Ms. Brown disapproved of 50 Moral Majority picketers who marched in front of the theater objecting to the play.

Ms. Brown, who is on the verge of publishing memoirs about her longtime brothel operation which was closed last year in a storm of controversy, stood and applauded and cheered along with 2,000 other spectators who viewed the bawdy musical.

"My hand is shaking and I'm perspiring just thinking about those people out there," she said of the picketers as she waited for the performance. "The whole thing's a bummer. People are going in there to have a good time and they are trying to spoil it."

"It's a wonderful play, just hilarious," she said later. "But, come on, it's far from realistic. None of my girls ever sang or danced while they were doing it."

Solutions are in sight

Army admits M1 tanks not up to standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army officials acknowledged today that the new M-1 tank has failed to measure up to maintenance and durability standards, but they said most solutions are on the horizon.

And they said that despite those mechanical problems, which have caused some M-1s to require unscheduled maintenance after as little as 30 hours of use, they are convinced the armored vehicle "is the best tank in the world today."

Maj. Gen. Duard D. Ball, the M-1 program manager, and Maj. Gen. Richard Lawrence, commander of the 1st Cavalry Division at Fort Hood, Texas, testified to a congressional Joint Economic subcommittee a day after General Accounting Office investigators gave a largely critical assessment of the tank's reliability.

"While the M-1 tank is impressive in meeting its three major combat requirements — firepower, mobility and armor protection — these advantages are offset to a considerable degree by shortcomings in reliability and maintenance and its hefty, $2.5-million price tag, GAO officials testified Tuesday.

Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, said that, by his reckoning, the current cost amounts to only $568,000 in 1972 dollars.

stolen from his automobile. Mrs. Rosalind Howard, 1902 Hearn, said that at 6:25 p.m. Tuesday she discovered obscene words had been scratched into the side of her garage, according to reports. Police said they couldn't detect any prints or tracks at the scene.

Social Security fallout posing problems for GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political fallout from President Reagan's Social Security reductions is raining on Republican lawmakers, who abandoned one proposed cutback in the House while narrowly salvaging it in the Senate.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said of the Republicans, "We're going to keep on the issue."

But House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel says: "If anyone thinks they are going to ride that Social Security issue to political paradise at our expense, they have another thing coming."

As 5,000 elderly people protested on the Capitol steps Tuesday, the GOP-controlled Senate killed a Democratic move to preserve the $122 minimum Social Security benefit Reagan wants trimmed. The largely party-line vote was 52-46.

"The question is whether Congress is going to lose its nerve," Finance Committee Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kans., said in urging colleagues to stand by the earlier-sanctioned reduction.

In the House, meanwhile, Republicans abandoned the administration's position in supporting, 405-13, a non-binding resolution urging restoration of the minimum benefit.

Reagan is aware of the political woes his Social Security proposal is causing Republican lawmakers, especially in the House, and will seek to defuse the issue in a nationally broadcast address, according to administration and congressional sources.

Washington (AP) — The tentative three-year contract that headed off a nationwide mail strike shouldn't push the cost of a first-class stamp beyond the 20 cents already sought by the Postal Service, Postmaster General William F. Bolger says.

Bolger estimated the pact, hammered out Tuesday after 30 hours of almost non-stop bargaining, would cost the Postal Service $4.8 billion. It would give the half-million members of the two largest postal unions about a 10 percent pay raise — $900 apiece more in base wages and about $1,200 in bonuses — plus unlimited protection against inflation and rising health benefit premiums.

In announcing the settlement nine hours after an earlier agreement fell apart when workers were put into writing, Bolger took the occasion to plug the Postal Service's request to raise the first-class mail rate from 18 cents to 20 cents.

But he said he thought 20 cents, twice rejected by the Postal Rate Commission, would be enough "for a couple of years."

Higher labor costs can be offset by increased production, Bolger explained, noting that the settlement inactivity borker in each year of the contract.

Postal officials had estimated their first offer, limiting cost-of-living raises to an average 5 percent a year and freezing base pay, would have increased mail rates 3 cents by 1982. They had said union demands for 14.7 percent annual wage and cost-of-living raises, a 35-hour week and a 10th holiday would have forced a 45-cent stamp by 1984.

Moë Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union, pronounced the contract will be ratified.

While the unions didn't get everything they wanted, "we feel it's a good contract and that the membership will approve it," Biller said.

Vince Sombrotto of the National Association of Letter Carriers said the ratification process will take about 30 days.

In separate negotiations, the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, which represents about 63,000 employees, also agreed to a tentative contract Tuesday. Terms were not announced.

Representatives of the mail handlers division of the Laborers' International Union broke off talks but said their 40,000 members will stay on the job while unresolved issues are submitted to binding arbitration.

Prosecutions of alleged evaders on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is looking into 134 cases of young men who allegedly have failed to register for the draft, but any prosecutions are temporarily on hold, a Selective Service official said today.

The Selective Service System's deputy director, Brayton Harris, said the agency will not initiate any enforcement action until Congress decides whether to allow the Social Security System to cooperate with Selective Service in searching out the names of unregistered young men.

He said the names of the 134 young men who allegedly failed to register were sent to the Justice Department after citizen complaints were received about alleged non-registration by young people born in 1960 through 1963.

Young men are required to register within 30 days of their 18th birthday. Conviction for failure to register could lead to a maximum sentence of five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

Justice Department officials said the names will be relayed to U.S. attorneys around the country for investigation and possible prosecution.

Harris said 97 percent of all eligible youths have complied with the law.

Odd ordinances approved by CC council in 1907

COLORADO CITY (SC) — With Mitchell County celebrating its Centennial, it's been discovered the Colorado City council of 1907 was just as busy as it is in 1981.

According to City Manager Brenda Tarter's file of council minutes, the meeting of March 4, 1907, included the passing of the following ordinances: "It is unlawful to place any vegetable or animal, soap or any filth within the city limits" (A fine of from $5 to $50). "It is unlawful to spit upon any sidewalk or upon the floor or wall of the post office, courthouse, railroad depot or any church, school or any public building." (A fine of $25).

Tax rate will remain same

Trustees of the Howard County Junior College District voted to keep the district's tax rate at 14 cents per $100 valuation at their noon meeting Tuesday at Howard College.

The tax revenue within the district will increase 7.7 percent, principally because of the increased oil activity within the county. Only those property owners who added to the value of their property will be paying higher taxes, it was emphasized.

A public hearing on the district's proposed budget will start at 5:15 p.m., Aug. 12 in the Student Union Building.

Fall webworms attack in area

By DAVID G. FOSTER
Extension Agent-Entomology (PM)
Martin, Howard, &
Midland Counties

Fall webworms attack the foliage of trees and shrubs, and heavy fall webworm populations can defoliate a tree. Trees weakened by fall webworm infestations are also susceptible to damage by disease.

Trees are damaged by larval feeding. Young larvae feed on the leaf surface skeletonizing the leaves. Older larvae consume the entire leaf with the exception of the largest leaf veins. Larvae live in groups and spin silken nests within which they feed for four to five weeks.

Fall webworms presence is indicated by loosely woven, dirty white webs enclosing the foliage on the ends of the branches. These webs contain a quantity of black pellets of excrement from the worms, making them very unsightly.

The fall webworm attacks more than 100 fruit, shade and woodland trees. They do not attack evergreens.

This insect passes the winter in the form of brown pupae, enclosed in lightly woven silken cocoons.

Fall webworm moths emerge in early spring. Moths are delicate milky white in color and some have their forewings peppered with small black dots.

Female moths lay from 500 to 800 eggs each. The eggs are light green to yellowish in color and are globe-shaped. The eggs are deposited in masses on the underside of leaves, usually near the tip of a branch. Egg masses are covered with hairs from the female's body giving them a fuzzy appearance.

In seven to ten days the eggs hatch into small yellowish or greenish larvae. The young larvae have two rows of dark tubercles along the back and long hairs sparsely covering the body. Full grown larvae are about one and one-half inch long and vary in color from pale greenish to yellowish. They have a broad dark stripe down the back and covered with long whitish hairs.

Control. If webbed branches are present, especially during the first generation of webworms, small infestations may be destroyed by cutting out and burning the webs or by other mechanical means.

Whenever using a pesticide for fall webworm control, use a sprayer that will reach the top of the trees and use as much pressure as possible. Higher pressure will assist the pesticide in penetrating the dense web and getting to the larvae for control.

Breaking the web with a pole also assists the pesticide in reaching the target organism. Most effective control is achieved when pesticides are used before the larvae develop these large dense webs. Complete coverage of the tree is usually necessary for good control.

The pesticides labeled for control of fall webworms include: Orthene, Bacillus thuringiensis, Sevin, Diazinon, Dursban, or Dylux. Follow label directions on the package for dosage and application methods. Further information can be obtained through your county Extension office.

Weather

Texas weather downright dull

By the Associated Press

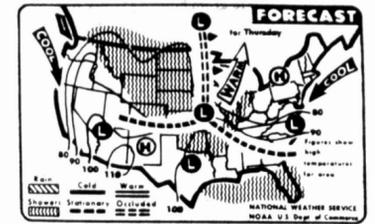

If it were not for the heat, Texas weather would be downright dull. A strong high-pressure system is hunkered down over Central Texas, bringing clear skies, light south winds and hot temperatures to the state the past few days — a pattern that promises to linger for some time yet.

There is a chance for scattered afternoon rain along parts of the Gulf Coast and in southeast Texas, but the rest of the state anticipates continued clear, hot weather at least through Thursday. Highs should continue to be near the 100-degree mark or better, with overnight lows generally in the 70s.

California claims Medfly war is being won

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — California officials say the Mediterranean fruit fly's days are numbered, and they're asking the U.S. Supreme Court to lift stringent restrictions imposed on California produce by five Southern states.

"The general feeling, on the project and off, is that eradication is virtually inevitable," Jerry Scribner, director of the medfly eradication project, said Tuesday.

His comments came as California Attorney General George Deukmejian asked the U.S. Supreme Court to end restrictions imposed on California fruits and vegetables by Texas, Florida, South Carolina, Mississippi and Alabama. A lower-court judge in Dallas has temporarily blocked Texas' embargo and scheduled a hearing Saturday. Mike Wallace, executive director of Texas Citrus Mutual, growers' cooperative, said Tuesday state farmers will visit California this month before deciding whether to sue that state over its "ineffective" measures to fight the flies.

The Southern restrictions are unnecessary to protect public health and safety and have an "unduly burdensome impact upon California's economy," Deukmejian said.

'Year of Eagle' promoted

If the National Wildlife Federation has its way, 1982 will be observed as the "Year of the Eagle," serving to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the bald eagle as its national symbol.

Now an endangered species throughout most of the country, the bald eagle was adopted as the central figure of the great seal of the United States by the second Continental Congress June 20, 1782, six years after a committee consisting of Ben Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson was named to recommend an official seal for a country that only recently had won its independence.

ON THE NATIONAL seal and also on the Presidential seal, the eagle carries an olive branch, signifying the country's desire for peace, in one talon. In the other it holds a bundle of 13 arrows, symbolizing the willingness of the 13 colonies to fight for freedom.

The National Wildlife Federation has petitioned President Ronald Reagan to declare the "Year of the Eagle" in a Presidential proclamation," says Dr. Jay D. Hair, executive vice-president of the NWF. Likely, Reagan will accede to the federation's wishes.

The committee consisting of Franklin, Adams and Jefferson was created July 4, 1776, the same day the colonies declared their independence from Great Britain.

It came to light in 1784 that Franklin had opposed the choice of the eagle on grounds that it was a cowardly creature of "bad moral character," one that stole its food from other birds.

Franklin said he favored the turkey gobbler as the national bird despite the fact that turkeys were sometimes "vain and silly."

Zoologists take issue with Franklin's claim that the bald eagle, a bird found only in North America, is a "rank coward."

After years of study by three committees, one William Barton submitted a design to Charles Thomson, secretary of the Continental Congress, and Thomson presented his drawing, with minor changes, to the Congress.

THE UNITED STATES was by no means the first country to use an eagle as its symbol. Eagles appeared in the heraldry of Mesopotamia more than 3,000 years before the birth of Christ and Roman emperors, along with Napoleon and Peter The Great, incorporated the eagle in their emblems.

There was a time, ornithologists say, when bald eagles frequented all parts of the United States. As settlers pushed back the frontier, their numbers declined. Insecticides used in the 1950s and 60s practically did them in. The indiscriminate use of those insecticides was outlawed in the early 70s.

Today the bald eagle is considered an "endangered species" in all but five of the lower 48 states. In Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Washington and Oregon is listed as "threatened."

One day our national emblem may feature a bird that no longer exists. That indeed will be a sad day.

The Big Spring Herald Mailbag

Dear Editor:

I am absolutely opposed to the government sending any Haitian refugees to Big Spring.

These impoverished people do have a problem, but don't our retired people have a problem supporting people who won't work? Don't our young people have a problem finding jobs? We haven't even begun to undertake the challenge of reducing our national debt and the Social Security mess we are leaving for them to solve is impossible.

How much more can our great country load onto the backs of its own people? Sometimes when you express yourself about a local issue some people say you are opposed to everything. In my case, this is not so. I have served my community on the school board during its integration crisis, its consolidation problems, the changing of district lines, separating Goliad from Rannels, bond issues, huge amounts for instruction, tax increases, firing school leaders and etc. I voted affirmatively for all of them. I served on the City's Planning and Zoning Board for years, as well as on the Equalization board. I also served on the board of stewards of my church when we were in a building program and have worked with the Boy Scouts. I've worked for high school sports and taught in Sunday School, all the while supporting my family. I also found time to work for disabled veterans.

I would hesitate to accept criticism from those who say I am against everything until such time as they can say they have stood on the crest and dodged the bullets as I did. My question is this: Are we going to be puppets on a string or are we going to be players?

Let's speak out. Let's separate our government from this kind of nonsense.

This Haitian problem falls somewhere under missionary work, and I hope that some of our good people who think we should support some more illegal immigrants will heed the call and volunteer because the missionary field is wide open and they are begging for teachers who can teach people to take care of themselves. Speak out. Do something to stop leaving our shores unprotected before it is too late. It is a fact only a small percentage of illegal aliens are caught.

I say it is time to close the gate, hire enough people to patrol our shores to protect us, and to start shipping them back from where they came.

I have called my congressman, my Chamber of Commerce and my city councilmen to express my views about this situation. Have you?

As for those bleeding hearts who think our government can pay for all things, I offer these closing remarks: (1) What have you done for your fellow man besides give lip service from the sidelines? (2) to those who take issue with my stand on such matters, I was up working, perhaps while you were still in bed, your energies spent from doing nothing.

and (3) remember, you can't teach what you don't know, no more than you can come back from where you haven't been.

Omar Jones
1902 Thorpe

Dear Editor:

Welcome to our brothers from Haiti! Some of us Americans think like the inscription on the Statue of Liberty, "Give me your tired, your hungry, your homeless," and some of us Christians believe like John said: "I ask you, how can God's love survive in a man who has enough of this world's goods, yet closes his heart to his brother when he sees him in need?" 1 John 3:17.

A couple of months ago the well presented Iron Horse Revue reminded us of some of our ancestors coming to this area to find a home and to find work — even by putting some of the citizens (Indians) out of a job, and out of a home.

A couple of weeks ago we Americans celebrated July 4, Independence Day. The day of fireworks, picnics and parades reminded us of the freedom our ancestors fought for over 200 year ago. We sang in our church, "American, America, God shed his grace on thee, And crown thy good with brotherhood, from sea to shining sea." (from the hymn, American the Beautiful.)

Now a new wave of immigrants comes to the Spring City — history repeating itself — looking for work and for a home. How can we reject them or turn them away? Why are some citizens of Big Spring fearful, frustrated, etc? Where is that brotherhood?

Granted, it was a sudden surprise that the refugees came so quickly. I don't know why. But will we compound this by rejecting these human beings — these brothers?

Supt. John Allman confidently reassures us that there are sufficient facilities to handle them safely and in a humane way. (A prison facility of 500 capacity certainly is sufficient for the present population of 330 inmates.)

Let us calmly, confidently assess our strengths as Big Spring citizens and see how we can rise to the challenge of opening our hearts to our new brothers.

In brotherhood,
Rev. Bernard L. Gully
Immaculate Heart of Mary Church

New treatments help keloid formers

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a young black woman who had her ears pierced three years ago. Since then I have developed very conspicuous keloids on both of my ears. This is causing me psychological distress. I am now contemplating surgery for the removal of the keloids. I was informed that surgery alone will not successfully remove the keloids permanently, that they have a tendency to regrow after removal.

What is your medical opinion as to how I should proceed in treating the keloids? Should I have the surgery? Would you advocate radiation therapy afterward?—Keloids.

A keloid (KEE-loyd) is an overexuberance by the body in making a scar. Some people's bodies have a tendency to do this, especially dark-complected persons. And those scars can be very conspicuous and distressing. Scars are made up of a substance called collagen, and it is the overproduction of that material that forms the keloid.

You are correct in saying that keloids do tend to recur after surgery to remove them, but more recently surgeons have had a better success rate in preventing return through use of newer techniques. The surgery must be performed meticulously. Some surgeons inject steroids in the skin where a keloid has been removed. This helps prevent the overproduction of collagen there. Doctors use extra-fine suture material to close the skin. It has been found that thicker-sutures encourages keloid growth.

In areas of the body where it can be done, a pressure dressing is placed over the skin edges to keep them close together, again discouraging keloid regrowth. You may have to use such a dressing for months after the surgery.

So you see, there are several ways to lessen the chance of reformation of the keloids. Yes, I would recommend that you consider this surgery, especially since the keloids are causing you such psychological distress. Seek out a surgeon who has had experience with such procedures and let him guide you as to which technique is best for your individual case. Good luck.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I would like to ask you about a bee sting reaction. Recently, I stepped on a nest and was stung three times. Within an hour, while getting to an emergency room, I had trouble breathing. Also I vomited, perspired badly and was weak. I was given a shot of adrenaline. If I am stung again, will this reaction be worse? What do you suggest I do? —

S.S.

You have described a very explosive and serious reaction to the bee sting. The next time you're stung, the reaction could be just as serious or worse. There is no way to predict this. The violence of the reaction depends on many factors. One is how much of the venom the bee injects.

For me, this would be too important a matter to gamble on. If I were you I would see about getting desensitized to bee stings because your first episode was so violent. Purified bee venom is available for this. The process can take some time, so you had best get it started soon. In the meanwhile, be especially alert to the presence of bees.

NOTE FOR SNORERS — An Indiana doctor claims good results in ending snoring with use of the cervical (neck) collar.

Around the rim No simple chore

Tina Miller

Just think: only six, short months ago I was complaining about the monotony of being a secretary. It was the same routine day in and day out. Then, one day, Tommy Hart took me away from all of that, and I was swept into the glamorous and exciting world of journalism. I must have been out of my mind.

FOR THESE LAST six months, I have racked my poor, little brain for Rim ideas. "It can't be hard," I once said. "After all, there are thousands of wonderful subjects just waiting to be written about. How difficult could it be?"

Since that time, I have found forced to eat those not-so-sweet words on an almost weekly basis.

Writing, like any other occupation, can be extremely frustrating at times. The most difficult thing about writing this little column that brightens your day is choosing a subject. Many subjects come to mind, but some require more space than the column allows, while others are too short. Of the subjects that remain, a few will either be too depressing or too controversial, and most of you get enough of those topics in the rest of the paper.

After narrowing the field of subjects, and wasting half the day, on a good day I will have one idea left to work with. I then throw myself completely into the article and slave over a hot typewriter until the river of ideas runs dry. (This usually takes about three minutes.) Finally, after endless writing, revision and correction, I struggle through the conclusion, realizing I must go through the entire process again the next week.

THE ONLY COMFORTING thing about this weekly ordeal is knowing that I am not alone. Others in the newsroom suffer from this same condition, commonly referred to as Rim Fever. If you're ever in The Herald and observe a reporter who intermittently stares into space and pounds the typewriter furiously, you are probably witnessing the symptoms of the disease.

At any rate, a Rim isn't nearly as simple to write as it may appear, and sometimes they don't work out quite as well as we would like for them to. To those of you who patiently overlook those days and still read them, and pat us on the back when we occasionally come up with a good column, many thanks.

Maybe I wasn't out of my mind after all.

U.S. allies endorse anti-inflation plans

OTTAWA (AP) — Overcoming European protests about high U.S. interest rates, President Reagan has an endorsement from America's major allies for his anti-inflation policies and favorable reviews for his debut in summit diplomacy.

Leaders of the seven richest democracies submerged their major differences on economic policy and returned home from a three-day summit Tuesday after acknowledging that high interest rates "have to play their part" in reducing inflation.

The summit participants also reaffirmed their common commitment to fighting inflation, reviving economic growth and lowering unemployment as their top priorities. Yet they offered no new approaches for solving those problems and indicated they would continue on their own divergent paths for dealing with their economic woes at home.

A joint statement issued at the end of the conference reflected the line Reagan had been trying to sell since he arrived here Sunday for his first economic summit: Tight-credit policies are "essential to reducing inflation," even if they result in high interest rates.

But the joint communique also contained an American acknowledgement of the negative influences U.S. economic policy has on other countries.

In another accommodation, Reagan joined his six fellow heads of state in agreeing to launch "global negotiations" aimed at distributing more resources from the rich nations to the poor ones. Initially inclined against the idea, Reagan came to the summit prepared to endorse it because of keen interest by the other nations, particularly host Canada.

Reagan also failed to persuade his colleagues from West Germany, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan and Canada to include language warning Europe to guard against becoming too dependent on trade with the Soviet bloc.

On balance, though, American officials appeared more than pleased with the results.

"All in all, I'd say the results of the summit and what is in that communique hit on all fours with the president's approach," Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told reporters.

That view was shared by some foreign leaders and observers as well.

Chrysler posts first profit since 1978

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Chrysler Corp., kept afloat in part with $1.2 billion in federal loan guarantees, has posted its first profit since 1978, company officials said today.

Spokesman Bill Stempien said, "There is going to be a profit for the second quarter," but would not say how much.

Chrysler President Lee A. Iacocca was to provide details in a speech later today at the National Press Club.

In advance of the speech, Stempien said the figures represented a "fantastic turnaround" for the No. 3 automaker, which was flirting with bankruptcy only a year ago.

The company's last profit was $43.1 million in the fourth quarter of 1979.

Since then the automaker has lost nearly $3.2 billion and was forced to go to the government for $1.2 billion in loan guarantees to stay afloat.

Stempien said the company's financial situation is now so good that Chrysler has no intention of asking the government for the remaining $300 million in loan guarantees for which it is eligible.

He said better-than-expected sales of the Chrysler Omni Horizon and of its K-cars were behind the profit. In the first quarter of the year, the automaker posted a $20 million loss.

Chrysler was the first of the top three automakers to report its earnings for the second quarter.

General Motors is expected to report a profit of $450 million to $500 million while analysts believe Ford Motor Co. will be near the break-even point.

Earlier this month the smaller American Motors Corp. announced a loss of $19.9 million in the quarter.

Teen receives kidney of rape, suicide victim

DALLAS (AP) — A degenerative disease and a failed transplant operation left Todd Lawson depending on a machine to clean his blood — until he got a new kidney from a teen-age rape victim with "nothing to live for."

The 16-year-old Oklahoma boy was in "good, stable condition" Tuesday night in Oklahoma City University Hospital, according to a spokeswoman, after the operation Sunday.

"I just can't tell you the difference it makes to us," Peggy Lawson, the boy's mother, said Tuesday. The donor, Sheryl Lewis Brown, 19, died Saturday night about two hours after she shot herself in the head, Dallas police said.

Officers said the girl told them she had been assaulted in a park about midnight Friday.

The girl, described by friends as a "sensitive, likeable and nice," left a note to her mother saying, "Mom: I'm sorry I did this. I have nothing to live for... I seem to be a total goof. I love you!"

Ms. Brown was named Outstanding Girl Athlete at El Paso's Andress High School, and had been attending Ranger Junior College.

Her high school coach, Kay Tidwell, said she was at a loss to explain why the girl had taken her life.

"It's hard for me to understand why she did it," Ms. Tidwell said, describing the girl as "sensitive, likeable and nice."

"Sheryl was very much of a perfectionist in all of her work," Ms. Tidwell said. "Maybe she felt she had to live up to her mother's standards."

Police said a 36-year-old parking lot attendant held in connection with the assault was released Sunday on $2,500 bond.

Officers said they doubted the case would be prosecuted because Ms. Brown had died.

Mrs. Lawson said she received word Sunday that a kidney donor had become available for Todd, who had a degenerative kidney disorder.

She said her son had received a kidney transplant three years ago, but the organ began to fail in December and he was forced to remain on a kidney dialysis machine.

The biweekly treatments in Oklahoma City meant Todd and his mother had to get up at 3:30 a.m. to make the 150-mile trip from Durant, in Southeastern Oklahoma near the Texas border, to Oklahoma City.

Mrs. Lawson said in a telephone interview from her home Tuesday that her son had not done well on the dialysis machine before.

"He just didn't accept it," she said. "You can imagine the schooling he missed, and he just kept going down, down, down. It (dialysis) is not always the solution, especially for a child."

Jailed couple to get Supreme Court hearing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An El Paso couple who signed their home over to their employer to get out of a Juarez jail today won the right to a Texas Supreme Court hearing of their case.

The high court set an Oct. 28 hearing on an appeal by Mauricio and Lucy Lewkowicz from an El Paso court decision upholding a $100,000 settlement with Siltan Bros., a Los Angeles-based manufacturer of leather jackets.

The couple were accused by officers of Siltan Bros. of embezzling money and stealing leather and finished jackets from the corporation's Karen International plant, which Lewkowicz managed, in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

After remaining in jail for four months — during which, Mrs. Lewkowicz said she saw a prisoner beaten to death — the couple signed a restitution agreement that gained them their freedom.

The July 1979 agreement said the couple's alleged crimes cost Siltan Bros. $270,000 but the corporation would settle for property, including the Lewkowicz' home, worth between $80,000 and $100,000.

Lewkowicz also agreed not to compete in the clothing business for three years.

After their release from the Mexican jail, the Lewkowiczes appealed an El Paso District court's agreed judgment locking in the settlement agreement.

The Lewkowiczes contended the settlement was not valid because they signed it under duress.

But the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals upheld the agreement, saying there was evidence of the alleged crimes and the Lewkowiczes could have spent 14 to 15 years in a Mexican prison.

Their El Paso lawyer, on seeing Mrs. Lewkowicz's condition, advised them sign anything to get out of jail, the appeal said.

Injured child is critical

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Two-year-old Cody Kemp of Colorado City son of Mr. and Mrs. C.D. Kemp, is in critical condition in the intensive care unit of Lubbock Methodist Hospital after being struck Monday by a car driven by a 15-year-old youth.

The accident occurred near 21st and Walnut Streets and reportedly resulted in a fractured skull and broke arm for the two-year-old.

According to Police Sgt. Billy Ray Williamson, details of the mishap are not complete.

Sgt. Williamson urges all drivers to exercise extreme caution when driving in residential areas and to be on the lookout for youngsters during this summer vacation season.

Many Kids Hooked By Strangers' Line

DEAR ABBY: Now that summer vacation is here and many children are left at home while their parents are working, shopping or whatever, parents should instruct their children on how to handle telephone calls from strangers when they are at home alone. You would be amazed at some of the conversations I have had with children when I have called the homes of clients. For example:

Questions	Answers
Is your mother home?	No.
Is your father home?	No.
Is your older brother, sister, grandmother, baby sitter there?	No.
Is anyone there with you?	No. (or) Yes, my little sister.
When will someone (adult) be home?	I don't know.
I want to verify your address. Is it ( )?	Yes.

Abby, do you understand what I am saying? These kids are all alone, don't know whom they are talking to and are willing to answer just about any question I ask. When I have asked the children for their parents' work numbers, they don't know the numbers, they don't know where their parents work and sometimes they don't even know if their parents work!

For the sake and safety of the children of working parents, please advise parents to teach their children how to handle telephone calls from strangers, because some day the stranger may be really strange!

parents to instruct their children to give no information to strangers on the telephone, and never to indicate that they are home alone.

Children should be taught to always ask, "Who is calling?" and "May I have your name and phone number?" (Parents should always leave a phone number where they can be reached.)

A child who is not old enough to answer the phone properly, refer a call or take a message is not old enough to be left alone.

DEAR ABBY: ASHAMED IN SAN ANTONIO wrote to confess that she always sends herself flowers on Mother's Day because her only child — a grown and married son — usually forgets, and she wants to have something to show her neighbors. How sad!

I have an only child — a daughter, also married. I never give her a chance to forget me on Mother's Day. The day before, I send her flowers and enclose a note: "Tomorrow is Mother's Day, and I want you to know how proud I am to be your mother!"

It works like a charm. She hasn't forgotten me yet!

CAGEY MAMMA

DEAR CAGEY: That same wily device can be used for anniversaries. ("I'm proud to be your wife.")

Couple is honored with dinner party

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Adams were hosts at a dinner party Thursday evening in the Cactus Room of Howard College honoring Brenda Kay Lewis and Anthony B. Claxton.

The bride-elect, her mother, Mrs. S.N. Lewis, and Mrs. Lloyd Claxton, mother of the prospective bridegroom, were presented corsages of peach and coral carnations.

Guests were registered on a table covered with white lace over a peach cloth. Banquet tables were covered with white linen and centered by a floral arrangement in shades of peach and coral. Brown tapers in tiered crystal candelums flanked the arrangement, completing the theme of the couple's chosen colors of brown, peach and coral.

Special guests were the couple's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S.N. Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Claxton. Other special guests were members of the Business Department of Howard College, including Mr. and Mrs. Harland Huijbregtse, Doug Ashby, Terry Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Woodridge and Mr. and Mrs. Garland Morrison.

Following the dinner, the honored couple opened gifts for use in the kitchen and bath. The host couple presented the honorees with a brass tray.

The couple will exchange vows Aug. 1 in the College Baptist Church.

Kitchen gadget shower honors Cynthia Cowan

The Indian Hills home of Mrs. Bill Pollard was the scene of a kitchen gadget shower Thursday honoring Cynthia Ann Cowan, bride-elect of Donny Knight.

After the opening of gifts, each guest offered Miss Cowan advice on how to be successful in the culinary arts.

Refreshments were served from a polished mahogany table, featuring a centerpiece created from the hostesses' gift of an electric skillet, assorted wooden spoons and kitchen gadgets, and dried flowers in the bride's chosen kitchen colors of apple green and lemon yellow.

The couple will marry Saturday at the First Baptist Church.

Hostesses, Mrs. Pollard, Mrs. W.A. Moore, Mrs. Sonny Shroyer, Mrs. Charles Hays, and Mrs. Delnor Poss, presented corsages created from small kitchen gadgets to Miss Cowan, her mother, and Mrs. Knight.

Food and beverage packaging contributes to rising prices

Americans crumple, crush and tear up billions of dollars they spend on food and beverages every year.

The last money represents the cost of packaging and it adds up to $150 annually for every man, woman and child in the country, according to a report from the Economics and Statistics Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

John M. Connor explored the area of packaging costs in a recent article in the USDA's quarterly publication, "National Food Review."

Among the findings:

- It took over 600 pounds of packaging to wrap the food and beverages bought by each American in 1980.
- Nine cents out of every dollar which consumers spend on food and drink goes to packaging. The farm value of the product and the cost of the labor to bring it to market account for a little more than 30 cents each.
- The value of the packaging — $34 billion in 1980 — is greater than the value of the ingredients in about one-fourth of the food and beverage products we buy.
- Gallo and Connor say the money isn't necessarily wasted — even if the packaging winds up in the garbage can. Packaging not only protects food, they say, it also demands a greater variety of package sizes.

The cost of food packaging has risen at a slightly higher rate during the past decade than the overall marketing bill for processing, shipping, storing and selling. The biggest price jump was for plastics, which cost three times as much in 1980 as in 1970, largely due to rising petroleum costs.

Packaging costs vary widely, of course, from product to product.

The value of beer containers is about five times as big as the value of the ingredients in the brew. The packaging for ready-to-mix desserts, potato chips, chewing gum and soft drinks is worth about twice as much as the foods themselves. At the other end of the scale, packaging is less than one-tenth the value of the ingredients in poultry, cheese, sugar, butter and red meat products.

Consumers also are responsible for some of the proliferation of packaging, according to the report by Gallo and Connor. Shoppers want convenience. They want things that can be stored easily and will spoil less quickly. The greater variety of living arrangements — including the increase in single-person

fourth child is announced

Manuella's maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Manuel A. Correa, Rt. 2, and her paternal grandfather is Ysidro Hernandez Sr., Lamesa.

The infant is welcomed by her brother, Rudy Jr., 9, and sisters, Lorinna, 8, and Eva, 5.

Many outraged at desegregation ruling

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — School trustees reacted with surprise, disappointment, outrage and even pleasure after a Supreme Court justice refused to free the South Park Independent School District from devising a new racial desegregation plan by the start of the next school year.

Justice Lewis F. Powell turned down Tuesday the district's emergency request aimed at avoiding the court-ordered desegregation.

"Speaking for myself, I believe that the case in its present posture merits review by this court," Powell said in a seven-page opinion.

However, he said, "I cannot conclude that there is a reasonable probability four members of the court will vote to grant (review)."

Four such votes are needed before appeals are studied fully by the court and Powell noted that only he and Justice William H. Rehnquist voted to hear the school district's appeal three years ago on "almost identical" arguments.

However, school district lawyer Tannert Hunt Jr. said the decision would not prevent the district from seeking a review by the full court when it convenes in the fall.

Officials for the school district, which serves more than 11,000 students in south and west Beaumont, had asked Powell to postpone the need for any such plan until the full Supreme Court considers a formal appeal.

Powell's refusal to grant the stay brought expressions of disappointment, surprise and outrage from three school trustees and one of the members of the boards only black member.

Dr. Richard Price, the only black trustee and sole opponent of the legal battle against the court-ordered desegregation, said he was pleased because the ruling signaled an end to the fight and means the district can stop "wasting the taxpayers' money."

Price said the money used in the legal fight could have been better used by making needed improvements to district schools.

"I know that the courts will talk about busing — I have not addressed that issue — I want to see equitable facilities and programs," said Price.

However, Trustee Ronald Walker reacted bitterly to the ruling.

"I felt — maybe it was sheer optimism — that Justice Powell had a feeling of sensitivity for the people of this country to stop forcing them to do things contrary to their rights as parents to rear their children and send them to what ever school they please," said Walker.

"The thing that is so disappointing is that I think we would be hard put to find 10 people in the SPDID that would be in support of what the circuit court has done. The decision is completely contrary to the feelings of the people in this district and the United States and I think it is a disgrace that it continues," said Walker.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last May 28 ordered the district to work out with Justice Department lawyers a plan that will increase the racial balance within its 18 schools.

As yet, no such plan has been agreed on. U.S. District Judge Joe Fisher was to have supervised the process, but he disqualified himself from the case.

U.S. District Judge Robert Parker now is presiding over the controversy that dates back to 1970.

Parker had scheduled a hearing today in his court Wednesday and told lawyers for the Justice Department and the district to bring their proposals for a new plan.

District officials said Monday that they were not prepared to present a plan to Parker, who has threatened to impose special masters if necessary to meet the deadline.

School board Vice President Joe Redman said trustees would probably meet either Thursday or Friday to consider proposals from the district's administrative staff.

The Justice Department sued the district in 1970 to end racial segregation.

During the 1969-70 school year, 34 percent of the district's 13,059 students were minority members — and 15 of the district's 20 schools were 90 percent or more of one race.

A desegregation plan was implemented, without appeal from the federal government. But in 1976, the Justice Department requested that the plan be modified to increase racial balance.

As of last school year, 42 percent of the district's 11,075 students were minority members — and 11 of 18 schools were 90 percent or more of one race.

Judge Fisher turned down the Justice Department's modification request, ruling that new racial imbalance had been caused by factors not attributable to school board policies, including "white flight" out of the district.

Water problem blamed on heat, rain

HOUSTON (AP) — Foul smelling, discolored drinking water which moved into downtown Houston's pipes Tuesday was tainted by heavy rains and hot weather, city officials say.

The water, which first appeared Saturday in Pasadena and southeast Houston, contains a high manganese level, said Dan Jones, Spokesman for the Public Works Department.

"It is totally non toxic but cosmetically distasteful," Jones said.

Jones blamed a high manganese level in Lake Houston, apparently a result of runoff from recent heavy rains and dredging along the San Jacinto River above the lake.

He said the hot weather is complicating the problem.

"Water is leaving our plant at 88 degrees and has been measuring a couple of miles down in the system at 95 degrees," he said. "It's getting hot in the ground."

Staring at horizon stops motion sickness

BOSTON (AP) — Some people get those first queasy feelings just thinking about bucking over big waves on a little boat or bouncing across back roads in a car with bad springs.

But doctors say motion sickness, that curse of travel, can be conquered — at least most of the time.

The strategies range from putting kids in car seats to slowing an astronaut's racing heart with biofeedback. All of them may help. None is foolproof.

And this can be a problem for people who travel, however they travel. For no matter how disdainfully old salts vow that they never get seasick, no human being with healthy inner ears is immune from this ailment.

Motion sickness drugs help if the turbulence is not too great. And most people will get used to ty movement and stop feeling ill in two or three days at sea.

"Ninety percent of people will adapt to it or respond to the drugs and be all right," said Dr. Charles Wood, a motion sickness expert at Louisiana State University School of Medicine. "But there is a certain percentage that only God, or avoiding it entirely, can help."

People get seasick, carsick, airsick or spacesick because of overexcitement of their vestibular systems, the structures in the inner ear that control balance. But sight, too, has something to do with it.

The nausea usually starts when what you feel differs from what you see.

"One theory is that it's a sensory conflict," says Wood. "You look at a room when you're sitting aboard ship, and the room appears to be sitting still. And yet your vestibular tells you thqou're bouncing upanddown. When you get on deck, you can see the horizon. It resolves the conflict, because you can see what you're doing."

Staring at the horizon is a time-honored and effective way of relieving the effects of motion sickness. It works, too, for people riding in cars, especially children, who seem to be especially prone to the illness.

Dr. Edward Schor of Baltimore City Hospitals reported on a solution for kids' car sickness in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Small children often getuck when riding in the backseat. The trick, Schor says, is to put the child in a car seat so he can see the passing scenery out the windows.

The Navy, for obvious reasons, has long been interested in finding a cure for motion sickness. But he search has intensified in recent years since astronauts found that floating weightlessly in space stirs its own revolting form of motion sickness.

At the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif., doctors are working on a promising treatment called autogenetic feedback training.

Space sickness was a frequent nuisance for astronauts in the Apollo and Spacelab programs, and NASA wants to make sure it does not disrupt the space shuttle.

"The kind of stimulation a person receives to his inner ear in space is quite alien to anything you could have experienced even in the whole course of evolution on the surface of a planet," said Dr. Patricia Cowings. "The body doesn't quite know how to deal with it."

Getting people conditioned to the effects of floating upside down before they go into space is impossible, because weightlessness can only be created for a few seconds at a time in airplanes on earth.

So Ms. Cowings has devised a six-hour course that teaches astronauts to fight off the symptoms of motion sickness with biofeedback techniques.

"The first thing we do is make him sick," she said. "Then we know precisely what to teach the subject to control. We teach him essentially to mimic his own resting physiological response levels under stressful conditions."

Motion sickness never happens all at once. The symptoms usually begin with dry mouth and build up to flush, dizziness, headache, nausea, cold sweat and finally vomiting.

In the NASA program, the doctors teach people techniques to fight off their early symptoms of motion sickness, such as rapid heartbeat or blood rushing to the face, so they never progress to the point of feeling ill.

So far, Ms. Cowings said, the method has been used on about 200 people, and it works 85 percent of the time.

"We haven't come across a person who can't learn to control his responses at all," she said. "What we do see are people who can't learn to control them well enough under the distracting and distressing conditions of a motion sickness test."

Wright said most of those fired would be clerks and teachers' aides, although 17 professional positions — including some teachers — also would be eliminated.

"This is a considerably smaller number than we had anticipated," Wright said, adding that he was relieved the tight budget did not necessitate more firings.

"Fortunately," he continued, "we have been able to reassign a lot of other employees to positions that were vacated this summer through retirements and resignations."

School system cuts work force

DALLAS (AP) — Budget problems will force the dismissal of 90 employees within the Dallas Independent School District, the first time in history that Dallas school positions have been eliminated for budgetary reasons, the superintendent said.

The terminations will be recommended to school trustees at a regular meeting later this month, Superintendent Linus Wright said Monday. A new employee layoff policy, dictating the terms of the dismissal, was enacted by board members earlier this year.

houses of Congress. And for most of the nation's first 200 years, that was the end of the process.

But in 1974, the Congress passed legislation to force itself to look at the budget as a whole. Under this process, two "concurrent budget resolutions" passed during the year outline an overall budget ceiling and ceilings for each of the government's major departments.

The first such resolution is passed in the spring. Each of the authorizing committees, such as the Armed Services Committee, estimates the total amount that should be spent in its area during the coming fiscal year. The Budget Committee takes all of these recommendations and weighs priorities among them to derive the total amount. This resolution must be agreed upon by both houses of Congress, but the first resolution is not binding upon the committees or the full Senate or House as they go about the traditional authorization and appropriations process.

In the fall, after the bulk of the appropriations are well underway, the Congress considers its second resolution of the year. The practice in past years has been simply to juggle the figures in the second resolution to fit what has already been done by the authorization and appropriations process. The second resolution is binding in the sense that special action is required to override it and spend more money in any area. However, exceptions have been almost routine.

The only vehicle to make the cuts absolutely certain is the reconciliation process. This is a legally binding piece of legislation ordering the committees, and the Congress, to scale back authorizations and appropriations to the agreed-upon ceilings. It has never been used effectively.

Reconciliation originally was envisioned as being a companion to the second budget resolution. But it is easy to see the havoc that could be induced by letting things drift along in a business-as-usual manner, and then trying to enforce reconciliation after all of the work has been largely completed.

For that reason, the reconciliation legislation this year is being acted upon in the wake of the first budget resolution — to protect the budget cuts already fully debated and approved by Congress.

A Conference Committee, made up of members of both House and Senate, has begun work ironing out differences in the legislation produced by these two bodies. I am confident a figure will emerge which will begin the process of bringing the federal budget back under control.

Colleges suing to stop diploma handouts

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas company that offered college diplomas based on a combination of previous college credit, "life experience" and money has been sued by two Texas universities and their governing body for allegedly issuing fraudulent degrees.

The suit was filed Monday by Texas A&M University, Prairie View A&M University and the Texas College and University System Coordinating Board. It names Dr. S. Barnett Haynes, Raul Aceves and their Continuing Career Institute, alleging they violate the Texas Education Code standards for institutions of higher learning.

Haynes is identified in the lawsuit as the institute's director and Aceves, its registrar. They are accused of issuing diplomas in the name of Prairie View A&M without authority of Prairie View, Texas A&M or the coordinating board.

An assistant attorney general, Nancy Lynch, said the case first came to the attention of authorities when Lorenzo Holland of Dallas paid CCI $175 and received documents saying he held a bachelor of science degree in electrical technology from Prairie View.

CALLING IT QUITS ... Three days before he was scheduled to report to the training camp of the New England Patriots, All-Pro tight end Russ Francis announced through his attorney that he is retiring from professional football for personal reasons. Francis did not give a reason, but it is known that he has suffered numerous concussions and a broken bone in his back in recent years.

Hangin' Out with Nathan Poss

Steers 'Earl' among state's best

Cruising along on my Hawk motorcycle one summer night, we crossed the bridge over the railroad and Bobby Earl Williams came with some jive.

"Take my name, Nathan, if it were just Bobby, it wouldn't be different. But you put that Earl in there, and that makes it special ... It has a special ring ... Bobby Earl," he said, with his voice rising and emphasizing the Earl.

"Yeah," I laughed, "whoever or whatever you are, you're definitely different."

"Special," he said, then growling at a car that passed by. We both laughed.

But after looking at the pre-season bible of the gridiron in the Lone Star State earlier this week, "Texas Football", it appeared that the widely read magazine also considers the Big Spring High senior to be something special.

Williams, a talented athlete that rushed for 971 yards as a junior and had numerous interceptions from his cornerback position, made the elite high school section entitled "Friday Night Heroes." Williams made the first team list in the magazine, which is reserved for what their panelists feel rate the top 12 schoolboy gridirers in the state.

And that's a first for a Big Spring Steer. Although many past Steers have gone on to star in college and make a name in the NFL, no BSHS gridirer has ever made the First Team pre-season list of "Texas Football," according to the memory of retiring Editor Tommy Hart, who was the Sports Editor here for over 30 years.

Of course, that will work both ways. While it is an outstanding pre-season honor that will no doubt catch the eyes of college recruiters everywhere, it will also make the body of Bobby Earl a marked one this fall. It will force him to be at his best at all times. If he does rise to that challenge, it means good things for Steers football fans, which are starving for a winning season.

Williams wasn't the only District 5-AAAAA gridirer to be named to Friday Night Heroes, as Midland High's mammoth defensive lineman, Joe Goebel, was also picked. Goebel stands between 6-6 and 6-8, and his weight has been listed anywhere between 245 and 270.

A total of 115-AAAAA seniors to be made the 1981 prime list of Texas schoolboys, which is based on the recommendations of the top college scouts and key Texas high school coaches.

Joining the 190-pound Williams, who was an All-District performer in both football and basketball, from 5-AAAAA are running backs Calvin Riggs of Midland Lee and Oscar Riggins of Abilene Cooper, linemen Goebel, Terry Thompson of Midland Lee, Rusty Ray of Odessa Permian, Wally Kleine of Midland, Mark Bates of San Angelo and Mark Owen of Abilene, and linebackers Mike Stills and Ray Berry of Abilene Cooper.

Ray, incidentally, is a former Big Spring athlete. He played here until the end of his freshmen year, at which time his parents transferred him to Permian in order to play for the Mojo.

"Texas Football," as usual, also predicts the Southwest Conference race, as well as the winners in each district in the high school ranks.

The Texas Longhorns are picked in the wild and crazy SEC, while state champ predictions are Temple in AAAAA, Georgetown in AAAA, Marble Falls in AAA, Eastland in AA, and Motley County in A.

Abilene Cooper is picked to win District 5-AAAAA, and I'll agree. The Cougars return three offensive and six defensive returners from last year's 8-1-1 team, and it seemed that every All-District nomination from Cooper Coach Ray Overton at last year's selection meeting was a junior. After Cooper, "Texas Football" has no apparent order of finishing.

Of the Big Spring Steers, here is what the "Texas Football" said:

Like Lee, BIG SPRING hopes to cash in on some experienced talent in '81, as 14 starters — 6 on offense and 8 on defense — return from last year's 3-7 team. The brightest of those stars is RB Bobby Earl Williams (6-2, 190) who ran for 9 TDs last season, 6 of them over 60 yards out. RB Richard Evans and QB Tracy Spence also return in the starting backfield, running behind the blocks of outstanding tacklers Mike Schooler (6-1, 205) and Greg Scarbro (6-1, 180). Tony Kennedy returns at TE, while untested Donnie Pavlosky and Donnie Tubb will be given a chance at guard and Philip Gomez will see action at center. Defensively, Big Spring is sound at LB, where veterans Marty Rice, George Bancroft and Danny Stephens all return. Tony Molina and Mike Sauls will help Scarbro on the defensive line, while Rod Harris, Williams and Evans lead the secondary.

The only Herald readership area team picked to win their district is Klondike, which won 3-A last year. Others that look to have the potential to win their leagues are Stanton and Coahoma.

Stanton returns four offensive and three defensive regulars from a 9-0-1 team, while Coahoma returns six offensive and six defensive starters from a 2-7-1 team, and has the luxury of playing in a four-team district.

Midland teams take District III wins

A pair of Midland teams stayed alive in the District III Little League Tournament here Tuesday night, scoring wins over the squads from Big Spring and Lamesa.

The losses to the Big Spring National All-Stars and Lamesa All-Stars knocked them out of the tournament, which sends the winner to bi-district.

Midland North Central jumped out to a 4-0 second inning lead over the National team, the withstood a slight rally and another attempted uprising before finishing off their foes.

Leading 4-0 in the bottom of the fourth, the National League used a single by Deeg Young to plate two runs and move back within two.

The NL looked primed to even things up in the fifth by loading the bases with only one out. But North Central hurler Jason Logi fanned the next hitter and picked up a 'bunt attempt with his bare hands off the bat of Lance Soles, and simply walked to home plate to put out the NL fire.

North Central added three insurance runs in the top of the sixth to win going away.

Logi was the winning pitcher, while the NL's John Olson was the loser.

Boyd had two doubles to pace North Central, with L. Wood contributing a pair of singles. Adding one hit each were Werner, Eldridge, McGaha and Connally.

Cary Fraser led all hitters in the game, cracking three hits of the National League. But only Young and Donnie Peacock managed hits other than Fraser for the NL.

The other contest was a thriller to the end, as Midland Mid-City used a wild pitch in the bottom of the eighth to score the winning run in an exciting 3-2 triumph over Lamesa.

The contest was a prime pitchers duel, as Mid-City's Curtis Tipton and Lamesa's Carl Pennington were excellent.

The winning run for Mid-City came off the arm of Lamesa's Mark Aldridge, who pitched to the final three hitters.

Only four teams remain alive in the District III affair, and they will all be in action tonight.

In the finals of the losers bracket, North Central and Mid-City will tangle, with the winner staying alive in the tourney. That contest will be played in the American League Park.

The finals of the winners bracket will be held at the National League Park. It will match the Big Spring Texas League All-Stars against defending tourney champ Midland Eastern. Both of these teams are undefeated.

All games begin at 8 p.m.

The winner of tonight's Mid-City vs. North Central game will play the loser of the Texas vs. Eastern contest tomorrow night. The survivor of the Thursday game must then beat the Texas vs. Eastern winner two straight games on Friday and Saturday to claim the title.

West Texas Girls Softball Tourney starts here tomorrow

Seventeen teams in four levels of competition are entered in the 1981 UGSA West Texas State Girls Softball Tournament, a three day event which starts in the Roy Anderson Sports Complex Thursday and continues through Saturday. Odessa, Midland, Snyder and Big Spring will be the cities represented here.

Division 1, for girls 8-10, will have four teams competing. Division 2, for girls 11 through 13, has six teams entered, including two each from Midland and Odessa.

Division 3, for girls 14 through 16, has four clubs competing. Division 4, for girls 17 through 19, will have only three teams. Odessa will not send a team in that age bracket here.

First and second place trophies will be awarded in each division. In addition, members of the all-tournament team in each division will get a trophy. Medallions will go to all girls competing here.

Two umpires will be assigned to work each game with the exception of the finals, when three officials take over. All games will be regulation, which means they will be scheduled for seven innings.

Big Spring won the Division 1 title last year, when the tournament took place in Snyder. The local team later finished third in the regional tournament at Hobbs, N.M.

Christene Sparks of the Blue Angels will manage the Big Spring Division 1 team, Roxanne Wilson of the Dynamites the Division 2 club, Joan Fuller of the Crushes the Division 3 contingent and Virginia Ryan of the Blue Demons the Division 4 contingent.

The championship games in Division 1 and 3 will start at 9 a.m., Saturday, in Divisions 2 and 4 at 11 a.m.

A total of 168 girls played on 14 teams in the UGSA program in Big Spring this year.

Dave Henry (telephone number 263-1862) will be director of the tournament here.

No solid favorite in US Women's Open

LA GRANGE, Ill. (AP) — Defending champion Amy Alcott, red hot Donna Caponi, millionaire-to-be Kathy Whitworth and popular Nancy Lopez-Melton will grace the fairways when the 29th U.S. Women's Open Golf Championship begins Thursday.

Alcott captured her title last year at the Richland Country Club in Nashville, Tenn., when she shot a record 4-under-par 280. She will be defending over the par 72, La Grange Country Club, a deceptive layout of 6,204 yards.

The field of 150, which will be trimmed to 60 and ties after 36 holes or the halfway mark, will be shooting for the top prize of $22,000 in the $150,000 tournament.

Many of the contestants are familiar with the course which was the site of the U.S. Open in 1974 when Sandra Haynie won the title with a 7-over-par 295.

Haynie will be among a number of former champions in the field in addition to Alcott and Caponi. Others include Jerilyn Britz, Hollis Stacy, JoAnne Carner, Sandra Palmer, Susie Berning, Sandra Spuzich, Carol Mann, Mary Willis and Murie Lindstrom.

Whitworth, who needs one more victory to match the $2 won by Mickey Wright for the LPGA record, never has won the Open although she needs to win only $1,031 to become the first million-dollar winner on the women's tour.

Whitworth will be making her 23rd attempt to win the Open which has become her nemesis.

"It's something that will probably never happen to me," said the 41-year-old Whitworth. "The chances of winning are 1,000 to 1."

The odds are nowhere near that high on Caponi who has won four tournaments this year, including the Western Union International Classic at Jericho, N. Y., last week.

Caponi won the U.S. Open in 1969 and successfully defended it the following year.

"Winning the U.S. Open in 1970 was my greatest thrill," said Caponi. "But winning this time would be the best because I know a lot more."

Ranger VP has plan

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Ranger Executive Vice President Eddie Robinson has come up with a plan proposing the end of the regulation major league baseball season for Sept. 24th — if and when the strike is settled.

Robinson's plan would end the regulation season on Sept. 24 instead of Oct. 4 with the top four teams in each division eligible for the playoffs.

The proposal would have the first and fourth place teams and the second in third place teams in each division play a best two-out-of-three series, then the two survivors in each division would play a five-game series beginning Sept. 29 to determine the Division champions.

Robinson said the division winners would then play for the American and National League titles and a spot in the World Series.

Robinson telephoned his plan to Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, saying "I believe this would be more meaningful than just playing out the rest of the season."

Kuhn took the plan under advisement, pending settlement of the strike.

AMERICAN ON TOUR — Last week Jonathan Boyer became the first American to compete in the 21-day, 2,500-mile Tour de France bike race. Next year in the race pioneer Boyer will be joined by a professional United States cycling team.

Coahoma All-Stars honored

The Coahoma Little League All-Stars capped their season by being honored at the Hickory House by Travis Mauldin.

Comprising the Coahoma All-Stars were Ronnie Ruitz, Buddy Cunningham, James Seals, Gordon Daniels, Anthony Hernandez, Willie Gutierrez, Todd Coker, Rene Ruiz, Luis Salazar, Lane Reid and Dee Jon Douglass.

Coaches for the Coahoma group were Bob Barnett, Juan Ruiz and Robert Turner.

The Coahoma All-Stars played one game, taking the regular season champion Lions Club. They won that game 5-4.

Tour de France moves US bikers to respectability

By the Associated Press

You can wrap him up in red, white and blue because Jonathan Boyer is one Yankee doodle dandy.

For 67 years, the Tour de France, which is something like the World Series and Super Bowl of cycling, got along very well, thank you, without benefit of a single American contestant.

But last weekend, Boyer became the pioneer, a trailblazer for Uncle Sam, when he finished 32nd in the grueling 21-day, 2,500-mile test of skill and stamina which runs from Nice to Paris.

Having an American in the Tour de France is like having a Frenchman playing second base for the New York Yankees — rather unusual, to say the very least. But for Boyer, it was the most natural thing in the world because he's been cycling so long.

He will compete in 20 races next month on the European circuit, and a rider is good for 60 miles or so per day in every race he enters. The big one, though, is the Tour de France where it's routine to clock 150 miles a day through the French countryside or in the heart of a city, up one Alp and down another.

"The race was everything I expected it to be," said Boyer, who competed as part of the winning Renault-Gitane team, led by Bernard Hinault, who captured the Tour for the third time in the last four years. "It was just as hard as I thought it would be. It is a race you cannot underestimate."

Boyer's finish was remarkable when you consider that it was his first time in this race. "I was hoping to do better than 32nd, but it's up there," he said. "The most important thing is our team won and all of us finished in the top 50."

Cycling is an interesting combination of team and individual efforts. Each racer goes against the clock with cumulative times added up to determine his place at the finish. But each must also be concerned with the leader of his team — in Renault-Gitane's case, that was Hinault. "There are 10 members on a team and the job of the others is to minimize the efforts of the leader, block the wind for him," Boyer said.

So Boyer had the satisfaction of Hinault's victory to go with his own finish. It was a formidable beginning for the slender 25-year-old who first started riding in Carmel, Calif., when he pedaled 10 miles a day to school. Boyer's cycling progress was swift and he was a candidate for the Tour de France as long as four years ago. But injury and illness interfered and the Tour had to get along without him until 1981.

Boyer was a favorite of the French crowds because, after all, here was an American in the big race at last, munching on his apples and sandwiches from the musette bag around his neck, and keeping up a 30-mile per hour pace, just like the great European riders.

Next year, American involvement in the Tour de France will be expanded by the inclusion of a United States professional cycling team in the race, sponsored by World Tour Cycling. Boyer, the pioneer, will be back, too.

Russ Francis is quitting

SMITHFIELD, R.I. (AP)

Three days before he was scheduled to report to Bryant College for his seventh training camp with the New England Patriots, All-Pro tight end Russ Francis announced through his attorney that he is retiring from professional football "for personal reasons."

Francis, who was selected for the Pro Bowl after the 1976, 1977 and 1978 seasons, joined the Patriots as a first-round draft pick in 1975 out of Oregon. In six seasons in the pros he suffered several injuries, including a concussion and a broken bone in his back.

As SMU's Michael Carter wins shot put

Comaneci tough in World games

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Shot-putter Michael Carter won the first gold medal for the United States at the World University Games, but felt he would have had a better winning performance if he weren't all dried out.

Carter, of Southern Methodist University, heaved the shot 66 feet, 3 inches (20.19 meters) Tuesday and beat silver medalist Detlef Mortag of East Germany and bronze medalist Dalibor Vasicek of Czechoslovakia.

Still, he was unhappy about what he described as one of his worst performances of the season.

The highlight of the day for local fans was two-time Olympic gymnastics champion Nadia Comaneci earning perfect scores of 10 in the vault and floor exercises, helping Romania to two gold medals and the lead in the World University Games standings.

After the second day of competition, the Romanians had collected four gold medals, all in gymnastics, the Soviet Union had three and the Americans and Chinese one each.

The Romanian women gymnasts beat the Soviets 118 points to 116.20 in the team competition and Comaneci won the individual all-around title with 39.40 points. Chinese diver Li Yuhua won the women's springboard title with 500.82 points, ahead of American Megan Neyer, who was second.

Tourib Toomas Kharry of the Soviet Union ran away from Romanian Marko Gyorgy and David Murphy of Britain to win the 10,000 meters in an unofficial time of 29 minutes, 42.85 seconds.

Gyorgy was second, and Murphy, a student at Western Kentucky, was third. The race jury ruled no times would be listed for the race because of a system failure.

Fencer Vladimir Smirnov of the Soviet Union won the other gold medal Tuesday, taking the men's individual foil title. Petru Kuri of Romania won the silver and Frederico Cervi of Italy took the bronze.

The American men won their second game of the basketball tournament, downing South Korea 104-70 as Mexico proved itself a contender with a 106-69 win over Lebanon. It was the second 100-plus game for the Mexicans, who are coached by Chuck Skarshaug of El Paso, Texas.

Chinese coaches broke with Games' custom in an apparent protest of a scoring change in the women's team gymnastics. The two coaches took the winners stand to receive a bronze medal after a Soviet protest had succeeded in lifting Stela Zahorova's vault score from 9.85 to 9.90. Zaharova won the silver medal in individual all-around competition.

The Soviets had protested a mathematical error in Monday's men's gymnastics competition and won a change that allowed Yuri Korolev to share a gold medal with Romanian Kurt Szilier.

Mel Lattany and Calvin Smith were the fastest qualifiers in the 100 meters. Smith, a University of Alabama student, clocked a 10.21 and Lattany was times in 10.19.

David Lee of Southern Illinois eased up in the last 50 meters, but still turned in the fastest qualifying time in the 400-meter hurdles with a 50.47.

Tough spare enough for Canadian title

WINDSOR, Ontario (AP) — Mike Aubly knew it would be tough either way.

But when tournament officials ruled that the 5-pin rather than the 6-pin had to be reset, giving him a tough 5-10 split attempt in the crucial ninth frame, the Indianapolis bowler bore down and made the conversion.

Aubly then went on Tuesday night to win the $100,000 Canadian Open on the Professional Bowlers Association tour with a 205-202 victory over Gil Sliker in the championship game. Aubly took home $13,000.

"I knew something had to be respotted to go along with the 10-pin," Aubly later said about his first shot that left two pins standing until the pin-spotting apparatus knocked down one of them.

"But I thought it might have been the 6, which would have been much easier to make. But they (officials) had a chance to watch a replay which showed the pin that was knocked down by the machine was originally the 5."

Aubly had twice beaten Sliker during the concluding round of match play Monday to earn the top-seeded position going into the finals.

Sliker, of Washington, N.J., earned a rematch against Aubly by beating Johnny Petraglia of Staten Island, N.Y., 211-167, in the semifinal game.

Aubly and Sliker started the title game with a strike-spare sequence, but Aubly added strikes in the third and fourth frames to go up by 31 pins.

Sliker evened the match with three straight strikes beginning in the sixth frame while Aubly missed converting a 7-pin spare in the eighth frame. That set the stage for Aubly's critical conversion in the ninth frame.

With the victory, Aubly, 21, the runner-up in last year's Canadian Open, collected his fourth career championship and moved to ninth on the 1981 PBA earnings list with $48,195.

Mum's the word on baseball strike progress

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the negotiators in the major league baseball strike finally leave Washington, they undoubtedly will remember the face of Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan.

For the better part of the last two days, Donovan has attended talks between the Major League Players Association and the Player Relations Committee, the club owners' bargaining arm.

He was due back today at 10 a.m. EDT, as the teams returned to the ninth floor of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service headquarters.

At Donovan's urging, a news blackout has been placed on the talks. So the parties refused to say after Tuesday's seven-hour session if progress had been made toward ending the strike, which has wiped out 400 games — 24 percent of the 2,106-game season.

"I really don't have anything to say. The government's involved," said Bob Boone, the Philadelphia Phillies' catcher and National League player representative.

"I hope you understand," Doug DeCinces, the Baltimore Orioles' third baseman and American League player rep, said as reporters approached.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' union, also refused to discuss the talks, but said the two sides probably would be meeting each day even if no progress was being made.

"We have a duty to bargain," he said. "And, I might say jocularly, 'Where else do I have to go?'"

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn also was in Washington.

"The Commissioner feels it is important to be close to the scene," said Bob Wirz, a spokesman for the commissioner's office. "He is not involved in the negotiations and how long he stays depends on what develops."

Miller added that, in theory, the blackout should help achieve a settlement on the free-agent compensation issue.

"If it works, my feeling will be that it's very good," said Miller, adding that the blackout's effect on the players' bargaining position "depends on how long it lasts."

Donovan, Kenneth Moffett, the federal mediation chief who has handled the baseball case for the last two years, and the PRC team headed by director Raymond Grebey were unavailable for comment.

Tuesday's session started at 9:30 a.m. and lasted until 5:30 p.m., with the session interrupted for 1 1/2 hours as Donovan left to address the Urban League convention at the Shoreham Hotel.

The two sides met both separately and in joint session, and the secretary attended all sessions that the mediators sat in on," said Nancy Broff, the acting general counsel for the Mediation and Conciliation Service.

She refused to discuss the substance of the day's meetings.

The key issue in the strike is how teams losing free agents will be compensated. Until now, the only compensation has been an amateur draft choice from the signing team, but the owners want professional players as compensation when quality players change teams.

US Olympic hockey win helping interest players

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. Olympic hockey team's stirring gold-medal performance in the 1980 Winter Games is still paying dividends for the national hockey program, says the coach of a National Sports Festival team.

Ice hockey, one of three Winter Olympics disciplines among the 33 which make up the sports extravaganza, will be contested by teams representing four sections of the country when the third Festival starts.

"I think it's really helped us," said Shawn Walsh, coach of the Great Lakes hockey team and an assistant at Michigan State, of the triumphs strung together by the crew of collegians at Lake Placid, N.Y. "Now, it's up to us to use it to our advantage. If you watch the games here at Syracuse, you'll see carryover from the Olympics just in the interest in the games."

The Festival, which begins with opening ceremonies

Thursday and ends July 29, is a sort of national Olympics organized by the U.S. Olympic Committee to foster the careers of established amateur athletes and test promising youngsters against top-flight competition. It was organized in 1978 at Colorado Springs, Colo., and was repeated there the next year.

Bill Rogers still can't believe British Open win

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Bill Rogers was still riding an emotional roller coaster from his British Open triumph when he teed off for a practice round Tuesday for the $500,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"It was the greatest thing that's happened to me in golf. I still haven't come down and, really, it hasn't hit me yet," said Rogers, who scored the first major triumph of his career Sunday on the Royal St. George's golf links in Sandwich, England.

He took an immobile stance, rock-still, his eyes wide and staring.

"Just like that," he said. "I'll be messing around or something, and all of a sudden it'll hit me just like that."

He hasn't even begun to tote up the rewards and potential rewards from a victory in the oldest of all the world's golf championships.

"Does this get me in the Tournament of Champions?" he asked while receiving congratulations from his fellow pros in the locker room of the Kingmill Golf Club course, site of this week's PGA Tour event which begins Thursday.

"It does? And five years at the Masters? Well, hotdamn."

One other benefit already surfaced.

He received an immediate invitation to compete in the 16-man field for the World Match Play Championship outside of London this fall, an event he won two years ago.

"I jumped all over that invitation," Rogers said. "I love that tournament. It's really fun."

Low-calorie meals can be a pleasure

Dieting is easy with cool, summer dishes

Those who diet frequently say that the hardest part about dieting is not taking pounds off, but keeping them off. Dieting experts tell us that the key to successful maintenance includes setting realistic weight loss goals and changing established eating habits over an extended period of time.

Several dieting techniques are helpful to keep in mind when trying to lose weight or keep off unwanted pounds. First, cut down on portions of favorite foods instead of eliminating them, to avoid eating binges. Don't skip snacks if they're part of a daily routine, but be sure they are worth the calories, like juice, a piece of fruit, or raw vegetables.

Other weight-conscious measures include using food products that contain fewer calories. There are a number of products on the market today that have good quality and flavor and less calories. Many can be substituted for similar but higher calorie ingredients in most recipes. Many are identified as "light" or "lite" on the labels.

Lite-line pasteurized process cheese product slices for example, used in two of the following recipes, contains only half the calories of regular American process cheese. Apple Blossom Salad and Open-Face Salad Sandwich both use Lite-line slices with fresh fruits and vegetables. Other refreshing summer diet choices, to help maintain a weight loss, are Chilled Zucchini Soup and Banana Frappe. The soup starts with chicken-flavor instant bouillon, fresh zucchini, yogurt and mustard. Banana Frappe, a tangy blend of reconstituted lemon juice, nonfat dry milk, bananas and sweetener, satisfies the urge for a thick shake, without all the calories.

APPLE BLOSSOM SALAD

'Dynasty' falls between 'Dallas' and 'Disaster'

NEW YORK (AP) — The prime-time soap opera "Dynasty" is set in Denver, Colo. But it's actually somewhere between "Dallas" and "Disaster," as far as ABC's programmers are concerned. So they've come up with a summer strategy designed to make "Dynasty" as indispensable to our lives as "Dallas."

Will the grand plan work? Can America be truly faithful to anybody besides J.R. Ewing? Will "Dynasty" find happiness at 10 o'clock on Wednesday nights? ... Ooo, the suspense is killing us.

Last summer's monumental question was who shot J.R.? The Dallas-mania got so big that Las Vegas even quoted a betting line on possible trigger-pullers. And the build-up helped the solution episode attract record numbers of viewers.

In the final episode of the first season of "Dynasty," we also were left with an unanswered question: Who was the mystery woman in the courtroom?

With extra summer promotion, a new night (no more competition with CBS' popular "M-A-S-H") and a later time period (more adults), ABC hopes to attract added viewers who will end their summer dying to unmask the mystery lady.

Tonight, "Dynasty's" opening three-hour episode is being rerun. ABC plans to broadcast the serial each succeeding Wednesday night at 10 p.m. EDT, its spot for the new season. "We're trying to establish a habit audience for the new night and time period," said Marvin Ford, ABC's vice president for research services.

ABC is sending some cast members to cities that didn't last enough over the beautiful Krystle Carrington (Linda Evans) and her beautiful stepdaughter, Fallon, (Pamela Sue Martin), the rivals for the affection of their beautiful husband-daddy Blake (John Forsythe). In addition, ABC will launch a newspaper advertising blitz with plot summaries to acquaint potential viewers with the story line.

ABC has audience research that indicates viewers with the story line. relationships, especially the tension between Krystle, Blake and Matthew Blaisdel (Bo Hopkins), the "tough but sensitive geologist" who is Krystle's former lover.

Incidentally, ABC says Hopkins — from Marlon Brando's "Godfather" school of mumble acting — has left the show to pursue a movie career. But ABC promises a new party of the third part to keep the ol' shell game going.

"Dynasty" is an oil-slick, superficial production, with the same formula ingredients of love, wealth, greed and power that made "Dallas" so successful. But unless ABC changes the title to "Denver" and lures J.R. Ewing to the Midwestern oil wells, don't expect "Dallas" to be supplanted in the ratings.

Returned MIA raised death question in letter

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP)—Navy pilot Steve Musselman considered himself a "steely-eyed combat veteran," but a month before he was shot down over Hanoi the lieutenant wrote home that he wondered if an enemy missile was meant for him.

Musselman was listed as missing in action for six years before he was finally given up for dead. His mother learned Monday that her son's remains were among the three bodies released this month by the Vietnamese government.

"Being notified... has opened an old wound," said Ethyl Musselman of Texarkana.

"I had years ago given up (and knew) that he was already in the spiritual realm. I was not like some parents of MIAs who still hoped their sons would be found living in a prison camp," she said.

Musselman's A-7 jet fighter was hit by a surface-to-air missile and crashed in a Hanoi city park on Sept. 10, 1972.

Mrs. Musselman said Tuesday the Navy told her another pilot, who also was shot down but survived, saw Musselman eject safely 14 miles outside the city. But she said it was believed her son was killed by heavy ground fire.

"Two days later a newspaper ran a picture showing a crashed plane and it had Steve's squadron emblem on it. It was shortly determined that his was the only plane from the squadron shot down at that time so we knew it was Steve," Mrs. Musselman said.

In an Aug. 13, 1972 letter to his parents Musselman wrote, "I am now a steely-eyed combat veteran having flown 16 days of missions."

"I am the pilot, navigator, nose-gunner and bombardier since there isn't room for anyone else.

"The enemy hasn't fought back too strongly and their surface-to-air missiles aren't good at hitting planes. But the psychological effect is something else because you wonder if that missile is on a personal track for your personal plane," he wrote.

In October of 1972, Navy officials showed Musselman's parents a closeup picture of a dead pilot which appeared in a Hanoi newspaper.

"I wanted to identify it as Steve but my husband didn't want to. Officially we did not identify him but I have always felt sure it was Steve," she said.

In March of 1978, Musselman's status was changed to killed in action.

The family conducted memorial services at Lewisville, Ark., and a gravestone placed in the family plot.

Musselman, a 1969 Southern Methodist University graduate, married Geanne Schnatz of Jacksonville, Fla., in March of 1972.

He shipped out to Vietnam three months later.

His widow, now living in San Diego, Calif., was notified Monday of her husband's identification and immediately telephoned her mother-in-law.

"A commander Michaels and Chief Wallace telephoned me asking directions to my home to come out and tell me in person, but I told them that my daughter-in-law had called to tell me," Mrs. Musselman said.

She said she did not know when son's remains would arrive but that he would be buried at Lewisville.

Musselman is survived by his widow, his mother and four brothers.

His father, Randall, died within a year after his son was shot down.

Former Dallas county judge dead at 79

DALLAS (AP)—Walter Lewis "Lew" Sterrett, a power-wielding political practitioner during his 26-year tenure as Dallas County judge, died Tuesday of an apparent heart attack. He was 79.

Sterrett, who retired from county politics after his defeat in 1974, underwent surgery last week to implant a heart pacemaker.

As county judge, Sterrett wielded considerable muscle with in the Democratic Party's county organization and proved to be influential in the rise and fall of various officeholders and office-seekers.

"To run a good government, you have to furnish strong leadership," Sterrett once said of his career.

"Now, a lot of people called me a dictator, but I never wanted to be a dictator. I never wanted power, because power will destroy you," he said.

In all, Sterrett spent 52 years as a county employee—half of that as county judge.

During his tenure as judge, Sterrett fought successfully for the expansion and construction of Parkland Memorial Hospital and for construction of an additional courthouse building.

He organized support for and oversaw the organization of the county's welfare department and construction of a juvenile home. He was particularly proud of his effort in the creation of a mental diagnostic center which allowed for the separate incarceration of suspected mentally disturbed prisoners.

He also pushed for modernization of the county sheriff's office and insisted it be given its first fleet of automobiles.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday at Park Cities Baptist Church.

Store clerk shoots robber with own gun

AUSTIN (AP)—Zack Coombes might lose his job for killing a robber, but he still thinks he made the right decision.

Coombes fired three shots into the robber shortly after midnight Tuesday at a Northeast Austin 7 Eleven. He used his own gun, a violation of Southland Corp. policy.

"When he ordered me into the cooler, I had to choose between my life and my job," he said. "Under the circumstances, the choice was obvious."

Austin police found Mark Gundy, 26, of San Antonio, dead in high weeds near the store. He was carrying the money Coombes handed over at gunpoint.

Coombes, 39, said he cooperated with the robber—Southland policy—until he was ordered into a cold vault. It was at that moment when Coombes flashed back to the 1967 shooting death of a friend, a convenience store clerk shot to death in a cold storage vault.

The robber motioned toward the cooler and said, "Now go on in there," Coombes recalled.

Block is confident of satisfactory farm bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block is confident Congress will produce a farm bill that will be satisfactory to both consumers and farmers.

But a consumer group is worried that the Senate, which is expected to take up the measure soon, could wind up accepting the version of the farm bill as it now stands — which calls for spicier dairy, sugar and peanut provisions than it says are necessary.

The group, called the Community Nutrition Institute, wants the Senate to amend the bill when it is brought up for final floor action.

Block, in a telephone interview with a group of farm broadcasters, said Monday the farm legislation that will be passed by Congress will represent "a tremendous turnaround" from current and previous law.

In supporting the administration's legislative plan, Block has indicated the sugar support level in pending legislation is too high and has pushed for less costly dairy provisions and a phase-out of the government's peanut program.

"I see the new farm bill as moving us into an era where agriculture will not be in a position to be criticized by anyone for getting massive government subsidies and things like that," he said.

"We've heard that story before.

"It'll move us into an era where agriculture will be freer to operate than it's ever been before, a time when agriculture will have a minimum amount of federal support and subsidy," he said.

"We're going to give the free market system a chance to operate," Block said.

"I think we'll really be coming out of this session (of Congress) with a farm bill that will be bringing the costly parts of the old farm bills under control and put us into an era where agriculture will not be in a position to be criticized at all for its supports from the federal government," he said.

According to the institute, which is a nonprofit consumer advocacy organization, the Senate's version of the farm bill includes a sugar program which, by itself, would cost consumers between $2.1 billion and $3.3 billion in higher food costs in the coming year.

The institute said the dairy portion of the farm bill should be amended so semiannual adjustments in federal milk price supports are eliminated, which it said would save consumers about $400 million in the 1981-82 budget year.

Finally, the group said the peanut allotment and poundage quota system be "scrapped as an antiquated, inflationary support system" and that if the Senate provision is approved it would "add over $200 million in consumer peanut costs" in 1982.

The Agriculture Department says the number of cattle being fattened for slaughter in the major beef states on July 1 totaled 9.57 million head on July 1, down 1 percent from a year ago.

According to department records, that was the smallest number of cattle being fed for the slaughter market on July 1 in six years.

Further, the quarterly report said Monday that marketings of fed cattle in the 23 major states during April-June totaled 5.59 million head, a 1 percent decrease from the same period of last year. That was the smallest since 1975.

The 23 states surveyed in the quarterly report account for about 95 percent of the nation's beef production.

Looking ahead, the analysis said cattle feedlots operators are expected to sell 6.14 million head during the July-September quarter. That would be 7 percent more than in the third quarter of 1980.

By states, the July 1 feedlot cattle inventory and its percentage of a year earlier, included:

Arizona, 276,000 head on July 1 and 97 percent of a year earlier; California, 535,000 and 91; Colorado, 695,000 and 100; Idaho, 213,000 and 91; Illinois, 430,000 and 96; Indiana, 200,000 and 100; Iowa, 1,140,000 and 97; Kansas, 1,260,000 and 111; Michigan, 125,000 and 89; Minnesota, 390,000 and 107; Missouri, 63,000 and 107; Montana, 40,000 and 84; and Nebraska, 1,410,000 and 111.

Also, New Mexico, 118,000 and 78; North Dakota, 45,000 and 105; Ohio, 110,000 and 88; Oklahoma, 258,000 and 102; Oregon, 65,000 and 163; Pennsylvania, 43,000 and 91; South Dakota, 345,000 and 95; Texas, 1,530,000 and 95; Washington, 164,000 and 95; and Wisconsin, 115,000 and 97.

Production of farm-grown catfish rose to 4.18 million pounds in June, up 16 percent from a year ago, says the Agriculture Department.

Prices paid to producers averaged 66 cents a pound during the month, one cent more than in June 1980, the department's Crop Reporting Board said Monday.

Farmers face record U.S. wheat harvest

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is becoming clearer in each Agriculture Department analysis that another record U.S. wheat harvest and a huge world supply are bearing heavily on American farmers.

"Most crops in the Northern Hemisphere are expected to be larger than a year ago, with the biggest increases in the United States and Canada," the department's Economic Research Service said Tuesday in a preliminary report.

"The Soviet Union's crop may be up only slightly from last year, so Soviet import demand is likely to remain strong. This factor, combined with strong demand from other importing countries, notably China and India, suggests that global wheat trade may top last year's by 7 percent or more."

Currently, U.S. wheat production is estimated at 2.81 billion bushels, up 19 percent from the record 1980 harvest.

Exports could rise to a record of about 1.73 billion bushels, the report said. Also, the use of wheat as feed for livestock is expected to gain sharply.

"But the enormous crop will still likely raise carryover stocks (the amount left over) about 150 million bushels from a year earlier," the report said.

As a result of the price of wheat at the farm is expected to average $3.70 to $4.10 a bushel and "perhaps averaging below last year's $3.96" a bushel, it said.

In a related report, the government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said the Soviet Union's rain-soaked grain harvest "dramatically improved" the past week as warmer, drier weather prevailed over much of the Ukraine, the country's agricultural land.

Senate resumes oil tax debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A working couple with two children and earning $30,000 a year would realize $1,142 tax cut from 1981 through 1984 from the Ways and Means Committee bill, compared with $1,079 in Reagan's plan. The figures assume economic conditions would allow the third installment of the tax reduction.

Either bill would start cutting personal taxes on Oct. 1.

In addition to cutting tax rates, the House bill would reduce the "marriage penalty" faced by many two-earner couples, raise the standard deduction, boost the earned-income credit for poor working families, increase tax incentives for savings, repeal estate taxes for all but a handful of the wealthiest families and slash business taxes.

The committee plans to give formal approval to the bill Thursday, which would send it to the House for debate next week.

The Senate has been debating Reagan's plan for a week.

The latest snag was the oil-tax amendment, which would gradually exempt all newly discovered oil from the 1980 "windfall-profits" tax. Finance Committee Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan., who proposed the amendment, said the exemption would spur increased exploration and production of domestic oil.

Liberal Democrats were especially upset that Republicans were pushing relief for the oil industry only a few hours after the Senate rejected an effort to retain a $122 minimum monthly Social Security benefit for 3 million people.

The Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means Committee completed work early today on the largest tax cut in history after offering to compromise with President Reagan on reducing individual taxes in three consecutive years.

The committee voted to allow the third-year tax cut only if inflation, interest rates and the federal deficit are reduced to the levels forecast by the Reagan administration for 1983. The proposal was rejected by the president's advisers.

The committee plan also would give a bigger share of tax relief to families earning less than $50,000 a year.

While the House panel was rushing to finish work in time for floor action before the August recess, Senate debate bogged down on a tax bill to Reagan's liking.

Liberal Democrats were trying to block a vote on a Republican proposal to cut oil-industry taxes about $20 billion over the next decade.

The Senate bill gives Reagan the full three-year, 25 percent, across-the-board cut in personal rates that he asked. The two sure years of the House plan would cut taxes an average 15 percent.

The Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that Reagan's across-the-board reduction would give taxpayers with incomes between $15,000 and $20,000 a year an average 24.5 percent cut in taxes between this Oct. 1 and the end of 1984, compared with 28.8 percent under the House bill. The average reduction in the $50,000-to-$100,000 bracket would be 25.7 percent in Reagan's plan and 21.7 percent in the House version.

Israelis bomb southern Lebanon

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli warplanes bombed Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon again today, hitting trails used to transport arms and guerrillas, the military command said.

Lebanese provincial authorities reported 15 people killed or wounded.

A communiqué from the Tel Aviv command said the trails attacked were in the Kassmieh region along the Litani River and the Zahran estuary. It said the pilots reported accurate hits and that all planes returned safely from the raid.

Lebanese provincial officials said the jets struck at a newly repaired section of the Kassmieh bridge on the Litani which was devastated in a lightning Israeli air strike last Thursday. They said the jets destroyed several moving cars, killing or wounding 15 occupants.

Israeli gunboats also shelled Palestinian guerrilla targets in southern Lebanon today, the Tel Aviv command said. It denied a Palestinian report of ground raids into southern Lebanon.

The command said northern Israeli settlements today, paid a condolence call on the family of one of the five Israelis killed in guerrilla shelling, and pledged an end to the Palestinian barrages.

The Israeli government agreed Tuesday to indirect negotiations with Lebanese authorities — but not with the Palestinian guerrillas. Prime Minister Menachem Begin refused Habib's call for an immediate cease-fire, saying it would only give the guerrillas time to regroup and renew their attacks in a few weeks or months.

In Beirut, an official of the Palestine Liberation Organization said the guerrillas would stop shelling Israeli border towns only if Israel halted all military activity in Lebanon including reconnaissance flights.

Israel has said repeatedly that such flights are necessary to keep an eye on the guerrillas, and preemptive or punitive attacks are necessary to keep down the level of Palestinian attacks on Israel.

Lady Diana Spencer: The blushing princess

LONDON (AP) — With unflagging poise, an easy smile and a winsome blush, Lady Diane Spencer charmed her prince and the nation whose throne she is destined to share.

Lady Diana, 20-year-old daughter of an earl and descendant of four English kings, exchanged privileged obscurity for worldwide celebrity to become Prince Charles' bride on July 29.

Before her Feb. 24 engagement to the world's most eligible bachelor, Diana was an assistant kindergarten teacher sharing a $190,000 London apartment with three other young women.

She drove a six-year-old car and worked Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, helping 50 children up to the age of 5 make cakes and play games. For diversion, she went to the movies or met friends at a local pub.

Today, she is known to millions as "Lady Di," her photograph graces countless tea towels, calendars and coffee mugs, and her brow-sweeping hairstyle is a national fad.

On her marriage, she becomes the Princess of Wales.

As Charles' intended, Diana was dogged for months by a platoon of reporters, one of whom slipped into the kindergarten through a bathroom window. The press coverage was, and is, massive and largely unrestrained.

One photograph that displayed Diana's legs through a transparent skirt was said to have brought her to tears. When she appeared in public in a strapless dress, it was from the a public declaration of her untainted past, to announce in effect that she was a virgin.

Through it all, Diana never showed signs of being rattled beyond an appealing tendency to blush.

Although their families were close and Diana actually grew up on the grounds of Queen Elizabeth II's private estate, Sandringham, her first real meeting with Charles was in November 1977.

He had come to the Spencer ancestral home at Althorp for a pheasant shoot. As Diana remembers it, they met "in the middle of a plowed field."

She was 16 years old at the time, and Charles, then 28, was dating Diana's eldest sister, Sarah, five years her senior. Sarah would eventually take herself out of the running as a prospective bride by declaring in a magazine interview that she was not in love with Charles.

Both Charles and Diana have said their infatuation developed into love while Diana was visiting the royal estate in Balmoral, Scotland, in July 1979. She was lunching with the queen when the family received the shattering news that Earl Mountbatten of Burma, the prince's beloved "Uncle Dickie," had been murdered by Irish Republican Army guerrillas.

During that time of tragedy, Diana was drawn intimately into the family web of her future husband. Lady Diana Frances Spencer was born July 1, 1961, in her parents' bedroom on the first floor of Park House, a spacious country home rented by her father on the Sandringham estate in Norfolk.

She is one of four children — three girls and a boy — of the eighth Earl Spencer, former equerry, or royal household official, to Queen Elizabeth, and the former Frances Ruth Burke Roche, younger daughter of the fourth Baron Fermoy and a lady in waiting to the Queen Mother.
