Conflicting claims have appeared as to what constitutes the first railway. In point of time, the Pennsylvania railroad by virtue of its charter being granted on March 21, 1823. It did not however, start to operate until Sept. 20, 1832. Col. John Stevens is the father of the Pennsylvania, as he is the father of the American locomotive. Having seen the imperfect steam boat of John Fitch plying on the Deleware, he became interested in steam propulsion, and experimented on this for the next thirty years. In 1825 Stevens constructed a locomotive and multibular boiler which he operated for several years on a circuiar track upon his estate. It carried half a dozen passengers at the rate of 12 miles an hour. This is believed to have been the first locomotive in America driven by steam upon a

An example of the disbelief in the new steam traction is illustrated by a test of speed between a horse drawn vehicle on an operating line of iron track and the first steam drawn car staged at that time. A mechanica genius named Peter Cooper had compieted an engine known as "Tom Thumb." After months of endeavor he finally, on August 25, 1830, got a vail of it on the Baltimore and Ohio

Enduring Quality Assured As Well As New Superiorities

The popularity of the new good Maxwell, the ready acceptance of this finer four wherever automobiles are used, is not alone a question of performance, nor yet of price. To win such wide approval, there must also be the certainty of enduring quality.

The public recognizes that the new good Maxwell gives ample proof of the highest quality. It knows that this Maxwell-Chrysler creation is truly a manufactured car - that it is actually made in the great plants where it was conceived.

The new good Maxwell buyer knows that in addition to 58 miles an hour, 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds, 25 miles to the gallon of gasoline and a riding case such as no other four has ever possessed, he can count on soundness and the highest degree of precision, accuracy and long-life.

That is why the new good Maxwell is so highly regarded as an investment in finer motoring. We are eager to give you all the facts concerning the car's design and manufacture, and to demonstrate Maxwell's superior performance.
