

TEXAS INDUSTRIAL REVIEW

Industrial activity is the life of any prosperous community. To refrain from taking an interest in industrial problems, either labor, legislative or financial, is a short sighted as to neglect ones own personal health.

The majority of the people think that they are paying high enough taxes now.

It is the hope of the Radio Corporation of America ultimately to establish direct communication with every other country in the world. It now makes direct communication possible with England, France, Germany and Norway, with Sweden, Poland and the Argentine a promise within the year.

A smoking match carelessly thrown aside may mean a smoking forest or a burned city.

Woodward Upholds Law Enforcement.—District court opened Monday morning and was soon set to work by his honor, Judge Woodward, of Coleman. His charge to the grand jury was full of common sense, wisdom and, we judge, law. He showed how the law should be upheld and that it should not be left to any man or any set of men to say who had violated the law and who should punish the violator. He clearly showed that the grand jury and the trial juries are the main ones responsible for the ferreting out and punishing crime. Of course, the peace officers and the courts must help as the law directs. He showed the bootlegger to be a most contemptible person, but that the bootlegger should be indicted on evidence by the grand jury and the courts should pass judgment on him and send him to the penitentiary. Other crimes and misdemeanors were mentioned, but the court laid down the rule in all cases that the jury should judge by what is right and what is wrong considering the evidence they could get before them. Leave off prejudice, throw out good feeling, and despise a reward or hope of reward, and carry forward their investigations without fear or favor, with the sole idea to punish the criminal and keep down crime.—Paint Rock Herald.

Hard Luck Raising Turkeys.—Mr. and Mrs. Blair from the Duck Creek section were in town Wednesday trading. They are running a turkey farm and ranch. They have had trouble this year in getting the eggs to hatch, and will have probably not more than 100 turkeys for sale this fall and winter and the early spring. Many of their turkeys are registered and they will have some for sale for breeding purposes. They expect to continue the business and the next season hope to profit by their experiences this season and therefore hope for many more birds from their hatchery. We shall watch the "turkey farm" with interest and hope they will make it a big success.—Paint Rock Herald.

The fact though that they raised a few turkeys means that much extra money for this farmer. Had he made no effort toward raising this crop, so adaptable to West Texas range conditions, there would not have been the added profit. He can count as clear money that made from the turkey crop.

THE ARISTOCRACY OF COOLIDGE

Not of Boston's Back Bay, but a Vermont Farm.

From the New York Tribune.

The one comical comment upon President Coolidge has come from the New York Call. It referred to him as belonging to "the Back Bay aristocracy of Boston." This will give the Coolidges of Plymouth, Vt., farmers bred and born, a good chuckle.

If a precise prior occupation is to be tagged upon the new President, it obviously must be farmer. He was pitching hay on his father's farm when the news of Mr. Harding's illness reached him. He came up as a farmer's boy. One of his sons was working on a farm when the shift from vice-presidency to presidency happened, and went back to the job at the usual hour the next morning. When there was a demand for an estimate of Calvin Coolidge by his father, that Vermont parent replied in truly Vermont style that "he had always done his work fairly well."

This lavish parental praise suggests what aristocracy it is that the President belongs to—the aristocracy that Americans recognize, the aristracy of workers. Already the representatives of the farmers in Washington are awakening to the fact that he is a man who has studied the farmer's problems in the sweat of his brow.

Where could you find at an equally low cost the like of this greater Chalmers power and speed, and the all-round brilliancy of performance which advanced engineering has given it?

Where, at the price, could you find a more sightly and modish creation than this beautiful car of Meteor Blue, set off stunningly by steel disc wheels and touches of gleaming nickel on the lamps?

And where, for the money, could you get so much in the way of equipment—motor driven horn, windshield cleaner, spare wheel, tonneau lights operating with the door, side curtains opening with the door, nickel trimmed drum headlamps and the like?

Here is the car, then, that now gives the motor-car dollar a new and greater purchasing power.

Whether you are in the market for a car or not you will be interested to learn at first hand what has been accomplished. Therefore, come in at your convenience and study and test the improved Chalmers Six to any extent you please.

HONOR MRS. BRAND

One of the most "ne'er-to-be forgotten" affairs of the season was given by the T. E. L. Class of the First Baptist Church at the home of Mrs. R. M. Chitwood honoring Mrs. E. C. Brand who is leaving for their new home at Hamlin.

Thursday afternoon at 3, guests began arriving, registering in a dainty hand-made register, the gift of Mrs. Wiehlman, in class colors. Each guest used her given name and characteristics.

Then the roll was called. Those answering were: Sophia Brand, the honoree, Lorraine Stephens Cothron, the bride; Maude McQuirter, Etta Elizabeth Farris, Kitty Mullins, Beth Walker, Perle B. Stamps, Violet L. Bullock, Ruth Geldert, Pet M. Rain is always welcome in West Texas but it can be used to better advantage at some times more than others.

Folks who crowded the Polo Grounds in New York to watch a heavyweight championship bout go less than two rounds must have wondered if they received their moneys worth. Dempsey retains the championship for the United States. There might be more consolation in that if Dempsey were worth retaining as a citizen of the United States. But he will retain numerous dollars, enough to soon put him in the millionaire class, if he is not there already and that will assuredly retain him the affections of some folks. It would make little difference to the money worshipers if he were a buck negro.

Some day somebody is going to call Premier Mussolini of Italy. If he and Italy only were to be considered in the proceedings, one might watch him humbled with something of equanimity. But with France and England at jealous odds, they are pretty apt to be forced into such a mess sooner or later on opposite sides. And there is all the hindling needed for another world war. With recent lessons so fresh, there will be some more of the fancy sidestepping such as is in evidence in the Turkish situation and elsewhere, until there is a new generation upon whom the horror of war is not quite so fresh. It is usually that way.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Eastland departed Friday for Breckenridge to make that place their future home. Mr. Eastland will be connected with a bank at that place. They have been residents of this city for several years and while here have made lots of friends who regret their going, but who wish for them much success in their new endeavor.—Roby Star Record.

The request of Commissioners' Court was renewed again Monday, asking that the city employ a health officer to attend to sick and indigent persons within the city limits. In speaking of the matter Tuesday County Judge Hall stated that in the past all such cases developing within the city limits had been referred to the county authorities and intimated that the county had drawn the line as to recognizing these matters in the future.—Colorado Record.

Sheriff Flynt has been authorized by the Commissioners' Court of Runnels county to purchase three of the best blood hounds that he can find and bring them here for service when needed. Mr. Flynt stated Thursday morning that he would get the dogs as soon as possible. He will purchase dogs which have been trained and which are experienced in running down criminals.—Ballinger Ledger.

The county farm agent stated Monday that there would be a small top cotton crop this fall on account of depredations being made by worms. The pests are appearing in large numbers in many localities in the county. Dulin stated. The agent estimated the cotton crop this year at 25,000 bales in Mitchell County. Acreage planted to the crop will approximate 95,000 acres he stated.—Colorado Record.

Sheriff Lambert and Fred McKennon went over about Rotan to look for a negro who had left Ford owing him around $12. After looking all around town they decided to go northeast of town. After visiting several negro shacks they run right into a big poker game in progress. They rounded up twenty of the gents, loaded them into a truck and the Sheriff getting on top and here they come into town. A sight to behold. The result the county benefitted by $670.—Roby Star Record.

CLEAN FIELDS THIS WINTER MEAN FEW INSECTS NEXT SEASON

The boll weevil passes the winter, as an inactive insect, hidden in Spanish moss and under trash, especially along fence rows and ditches. Being inactive, it requires no food during this time, but in order to pass the winter successfully, it must eat before going into this inactive state, about the time of the first killing frosts. Furthermore, only the weevils most recently developed when the inactive stage is reached have sufficient vitality to carry them over the winter. It must be remembered that infestation in spring arises from those overwintering weevils. Operations carried out early in the fall, (previous to October first if possible) that entirely kill the cotton stalk, which forms the only food and breeding plant of the weevil, prevents many from entering winter quarters. Burning trash along fences and such places in mid winter destroys many that escaped the early operation.

The boll worm in the fall drops to the ground beneath the cotton plant, and makes a partly weatherproof cell about six inches below the surface, where it changes to a brown case. In this state it is helpless, but if it lives till next spring, it will emerge as a moth to begin again the round of destruction. Plowing in fall to a depth of six inches with occasional harrowing during the winter, breaks up those cells, and by exposure of the cases to the weather and birds, a very high percentage of the insects are destroyed.

The cut worm becomes partly grown in the fall. During the winter on cold days it burrows into the ground, coming to the surface on warm days to feed on grass and weeds growing in the field. When cotton appears above ground in spring, it feeds on this and completes its growth in a short time. During winter it absolutely must have food of some kind, and is unable to move more than a few feet to find it. Consequently keeping weeds down during the entire interval from late fall until cotton is planted, by fall plowing, followed by occasional harrowing during winter and early spring reduces spring damage from the cut worm.

Winter measures are of little effect against the webworm, but clean culture in spring that keeps all growth especially careless weeds, removed before and during the period of early cotton growth reduces this damage. The careless weed is the favorite food and eggs are laid on this in spring in large numbers by the parent moth. If the worms are very numerous, they soon destroy the weeds, or the weeds may be destroyed by cultivation, and then if cotton is present at the time, they immediately attack this. Damage is localized to patches of weeds present when cotton is planted and during the immediate period thereafter, and careful eradication of weeds during this time will avoid damage.

Unfortunately the leaf worm cannot be controlled by winter operations. That must be fought when it appears in the fields. But besides the four insects mentioned above, a number of others of minor importance are controlled to a great extent by some one or several of the measures suggested. The general program of insect control during the interval between crops will be:

1. Kill the cotton stalks early, if possible by October first.
2. Plow in fall to a depth of six inches.
3. Harrow occasionally during the winter.
4. By any means whatever, keep all weeds and grass growth absolutely killed during fall, winter, and in early spring until after cotton is up and regular cultivation begins.—From A. & M. Extension Service.

According to Friday's Reporter, snow fell in Cleveland and overcoats were in demand in Kansas City and Atlanta, Ga. And it is not going to be very many weeks before some heat is going to be vigorously demanded in your home. Why not settle that heating problem for all time to come by the installation of one of these? We haven't very many in stock. Don't wait. Come in tomorrow.

Picture It In Your Home

—this Wonderful Warm-Air Furnace that Looks Like a Phonograph

This picture shows the installation of an Estate Heatrola in a modern six-room home.

Picture one in your home. See what a wonderful improvement it is over a heating stove. Note how beautifully it blends with other home furnishings. It combines the efficiency of a furnace with the appearance of a phonograph.

Estate Heatrola is a furnace—not a stove. Placed in one of the living rooms, it heats 3 to 6 connecting rooms, in even the coldest weather.

Burns any kind of coal, and uses less coal than a stove.

Beautifully finished in grained mahogany—a vitreous enamel, practically everlasting. You can rub and dust it with a cloth, just as you do your furniture.

Estate HEATROLA

Heats 3 to 6 Connecting Rooms

But if a good old fashioned stove still looks better to you and your pocket-book at this time, we want to sell you one. Perhaps the largest assortment of stoves it has ever been our privilege to show you is awaiting inspection. Why not come in and get the one you want before somebody beats you to it—before the line is all picked over...And we can give a lot better service now than we can later on when that first northern bite and everybody wants a stove "right now."

Wisdom.
What can't be cured must be endured.
Ploze deep while sluggards sleep.
When the cat's away, the mice will play.
So look before you leap.
Birds of a feather flock together.
A stitch in time saves nine.
There's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip—
Cast not your pearls to swine.
Many a little makes a mickle.
Rob Peter to pay Paul.
A winter's fog will freeze a dog.
And the weakest go to the wall.
A bird in the hand—but you understand
By now how this is done.
And I haven't any proverb book at hand.
And I wish I hadn't begun.
Synthetic rhymes are really crimes—
They're done by a lazy bard.
But they're harder far than the others are
That look three times as hard!

ROMANCE SHATTERED

Somebody's romance was shattered or temporarily halted at least when a marriage license recently issued by County Clerk Farrar was returned to him a day or so later with the pronouncement that it "could not be used." Gus did not learn the details.

County Judge A. S. Mauzey and Secretary J. A. McCurdy of the Board of City Development will leave this afternoon for Austin where they will attend the meeting of the State Highway Commission there Monday with reference to the forthcoming bond issue election called here Saturday, Oct. 20th.

Digestion.
A positive working program of health includes, as its chief aim, a normal cell-nourishing blood stream as the result of proper vitamins and food content that make for perfect digestion.
Indigestion is often the result of bolted food. Food improperly cooked will cause gas in the stomach, bloating and belching. The same diet continually month after month is another cause. Poisons in improper food, coffee, tobacco and lack of exercise resulting in constipation also induce chronic cases of indigestion.

The teeth, stomach, small and large intestines must all do their part to insure a perfect digestion, and healthful elimination. Brush the teeth carefully night and morning and after each meal if possible. One hardly realizes the importance of good teeth until they are lost.
A thorough chewing of food holds it in the mouth until mixed with saliva, the first of the digestive fluids. For good stomach digestion, regularity in taking meals is best. Don't ever eat all you want. Eating whenever you are hungry, means overwork for the stomach.

Vegetables and fruits are rich in the juices and acids that aid digestion. Good stomach digestion aids the small intestinal digestion to a large degree. The large intestines must be kept free and open, after the remaining nutriment of the food mass has been absorbed. To aid this process, walking, bending and reaching exercises will keep the large intestines active.

Don't eat to excess of fats, sugars or starches. Don't become a tea or coffee fiend. Remember that pure drinking water is a great aid to digestion.

The situation confronting one who is fat, gaining, or trying to reduce, often is trying. It requires the diagnosis of a skilled physician to determine the nature of your system and whether your fat trouble is familial, glandular or overweight. The latter may be successfully treated. In case of family tendencies or the glandular type there is not much hope of reducing.

First determine what your normal weight should be. No distinct gain should result after the age of 30. Ten pounds either way should not bother you.

Often reducing the use of fat-forming foods seems ineffective. One reason is you expect results too quickly.

Again, one may work strenuously at diet and exercise and register a gain. If so, your obesity probably has resulted in some disease. Your attempts have reduced the trouble to such an extent that your overworked fat body is relieved and actually registers a gain.

In establishing yourself on a non-fat-forming diet, use these foods:

Thin vegetable soups with rye or bran bread, toast and a moderate amount of lean meat and fish with fresh vegetables, raw or stewed fruits with very little sugar.

Start the diet first; then walking and regular exercise. Do not attempt rapid reducing. It is dangerous. A pound, possibly two or three each week, is sufficient. Cold baths taken under your physician's orders will help. Walk from three to six or eight miles every day, rain or shine. No mysterious "systems" or drugs are needed.

WANDERING BOY DIES FAR FROM HOME

Louis Wray Shive, 17 years old, many miles from his home in Charleston, Mississippi, on his way from sunny California, to which state he had been lured by golden propaganda of "easy money, easily made," reached Baird, penniless, hungry and sick. Dr. R. L. Griggs noticed the lad, crouched upon the curb in front of the City Pharmacy, and had him brought into his office, and, after a brief examination, declared him to be "a very sick boy," suffering with advanced double pneumonia.

He gave the sufferer some medicine and benevolent bystanders "chipped in" and secured a room for the sick boy at the American Hotel and a trained nurse to care for him. At first, through pride, the sick boy refrained from giving his real name or place of residence, but when Dr. Griggs informed him of the seriousness of his physical condition he "fessed up," and a telegram was dispatched to his father, Lonnie W. Shive a newspaperman of Charleston, Mississippi.

There was an immediate response "On my way to Baird." And Wednesday night Mr. Shive arrived on the Sunshine and was at the bedside of his wandering boy when the latter paid Nature's last debt at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning—Baird Star.

NEW YORK GOSSIP

(By Casual Stroller)

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The summer spooning season has developed the mean, sour-tempered cynic. This person—the meanest man in New York this week—took an umbrella and wrote a pessimistic message on one of the nice gravel walks of Prospect Park, which is to Brooklyn what Central Park is to Manhattan. He picked out Lovers' Lane and a moonshine night and scrawled this for all loitering couples to read: "Warning: Love is blind—do not marry young."

The old-time medicine man has been supplanted by his modern successor. This is an anatomy expert who appears nightly on a Broadway corner. He carries with him a human skeleton and numerous charts of the human spine with which he mounts a platform and begins haranguing the crowd.

Are telephone girls purely mechanical?

An ambitious newspaperman tried to telephone W. Frank McGee, of 77th Street bucketshop fame, at the Ludlow Street Jail. But the number—Worth 4302—didn't answer. Business of getting the chief operator. For tedious minutes the chief operator tries to get the number. Then she reports in a business-like tone of voice:

"They don't answer at Worth 4302. It's too late this afternoon—maybe those summer closing hours. . . . What? . . . Well, I don't care if it is a jail!"

Zing! Disconnected.

There's at least one old-fashioned porch left in Manhattan. It has easy chairs, sofa cushions and a porch swing. Some scraggly wisps of morning glory clamber over the side, while the yard in front boasts two lilac bushes. The porch adorns a boarding house in the "Roaring Forties" and chorus girls make their home there.

Some charming girls of Gotham have hit upon a new means of pin money. Wealthy spendthrifts, seeking to make certain rapid circles, have found the way immeasurably shortened if they can appear about town with well known persons of the chorus.

Consequently purely business-like deals are arranged. The lady agrees to appear with the gentleman after show hours at any well known cabaret. The gentleman pays a flat sum for the free advertising which her presence may attract to him.

A thousand dollars, it is said, was the sum recently charged for a single supper appearance.

What's the biggest thrill in New York? Shooting down the longest chute-the-chutes at Coney Island? Dropping in an elevator from the tower to the first floor of the Woolworth Building? Exciting, all right, says a western boy spending his vacation in New York, but these are nothing compared to a ride on the Ninth Avenue "L", as it swings around a curve over 110th street, way above the house tops. It's one of the highest transit points in town.

New York's the most disappointing place in the country. Instead of being the city of speed, fast life and perpetual rush, it's one of the slowest towns ever. This is the judgment of a California visitor, after her first trip to the metropolis. From the moment that her taxi stopped at the first crossing near the railroad station, until she had to stand in line and wait half an hour before she was able to get to the ticket window for her return ticket, life in the Big City was just one wait after another—in the subway, cafeterias, theaters, buses, the public library, and even at the street crossings while walking.

The financial district is watching with interest the progress of a leading Wall Street broker and Rhea Crawford, late of the Salvation Army. The lovely Rhea, who some time since held all Broadway

enthralled at street corner meetings, is now conducting an uplift campaign single-handed. The broker, in the meantime, is endeavoring to win Rhea by means of furs, jewelry and other little knick-knacks which formerly have been found efficacious with ladies of the show world. But Rhea will have none of him.

MAXWELL-CHALMERS CUTS CREDITED TO CHRYSLER

His Manufacturing Ingenuity, Plus Corporation's Merchandising And Sales Ability, Stated As Reasons

The manufacturing and sales ingenuity of Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the board of directors of the Maxwell Motor Corporation, is credited by officials of the corporation for making possible the material reductions in the prices of all models of Maxwell and Chalmers cars, recently announced.

Reductions on the Maxwell range up to $90 on the touring and roadster and on the Chalmers to $100 on the seven passenger custom type sedan. The average reduction on Maxwell cars were $64 on each of the nine models and $60 on the five Chalmers cars. The smallest Maxwell reduction was $40 and $50 was the lowest reduction on a

Chalmers model. The new prices make both the good Maxwell and improved Chalmers the lowest at which they have ever sold. "Mr. Chrysler, through his own ability in manufacturing and that of his organization in merchandising and selling, has succeeded in recent months in effecting economies both in the manufacture and distribution of Maxwell and Chalmers, and at the same time adding numerous improvements in the cars," said Arthur E. Baker, vice president of the corporation, in commenting on the reductions. This Maxwell-Chalmers action has been the subject of considerable discussion among motor car dealers and by the general public. The reductions, Mr. Baker pointed out, were made at a time when increases in automobile prices were forecast by many observers. "For that reason, especially, they stand out as a remarkable tribute to the ability of Mr. Chrysler, his engineers and the Maxwell-Chalmers sales organization," he added.

"That the public was quick to appreciate the greater value now offered by both Maxwell and Chalmers is convincingly shown in factory sales and shipping records since the announcement. Hundreds of dealers are reporting unprecedented September business." (Adv)
