Sunny days spur activity

Area ginning resumes

BIG LOAD — Cotton owned by Howard County farmer Gary Strum gets trucked into the Cotton Co-Op gin on Lamesa Highway this morning as ginning resumes.

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Local ginning activity has resumed after a lengthy rain delay and is going strong this week, according to gin representatives from around the area. The dry weather forecasted for the region should allow cotton producers to get their crops stripped and gins to get the cotton baled on schedule.

Most of the gins The Herald talked with hoped the weather held so they could get into full action. The Four-Way Gin Co. in Lenorah reported a good frost (the frost helps in stripping the cotton) and predicted a good week, despite getting started only last week.

Other gins reported an optimistic outlook for this week, saying everything should be underway soon at full speed if the weather stays good and no more rain slows down the stripping.

Gins contacted reported the following bale counts: Glasscock County Co-op in Garden City with 4,000 bales; St. Lawrence Gin with 1,664 bales; Co-op Gin of Big Spring with 950 bales; Lomax Farmer's Gin with 878 bales; and Farmer's Co-op, Ackerly, with 236 bales.

'Ragpickers' earn a living sorting through Juarez dump

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

CUIDAD JUAREZ, Mexico — Every morning, Nestor Garcia rises before dawn and sets off for his job — searching through garbage at the Juarez city dump.

Garcia is one of more than 150 people who comb the piles of rubbish at the landfill, looking for materials that can be recycled. The 19-year-old youth with the tumble of shoulder-length black hair has been working at the dump for 15 years.

"My parents worked here for a long time," he said through an interpreter. "Now, it is just me and my three brothers."

Garcia, like many of the other so-called ragpickers, lives on land near the dump. The landscape in the area is dotted with shanties made of tar paper, cardboard, adobe and tin. Some of the hovels are barely distinguishable from the garbage that is heaped nearby. "The houses are a combination of everything," said Antonio Ibarra. "Some have adobe houses. Some have cardboard because they haven't had a chance to build better ones yet."

The houses are just one example of how the ragpickers make their life from items that others discard.

Their clothes bear the tatters and stains that testify to their wear. Discarded clothing is recycled by the ragpickers themselves, rather than being sent to a recycling center with the cardboard, plastic and aluminum.

Dust and smoke hang in the air as rumbling yellow garbage trucks bounce along the dirt roads to deliver their loads. The ragpickers attack the mounds of trash with two-pronged metal rakes, pulling the compressed paper, plastic, metal and food apart in their hunt for the valuable.

Men who look much older than they are stoop under the burden of cardboard cans full of aluminum, peering from beneath grime-caked brows as they make their way through the rubble.

The odor is gut-wrenching, but the ragpickers scarcely notice as they weave between herds of goats and bulldozers belching diesel smoke. Stray dogs roam the garbage mounds, searching for food and yelping when giggling, black-faced boys pull their ears.

One of the boys munches on a large apple he found among the rubbish, chomping on the side that's not rotten. "It's good," he says and giggles again.

Some of the food makes its way home with the ragpickers, along with the "finds" of each day.

Maria Garcia watches her grimy hands pick at a stack of wet cardboard while she talks about her five years of working at the dump.

"We've been able to maintain ourselves here," she

Land hassles spawn Amendment 2

By DIANE BALLARD

AUSTIN — For Jessie Johnson of Leon County and a handful of others, Nov. 3 might be their lucky day — if Texans approve Constitutional Amendment 2.

The proposal would allow them to gain clear titles to their land if they or their families have paid taxes on it for at least 50 years.

In 1900, all unpatented land or land holdings not registered with the state reverted to the state's School Land Fund.

But some property owners were not aware of that law and didn't check their titles. Later, whether they sold their property or kept it, it belonged to the state.

Johnson, an 81-year-old farmer, thought in 1928 when he bought a 120-acre farm in Leon County, that the property was his.

But in 1978, the state General Land Office claimed his land, after the state found out several years earlier that Johnson didn't have a valid patent.

Johnson has been fighting for his land ever since and brought his plight before the Texas Legislature during the last legislative session.

"They come up about my land and told me I didn't have any," Johnson told legislators. "I worked on the railroad at 30 cents an hour for 20 something years, and I thought sure it was mine."

The amendment also would allow the land office to issue clear titles in Leon

County to Ray and Edna Bengé, Ann McAdams and Jo Wynn, Marion Tow, Ben Bodie and Eugene Holland, who have similar title problems.

The amendment would require applicants for clear title to prove they acquired the land without knowing the title was defective and that they or their predecessors had a recorded deed to the land and paid taxes for 50 years before Nov. 15, 1981.

The amendment's provisions would expire Jan. 1, 1990.

Sara Speights, administrative assistant to Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, said the amendment's requirements narrow the number of people who would be affected to only a handful. She said the Leon County residents who made their hard-luck stories known to the legislature are probably the only ones who will benefit from the proposal.

During the legislative session, Armstrong said a broader amendment might result in significant loss of acreage in West Texas.

But under the proposed amendments' restrictions, Ms. Speights said, the land office has probably identified all the tracts that would be affected.

She said that at first, state lawyers had been appalled by the proposal and the amount of money and work it would take to unravel all titles in question.

But now, she said, "We're going to assume we're not talking about humongous (enormous) tracts of land out there."

Ms. Speights said the land office is not opposed to the proposal.

Haitians perish out at sea

HILLSBORO INLET, Fla. (AP) — A wooden sailboat carrying at least 67 Haitian refugees "broke up" less than a half-mile from shore early today, and at least 33 people drowned, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

It was the worst such incident during the recent heavy influx of refugees from the impoverished Caribbean island.

Thirty Haitian refugees, aided by strong tides, swam safely to shore.

SIGN LANGUAGE

Kaye West signs "see"

To sign today's word — "see" — place your fingers in the "V" shape, as pictured, in front of the face, fingertips near the eyes, and move the hand forward.

This sign may also be used for the words "sight," and "vision."

Dr. Lottie L. Riekehof in "The Joy of Signing," explains the origin of this sign was the fingertips pointing to the eyes looking out.

To sign the word "look," place the "V" in front of the face, palm in, then turn the "V" so the fingertips point forward.

The origin of this sign, Dr. Riekehof says, is the fingertips representing the eyes looking out.

The sign for "look" also may be used for "watch," "observe," and "survey."

Commissioners mull repairs

The Howard County Commissioners met this morning to hear from County Engineer Bill Mims about the condition of county roads and from district clerk Peggy Crittenden about repairs in her office.

Other items to be considered today include a revenue sharing hearing, a bid for courthouse maintenance and a discussion of the Howard County History Book by the county Historical Commission.

Also to be discussed is a resolution approving a bond purchase agreement of $1.3 million with the Howard County Industrial Development Corporation.

Shaw-Heatly pairing nixed

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — House Speaker Bill Clayton today proposed a redistricting plan that removes the pairing of freshman Rep. Larry Don Shaw of Big Spring with House Dean Bill Heatly of Paducah.

Instead, Shaw would be paired — but in the same district — with Rep. Jerry Cockerman, Republican of Monahans, and Heatly would be paired with Foster Whaley, Democrat of Pampa.

But Comptroller Bob Bullock today presented his House plan to the Legislative Redistricting Board also, and it would avoid a pairing for Shaw at all. That plan would put Howard County with a new District 137 along with Martin, Borden, Scurry, Fisher, Nolan and Jones counties.

It would pair Abilene's two state natives, Walter Grubbs and Gary Thompson.

The redistricting board must decide between the plans or arrive at a compromise by midnight Wednesday.

The Shaw-Heatly pairing had been a controversial part of a statewide plan approved by the Legislature last spring, with most of the population in the area currently served by Heatly. Shaw has been a frequent foe of some of Clayton's pet projects.

But the Texas Supreme Court threw out the plan because it cut too many county lines across the state.

Under Clayton's new plan, Shaw would receive a strangely shaped district running from Howard County down through Glasscock and Reagan counties, then westward through Upton, Crane, Winkler, Loving, Ward, Reeves, Jeff Davis, Culberson and Hudspeth counties — to the edge of El Paso County.

Clayton presented his proposal to the Legislative Redistricting Board, which has until midnight Wednesday to draw new districts for the Texas House and Senate.

In a new development on the Senate question Sunday, Comptroller Bob Bullock proposed new district lines that would leave Howard County in District 30. But that plan would pair District 30 incumbent Sen. Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls with Sen. Grant Jones of Abilene.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby Sunday formally presented his plan to the redistricting board. It would put Howard County in District 28 of Sen. E. L. Short of Tahoka, but would avoid the pairing of any West Texas senators.

Bullock's plan would make Borden, Howard and Glasscock counties the western edge of a District 30 that would stretch through Montague County on the Red River, Martin and Dawson County would be in Short's District 28.

Under Clayton's new House plan, Mitchell County would be joined with Sterling, Coke and Tom Green counties to form a new district for incumbent Richard Burnett of San Angelo.

Borden County would be in a new District 78 represented by incumbent Walter Grubbs of Abilene, Martin and Dawson counties would be in a new District 77 of Jim Rudd of Brownfield.

Wounded deputy dies

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County sheriff's deputy wounded while his pistol accidentally discharged while inspecting a truck died early today, said a hospital spokesman.

Deputy Royce Murlin Anderson, 29, died from loss of blood after a bullet from a .357-caliber Magnum pistol ripped a major artery in his upper right leg, authorities said.

Maj. C.K. Gaines said Anderson and his partner had stopped an 18-wheel truck Sunday night because the driver was wanted in connection with a stabbing incident, said Sgt. Drew Warren.

Anderson had pulled his pistol and inspecting the truck's cab when the weapon accidentally discharged, Warren said. He was taken to a nearby hospital and later transferred by helicopter to Hermann Hospital.

TI earnings dip

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc. Sunday reported a 49 percent decline in net income for the third quarter and a 55 percent drop for the first nine months.

For the quarter ended Sept. 30, net sales rose 1 percent to $1,038.7 million, while net income was down to $27.1 million from $52.9 million the previous year.

For the nine months, net sales increased to $3,157.3 million, compared with $2,988.1 million for the same period of 1980. Net income fell to $71.8 million from $158.4 million during the year before.

Company officials blamed the decline on a soft market for semiconductors, pricing pressure and high interest rates, and said government contracts prevented the results from being even worse.

The company said it plans to run "a major TV merchandising campaign" through the end of the year in hopes of boosting retail sales.

Comanche Peak nuclear plant costs skyrocket

Texas Electric announced today, as a result of an annual review of the company's construction program, that the estimated completion dates of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant near Glen Rose have been revised to 1984 for Unit 1 and 1985 for Unit 2. The estimated cost of the plant also has been changed to $3.44 billion.

The new cost estimate is an increase from the $2.235 billion estimate made in 1980, said TESCO President Bill Marquardt.

"Even though the cost estimate has increased substantially since announced in the early 1970s, the electricity produced by this plant will continue to be substantially less than electricity produced by either oil or natural gas," Marquardt said.

"This is because oil and natural gas prices have increased at an even more rapid rate than has the cost of building the nuclear plant which will use a much lower cost fuel, a fuel that also is much more stable in price."

"Building a nuclear power plant is an extremely complex job today because it changes so much from start to finish. Even with a competent and committed project management and construction group — which we have — building a nuclear plant has many moving targets.

"The primary reasons for the revised cost of Comanche Peak are: continually changing interpretations of regulations; continuing design changes as a result thereof, and the extended time period to completion," Marquardt said.

He said the additional interest cost on borrowed construction money caused by the delay is a major contributing factor and also cautioned that both the timetable and cost estimates could change again in the future.

Comanche Peak is owned jointly by Texas Electric, Dallas Power & Light, the Texas Municipal Power Agency, Brazos Electric Power Cooperative Inc. and Tex-La Electric Cooperative of Texas Inc.

Combined, the owners serve a population of more than 4.5 million people covering about one-third of the area and population of Texas.

Defense opens case in Liberty

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Vickie Daniel's attorneys, their demands for a mistrial and an instructed verdict of innocent rejected, returned to court today to begin presenting their evidence in the defendant's murder trial.

Prosecutors dropped a bombshell last week when Mrs. Daniel's 13-year-old daughter took the stand and said she saw her mother with a gun and heard her threaten before the shooting.

The 34-year-old defendant says she doesn't remember shooting her husband, but that if she did it was an accident. The former Texas House speaker was found sprawled on the floor of the couple's Liberty home the night of Jan. 16.

Kimberly Moore testified Wednesday she neither heard nor saw the shots fired, but that when she heard the ambulances, "I knew Momma shot Price."

Kimberly said she first related the story when she took a lie detector test.

Lead defense attorney Jack Zimmermann immediately moved for a mistrial. Under Texas criminal law, the mere mention of a polygraph examination can be grounds for a mistrial in certain cases.

But State District Judge Leonard Giblin ruled the comment did not prejudice the jury to the extent that Mrs. Daniel could not receive a fair trial.

Zimmermann then argued the state failed to prove its murder case and appealed for an instructed verdict of acquittal. Giblin denied the motion without comment.

Zimmermann's case was expected to resemble the defense used in Mrs. Daniel's child custody trial last spring, in which Daniel was portrayed as a marijuana-smoking wife-beater.

Giblin ruled early in the trial that the former Dairy Queen waitress relinquished her Fifth Amendment right to remain silent about the slaying when she testified in the child custody trial.

She retained custody of her two small sons after the suit by Daniel's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, who claimed Mrs. Daniel was an unfit mother.

State Fair loses money

DALLAS (AP) — Heavy autumn rains throughout the first half of October dampened enthusiasm of prospective fair-goers this year and the State Fair of Texas is predicting a financial pinch as a result.

"We're going to be down some on revenues," public relations manager Bob Halford said Sunday, the fair's last day. "It's going to be difficult to say just how bad we're hurt but we're certainly going to be down (in income) on the Midway."

The Midway is that section of the fair that contains rides, sideshows and other carnival-type attractions. Halford said attendance this year was approximately 2.8 million, short of the goal of three million.

"But most fairs would be overjoyed to get as many people as we got," he said, blaming most of the decline on inclement weather.

It rained on 12 of the 17 days of the fair, making it the wettest since 1892 when rain fell on every one of the fair's 16 days.

"And with the rain there have been a lot of colds," grumbled fair medical director Jesse Bean. "I got one myself."

Okie commissioner one of handful certified as honest

POND CREEK, Okla. (AP) — Keith Hoar, a school teacher turned elected official, is one of a handful of county commissioners in Oklahoma who have been certified as honest by the people best qualified to assess them — the crooks.

The FBI and Internal Revenue Service investigation of kickbacks on county purchases of road and bridge building equipment has resulted in more than 130 commissioners, former commissioners and supply salesmen agreeing to plead guilty to kickback-related charges.

The investigation already is the largest federal probe of public corruption and in the nation's history. U.S. Attorney David Russell and his assistant, Bill Price, say the investigation ultimately will result in charges being filed against more than two-thirds of the 231 commissioners and at least 100 former commissioners and suppliers.

That leaves about 80 commissioners who apparently won't be charged, but only a small group of them have been certified as being totally honest by the salesmen who have agreed to plead guilty to paying kickbacks.

One of that elite group is Hoar, a 63-year-old Pond Creek Republican who was elected to the Grant County Commission three years ago after spending 36 years as a vocational agriculture teacher.

The other two Grant County commissioners — Leonard Johanning of Wakita and Clifton Honeyman of Medford — resigned several weeks ago after signing agreements to plead guilty to accepting kickbacks.

The suppliers who also have agreed to plead guilty brought them down by detailing the kickbacks they have paid to both of them for their equipment purchases.

Those same suppliers, however, gave Hoar a clean bill of health.

"When a supplier fingers 30 or 40 crooked commissioners for you and then you ask him about another commissioner and he says, 'That guy is honest,' it's a pretty good indication that you've found a straight source who is familiar with all aspects of the investigation."

Survivors include his wife, Velma, of the home; five daughters, Dorothy Pope

"totally accurate and honest with us" have exonerated Hoar. "When it's unanimous among all the suppliers, and in his case it is, then we are convinced of a commissioner's honesty," the source said. "Hoar is one of a very small group in that regard."

When contacted at his county office, Hoar said he really has not had to turn down many payoffs. "I'm pretty hard nosed and I think they know I'd just tell them to go to hell," he said. "I don't even drink a cup of coffee with them (the salesmen) unless I pay for it."

said. "Everything is valuable."

"The people here are humble," Ibarra said. "They are poor people. They go through starvation, the heat, the cold, the rain, storms and snow, but they're here."

Ibarra, 47, is the labor chief for the ragpickers, supervising the search for recyclable material and settling disputes.

Organization of the workers came six years ago with the formation of a cooperative called the Sociedad Cooperativa de Seleccionares de Materiales, or SOCOSEMA.

Before, two syndicates held the city garbage concession and paid the workers about $5 a week for dawn-to-dusk labor, said Maria Elena Villegas, administrator of SOCOSEMA.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tax increases are next year but will be considered in 1983 as rein in the runaway deficit, Senate Leader Howard H. Baker says.
And unless the "fierce upturn" economy, Baker says, Congress will have even more than $1 billion in budget surplus over the next three years.

No tax increase in 1982, Baker says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tax increases are unlikely next year but will have to be considered in 1983 and 1984 to rein in the runaway federal deficit, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. says.

And unless there is a "fierce upturn" in the economy, Baker says, Congress will have to find even more than the $115 billion in budget savings that President Reagan wants over the next three years.

Reagan, struggling to balance the budget by 1984, has called for $3 billion in tax increases and $13 billion in additional spending cuts in fiscal 1982, which began Oct. 1.

He has yet to send specific proposals to Congress, and administration officials have said they are considering higher excise taxes on gasoline, alcohol and cigarettes.

But Baker said Sunday that he would not expect "excise taxes or anything else in '82."

Questioned on CBS' "Face the Nation," Baker said House and Senate Republican leaders reached a general consensus last week "that we had to address the question of increased tax revenues, also a consensus that it should not be done in 1982."

Citing President Reagan's recent statement that the nation is now in a recession, Baker said, "That would be the world's worst time to add to the tax burden."

But the Tennessee Republican added: "I do think we have to realistically look at the prospects in '83 and '84."

Baker said he planned to outline the Republicans' general plan for whittling the deficit at a White House meeting with Reagan later this week.

Baker said he hasn't given up hope of a balanced budget but conceded: "It may take draconian measures...if we're ever going to convince the Fed that those (interest) rates got to come down. But if you take a look at what it would take to balance the budget in '83 or '84, it will make what we've done so far fade into insignificance by comparison."

As interest rates drive up the cost of government borrowing and the slumping economy drains revenues, most economic forecasters, including the Senate Budget Committee, are projecting budget deficits far larger than the administration anticipated for the next three years.

To counter that, Baker said, "we're going to have to save, in my judgment, unless we get a fierce upturn," more than the $115 billion Reagan has proposed.

"I support a general plan to reduce some of that in appropriated funds and some of it in other funds," Baker said, "and I'm willing to consider revenue enhancement," the administration's term for selected tax increases, in 1983 and 1984.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski says one thing the administration probably won't support because of the revenue crunch is extension of the popular tax-exempt All-Savers Certificates.

"In a sudden reversal of tax philosophy," the Illinois Democrat said, "the administration now is seeking to increase revenues — which hardly suggests their support for a multibillion-dollar extension" of All-Savers.

Rostenkowski's remarks were in a speech prepared for delivery in Chicago today to the Federal Savings and Loan Council of Illinois. Rostenkowski said Congress approved the certificates "despite deep doubts about its curative powers (to) stem the flood of savings into high-interest money market funds." "Much of our skepticism remains," Rostenkowski said. "We still have no proof that All-Savers is having much effect on aggregate savings. We may well have only encouraged the shift of deposits from one account to another — from one financial institution to another." The certificates are aimed at helping the ailing savings and loan industry and will allow savers over the next 15 months to earn up to $1,000 in tax-free interest for individuals and $2,000 for couples filing joint returns.

Rep. Collins wants Bentsen's Senate seat

DALLAS (AP) — Declaring that Texas voters want a conservative senator in Washington, Republican Rep. Jim Collins Saturday traveled to five parts of Texas to announce his intention to unseat Democrat Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr.

Collins announced his entrance into the 1982 U.S. Senate race in his hometown of Dallas, along with Houston, San Antonio, Midland-Odessa and Amarillo.

"The people of Texas have told me in my travels around the state that they have more government than they want, more regulations than they need, and more taxes than they can afford to pay," the congressman said in a prepared statement.

"What these Texans told me is that they want strong, conservative representation in Washington. It is that reason that I am today announcing my candidacy for the United States Senate."

Collins said the difference between him and Bentsen "is the difference between a conservative and a liberal" and declared Texans want a senator who "will vote conservative to end inflation and get back to lower interest rates."

"The incumbent has voted for more and more government spending. I have voted for less and less spending. Government spending is what is causing today's high interest and inflation rates. Talking conservative doesn't help the elderly on fixed incomes increase their purchasing power; you have to vote conservative. Bentsen's voting record during the past 10 years shows he voted against only two of 145 spending appropriations bills."

Collins said that during his eight terms in the House of Representatives, he has led fights against forced busing, to reduce massive growth of congressional staffs and to give Americans a "Taxpayers' Bill of Rights."

"Texans need to send a conservative to the Senate who will vote against spending bills," Collins said. "Young people today can't buy a house because the interest rates are too high. Young men and women can't start a business with a 20 percent interest rate and a 10 percent profit. This is the result of elected officials who vote liberal."

"Texans don't want a senator who will give away the Panama Canal and weaken our national defense. I believe I can give Texas the strong, conservative leadership it deserves," he said.

Few Texans had flood insurance

DALLAS (AP) — Few residents in a nine-county area swamped by heavy rains and blasted by high winds Oct. 13 had insurance coverage for their homes and businesses, even though most stricken cities and counties participate in low-cost federal flood programs.

Investigators of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the Texas Department of Public Safety still are completing a study of flood-stricken areas, where officials estimate millions of dollars in private and public damage occurred. In hardest-hit Stephens County, with an estimated $8 million in damages, Breckenridge had emergency coverage under the National Flood Insurance Act.

But only 10 residences were insured for a total of $340,000, said FEMA spokesman David Cobb in Washington.

Gov. Bill Clements is seeking a federal disaster declaration for Stephens and three other counties. Cooke, Parker and Taylor counties also participate in flood insurance programs. "But every time we had a flood of any magnitude, we found that those areas where lender requirements were enforced had the best coverage."

Count Dracula, his friends invite you to haunted house

Beginning Wednesday as a March of Dimes fund raiser, the creaky doors of a haunted house at 510 Gregg Street will open as Count Dracula and his infamous friends invite you to their "open house."

"Join us," says Jett Moore, chairperson for the event. "It's all in fun and the proceeds will go towards combating the problem of birth defects, the nation's number one health problem for children."

The haunted house will be open nightly through Oct. 31. The hours are from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, remaining open longer on Friday and Saturday evenings.

Volunteers will be guiding visitors through their tour. Admission is $2 for each person. Anyone requesting additional information or persons wishing to volunteer their time to help with the project may call Jett Moore at the March of Dimes office, Permian Building ... 263-3014.

Female domination of work force predicted by Bentsen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before the end of this decade, three of every four people seeking a job will be female, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen predicted Saturday.

If current trends continue, there will be more women than men in the U.S. work force before the turn of the century, the Texas Democrat added.

He cited the trend as one of many changes in the national job market that demand changes in economic policy.

"Since the 1940s, the percentage of men in the work force has steadily declined. The reverse has been true for women. You've had a substantial increase in the number of women in the work force," Bentsen said.

"Project that out into the '80s and you're going to see, of the jobs that are going to be sought, three out of four will be women seeking those jobs. By the end of the century, you'll have more women in the work force than you'll have men."

Bentsen's remarks were in a statement prepared for broadcast Saturday evening

Fort Worth firm wins storage tanks contract

Holloway Company, Inc. of Fort Worth was the apparent low bidder Thursday for the construction of two 420,000-gallon steel storage tanks for the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

The surface storage tanks will replace two bolted tanks which were erected in 1952 at the Martin County station. The new units will be welded.

Cooper-Scott, Inc. had the low quotation on painting the tanks in the amount of $19,294, making a combined bid of $102,664. Holloway's combined bid for painting and construction was $106,370. Holloway specified 50 days for construction, Cooper-Scott 30 days for painting.

O.H. Ivie, CRMWD general manager, said work would commence Nov. 2 and will be completed well in advance of the need for the tanks during next spring's rising period of demand.

A similar steel-bolted tank collapsed at the Morgan Creek Station in August and has since been replaced.

which came to be the premier trading and cattle-shipping point of western Texas in the early 1880s, also visits to other pioneer points.

Mrs. Marje Bassham will tell about the Renderbrook, or the Spade Ranch as it is more popularly known, at the 10 a.m. meeting of the society. After lunch, there will be a field trip to the ranch headquarters in southern Mitchell County.

Anyone is invited to attend the meeting, which will be held in Colorado City's historic, restored Old Opera House.

There also will be other papers about the Queen City.

Deadly quake damage slight

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Rescue teams say the powerful earthquake that killed three people and injured 28 in Mexico did surprisingly little damage.

"Considering the severity of the jolt, the reports we have had up to now show casualties are relatively small," a Red Cross worker said Sunday as crews restored widespread power blackouts and fixed telephone lines.

The quake, which the U.S. Geological Survey said measured 7.1 on the Richter scale, shook the capital of 15 million people and eight surrounding states for three minutes Saturday night.

Troops fan out across Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Veteran Polish troops, ordered by the government to "help solve local conflicts," were moving into 2,000 villages today to try to ease food shortages spurring wildcat strikes by more than 250,000 workers.

Demanding an end to strikes, the minister of union affairs, Stanislaw Ciosek, accused Solidarity of "blackmail." He said the independent labor federation is putting the "pistol of strikes not only to the government's temple, but to the temple of the entire society."

"The Council of Ministers demands an end to strikes in order to save society from their disastrous effects," Ciosek said Sunday in a televised statement.

In addition to the spreading wildcat walkouts, he apparently was referring to a one-hour warning strike called Wednesday by Solidarity to protest food shortages and alleged police harassment.

Announcing implementation of the troop deployment ordered by the government last week, Administration Minister Gen. Tadeusz Hupalowski said, "Extraordinary situations require extraordinary measures."

"The situation is getting worse and the government is doing everything it can to make survival possible," Hupalowski said. "We are facing winter and people are anxious."

Amendment 2 rights a wrong

Amendment No. 2 deserves approval in the Nov. 3 election.

This amendment would allow the General Land Office, under certain conditions, to issue a patent to land where the owners have owned the land for many years, paid taxes on the land, and have clear deeds and title to the land, with the exception of securing a patent.

Because legal requirements for securing land patents in the middle 1800s were not met, some people in Texas have recently discovered that land they bought and paid taxes on in good faith belongs not to them, but to the state. All unpatented land reverted to the School Land Fund in 1900. In order to acquire the land, the owners would have to buy their own land from the state.

THE ISSUE CAME into focus in Leon County, in East Texas, where a coal lignite leasing company found that several landowners were never issued a patent on their land. Even though members of each family had lived on and paid taxes on the land for more than 100 years, legally they did not own the land and were not entitled to sell the mineral rights to the land under the existing constitution.

The State Legislature concluded that this issue could best be solved through a Constitutional change, hence the proposal of Amendment 2.

The amendment provides a way for the state to correct an inequitable situation. It would allow the General Land Office to issue patents to persons who did not know their title was defective, who held or whose predecessors held a recorded deed for at least 50 years, and who had paid all taxes on the land for this period.

SINCE THERE IS no telling how many landowners in Texas share the problem — of owning their land but not being able to pass it on to heirs or to sell it — we urge passage of Amendment No. 2 so that these landowners can receive a patent for their land and retain rightful ownership.

Big business supports Saudis

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Whichever way the Senate votes on the AWACS sale — and barring any startling last-minute development — it should be a squeaker — the Republic will survive. But you wouldn't know it from the near-hysterical tone adopted by some of the people who are lobbying on both sides of the issue.

Everything from ponderous national security arguments to emotional "win-one-for-the-Gipper" appeals have been used to bring pressure on wavering senators. But the increasing shrillness only accentuates the plain fact that neither supporters nor opponents of the controversial deal have cornered the market on truth and logic.

In this atmosphere, it's almost refreshing to observe the undisguised self-interest reflected in the lobbying activities of the business community in favor of selling the radar planes to Saudi Arabia. For Big Business, money makes the world go 'round, and it's the Saudis who have the money.

MAYBE IT'S BECAUSE there's an unabashed friend of business in the White House; maybe it's because the other arguments in favor of the sale are less persuasive. Whatever the reason, the corporate flacks are not shy about stressing the profit motive in their approach to a political issue.

With all the subtlety of a tank truck barreling along the Jersey Turnpike, one large Mobil Oil advertisement included a list of American companies selling goods or services to the Saudis under the heading, "$35 Billion in Business for U.S. Firms."

Mobil's p.r. men didn't even feel it necessary to mention the AWACS deal at all. The ad explained that the list of American corporations on the Saudi list was "presented in the interest of constructive debate on a critical national issue."

Two industrial giants that have taken a leading part in the pro-AWACS campaign are United Technologies and the Bechtel Corp.

Interestingly, the administration's most outspoken defenders of the AWACS sale were executives of the same firms before joining the Reagan Cabinet. Secretary of State Alexander Haig was UT president; defense Secretary Carpar Weinberger was vice president and chief counsel of Bechtel.

Bechtel, a construction and engineering conglomerate, has extensive interests in Saudi Arabia, and thus could be among the perceived targets of Saudi wrath if the AWACS deal falls through. But United Technologies' stake in the sale is more direct: It makes the engines for AWACS planes.

BECHTEL, IN A LETTER to members of Congress, pointedly warned that the AWACS deal "directly affects not only U.S.

economic concerns, but those of our NATO and Far Eastern allies" — which also happen to be customers of Bechtel.

My associate Lucette Lagnado has seen a long telegram sent by UT's chairman, Harry Gray, to the firm's suppliers, urging them to lobby on behalf of the sale. He asked the suppliers to wire their senators and added, "Would you also send me a copy of your communication to the senators?"

WHAT NEXT?: At this writing, the Senate vote is too close to call with confidence. But I predict that the direst warnings of both sides won't materialize. If the Senate kills the sale, President Reagan will not be stripped of his control over foreign policy, and the Saudis won't cut off trade with the United States. If the sale goes through, Israel will not be destroyed, nor will vital U.S. technology fall into the Kremlin's clutches. Everything included in the sale can already be purchased on the open market, and by the time the first AWACS plane is delivered in 1985, the Soviets will probably have radar planes of their own, superior to the AWACS' 20-year-old technology.

STRIKING COINCIDENCE: In a strange quirk of timing, a Ford engineer survived a freeway crash with hardly a scratch — thanks to an airbag — while Ford lobbyists were working to kill a federal standard that could lead to wider use of airbags.

Duncan Carswell, 40, was involved in a two-car collision at 45 miles an hour on Detroit's Southfield freeway. The impact smashed in the front end of his Continental and twisted the frame. But the airbag inflated and he walked away unharmed.

"It was like a pillow," recalled Carswell, who left Ford a few weeks ago after six years in the company's airbag program. "Without it, I'd have lost my teeth, gotten a broken nose, needed a lot of cosmetic repairs on my face and probably gotten some chest damage."

Statistics on the 10,000 American cars that already have the safety devices show conclusively that airbags save lives. Yet National Highway Traffic Safety Administrator Ray Peck is being pressured by automakers to revoke a regulation that would require either airbags or automatic seatbelts on cars beginning with the 1983 models. His decision could mean life or death to 8,000 Americans a year, experts have told him.

WATCH ON WASTE: Between 1976 and 1980, the Energy Department's San Francisco office paid a contractor $2.5 million for studies of international energy research and development.

But agency auditors reported recently that "it was unclear what DOE actually received in return for most of its money," because the bureaucrats had "generally accepted the contractor's statements that the work had been completed."

I hope the next time I watch a game I'll have more compassion for the players as human beings rather than seeing them as opposing enemies. I hope I realize they are just boys and not machine-like gladiators.

Around the rim Drawing the line

Bob Carpenter

I experienced something the other night at a high school football game I didn't like.

I was sitting in the press box marking down the plays as were various other writers, coaches and scouts. The game was not very exciting. The contest was really never in doubt from the opening kickoff and most of us were just going through the motions of doing our jobs. I suppose we were all just a bit bored.

Our attention became increasingly focused on two particular players going at each other like mad dogs. Whenever these two players got near each other anticipation in the press box rose as I'm sure it did in the stands. We were rarely disappointed by each fresh collision between the two players. We, as football fans, were getting our money's worth of viciousness. We weren't too much unlike the Romans cheering the gladiators at the Coliseum.

NEAR THE END of the first half another player happened to wander into the private war of the two players and he received a particularly hard shot from the opposing player. He went down in a heap and the hit elicited cheers of excitement such as "welcome to the varsity," "he really had his clock cleaned" and other one liners used to describe someone getting blasted in hard play. I felt a bit exhilarated at the player getting his lights turned off.

The player was obviously hurt but most of us still continued to praise the opposing player's viciousness. Some thought the hit was clean, some thought the hit was uncalled for, but no one seemed to care about the injured player lying on the field. The boy eventually was taken away in an ambulance and later I heard he had been knocked out and was transported to a hospital for x-rays. Even after he was carried away jokes were still being made about his unfortunate meeting with the other player.

I wondered how the injured boy's parents felt sitting there in the stands. Surely they would have been horrified to hear us talking so humorously about their son.

It was as if we had forgotten he was just a 16-year-old boy. To us he was just a player for our entertainment. Just a toy.

I DIDN'T LIKE feeling unconcerned for the boy's health. I began to dislike the lingering references to the play. I began to think some of us might be irresponsible to the needs of the young men on the field.

If we only care about them when they are doing well and winning and discard them when they are hurt and losing then I think we are more vicious than any action on the field can be.

After all it's only a game, isn't it?

Storm clouds in Europe

Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — The latest developments in Poland cast new storm clouds over that country and the rest of Europe. The more so as the Atlantic alliance seems to be losing its base on the Continent, and the Reagan administration shows no capacity to keep pace with rapid changes abroad.

Poland, until recently, presented an almost insoluble problem to Moscow. The independent union Solidarity pursued a tactic of escalating demands without providing the kind of clear challenge to justify Soviet intervention. Party Secretary Stanislaw Kania played the perfect foil for Solidarity. He kept making concessions while heading off showdowns. Which is why Moscow tried to force him out at the Party Congress in June.

Declining economic conditions subsequently combined with Solidarity's steady demands to undermine Kania. A growing group in the party saw the need to discipline the union. Russia, which had been taking the position that the issue was up to Poland, then applied the pressure. The Pravda of Oct. 13, for instance, called the Polish problem a "question that touches on the vital interest of all parties and states that have chosen the path of Socialism." Four days later the Central Committee in Warsaw ousted Kania as party chief, and put in his place Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski.

Gen. Jaruzelski commands all the instruments for a crackdown: the government as prime minister; and the army as minister of defense. He has already raised the possibility of banning strikes and applying martial law. He has prolonged army service by two months — a sure sign that he expects trouble. So the Russians are alive again in Poland, and if Jaruzelski doesn't do their dirty work, they are that much closer to moving themselves.

THE ATLANTIC alliance, in theory, should have reacted with vigor. In the past, Soviet pressure on Eastern Europe has always worked to solidify the allies. Poland especially has friends in this country and on the Continent. The perfect opportunity for strong comment was available since the two Western leaders with the surest internal mandate — President Reagan and President Francois Mitterrand of France — were meeting in Yorktown. But not a peep came from either man, and Mitterrand explained part of the reason in a breakfast session with five of us from the American press.

Western Europe, he said, is now undergoing a fundamental political change. As Mitterrand sees it, Social Democrats are giving way to Socialists. Social Democrats, he says, have been primarily interested in political liberty. Socialists, by contrast, dedicate themselves to fundamental economic change. It follows — though Mitterrand does not say so — that the Social Democrats see Russia as a prime danger while the Socialists are alarmed by American economic power.

The France of Mitterrand is one obvious case in point, and there are others. Greece has just elected a Socialist leader, Andreas Papandreu, renowned for his anti-American rhetoric. In Britain, the Labor Party is sliding into neutralism and pacifism. In West Germany, Social Democratic Chancellor Helmut Schmidt faces a challenge from the left wing of his own party. Thus the main drift of European politics is away from the alliance.

The Reagan administration, in dealing with this, as all other foreign matters, does not know its own mind. Secretary of State Alexander Haig understands that arms control negotiations offer the best way to stay the European drift and to keep Moscow from adventures. But there also thrives within the administration a hard-line view well represented by Gen. Robert Schweitzer, the White House aide who was summarily fired for making an unauthorized speech the other day.

THE PRESIDENT, in these conditions, has no bearings. It is typical, not a mere slip of the tongue, that in his toast to Mitterrand at Yorktown, he confused General Rochambeau with Admiral de Grasse. It was also typical that at his luncheon with out-of-town editors on Oct. 26, he goaded the Russians with an absolutely fatuous statement: "They cannot vastly increase their military productivity because they've already got their people on a starvation diet of sawdust."

Worse still was the comment at the same luncheon about the possibility of Western Europe becoming the battleground for a nuclear exchange that would not touch either Russia or the U.S. "I could see," the President said, "where you could have an exchange of tactical weapons against troops in the field without it bringing either one of the major powers to pushing the button." But even if Reagan can see that — which very few others can — to say so is merely to strengthen the pacifists and neutralists who are already undermining pro-American leaders all over Europe.

The upshot is genuine danger. Russia is playing a subtle game in Europe against governments prone to distance themselves from an America led by a President with little grasp of foreign policy.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My husband is not a Christian, but I became one a few months ago. How can I help our small children come to know God? — Mrs. H.T.

DEAR MRS. H.T.: I am thankful you have come to know Christ as your personal Lord and Savior, and also that you are concerned about the spiritual welfare of your children. Teaching our children about God is one of the most important responsibilities we have as parents. The Bible says, "We will not hide them from their children; we will tell the next generation the praiseworthy deeds of the Lord, his power, and the wonders he has done" (Psalms 78:4).

First of all, pray for your children every day. Pray not only that God will protect them, but that he will work in their hearts and give them a love for himself. Then teach them to pray. Pray with them before they go to bed at night, and help them learn to thank God for things which have meant much to them during the day. Teach them also to pray for others. A child's prayer need not be long, but it will help them learn that God is real and can be trusted.

Then teach them also some verses from the Bible which they can memorize. They may not understand all they memorize right now, but passages like John 3:16 and Psalm 23 will come to mean much in later life. Then also tell them that the Bible is important to you.

One of the great examples in the Bible of a child who apparently had a non-believing father and a believing mother was Timothy. Paul's companion and co-worker, Paul said concerning him, "From infancy you have known the holy Scriptures, which are able to make you wise for salvation through faith in Jesus Christ" (2 Timothy 3:15).

I assume you have become active in the church where Christ is preached. If so, seek to get your children in the Sunday school, where they will also learn about God and how to serve him. Don't forget also that you bear a responsibility to your husband. Pray that God will give you wisdom as you live your life before him, and that God will also work in his heart to bring him to Christ. Your example can mean a great deal in helping him see that Christ is real.

Vitamins won't help arthritis

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I read with interest your comment about vitamin E. I had heard of recommendations for massive quantities of E for arthritis. I am not particularly interested in ingesting copious quantities of anything, but when my knees become so miserable that I crawl to the bathroom, I start taking 5,000 I.U.'s of E daily. When I quit taking it my knees get miserable again, and it is back to using a cane. I have been taking 5,000 I.U.'s of E now for a year and one-half and have no side effects. Now I understand there is no danger of accumulation in the body, despite what you stated. — Mrs. C.S.

I stand by my previous statement. Every reputable source states that vitamin E, like vitamins A and D, is stored in body fat. However, vitamin E is relatively non-toxic. But you should be cautious about ingesting large quantities of it for long periods, because it does stay around. Therefore, I would be leery of your massive doses of E over such a long period. The recommended daily requirements for adults are 15 I.U.'s for men and 12 for women.

Today, these requirements are listed in milligrams, not I.U.'s. It's 10 milligrams for men, eight for women. Although actual toxicity from E has not been documented, it is wise to proceed cautiously on unfamiliar ground in medicine as elsewhere, especially when there is no documentation of benefit in an illness.

Despite your testimonial about its effectiveness, there are not many who would agree with you. Remember, please, that rheumatoid arthritis has peaks and valleys of discomfort, and the valleys often account for such testimonials about non-proven remedies. In fact, Mrs. C.S., physical therapy for rheumatoid arthritis is based on exercise of joints during pain-free periods and easing of exercise at times of peak inflammation of joints.

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. For a copy of the booklet, "How You Can Control Arthritis," which discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications, write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Reagan behind but 'we will win,' Baker says of AWACS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate opponents who have told him they are reconsidering can be converted with a final push of presidential persuasion.

Reagan, back from last week's economic summit in Mexico, plans to try just that. He said he will lobby 18 senators before Wednesday's vote in an effort to convince them that rejecting the $8.5 billion arms package would not be "doing their country a service."

Interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation," Baker refused repeatedly to say how many senators he considers wavering but declared that opponents

"are well below the 50 mark and are losing momentum." At the same time, though, he conceded that Reagan is "not yet at 50," either.

The latest Associated Press count shows 52 senators on record against the sale and two others leaning that way, 37 either for or leaning for and nine undecided.

Opponents have to get a majority of those voting to veto the sale, which was rejected by the House earlier. A tie wins for Reagan.

—The Senate is expected to act on a bill giving the president standby powers, which Reagan doesn't want, to allocate supplies and impose price controls in case of another Arab oil embargo.

—Legislation to begin daylight-saving time the first Sunday in March rather than the last Sunday in April is due for House action. Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., the bill's sponsor, said the change could save the equivalent of 100,000 barrels of oil a day.

—A House Judiciary subcommittee will hold the first congressional hearing Wednesday on President Reagan's executive order easing restrictions on CIA operations within the United States.

Cranston said he now counts 56 votes against the sale and 41 for it.

ODESSA — Texans know more about chili than anyone else, and Odessa's Kelly Womack is out to prove it.

Womack will represent Texas at Hollywood Park Race Track in Los Angeles Nov. 1, in the International Chili Society's 1981 World Championship Chili Cookoff. He also will be after his share of Budweiser's $40,000 purse — including a $20,000 first prize and "King of Beers, King of Chili" trophy. Two other Texans, Susan Airhart and Gus Pietch of Houston, representing Hawaii and the Gulf Coast, respectively, will round out the field of more than 60 current state, regional, and international cookoff winners and former world champions.

Police chaplain found shot to death

DALLAS (AP) — A Church of Christ and for the volunteer chaplain for the Dallas Police Department was found shot to death in his apartment Sunday after a newspaper carrier discovered the door ajar and notified officers, police said.

Investigators said J.C. Bristo, 57, was lying on the floor of a bedroom in the apartment with a single gunshot wound to the forehead.

His car, a 1979 Oldsmobile station wagon, was missing from the apartment parking lot and police said robbery may have been a motive in the slaying. Police said there was no sign of a struggle.

Bristo had at one time been a minister for the

Focus on family living Abuse of elderly stress-related

By JANET ROGERS
County Extension Agent
(Part one of a two-part series)

Elder abuse, like child abuse, is often misunderstood. It goes hand-in-hand with family stress, background and the elderly person's own condition, along with the availability of outside services to lessen strains on the caregiver.

For families faced with care of a dependent elderly parent, research has produced some patterns and trends that can help provide understanding and direction.

This research points to ways families can effectively care for their elderly without abuse — and with less stress to the family, particularly the caregiver. Surveys of social-service professionals and police statistics suggest that family members are the most frequent abusers of the elderly.

About 10 percent of the frail elderly in the care of their children are "at risk," according to estimates. Furthermore, victims tend to be older than 75 and female.

Types of abuse are many: life-threatening, neglect, verbal, emotional or psychological abuse, physical mistreatment, financial exploitation and over-use of drugs.

Physical mistreatment can range from isolated incidents of aggression such as rough jerking of a parent's arm to deprivation of food and repeated physical mistreatment, financial exploitation and over-use of drugs.

Emotional or psychological abuse tends to be taunting, degrading and humiliating for the person.

Adult children tend to use screaming and yelling to control their elderly parents.

Research suggests the following factors contribute to potential abuse of the dependent elderly:

Family history — This includes family sanction and use of harsh physical punishment, such as hitting or slapping, of children in settling family disputes.

Also are included longstanding, unresolved conflicts and resentment between and among the generations.

Elder's condition — The more dependent the elderly parent — physically, emotionally or financially — the greater the risk of abuse.

Caregiver's stresses — Life stressors of the adult child caregiver includes financial worries, family-marriage discord, health problems, lack of privacy and personal time, conflicting loyalties and double demands from the generations at each end.

Available services — Unfortunately such services as community mental-health centers, geriatric day care or temporary care, and hospices (specialized and intensive health and mental-health services for the dying and their families) are not available in many locations.

Home Health Agencies, homemaker services, home-delivered meals and adult sitters are more readily available, but income restrictions may limit a family's eligibility.

Families faced with the care of a dependent parent can use planning factors to begin examining their own capabilities in caring for dependent parents or in-laws — and to look at the community supports available.

Thinking through these factors in a realistic way may reduce the situations in which elder abuse is likely to occur.

Family members then can concentrate on meeting other needs of the parent, such as affection and socialization.

Couple's Name Game Takes a Tricky Turn

DEAR ABBY: I have enjoyed many a chuckle from your column over the years. Yesterday I thought one letter was particularly funny, so I read it to my wife. She saw absolutely no humor in it. The letter was from a woman who said her best friend, Alice, suspected that her husband, Ray, was fooling around with the girls at the office. The friend said she knew Ray was fooling around but she didn't know whether to tell Alice.

Well, my wife's name is Alice and my name is Ray, and my wife thought it was too much of a coincidence.

I tried to tell her that your column is in over a thousand newspapers, and it could be any Alice and Ray.

My wife is very active in the symphony, Junior League and civic projects, and I am well-known in business circles, Chamber of Commerce, etc. I suppose we will both be in for a lot of good-natured ribbing.

I still think it's funny, but you would be doing me a big favor if you'd drop my wife a few lines and let her know that I'm not the Ray you wrote about.

RHODE ISLAND RAY

DEAR RAY: Will do. "Alice" and "Ray" were pseudonyms. Coincidentally, I heard from another Alice-and-Ray team. They live in Dallas. He's 79 and she's 81. They thought it was hilarious. In fact, Ray thanked me!

DEAR ABBY: For some time my husband and I have been seeing a family therapist, both separately and together. I have trouble trying to understand what our therapist hopes to accomplish by some of the things he does. For example, at the start of each session he spends about 10 minutes standing in front of the window, stretching and describing what he sees, talking in a singsong voice about the weather and things that have absolutely nothing to do with us or our problems. My husband can't understand this either. Is this usual in therapy?

We are afraid to ask him because we don't want to question his methods. What is family therapy, anyway?

MILWAUKEE SENTINEL READER

DEAR READER: Family therapy is counseling the family members individually, and also as a group. You have the right to ask your therapist any question that comes to your mind. And if you're not satisfied with the answers, there are other therapists.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are about the same size. For years she raided my closets and took my jeans, shirts, sweaters, etc. When I complained, she'd tell me to buy more. This I did time and time again, but she continued to wear my clothes.

Finally I put on one of her dresses and paraded into the kitchen. She said I looked "cute" and went about her business. I tried this a few more times, then a funny thing happened. I started to like it.

She started to help me put outfits together — panty hose, heels, then makeup and a wig, and she'd wear the pants. We've done this only at home, but we're considering going out this way. We enjoy switching roles. (It's done wonders for our sagging sex lives.) Are we crazy? Or just caught up in the times? This isn't a prank letter. It's real. What do you think?

LIKING IT IN HARLEM, GA.

DEAR LIKING: You didn't invent anything. This has been going on for centuries. You are not crazy, but before you go out that way you'd better check with the local laws. It's against the law in some cities to "masquerade" in this manner.

DEAR ABBY: Where is the safest place to be in case of an earthquake?

THINKING AHEAD

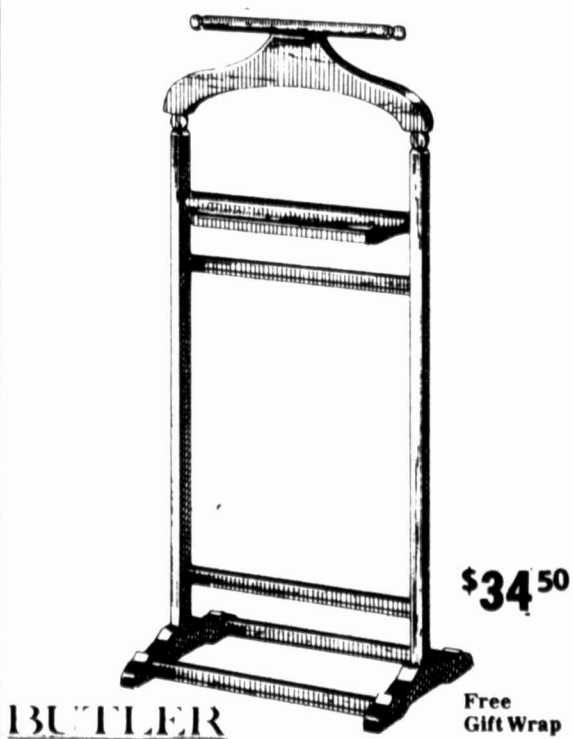

DEAR THINKING: In an airplane.

Eating a big breakfast can make you hungrier at lunchtime

Gulp! Eating a big breakfast can trigger the flow of insulin and actually make you hungrier by lunchtime. So says Dr. Charles Klein (of Dr. Stanley Title's Weight Control Center in New York) in a current Family Circle magazine article. "33 Beauty Questions Women Ask Most." A good idea, says Dr. Klein in the magazine, is to eat a light breakfast at a later hour than usual. Avoid refined carbohydrates and sugars (stay away from those donuts and Danishes) and eat protein-rich foods or whole grains. This won't trigger as much insulin, but will give you energy, Dr. Klein concludes in the magazine.

Do working teens lose more than earn?

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Current estimates say that 30 percent of high school freshmen and sophomores and 50 percent of all juniors and seniors hold jobs during the school year. But do working teens sometimes lose more than they earn?

Recently, one of the first large-scale studies of working teens produced some unsettling results, says a recent issue of "Seventeen." The study was sponsored by a grant from the National Institute of Education and conducted at the University of California at Irvine by sociologists Ellen Greenberger and Laurence Steinberg.

The California researchers surveyed 212 working students at four Orange County high schools about their lifestyles, attitudes, friends, and schoolwork, comparing their responses to those of 319 of their peers who had never worked. Later, 50 students from each group were interviewed in depth.

While 80 percent of the workers claimed to like their jobs, they were generally more cynical and disdainful of the work world than non-workers. The working teens tended to have lower ethical standards, too. Twenty-nine percent admitted they had given away goods or services to friends while on the job. Eighteen percent said they had stolen either from their employer or from co-worker. Sixteen percent had reported to work intoxicated at least once, and 9 percent marked more hours on their time card than they had actually worked.

In addition, the workers were more likely to have bought, sold, or used marijuana and alcohol, possibly because they had more spending money. Those who worked very long hours tended to study less, get lower grades, and have less interest in school than before they started working.

But not all the news about working teens was bad. For one thing, part-time jobs appear to help students learn about business and economics. The workers scored significantly better on the short business quiz that was included in the survey. They also learned to organize and budget their time, deal more effectively with people, and cope with difficult situations.

Siamese twins die on one-month birthday

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Siamese twin girls, born in a set of triplets, died one month after their birth from complications that doctors said had been present since the twins were born.

Jeanette and Jillian Barcena, joined at the chest and upper abdomen, died at 12:51 p.m. Saturday in the intensive care nursery of Sierra Medical Center, about 45 minutes after one of the twin's intestines ruptured, said pediatrician Dr. Carlos Gutierrez.

Tests performed Friday on the twins showed their shared liver had deteriorated and "that made their intestines paper-thin," he said.

The twins' cardiovascular and respiratory systems also had begun deteriorating, he said.

"It was hard to give them adequate nutrition because they were both on ventilators. We were not successful in feeding them with a tube or intravenously. They weakened every day," Gutierrez said.

The twins, breathing with the help of a respirator, were connected so they faced each other and often hugged one another, Gutierrez said.

Gutierrez said doctors had not separated the twins because they shared a heart chamber.

The parents were called to the hospital shortly after 12:30 p.m. Saturday, but "by the time we got to the hospital, they already had passed away," 31-year-old Armando Barcena said. "We weren't expecting them to die, but we knew that, maybe, it might happen."

Historic squadron sets Midland as its target

MIDLAND — The Confederate Air Force's Desert Squadron will be bringing vestiges of World War II air power to West Texas Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 in an air show clock full of piston-popping "warbirds" from the 1939-45 era, flying ace, supersonic jet aircraft from today's military forces, bands, skydivers, aerobatic fliers and a captured Russian tank.

"This air show will bring home to every person who attends ... the spirit of an era of our nation's history when Americans pulled together to defend a common enemy," said Squadron Col. Paul Erdmann. "Patriotism, idealism and American technology are all present and can be felt, as our 'living museum' of World War II aircraft" take to the air, he said.

More than 70 warbirds, from the Curtiss P-40N Warhawk of Flying Tiger fame to the mammoth Boeing B-29 Superfortress which hailed the Atomic Age, will be featured in the show.

The air show will be held at the Midland Regional Airport midway. Aircraft will be on display on Saturday, Oct. 31, and will be flying the next day in the 1-4:30 p.m. show. Pre-show tickets are $6 at the gate, tickets will be $8 each. Children age 12 and under will be admitted free.

ON THE RUN — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White (11) looks down field for a receiver during fourth quarter action against the Miami Dolphins Sunday in Texas Stadium. White, threw two touchdown passes in span of 31 seconds to rally the Cowboys to a 28-17 come from behind victory over the Dolphins. It also was the Cowboys 14th straight victory at Texas Stadium.

White performs miracle

Pokes win thriller

IRVING, Texas (AP) — As Roger Staubach's successor, Danny White understands the Dallas Cowboys and their fans are conditioned to miracles.

And the second-year starter at quarterback for one of the National Football League's most successful teams produced one of those miracles Sunday.

With 5:16 to go, Miami's Dave Woodley completed a four-yard touchdown pass to tight end Joe Rose and the Dolphins led 27-14.

"It was a lousy feeling," said White. "I saw the Dolphins celebrating on the sidelines ... but I didn't see anybody leaving the stands."

Fans don't give up easily in Texas Stadium because of a tradition — started by Staubach — of last-second rallies. And they were rewarded.

White threw two touchdown passes in a span of 31 seconds and the Cowboys rallied for a 28-17 heart-stopper that left Dallas Coach Tom Landry sighing and Miami Coach Don Shula stunned.

White authored a 5-yard scoring pass to tight end Doug Cosbie with 3:48 to play and Dallas got the ball right back courtesy of Dennis Thurman's interception of a Woodley pass.

Thirty-one seconds later White dropped a 32-yard scoring pass into the arms of fullback Ron Springs for the winning touchdown.

The celebration in the end zone looked like something good had happened to a college team. Springs was submerged in a landslide of ecstatic teammates on a team accused of having no emotion.

"I've never seen grown people act that way — not in a long time," White said. Landry, who saw Staubach convert defeat into victory many times, admitted: "It didn't look very good at 27-14."

"We were playing well and battled back to the lead after falling behind and then we made some offensive mistakes and couldn't hold them on defense," he said.

The Cowboys jumped ahead 14-6 at halftime on a five-yard run by Springs and a 21-yard White to Butch Johnson connection.

Woodley, who had a five-yard first half touchdown pass to Tony Nathan, gave the Dolphins a 27-14 lead with a 69-yard scoring pass to Jimmy Cefalo, setup Nathan's 10-yard scoring run, then hit Joe Rose with a 4-yard TD that appeared to be the game-clincher.

Dallas is now 6-2, a game behind Philadelphia in the National Conference East.

Miami is 5-2-1, a half game ahead of Buffalo in the American Conference East.

With all the scoring, the difference came when Miami placekicker Uwe von Schamman's extra point attempt after the first Miami touchdown hit the right upright.

LA takes 3-2 lead in series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The good book of baseball strategy says starting pitchers need four days off between assignments for maximum efficiency. Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda, a traditionalist, is not one to ignore age-old advice like that.

That as much as anything is why the Dodgers stand today on the threshold of the world championship. They will send Burt Hooton out to nail it down in Game 6 of the World Series Tuesday night in New York with the suddenly-floundering Yankees hoping to stay alive with Tommy John.

Hooton will have full five days of rest, just as Jerry Reuss did when he fired a brilliant five-hitter to beat Ron Guidry and the Yankees 2-1 Sunday, giving Los Angeles its third straight victory and a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven series.

Consecutive home runs by Pedro Guerrero and Steve Yeager in the seventh inning delivered the victory to Los Angeles. But it was a brilliant pitching job by Reuss following a courageous managerial decision by Lasorda which set the stage for it.

Pitcher Bob Welch never retired a batter but the Dodger bullpen delivered an 8-7 victory in an endurance test Saturday. And you only had to see Reuss pitch in the final innings Sunday to know Lasorda had made the right decision about his pitchers.

New York left six runners on base from the second through the fourth innings. Reuss survived a record-tying three errors by Dodger second baseman Dave Lopes, two of them on one play. The Yankees had runners at second and third with none out and the bases loaded with one out in the third and came away with nothing.

"What can you say?" wondered Yankee Manager Bob Lemon. "He got us out when we had opportunities to score."

The Yankees nicked Reuss for a run in the second when Reggie Jackson opened with a double and Lopes made his first error on a grounder by Bob Watson. Lou Piniella followed with an RBI-single to left and New York seemed poised to do some real damage. But Reuss shut the door, getting Rick Cerone to bang into a double play and Aurelio Rodriguez to roll out.

In the third, Willie Randolph walked with one out and Larry Milbourne singled. But Reuss wasn't budging. He got Dave Winfield on a force play grounder and struck out the dangerous Jackson, ending HIT BY PITCH — Los Angeles Dodgers batter Ron Cey recoils after being hit by a pitch from New York Yankees reliever Rich Gossage in the eighth inning of Sunday's World Series game in Los Angeles. Cey was hit in the head and was taken from game. Yankees catcher Rich Cerone is also shown.

the inning. The next crisis was in the fourth inning. Watson, leading off, walked. Piniella grounded to Lopes, who first bobbled the ball and then threw it away for a double error. Now New York had runners at second and third with none out. Big trouble. But Reuss would not be rattled. He got Cerone on a ground ball, then walked Rodriguez intentionally, last gasp. Reuss permitted loading the bases. Guidry bunted and Reuss made the play, forcing Watson at the plate. Then Randolph grounded out and the inning was over. It was to be New York's last gasp. Reuss permitted only two more baserunners the rest of the way.

Oilers battle Steelers in traditional rivalry

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers and Houston Oilers clash tonight for a share of first place in pro football's tightest division.

Last week, the Steelers and Oilers both fell to 4-3 with resounding defeats. That tied them for second place in the American Conference Central Division, a game behind the high-riding Cincinnati Bengals.

But the Bengals were upset 17-7 Sunday by the New Orleans Saints of Coach Bum Phillips, former Oiler field boss.

So tonight's Houston-Pittsburgh winner moves back into a tie with Cincinnati. The loser drops into a tie with the defending division champion Cleveland Browns at 4-4.

"We need to get on a streak and ride that rascal for seven or eight weeks," says Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw.

"Last week we went downstairs," says Oiler wide receiver Ken Burroughs. "Hopefully this week we'll go back upstairs."

Last week, the Steelers were beaten 34-7 in Cincinnati. The Bengals piled up 494 total yards, and Cincinnati's defense yielded just 210 yards to a Steeler team that had been leading the NFL in offense.

Linebacker Jack Lambert said the Steelers "stunk." Joe Greene called it a "humbling" — humiliating defeat.

"They just knocked our tails all over the place," said Bradshaw.

The Oilers were beaten 38-10 last week by New England.

The Patriots blunted Campbell's running early in the game, took the lead and forced the Oilers to throw. Then New England intercepted four of Ken Stabler's passes.

"It's going to take a lot of character to come back from a loss like that," said Oiler Coach Ed Biles.

Meanwhile, Houston apparently are trying to find happy mediums on offense.

Teams have been dropping their linebackers deep in passing situations against Pittsburgh.

After the Cincinnati game, Bradshaw suggested he had lost some of his aggressiveness by following his Coach Chuck Noll guidelines to throw short to his running backs against such defense. Noll and Bradshaw hashed the matter out this week. Apparently, they agreed they want an effective mix of downfield passes and tosses to the backs. "It's all worked out," said Bradshaw, who also shaved off his latest beard last week, leaving a moustache.

The Oilers are looking for the right blend of Earl Campbell's running and Ken Stabler's passing. There is a notion that they wanted to long to go to the pass against New England.

"I don't know what the solution is," said Stabler. "All I know is we have to find out and get the job done."

While the Steelers have lost four Monday Night Football games in a row, the Oilers have won seven straight dating back to 1978.

And Campbell is looking forward to tonight's national television exposure.

"You seem to try a bit harder because in these game you know that you're peers are watching and judging your play," said Campbell.

Salazar sets marathon record

NEW YORK (AP) — Alberto Salazar has ended all the controversy about the world marathon record.

The quietly confident Salazar had said prior to Sunday's New York City Marathon that "my goal is to break 2:08:33, so there's no doubt in my mind or anybody else's mind that I've got the record."

Salazar left no doubts. Running smoothly and strongly through New York City's five boroughs, Salazar clocked 2:25:29, some 12 seconds quicker than the mark of 2:25:41.3, set last year by Norway's Grete Waitz, when she won the New York City Marathon for the third straight time.

Allison Roe of New Zealand smashed the women's marathon record, clocking 2:25:29, some 12 seconds quicker than the mark of 2:25:41.3, set last year by Norway's Grete Waitz, when she won the New York City Marathon for the third straight time.
