Egypt's peace policy continues after Sadat

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat's twin policies of peace with Israel and close alliance with the United States appear safe in the hands of his protegee and Egypt's new leader, Vice President Hosni Mubarak. And Mubarak appears certain to have the crucial help of the armed forces in carrying them on.

Mubarak, nominated by Sadat's party for the presidency after his mentor was assassinated Tuesday, vowed that he would carry on his policies at home and abroad.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will not attend the funeral of slain Egyptian leader Anwar Sadat but has asked former Presidents Jimmy Carter, Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon to help lead an American delegation to Cairo.

In announcing the president's decision to stay home, White House spokesman David Gergen said today that U.S. security agencies were unanimous in recommending that Reagan remain home.

He needs stability at home to maintain the peace process begun by Sadat's 1977 trip to Jerusalem. His biggest problem is the Moslem extremists blamed for Sadat's assassination.

Sadat launched a purge of his domestic opponents last month, and most of the 1,536 people arrested were militant Moslem fundamentalists. Sadat said he had a list of 7,000 more Moslems he would round up if they continued to stir up trouble.

Mubarak announced a year-long state of emergency after Sadat's death, and Western diplomats said they expected "much, much tighter security."

to be the military. He was commander-in-chief of the air force when Sadat made him vice president in 1975, and he has maintained close relations with his uniformed colleagues. He has often journeyed to the United States and other foreign countries to expedite delivery of new weapons.

As long as the military gets the arms it wants, Egypt's president does not have to fear a coup from that quarter, Western diplomats have said.

This is also a big factor in Mubarak's continuation of close ties with the United States. Egypt's chief arms supplier and the bankroller for $1.2 billion worth of civilian aid projects this year.

Farmers convene for cotton

By CAROL HART
Staff Writer

Although a steady drizzle and cool temperatures kept attendance down, about 20 area farmers took part in the 1981 Cotton Field Day sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service Tuesday.

Don Richardson, county extension agent, said Cotton Field Day is a once-a-year event when area farmers get together to view various varieties of cotton being grown in the county and to study money-saving conservation techniques.

When rain and chilly temperatures ruled out a cotton stripper demonstration, the farmers headed from the Knott Co-Op Gin to the Larry Shaw farm to view several varieties of cotton being grown there in a demonstration.

At the Shaw farm, Dr. Ken Lindsey, an agronomist with the extension service, talked with the farmers about 12 different varieties of cotton that Shaw is experimenting with. Shaw said the varieties included Cascot BR-1, Cascot Camd-E, Lamesa 5, Lamesa 8 and Lamesa V-14.

Other varieties on the Shaw farm are Stoneville 213, Earlycot 32-A, Stripper 31-A, SP-37, GSA-75, GSA-78 and GSA-71.

Dr. Lindsey said most of the cotton varieties being experimented with on the Shaw farm are "available commercially." Together, the men discussed plant type, boll type and the maturity date of the cotton varieties.

Cotton Field Days "give everybody a chance to look" at cotton varieties, said Dr. Lindsey, adding that the cotton could be viewed under hometown conditions.

Dr. Lindsey said he and others with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service "work with local people on what they want to work on." Extension personnel also work closely with researchers to determine what cotton variety may be best for a certain area.

Area farmers and researchers look at the experimentation with various varieties of cotton and study "the yield, the grade the staple and the fiber strength" of the cotton, said Richardson. "Disease resistance and drought tolerance" also are studied.

Richardson said "we compile this information into a handbook, and distribute it to cotton farmers in the county. They evaluate the results for themselves."

Richardson said Shaw is chairman of the Howard County Extension

Office's Crops Committee. "Larry helps plan these field days," explained Richardson.

Shaw is only one of several farmers who offer part of their land for experimentation. Other farmers are J.E. Peugh, Rob Haney, Dois O. Ray and Joe Don Zant. The Big Spring Experiment Station also conducts extensive research on cotton crops.

"We've been doing this for several years" Shaw said, "so we can learn about the varieties."

Concerning the 1981 cotton crop, Lindsey said for Howard County "it looks pretty good. We need some dry weather though," he added. "We need some sunshine. But it's going to be a vast improvement over last year."

Man gets 16 years for child rape

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

A Howard County jury today sentenced Carroll Wayne Jones to 16 years in prison on a rape of a child conviction. The jury deliberated a little over 30 minutes before returning the sentence in state district court.

Jones was found guilty of the charge yesterday by the jury after about 15 minutes of deliberations.

The 14-year-old girl Jones attacked testified in court Tuesday morning that Jones had sexual intercourse with her at various times from February to March of this year. The girl, who was 13 at the time of the attacks, testified the last encounter with Jones took place in March, after which she told her sister what was happening. She said she was afraid she was pregnant, and her sister took her to Dr. J.W. Kuykendall for an examination.

Dr. Kuykendall, who testified Monday afternoon, stated in court the girl had had numerous acts of intercourse.

Under questioning from Don

Richard, special assistant to the district attorney, the girl said Jones had threatened to kill her if she told anyone about the incidents of sexual intercourse. She also said she had been an out-patient at Big Spring State Hospital as a result of the incidents.

Sandy Torres, defense attorney for Jones, questioned the girl about where she learned the terms she used in her testimony. She said she had not been told what to say by the district attorney's office.

Under questioning from Torres, the girl said Jones threatened her before the sexual intercourse began.

Other witnesses testified for the defense concerning the time element in which the attacks could have occurred — the bookkeeper where Jones was employed testified as to the early hour the employees had to begin work. The girl claimed the incidents occurred early in the morning.

The jury also heard from Jones' ex-wife and the victim's mother. Jones did not take the stand.

The closing argument for the defense centered around the conflicting statements made by the girl on the stand and the probability of the attacks occurring during the times the girl testified that they did.

Richard, in closing statements for the state, said the main issue was the testimony of the young victim combined with the fact that Jones had the opportunity for the attacks. Richard said time problems and conflicting statements which the girl made to police and later in court are to be expected from a young person remembering traumatic events.

SIGN LANGUAGE

By CAROL HART
Staff Writer

Today's sign is "sick," which also is the sign used for "ill" or "disease."

To form the sign, touch the forehead with the middle finger of the right hand and the stomach with the middle finger of the left hand.

Lottie L. Riekehof in "The Joy of Signing" says the origin of this sign reflected that "both the head and the stomach are not well."

To sign the word "pain," "ache" or "hurt," jab the index fingers toward each other several times. To indicate a certain place that hurts, jab your index fingers toward each other in the general vicinity of the pain.

Now for a little more background on American Sign Language. Most languages change as years pass, and ASL is no exception to the rule.

"Old ASL" was formed of signs used in America prior to 1817 and of old French sign language. And from "old ASL" evolved the modern ASL used by most American signers today.

Regional differences are still evident in sign language, just as regional dialects mark the English language. Some signs are slightly different in different parts of the

Day care center on E. 17th approved

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

Big Spring will get a new day care center to handle up to 17 children, if Mrs. Della Hogue gets her way.

She's well on her way, having won the unanimous approval of the city Planning and Zoning Board last night. The board by a 7-0 vote recommended that Hogue be given a specific use permit to remodel a building she owns at 1514 E. 17th with the intention of converting the building into a day care facility.

The next hurdle is city council approval. It's expected that Hogue's request and the board recommendation will go before the council later this month.

Approval also will be needed by the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Hogue told board members the center would be open five days a week and she would run the center with her daughter.

"With today's economy, more mothers are going to work," Hogue told the board. "We need facilities for their babies so they can work."

She said her facility would be educationally oriented and the staff there "wouldn't be just babysitters."

She gave the board a list of neighbors who she said don't object to the conversion of the single-story structure to a day care center. She said she didn't have an estimate of how much it would cost to remodel the building, which sits on a 57-by-147-foot lot.

The board met in the city council chambers with board chairman Sidney Clark doing most of the questioning.

Boy sold for $350 now in welfare custody

HOUSTON (AP) — A baby boy whose mother allegedly left him with a palm reader and her husband in exchange for $350 has been placed in the temporary care of Harris County Child Welfare workers.

State District Court Judge Robert Lowry Tuesday also ordered welfare workers to investigate the homes that could be provided by his mother, Patricia Skiba, 21, and the couple that claims to have adopted him.

Ms. Skiba testified Tuesday that Bob and Diana Evans have put a hex on her son, 7½-month-old Steven Feld, which has affected his "spiritual quietness."

She testified Monday that she left her baby with the Evanses, who gave her $350, after receiving "counseling" from Mrs. Evans. Ms. Skiba said she had just arrived in Houston from Miami Beach and had only $20.

Evans did not testify but met briefly with reporters to attack Ms. Skiba's statements as lies.

"The child was bruised and hungry," he said. "We got him baby shots and took that dirty diaper off him and got clothes on him. I didn't buy no baby."

country, but a basic knowledge of sign language should make for good communication throughout the states. "American Sign Language," a student text by Dennis Cokely and Charlotte Baker, points out that sign language has evolved naturally from signed languages used by deaf Americans, and that deaf people will not allow "just anything" into the language. There are restrictions about what will be accepted as proper signs.

Action/reaction: Dumpsters data

Q. When is the Kentwood area going to get their dumpsters? I thought it was July 1? What happened?
A. All of the dumpsters should be in place now. They will, however, only be placed in alleys with houses on both sides of the alley. As to why they were not in by July 1, those things happen.

Three men die in crash

CLYDE, Texas (AP) — Officials say bad weather and engine problems may have contributed to the crash of a Cessna 210L that killed three men near this Northwest Texas town.

Callahan County Sheriff Bill Skinner said the three bodies were burned beyond recognition in the fiery crash.

Skinner said cloudy skies and rain may have contributed to the crash. He said witnesses' reports also indicate the plane may have experienced engine problems.

Department of Public Safety spokesman Kelly Smith identified the dead as Jeff Alder, Forrest Cooper and Don T. Anderson, 47, all of Wenden, Ariz.

Smith said Anderson apparently was the pilot.

The plane was en route from Stephenville to Arizona when it crashed about 10:15 a.m. in a field about 2 1/2 miles southeast of Clyde.

Smith said the three men were at a farming seminar Monday at the Texas A&M research center in Stephenville.

Witnesses told officials that the plane attempted to land on a flat grass field but pulled up, came around for a second time and crashed.

Federal Aviation Officials are investigating the cause of the crash.

Cameraman feared for life

NEW YORK (AP) — The ABC cameraman who shot graphic footage of the attack on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says he feared for his life and hid from one of the assassins.

"I made eye contact with one of them and I was afraid he was going to shoot me," Fabrice Moussos, the Cairo-based cameraman, said today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Moussos said he and his soundman ducked behind a wall and "I thought he would come around and shoot us."

When the shooting stopped, Moussos moved from his hiding place and began searching for Sadat at the reviewing stand. "The few seconds we hid behind the wall, security had taken away," he said.

Moussos took some fast footage of the bloody scene and left quickly before "security would confiscate the tape." ABC, CBS and NBC all showed Moussos' film Tuesday afternoon.

Moussos' first reaction to the shooting was that it was part of the parade. When he realized what was happening, he ran to the reviewing stand and saw the attackers holding weapons above their heads because of the height of the stand.

No TV in courtroom

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court decided today against allowing television coverage of trials in Texas courtrooms.

The decision also ruled out still photography and tape recording of trials.

In his brief memorandum announcing the decision, Chief Justice Joe Greenhill cited the overwhelming vote of the state's judges last week against cameras in the courtroom.

"It is the practice of the court to consult with the judiciary of Texas before making major changes in the Code of Judicial Conduct," Greenhill said.

The balloting at the annual meeting of the judicial section of the State Bar of Texas in Corpus Christi showed 182 judges opposed television coverage of trials while only 36 said they favored it or were not opposed.

The matter came before the high court in a petition filed in June 1980 by the Texas Associated Press Broadcasters.

A committee of judges, lawyers and news people was appointed by the State Bar of Texas to study the problem and recommended guidelines allowing camera coverage of trials, but only with the approval of the judge.

Hard-boiled story?

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP) — There was joy, there was sorrow. There was affection, there was disinterest. There were eggs and there were scrambled eggs.

The students in Darlene Stewig's child development class at Hidden Valley High School were given a bunch of hard-boiled eggs last week and told to take care of them for one week as though they were infants.

That meant naming and dressing them, and drawing little faces on their shells.

"Your baby is just like a real-life infant and can never be left alone," the teacher told the students. Mrs. Stewig has conducted the same experiment for three years to give students an idea of the responsibilities of parenting.

"When they find out they will have babies, the students react just like real mothers," she said. "Some are excited and others are not. They don't want the responsibility."

Senior Judy Johnson took her egg to her part-time job as a lab technician, and the front office staff kept an eye on it while she was with patients.

But Carol London made the mistake of leaving her "child" unattended in a social studies class and the instructor egg-napped it. The teacher kept it overnight until Miss London paid a ransom of cookies.

Pam Phillips, a senior who called her child Amber Marie II, said her first egg-child was destroyed when another student poked it.

Junior Chris Peterson lost her first child when she left it in her locker and her books fell on it. Another egg was badly cracked when it was dropped in a hallway at school.

"Eggs roll off tables like babies do, so you can't just leave them unattended," Mrs. Stewig told her students.

Police Beat

Diamond ring and tapes stolen

A woman reported to police Tuesday that a $1,200 diamond ring and a case full of eight-track tapes were taken from her car while it was parked at the YMCA between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Delores Gonzales, who lives at 1209 Utah, said her car window was also damaged in the incident. Total loss of goods and damages was listed at $1,440, police said.

Garry Bodenheimer, 35, was arrested at 5:43 p.m. Tuesday after he allegedly tried to steal a package of cigarettes from the Seven-11 Store at 11th and Johnson, then allegedly damaged the front door of the store, police said.

Store employee Brenda Tingley told police Bodenheimer broke the door off the hinges in the incident, causing $350 to $400 in damages. Bodenheimer was also charged with parole violation from a charge in Odessa, police said.

Laura Mexia told police Tuesday that someone broke the antenna off her car while she was parked at the Sonic Drive-In.

A 22-year-old woman reported a case of aggravated assault to police Tuesday. She said a man she knows hit her about the face and neck, then pulled out a knife and began threatening her, police said.

A local man was charged with reckless conduct Tuesday when he went into the Casa Blanca restaurant and reportedly got angry with a waitress there.

Police reports show the man became angry then went to his car, pulled out a shotgun and waved it around.

A major accident was reported on Simlar at 6:23 p.m. Tuesday. Cars driven by Joyce Taylor, 616 State, and Michael Walker, 2619 Hunter, collided, police said.

Taylor's vehicle had to be towed from the scene, but no one involved in the accident was treated for injuries, police said.

A car driven by Jeffrey Minaryd, 2609 Wasson, was swerving to avoid another vehicle when it collided with a street light and turned over. The vehicle was towed from the scene, but Minaryd and the passengers in his car were not seriously injured, police said.

Cars driven by Shirley Holmes, 2605 Dow, and Annette Gibson, Sterling City Route, collided at 3:28 p.m. at 400 W. Third, police said.

Cars driven by Margie Hill, 1419 Sycamore, and Cucca Everett, 104 N.W. Eighth, collided at 8:17 a.m. Tuesday in the 700 block of Goliad, police said.

At 3:18 p.m. Tuesday, cars driven by Brenda Lemond, No. 2 Crestwood Terrace, and Roselinda Dutcher, 314 N.E. Ninth, collided at 400 Marcy, police said.

At 5:29 p.m., cars driven by Larry Bounds, 713 Washington, and Larry Ringener, 2301 Grace, collided in the 2600 block of Wasson, according to police.

Cars driven by Maud Othman of Pampa and Sharon Nuckolls 1017 Johnson, collided at 6:20 p.m. Tuesday in the 1700 block of Runnels.

An alleged case of hit and run was cleared at 3:41 a.m. today by police. The incident occurred at 13th and Goliad, and involved cars driven by Maurine Hanks of Vealmoor and Ricardo Alexander of Fort Worth. Alexander was arrested and charged with failure to stop and failure to leave information, police said. Two passengers in his car were charged with public intoxication, according to police.

Juror qualified in Daniel trial

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — The first prospective juror has been qualified in the murder trial of Vickie Daniel — widow of former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. — over prosecutors' objections that the panelist wants "a higher burden of proof than the law allows."

Mabel Ralene Mills, 52 and a homemaker from this rural Southeast Texas community, was qualified Tuesday. Another 31 prospective jurors will be chosen before a 12-member panel is seated.

Mrs. Daniel is accused of shooting Daniel, 39 and scion of one of Texas' most prominent families, with a .22-caliber rifle. The former legislator bled to death before an ambulance arrived at the couple's ranch home.

District Attorney Carroll Wilborn contended prosecutors needed only to prove guilt "beyond a reasonable doubt" and argued Mrs. Mills is "holding us to a higher burden of proof than the law allows."

But visiting State District Judge Leonard Giblin of Beaumont ruled Mrs. Mills meant that she could accept minor inconsistencies in testimony and allowed her to be qualified.

Earlier Tuesday, one of 114 prospective jurors said he had not read anything about Daniel's death or a bitter custody battle between the former speaker's parents and his wife.

The response from prospective jurors regarding their exposure to the press was a complete turnaround from that of prospective jurors being screened last spring during the child custody case.

In that trial, "They asked, 'How many people have read about the case?' and out of 60 people there were only four who said they had," said defense attorney Jack Zimmermann. "Either they weren't owning up to it or they really didn't read the newspapers."

Mrs. Daniel testified

during the custody trial that she and her husband had a bitter quarrel the night he was killed. She said he had beaten her and was advancing toward her when she grabbed the rifle.

Mrs. Daniel testified she fired a warning shot, but said she did not remember firing the shot that killed Daniel. She said all she remembered is closing her eyes and hearing a "funny sound."

Strake entry hikes chance for "rich" win

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — George Strake entry into the lieutenant governor's race increases the possibility that the man Texans elect to the No. 2 spot next year will be a Houston millionaire.

Strake, an oil millionaire, on Tuesday said he had quit as secretary of state in order to seek the GOP nomination for lieutenant governor. If nominated — he probably will be unopposed — Strake would face incumbent Bill Hobby, millionaire president of the Houston Post.

"I'm going to mount a campaign unlike anyone has mounted for lieutenant governor. I don't need a poll to tell me I'm behind," Strake said, admitting his "name recognition" among voters might be low.

It will cost about $3 million to make the race, he said.

The former secretary of state quickly put Hobby on the defensive side Tuesday. Strake attacked Hobby's leadership qualities and said Hobby has been in office too long.

"It is apparent to me that some people of this state haven't even seen their lieutenant governor. Some of them question his ability to lead," he said at a Capitol news conference.

Hobby has been lieutenant governor since 1973. "I believe that is long enough for anyone to stay in the second most important political office in this government," according to Strake.

Enrollment up, Coahoma district adds teachers

The Coahoma Independent School District trustees met in a special session Monday with all board members present to discuss enrollment in the elementary grades.

The enrollment at the Coahoma Elementary School is 486, which is an increase of 50 students from last year's school population, according to figures released by the district.

Because of this increase, it was unanimously decided by board members to add one first grade teacher and one fifth grade teacher as soon as possible.

The Coahoma school district is taking applications for the two positions.

Another action taken by the board was the nomination of Jack Watkins to the board of directors of the Howard County Tax Appraisal District.

Auction nets city $93,000

The city of Big Spring is nearly $93,000 richer after holding an all-day auction of surplus property Saturday, city Finance Director Tom Ferguson said.

Ferguson said the city earned $92,952 from the auction — most of it from the sale of hardware left behind by the Air Force when it deeded Webb Air Force Base to the city.

That portion of the sales — $72,021 — will go into the city's airport fund, while the remainder of the money will go into the city general fund.

"This will be a windfall," Ferguson said, adding that there was no provision in the current budget for any expected revenues from the auction.

He said the city sold everything it put on the auction block.

"We did better than we thought we would," he concluded.

The Big Spring Independent School District found itself $2,950 richer from the sale of its own items in the auction, Ferguson added.

First crack in House GOP unity on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's mastery of the Democratic-controlled House is faltering, with moderate Republicans breaking ranks to help pass an $87.3 billion appropriations bill hundreds of millions over the administration's target.

Reagan's supporters said he would surely veto the measure, and GOP leaders said they still have enough votes to make that stick.

But the administration also ran into potential problems in the Senate.

Sources said Republicans who control the Senate Appropriations Committee have agreed not to support Reagan's call for 12 percent across-the-board reductions in non-defense programs and to seek cuts twice as large as the president wants for the military.

The House bill sent to the Senate on Tuesday provides money for the departments of Labor, Education and Health and Human Services for fiscal 1982 and is second only to defense among individual appropriations bills for government agencies and programs.

House GOP leaders claimed a measure of victory in their defeat, saying it at least demonstrated they have enough votes to sustain the vetoes that Reagan has vowed to use on "budget-busting" bills.

Although the House approved on a 383-30 vote a Democratic amendment to cut $74 million from the bill, it voted 249-168 to scuttle a Republican attempt to send the package back to committee for deeper reductions.

The House then passed the bill on a voice vote, instead of the usual recorded vote on such matters.

House Republican Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi said GOP leaders decided against pressing for a recorded vote because they thought they would lose.

He emphasized, however, that "we have the votes, with room to spare, to sustain a veto."

A one-third-plus-one vote of those voting is required to sustain a presidential veto.

"This is the best of bills and the worst of bills," said Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois. "On another day and another time" it would have received nearly unanimous support, he said.

But the bill "is excessive and the president surely will veto it," Michel said in a speech on the House floor.

"This bill is the safety net for the truly needy," said Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, a member of the House Budget Committee who offered the motion to send the bill back to committee. But "in the final analysis, it's $763 million over the budget resolution" enacted by Congress in May.

But 39 Republicans, mostly moderates from the Northeast and Midwest, rejected the motion to send the bill back to committee, marking the first crack in the GOP unity that stood strong on previous budget votes this year.

Twenty-eight Democrats joined with 140 Republicans on the key vote.

Fundamentalism attracts Egyptian college students

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Militant Islamic fundamentalism, which Egyptian military sources claim was at the root of the assassination of President Anwar Sadat, is a university-based movement whose puritanical influence had become increasingly visible in Egypt. The fundamentalists were the main target of Sadat's recent crackdown on opponents to his regime.

In recent years, informally organized Islamic Groupings gained prominence on all 17 Egyptian university campuses, preaching a return to the Spartan life prescribed by the Koran, Islam's holy book.

Egyptian sociologists say most converts to fundamentalism are village youths who have come to Egypt's overcrowded cities and become the first in their families to obtain a university education.

Their adherence to the ways of Islam — strict dress codes, daily prayer, rejection of Western entertainment and alcoholic beverages — has had an impact on the mainstream of Egyptian society.

Although Western dress is still prevalent in Cairo, an increasing number of women wear dark veils or scarves. Thousands of Egyptian office workers kneel on straw mats in hallways and pray daily while facing in the direction of the Moslem holy city of Mecca in Saudi Arabia.

The movement affected Egypt's political life as well. Sadat's National Democratic Party last year sponsored a constitutional amendment that made the Islamic code "the source" of Egyptian law. It had formerly been "a main source."

Sociologists interviewed before Sadat was assassinated Tuesday while reviewing a military parade said they saw the upsurge of fundamentalism partly as a reaction to the jarring contrasts between rich and poor in Egypt's urban life.

"Adherence to Islam provides, for the militants, a complete and righteous vision of a healthy society on earth and a heavenly paradise thereafter," said Saad Eddin Ibrahim, an Egyptian sociologist at the American University of Cairo. He said he interviewed more than 30 militants extensively.

Ali Dessouki, a political scientist at Cairo University and American University, said he found the militants to be an outgrowth of an ideological vacuum.

"Under the previous regime (of Gamal Abdel Nasser), there was a dream of pan-Arabism," he said. "It captured their imaginations. It was something to fight for. Now they have none of this."

"Simultaneously you see more Westernization of Egypt as a result of the economic liberalization — consumer goods, Western movies, more tourists," Dessouki added. "The change has been too rapid. To them, this has become a symbol of decadence, of a morally loose society."

"Also, the shift to extremes has been jolting to the average youth with a rural background — from pro-Russians to pro-Americans, from socialists to capitalists, from the Arabs to Israel, a foe for the past 30 years. All this is too confusing."

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Vice President Hosni Mubarak, a military hero who was President Anwar Sadat's political heir, took control of the Egyptian government after Sadat fell to assassins' bullets.

Mubarak declared a one-year state of emergency seven hours after Sadat was mortally wounded Tuesday by a squad of soldiers who sprayed gunfire and hurled grenades at a stand where Sadat, Mubarak and other leaders were reviewing a military parade commemorating the 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

"We will continue in the name of the spirit and soul of our leader and our constitution... We will abide by all treaties and commitments made," Mubarak said in a broadcast to the shocked nation.

His statement signaled adherence to Sadat's peace treaty with Israel and his alliance with the United States.

Mubarak, 63, was unhurt in the attack that reportedly killed seven Egyptian officials and security men in addition to the 62-year-old president and wounded 27 men, including four Americans.

Army sources said the six assassins who jumped from a truck in the military parade were Egyptian artillerymen, a lieutenant and five enlisted men with Moslem fundamentalist leanings. The semi-official newspaper Al Ahram reported police and troops killed one of the assassins and arrested four others, leaving one unaccounted for, but other papers published pictures of the bodies of two dead "traitors."

Leaders of Sadat's National Democratic Party met in emergency session and nominated Mubarak for a presidential election to be held within 60 days. He is expected to win by a landslide.

Meanwhile, Parliament speaker Sufi Abu Taleb became acting president, but it was apparent that Mubarak had taken over the government.

A state funeral was scheduled Saturday. Former President Jimmy Carter, who helped forge the Camp David peace bond, said he would attend the funeral of his "dear friend." It was not immediately known which other leaders would be there.

Cairo streets emptied after Mubarak announced the president's death. Armored cars with machine guns mounted them and police cars were stationed at major intersections, but there was no repetition of the massive outpouring of grief that followed the death of Sadat's predecessor, Gamal Abdel Nasser, who succumbed to a heart attack in 1970.

A Soviet-trained bomber pilot, Mubarak as the air force commander led the successful first strike on Israeli forces in the occupied Sinai Desert at the start of the 1973 war.

To almost everyone's surprise including his own, he was chosen by Sadat as vice president in April 1975. He was the president's right-hand man, diplomatic troubleshooter and political heir, visiting the United States only last weekend to convey to the Reagan administration Sadat's fears that a Libyan invasion of Sudan, his only major Arab ally, was impending.

Sadat had been under attack by dissidents at home and Moslem hardliners throughout the Arab world for his peace offensive toward Israel that led to the U.S.-sponsored Camp David agreement and the 1979 Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Last month he ordered the arrest of more than 1,500 people, including fundamentalist Moslems, Coptic Christian leaders, and political opponents.

Sadat's death is likely to spur a new period of turmoil in the Middle East. It could embolden Col. Moammar Khadafy, Libya's mercurial ruler and arch foe of Sadat, who reportedly has financed a host of leftist terrorist movements and sent his army into Chad.

The Libyan leader, who campaigned for Sadat's ouster, congratulated the soldiers who fired the fatal shots and called on Egypt's armed forces to take power and reverse Sadat's foreign policy, Libya's official JANANA news agency said.

Syrians danced in the streets of Damascus, chanting, "The traitor is dead." In Moslem West Beirut, Palestinian and Lebanese militia fired shots in the air and exploded sticks of dynamite to express their joy. But the Sudanese government, Sadat's only major ally in the Arab world, declared 40 days of mourning.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who shared the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize with Sadat, mourned the loss of a "peace partner" and "a friend." He said he hoped the peace process 3, continue "as President Sadat would have wanted with all his heart."

President Reagan, speaking on the steps of the White House, said: "America has lost a close friend, the world has lost a great statesman, and mankind has lost a champion of peace."

Administration officials said elements of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force and U.S. warships in the Mediterranean and Middle East "have been placed on increased readiness."

Sadat was on a crowded reviewing stand taking the salutes of the cream of Egypt's armed forces when the assassins struck shortly after 1 p.m. The soldiers began firing at the stand as their open truck, towing an artillery piece, rolled by it.

An Egyptian cameraman reported the assassins shouted "Glory to Egypt! Attack!" as they leaped from the truck and stormed the stand firing automatic weapons and hurling grenades. The gunmen also shouted "You are agents! You are intruders!" at foreign ambassadors and military attaches on the stand.

Oilman makes record gift to OU

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Saying he believes his contribution will make the University of Oklahoma a world-class center of energy, a Dallas oilman has donated $30 million to construct the school's new energy center and endow related programs.

The gift by Bill D. Saxon and his wife, announced Tuesday, is the largest donation in the history of Oklahoma higher education, OU President Bill Banowsky and Gov. George Nigh confirmed.

Saxon, 53, a multi-millionaire and an OU graduate, said he was thankful to be in a country where he could be in a position "to acquire... Now I'm in a position to give."

At a news conference to announce the gift, Banowsky also said he has set a new goal of $65 million to endow energy programs and construct the center, described as the nation's first energy complex geared primarily to research.

The center will house the newly created OU College of Geosciences, a combination of the Schools of Geology and Geophysics and other energy related disciplines. It will cover seven acres and will have 340,000 gross square feet.

The Gothic-styled building is planned near the university's College of Engineering, where about half of the institution's petroleum research is conducted, Banowsky said.

The site of the energy center has been a source of controversy because it will cause the demolition or relocation of about 25 houses, containing 60 to 80 living units, and also because the Board of Regents may have violated the state Open Meeting Act when it endorsed the center in July.

Saxon is founder and chairman of the board of the Dallas-based Saxon Oil Co., which is involved in domestic oil and gas exploration, development, production and crude-oil processing.

Banowsky said Saxon's gift is a challenge gift and will be matched dollar for dollar to reach the $65 million goal.

Half of the Saxon gift — $15 million — will be used for construction and is to be matched by $15 million from the private sector and at least $15 million from state appropriations.

Another $10 million of the Saxon gift will be used as an endowment for the energy center.

The remaining $5 million from the Saxons will be used to endow chairs and professorships, with additional funding to come from others.

"Mr. and Mrs. Saxon's gift is a quantum leap forward for the University of Oklahoma, not merely because of its magnitude, but because it expresses confidence in our goals and our concept of the energy center," Banowsky said.

"Already this gift has generated other gifts from alumni and friends, several in the $1 million category," Alan Edgar, a Dallas stock analyst, says Saxon owns about 80 percent of the 20 million shares of his company, making him worth about $200 million.

Flash flood watch issued in South Texas

By The Associated Press

A flash flood watch was in effect today for much of South Texas as heavy rains and thunderstorms continued in the area, delivering record precipitation and pushing streams over their banks.

More rainfall was also expected across North and West Texas, the National Weather Service said. Many creeks and streams have reached flood levels. In San Antonio, where the heaviest precipitation occurred, 4 to 7 inches of rain fell in a six-hour period Tuesday.

High temperatures across the state were expected to reach only the 60s to 70s, except for a few readings in the 80s in the far south and Big Bend region. The passage of a cold front from the Panhandle to coastal areas today lowered morning temperatures to the 50s and 60s in most areas.

Some rules for living

Here are some observations we have collected from various sources on rules of living and the reasons things sometimes go wrong.

THE CHAPPAQUIDDICK THEOREM: The sooner and in more detail you announce the bad news, the better.

LAW OF OBSERVATION: Nothing looks as good close up as it does from far away. Or — nothing looks as good from far away as it does close up.

CHURCHILL'S COMMENTARY ON MAN: Man will occasionally stumble over the truth, but most of the time he will pick himself up and continue on.

LAW OF INNOVATION: If you want a track team to win the high jump, you find one person who can jump seven feet, not seven people who can jump one foot.

HORRIBLE LAW: It's better to have a horrible ending than to have horrors without end.

LAW OF THE INDIVIDUAL: Nobody really cares or understands what anyone else is doing.

IMPOSSIBLE LAW: Nothing is impossible for the man who doesn't have to do it himself.

DISTINCTION LAW: There are two types of people: those who divide people into two types, and those who don't.

THE RULE OF THE WAY OUT: Always leave room to add an explanation if it doesn't work out.

ROSS'S LAW: Never characterize the importance of a statement in advance.

RULE OF THE GREAT: When somebody you greatly admire and respect appears to be thinking deep thoughts, they probably are thinking about lunch.

O'BRIEN'S PRINCIPLE (THE $357.73 THEORY): Auditors always reject any expense account with a bottom line divisible by 5 or 10.

PAULG'S LAW: In America, it's not how much an item costs, it's how much you save.

NINETY-NINETY RULE OF PROJECT SCHEDULES: The first ninety percent of the task takes ten percent of the time, and the last ten percent takes the other ninety percent.

THE ORDERING PRINCIPLE: Those supplies necessary for yesterday's experiment must be ordered no later than tomorrow noon.

CAPTAIN PENNY'S LAW: You can fool all of the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool MOM.

Muddle takes command

Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — Remember Gen. Winter, the natural force that dominated the Russian front during World War II? Well, a different natural force emerged last week as the supreme warrior in the Reagan administration. The most important strategic decision yet made found Gen. Muddle in command.

The administration came to office united behind a campaign pledge to build a number of different weapons systems and a general commitment to increase defense spending. But Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger has never enunciated a general strategy that links defense with comprehensive foreign policy goals.

ALL THESE FORCES came to the surface in the decision regarding the MX missile. The MX is a huge weapon of high accuracy, supposed to ride out a Russian attack and then destroy even the most heavily protected Soviet missiles. It is part of a cluster of weapons — including the B-1 bomber, the Stealth bomber and a new submarine missile — which Reagan, as a candidate, said were required to "close the window of strategic vulnerability" supposedly opened by the Russians through their recent buildup. There has been general agreement inside the administration on the B-1 and the Stealth, and on the submarine missile. But there has been deep discord on the basing of the MX missile. The basing is critical because the MX can only close the window of vulnerability by virtue of its ability to survive a Soviet strike.

The Carter administration wanted a deceptive basing mode that would shuttle 200 MX missiles among 4,600 silos to be built in Nevada and Utah. That project acquired powerful backing among Air Force officers. But Republican political figures close to Reagan — including his good friend Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada — objected on the ground of cost (some $40 billion) and potential damage to their states. Backing away from deceptive basing of the MX has been a Weinberger project ever since he came to the Pentagon. He first thought about putting the MX out to sea in submarines. That idea was shot down by the State Department with the argument that if the U.S. refused to base nuclear missiles on land, the Europeans would certainly not go along with modernization of nuclear forces on the Continent.

NEXT WEINBERGER became enthusiastic about putting the MX aloft in a plane. The Air Force killed that idea on the ground it was technically impossible.

Third, as late as last Tuesday, parts of the White House and parts of the Pentagon were saying the decision was for a deceptive mode of basing in which 100 MX missiles would be shuttled among a thousand different holes, mainly in Nevada. The holes were to be protected by an anti-ballistic missile system. While the Air Force affected to be happy with the thousand holes, the State Department expressed worry that the decision might jeopardize the 1972 ABM treaty with Russia.

In the final decision Friday, the Secretary of Defense and the President simply threw in the hand.

They have decided to place 100 MX missiles in a hundred silos originally built for other large missiles. As expected, the B-1 bomber and the Stealth bomber and the new submarine missile will be developed. Research will go forward on protecting the MX system through a ballistic missile defense.

To me, the decision seems right. I do not and I did not believe in even the remote possibility of a Soviet attack.

But in the process of reaching a decision that makes the world safer, the Reagan administration has confused everybody and opened what will undoubtedly be a destructive debate. The Air Force and its tribunes are bound to unleash a storm of withering criticism. Weighty figures in the Carter administration, who were driven by Republican attacks to rely on the MX, have no way to support the administration now. And everybody has to wonder whether the President, who only last Thursday was talking about "the window of vulnerability," knows what he is doing.

Pentagon tries to pull a sneaky

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon generals and admirals are running scared — not so much of the Russians, or the administration's timid cutbacks in military budget increases, or even public wrath over curtailment of social programs while the defense establishment lives high off the hog.

What has scared the brass hats and their buddies in the defense contracting game is Sen. Sam Nunn, of all people. The respected Georgia Democrat is a longtime champion of a strong military. But now he is trying to do something — actually do something — about the scandalous multibillion-dollar cost overruns that have become the hallmark of virtually every Pentagon weapons program.

Nunn has offered an amendment to the defense authorization bill which would force the Pentagon to mend its profligate ways with defense contractors.

"This is the first legislative measure that would make it really painful for the services and contractors to treat weapons programs as a route to a bottomless money bag," a high Pentagon official told my associate Indy Badhwar.

THE NUNN AMENDMENT is no cure-all, but it could be effective in encouraging a little fiscal responsibility at the Pentagon. It's really quite simple: It would require regular and detailed reporting to Congress on costs of every weapons program. More than that, in the likely event of a cost overrun, all spending on a project would cease until the Pentagon gave Congress a satisfactory explanation for the overrun. The secretary of defense would have to justify continued spending in person.

This attempt to make the Defense Department answerable for the billions Congress ladies out may seem reasonable to any taxpayer, but it is driving the four-star spendthrifts in the Pentagon up the wall. This kind of accountability may be OK for welfare and Medicare recipients, but for generals and admirals? What impertinence!

The brass hats are discreet enough not to dress down the senator directly for insubordination. Instead, they are quietly trying to defang the Nunn amendment by offering some innocent-seeming "preferred solutions" to the problem of overruns. Memos outlining these Pentagon substitutes fell into the hands of a conservative, Washington-based watchdog group, the Project on Military Procurement.

In some cases, the "preferred solution" involves only the change or omission of a phrase, or even a single word. But the effect would be devastating, it would allow the big bucks brigadiers to do business at the same old charity bazaar for contractors.

SOME EXAMPLES:

Nunn's "total program acquisition unit cost" would be changed to "program acquisition unit cost." In plain English, this would mean that such items as military construction, test equipment and spare parts — the very areas where major cost overruns occur — would be exempted from congressional review.

Nunn's amendment requires precise accounting of the effect of inflation on cost overruns. The Pentagon wants to base its cost accounting on a "constant dollar" value — which is not adjusted for inflation. This would enable the Defense Department to continue masking a substantial portion of an overrun as the work of inflation.

The brass hats want to eliminate Nunn's requirement that the causes of overruns and actions taken to control them be put in writing. This would make effective congressional oversight impossible.

Nunn's amendment states that "no funds may be obligated" on any weapons system 30 days after notification that it has gone above a promised spending level. The Pentagon wants this changed to "no additional contractual obligations may be incurred." This devious device would defeat the amendment's purpose because Congress has the right to prohibit the spending of money but cannot control contractual dealings between bureaucrats and contractors.

WHITE HOUSE PIPELINE: President Reagan's political adviser Lyn Nofziger vowed he would leave one year to the day after the inauguration. But the anniversary falls on a Wednesday, so he'll be on the payroll at least until Friday, Jan. 22, and may stay longer to wind up unfinished business, according to a White House aide.

In a recent TV commercial promoting the United Way charity campaign, the president referred to himself as "a fellow volunteer." Asked about this, a White House spokesman explained that the chief executive's volunteer effort for United Way consisted of taping the commercial — or approximately five minutes' work.

Around the rim Search for peace

Linda Mule

Being generally opposed to depressing subjects such as assassinations, the case of Anwar Sadat calls for an exception to the rule.

Sadat was one of the few friends of the United States on the African continent, and also the only Middle Eastern leader with the courage (or inclination) to attempt a lasting peace with Israel. He was a man of peace in a world seemingly bent toward self-destruction.

EGYPT SEEMS to have a knack for producing great leaders. Not always good, granted, but great in the sense of power and ability to govern. Pharaohs with absolute power ruled the country for centuries, leaving behind pyramids that tower over the desert sands and influence the country even today.

The contrasts in Egypt are stark. Beaches in the port city of Alexandria are lined by modern hotels, and every model of car can be seen darting in the streets of the city. Only a few miles away, however, oxen draw the plows and the water, just as they have for centuries.

To be in Egypt can give the feeling of being engulfed, even overwhelmed, by the past and its influence. Sadat attempted to overcome the negative influences of the past — particularly the almost continuous conflict with Israel. Vast changes have taken place since Sadat became president, but change has been slow and the trend could easily be reversed.

WHOEVER ASSUMES the leadership role in Egypt must be equally as courageous as Sadat to stand up to the blood-thirsty leaders of the rest of the Arab world, and to continue the search for peace in the most troubled area of the world.

Muscle imbalance causes knee distortion

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have been told I have "patellar chondromalacia" in my right knee. I understand this is a degenerative condition that may go away with simple exercises, which I have been taught. I am wondering about the origin of the problem. Is it caused by some injury? What cartilages are involved? I am a 31-year-old woman and have not knowingly injured the knee. — S.F.

The kneecap (patella) is covered with cartilage (the chondro reference). If the cartilage begins to soften (malacia) you have your problem. Injury, but not necessarily the dramatic kind — like a blow to the leg — may be a cause. The repetitive "injury" of kneeling, squatting, stair-climbing or running can cause it.

The kneecap fits down into a groove. If the thigh muscles are not in balance or if the thigh bone from birth is slightly out of line, the kneecap can be pulled out of this groove. It then grates against bone and wears down the cartilage covering. Women are a little more likely to get this because of their wider pelvis, which turns the thigh bone to a different angle than a man's. That tends to pull the kneecap out of the groove.

Most patients respond to rest, aspirin and a program of thigh muscle strengthening aimed at putting the knee back in its proper alignment. For severe cases crutches are used, and if necessary there are operations to fix such a troublesome kneecap.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I've been told the protein in peanut butter cannot be assimilated by the body. I am trying to lose weight so this is good news to me. What's the scoop? — B.A.B.

That's news to me. I don't believe it. Peanut butter has many of the essential amino acids (parts of protein) that we need. Two tablespoons of peanut butter have 130 calories, and so far as I know every one of those calories is assimilated.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I wish when you write about neurosis you would recommend Recovery, Inc., in conjunction with psychiatric help if necessary. — P.S.

Consider it recommended. I got lots of mail like yours after my recent discussion of neurosis.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Recently I went to a doctor for acute pain and tenderness in my right side. Appendicitis was suspected, but tests showed the appendix normal. The pain subsided slowly and by evening was gone. One doctor suggested it might be mittelschmerz. I have had pain around ovulation time. Would you explain mittelschmerz? I am a 35-year-old female. — Mrs. M.B.

Mittelschmerz is German for "middle pain," the pain that may occur in the middle part of the menstrual cycle believed related to the release of the ovum (egg) from the ovaries. The pain does not have to occur during every cycle and it doesn't have to be as severe as you describe. Mittelschmerz can mimic appendicitis, and then the question becomes, "Is this appendicitis or mittelschmerz?" For most, simple pain relievers are sufficient for the pain of mittelschmerz. For you, I am keeping my fingers crossed that you do not have a repeat episode.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Recently I noticed that when taking extended walks (a mile or more) that my fingers swell to a point where they are hard to bend. Eventually, they return to normal, but what causes this? — M.B.

This is most likely due to leaking of fluid from the blood capillaries. The pendulum motion of your arms when walking and the effect of gravity forces the fluid into the tissues. I would be concerned about this only if the swelling did not go away shortly after you have done your walking. This doesn't happen to runners because they run with their arms flexed upward.

Artist stabbed to death

ANSON, Texas (AP) — Prominent Texas artist John Crump was stabbed to death in his studio here early Tuesday, officials said.

Police say Crump, 53, was stabbed three times with a pair of scissors found in the studio, which doubled as his home.

Crump worked for the Chicago Public Schools System in the art department from 1952 to 1972 and served as department director for 10 of those years.

He studied under famed artist Frederick Taubes of New York and was Taubes' assistant for three years.

Officials ordered an autopsy and police say they have made no arrests in connection with the slaying.

Trustees map hefty agenda

Members of the Big Spring Independent School District's Board of Trustees will meet at 5:15 p.m. Thursday in the board room of senior high school.

Budget amendments, concerning the bilingual program, the Head Start program and dressing room lockers at Goliad, will be discussed. Nominations for members on the Howard County Consolidated Tax Board will be taken, and the resignation of personnel will be considered.

Student suspensions will also be discussed, as will a local policy update. The superintendent of schools, Lynn Hise, will report on the joint TASB-TASA meeting, the TEA monitoring visit, and a second October meeting.

Lights out at Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The lights went out at Texas A&M University Tuesday, but classes continued as usual.

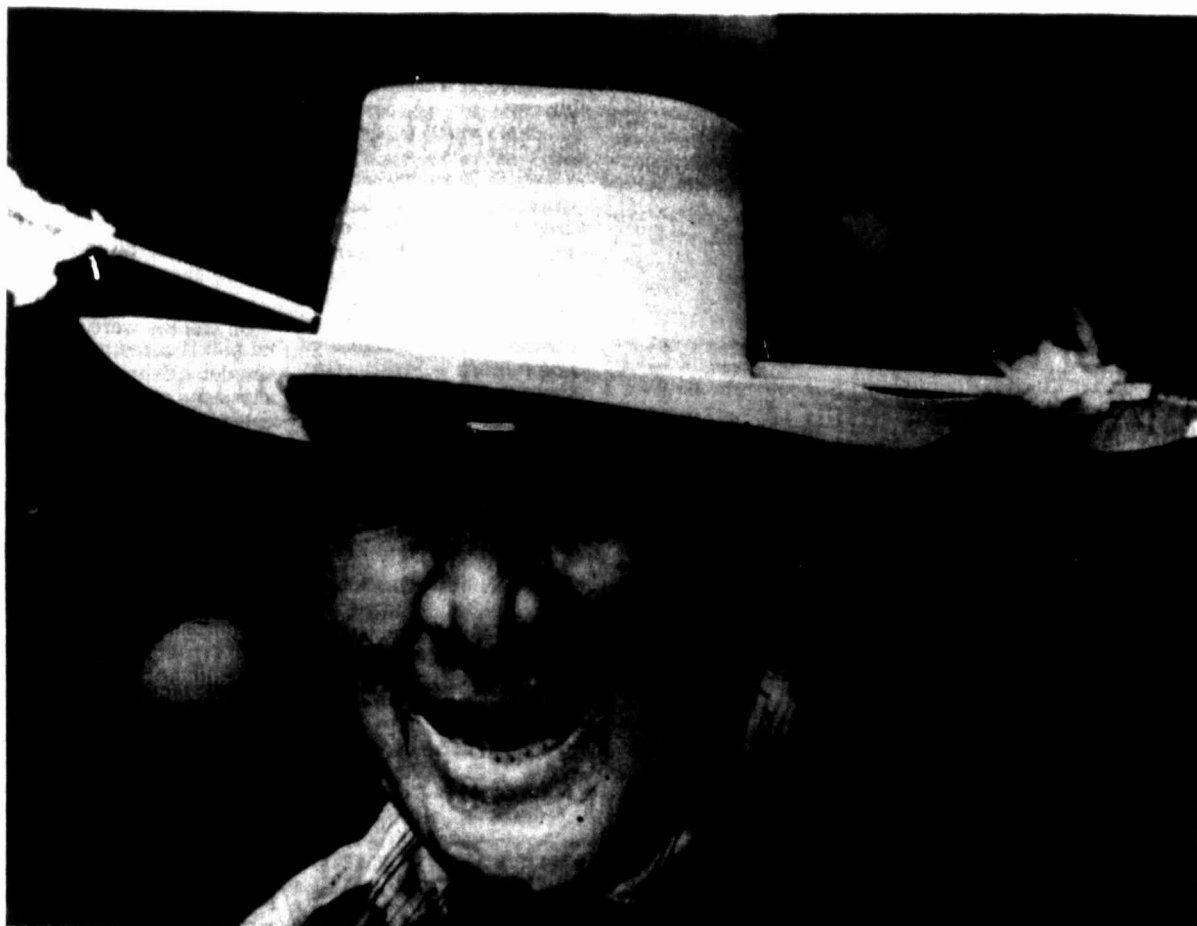

Water from heavy rains seeped into a portion of the campus' electrical generating equipment, causing a power failure.

The entire campus was blacked out at 7 a.m., and officials said the electricity would not be restored until sometime late Tuesday night.

Cardinal Cody working again

CHICAGO (AP) — Cardinal John Cody was returning to work today following two days of medical tests described by aides as routine.

Cody, head of the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese, entered Columbus Hospital Sunday night. The 73-year-old prelate has a history of heart disease and diabetes.

EXPECTING THE WORST — Pete Rodriguez was expecting the worst or tempting fate as he wore a novelty arrow through his hat while manning a dart booth at a church fair in San Angelo Sunday. Rodriguez blew balloons, replaced burst balloons and awarded prizes in the booth at the St. Josephs Festival to benefit their building fund in San Angelo. Although Rodriguez was not struck by a dart a few impatient youths began tossing darts before Rodriguez had finished replacing a few burst balloons.

Hightower candidate for agriculture post

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jim Hightower, who lost a race for the Texas Railroad Commission last year, has announced as a candidate for agriculture commissioner in the 1982 Democratic primary and says this time he means to win.

Hightower, sweating in a black three-piece suit in 90-degree weather, made his announcement Monday from the back of a pick-up truck with bales of hay in his rostrum.

"I am running as an old time, unreconstructed, unapologetic, working people's Democrat. I'm the candidate of the consumers who feel gouged when they go into that supermarket with a $20 bill and come out with a little sack and no change. I'm the candidate of the family farmers and ranchers who are tired of being efficient, productive, competitive and broke," he said.

Country singer Steve Fromholz warmed up the crowd on the Capitol lawn, and Hightower provided sandwiches and soft drinks.

Hightower said a coalition of consumers and farmers would help him beat Reagan Brown, who has been commissioner the past four years.

He said both farmers and consumers had been hurt financially by "giant middlemen corporations" while Brown sat idly by.

"That's my main complaint — there has been no fight," Hightower said, calling Brown a "do-nothing" who had been "AWOL on the big issues every time it counted."

Hightower, 38, has been president of the Texas Consumer Association for a year and will give up the office this weekend.

He failed in the 1980 Democratic Primary to unseat Railroad Commissioner Jim Nugent, 633,423 to 588,475. But he said the race gave him name recognition that equals or betters Brown's. Hightower said he believed he could defeat Brown with a campaign treasury of $300,000 and already has raised $50,000.

During Brown's four years in office, Hightower said, food prices have risen 50 percent while prices paid to farmers have plummeted and caused "more than 8,000 good Texas farmers to go under."

He quoted a rural saying that "the water won't ever clear up until you get the hogs out of the creek" and said:

"The hogs are in the creek and they're not going to get out on their own. We're going to have to put our shoulders to it and push them out, and that's what I'm doing — rallying a constituency of gougees to shove the hogs out of the creek," Hightower said.

Before entering politics, Hightower was editor of the Texas Observer.

Cops probe slaying of figure in UH securities scandal

HOUSTON (AP) — Police are investigating the slaying of a major figure in a 1977 securities scandal that cost the University of Houston about $13.5 million in transactions and unnecessary commissions, officials said Tuesday.

Roger Knox, 37, was shot to death as he parked his car at his apartment complex about 12:05 a.m. Monday, officials said.

Homicide detective Jimmy Ladd said Monday there is no apparent motive for the shooting. He said there was no indication of any link with the securities scandal.

Knox and his partner in a securities firm, Mel Covington, were convicted in November 1979 after being convicted of fraud in connection with securities transactions involving the school. The fraud involved government securities trades that were part of the school's short-term investment program.

Both men were sentenced to six years' probation.

Homicide Detective J.L. McGee said there were no witnesses to the shooting.

Relatives said Knox has been working for more than a year as an administrative manager in Brown & Root's petrochemical division here.

Black clergymen criticize Reagan's Haitian policy

HOUSTON (AP) — Leaders of a black clergy group attending a national convention here have termed President Reagan's policy on illegal Haitian immigrants racist and inhuman.

The Rev. William Augustus Jones, president of the National Black Pastors' Conference, issued the statement Tuesday. He criticized Reagan's executive order authorizing the Coast Guard to intercept and turn back ships carrying Haitian refugees.

"Ronald Reagan, with this vicious and inhuman act, now joins the ranks of the shark feeders," said Jones, of Brooklyn, N.Y. "He has become an outright killer of the American dream of freedom, justice and human rights."

"Mistreatment of Haitian refugees is a clear expression of Reaganistic racism."

The White House, in announcing the order Sept. 29, drew a distinction between illegal immigrants and refugees. A spokesman said those fleeing political persecution would not be denied entry into the United States.

Jones said he expects the conference to draw 300 people before closing Friday.

Do's and don'ts of job interviews are given

AUSTIN, Texas — Although they may not rank in the category of deadly sins, certain gaffes in dress and demeanor may hurt a college student's chances for success during a job interview with a business recruiter. University of Texas students were told recently.

Speakers included Mary Lynn Damhorst, assistant professor of home economics and sponsor of the UT Fashion Group; Dr. Fred Jablin, assistant professor of speech communication who teaches a course on Interviews and Interviewing; Terry Schillace, a UT Graduate School of Business student who formerly recruited for an accounting firm, and Joe Vorsas, director of the UT Business Placement Office.

Instead of dress, women "probably" ought to consider wearing a suit to an interview, she said.

For men, Ms. Damhorst suggested they wear gray, navy or dark tan suits in a conservative cut. Men's suits should be in good fabrics such as wool or wool blends, and men "should avoid 100 percent polyester double-knits."

Matching pants and jacket make a man look taller and slimmer, she said, while plaid suits make a man appear shorter and fatter. As for textures, she cautioned men to "avoid anything shiny." Another no-no for a male job-seeker is a white linen suit, she said. In regard to shirt colors, she said to wear a white shirt "if you want to be totally safe."

Dr. Jablin cautioned about the use of too much humor, wisecracks and jokes on the part of the job-seeker.

Mr. Vorsas, from his experience in directing the business placement office, observed that one of the most unrealistic expectations a student can have is "to think companies are going to hire you right out of school for an overseas position."

Ms. Damhorst said that while the kind of clothes you wear probably won't make or break an interview, they give you an "edge" in the vital area of first impressions and "provide some sort of message whether you like it or not."

Her advice: "Go for quiet clothes, things that don't scream out."

Referring to a recent study she made to gauge how persons perceive those who are attired in certain ways, Ms. Damhorst said she found that men and women who were shown to be wearing suits were perceived to be in managerial positions, while those in casual attire were not.

Dr. Jablin said lack of preparation for the job interview is a common fault of students.

Students should prepare themselves to know something about the recruiter's company, he said. They also should be prepared to discuss their own qualifications and objectives and be able to answer a typical recruiter's request.

"Tell me about yourself."

In listing a number of complaints that interviewees have about job-seekers, Dr. Jablin said lying was the worst offense.

Job applicants should dress to look like a person in the role they are aspiring to, she suggested.

Ms. Damhorst told women students not to wear bright red to an interview, for it is too stimulating a color. She suggested that women wear medium to darker colors or soft patterns of color. When interviewing, "emulate your grandmother" by not wearing low-cut necklines, avoid light clothes, wear lower heels, don't wear hats, pants or culottes, and "stay away from vintage clothes and weird pattern combinations."

The Texas Star African Violet Club met in the home of Mabel Kountz Thursday. Sixteen members and one guest, Mrs. Granville Glenn, were present.

Thelma Montgomery presented a program entitled "African Violet Suckers." Refreshments were served following the program.

The next meeting will be Nov. 8 in the home of Lona Crocker, 1707 Benton.

Dear Abby

Loyal Reader Deserves Abby's Best Shot

DEAR ABBY: I've read you faithfully ever since you started 25 years ago and clipped many of the items I thought were worth keeping. I have over 1,200 of them.

One letter signed "Too Late" caused me to visit my elderly mother every day during her last two years in a nursing home, and I will always be indebted to you for giving me the motivation that now permits me to live with a clear conscience.

Why don't you put together a book containing the cream of all the letters that have appeared in your column over the years? It would be a cinch best-seller.

E.S.G. IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR E.S.G.: You must have "E.S.P." I have put together a book containing the "cream" — it's titled "The Best of Dear Abby" and will be in the bookstores on October 8. The chapter "Encore, Encore" contains those letters most frequently requested for a rerun. You will be pleased to know that the one signed "Too Late" ranked "numero uno!"

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Never Been Kissed" prompts this: When I was a college freshman, a lovely sophomore girl offered to teach me how to play tennis if I'd help her with her Spanish. I was a shy guy and rather afraid of girls. I had tried a bit of kissing in high school, but derived no particular thrill out of it.

Well, I learned tennis. She learned Spanish and was so grateful she offered to take me riding in her Model-A Ford. We became better acquainted, and one moonlit night we were parked under the tall ponderosa pines of Flagstaff, Ariz. I ventured into a few nervous but delightful moments of petting, when suddenly she stunned me with, "Sam, you can't kiss worth a damn!"

I was terribly embarrassed and all I could say was, "Well, that's the way my mother used to kiss me."

"That's what I thought," she retorted. "Now, quit puckering up your lips like a bunch of stiff nerves. Moisten them just a little, then part them ever so slightly and keep them soft and velvety... like this." Then she kissed me several times. I learned fast and in no time at all I was an expert.

FAST LEARNER

DEAR FAST: Beautiful! That's the best kind of lip service.

DEAR ABBY: You seem willing to let readers air their gripes, so here I am with mine: It's women who get free taxi service because they don't drive. "Mrs. I-Don't-Drive" has been bumming rides for years. All her friends are conditioned to pick her up and take her home, and they don't think a thing of it.

When you ask how come they don't drive, they'll tell you they don't have the patience, or the coordination, or the nerve to drive a car. Or else they say they panic in traffic, or that freeways freak them out.

It's my theory that these women never bothered to learn because it was easier to bum rides. And cheaper, too.

Abby, there are driving schools galore for anyone who wants to learn. And there's no age limit, either. My neighbor came from a foreign country last year and learned how to drive at 62! And look at all the 16-year-old morons who are driving! I've had it with these lazy free-loaders. Thanks for letting me get this off my chest. I feel better now.

EDITH

DEAR EDITH: Glad you feel better, but for my part, anyone who panics in traffic, is freaked out by freeways and lacks the patience, nerve or coordination to drive does the rest of society a favor by not driving.

Everybody needs friends. For some practical tips on how to be popular, get Abby's Popularity booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed stamped (35 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Texans mourn assassination of Egyptian President Sadat

By The Associated Press

Texas politicians and religious leaders expressed shock and sorrow over the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, whom they described as a "friend of peace" and one of the "towering world figures of this generation."

Texas Gov. Bill Clements said in El Paso that Sadat's death should be "worsome to the whole world."

"I had a great, great respect for him. I thought he was one of the truly great statesmen of our time," said Clements. "He made an enormous contribution to that area (the Middle East) in trying to solve some of the historic problems there."

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said he was "shocked and saddened" by the assassination and he called the slain Egyptian leader

"one of the towering world figures of this generation."

"His courage, imagination and vision revitalized the peace process in the troubled Middle East. The world will miss the dynamic leadership on this magnificent statesman," Tower said.

"President Sadat was a sincere friend of the United States and the American people."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Sadat was "one of two or three foreign leaders I most admired."

"He was a friend of peace and of this country. His death is a tragedy for his family, for his country and for the civilized world," Bentsen said.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, called Sadat "a man of singular vision and boldness."

"He had rare intellectual, moral and personal courage — physical courage as well," said Wright.

"I felt upset — terribly upset and deeply saddened. He's a warm and gracious person, a great and moving figure in the world," he added.

Tower said Sadat's assassination makes initiatives toward peace in the Middle East even more critical.

Texas religious leaders said they grieved for the man who initiated the Egyptian-Israeli peace agreement.

"When a man of peace is removed by violence, everyone who loves peace is in pain. I am in pain," said Rabbi Gerald Klein of Temple Emanu-el in Dallas.

"What is left to do but to pray harder for the peace President Sadat gave his life for."

The Rev. W.A. Criswell, pastor of Dallas' huge First Baptist Church, called the assassination "one of the greatest tragedies of our modern generation."

"Only the evil mind and heart of Russia and her terrible allies could delight in the assassination of Sadat," said Criswell.

"He certainly will be remembered in our prayers," said Rabbi Samuel E. Karff of Temple Beth Israel in Houston.

"We could not ignore this reality or fail to express our deepest regret, our sincere grief and our hope," Karff said.

He called Sadat "a remarkable man whose place in history is secure."

Sadat visited Texas in 1975, traveling to Houston to ask businessmen to invest in Egypt.

He was honored at a Texas Welcome Party that included a mock Old West-style shootout.

Secret service agents advised against staging the mock shootout, but Sadat, who reportedly was fond of western movies, said he wanted to see it.

Hearing on arms 'saves' lawmaker

By BILL GARLAND
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Had it not been for a hearing on armaments, Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, might have been right along side Egyptian President Anwar Sadat Tuesday when he was assassinated in Cairo.

The congressman was invited three weeks ago by the Egyptian minister of defense to view the showing of Egyptian arms.

"I saw him on TV today (the defense minister) with blood running down the side of his face. I'm rather happy I wasn't on the stand today, yes," said Wilson after the assassination.

Apparently the only congressman invited to attend the Egyptian parade, Wilson said "the reason I didn't go was (that) the subcommittee on defense is on the MX missile."

Last month Wilson set up a meeting here with Lt. Gen. M.A. Abou Ghazale, minister of Egyptian defense and military production, and other members of the House Appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations. After the meeting Ghazale invited Wilson to attend the defense parade in Cairo.

"I've been acquainted for some time with General Ghazale, and got some additional money for Egypt for defense purposes," said Wilson.

The Texas Democrat was successful in adding $200 million for Egypt to the foreign operations appropriation bill, though the bill has not yet gone to the House floor.

Wilson was the only member of the subcommittee invited to the parade, and the congressman said he thought he was the only member of Congress invited.

Another Texas Democrat, Rep. Phil Gramm, said after the shooting that Sadat told him in a visit to Egypt last year that he considered the establishment of a stable Egyptian government his foremost accomplishment.

Sadat-at-a-glance

FUNERAL
A state funeral for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, assassinated on Tuesday, will be held Saturday in Cairo. The White House says President Reagan is leaning toward not attending and probably will ask former Presidents Carter, Ford and Nixon to represent him.

REACTION
Sudan, Egypt's lone major Arab ally, declared 40 days of mourning and Western countries generally mourned his passing. But the hardline Arab states rejoiced, with Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy congratulating the assassins. Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Algeria, the Palestine Liberation Organization, the Arab league and other hardliners' boycotted a United Nations ceremony of tribute to Sadat. The Soviet Union said the shooting was the result of Egyptian discontent with Sadat's policies.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he mourned Sadat as a negotiating partner and friend and said he hoped the peace between his country and Egypt would continue.

THE SUCCESSOR
According to its parliamentary rules, Egypt installed Parliament Speaker Sufi Abu Taleb as interim president, but it was apparent that the power already was in the hands of Sadat's hand-picked successor, Vice President Hosni Mubarak, 63. Mubarak declared a one-year state of emergency. An election is to be held in 60 days and Mubarak is expected to win in a landslide.

AWACS SALE
The Reagan administration says the assassination "increases the urgency" of its proposed sale of AWACS warning planes to Saudi Arabia. But the House Foreign Relations Committee, in line with heavy congressional opposition to the sale, is expected to vote against it. Senate Republican and Democratic leaders urged a delay in congressional consideration of the sale, but the administration said it opposed delay.

Three U.S. servicemen wounded in Cairo attack

By The Associated Press

The father of an Air Force captain injured slightly in the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says he hadn't even known that his son was in Egypt.

"If he was in Cairo, it probably was on official business," Edward Ryan, who lives near Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., said of his son, Capt. Christopher Ryan, 34, an aide-de-camp since June to Gen. William Smith, deputy commander in chief of the U.S. European Command.

The younger Ryan was injured in the foot and "as far as we know, he's still in Cairo," Ryan said. "They'll probably air evacuate him today or tomorrow."

Also injured in the hail of gunfire fire Tuesday during the military parade was Maj. Jerald Agenbrood, 36, of Bruneau, Idaho, a Marine and an aide to Army Lt. Gen. Robert Kingston, commander of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force, and Lt. Col. Charles Loney, 42, of the Air Force.

Ryan said his son is based in Stuttgart, West Germany, and has a wife and two children there.

"My wife heard about the attack but we had no reason to connect it to our son. We didn't know he was in Cairo," Ryan said.

Ryan said "the Air Force called this morning and did a good job in letting us know what had happened, as they always do in these situations." Ryan is a former Air Force officer himself and heads the foreign languages department at Mount St. Mary's College in Emmitsburg, Md.

Aganbrood "was struck in the leg, and it broke both bones in the lower leg," said Lt. Cmdr. Milt Baker, a spokesman for the deployment force. "I'm not sure which leg it was."

Baker said Kingston and Aganbrood were in Egypt because the United States is building facilities there for the deployment force.

Kingston and Aganbrood were to return to the United States this week, Baker said. He said he does not know when Aganbrood will be brought home. Aganbrood's wife and daughter lives in Tampa, Fla., near MacDill Air Force Base.

Loney "did speak with me and he is fine," said his wife, Lillian, of Arlington, Va. "We are real proud of him right now. He is coming out of the country as soon as possible."

Loney is from Austin, Texas. He and his wife and two daughters were in Iran during the fall from power of the late shah and "were caught in a crush as the airport when they were leaving Iran," said Loney's cousin, Donna White of Austin.

Clements plans El Paso office

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says he will open a special border office in El Paso next month to encourage further relationships between Mexico and the United States.

Clements expects the newly created state office to promote twin-plant development along the 2,000-mile Texas-Mexico border and international bridges that the governor said "are so important."

The Governor's Office of Regional Development will supervise the El Paso border office. Rick Montoya, Clements' executive director for regional development, said the new El Paso office "will handle anything having to do with binational relations."

Montoya said Clements picked El Paso for the border office because it is the largest border city, federal departments are based here, city and county officials are interested in border issues and El Paso is close to New Mexico.

Montoya said New Mexico is a good neighbor that has "shown interest in every issue that we've raised."

"It's something that people in El Paso wanted and something that we are pleased we can deliver," he said.

Clements is unsure who he will appoint to head the two-member staff.

"But we will open an office here by Nov. 1," Clements said Monday at the Border Governors Conference here. "We'll be concerned with continuance of the relationships that we've established through this border conference with the Mexican governors."

Montoya said the border office is "guaranteed" for two years. Though an extension is "up to the governor," Montoya anticipates the office to be permanent.

Clements said the Governor's Office of Regional Development will pick up most of the $60,000 annual budget for the border office.

The private sector also will be tapped for funds to support the border office.

Montoya said the other three U.S. border states plan to have similar border offices in Santa Fe, Tucson and San Diego.

Senator from Abilene not candidate for comptroller

ABILENE, Texas — State Sen. Grant Jones has dropped any ideas about running for state comptroller, but he still says incumbent Bob Bullock can be beaten.

Bullock, one of five members of the State Redistricting Board, has said Jones "feared redistricting would leave him without a Senate district he could win."

"He (Bullock) doesn't have the kind of power some of his statements might lead you to believe. He has one vote out of five" on the redistricting board which is redrawing senatorial district lines.

About a month after hinting he might campaign for the post, Jones said he realized he didn't want to move from Abilene to Austin, where the comptroller must work.

WINNERS — Howard executives, left to right, manager, Ray Slaton, Rennie Palmer and James Lee. The four recently placed sixth in the annual "state-wide contest." The men wrote life insurance totaling more than $5 million with $60,000 premiums in a six-week period. Texas Farm Bureau has 181 agencies in the state with 525 agents.

Mexicans economizing with American brew

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Many Juarenses who cross the border into El Paso to shop probably now have another item on their shopping list: good ol' American beer.

It's not that Mexican beer connoisseurs dislike Superior or Modelo, but their domestic brands are more expensive.

Juarez beer drinkers are lured across the Rio Grande by a first-of-the-year price increase on Mexican beer and enforcement of a law prohibiting sales of cheaper untaxed American beer in their city.

The regulated price for a six pack of Mexican beer in Juarez went up to about $2.80 from about $2.34 in January, Juan Antonio Chavez de las Fuentes said. Chavez is head of the city commerce department.

He said some business may have also been chased across the border by his department's crackdown on contraband untaxed American beer sold in Juarez.

The department's 12 inspectors have caught 25 Juarez stores making handsome profits selling illegal American brew. Chavez said when Mayor Jose Reyes Estrada took office last fall, he decided to listen to distributors of Mexican beer, who complained of unfair competition. Consumption of Mexican beer was staying the same even though the population was increasing rapidly, Chavez said.

Immediate action was necessary. A huge market of beer drinkers and potential beer drinkers was at stake among the thirsty desert population of nearly a million people.

The unused law against contraband beer was dusted off and fines of between $20 and $400 were levied.

So short of brewing it themselves, Juarenses must come to America, the Land of Cheap Beer, to save money on their alcoholic beverages.

With a six-pack of Budweiser costing $2.60, tax included, at the Paisano Beverage Depot in El Paso, "a lot of people from Juarez prefer to buy their beer over here," store employee Henry Deguire said.

Girl, 12, decides against abortion

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A 12-year-old gang-rape victim has let it be known she no longer wants an abortion, despite the fact the Oklahoma Supreme Court has ruled she can terminate the pregnancy, her attorney says.

The case ended up before the high court last week because the girl's mother refused to allow the abortion, citing religious beliefs.

"I don't know whether somebody put pressure on her or what, but she just feels like she just doesn't want the abortion, and I couldn't get her to tell me that there was any particular reason," attorney Jeanie Bauman said of her client.

member of the Church of the Holiness and believes that if God wants the pregnancy terminated, the girl will have a miscarriage.

The mother also claimed the girl is too young to make the decision, Ms. Porta said.

The girl was "raped by three males, who apparently were of about high school age" and who have not been apprehended, Ms. Porta said.

George Miller, secretary to the Human Services Department's director, said Tuesday that welfare department officials learned of the girl's change of mind when a case worker made a report to the supervisor of the Child Welfare Division.

Astros win on homer

HOUSTON, Texas (AP)— Alan Ashby called it his own Walter Mitty story.

Here he was—a line-drive hitter with only four home runs all year—getting the game-winning homer with two out in the ninth, off a team he used to sneak into the ball park to see.

Catcher Ashby's story-book two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth Tuesday night carried the Houston Astros to a 3-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers in the first game of their National League Western Division playoff series.

The second game in the best-of-five series began at noon today with Houston's knuckleballing Joe Niekro (9-9) facing the Dodgers' Jerry Reuss (10-4).

"I'm elated beyond words," said Ashby after a left-handed shot over the rightfield stands off reliever Dave Stewart. "I knew it was a homer when I saw it in the air...and it's not like I'm a home run hitter, either. It's a Walter Mitty dream."

Ashby's decisive blow settled a pitching duel between Nolan Ryan, who twirled a two-hitter, and Fernando Valenzuela, who battled hard before leaving after eight innings with the score tied 1-1.

Houston's only run off the 20-year-old rookie sensation came in the sixth inning on a two-out single by Terry Puhl, a walk to Phil Garner and Tom Scott's bloop single to right just off the glove of second baseman Dave Lopes.

The Dodgers tied it 1-1 in the seventh on Steve Garvey's 400-foot homer that hit the yellow home run line in left centerfield.

Then came Ashby with two-out in the ninth after pinch-hitter Fred Reynolds had singled.

"I remembered when I was a kid in San Pedro and I used to try to sneak into Dodger Stadium and get caught a lot because I was so slow," said Ashby. "I used to idolize Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale...It sounds silly I guess but those are special memories."

The first pitch was a fat fastball down the middle.

"It was a lucky swing quite frankly," Ashby said, candidly. "I'm no home run hitter."

Stewart said "It wasn't a bad pitch...I thought it was a good fastball...shoot, I didn't think he'd jack the ball out of the park. I didn't even know who he was."

He added "I can't see us losing a game like this...they're not a home run hitting team. Every team has some luck."

Ryan, who no-hit the Dodgers the last time he pitched against them, mowed down 16 batters in a row during one stretch.

"I thought Nolan's stuff was better than when he pitched the no-hitter," said Astros' Manager Bill Virdon. "This was a big win for us...it's important that we win at home."

After today's game, the scene switches to Los Angeles for the windup.

"The pressure is still on them (The Astros)," said Garvey, "because I know the effect we've had on them in LA."

Lady Steers lose to Central

The Big Spring Lady Steers fell last night to a tough San Angelo Central team by the scores of 6-15 and 5-15. The contest was for the first half championship in District 5-AAAAA volleyball.

Coach Patty Purser said there were a million reasons why the Lady Steers lost, but mostly it boiled down to the fact that San Angelo was a better team.

"We were not able to set up well and we had trouble relaying the ball. Also we missed some serves that hurt us," said Coach Purser.

High point servers for Big Spring were Sylvia Randle, Janie Phillips, and Elise Wheat—all with 3 points. Sissie Doss, Pam Caudill, and Amy Ragan added one point apiece.

The Lady Steers district record now stands at 6-1, while their season record is 15-7.

Big Spring will start the second half of the season Thursday night in Abilene against Abilene Jr. Varsity game starts at 6 p.m. and the Varsity tilt begins at 7 p.m.

The Jr. Varsity also lost last night 7-15 and 2-15. Beverly Tubbs had 5 points and Tammy Yancy garnered 4.

The freshman team traveled to Snyder last night and were defeated 15-6, 6-15, and 1-15. Adrienne Allen scored seven points, Dee Dee Clere has three, and Debbie Holguin, Lisa Suba, Cary Martinez, and Pam Grant all scored once.

Coach Anna Ezzell cited Pam Grant for backcourt hustle.

BLOCKING THE WAY — Tracy Williams of the Big Spring Lady Steers volleyball team, leaps high in the air to block a spike by a San Angelo Central player. The Bobcats were victorious 6-15 and 5-15 last night to win the first half championship of District 5-AAAAA.

Oakland A's whips Royals, 4-0

By the Associated Press

The Oakland A's and Houston Astros are known mainly for their pitching, but both got a lot of distance out of the long ball in the opening of baseball's intradivision playoffs.

Using the home run as their primary weapon, the A's stopped the Kansas City Royals, 4-0, in the American League West playoffs and the Astros beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1 in the National League West Tuesday.

Those playoffs continued today along with the opening of the NL East series between Philadelphia and Montreal and the AL East between New York and Milwaukee.

Wayne Gross hit a three-run home run and Dwayne Murphy hit a solo shot for all of Oakland's runs. Gross's blast came off Dennis Leonard in the fourth inning following a throwing error by Royal third baseman George Brett. It would have been the third out of the inning.

"I hit the home run because Leonard threw a fastball up and over the plate," said Gross. "I didn't think the ball was going out of the park. I was about half way to second when the ball disappeared. I thought, 'Hmm, that's interesting.'"

Leonard, who had shut out the A's the last two times he faced them, surrendered only six other hits in eight innings, including Murphy's homer in the eighth. It was the first earned run the A's had managed against Leonard in 251-3 innings.

"Our guy pitched well enough to win," said Royals Manager Dick Howser.

So did Oakland's Mike Norris, he escaped bases-loaded jams and held the Royals to four singles. Norris, who won his first six decisions and finished with a 12-9 record, handcuffed the Royals with an array of off-speed deliveries. He struck out two and walked three.

The A's sent Steve McCatty to the mound today against Kansas City's Mike Jones.

Joe Niekro was scheduled to pitch for the Astros against the Dodgers' Jerry Reuss in today's game. In the other games, the Phillies sent Steve Carlton against Montreal's Steve Rogers and Ron Guidry pitched for the Yankees against Milwaukee's Moose Haas.

Roger Maris same as always

By the Associated Press

It was 20 years ago Thursday — Oct. 1, 1961 — that Roger Maris hit the shot that shattered Babe Ruth's revered record of 60 home runs in a season, but there were no commemorative champagne corks popping at the Maris homestead in suburban Gainesville, Fla.

"No parties, no fanfare, just another day," said the low-key one-time slugger of the New York Yankees, now head of a thriving beer distributorship in a city which is also the base of the University of Florida.

"Down to the office as usual, some business contacts, the normal routine and then home for a quiet dinner with the family. Nothing special. That's the way I like it."

Instead of fireworks, there are those who might think Maris could more appropriately observe the occasion by hanging the family flag at half staff.

They weren't particularly happy days two decades ago, when this independent, raw-boned young guy out of the Dakotas struggled with unfamiliar spotlights, unbelievable pressures, an antagonistic press and occasionally hostile fans as he chased the record of baseball's all-time idol.

"It was sheer hell," Maris said of the unfair torture to which he was subjected. "I couldn't go through it again." He added in a ghosted magazine article.

After the 1961 World Series, he said, "I just wanted to pull down the curtains and shut out the crazy world I'd just been through."

His wife, who was pregnant with one of their six children during that tense stretch, said, "I was afraid he (Roger) would crack in two. I'd never seen him so tense."

She said at the time she prayed to St. Jude, the patron saint of the hopeless, because "I felt all along that Roger's beating the record was almost a hopeless cause."

Looking back to 20 years ago, Maris, more mellow and content with his present lifestyle, is disinclined to reopen many of those old sores.

"I have a lot of good memories about my years with the Yankees," he said. "The personal relationships were great. After all, 1961 was a great season for me."

Although fans and some newspaper critics resented Maris' success, he monopolized the game's individual honors in 1961, overshadowing the appointed heir to Joe DiMaggio's realm, Mickey Mantle.

He was the American League MVP for the second year. The Associated Press Athlete of the Year, winner of the Sid Mercer, Frederick C. Miller and Rae Hickok trophies as the season's top star.

But it was a torturous journey. A handful of writers waged a personal vendetta against him. This incited fans.

They asterisked his home run feat because it was accomplished in a 162-game season instead of the 154 that Ruth played. Even the Babe's widow refused to give him credit.

Maris told the Yankees that he wanted to retire after the 1966 season. Without speaking to him, the club traded him to the St. Louis Cardinals for Charley Smith.

Concepcion will get $4.5 million

CINCINNATI (AP)— The Cincinnati Reds' signing of shortstop Dave Concepcion set a club precedent that could figure in attempts to sign two other starters.

The Reds gave Concepcion an estimated $4.5 million, five-year guaranteed contract Tuesday, the largest contract ever awarded by the club.

I broke ground as the first time Cincinnati had guaranteed a contract, by which a player is assured of pay even if he is hurt while playing and cannot perform.

Reds President Dick Wagner said he would meet with outfielders Ken Griffey and Dave Collins and their counsel this week to discuss contracts. Both are unsigned for 1982 and eligible to become free agents.

Asked whether Concepcion's agreement opened the door for guaranteed contracts with other players, Wagner said, "I think that answers itself."

Both Griffey and Collins have said they want guarantees in their next contracts.

The five-time Gold Glove-winning shortstop had one of his best years offensively in 1981, coming off surgery on his right elbow. He batted .306, finished fifth in the National League with 67 runs batted in and tied for the league lead with 14 game-winning RBIs.

Wagner described the 33-year-old Venezuelan as "the premier shortstop in the game of baseball today."

Concepcion said Tuesday he had wanted to sign to remain with the Reds, the only major league club he has played for.

"I'm happy here. I wanted to stay in Cincinnati," Concepcion said.

O'Brien committee considers players

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP)— The Davey O'Brien Educational and Charitable Trust said Tuesday it will present an award annually to the football player selected as the nation's outstanding collegiate quarterback.

The Davey O'Brien Quarterback Award is named for the former Texas Christian University All-American and includes a $10,000 scholarship grant to the recipient's university.

The winner will be announced in December and honored early next year with a banquet at the Fort Worth Club, sponsor of the award.

The century-old professional and businessmen's club said the winning quarterback will be chosen by a "blue-ribbon advisory committee" and the Foundation Selection Committee.

"He will receive a gold medalion with his name engraved on it and on a gold plate attached to the large Davey O'Brien Memorial Trophy," the foundation said in a statement.

The trophy will be housed permanently at the Fort Worth Club.

The O'Brien award previously was restricted to a player in the five Southwestern states of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and New Mexico.

The first winner was Earl Campbell of Texas in 1978, followed by Billy Sims of Oklahoma, 1979, and Mike Singletary of Baylor, 1980 and 1981.

O'Brien, who died in 1977, led TCU to the Southwest Conference championship in 1938, the same year he won the Heisman, Walter Camp and Maxwell trophies and the Washington Touchdown Club award.

As quarterback of the Philadelphia Eagles, he was named to the 1939 National Football League's first all-star team.

Baseball managers have tough season

By the Associated Press

Old baseball managers never die. They don't even fade away. They just wait for the music to stop, then leap into the closest vacant chair.

Weep no more for Joe Torre, Gene Michael, Jim Fregosi, Johnny Goryl, Maury Wills, Jim Frey and Dick Williams, who form the "Aged Class of '81."

You'll see them again soon, if not in different uniforms in their own again. That's the way the game is played.

"It's a grim game of 'musical chairs.' Strike up a tune. Scramble for the empty seats. Stop the music. The lucky ones are still sitting. The unlucky ones are left with their tongues hanging out.

Tough, but not suicidal. They just wait until the next go-around. In the end, everybody winds up somewhere.

Take Torre, the latest casualty, sacked in the eighth inning of Sunday's final game by the New York Mets. They're queuing up for his shabby inner office — George Bamberger, ready to try again after he gave up the Milwaukee job last year because of open heart surgery; Jim Frey, bounced by the Royals; Dick Williams, dumped by Montreal, and possibly even Michael, the last to feel George Steinbrenner's wrath at the Yankees.

But speculation making the rounds is that Steinbrenner is keen on Williams, whom he vainly sought after Williams had broken with Charles O. Finley of the A's and before he joined the Expos. Williams lives in Tampa, Fla., headquarters of George's ship-building empire. So the scenario is for Steinbrenner again to ax kindly, old Bob Lemon, who succeeded Michael, and install Williams, starting in '82. That's the flak.

Cowboys combat sinking spell

DALLAS (AP)—The Dallas Cowboys' annual sinking spell has come earlier than Coach Tom Landry would like.

"We'll find out pretty quick where we stand with the schedule we have facing us," Landry said Tuesday. "We don't usually dip this early ... normally we dip in the middle part of the season before we roll."

The Cowboys were ambushed 20-17 by the St. Louis Cardinals last Sunday, tumbling to second place in the National Conference Eastern Division behind Philadelphia, which is 5-0 after beating Atlanta Monday night.

"Philadelphia looks unbeatable but things can change fast in this business," said Landry. "We just hope we are in the chase in the last part of the season."

Landry admitted the Cowboys haven't performed well since they defeated New England in a stellar Monday night performance three weeks ago.

"We looked good and the fans think you will do that every week," he said. "Sometimes you can get over-praised, and that's not the best thing for an athlete. We're all human and when you start believing you are good then you are in trouble."

Landry said "when you have beaten a team seven times in a row it's hard to get up for them and eventually they will beat you."

"The St. Louis people were really excited and you can't blame them for their enthusiasm. I didn't like it very much."

Landry said he was not concerned over a jammed wrist suffered by quarterback Danny White on the final play of the game.

"White says it's OK but you never know ... he seems confident the wrist will be OK," Landry said.

The Cowboys travel to San Francisco to meet the fast-improving 49ers on Sunday.

Landry, who watched the Eagles beat Atlanta Monday night on television, said "Philadelphia is almost a shoo-in for the playoffs. Their defense is in the groove. They have become a very experienced and competitive defensive team...very difficult to beat."

He said the Cowboys need to start playing consistently.

"We have to streak now ... win a lot of games in a row so we can get to the playoffs," said Landry.

He added "I didn't get upset watching the Eagles win. I have no control over that ... I just have control over the Cowboys — for good or bad."

NCAA may form new division

By The Associated Press

Are you confused by all the numerology currently rampant in the NCAA? Do you have trouble differentiating between Division I-A, I-AA, II and III?

Well, then, how would you feel about a Division IV?

One of the legislative proposals when the NCAA holds its special convention on reorganization in December provides for a new division that would include the 61 members of the College Football Association, plus the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences.

Those 81 institutions, now part of the 137 in Division I-A, would be known as Division IV.

CFA Executive Director Chuck Neinas calls the proposal "a clearcut alternative" to other NCAA reorganization plans. He says it would address two criticisms of the Big Ten and Pac-10.

Neinas says the proposal also suggests the policy-making NCAA Council be chosen by elections, with five members, at least one of whom must be a woman, coming from each division — I, II, III and IV.

Instead, a number of CFA schools — among them Notre Dame, Penn State and Georgia — are backing the proposal.

"The proposed legislation uses CFA membership criteria as basic criteria for Division IV membership," Neinas says. "It would allow the new division to develop its own rules and regulations governing all sports, including establishing its own eligibility rules. And it would become effective immediately. There would be no waiting period."

"It doesn't require anyone moving from Division I-A to I-AA, nor does it disturb Division I-AA. It merely transplants a group of major institutions to a new legislative division. In essence, it would allow Division IV to consider by themselves matters that affect them, including a football television plan."

Neinas says the proposal also suggests the policy-making NCAA Council be chosen by elections, with five members, at least one of whom must be a woman, coming from each division — I, II, III and IV.

Under the NCAA's nominating committee process, they bring in a slate and that's it," Neinas says.

The criteria for Division IV membership would be:

- A minimum of eight varsity sports, including football.
- At least 70 percent of the football schedule must be against Division IV opposition.
- An average paid attendance of 20,000 over the preceding three-year period.

- A stadium with a minimum of 30,000 permanent seats.

- A school which falls short of the requirements could still be a member of Division IV if it belongs to a conference where more than half of whose members meet the requirements.

Neinas says the proposal has for the most part met with "quite an enthusiastic response."

Pac-10 schools under scrutiny

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Just as they thought they were getting out of the woods, three Pacific-10 Conference schools are under scrutiny by the NCAA for possible rules violations in their athletic programs.

The three schools — Southern California, UCLA and Oregon — were placed on a year's probation last year by the conference. The University of Arizona also is on the NCAA probe list.

The investigation stems in part from last year's violation of academic rules that led to the conference penalties against the three schools, plus Oregon State and Arizona State.

Southern Cal Athletic Director Richard Perry said Tuesday that the NCAA has informed USC that an inquiry is being conducted "to determine the policies and practices of the university in certain areas of athletic administration."

Perry would not reveal the subject matter of the NCAA probe, but he said: "By and large it's a followup on the Pac-10 (violations) and may be expanded slightly beyond that. But they're not substantive in my opinion."

Ainge remains frustrated Blue Jay

PROVO, Utah (AP)—Danny Ainge, frustrated in his attempt to leave the Toronto Blue Jays for the Boston Celtics, has accepted a part-time basketball coaching position at Brigham Young University.

Ainge, 22, an All-America player last season at BYU after averaging 24.4 points per game, decided to accept the job this week, basketball Coach Frank Arnold said Tuesday.

Arnold wouldn't disclose how much Ainge would be paid. Arnold said he told Ainge a year ago that he could have the position upon graduation.

Ainge, a third baseman with the American League's Blue Jays this past season, sought to get out of his baseball contract and sign with the Celtics of the National Basketball Association.

But a U.S. District Court in New York ruled last week that the Blue

Jays didn't verbally rescind Ainge's contract in discussions with the player June 10-11.

Ainge has said he plans to retire from baseball rather than return to the Blue Jays next season. He is under contract to Toronto until 1983.

Celtic President Red Auerbach said Monday that the team would attempt to schedule meetings with the Blue Jays to talk about Ainge.

TCU player SWC pick of week

By The Associated Press

Decades from now the Texas Christian Horned Frog faithful will recall the night Stanley Washington's twin 22-yard touchdown pass receptions ended 22 years of humiliation by Arkansas.

For his deliverance of TCU from two decades plus of Razorback bondage, the junior from Dallas has been named The Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week.

On the defensive side of the SWC Player of the Week, the winner was Leo Truss, 6-0, 195-pound defensive end for the Houston Cougars.

He helped dominate Baylor in the Cougars 24-3 victory Saturday.

Truss, an unheralded senior from Talladega, Alabama, made eight unassisted tackles, caused a fumble, and recovered a fumble. He also had a quarterback sack for a 19-yard loss.

"Leo has improved tremendously over last spring," said Houston defensive coach Jim Elam. "He just came up and took the starting job and wouldn't turn loose. If he continues to improve he will give us the same type of performance we had from Sam Proctor in 1979. He just gets better every week."

TCU's 28-24 victory over Arkansas was fashioned in the last four minutes of the game. The final touchdown pass to Washington from quarterback Steve Stamp came when the Horned Frogs surprised Arkansas by lining up the wide receiver at tight end.

"We hadn't tried that all year we wanted to try and to confuse Arkansas which was double-covering Stanley on almost every play," said TCU Coach F.A. Dry. "It worked and Stanley was wide open."

Washington is the leading receiver in the nation and Dry said: "I keep telling people Stanley is an All-American and what happened against Arkansas certainly didn't change my mind."

Washington said it was going to be hard for the team to "give-up" celebrating the victory and going back to work for the Rice game.

"We've tasted victory and it is a good taste, we're going to be hell for any team that plays us now," said Washington.

Washington added, "This was an important game for us but Rice is just as important. We'll be on an emotional high all week."

TCU defensive tackle John McClean, who knocked the ball loose from Arkansas fullback Jessie Clark to setup the winning touchdown pass, was runnerup in the defensive Player of the Week voting.

Stamp, of course, was the runnerup on offense.

Sullivan defends in Southern Open tourney

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—With many of golf's big names absent, Mike Sullivan will defend his title in the 12th annual $200,000 Southern Open, while the legendary Arnold Palmer returns for the third consecutive year.

Sullivan, who won for the first time in his five-year pro career here and finished the year with $148,000 in earnings, has won nearly $72,000 this year.

Jerry Pate, a two-time winner here and No. 7 on the money list this year with more than $243,000, including two victories, is listed as one of the favorites to capture the $36,000 first prize. The tournament starts Thursday at the par-70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club.

Other former winners returning include: Ed Fiori, 1979 Hubie Green, 1975 Forest Fezler, 1974 DeWitt Weaver, 1972 Johnny Miller, 1971 and Mason Rudolph, 1970.

Others in the field for the 72-hole tournament include Andy Bean, who has earned more than $104,000 this year. He will be making his first appearance in months since suffering a hand injury.

Former U.S. Open winner John Mahaffey, George Burns, Dave Eichelberger, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Jim Thorpe and former Masters champion Tommy Aaron, also are in the field.

Sullivan, the 6-foot-2, 210-pound former University of Florida star, captured the title a year ago with an 11-under-par 269. Included was a second-round 63 en route to a five-shot victory over Miller and Eichelberger.

"Mommy, what did I do last Thursday?"

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, OCT. 8, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when planetary pressures could disrupt previous plans. Progress toward success could be delayed. Use more self-control and be as cheerful as possible.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) The situation at home could be difficult now, but use tact for best results. Remove conditions that cause disharmony.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make sure to safeguard your personal property at this time. Much care in motion is needed to avoid possible mishap.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Stay within your budget today even though you may be pressured into doing otherwise. Strive for happiness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may want to withdraw because you think others are not treating you properly, but this is not true.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Some anxiety could keep you from operating in a constructive way if you allow it. Be sure to handle duties efficiently.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Some friends are not in a good mood in the morning but later they give you the support you need. Exercise more patience.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Instead of just worrying about a career matter, do something constructive about it. Be more firm in business dealings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure you don't make radical changes today or you could regret it later. A business expert can give you good advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to meet your obligations honorably. Study a new outlet that could be profitable in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Associates may seem annoyed now but it is because they have problems of their own. Sidestep one who talks too much.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle routine tasks ahead of you and show that you are most efficient at them. Improve your appearance.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Keep busy at work ahead of you since this is not a good day for the recreation you have in mind. Relax at home tonight.

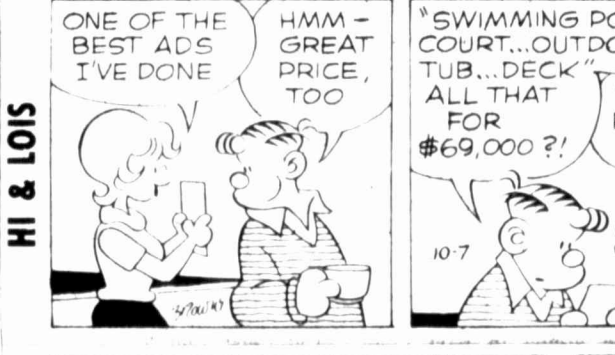

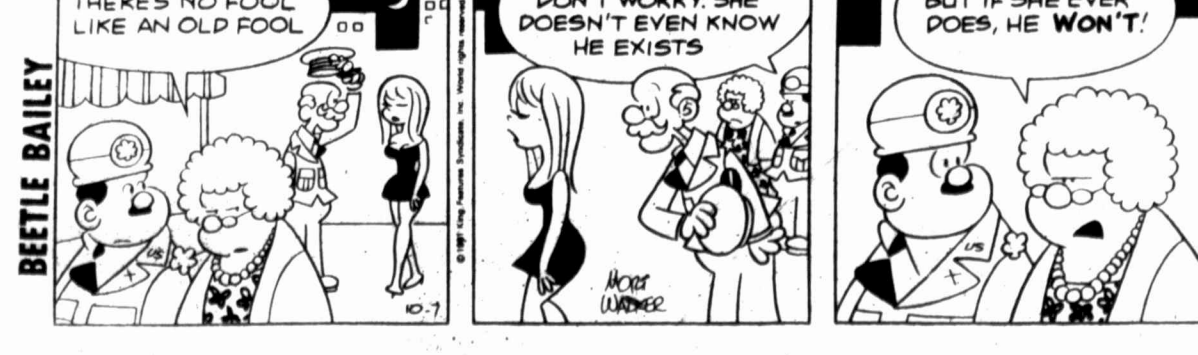

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those highly emotional young persons who should be taught to use this vital force constructively. Any field connected with government work is fine here. Give good religious training early in life.

Famous bordello moves

Goodbye LaGrange, hello Pflugerville

LAGRANGE, Texas (AP) — "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" is pulling up stakes and residents here have mixed feelings about being jilted by the film crew retelling the story of the bordello that made the town famous.

Producers of the movie based on Larry L. King's hit Broadway play decided LaGrange is "drab" and have picked a white Victorian farmhouse in Pflugerville, about 100 miles northwest of here, to portray the Chicken Ranch — the disorderly house that introduced LaGrange to America.

LaGrange Mayor Charles Jungnickel says it's fine with him if Hollywood wants to put the house in Pflugerville.

"It doesn't make any difference to me," he said. "I don't see how that kind of publicity would help our city any. We've got enough problems down here without that thing."

But Chamber of Commerce spokeswoman Marian Butts says LaGrange is where the story of the Chicken Ranch should be told.

The bordello, whose madam was known as "Miss Edna," operated from depression times with the private acquiescence of public officials. In the early days, Miss Edna would accept produce — such as chickens — from her farm customers, giving the place its name.

It became the best-known such house in the state but was closed by state officials after a Houston television reporter, Marvin Zindler, did an "expose" on the operation in 1975. King's musical, and the movie, are about the confrontation between fictional versions of Zindler, Miss Edna and then-Sheriff "Big Jim" Flournoy.

"There is only one LaGrange," said Miss Butts. "I really think they will be missing something. I'm from LaGrange, and I don't think they could find a better place than LaGrange.

Universal Studios disagrees.

"This is a movie, not a historical documentary," said Stan Brosette, publicist for the Universal Studios production. "We could go to Czechoslovakia if it looked right. We are not trying to copy every detail."

Indeed, the scenic farmhouse picked to portray the bordello is a far cry from the rundown, one-story building that housed the real, now-defunct Chicken Ranch.

"They were just looking for the perfect-looking house," said Pat Wolf, of the Texas Film Commission. "It doesn't look anything like the Chicken Ranch. This is what they thought the public envisioned the Chicken Ranch to look like."

Ms. Wolf said several new office buildings in LaGrange, population 3,500, ruined the country setting that movie officials were seeking.

"LaGrange has changed so much and has modernized so much that it made it impossible. LaGrange doesn't look like LaGrange any more," she said.

Brosette said he found LaGrange "kind of drab" and said Pflugerville "is pretty and old and pleasing to the eye."

Besides, he said, LaGrange lacked the facilities required by the crew of a $30 million motion picture.

"I don't think they have a Hilton in LaGrange," Brosette said.

But the author of the play says Flournoy, Waller County sheriff during the heyday of the Chicken Ranch, might have had something to do with Hollywood's decision.

Houston fourth largest

HOUSTON (AP) — The score is Houston 1,648,661, Philadelphia 1,648,582 — but who's counting?

The City of Brotherly Love has unofficially surrendered its No. 4 ranking in the national population derby, thanks to some arithmetic by the Philadelphia Inquirer which says Houston now has surpassed Philly as the fourth-largest city in the United States.

There wasn't much excitement here over the announcement. Some people in Houston's planning department threw a party in 1979 to celebrate overtaking Philadelphia based on their statistics. But the official figures that came out the next year said the Bayou City was still fifth, with 1,664,086 people compared to Philadelphia's 1,668,210.

On Monday, however, the inquirer published an article under the headline "Hello No. 5," saying Philadelphia had dropped to its lowest population ranking since before the founding of the Republic.

The 1980 census showed Houston gaining an average of 96 new residents a day between 1970 and 1980, while Philadelphia lost more than 71 daily. Projecting those statistics, the Inquirer said, Oct. 5 is the day Houston, which ranked No. 45 in 1920, rose one notch.

Houston's growth has been spurred in part by a state law allowing cities to annex surrounding land. But research director Howard Martin of the Chamber of Commerce said even without considering the effect of annexations, Houston would have surpassed Philadelphia by about February of 1983.

But the Census Bureau is sticking to its old count, and the Inquirer agreed its findings were not official.

"That cannot change on the books until the next census is taken April 1, 1991. Until then the 1980 census figures remain official, if not up to date."

Both Houston and Philadelphia still rank far behind the official Big Three — New York with 7,035,348, Chicago with 3,005,072, and Los Angeles with 2,966,763.

Theme From Shaft' fuss

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lawyers for Cream Records say a Schlitz Malt Liquor commercial featuring Richard Roundtree was playing their song — the theme from "Shaft" — and they want $100,000.

An attorney for Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co. says that's a lot of bull.

Gerald Weiner, representing the record company, said he was unable to reach an out-of-court settlement with Schlitz and the New York advertising agency of Benton and Bowles. U.S. District Judge William Gray set a Jan. 26 court date at a hearing Monday.

In its suit, Cream claimed the television commercial, which shows Roundtree ordering a beer in a bar that is crashed by the "Schlitz bull," uses music similar to the "Theme From Shaft," by singer-songwriter Isaac Hayes.

Hardline Arab states hail assassination of Sadat

By The Associated Press
Hardline Arab states rejoiced over the assassination of Egypt's President Anwar Sadat, while Western leaders mourned him as a peacemaker and warned the world "is a more dangerous place without him."
Initial reaction from most Soviet bloc countries contained no expression of regret. Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, whose country has taken an independent stance on foreign policy, denounced the death of his "close friend" as a "criminal act."

The United States announced its rapid deployment force and warships in the Mediterranean and Middle East have been placed on alert.
Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he hoped the Israeli-Egyptian peace initiated by Sadat's historic visit to Jerusalem in 1977 would continue, "as President Sadat would have wanted with all his heart."
"I have lost not only a partner in the peace process, but a friend," Begin said.
At the United Nations, Israeli Ambassador Yehuda

Z. Blum said he was encouraged by the pledge from Sadat's political heir, Vice President Hosni Mubarak, to honor the U.S.-sponsored peace treaty with Israel.
President Reagan called Sadat's assassination "cowardly infamy" and said: "America has lost a close friend, the world has lost a great statesman and mankind has lost a champion of peace."
Former President Jimmy Carter, who presided over the March 1979 signing of the Camp David accords, said: "I don't know of anyone who has contributed more toward peace on earth in my lifetime, and perhaps this century, than has Anwar Sadat."

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger predicted "a very difficult period" in the Middle East. British authorities agreed. "The world is a more dangerous place without him," a Foreign Office spokesman in London said.
Soviet television reported Sadat's assassination without comment. But Moscow Radio's international service quoted unidentified analysts as saying the shooting was a result of Egyptian discontent with Sadat's policies, "especially the peace treaty with the Israeli aggressor and military cooperation with the United States."

Czechoslovakia's official radio took a similar line.
Cuba, Moscow's Caribbean ally, condemned Sadat as a traitor to the "Arabian people and the Palestinian Liberation Organization."
Havana Radio accused Sadat of aggression against such radical Arab states as Libya, which engaged in a border war with Egypt in 1977.
In the Libyan capital,

Tripoli, crowds sang in the streets and waved flags and pictures of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, Sadat's loudest Arab foe.
U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig said the Libyan government may have known of the assassination plot although there was no clear evidence of foreign involvement. He said Radio Tripoli broadcast a "very intense and very voluminous" propaganda barrage within minutes of the attack urging the Egyptians to revolt.
Khadafy congratulated the assassins.

Initial newspaper reports of Sadat's death in the West questioned the future of the peace agreement with Israel.
At the center of concern was whether Sadat's replacement would continue the peace process or back off, choosing to strengthen Arab unity. Most papers predicted the latter course.
The Financial Times of London declared that the credibility of the Camp David framework was now "more than ever in doubt."
Le Figaro of Paris predicted "immense risks for peace in the world."

South African Prime Minister P.W. Botha warned publicly that Sadat's death could upset "the delicate and fragile balance of power" in the Middle East.
The Irish Times, Ireland's most respected daily, called for "cool brains and steady nerves" by Western leaders to prevent an "uncontrollable" crisis.
The Algerian government was silent, but the newspaper El Moudjahid said "the probability is strong that we will see the Camp David accords definitively buried and Egypt joining the rest of the Arab countries committed to a just and global peace in the Middle East."
In Moslem West Beirut, Palestinian and Lebanese Moslem militiamen fired shots in the air and exploded sticks of dynamite to celebrate the assassination. A spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization offered to "shake the hand of him who pulled the trigger."
Syrians danced in the streets of Damascus, chanting, "The traitor is dead." PLO leader Yasser Arafat told a rally in the Syrian capital the assassination "proved that the Palestinian cause lives in the soul of this people who could not forgive the one who gave up Jerusalem."
Moderate Arab governments were restrained and voiced concern about Middle East stability.
"I am a Moslem. He is a Moslem," Tunisian Foreign Minister Beji Caid Essebi said at United Nations headquarters in New York. "Even if we do not have the same appreciation of the problem, we pray for him."
Morocco's U.N. Ambassador Mehdi Mrami Zentar said: "We must find a way of stopping (terrorism)."
