Council adopts 'austere' $9.9 million budget

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council adopted what City Manager Don Davis called an "austerity budget" of $9.9 million for fiscal 1981-82 at its meeting Tuesday night.

The council also passed a property tax hike to finance street improvements, and passed some flood control measures which will enable city residents to apply for low-cost flood insurance.

Both the tax hike and budget passage were subjected to brief public hearings before council members unanimously approved them. Two citizens showed up for the hearings and neither one addressed the council.

Municipal voters were foretold of the 15-cent tax rate hike back in December when they passed a $2.3 million bond issue — $1.1 million of which are slated for street repairs.

The city's property tax rate now stands at $1.35 for each $100 valuation, bringing the tax levy to $2,349,687 for the fiscal year.

This compares with a levy of $987,136 ten years ago and a 1971 tax rate of $1.40 per $100 valuation, according to statistics contained within the 1981-82 budget.

The budget, which Davis worked on over the summer with the council, establishes nearly $10 million in expenditures for the fiscal year beginning October 1.

It is, as Davis pointed out, a budget marked by stable revenues and escalating costs, necessitating some cut-backs, most notably in the area of capital outlays.

It also is a budget whose various component funds will reach the end of the fiscal year with smaller reserves than they began the year with — "which means, in essence, we're operating in the red," Davis said.

"Obviously you can't continue that way," Davis told The Herald. "The old well's going to run dry at some point in time." To prevent this, the city would have to either cut back on expenditures or find ways to increase revenues.

The budget will "need close monitoring during the year," Davis told the council, suggesting a special council session might be held at the end of the first quarter to study the budget's progress.

Davis closed his budget presentation to the council by saluting the council members' efforts to help him prepare the budget. He said the council had spent more time with him in budget preparations than any other council he'd worked for.

In other action, the council passed an ordinance delineating the flood-prone areas of the city and stating what construction precautions must be taken by homeowners in the flood-prone areas. With the passage of the ordinance, homeowners become eligible to apply for low-cost flood insurance.

Community Development Director Bill Hall explained to the council that the flood program is based on a 100-year flood probability for Beals Creek and Big Spring Draw — the city's two sources of flood hazard during periods of heavy rainfall.

It's not known how many people live in the flood-prone areas, or how many have elected to pursue the low-cost insurance, but the insurance will be available for all homeowners in Big Spring, Hall told The Herald.

He said standard insurance rates were applicable prior to Tuesday night's passage of the flood ordinance, and when the ordinance goes into effect (it must be voted on twice, as must all laws) homeowners can purchase flood insurance for premiums averaging about 25 cents per $100 property valuation.

In order to qualify, however, homeowners in the flood hazard area must follow strict construction guidelines which essentially are designed to restrict building in the flood areas, said Hall.

The city incurs no liability for any flood damages suffered by persons following the guidelines in order to get the insurance, according to a provision of the ordinance. Hall pointed out that only twice in the last 100 years have flood waters risen to encompass residential areas — in 1902 and 1957.

Other action taken by the council included: Approving, in a private executive session, the hiring of Dick Wagner & Associates of Roswell, N.M., to prepare with Don Cress & Associates a master plan for the Industrial Park-municipal airport area. Cress will design the airport's new layout, which has been brought about by the expansion of O.I.L. at the adjacent Industrial Park. Wagner will design the proposed expansion of the park along the north side of the airport property.

Both firms will receive a $3,600 fee.

Hearing from the city manager that the city has a "phenomenal" refund rate for its workman's compensation plan. Davis told the council he recently had been handed a check for $106,371 from Jim Parks of Parks Agency — a check that brings the city's three-year refund total (it operates under a three-year plan) to $175,822. Premiums paid by the city for its nearly 300 employees over that same period totalled $324,910, making the city's net cost $149,088 or an average of $49,696 per year.

Davis attributed the low cost to a "tremendous safety program which has reduced on-the-job accidents to virtually nil."

Local youth hospitalized

A 12-year-old Big Spring boy is in stable condition in the intensive care unit at Odessa Medical Center following a motorcycle accident Monday night on Derrick Road.

Chuck A. Coskey, who was riding a 1981 Kawasaki, collided with another motorcycle driven by Michael David Griffith, 14. Coskey was transferred to Malone-Hogan Hospital via Shaffer Ambulance, then taken on to the Odessa Medical Center at 11 p.m. Monday.

He is in the intensive care unit, suffering from head injuries, according to Medical Center personnel.

State Trooper David Hedgpeth was called to the scene of the accident.

Murder cases to be mulled

Two murder cases are among the 16 cases under consideration by a Howard County Grand Jury, which convened today.

The case of Porfirio Rios Jr., who was charged with murder April 5 in connection with the death of Daniel Ruiz, is one of the cases set to be considered today. The other murder case is that of Jeff Johnson, charged with murder Sept. 10, 1980, in the death of Alfoster Jones.

ACLU founder Baldwin dies

OAKLAND, N.J. (AP) — Roger Baldwin, founder of the American Civil Liberties Union and one of its guiding lights over seven decades, died in his sleep early Wednesday at his home here, the ACLU said. He was 97.

Baldwin suffered from emphysema and heart disease, but was active up to his death, holding meetings as recently as last week, said Trudi Schutz, a spokeswoman for the ACLU.

Sadat, Begin agree to reopen negotiations on Palestinians

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin announced today they will resume deadlocked negotiations on Palestinian autonomy on Sept. 23.

They spoke at Sadat's summer home in a news conference broadcast live by Israel Radio. There was no announcement on where the negotiations would take place or what role, if any, the Reagan Administration will play. Begin flies to Washington early next month to meet with President Reagan.

Sadat opened the news conference by saying he and Begin had reached "agreement that we resume the talks for the full autonomy issue ... in the second half of September." Begin, calling resumption of talks "a great achievement," said foreign ministers of the two countries had set Sept. 23-24 as the starting date.

"It is most important to further all the endeavors we have made to achieve peace between our two countries and in the Middle East," Begin said. "We shall do our best."

Begin came to Egypt seeking Sadat's agreement to resume the talks on autonomy for the Palestinians of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip, which Sadat suspended last summer.

Begin contends Egypt is lagging in normalizing relations with Israel in accordance with the U.S.-mediated 1978 Camp David treaty. He wants this speeded up, starting with cultural and economic agreements.

Egypt wants full judicial, executive and legislative powers, in effect a Palestinian state. Israel, fearing its own security will be endangered, favors granting considerably less power.

Sadat said after Egypt and Israel sign an agreement on Palestinian autonomy, they would invite King Hussein of Jordan to join talks for a comprehensive peace in the Middle East.

Reagan sticks to forecast of single-digit inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration and private economists are sticking to their predictions of a single-digit inflation rate for 1981 despite a surge in consumer prices in July.

Led by soaring housing costs, prices last month rose at a 15.3 percent annual rate, the highest in more than a year. But most economists called the increase a temporary phenomenon.

Jerry L. Jordan, a member of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers, said the Consumer Price Index report released Tuesday exaggerated the way housing costs are measured. Jordan said the administration is still "right on track" in its prediction that inflation will rise 9.9 percent this year.

In recent months, when inflation fell well below a 10 percent pace, administration economists warned that prices were bound to show large, temporary jumps, too, but that the general trend would be a gradual easing of inflation.

Inflation has risen at a 9.4 percent annual rate through the first seven months of 1981. Last year, prices rose 12.4 percent.

According to the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, consumer prices in July rose 1.2 percent, the largest monthly increase since March 1980 and the first time in five months that inflation advanced at a double-digit pace.

Mechanical trouble halts Saturn photos

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Mechanical trouble aboard Voyager 2, perhaps caused by a collision with particles from Saturn's rings, interrupted the flow of stunning photographs from the planet today. But scientists said the mission was still a "high-percentage success."

A platform carrying Voyager's cameras apparently got stuck, limiting the cameras' aim, and scientists could not fully analyze the problems until they reviewed all crucial tape recordings, a spokesman said.

"The spacecraft is stable," said spokesman Alan Wood. "Everything is performing all right except for the platform."

"We will miss some photos that were planned between last night and now," he said. "They were ring pictures, some satellite pictures, some ultraviolet observations."

"A good part of the afternoon was to be spent making other optical observations of the planet and the rings. That won't be possible since we can't point the platform in the right direction."

Controllers noticed the problem shortly after 2 a.m. EDT as soon as radio signals with the craft were reacquired once Voyager passed from behind Saturn as seen from earth, Wood said.

Scientists had said that passing through Saturn's rings posed a danger of collision for Voyager with ring particles. A pathfinder spaceship, Pioneer 11, followed the same route safely in 1979 and scientists were confident Voyager would make it too.

Whether Voyager did indeed collide with ring particles had yet to be determined, but Wood said, "We know at least it wasn't a strong hit if there was a hit. We got the radio signal back perfectly on time" once Voyager passed from behind Saturn.

He said scientists hoped to learn from the tape recording made when Voyager 2 was behind Saturn the extent of the platform problem and also whether it occurred before "some crucial pictures" were taken.

Although many of the critical close-up transmissions were received as Voyager 2 approached Saturn, "there were some crucial pictures taken during the ring-plane crossing which we hope is on the tape-recording. That is not quite clear yet," Wood said.

Woman gunned down at Lackland AFB

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Military police, city officers and the FBI today searched a wooded area of Lackland Air Force Base for a suspect who gunned down a woman as she left her civil service job at the base exchange.

Carmelita Garcia Bila, 23, who married Sgt. Wendell Bila one day before, was killed by six bullets fired into her chest about 6:30 p.m. Tuesday as she left the back door of the base exchange.

Her husband, a member of Lackland's Air Force Band of the West, said he was waiting in an automobile in the parking lot when a man in another car shouted his wife's name.

As the victim walked to the second man's car, he pulled a pistol and fired six shots, then fled in a yellow car, witnesses said.

The yellow car later was found abandoned on the east edge of the base.

Joe McAnally, a Lackland spokesman, said the search was centered in a wooded area between Lackland and adjoining Kelly Air Force Base.

An FBI spokesman said agents were attempting to get an arrest warrant from a federal magistrate.

McAnally said it was the first murder at Lackland since the base, the Air Force's only basic training base, was opened in 1941.

4,000 GM layoffs set

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Four thousand auto workers will be laid off for four months next year when a General Motors Corp. assembly plant temporarily closes to convert to production of front-wheel-drive cars, a GM spokesman said.

The shutdown, needed to allow the nation's largest automaker to re-tool its Arlington assembly line, will begin in the spring of 1982. Union officials said they expect the closing in April or May.

Union employees will receive about 95 percent of their salary while laid off, a union official said. The 27-year-old GM plant produces 928 mid-size vehicles a day, including Chevrolet Malibus and Buick Regals.

Refinery to reopen

OKMULGEE, Okla. (AP) — Reopening of the Basin Refining Inc. refinery is set for Sept. 1, nearly two months after its 117 employees were laid off.

The OKC Corp. Liquidating Trust, former owner of the 24,000-barrel-a-day refinery, signed a three-month lease to operate the facility as a contract refining operation, Robert Miller, a trust attorney, said Tuesday.

He said the action was taken to "preserve the refinery and its assets for sale to a third party."

The Midland, Texas-based Basin Refining filed for reorganization June 6 as the trust was preparing to foreclose on the refinery.

The refinery, the eighth largest of the state's 12 refineries, is among the last assets of OKC. Stockholders of the firm voted in May 1980 to liquidate its assets.

Tom Slamans, president of the Okmulgee Chamber of Commerce and an oil jobber, greeted news of the opening guardedly.

"I hope they are not painting false hopes," Slamans said. "In today's refining market, there is real skepticism here that a custom refining operation can survive."

Miller said the refinery will not buy its own crude but has secured contracts to process crude oil for others.

Bulldog kills 5-year-old

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 5-year-old boy apparently bled to death after an attack by a neighbor's pit bulldog, police said today.

An autopsy was ordered performed on the body of Jason Cabe, whom ambulance attendants believe bled to death from a neck bite Tuesday night. His body was discovered in the neighbor's yard at 6:38 p.m. by the dog's owner, Gilbert Gonzales, police said.

There were no witnesses to the attack, according to Brownsville police Sgt. Adam Marks.

Brownsville Justice of the Peace Ed Sarabia opened an inquiry into the child's death and ordered the autopsy.

Joe Wolfe, a neighbor of the Cabe family, said he and several of his neighbors have long worried about dogs running loose in the vicinity.

But police said the fatal attack was the most serious incident involving a dog in recent years in Brownsville.

"It's the first time something like this has happened in my 21 years here," said Marks. "We get people bitten all the time. You know, mailmen and delivery men. But we've never had anything like this."

The child had returned home from his second day of kindergarten and was playing next door with the 1-year-old dog, named "Max," when the attack occurred, said Mrs. Janie Diaz, owner of the home rented by Cabe's mother, Robin Cabe.

"He (Jason) used to play with Max all the time," she said. "Jason liked to throw sticks at dogs so they'd go fetch them."

She said the bulldog had never growled at the Cabe youth or displayed other signs of hostility toward the child.

The dog was seized by animal control authorities after the attack, she said.

Yarbrough indicted

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Former State Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough was indicted by the Travis County grand jury Tuesday for failing to appear Aug. 11 for sentencing on a perjury conviction.

The charge is a third-degree felony and means Yarbrough could face additional criminal charges if attempts to extradite him from Grenada, a Caribbean island, are unsuccessful.

The punishment for failure to appear could be as much as two years to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

ONE DOGPOWER — Colin Ceike, 9, and Hank zoom down a street in Longmont, Colo., in a new twist on the carrot-and-mule trick. Colin said he got the idea to use Hank to pull his skateboard after discovering the dog's love for chasing tennis balls. Colin just suspended a ball from a fishing pole, grabbed the leash and let Hank do the work.

Police Beat Bomb threat investigated

A bomb threat was received by a Holiday Inn employee at midnight, according to the police. Night Auditor Billie Carr told police someone called and said there was an explosive device in the building.

Three officers were dispatched to investigate the threat and were unable to locate a bomb after searching the inn, police said.

Police arrested Edward Ontivero, 25, at 3:33 p.m. Tuesday on a burglary charge after they received a call of a burglary in progress at a 2200 S. Johnson residence.

Howard Walker of Sand Springs told police an employee of his heard a gunshot at about 6:15 p.m. Monday at Walker's 908 W. 3rd place of business. At the same time a yellow pickup was observed driving by, the employee said. Walker said the bullet struck a business sign, causing $300 damage. •Raymond Rodriguez, 26, of N.W. 4th, reported to police the theft of his Honda motorcycle from his property at about 8:25 p.m. Tuesday.

Linda Green of 1511 S. Main reported the theft of a stereo set and cassette tapes worth $500 from his residence at about 1:15 a.m. Tuesday. Police said the thief made entry by breaking into a bedroom window.

Green also reported the theft of her 25-caliber pistol, which she said had been stolen from her home several weeks earlier.

Lynda Morton, 22, of 1615 Cardinal, reported the theft of jewelry, stereo speakers, clothing and other items from her home Tuesday. Entry was made through a window and exit was made through a rear door, according to police reports.

John McMurray, 18, of Sterling City, reported the theft of a tire and tool box containing tools from his truck while it was parked outside Cactus Jack's on the night of Aug. 20. Loss was set at $450.

S.L. Baumgardner, 27, of Notrees, Texas, complained to police that his truck was parked outside the Homestead Inn off I-20 Tuesday morning when someone damaged an arc welder attached to the vehicle.

J.S. Jackson of 1411 E. 19th, reported the theft of two aluminum chairs and a swivel chair from his front porch Monday night.

Annette Hernandez, 12, opened her locker at Goliad Middle School at about 1 p.m. Tuesday and discovered that her $300 silver flute was missing. The case for the flute was in the locker, police reports noted.

Nixon seemed to indicate that he had ordered Fitzgerald's firing.

He was rehired with back pay in 1973 but since has claimed that the Air Force refuses to give him duties that match the job he held before.

The Supreme Court last June 22, in a 4-4 vote affirming a lower court's action, ruled that Nixon and his aides must pay the Halperins for the illegal spying. But, because the votes by the high court do not set precedents under the court's rules, the ruling left unresolved whether Nixon and his aides — and future administrations as well — will be held personally liable for similarly violating the constitutional rights of other Americans.

The court's action in the Halperin case sent it back to a federal trial court for a decision on how much money the Halperins are entitled to.

Air Force proposes radar warning system in Georgia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Air Force proposed today to build an advanced radar warning system in Georgia to guard against possible attack from Soviet submarine-launched ballistic missiles.

The radar system, called Pave Paws, would scan out to about 3,000 miles, looking for signs of submarine missile attack from southeast of the United States.

This would be the third such site. A complex already in operation at Otis Air Force Base, Mass., to cover northern waters from which Soviet missile attack might come. Another is located at Beale Air Force Base in California.

The Air Force said a fourth Pave Paws radar complex will be added later in the southwest United States "to provide full coverage of potential submarine launch areas."

According to the announcement, the Air Force wants to build its third operating system at Robins Air Force Base in Georgia, but would also evaluate a possible alternate location at Moody Air Force Base in Georgia.

When fully in operation in about four years, the Air Force said, the system will require some 200 military and civilian personnel to run and maintain it.

U.S. military experts have estimated that a Soviet missile launch from a submarine in the mid-Atlantic, for example, could strike targets in the United States within nine to 10 minutes. The main potential targets for such weapons would probably be U.S. bomber bases and the brief warning time available places the bomber force at considerable risk. The aim of the Pave Paws system, according to the Air Force, is to reduce that risk and provide instantaneous warning of a submarine missile launch.

The core of the Pave Paws complex is a three-sided radar facility containing phased array antenna elements that can sweep about 240 degrees at distances out to 3,000 miles, according to Air Force specialists.

The phased array system incorporates thousands of small radar antennas coordinated by two big computers.

A secondary mission of the Pave Paws radar is to track satellites in earth orbit as part of the U.S. defensive network operated by the North American Air Defense Command.

U.S. farmers need fair chance to make profit

WASHINGTON, D.C. — For the last two weeks I have been discussing the problems of the American agricultural industry, particularly the relationship between agricultural prices and the problems we face in international trade.

Congressman Charles W. Stenholm
Congressional Comment

This week I would like to consider some possible solutions to these problems. First and foremost, I feel that it is high time that the U.S. government recognize and begin fully to take advantage of the tremendous asset to the American economy that the Agricultural industry represents. Not only has the high productivity of this industry enabled the U.S. economy to develop into the most powerful in the world (since we no longer have to commit a substantial portion of our resources to feeding our people), but also we have become the largest exporter of agricultural products in the world.

This has happened in spite of the fact that, for the most part, we are still operating with a post-World War II trade policy when agricultural trade was essentially a surplus removal operation and was directed mostly toward promoting the economic recovery of Europe and much of Asia. Consequently, the U.S. has not usually been an aggressive trader and the success of our export policies has more often than not been measured by the tonnage exported rather than whether or not those exports have been profitable to U.S.

agriculture and the economy as a whole.

It is my opinion that an aggressive export policy is essential to the economic health of the total economy as well as the farm sector. There was some indication of a tougher stance on behalf of agricultural exports during the Tokyo Round of the Multilateral Trade Negotiations during 1978-79.

Some favorable trade policies were adopted for U.S. agriculture during this period. However, this is a continuing battle and I am concerned that, at this time, there is not a high ranking member of the office of the U.S. Trade Representative with direct responsibility for agricultural issues. I have introduced legislation to correct this situation by creating a position of Deputy Trade Representative for Agriculture.

This bill would not create the need for additional personnel but would upgrade the status of agricultural issues to the level which they deserve.

Negotiating favorable trade policies is only half the battle; substantial changes in domestic agricultural policy must be made in order that trade will take place on a profitable basis.

One of the first things that must happen is that some steps must be taken to correct the periodic over-supply situations that we find ourselves in more often than we should.

The "Farmer Owned Reserve" created in the 1977 Farm Bill has been fairly successful in this respect, however, it is not sufficient to correct supply-demand imbalance alone.

There are times, and I believe this is one of them, when we need additional measures to correct an adverse situation. I believe that legislation requiring the Secretary of Agriculture to offer a "set-aside" or a diverted acreage program along with realistically higher loan rates would be a step towards solving this problem.

This would address two of our major problems: it would be a positive move toward balancing supply and demand and would establish a floor under farm prices which would move us back toward more profitable levels.

Five fruit flies found in Los Angeles suburb

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Five fruit flies found in a Los Angeles suburb raised the possibility of a vast expansion of the pest's infestation, while the United States reached an agreement with Japan that may require that fresh fruit from California be fumigated.

Test results, expected today, should tell if the crop-destroying Mediterranean fruit fly has leaptfrogged to Southern California, home of lush orange groves. However, agricultural officials already are laying plans for an emergency spraying of pesticide.

It was not known immediately if the flies were fertile.

"If these flies turn out not to be sterile, it is certainly going to be bad news for us," said Bill Edwards, deputy Los Angeles County agriculture commissioner.

How the flies got to Los Angeles isn't known. Annie Zeller of the medfly project said, "The flies don't travel very far, but people do." The five flies were found in a backyard in the Los Angeles suburb of Baldwin Park, the medfly eradication project said Tuesday — 260 miles south of where the infestation boundary had been.

Meanwhile, in Tokyo, U.S. officials said they averted a threat by Japan to ban imports of all California fruit, although imports from quarantined areas still will be blocked.

The United States announced it had agreed to issue certificates upon request to Japanese importers that California fruit from non-infested areas was free from the pest. However, the standards for certification were to be set by agreement between the exporters and Japanese importers and a U.S. Embassy spokesman said, importers were expected to ask that California lemons, oranges and other fruits be fumigated or otherwise disinfected before shipment to Japan.

Millionaire cancels religious shows

DALLAS (AP) — Eccentric Texas millionaire Stanley Marsh No. 3 says he's got nothing against religion, but he's pulling all paid religious programming off the air at his television stations in El Paso and Amarillo because some of the shows are too political.

"In no way is this a movement against any religion. I have no axe to grind against certain ministers," Marsh said Tuesday. "I respect people with strong beliefs. But we have to remain neutral."

An El Paso minister says the cancellations may violate the constitutional guarantee of freedom of religion.

But Marsh says the programs were taken off the air "because of the unneutral connotations" expressed by some religious groups that have let the shows become "political forums" for "religious profiteering."

"We decided it would be better not to sell time to political groups. It would be presumptuous of us to put ourselves in the position of having to decide which ones are political and which ones aren't," Marsh said.

Rev. Joe E. Trull, pastor of the First Baptist Church in El Paso, says he was notified in a letter last week that his Sunday services, broadcast on KVIA-TV for 10 years, would be taken off the air.

Amtrak changing routes to cut costs

By H. JSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak is restructuring its routes for the first time in two years to eliminate several unprofitable trains while keeping most of the nationwide rail passenger network intact.

The changes, intended to cope with federal budget cuts, were to be decided today as Amtrak's executive board met with the railroad's staff to hear route proposals.

Amtrak President Alan S. Boyd said the railroad's system must be reduced about 15 percent because Congress limited Amtrak's federal subsidy to $735 million for the upcoming fiscal year — $107 million less than Amtrak had said it needed to run the entire system.

Several of the route changes are ones long expected, such as curtailment of the "Interamerican" between Chicago and Texas and elimination of the Washington-Chicago "Shenandoah," according to sources who asked not to be identified.

The restructuring is considered minor on the national scale compared with changes announced in August 1979, when six major long-distance trains were eliminated.

The new routes and other changes would go into effect Oct. 1, the beginning of the 1982 fiscal year.

Sources said a major portion of the adjustments was expected to center on shifts in the routes of the "Empire Builder" running between Chicago and Seattle and the "Broadway Limited" between New York and Chicago via Washington.

The changes are aimed at making those two trains more efficient, while at the same time cutting back on several money-losing trains that travel along generally the same route.

Sources said the restructuring includes: —Discontinuing three trains — the "Shenandoah," the "Cardinal" from New York to Chicago via Washington and Cincinnati, and the "North Star" from Chicago to Duluth, Minn.

—Replacing the Cincinnati-Chicago leg of the "Cardinal," as required by a congressional mandate.

—Rerouting the Washington-Chicago leg of the "Broadway Limited" to pick up other areas losing service by the "Cardinal" and "Shenandoah."

—Reducing the "North Star" to service between Duluth and St. Paul, with the St. Paul-Chicago leg absorbed by the "Empire Builder."

—Cutting the number of daily trains now running only between Chicago and Milwaukee. Milwaukee.

—Eliminating the San Antonio-Laredo, Texas, portion of the "Interamerican," which would be cut from daily runs to three a week south of St. Louis.

Previous cost-cutting programs announced by Amtrak included a 25 percent reduction of its headquarters staff and changes in its food services. Under the new plan, trains will carry prepared food similar to that served on airlines, instead of providing a full-service kitchen.

Fly in Gov. Brown's soup?

The Medfly invasion that has damaged California's fruit crop has also done untold harm to the U.S. Senate bid of Gov. Jerry Brown Jr.

Brown has assured Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and former Vice President Walter Mondale that he will not be a candidate for president in 1984.

BY GIVING the Democratic Presidential hopefuls advance notice of his plans, the governor hopes that the two will support his bid for the U.S. Senate next year.

Brown, the West Coast guru of New Wave politics, has made an effort to rebuild traditional political bridges he destroyed while proving independence of party affiliation.

THE MAN WHO once refused to attend a conference of U.S. Governors meeting in his own state, now plays an active role in the group. But Brown's Senate plans have crashed head on with the Med Fly juggernaut.

WHEN THE FLIES were first found in California, Brown opposed use of Malathion spray on environmental grounds.

Californians who agreed with the governor's stance probably were already in his corner, so he picked up little support with the move.

BUT THE SUBSEQUENT damage to California's fruit and vegetable crops backfired on Brown, recreating the image that he turns routine political decisions into eco-disaster films.

Perhaps Brown can recoup his losses by election time, but voters are sure to ask themselves: Would you buy an avocado from this man?

Spoiler strategy

Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — The aerial gunfight with Libya provides a model for meeting this country's central international responsibility. In dealing with the Soviet Union, the U.S. should deliberately pursue a spoiler strategy.

A spoiler strategy would put pressure on the weak links in the chain of security assets recently forged by the Soviet Union. The U.S. would advertise to friends and allies, in a relatively economical way, its willingness to defend their interests as well as our interests. To the carrot that already tempts Moscow to parley with Washington, there would be added the most powerful of sticks — the stick that denies Russia irresistibly cheap openings for aggrandizement.

The Russians, for most of the past decade, were able to have their cake and eat it at the same time. They maintained a steady military buildup. Operating on their own, or through proxies, they expanded their influence in Africa, the Persian Gulf, Southeast Asia and Central America. But the U.S. — first because of over-commitment in Vietnam, and then because of reaction to the defeat there — proved unwilling to take effective countermeasures. Instead, American diplomacy, in the last years of Nixon as under Jimmy Carter, centered around efforts to reach agreement with Moscow on arms control and trade.

Success has its costs, however — even for the Russians. In the course of extending their reach, the Soviet Union accumulated liabilities as well as assets. Libya is a notable example. Col. Moammar Kadafi has helped the Russians by stirring trouble against regimes friendly to the U.S. in North Africa (Morocco and Tunisia), in Central Africa (Chad, Nigeria and the Sudan), the Middle East (Egypt and Israel), and the Persian Gulf (Saudi Arabia).

But Libya is vulnerable to pressure, and Kadafi himself might easily be swept away by a military coup. So it was entirely appropriate for the U.S. to challenge, by having naval maneuvers there, his claim that the Gulf of Sidra belonged to Libya. It was entirely appropriate for American planes to shoot down any Libyan aircraft threatening those maneuvers. A continuing squeeze on Kadafi also makes good sense. It denies opportunities to the Russians, and is a relatively cheap way of telling the Moroccans and the Tunisians, and the Egyptians and the Sudanese and the Saudis, that the U.S. cares about their security interests.

Cuba presents the same kind of opening. Fidel Castro has sustained Marxist regimes in Angola and Ethiopia. His minions have a toehold with the Sandinista government in Nicaragua. They are threatening to make trouble elsewhere in Latin America. Nobody, not even the silliest peacenik, can effectively argue that Cuban security depends on Southern or Eastern Africa. No. What Castro has been doing is the work of Moscow, pure and simple.

But Cuba and Castro are also vulnerable. So the Reagan Administration is correct in framing policies for Southern Africa and Central America that aim at ending the Cuban presence in those areas. The U.S. should tighten — not loosen — the economic embargo on Cuba, for that makes Russia pay more for Castro's survival. And if Castro tries to export his problem by driving out a new bunch of refugees, Washington should turn them away from our shores, the better to keep the pressure bottled up in Cuba.

Similar stances can be taken with regard to other Soviet proxies — for example, South Yemen on the Red Sea and Vietnam in Southeast Asia. Nor is the Soviet Union itself immune from a spoiler strategy. For example, Russia may have a "window of opportunity" when this country's land-based intercontinental missiles can be wiped out by Soviet blockbusters. But that doesn't mean the U.S. has to bury its countermissile — the MX — underground at ruinous expense. Why not store the MX in present silos and build the B-1 bomber and many, many more cruise missiles?

The window might stay open, but the risks of trying to shoot through it — which are already high since the U.S. has sea-based and air-based missiles — would be increased substantially. The MX would oblige the Russians to defend their own missiles by making them mobile — a feat not so easy for Russia. The cruise missile would make the Russians spend vast sums for a new kind of air defense.

The Big Spring Herald Mailbag

Ex-teacher says we get what we expect

Dear Editor:

I appreciated your comments on teaching that appeared in Monday's Herald. Teaching is considered as one of the professions, but sadly teachers are not paid as other professionals. A few years ago when I was still teaching in public school, my sister sent me a bumper sticker which read

"Education pays ... except for teachers." That is only too true.

I don't feel, however, that a poor salary is the main reason that many teachers become disappointed in their careers. Teachers today receive very little respect and this in itself is cause enough for "teacher burn-out." Before a young person can understand respect for a teacher, he must understand respect for his parents and adults in general. In this regard we Americans fail badly. When I was teaching high school students, I had some to tell me that a teacher had to "earn" the respect of her students. Rubbish! Even if the teacher as a person fails in his or her performance in some way, the position that he or she holds should still be respected.

I enjoyed the years that I taught, and in that time I encountered very few "rotten apples." The reason may have been that I didn't expect to find many. Too often we get what we expect.

I am sad that education today is held in low esteem. One is almost embarrassed to admit to being an "educator," and that is wrong. From earliest times teachers have been considered as the backbone of society. It has always been an honorable profession. But many teachers fail to demand any more of themselves than they demand of their students. In order to get the teaching profession back into step with other professions, we must have people with strong convictions — moral, ethical, professional — who will stand up for those convictions. Maybe then we will see the pendulum swing back in favor of teachers, students and education.

Around the rim The art of smart

Tina Miller

Imbedded into our American heritage are stories of families who work together for a common goal. From pioneer families who trudge across blazing deserts in a covered wagon and build a house of sod, to Mr. and Mrs. Modern, who remodel their own den and paint the kitchen in one evening, the tradition continues.

Granted, there probably are couples who work well together. The handyman husband hefts the supportive beams into place while the resourceful wife does all the easy jobs like install the carpet and cut the paneling to fit the wall.

WHETHER SUCH TALES are truth or fable is irrelevant. The simple fact is: at my house it just doesn't work that way. After months of discussion and planning of such earth-shaking things as: "what color shall we paint the walls" and "where should we put the light switches," we finally start to begin to get ready to commence.

The patient husband, knowing full well that his wife always hits the nail on the thumb, is resigned to doing most of the work himself. But, he generously gives her a paint brush to play with and keep her out of his hair. He then carefully removes all objects on which she might harm herself, such as saws and drills, and leaves her to dabble contentedly in the paint bucket.

Checking on her occasionally, he will find that she paints an average of one cabinet per hour. Being a wise husband who would rather not have a bucket of paint dumped on his head, he does not ask "What's taking you so long?" He knows she has to stop and wash her hands every time paint drips on them, so he just smiles and tells her what a good job she is doing. Never mind that the paint runs in a few places and she missed the corner by the window. After all, she is helping — isn't she?

WHEN ALL THE WORK is done, husband and wife step back to admire their handiwork. While it doesn't look exactly like the picture in the decorating book, it came out well enough. The handyman, knowing he has done most of the work, smiles condescendingly at his wife with paint in her hair and says "Yes dear, you helped a lot."

The not-so-dumb wife, however, knows he thinks he did most of the work and wonders how long it will be before he catches on to the helpless act. Meanwhile, his ego has gotten a boost, and she is free to plan the next project.

Ex-Marine sold violence

WASHINGTON — John Dutcher is a member of the notorious Terpil-Wilson gang of international gun-runners and cutthroats — an aggregation of former CIA and military men who have sold their services to some of the world's sleaziest dictators. So far, Dutcher has escaped the spotlight, but it's time he was exposed to public scrutiny.

Dutcher is a rugged, 6-foot, 40-year-old ex-Marine who has been described by associates as a dangerous man. He once bragged to New York undercover detectives that he had been a hired assassin for foreign governments. He said he was proud of his deadly occupation and in fact hoped his children would follow in his footsteps.

How much of this was true and how much simply braggadocio is not certain. In any case, an unsubstantiated confession of crimes overseas is not enough to hang a man in this country, and Dutcher in fact is not wanted for any violation of American laws.

What little is known about Dutcher comes from law-enforcement officials, secret Justice Department files and interviews with his former associates. I have a personal interest in him: An inside source told me Dutcher may have some link to, or knowledge of, an alleged hit list that includes the name of my associate Dale Van Atta, who has been investigating the Terpil-Wilson operation for almost a year now.

An episode in the summer of 1979 illustrates both the equivocal nature and deadly potential of Dutcher's activities. He and another man were hired to bring two Ecuadorians back to the United States — dead or alive. The hit men's employer was a bail bondsman. According to a reliable source, the two Ecuadorians had been arrested for heroin smuggling and had jumped bail of $100,000 apiece.

Dutcher and his associate spent two months in Ecuador and reportedly came back with two death certificates attesting to the fugitives' demise, as well as news articles indicating the pair may have been blown up in a car. But there is reason to believe that the two Ecuadorian bail-jumpers are still alive and that Dutcher succeeded in conning his employer.

Dutcher's association with Frank Terpil and Ed Wilson apparently dates to early 1978, when he was recruited as part of a team that would teach the dark arts to Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi's personal guards and terrorists. According to secret government files, Dutcher and four other American mercenaries flew to Libya in February 1978.

Dutcher returned from Libya in May and went to work for one of Wilson's Virginia corporations, according to statements he made later to undercover operatives in New York. He said he also frequented the Hunters Lodge, a hotel in Crewe, England, owned by Terpil.

The only time Dutcher's name surfaced in print was in The New York Times of Dec. 24, 1979. In a story on the arrest of Terpil and another associate, the Times reported: "A third man, John Dutcher, whom (the district attorney) called a 'self-proclaimed assassin,' was also arrested at the Hilton and held as a material witness."

It was to New York detectives shortly before his arrest that Dutcher boasted of being an international assassin. Though Terpil and the other man were charged and eventually convicted, Dutcher was released. Terpil fled the country.

A month later, interviewed by federal officials, Dutcher toned down his background considerably. He did not boast of any prowess as a murderer, but said instead that he had been "a mercenary specializing in protection, training and hostage retrieval missions for foreign governments, mostly in South America." Significantly, perhaps, Dutcher's lawyer was present at this interview.

Indeed, Dutcher apparently tried to cast himself in the role of an injured innocent. "Dutcher stated he currently is negotiating for a position as a lobbyist in Washington, D.C., but recent publicity may have hurt his employment prospects," the Justice Department files state.

HOT BUT CHEAP: It's a pleasure to report that one of the most important operations in government — the hotline between Moscow and Washington — is not only efficient but a bargain as well. Millions of dollars and lives depend on its successful functioning, yet its basic cost is $1,275 a month — less than a government agency spends on a single middle-echelon paper-shuffler.

The hotline, first proposed by former Parade magazine editor Jess Gorkin, was installed in 1963. Few Americans realize how it works. It is not a telephone, but a teletype. The line connects Etam, W. Va., and Lvov, U.S.S.R., by commercial satellite leased from ITT for $1,275 monthly. From Etam, a cable runs directly to the Pentagon, which is in direct contact with the White House.

The teletype is checked regularly by the Soviet and American technicians who man it around the clock. They send each other news, weather reports and other routine items to test the line.

There's also a backup system, tied into the Soviets' Molniya satellites, which can beam into a receiver at Fort Detrick, Md.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have always believed that good always overcomes evil, but recently I have begun to wonder about this. Do you believe that if a person always tried to do good that things will go well for him? — Mrs. T.D.A.

DEAR MRS. T.D.A.: Ultimately we know that good will triumph over evil, because some day Christ will come again to rule with righteousness. When that day comes Satan will be destroyed and every evil will be judged. "Behold, I am coming soon! My reward is with me, and I will give to everyone according to what he has done" (Revelation 22:12).

But in the meantime we live in a world which is still often in the grip of evil forces. God is at work in this world in many ways, and yet as long as we are on this earth we will be engaged in a spiritual battle. "For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the powers of this dark world and against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly realms" (Ephesians 6:12).

Therefore (to answer your question) there are times when it looks as if evil is winning out, and good is not necessarily rewarded. This is not always the case, of course, but we need to take sin and evil and Satan very seriously. When we do, we will see afresh our need to depend on Christ every day.

Think of some of the Old Testament prophets like Habakkuk and Daniel. Habakkuk saw evil and injustice apparently triumphing all around him, and cried, "How long, O Lord, must I call for help, but you do not listen?" (Habakkuk 1:2). God has to show him that evil would eventually be destroyed in God's timing, and therefore God could be trusted. Or again think of Daniel. Evil men conspired against him, and because of their trickery Daniel was cast into the den of lions. And yet "no wound was found on him, because he had trusted in his God" (Daniel 6:23).

Those of us who belong to Jesus Christ are called to obey him and be faithful to him above all else. "Do not repay anyone evil for evil ... 'It is mine to avenge; I will repay,' says the Lord" (Romans 12:17, 19).

Blood platelet problem causes bruises

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I went to my doctor for bruises and pinpoint red spots all over my body. He had blood tests run and found my platelet count was quite low. A blood specialist said I had idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura. I was put on prednisone in the hospital, then sent home. My dosage was reduced, and in a few days my platelet count was down again to 10,000. I had to re-enter the hospital for removal of my spleen and was kept on the medicine. Recently, the count was found to be dropping again.

I'll unscramble that long name first. "Thrombocytes" is another name for blood platelets, the little cells that help us form clots when we are cut. The "penia" means there has been a drop in those platelets, and "idiopathic" means that your doctors cannot determine why this has happened. Purpura refers to the resultant bruising because of the low platelet count. That is idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura.

What is known is that some factor in the blood is coating your platelets, thus marking them for removal by your spleen. That factor may be an antibody against the platelets. So the first step was to try to stop the platelets from being coated with the antibodies and being destroyed. That was the reason for giving you the predni-some.

Since that did not seem to be working well, the next step was removal of your spleen, the platelet-removal organ. This had been done for you. You can get along without a spleen.

If this doesn't work, and if the platelet count should drop to dangerously low levels, to the point, for example, where spontaneous bleeding occurs, then other medicines can be used to actually stop the formation of the antibodies. These include some strange drug names — vincristine, cyclophosphamide and azathioprine.

On the other hand, it may be just a matter of time before your prednisone starts to work, precluding the need for any additional therapy.

What can vitamins really do for you — and what can't they do? In his new booklet, Dr. Paul Donohue separates the common sense from the nonsense about this controversial health aid. For your copy of "Vitamins: Facts You Need to Know," send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Reader's questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Abby

Put Drunks Behind Bars Instead of a Wheel

DEAR ABBY: The recent letter in your column from Cyd Haasner, whose 16-year-old daughter was killed by a drunk driver, reminded me that drunk drivers have just about been eliminated from the roads of Norway because of mandatory jail sentences and revocation of driving licenses. I have often wondered why we, as Americans, continue to tolerate this needless slaughter on our highways.

Our state legislature just reformed Maryland's drunk-driving laws on July 1. Now our congressman, Michael D. Barnes, has introduced in the House of Representatives Bill H.R. 2488, for legislation to combat the nationwide epidemic of drunk driving. Identical legislation in the Senate (S. 671) is being sponsored by Rhode Island Sen. Claiborne Pell.

If you agree that such legislation is a step in the right direction, please bring these bills to the attention of your readers. If they are seriously interested in saving lives and reducing injuries on our highways, I'm sure they wouldn't mind spending a few minutes writing post cards to their congressman and senators in support of these bills.

GERALDINE NORBY, BETHESDA, MD.

DEAR GERALDINE: First, some statistics provided by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the National Safety Council:

- One quarter of a million Americans lost their - lives in alcohol-related auto crashes over the past decade.

- About 26,000 citizens are killed in drunk-driving incidents yearly.
- Nearly 70 Americans are killed in drunk-driving incidents every day.
- Over one million Americans suffer crippling and other serious injuries every year in drunk-driving incidents.
- The drinking-driver problem creates an estimated economic cost of over $5 billion annually.
- For Americans up to age 35, the No. 1 cause of death is motor vehicle accidents, and more than half of highway deaths are caused by drunk drivers.
- On an average weekend night, one out of every 10 drivers on the road is drunk.
- 85 percent of drivers who kill themselves in single-car wrecks are drunk.
- Of every 2,000 drunken drivers, only one is arrested.
- 44 percent of all nighttime fatal alcohol-related crashes are caused by the 16-to-24 age group (this group comprises only 22 percent of the total licensed population).

Lady Diana Spencer heads Teen's list of 'Favorite People' by Seventeen

NEW YORK, N.Y. — If you'd like to look like Jaelyn Smith or beat Tracy Austin in tennis, then you're right in tune with a sizable percentage of America's teenage girls. Seventeen Magazine recently surveyed over 1,000 young women to discover whom they found most appealing. Answers ranged from historical figures to today's celebrities, and included such diverse notables as Brooke Shields and Joan of Arc. Here are the results of the "Favorite People" survey, from Seventeen's August issue.

Whom would teens most like to trade places with for a day? Brooke Shields was the top choice, followed by supermodel Cheryl Tiegs. The president of the United States, Ronald Reagan, came in third.

Writer Judy Blume was the girls' first pick when asked which author they would most like to meet. Blume also topped the list of authors the girls would elect to write their life story. Writer Stephen King came in second as the author they would most like to meet, and Mark Twain was the second choice for the author they would like to record their life.

If given the opportunity to appear on any TV show, teen girl's first choice was "Love Boat," followed by "The Tonight Show with Johnny Carson," and "Dallas."

Other results from the survey: Lady Diana Spencer must be the envy of many teens, because if marriages were arranged, more teens would like their parents to arrange a marriage with Prince Charles over any other royal figure.

Asked what musician or singer they would most like to perform at their wedding, teen girls chose Barbra Streisand first, followed by Barry Manilow and Christopher Cross. The group of musicians they would most like to play at their wedding is Styx. Reo Speedwagon came in second, and Air Supply third.

Given the choice of any male actor as a brother, the teens picked Scott Baio first, followed by Christopher Atkins. For an actress sister, the number one choice was Kristy McNichol, followed by Brooke Shields.

The male historical figure teens would most like to have known is Abraham Lincoln. The top female historical figure is Joan of Arc.

If teens could change their looks, whom would they most like to resemble?

Joan of Arc first, and their mom second.

Teen girls were asked: "If you could have any artist (living or dead) paint your likeness, whom would you choose? Their answers were Da Vinci, Michelangelo and Rembrandt, respectively.

Although teens want to go to the prom with Scott Baio and rub elbows with Abe Lincoln, the person they prefer to write them a love letter is their boyfriend.

Survey questionnaires were mailed to members of Seventeen's Consumer Panel, representing a cross section of American girls aged 13 to 19. The panel is balanced by age and geographic region according to U.S. census data and accurately reflects the national makeup of the female teenage population. The poll results are based on the responses of 1,017 girls.

Service contracts are of more benefit to company

To buy or not to buy a service contract? That is the question when you buy a new washing machine, TV set or other large appliance. Chances are the company — not the consumer — will come out ahead on such contracts, says consumer reporter Betty Furness in the current Family Circle magazine. As evidence, she cites a Massachusetts Institute of Technology study which priced out the cost of owning a color TV for six years both with and without a service contract. The cost of the contract — plus charges for repairs made, not covered by it — came to almost 10 times the expected cost for out-of-pocket repairs, notes Ms. Furness in the magazine. She adds that according to the MIT study, prices for refrigerator service contracts were worse — 16 times the expected repair costs.

Another consideration, says Ms. Furness in the article, is that service contracts tend to have restrictions on transfer. The contract may not cover the appliance if you move it to another house.

Always read the small print, she says in the magazine.

Baptist church is site of baby shower honoring Mrs. Jody Nix

Mrs. Jody (Donna) Nix was honored at a baby shower Saturday afternoon, in the Fellowship Hall of East Fourth St. Baptist Church. Special guests were the grandmothers-to-be, Mrs. Lee Nix and Mrs. R.D. Carpenter.

Punch, cookies, nuts and mints shaped like baby buggies in yellow and pale green were served from a table covered with a pale green cloth edged in yellow lace. The centerpiece was a brown and yellow teddy bear surrounded by yellow net and yellow silk sweetpeas.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. Reuben Hill, Mrs. Jack Lee, Mrs. Dick Davis, Muriel Denton, Mrs. Edward Slate, Mrs. R.E. Ray, Mrs. Ben Hitt, Mrs. Floyd Dixon, Mrs. J.D. Curry, Marguerite Cooper, Mrs. Francys Plowman, Mrs. Jerry Oliphant, Mrs. John Hood, Mrs. R.C. Stocks, Mrs. Harold Cain and Mrs. David Rhoton. The hostess gift was a Swing-o-matic swing-cradle car bed set.

Baby Nix is expected around Sept. 29.

WHAT A HIGH — Dave Jacaruso and his new bride, Mary Glass wave to their guests after their marriage as they arrive for the celebration in a tethered balloon in Rhinebeck, N.Y., Sunday. Jacaruso decided that wedding ceremonies are a bit dull, so he chose to drop in, so to speak, by parachute for the wedding ceremony.

Prepare appliances before moving

COLLEGE STATION — Moving soon? Give your appliances special treatment, cautions Linda McCormack, a family resource management specialist.

Many appliances were made to "stay put" in one place after installation, so they require special moving steps, the specialist says.

Mrs. McCormack is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Here are some of the steps you should know about: wedging, padding and bracing or bolting down of motors, compressors or washer tubs.

These are some appliances that need special moving treatment: the refrigerator, freezer, range, portable dishwasher, washer, dryer and window air conditioners.

These appliances have interior mechanisms that are swung on spring hangers to lessen vibration during operation.

Before you move, consider these "things to do": Arrange for appliance servicing at the origin — and destination — of the move, or arrange for the moving company to do the appliance servicing.

Arrange for appliance disconnection and capping of gas pipes.

Clean and thoroughly dry appliances in preparation for servicing and moving. This will prevent damaging mold, odors or stains.

Disconnect, coil and tie electrical cords, and fasten them securely to the appliances. Also, it's a good idea to tape down the central knobs on all appliances.

It's a good idea for appliance owners to know which steps each appliance requires for moving to insure those steps are taken. To find out, check the appliance instruction manual or contact an appliance service company — you'll need the appliance manufacturer's name and the model number in some cases.

CAPITOL UPDATE

John Tower

U.S. SENATOR for TEXAS
142 RUSSELL OFFICE BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

One of the most tangible signs of growing citizen involvement and interest in their government is the increasing volume of mail I receive from my fellow Texans. In recent months, I have received approximately 5,000 letters a week — plus mass-produced post cards which are part of organized mail campaigns.

I welcome both expressions of opinion, and requests for help in areas in which I am able to provide assistance. Letters are among the best means for me to keep in touch with your views. And, of course, a major part of my job is helping my constituents with federal problems.

Often, I become aware of strong opposition or support among Texans on a particular legislative issue, and I take those views seriously as I examine legislation.

Concerning problems my constituents are having with the federal bureaucracy, I am able to assist in making sure the right person has received all of the relevant information — and that the matter is receiving timely consideration. These requests for help range from retired persons whose Social Security checks have been delayed to military service members who need hardship discharges to cities applying to federal agencies for grants. Unfortunately, I cannot order a federal agency to decide in someone's favor, but I can make sure it gives careful and full consideration.

In addition, I receive requests for military academy appointments, flags flown over the Capitol, and information about pending legislation.

All of these areas, as well as other federal-related questions, fall within my Senate responsibilities. But my jurisdiction does not extend to state or local matters. Nor am I able to give personal, legal or financial advice.

There are some things you can do to make it easier for me and my staff to answer your letters. If possible, all letters should be typed or printed neatly in ink. If your letter is not legible, we cannot help you. In addition, please include your name and return address on both the envelope and the letter. Often telegrams and mailgrams do not include a complete return address, and that makes response difficult.

When discussing pending legislation, please describe the bill. If you know the bill number, that is helpful information.

If you are writing about a problem you are having with the bureaucracy, please be sure to give complete background on your situation and the steps you have taken before writing me.

A letter you have composed expressing your views on a subject have more impact than a mass-produced postcard. And a letter expressing your views on one or two issues has more impact than a lengthy "laundry list" of subjects.

Letters expressing an opinion or requesting information on legislation should be directed to my Washington office. The address is Senator John Tower, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510.

Many times, it is more convenient for you to contact one of my four state offices. They are located in Houston, Dallas, Austin and Lubbock. You may find such matters as appointments to military academies, assistance in obtaining federal grants and military personnel inquiries can be more conveniently handled from one of these state offices. They are all listed in the telephone book under "United States."

Please feel free to contact either my Washington office, or one of my state offices, any time I can be of assistance to you.

Texas court to decide soon on House redistricting plan

By DAN PALMER
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court promised Tuesday to rule within a week on the constitutionality of the 1981 House redistricting plan — one that opponents say needlessly splits county lines across the state, including the West Texas county of El Paso.

The State Redistricting Board, which apparently would take on the job of modifying the split counties should the plan be declared unconstitutional, plans to hold organizational meetings Sunday afternoon and Monday morning.

Board members already are charged with redrawing district lines for Senate seats because of a gubernatorial veto.

Action by that board would have to come within 60 days of its first meeting, and Chief Justice Joe Greenhill indicated the court is well aware of the need for a quick ruling.

He also said Justice Franklin Spears, who missed the hearing after being admitted to the hospital with chest pains, plans to listen to a tape of the arguments and likely will be involved in the court's decision.

During the two-hour hearing, opponents to the redistricting plan painted the legislature as one that "picks and chooses" in some illogical manner which counties it wants to split.

They noted that District Judge Harley Clark ruled in July that 12 of the 34 counties split by the plan were split unnecessarily.

Those counties include Nueces, Bexar and Webb counties in South Texas; Erath, Cooke, Tarrant and Dallas in North Texas; El Paso in West Texas; Corvell in Central Texas; Potter and Gregg in East Texas; and Harris in Southeast Texas.

Proponents, however, all but called the latest redistricting effort the best "balancing act" this side of the Ringling Brothers-Barnum & Bailey Circus — especially in light of the need to meet requirements of the Texas Constitution, the federal Voting Rights Act and the federal court mandate of one-man, one-vote.

"I believe history will prove that the 67th Legislature did a fantastic job," said assistant Attorney General Rick Gray.

Despite such assessments, three state representatives and six others filed suit early this summer in an Austin district court seeking to have the plan thrown out.

Clark did just that on July 11, prompting the state to appeal to the Supreme Court.

In arguments before the Supreme Court, Austin attorney David Richards, representing the opponents of the plan, argued that his group's theory of how to approach redistricting "would require that you first take the state constitution and consider it seriously."

To take it seriously, he said, would be to do everything possible to keep counties intact, while at the same time insuring equal representation and no dilution of minority voting rights.

That was not done in El Paso, Erath and many other counties, Richards said.

Although Judge Clark's July ruling did not directly apply to the immediate Abilene area, a ripple effect from El Paso, Erath, Potter and Tarrant counties might cause some changes that could affect the Big Country districts.

Steve Bickerstaff, attorney representing the House redistricting committee and the state, said the legislature made a good-faith effort that should be judged in a rational manner.

Any attempt by the courts to make the legislature prove that each and every county split was the only one possible would present an "unworkable" situation and be an unnecessary intrusion into the legislative process, Bickerstaff added.

Child fatally beaten for disturbing football

HOUSTON (AP) — Authorities were considering filing murder charges today against a bad-tempered teen-age babysitter accused of fatally beating a 3-year-old boy because the child's crying disturbed a football game he was trying to watch.

The teen-ager was held while the district attorney's office decided whether to have him certified as an adult to face murder charges. Police said Tuesday an investigation into the case was incomplete.

"The child was crying for his mother and would not let him watch television," said juvenile division officer Vivian Ybarra. "The 15-year-old struck him several times on the head."

She said the teen-ager "was watching a football game, the Oilers or Dallas, one of them" Saturday night when the incident occurred.

The child, Douglas Kelly, died of head injuries Monday night at Hermann Hospital. The tot had also suffered burns on his stomach and abdomen, and tests were ordered to determine if they were caused by scalding water.

Officers said the child's mother had left Douglas and his 6-year-old brother with the teen-ager, whose parents were longtime family friends. The baby's mother discovered the injuries when she returned to get her children at 2:45 a.m. Sunday, police said. The 6-year-old was unharmed.

Ms. Ybarra said the teen-ager was awake when the mother came to get her children.

"The mother asked him what had happened. He stated that the child was playing on the bed and fell," Ms. Ybarra said. But later, under police questioning, she said she confessed.

Town misplaces charter

HEATH, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has stripped three city council members of their seats, saying their three-year terms were illegal because the city secretary can't find the charter bestowing municipal status upon this town of about 1,400 residents.

"It's a circus," said Cary Wigginton, an attorney who took the councilmen to court because state law limits elected city officials to terms of two years or less.

"It's quite a mess," agreed Gilbert King, one of the three who lost their seats. One reason he and the other two council members lost their jobs is because city officials could not find the town's charter to prove the three-year terms do not violate the law.

Martin appears before grand jury

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Rep. Mike Martin made his long-awaited grand jury appearance Tuesday, leaving a trail of "no comments" and investigators who say they want to speak to more witnesses.

Martin testified for about 30 minutes. He was mobbed by reporters as he left the courthouse, but would not answer questions. He did, however, say "We'll see" when asked if his political career was over.

Assistant District Attorney Allen Hill said he was not ready to seek any indictments "at the present time."

Martin was followed in the grand jury room by his cousins Charles and Donnie Goff. Charles Goff has said he shot Martin July 31 in a staged incident aimed at garnering publicity for the freshman lawmaker.

Both Goff brothers refused to comment when they left the grand jury room.

The Longview legislator was wounded in the arm near the recreational vehicle he lived in during the special session. He showed up in the same vehicle — along with his mother Eunice, brother Walter and a friend from California — for Tuesday's grand jury session.

Martin first said he had no idea who shot him. Then he said he was a victim of a hitman from a satanic cult. Now he says he was meant to be a victim of his political enemies in Gregg County.

But on Tuesday he was not saying anything to reporters, who initially were told Martin wanted to hold a news conference after his grand jury appearance.

Martin, who ignored one subpoena and ducked another, will not be recalled to the grand jury, Hill said. The 29-year-old Republican appeared voluntarily Tuesday and without a lawyer.

"We're not concluded by any means," Hill said of the investigation. "There's quite a bit of material information to look at."

Martin was arrested in Upshur County Friday on an old misdemeanor assault warrant. He was released on bond, and now the alleged victim of that assault — Robert Sullivan, a former Martin employee — says he's ready to drop the charge.

Hill was careful not to disclose anything about what went on behind the closed doors of the grand jury. Hill was asked if Martin has any reason to fear for his life.

"Not that I'm aware of," he said. Does that mean Hill believes the staged shooting theory?

"That would be one interpretation of it. I suppose there would be several ... I'm not prepared to discuss all those," he said.

In addition to the shooting incident, the grand jury will look into Martin's financial affairs, Hill said.

Those financial affairs have been further clouded by the House Administration Committee's decision to cut off Martin's $4,500 monthly legislative allowance.

Heir today, rich tomorrow

Search for Hughes kin began before his death

HOUSTON (AP) — An extensive search for hundreds of Howard Hughes' distant cousins who could inherit half his fortune was launched 11 days before the reclusive billionaire died, a Tennessee genealogist says.

It was not that anyone was anticipating his death five years ago — "it was just a coincidence," said W.A. Jones, a Nashville investigator known as the "heir chaser." Since then, Jones has brought together about 500 second, third and fourth cousins who are in court to challenge the kinship of three of Hughes' first cousins.

They hope to gain a portion of the vast fortune, valued at from $180 million to $2 billion when Hughes died five years ago.

The selection of a six-person jury to hear the arguments was in its third day today. So far 15 of 22 prospective jurors have been empaneled. Each of the five attorneys will strike three, leaving six jurors and one alternate.

The distant relatives Jones contacted argue that Elspeth Hughes Lapp, a late Hughes cousin, was the child of her mother and a lover and therefore her three daughters have no blood link to the industrial magnate.

The first cousins say their mother was legitimate and claim documents to prove it. Probate Judge Pat Gregory, who ruled last month Hughes' left no valid will and no immediate survivors, has already awarded half the estate to 16 first cousins on Hughes' mother's side, or their survivors.

Jones said he was drawn into the controversy by a letter postmarked 11 days before Hughes died April 5, 1976. The letter came from a Hughes second cousin, Jeff Milton Hughes of Houston, who noticed a newspaper article about Jones and asked the investigator's help identifying the paternal links to the Hughes family tree.

"He wanted to run a family tree, to see just how close everyone was to Sonny — that's what everyone close to Howard called him," Jones said. "It wasn't a situation of 'Heir, line up the heirs.'"

Jones, who contracts his work and receives a percentage of the unspecified fee, said he had just begun to work on the project when the billionaire died. A short time later, the Mormon Will, later declared a forgery by a Nevada jury, was found and Jones filed a protest in behalf of the kin.

"That's when all the Hughes kin — those that represent the poorer side of the Hughes family, the 'earth people' — came running," he said.

Jones, who said he has turned down about 250 claims because they were made past the filing deadline or were too remote, began researching military records, handwritten notes from the family Bible and other records that hadn't been stolen by them to try to prove that the three daughters of Elspeth were not the blood heirs to Hughes.

Jones said he does not contact any would-be heirs until after he's been contacted himself. Then, he said, he sends possible heirs a letter, offering his services for a fee, which he declined to disclose.

In the Hughes case, the 500 he helped bring together cannot agree why Elspeth was not the biological daughter of Hughes' uncle Rupert.

Human resources committee trimming programs

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Department of Human Resources board members trying to stretch federal funds slashed by Reagan administration budget cuts have trimmed $31 million from state welfare programs.

Programs for troubled youths were hit the hardest by the budget ax Tuesday, DHR board members decided to eliminate federal funding for programs designed to aid runaways, truants and pregnant teenagers.

Board members said during the special meeting Tuesday night that local communities would be responsible for keeping the hard-hit youth programs in operation.

Advocates of family violence shelters won a minor victory Tuesday when the DHR, which last week had proposed a 40 percent decrease in funding for the centers, opted to cut their funding by only 10 percent.

Assistant Deputy Commissioner Martin Dukler said calls from interested groups prompted state welfare staff to reconsider the priority of the family shelters.

"In our review we decided to make adjustments," he said.

In addition to family shelters, day care and family planning programs were moved to a higher priority and received lighter cutbacks than previously suggested, Dukler said.

spokeswoman for the Texas Council on Family Violence, thanked DHR board members for "responding to the concerns of women in life-threatening situations."

However, protective services for abused and neglected children will be reduced 9.5 percent. However, investigative services and foster home programs will not be affected.

Federal funding to DHR plan, Dukler said. Administrative costs also were reduced severely, he

EASY AND EFFECTIVE

The TFL Program does something that no other program does — it uses modern clinical hypnosis to permanently remove the causes of weight and smoking problems. Why is that so important? Well, think of how many times you have dieted — only to regain the weight that you lost. Hypnosis prevents this, while still allowing you to eat the foods you enjoy! The same holds true for smoking, where the need to prevent cravings and weight gain is equally important.

'Boy in box' awaits air conditioning fight

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Ana and Raul Espino came home Tuesday night with bad news for their son, Raul Jr. The second grader will have to continue attending class inside a plexiglass cubicle while the Brownsville Independent School District fights a federal judge's order to air condition the youngster's school room. "We've gone a year and a half to fight this. We can go a little longer," Mrs. Espino said after school trustees voted to appeal U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela's order to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. The judge last week gave the district 30 days to air condition Raul's classroom at Egly Elementary School. An auto accident left the boy a paraplegic and unable to control his body temperature. He must stay in environments between 68 to 72 degrees. His physical and mental progress at a special education center led school administrators to decide to transfer him to a regular school. However, none of the district's elementary and junior high classes are air conditioned. Superintendent Raul Besteiro testified in federal court that he decided to build the box instead of air conditioning the entire room for fear other parents and teachers would get jealous. The Espinos objected that the box was too restrictive and segregated Raul from his classmates. They cited a federal law requiring handicapped children to be placed in the least restrictive environment. The judge agreed. "If handicapped children are ever to become useful, productive citizens, they must be given an opportunity to experience the world they inhabit," Vela wrote. "With the possible exception of a child whose immunological system requires that he or she be kept within a sterile atmosphere, education within a cubicle will hardly ever be appropriate." School board members voted to appeal the decision, 4-2, after 1½ hours in closed session with school attorney Tony Martinez. "We have to educate 25,000 other students," trustee Dr. Jack Dempsey said after the closed session. "This one child and his parents have held us back. I feel we should appeal this thing." Roland Olvera agreed, saying, "I think we need to concentrate on educating other children in this district. We need to settle down and get through with this decision." Trustee Joe Rodriguez objected to the appeal and wanted the board to discuss the matter in open session.

Rice band marches to a different drummer

HOUSTON (AP) — Members of Rice University's Marching Owl Band, besieged by Texas Aggies and vilified by Houston developer Roy Hofheinz in the past, face another traumatic experience — they are now expected to show up at rehearsals.

That comes as a shock for the MOB, whose musicians have on occasion swarmed — not marched — across football fields during halftime wearing dresses and diapers while poking fun at a variety of targets, band director Ken Dye said.

"The MOB used to have a lot of people who just showed up on Saturday," said Dye, who came to Rice last year from the University of Southern California.

That posed problems, he said. Not even students at the Southwest Conference's most academically prestigious school could be counted on to learn routines flawlessly with no more than a few minutes of instruction.

It made the halftime presentations somewhat unpredictable.

Times have changed. Under Dye, members are required to attend two or three 1½-hour practice sessions a week.

Former director Bert Roth, who retired last year, created the idea of the MOB in 1972 and set about converting a conventional, if small, marching band into a group of musical satirists who relished insult.

"We decided to do it our own way, and our own way was to do our heads," Roth said.

The MOB quickly learned that not everyone appreciates satire.

There was an incident in Rice Stadium at the Texas A&M game in 1973, for instance. About 500 Aggies, not amused by the MOB's goose-stepping salute to their school, cornered the band in a stadium tunnel for about two hours after the game.

A cordon of police officers stood between the groups until several Rice University food service vans rode to the rescue and carried the band members to safety.

Nor did Hofheinz, pioneer supporter of the Harris County Domed Stadium project, see the humor in the MOB's comments on the Astrodome in 1975.

"We now sit in the world's smallest enclosed football stadium," narrator Mark Brennan said at the performance, held shortly after completion of New Orleans' gargantuan Superdome. The MOB then whipped into a rendition of "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head," a reference to the leaky roof.

Whereupon Hofheinz's friend Bobby Risinger snatched the script from Brennan's hands.

Dye took all of this into consideration in toning down the MOB's style. The first switch, he said, was in the music.

"What I did was try to make these people play up to their ability," he said. "The music used to be like the tag to the show."

"I tried to capitalize on their talent by writing musical arrangements that pushed them to their physical limits." Such exhortations were not well received by the laid-back MOB at first, Dye said.

"They thought I was out to change the world, and I basically wanted to change the music," Dye said. Resistance eased, he said, when the first show was a success.

Dye said he plans to continue the MOB's satire, but hopes to avoid subjects sensitive enough to provoke violence. He'll also choose his targets more carefully, he said.

Texas A&M has been a sensitive subject with the MOB since the 1973 incident. In 1975, the band rejected the idea of parodying the recent funeral of Reveille, the Aggies' colliie mascot.

"The band members realized that anything like that would be in bad taste and possibly harmful to our bodies," said Mike Fowler, then a drum major.

Knowing the breaking point is the key, Dye said.

Sheba the Lioness out from under house

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A lioness that officials said was mistreated and could have harmed neighborhood children was taken into custody, to the relief of at least one meter reader.

Greg Sierra said he had been using binoculars to check Al Roden's electricity meter until authorities took Sheba away Tuesday.

Officials said the big cat was underfed and treated inhumanely, but Roden denied the charges.

"The lion's never gone hungry," the 26-year-old house painter said. "I spoiled the cat."

Roden said he won the lion in a card game nine months ago and had been trying for about six months to find a zoo or other home for the cat.

"When I got her, I didn't know what I was getting into," Roden said. "I thought I did quite well with the animal."

Galveston veterinarian Deborah Kemmerer said the lioness was in "fair condition" but suffered vitamin deficiencies because of a lack of sunlight.

Sheba was taken to the home of her former owner to await a court hearing to determine whether Roden will get her back.

Meanwhile, Sierra can stop peering at Roden's meter through long lenses.

Artist etches tableaux of history on weapons

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — Sam Shortes simply got tired of watching his research get tossed in the technological trash heap, another victim of scientific progress.

So the former Texas Instruments researcher has melded his scientific wizardry with a 700-year-old art form — etching gold-inlaid tableaux of nature and history on the metal surfaces of knives and firearms.

"Technology basically is a disposable item," Shortes says, "but I expect my works to be in museums."

John Wayne liked a set of etched knives done by Shortes' Aurum (Latin for gold). Etchings so much, he shelled out $2,000, Shortes says.

Now Aurum is designing limited-edition commemorative single-action guns — possibly depicting scenes from the late actor's movies — as requested by Wayne's son, Patrick.

"People were always giving John Wayne things," Shortes says. "Then when they'd be having a beer with a buddy, they'd say, 'John Wayne owns an oil painting I did.' Well, it makes me feel good to think John Wayne would pay $2,000 for work of mine."

The average customer doesn't walk into the Aurum offices in this Dallas suburb and purchase a single etched piece, which can run anywhere from $1,000 to $3,000.

Shortes instead deals with firearm manufacturers such as Colt, Remington and Winchester — though he currently is busy planning his foray into the retail world of etched belt buckles and etched office art.

Colt Industries is the major stockholder, purchasing 61 percent of Aurum's stock when it was just a fledgling company, but Shortes still oversees all aspects of the unique business he expects to reap $2 million this year.

Aurum is Shortes' baby — lock, stock (39 percent of it) and barrel.

His 40 to 50 employees have done "work with the fidelity of a postage stamp" for a gamut of organizations — 2,000 engraved knives for the National Rifle Association, 1,800 firearms for the Michigan State Police, now 2,000 engraved shotguns for the Los Angeles Police Officers Association.

Shortes says most of his clients hail from the overlapping Sun and Bible Belts, which form a sort of Gun Belt that has stretches into Southern California and Michigan.

His customers maintain a common tenet, though. They never fire Aurum's crafted weapons, for that would diminish their value.

Shortes picks up a calculator designed by the company he used to invent for and comments that not one facet of his research is used to make the palm-sized mathematical gizmo work these days.

The updated technique of his artful etchings, however, stretches back eras to a tenth-century acid etching process.

A large piece of artwork is reduced to grace the small surface of a knife or firearm. A positive film of the art then is taped to the metal, bathed in material called photo-resist.

When exposed to light, photo-resist clings to the metal and protects it from the acid, the same principle kids use when coating an Easter egg with wax to color certain portions.

His craftsmen can turn out volumes more than the only four or five metalsmiths employed by Colt, but Shortes insists, "We're not running a doughnut machine here."

"You can be a really good artist and successfully starve to death," he says. "I may be running a business, but I'm an artist at heart."

Berlin Wall still awesome after 20 years

By JOHN M. WEISS

National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON—Early on the morning of Aug. 13, 1961, barbed wire was strung along the 29-mile border between East and West Berlin, severing the last remaining free passage between the Soviet Bloc and the West. The Berlin Wall was born.

The wall sealed off what was once an open boundary dividing Soviet-occupied East Berlin from the French, British, and American sectors comprising West Berlin. Overnight, 800,000 West Berliners were separated from close relatives, and more than 85,000 workers, primarily East Berliners, were cut off from their jobs.

Money Drain Plugged

Though called the "anti-fascist protective barrier" by the East German government, the reasons for the wall were more economic than political. Since the East German state was established in 1949, almost 3 million East Germans (about 15 percent of the population) had fled to the West, most of them through West Berlin. Shortly before the construction of the wall, the refugee stream into West Berlin had reached 2,000 people a day.

The loss of these people, many of them skilled workers and professionals, had placed a severe strain on the East German economy.

The construction of the wall reduced the flow of East Germans to the West drastically. With its manpower drain halted, East Germany recovered remarkably and is today the most prosperous state in the communist world. East Berlin, its capital, is a showcase city attracting tourists from around the Eastern Bloc. For the East the wall has been a true success.

Nevertheless, thousands of East Germans have attempted to escape over the wall or across the "death strip" that has surrounded the rest of West Berlin since the late 1940s. Nearly 40,000, including more than 500 East German troops, have successfully crossed since 1961. More than 70 have been killed trying to escape; thousands of others have been arrested by East German police.

Today successful crossings are rare; one occurred last year when two men hustled over the wall using a step-ladder.

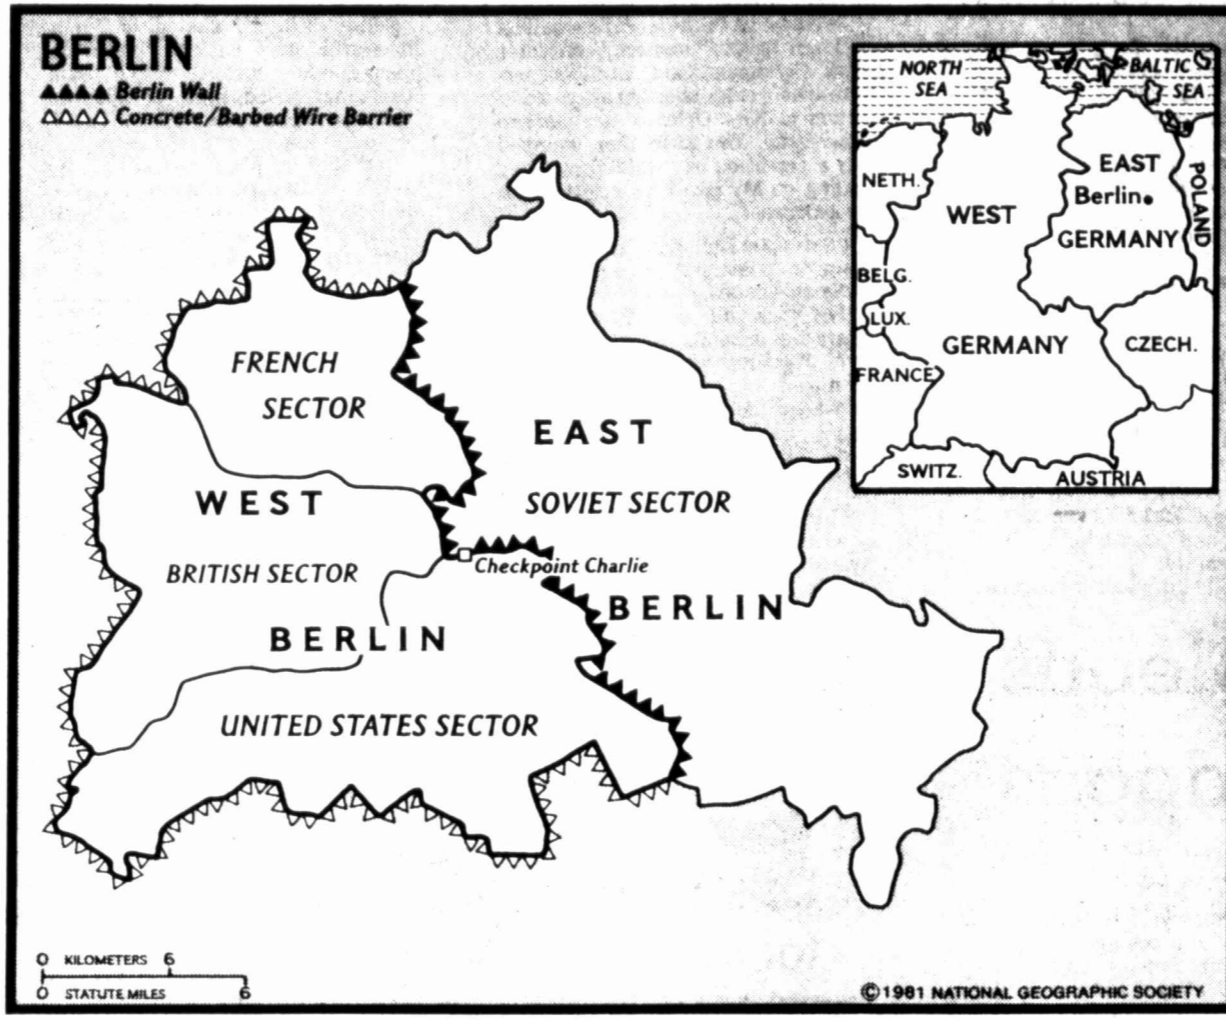

Security Now Massive

The odds against such an escape are enormous. What was once a barbed wire barrier, replaced a few days later by an ugly cinder block and wire affair, has developed over the years into an awesome security complex built to foil the most ingenious escape attempts.

Viewed from tourist observation stands in West Berlin, the wall presents a terrifying spectacle. Covered with derogatory graffiti and decorated with memorials to those killed while trying to escape, a 10-foot-high concrete wall stands on the border of West Berlin, topped by a thick pipe designed to thwart a grappling hook.

Stretching behind it is a no-man's land about 10 to 50 yards wide of tank traps, anti-car trenches, spike beds, attack dogs, electric fences, trip alarms, floodlights, soldiers in observation towers, and still another wall. Lasting devices prevent tunneling.

A similar security system now surrounds most of West Berlin, replacing most of the former barbed wire or wire-mesh death strip. A few highly guarded inspection stations, including Checkpoint C, better known as Checkpoint Charlie, provide the only access today between East and West Berlin.

Although other West Germans, and foreigners, were allowed to pass through these checkpoints from the wall's inception, visits by West Berliners to East Berlin were severely restricted for over a decade.

In 1971, however, a package of agreements between the four powers that have occupied Berlin since World War II — the Soviet Union, France, Great Britain, and the United States — improved the situation somewhat. In return for the West's recognition of the East German state, the Soviets agreed, among other things, to allow West Berliners 30 days' visitation in East Berlin a year.

The checkpoints soon became the scene of thousands of emotional reunions, as west Berliners streamed through to greet long-unseen relatives and friends in East Berlin. Visiting Limited

But traffic through the checkpoints has been curtailed since last winter, when the East Germans quadrupled the amount of money Westerners must spend the eliminated exemptions for old-age pensioners and children.

The increased exchange requirements have added to the strain of life for West Berlin's 1.9 million people (compared with 1.1 million in East Berlin). The unsettling presence of more than 500,000 Warsaw Pact troops within 20 miles, coupled with the cramped feeling caused by the city's insular situation, has caused thousands of West Berliners, particularly families with children, to migrate to other areas of West Germany.

With 23 percent of the population now age 65 or older, the population of West Berlin seems destined to drop even more in the future. But despite this decline and reliance on West Germany for over half its budget, West Berlin remains an important symbol of resistance against Soviet expansion. Most world leaders and West Berliners agree that the city must not be allowed to die on the vine and fall to the East.

Defense spending goals not binding

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan isn't necessarily committed to his goal of increasing defense spending 7 percent a year, and it could be less than that, a White House spokesman says.

The 7 percent figure is "something we know we can spend up to," deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Tuesday. "It was a cap rather than a commitment to a goal of 7 percent."

Speakes said he gave the wrong impression last week when he told reporters that cuts in planned defense spending were unlikely because Reagan was committed to a 7 percent growth after adjusting for inflation to rebuild the nation's military might.

Asked if the defense increase could turn out to be less than 7 percent, Speakes replied: "It could be."

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and White House budget director David A. Stockman were to meet with presidential counselor Edwin Meese III here today to discuss the matter, which has sparked an internal administration debate.

Reagan has vowed to seek what amounts to the largest defense buildup in U.S. history — more than $16 trillion between 1983 and 1987.

Stockman and other economic advisers reportedly have asked him to cut that by $20 billion to $40 billion in 1983 and 1984 to keep alive any realistic hope of balancing the federal budget within three years and to avoid more drastic reductions in already-slashed social programs.

Reagan rejected that proposal last week and told his advisers to come back with a plan to maintain the defense buildup and balance the budget at the same time.

Stockman reportedly argued last week that because of earlier budget miscalculations, the defense buildup actually exceeds the 7 percent goal.

Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto said Tuesday in Washington he "would be very surprised" if the defense budget is cut back because "the number of dollars is finite and the number of demands against those dollars seems to be infinite."

"I am sure that, given the realities and the dynamics of the situation, that you are going to find the OMB (Office of Management and Budget) people pressing for cuts and the Department of Defense making its case as strongly as it can," Catto said.

Weinberger was scheduled to meet with Reagan at the president's secluded, mountaintop ranch later today, but Speakes said the purpose was for the Pentagon chief to report on his recent trip to Europe.

No discussions were planned on how to base MX missiles or production of a new manned bomber, the spokesman said.

Post office
may sell ads
on stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — In search of a way to cut chronic deficits, the Postal Service is considering selling advertisements on its delivery vehicles, its post office lobbies and even the backs of stamps.

The Postal Service published a notice in Tuesday's Federal Register asking for public comment on what would be a reversal of a long-standing policy against selling ads.

Possible places for the ads also include covers of stamp booklets and on aerogrammes, postmarks, postal cards and postage meter strips.

The Postal Service is a large potential source for advertising space. It owns 122,000 vehicles, has lobby space in 30,400 post offices and sells 249 million stamp books, 30 billion stamps, 42 million aerogrammes, 511 million postal cards and 898 million embossed envelopes per year.

No estimate was available of how much revenue the proposal would bring in.

"That's one of the questions we want to get comment on," said spokesman Dave McLean.

Phillie manager Green suspended for fracas

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Suspended indefinitely after a fracas with an umpire, Philadelphia Phillies Manager Dallas Green is waiting to learn the full extent of his punishment.

National League President Chub Feeney imposed the discipline Tuesday, but said the length of the suspension and possible fines wouldn't be determined until he reviewed films of the ninth-inning spat.

Feeney said in a telegram to Green the league had been promised films of the game by today.

Green stormed out of the dugout during Monday night's game against the Atlanta Braves to protest a call by second-base umpire Steve Fields.

The umpire had ruled shortstop Larry Bowa failed to touch second during a crucial double-play attempt and called the baserunner safe. The play allowed a run to score, and the Braves took a temporary 5-4 lead. But the Phillies tied the score in the bottom of the ninth and went on to win 7-5 in the 13th.

"I don't regret a thing, except the call," Green said in a clubhouse news conference.

..."Maybe I acted a little bit like a fool, but that's part of baseball." ...

conference after the suspension announcement. "I'm not going to sit there and watch things like that happen.

"Maybe I acted a little bit like the fool, but that's part of baseball," Green added.

Coach Bobby Wine has been named the team's acting manager, to be assisted by pitching coach Herm Starrette.

"But I'll be around, every so often Wine and Herm will hear a little bird whisper in their ears," Green said.

Green watched his defending world champions go down to a 12-2 defeat at the hands of the Braves Tuesday night on a television in the Phillies clubhouse lounge.

The manager admitted he should be fined or suspended for the language he used during the dispute, and for the bumping that ensued between him and the umpire.

"I'll stand for a few days," Green said. "But I'm not going to sit back and let somebody run my ball club for a long period of time. If it's more than a couple of days, we're going to have some long talks (with Feeney).

"If I'm fined, I wonder what the umpires get," he said, referring to a post-game altercation involving umpires Nick Colosi, Frank Pulli and a Philadelphia television commentator.

According to the reporter, Mike Forrest of KYW-TV, harsh language was used, and about $18,000 in damage was done to a camera one of the umpires knocked to the ground.

The station has asked Feeney for an apology.

Cowboys to start Rice, rookie Downs in opener

DALLAS (AP) — The starting free safety for the Dallas Cowboys' regular season opener against the Washington Redskins Sept. 6 will probably be one of those 1,000-to-1 longshot free agents, Mike Downs.

The Rice rookie has captivated Coach Tom Landry like no other free agent since Cliff Harris back in the late 1960s.

Landry all but admitted Tuesday that Downs, who started last week against Pittsburgh and will open against the Oilers Saturday night, will be the No. 1 free safety against the Redskins.

When pressed on the matter Tuesday, Landry said of Downs: "He's good enough...he could start."

Landry said Downs "has been outstanding in every scrimmage and every game. He has great range and speed and he can cover man-to-man."

"He will hit you. He has all the qualities you need."

Landry said Downs wasn't drafted because he had a reputation in college of not being a hitter.

"It doesn't mean he wasn't a hitter in college because it could have been the defense Rice was playing where he was expected to stay back and defend against the pass all the time," Landry said. "Sometimes you can get false feelings about a player but he hasn't shied away from anyone yet."

Landry has decided to give the punting job back to quarterback Danny White until a better solution can be found.

He said "When you have an ace in the hole you tend to fall back on it. I'd like to take the punting chores away from White."

The Cowboys cut their final punter, Curt Carion, and Landry said they could possibly bring him back later in the season.

"We'll let Danny punt this (the Oiler) game and see what it looks like...I'd rather not have my quarterback punting."

LARRY BOWA (left) and DALLAS GREEN (right) leave the field after both were ejected Monday night during their game with the Atlanta Braves.

Reaves realizes Oilers still looking for QB

HOUSTON (AP) — John Reaves has overcome more obstacles in the past year than many men face in a lifetime — and the biggest hurdles are still ahead.

He spent a year out of football conquering an alcohol and drug problem and whipping his body back into shape.

Reaves signed on as a free agent with the Houston Oilers last month and has made valuable contributions to the last two exhibition games, including Saturday when Gifford Nielsen suffered a shoulder injury.

The Oilers signed Reaves, an eight-year veteran, to back up Nielsen after Ken Stabler surprisingly retired on the day he was supposed to report to training camp.

But the biggest hill is left to climb. No matter how well he does Saturday against the Dallas Cowboys, Reaves would be a longshot to make the team if Stabler ends his retirement and returns to the Oilers.

"Those are things you have to live with in this game," Reaves said. "I have worked not to let them bother me. Coach (Ed) Biles said in today's (Tuesday's) meeting that their first priority was to work out a deal with Stabler.

"I've known that since I've been here. I'm just not listening to these voices. I'm putting my faith in God and I know he will take care of me."

Biles learned Tuesday that Nielsen would be lost for a minimum of two to three weeks with a shoulder injury and said Stabler was his No. 1 alternative.

"We are giving John a chance but he knows the situation," Biles said. "If we can get Stabler back in uniform, it will be a good thing for the team. John realizes that."

Reaves, who completed 21 of 37 passes for 236 yards last week against Tampa Bay, says a good performance against the Cowboys would be timely.

"I just hope I have a tremendous game and win the Governor's Cup (given to the winner of the annual Dallas-Houston game) and make them want to use me," Reaves said. "It's a big opportunity and I want to make the most of it."

US Open may preempt Cowboy-Cardinals

DALLAS (AP) — A source with the Dallas Cowboys confirmed Tuesday that CBS plans to preempt the National Football League team's 17-station network Sept. 13 to televise the U.S. Open tennis tournament.

St. Louis is scheduled to play the Cowboys in Texas Stadium at 3 p.m. that afternoon.

The Cowboys' network extends from Shreveport to Phoenix to Oklahoma City and South to San Antonio and Houston.

"We've already received two calls about the conflict," said the source "but we can't do much about it unless CBS changes its mind. It is correct that the Cowboys' network could be blacked out except for Dallas unless the game is a sellout."

Some 5,000 tickets remained on sale for the game.

St. Louis also would be exempt from any blackout by CBS because the Cardinals are on the road and all away games are televised back to the home city of the visiting team.

"Probably half the stations in our network don't realize that game is scheduled to be preempted," said the source.

Oilers discuss trade for Dante

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers and Oakland Raiders are discussing a trade involving Oakland quarterback Dan Pastorini, a former Oiler player, a Houston television station reported Tuesday night.

Former Oiler coach Bum Phillips traded Pastorini to the Raiders prior to the 1980 season in exchange for quarterback Ken Stabler.

Stabler led the Oilers to an 11-5 record last season, while Pastorini suffered a knee injury and surrendered his job to Jim Plunkett who led the Raiders to a Super Bowl title.

Station KPRC reported Pastorini had confirmed talks were underway between the two teams and that he would welcome a return to the Oilers.

Stabler announced his retirement on the day he was to report to training camp this year and Gifford Nielsen, his replacement, suffered a shoulder injury Saturday and will be lost two to three weeks.

Steers stressing individual work, fundamentals

The Big Spring Steers, just over a week away from their 1981 football opener, have been stressing the individual fundamentals that are most necessary in building a successful total product.

The Steers, after four days of workouts in shorts last week, strapped their pads on last Friday for a full-scale scrimmage. So this week's twice-a-day sessions in pads have been their first practices with the added weight.

"We're really having two-a-days in pads," head coach Ralph Harris said, with a school day in between workouts for the gridgers and coaches. "We're stressing individual work and fundamentals this week, and not a lot of assignments and team polish."

The Steers shape was not as good as the coaching staff had hoped, but is improving, thanks to the weather. "Our physical condition was clouded by the nice weather last week, but the heat this week should help our conditioning."

The Steers will finish this week's work with a scrimmage Friday evening against the Lamesa Golden Tors. The freshmen of the two schools will square off at 5 p.m. at Blankenship, with the sophomores and JVs meeting at Memorial at the same time. The varsity units of the teams will battle around 7 p.m.

But for those locals expecting to see a preview of the Steer team on Friday night, Harris said that won't be the case.

"As for the team part, I don't know how we'll look," he mentioned, speaking of the scrimmage. "We have not tried to prepare for any opponent, and won't concern ourselves with preparing for Lamesa. We're more worried about the game next week (against Snyder)."

The Steer head grid tutor did mention, however, that he hopes his team looks good against Lamesa.

"It's an opportunity for both teams to win," he said. "Sure, we'd like to run all over the field and not give them an inch, but we're more concerned about finding out about ourselves and what we need to do to get ready."

"We're more interested, and I'm sure they (Lamesa) are, in avoiding injuries that would hurt in regard to next week's games," added Harris.

The Steers will continue two-a-day workouts today and tomorrow, and will have a short session on Friday morning.

Harris reported that the lone varsity player injured this week was Tony Kennedy, with a muscle strain in his back. The senior who starts at tight end and linebacker will sit out the Lamesa scrimmage, but should be ready for Snyder.

Eagles, Cowboys still best in East

DALLAS (AP) — It didn't take long for the Philadelphia Eagles and the Dallas Cowboys to enliven the 1981 National Football Conference Eastern Division race, and they don't even play until November.

The psychological artillery has been flying between the training camps of the two teams who met for the NFC title in January.

The Eagles placed in their lockerroom a poster of the Cowboys' front four plus middle linebacker Bob Breunig. It showed menacing looks and fog-shrouded tombstones with the words "L.A." and "Philly" carved thereupon.

Dallas tackle Randy White said the Eagles' gambit was typical of the "high schoolish little games" Coach Dick Vermeil plays.

Vermeil countered that if the Eagles are so high schoolish, how come they beat the Cowboys 20-7 to make the Super Bowl?

All this happened in late July.

Again, it should be the Eagles and the Cowboys battling for the NFC East title. But what happens if these two talented teams get so caught up in their vendetta they forget Washington, New York, and St. Louis?

Stay tuned for what should be another fun year in perhaps the NFC's most competitive division.

Even though the Eagles lost fullback Leroy Harris with a broken arm, they still have wondrous Wilbert Montgomery, who slashed the Cowboys for 194 yards on 26 carries last year. Rookie Hubert Oliver, a 10th-round draft pick from Arizona, has caught Vermeil's eye with his blocking.

And the Eagles still have a defense that's tough to beat, although linebacker Bill Bergey is on the injured-reserve list.

Should placekicker Tony Franklin, who frequently has been in Vermeil's doghouse, return to the form he showed as a rookie, the Eagles will again be solid favorites.

The Cowboys, who visit the Eagles Nov. 1 and host them Dec. 13, have too questionable a secondary to be considered on the preseason plateau with the defending NFC champions.

Blue Jays sue NBA's Celtics

NEW YORK (AP) — The Toronto Blue Jays filed suit against the Boston Celtics Tuesday, seeking to prevent the NBA club from signing third baseman Danny Ainge.

Ainge, a former basketball star at Brigham Young, was given a $300,000 bonus for agreeing "he will not engage in or play professional basketball" during the three years of his contract with the Blue Jays. The contract, signed Sept. 15, 1980, calls for Ainge to be paid $50,000 for the first year, $75,000 for the second and $100,000 for the third.

The Blue Jays had the NBA notify its teams of Ainge's contract, and when the Celtics drafted Ainge in June and were talking about trying to sign him, Toronto notified Boston of its exclusive signing.

Nevertheless, on June 12, Ainge told the Blue Jays he had decided to play for the Celtics. He was reminded of his obligation to the baseball club and reconsidered, the suit said.

Yearly stakes on line in Golf World Series

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Consistent Raymond Floyd has projected himself into position to collect his first PGA Player of the Year title, if he can win the $400,000 World Series of Golf starting Thursday.

In his own mind, Floyd believes he already has won the prized award 12 years ago. He claims former PGA Commissioner Joe Dey kept it from him. "I was the Player of the Year in 1969, but I didn't get it," Floyd said. "Dey went to the PGA and talked them out of giving me the award. He said I hadn't conducted myself well."

"Instead, they gave it to Orville Moody, who won the U.S. Open. I won three tournaments, including the PGA. But I was a bachelor, running around with girls and went to ballgames."

"It was a disciplinary slap of my hand. I look back on it now and I'm still bitter."

Floyd projects a new image now. He is a mature 38-year-old veteran of 19 PGA Tour seasons, married and the father of three — and one of the foremost favorites in this select field of 27 players.

The world's greatest golfers, Tom Watson, Jack Nicklaus, Bruce Lietzke, David Graham, Larry Nelson, Lee Trevino, Isao Aoki of Japan and Greg Norman of Australia, are ready to test Firestone Country Club South's demanding 7,173 yards for the $100,000 first prize.

At stake are the Player of the Year, the money-winning championship and the Vardon Trophy for low-stroke average, especially if Watson, Floyd or Lietzke win. They are the only three-time winners this year.

Watson leads the money race with $341,000, $13,000 more than Floyd and $21,000 ahead of Lietzke, the scoring leader at 70.09 strokes per round. Floyd and Watson are right behind at 70.23 and 70.62.

Floyd's winnings are almost double his best year in 1976, when he won $178,000.

Nicklaus, naturally fitting in the long-hitting category, faces an important obstacle. He needs to win on one of his favorite courses to avoid his second non-winning year in the past three.

Outfielder feels worse than pitcher on missed gem

It seemed like outfielder Rusty Kuntz was more crushed when teammate Dennis Lamp lost his bid at a no-hitter than the White Sox pitcher was.

Lamp pitched the second one-hitter of his career in beating Milwaukee 5-1 Tuesday night. The only hit was a leadoff bloop double in the ninth by Robin Yount, a shot that fell just out of left fielder Kuntz's reach. Cecil Cooper, who walked on four pitches in the first, was the only other Milwaukee runner.

"I feel as bad as anyone," said Kuntz after his diving try for Yount's hit fell about a foot short. "It was a little cheap thing that I couldn't come up with. I thought I had a good jump, but when Yount hit it, I thought he didn't hit it worth a noodle and that I'd have to dive because Dennis jammed him so bad."

Lamp's effort came in only his second start of the season. The other was against Toronto in a 6-2 Chicago victory June 8.

"I didn't have time to think about the no-hitter," said Lamp, who one-hit the San Diego Padres on June 9, 1976 when he was a Chicago Cub. "I was thinking about the Brewers because they have a lot of good hitters. I had some bad days against them in spring training."

AL Roundup

Yount scored on infield outs by Jim Gantner and Thad Bosley.

Wayne Norhadgen's second-inning sacrifice fly, Harold Baines' homer in the fourth, Greg Luzinski's run-scoring single in the sixth, Mike Squires RBI double and a bases-loaded walk to Kuntz in the seventh gave Chicago its runs.

Elsewhere, it was California 8, Boston 7 in 10 innings; Cleveland 2, Oakland 0; Minnesota 3, the New York Yankees 0; Texas 6, Toronto 1; Detroit 4, Kansas City 3 in 10 innings and Baltimore 6, Seattle 5 in 12.

Angels 6, Red Sox 5, 10 innings. After Jim Rice homered for a 5-4 Boston lead in the top of the 10th inning, Bobby Grich's two-run single with one out in the bottom of the inning won it for the Angels. Boston led 6-0 after a half-inning but California chipped away and tied it in the ninth on John Harris' two-out pinch-single.

Indians 2, A's 0. Len Barker was almost as overwhelming as Lamp, throwing a three-hitter and fanning eight to increase his league-leading strikeout total to 92.

The Cleveland victory came on the heels of a 16-4 loss to the A's in which Oakland had a season-high 20 hits.

Duane Kuiper knocked in both runs for Cleveland with an infield single in the seventh and another single in the ninth.

Twins 3, Yankees 0. Darrell Jackson and Jerry Kosman combined to pitch out of trouble five times as the Yankees stranded 10 runners.

Jackson, 2-2, allowed five hits and five walks in 5 1/3 innings. Kosman gave up two hits in 2 2/3 innings of relief.

The Twins scored twice in the second inning in handing Rudy May, 4-8, his seventh consecutive loss. Bob Castino's triple and a single by Sal Butera did the damage. Minnesota added a run in the third on a single by Gary Ward, Dave Engle's hit-and-run single and Mickey Hatcher's grounder.

Rangers 6, Blue Jays 1. Ferguson Jenkins fired a four-hitter, Buddy Bell homered and Mario Mendoza had a two-run double to spark a four-run sixth inning for the Rangers.

Tigers 4, Royals 3, 10 innings. Lance Parrish's 10th-inning single won the game for Detroit.

"I'm doing everything I can," said the slump-ridden Parrish, who entered the game batting .227 and was 0 for 4 before his hit. "I've taken extra hitting and all of that. It's just a matter of time. Hopefully, this will be the start of something for me."

"Sparky (Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson) told me all along that he wasn't worried about my offense. I'm better than a .227 hitter."

Expos Carter releases pain on Reds with grand slam

Montreal Expos catcher Gary Carter is playing in pain ... but it's the Cincinnati Reds who are hurting.

"Dr. (Larry) Coughlin, our team physician, just diagnosed the injury as a torn ligament in the right ankle," Carter said. "He said it doesn't require surgery. It's going to cause some pain but he expects that time will help it heal. In the meantime, I can continue to play on it."

And play he did. On Tuesday night Carter drove in six runs, four of them with a grand slam homer, to power the Expos over Cincinnati 9-1.

"I'll take it," said Carter of his performance. "I'm happy that I'm still able to play."

Carter suffered the injury in a game against the Houston Astros last week. Diagnosed then as a strained ligament, Carter aggravated it when he bailed out at the plate on an inside pitch from Reds starter Mike LaCoss.

In other National League games Tuesday, the Chicago Cubs edged San Diego 4-3, Atlanta crushed Philadelphia 12-2, Los Angeles topped Pittsburgh 9-7 in 11

Fergie stifles Blue Jays, then complains

TORONTO (AP) — He took out some of his ire on the Toronto Blue Jays by restricting them to just four hits, and then Ferguson Jenkins let loose a barrage of complaints in the Texas Rangers locker room.

Forget about the 6-1 Toronto complete-game victory, his first of the season. Jenkins was ready to take a kick at the can at any topic that was broached.

Congratulations on the victory, Jenkins said. "Whoopie." "Anybody can beat Fergie."

"All I try to do is perform for the team and keep myself happy. All I try to do is do what I've been doing for the last 19 years — and that's pitching and trying to be a winning pitcher."

Glad to get another start Fergie said. "I might not get another start for eight or nine days."

go to Brian Sullivan, a free agent recently released by Kansas City.

Weaver lost his job to Jeff West, a six-year veteran who sat out the entire 1980 season after being released by San Diego after four seasons there.

Weaver and West were the only punters in the Seahawks' camp and Weaver said that made the competition harder.

"The way they did it made it tough on people," said Weaver referring to the two-kicker camp.

Worst in the NFL — needs to improve drastically for the '81 team to return to George Allen-style glory.

The Cardinals got almost 3,000 yards passing from Jim Hart and Ottis Anderson rushed for 1,352 yards in 1980. Wide receiver Mel Gray needs to hurry back from a preseason injury.

Defensively, St. Louis hopes first round pick E.J. Junior of Alabama can shore up the linebacking corps.

The New York Giants expect another linebacker picked in the first round, Lawrence Taylor of North Carolina, to help them immediately.

The Giants need help everywhere. They ranked 27th in the NFL in total offense, 26th in pass offense and rush defense, 25th in rush offense and 24th in total defense last year.

Namepunter on NFL cut list

Between them, Mike Bragg and Herman Weaver punted the football 1,671 times over a combined 24 years of National Football League games. The balls traveled 66,785 yards — almost 38 miles — and now, neither has a team that wants him.

Bragg, a 13-year veteran from Richmond, and Weaver, an 11-year pro from Tennessee, were waived Tuesday by the Baltimore Colts and Seattle Seahawks, respectively, as all NFL teams reached the 50-man roster limit, five more than the regular-season minimum.

Bragg and Weaver weren't the only "name" players to be released Tuesday, but they certainly were the most famous of the men who aim for the coffin corner.

Bragg, who never missed a game in playing in 188 contests, 172 with the Washington Redskins, led the American Football Conference in punts inside the 20-yard line with 22.

Washington's fifth-round draft choice in 1967, Bragg averaged 39.1 yards in 1980 and his job might now it sent Coach Tom Landry back to the blackboard.

Landry had counted on Hughes to help shut down Dallas' 1980 tendency to yield the big play.

Dennis Thurman played in that position last year but was inconsistent. Free-agent rookie Mike Downs of Rice has been sensational in camp and could help at that position.

Landry's hopes for cementing the secondary also ride on the tender knee of strong safety Charlie Waters, who is again playing with a brace on his leg.

Offensively, the Cowboys, who led the National Football League in scoring, should be potent again, particularly since running back Tony Dorsett is stronger thanks to a rigorous off-season campaign.

Quarterback Danny White has been bothered by a torn sheath in his non-throwing left arm but he played with the problem last year.

The most interesting aspect of the Cowboys' offense is that Landry may abandon his shuttle system and go with signals to White via assistant Coach John Mackovic.

The Washington Redskins should be an entertaining team.

New Coach Joe Gibbs has welcomed back from exile fullback John Riggins along with Canadian retrade Terry Metcalf and explosive Joe Washington, obtained from Baltimore.

The Redskins are suspect in the offensive line, which must give Joe Theismann more throwing time to such fleet receivers as Art Monk and Ricky Thompson.

Tempting after-the-game recipes are shared

As the managing editor continues to say, "I told you so," the response to the Recipe Exchange continues to grow. We're excited about the column and hope you'll be a part of it by sending your favorite recipes and recipe requests.

Residents of Forsan and Garden City as well as Big Spring wrote to share their favorites this week. Again, we received a few more than we can print so please be patient and keep those recipes coming.

This week, I have a recipe request of my own for chili. Cooler weather is just around the corner, and what could be better on those cool evenings than homemade chili?

When sending in recipes, please be sure to include your name, address and phone number so that we may contact you if necessary. Complete instructions are a must, and comments and suggestions are appreciated.

In response to last week's request by Mrs. B.D. Adams for "after the football game recipes for a crowd," Jackie Harris kindly sent her favorites:

Woman crusades to save junkies' abused pets

NEW YORK (AP) — She cajoles, bribes and even steals when necessary to separate suffering dogs from the junkies, alcoholics and former mental patients who are their masters.

Every night, Chitra Besbroda enters New York's twilight world of tenements and SRO's, single-room occupancy hotels, offering whatever cash she has to nodding addicts and others to buy their abused pets.

"The pain of not doing what I know I have to do causes me more grief than the risk I take. I know it's risky, but it's a job to be done," she said.

"Mrs. B," as the addicts call her, says she has cared for 90 to 100 dogs in eight years. She is a small, assertive woman with black hair, a middle-aged divorcee who lives on Manhattan's Upper West Side and works in detoxification centers.

She will do almost anything for an animal. When an addict demanded $100 and a color television in exchange for his starving chihuahua, she bargained him down to just the TV, ran home and brought back her own black-and-white set.

Mrs. Besbroda, a social worker trained in psychotherapy, came to this country from her native Sri Lanka in 1971. Her training in New York street life began in 1973, when she started work at a detox center in Harlem and witnessed the "unbearable grief" of some of the addicts' animals.

At lunch hours she would walk around and talk to pet owners in the area, asking about the animals, making suggestions about medical care and nutrition. And then came Teddy.

Mrs. Besbroda had occasionally heard the howls of a dog coming from a garage across the street from her clinic. When she investigated, she found an animal "starving, whipped, beaten and locked in an abandoned building all winter."

The drunken owner, who locked the dog up on weekends, threatened her life and chased her away. Mrs. Besbroda taught Teddy to eat dry dogfood through the keyhole and placated his owner by bringing him cakes, wine and beer.

Eventually, he allowed her to take Teddy home for a weekend. She didn't take him back.

Since then, Mrs. Besbroda says she has come across unimaginable cruelties, such as dogs fed hot sauce or gunpowder because their owners think cruelty is good training for guard dogs. Other starve their animals or beat them, even prick their genitals with pins.

"They're not sensitive to the pain of animals, maybe because they suffer so much themselves," she said.

Most dogs stay with their masters, she said. "All these dogs love them, that's the problem," she explained. But when they can escape to the safety of her home, "they completely forget their masters."

Sometimes Mrs. Besbroda fails. Once she called the ASPCA about one puppy in an SRO that "was like the living dead" after a diet of hot sauce and bread. The ASPCA, unable to find proof of mistreatment, trimmed and washed the puppy's coat and returned it to its master.

Soon after, the owner's brother-in-law returned from Bellevue Hospital's mental ward for a weekend and strangled the puppy with a telephone cord.

But more often, she succeeds in saving a suffering animal, sometimes by paying for medical care herself when an owner refuses or the ASPCA cannot provide a free operation.

She keeps three or four dogs at a time in her small co-op, with the overflow going to her mother's nearby apartment. Since 1979, 21 of Mrs. Besbroda's dogs have been adopted. She carefully screens prospective owners, who must sign a contract stipulating they will provide good care for the dog, return it to her if no longer wanted and allow her to visit periodically to inspect the animal's condition.

Mrs. Besbroda says she is thinking of giving up her crusade; she works full-time and cares for an 11-year-old daughter. But she has a goal left: to rescue one last SRO dog, perhaps her toughest case.

His name is Cocaine. He lives in a tiny room with about two square feet to stand in. In the winter, he is tied to a steaming radiator by a chain so short he cannot sit down. His paws are full of splinters from trying to scratch through the door.

When free, he can drink from a toilet bowl. His master never feeds him. Food comes from Mrs. Besbroda and a neighbor.

His owner, F., has had five dogs in four years, the neighbor says. Three were hit by cars and killed.

Mrs. Besbroda has tried everything to get the animal from F. — persuasion, bribery, appeals to the ASPCA and the SRO's landlord.

F. resents her efforts. "Every day there's a subtle threat about killing me," Mrs. Besbroda said.

But she is determined to save Cocaine. "When I go to sleep, I see his face peering through a hole in the door. I feel very bad that I can't give him a drink of water. It's getting too much of an emotional strain. When I get him, I think my work is done."

Siamese twins cheerful despite joining at head

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Yvette and Yvonne Jones are Siamese twins, best friends who share a lively interest in the world. But even with an intimacy that dictates both will die at the same time, they can never see each other's faces, except in a mirror.

The women were born 32 years ago joined at the tops of their heads — a condition known as craniopagus twins. The Siamese twins have normally developed bodies, separate brains and different personalities. It is a type of abnormality that doctors say occurs perhaps once in every 2.5 million births.

The twins must walk with their necks turned to the side at nearly a 90 degree angle, but they insist it does not hurt. And with their connected circulation, the death of one would mean death for both, said Dr. Frank Anderson, a pediatric neurosurgeon at Childrens Hospital.

Despite lives that began as circus attractions to help pay their hospital bill, the twins are free of bitterness and can charm people who are shocked by their appearance.

Recently, a stunned waiter dropped his order pad and spilled the wine he was carrying as he approached their table.

Never missing a beat, Yvonne calmly introduced him to everyone at the table except her sister. When Yvette piped up to introduce herself, Yvonne joked, "Oh, yeah, I forgot about her."

The waiter was at ease. "People can't help themselves," said Yvette, the more timid of the pair. "They're just so...surprised when they see us. But once they get over that, people are usually nice. And curious. They always want to ask us a bunch of questions."

Educated by tutors, they received high school equivalency certificates in 1967. They even run together, despite predictions that they would never be able to do more than crawl.

Anderson was among the physicians who saw the children soon after they were born at what is now Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center.

He said the mother, Willa Jones, then 38, didn't want surgery to separate them because of the risk one or both would die. Anderson said the possibility of a surgical separation now was "theoretical."

The twins said don't want to be separated. "It would just seem so strange," said Yvonne. "We've been this way for so long." As for the possibility of her sister's dying first: "I'll worry about it when the time comes."

Anderson said he has seen two other sets of craniopagus twins. In a case 15 years ago, both children died while being separated. In the other case, four years ago, one girl died eight days after separation, but the other survived and today "she's outstanding, she really is," Anderson said.

South Africa invades Angola

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Angola charged South African invaders advanced nearly 100 miles into its territory while South African planes destroyed two villages as the prelude to occupying part of southern Angola.

Angolan President Eduardo dos Santos appealed to the United Nations to "neutralize the imminent and large-scale invasion." The Angolan Defense Ministry ordered all officers, soldiers, sailors and reservists to report to their units within 48 hours.

The South African government refused to confirm or deny the Angolan report. But a military spokesman indicated South African forces were carrying out one of their periodic large-scale operations against Angolan bases of the guerrillas trying to loosen South Africa's hold on South-West Africa.

A communique from the Angolan Defense Ministry reported "violent fighting" but did not say if any of the estimated 20,000 Cuban troops in Angola were involved.

The communique, reported by the Angolan news agency Angop, said two South African armored columns totaling 32 tanks and 82 other vehicles crossed the border between Angola and South-West Africa Monday morning.

It said one column advanced 93 miles and occupied the village of Catequero after "violent fighting with our troops." The second column, supported by air attacks, battled Angolan troops in the town of Xangongo, 62 miles north of the border, the communique said.

A later dispatch said eight South African fighter-bombers destroyed the villages of Cahama, 90 miles north of the border, and Tchibamba, 125 miles north of the border, "in an attempt to open the northern route."

A BBC correspondent in Luanda, the Angolan capital, said the South African air force bombed two towns 250 miles north of the border on Sunday.

President dos Santos in a message to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said South Africa had massed 45,000 troops in South-West Africa "whose objective is the occupation of part of the sovereign territory of Angola."

He warned that "the situation is grave and it could develop into a war with unpredictable consequences."

A South African military spokesman, Maj Gen. Charles Lloyd, said only that South Africa was continuing operations against the guerrillas of the South-West Africa People's Organization, or SWAPO, who raid their homeland from bases in Angola.

"Terror against the local population cannot be tolerated, and it is unavoidable that the terrorists will be pursued and the bases from which they operate wiped out," he said.

Satellite aids tax collectors

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The probing eyes of Texas tax collectors are getting a technological assist from satellites and high-altitude aircraft with sophisticated cameras aimed at the state's woodlands.

Texas A&M University scientists say they are using remote sensing photographs from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to draw maps outlining soil types and where pine, hardwood or a mixture of the two grow in 48 East Texas counties.

School district and countywide tax appraisal board officials say they are using the space-age maps to determine land values more accurately and evenly.

Robert Baker, professor of forest science, said a 1979 tax law allows timberland owners to reduce their assessment by producing wood.

Baker said if a landowner used an acre of choice soil to produce $400 worth of pine he would be taxed on the value of the wood instead of the market value of the land, which could be as high as $1,000.

"This value is commonly called timber-use value," said Baker. "It applies to what is grown, how fast it grows, type of soil, timber prices, and what management costs are."

Since values vary with the type of wood, Baker said a local assessor can use the maps to compute the taxes on different categories of timber.

"Our work will lead to more standardized procedures for assessing the value of forest land," said Baker.

"The data will help us make decisions we have not been able to make before. It would be useful to industry for determining which lands would be best suited for growing trees or it could help determine where federal wilderness areas should be placed so they wouldn't compete with areas that would be better suited for production," he said.

By using infrared satellite photos, Baker said researchers also can determine which timber lands have been harvested and where new trees are being planted.

Texas A&M forestry scientist have mapped over 10 million acres of privately owned timberland since the project began in 1976 as a joint effort of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Governor's Office of Educational Resources. The State Property Tax Board joined the project later.

About 50 school districts of the almost 300 in the area that have been surveyed already are using the maps to assess property values, and 20 of the 48 counties have been supplied with the drawings, said Baker.

Club schedules CPR course

The GFWC Forsan Study Club has scheduled a class for Cardio-pulmonary Resuscitation Training to be held on 8:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. Saturday in the Forsan High School cafeteria.

The class is open to anyone desiring certification in CPR. Each student is to bring a sack lunch. Drinks are provided.

Students flocking to get endangered college loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Students are flocking to banks in record numbers to take out federally subsidized loans for college before a new law makes them harder to get. Because of that, the administration says it may need more money for the program it wants to cut back.

Since 1978 the loans have been available to all comers, regardless of their need or family income. But as of Oct. 1, students from families with adjusted gross income of $30,000 or more will have to pass a needs test to get a loan.

Student aid experts say banks and lending agencies have done a booming business in Guaranteed Student Loans this summer.

Some 3.6 million students are expected to borrow nearly $8 billion under the program in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, up from $4.8 billion a year ago and $1.9 billion three years ago.

"We are going to have to get some more money out of Congress to pay the tab for this summer," said James W. Moore, acting director of the Education Department's student financial aid programs.

Reagan administration budget cuts already have begun to rein in the program. Effective last Sunday, students who take out new loans must pay a 5 percent origination fee.

A student who borrows the maximum $2,500 will get only $2,375 from the bank but must repay principal and interest on the full $2,500.

For a student who must pass the needs test, eligibility requirements for the loans will vary according to the size of the family and the cost of college.

Edward M. Elmendorf, a deputy assistant secretary of education, said some students from families with income as low as $31,000 or $32,000 will be barred from the loan program. Others from families with income of $60,000 or more still may get loans if they attend an expensive college.

Elmendorf said 70 percent of the loans for the coming school year will have been made before the change takes place Oct. 1.

"For people entering higher education this year, I see very little change," he said. "The real effect will not take place until next year."

He said he did not know how many students would be driven out of the loan program. An American Council on Education analyst has estimated that 800,000 to 1 million students who now have loans would be ineligible under the new rules.

Elmendorf said some of the slack could be taken up by an existing federally subsidized loan program for parents. The loan rate in that program will jump from 9 percent to 14 percent on Oct. 1.

The government subsidizes all the interest on student loans while they attend school. The Reagan administration wanted to end the in-school interest subsidy, but Congress refused.

Students pay 9 percent interest starting six months after they leave school. For those who took out loans before this year, the rate is 7 percent. The government now pays 19 1/4 percent interest overall on the loans for students in college.

CBS takes seven of top 10 shows

NEW YORK (AP) — With the start of the 1981-82 television season just a month away, CBS is solidly in command in the networks' ratings competition.

CBS won the three-way race for the 14th consecutive week, with the six top-rated programs and seven of the first 10, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed. All were reruns.

"The Jeffersons" finished the week ending Aug. 23 as the No. 1 show for the period, with "Trapper John, M.D." second and "Circus of the Stars" special in third.

The rating for "The Jeffersons" was 23.5. Nielsen says that means of the homes in the country with television, 23.5 percent saw at least part of the show.

CBS' average rating for the week was 15.4 to 13 for runnerup ABC and 12.8 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute, 15.4 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

The highest-rated for the first-run programs broadcast during the week was an episode from a proposed NBC series called "Irene," No. 15.

Other original programs were only moderately successful — a pre-season professional football game on NBC between Pittsburgh and Dallas was No. 35, with an NBC "Comedy Theater" presentation called "Why Us?" 39th and "Walter Cronkite's 'Universe'" on CBS 40th.

ABC had three of the week's five lowest-rated programs, including "Foul Play" in 62nd place, "Eight is Enough" 63rd and "Those Amazing Animals" 66th.

"Lobo" on NBC was 64th, and an NBC movie, "Buck Rogers," 65th.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated programs:

State district judge resents bribe allegations

DALLAS (AP) — A state district judge who has been questioned about his financial ties to indicted Denton rancher-banker Rex Cauble says he resents suggestions he was bribed to keep quiet about the millionaire's alleged involvement in a drug smuggling operation.

"No one has ever offered me a bribe. Nor have I ever taken one," Judge Byron Matthews told the Dallas Times Herald in a story published Tuesday.

Matthews, who admitted he owes Cauble more than $700,000, told the newspaper he is embarrassed by the debt but has been assured by prosecutors that he is not a target in the Cauble investigation.

Cauble, owner of Cutter Bill's Western World, was indicted Aug. 7 by federal grand jurors on 10 counts of drug racketeering and bank fraud. Prosecutors have said the charges are connected to a scheme to smuggle 86 tons of marijuana into the United States.

Matthews, who admitted he received large loans and loan guarantees from Cauble, said he has been questioned by the FBI and a federal grand jury in Beaumont. Several of his bank records have been subpoenaed along with Cauble's, the newspaper reported.

The newspaper reported that Matthews was questioned by the federal grand jurors about a bribe allegation made two years ago by a defendant later acquitted of charges stemming from the smuggling scheme.

"I did not blame them (federal authorities) for wanting to question me about my relationship with Rex Cauble... neither do I have objections to them seeing my bank records. But I do object to the news media trying to convict me of something that is hearsay," he said.

Matthews told the newspaper that he is convinced of Cauble's innocence and would be willing to testify as a character witness for the wealthy rancher.

"I think he has been framed to a certain extent," Matthews said.

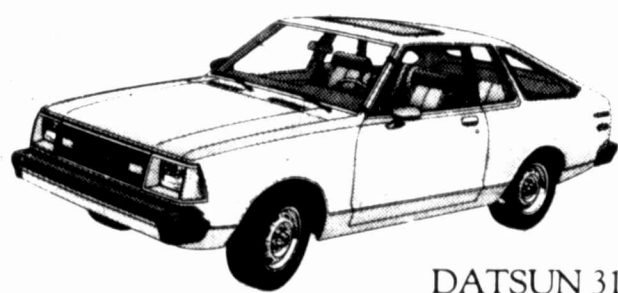

The judge said a drug smuggling ring could have operated at one of Cauble's ranches without the millionaire's knowledge.

"Rex hadn't been on some of his ranches for 12 to 13 years," Matthews said. "He lost interest in them a long time ago."

Matthews, 69, says his financial ties to Cauble began in the late 1960s when the rancher offered to loan the judge enough money to buy some stock. Cauble began buying stock for Matthews through his broker and the judge wound up with 19,500 shares of Austral Oil Co. stock worth $273,000, the newspaper reported.
