Reds Stomp Whites In Tuesday Tilt As Cubs End Training

By CHARLIE MAPLE
NEWS Staff Writer

Cashing in on breaks and most scoring at will during the first half, the BHS Red team crushed the Whites, 33-6, in an inter-squad game Tuesday night.

Red quarterback Ken Willis' recovery of his own kick-off in the White end-zone started the scoring parade on the first play. George McDonald added the extra point on a dash into the end zone after a low pass from center.

E. L. Cox took the kick-off and returned it to his own 22. After six plays End Bob Cline was forced to kick out and the Reds scored their second touchdown five plays later as Leon Henson burst over from the two. Mike Browning added the point.

Cox Sets Stage

Cox set the stage for the "White team's on" score as he took the kick-off and twisted to the middle. Robert Wright capped the 50 yard march with a 4-yard dash over right tackle and the score. Wright and Cox alternated carrying chores during the drive. Wright's try for extra point was blocked.

The third Red touchdown came just before the half as Larry Meeks sprinted through the Whites for 28 yards to cap a 42-yard drive. McDonald's kick was wide.

First half ended as the Whites drove to the Red 40. Larry Meeks' two-yard plunge midway in the third quarter ran the Reds to a 26-6 lead after a 35-yard march. Willis' try for point failed.

Browning wound up scoring on the first series of plays in the final quarter as he sprinted over left tackle to talley and then added the point.

A desperate last quarter bid for score by the Whites fell short in a flurry of incomplete passes.

The game, marred by numerous fumbles and dropped passes, still provided more than a few thrills for some 200 fans who observed the 1957 Cub team.

Despite several rough edges which will need polishing before the opening game next fall, both teams were hitting hard and indicated a desire to play. Defense and passing undoubtedly will come in for a heavy dose of attention from the coaching staff before the 1957 season arrives.

Negro Killed Here In Clash With Officer

A 26-year-old Brownfield Negro parolee was shot to death by a Terry County deputy early Saturday night as the two struggled for possession of the officer's gun.

Dead is Eugene Finninen, who was on parole from Huntsville State Prison at the time of the altercation.

Deputy J. A. Richards, who was slightly wounded by the shot which killed Finninen, arrested the man and a companion, Alphonso Finney, 27, of 414 West Lanny, as they were driving without lights about 7 miles northwest of here.

Planning to charge the men with illegal transportation of wine and beer, Richards called for assistance from city police. Richards said Finninen made a lunge for him after he made the radio call.

During the struggle, the deputy drew his pistol and one shot was fired, grazing the deputy's left arm and striking Finninen in the right shoulder, Sheriff James Fulford reported.

"Finninen stopped struggling and he and Finney began to run," said Fulford. "Richards fired a shot over their heads and they stopped — the city unit arrived about that time."

The deputy took the wounded man to Treadaway-Daniel Hospital, where Finninen died about 40 minutes later.

Justice of the Peace Lennie Rhyne issued a coroner's verdict of death "from a bullet wound." He stated: "Deputy J. A. Richards was acting in the line of duty and in self-defense when the pistol was fired."

The dead man, who was 6 feet 1 inch tall and weighed 225 pounds, had a police record dating from Jan. 29, 1953, when he was convicted of cattle theft. He received a five-year probated sentence which was revoked a month later on an armed robbery charge.

On the latter charge, he disarmed two city policemen who attempted to arrest him for illegal transportation of liquor, and forced them to

BY GAINES COUNTY AGENT

Insecticide Dangers Told To Ag Workers

The "urgency for following directions when applying insecticides to our cotton this summer" was expressed Tuesday by the county agent of Gaines, L. H. McElroy.

McElroy was guest speaker at the monthly breakfast of the 4-County Agricultural Workers Association.

Gathered in Turner's Cafe in Lamesa, the group heard the agent describe the "really dangerous effects which the insecticides can have on man and animal."

The association comprises some 100 Terry, Gaines, Yoakum and Gaines men who are directly associated with agriculture. The group's aim: To arrive at a common understanding of farm problems in order to avoid confusion.

Brownfield men attending were Joe Sullivan, service agent for Terry County Farm Bureau; Dennis Q. Lilly, vice-president and agricultural advisor of First National Bank; Joe Satterwhite, Chamber of Commerce manager; Bob Etheredge, Terry County assistant agent; H. L. Ray Brown Medalist In Qualifying Round In All-City Tourney

Ray Brown fired a par 72 Sunday to take medalist honors in the qualifying round for the Brownfield All-City golf Tournament being held at the Country Club.

Pro. C. G. Griffin said 32 Terry County golfers had entered the tourney, which runs this week. First-round matches were run Tuesday and second rounds toured the links today.

Sunday's final round will pair finalists from each of the four flights.

Losers in the first round missed in the championship flight dropped to form the first flight.

DENTON — Loman Jones of Brownfield plans to spend another summer as a "soft-hearted rough-neck" when final examinations at North Texas end in May. Jones, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ely Jones of 1116 East Hill, works in the oil fields near his home when he is not enrolled in college.

Working in the fields has a double purpose for the six-footer. Not only does Jones find his paycheck useful but through the experiences he encounters as a roughneck Jones says that he gains a deeper insight into human emotions. He puts this knowledge to work in his hobby of writing poetry.

Rhythm of Pumps "I try to get the feel of the hard work, the rhythm of the pumps, and the ruggedness of the men of the fields into my writing," stated Jones.

"I feel that this gives my poetry a bigger punch and helps me to symbolize life with something that is very concrete and familiar to me."

Jones, whose father and three brothers — Coy, Lee Allen, and John Eldon — also have worked in West Texas oil fields, has written many poems concerned with drilling. He has worked as a roughneck for more than four years during the time between college terms.

The Brownfield youth first struck upon the idea of writing poetry when he was in high school and taking part in declamation contests.

"I just thought how much easier and better it would be to present my own compositions and decided to try it," he said.

His first poem was entitled "My First Kiss." Jones commented, "I really can't say what inspired me to come up with such a subject for my first poetic attempt."

The former high school athlete has made no effort to have his work published yet. Jones considers poetry only a hobby. He said, however, that his enjoyment of poetry was a deciding factor in his selection of journalism as a major field.

"ALL THINGS COME FROM THE EARTH"

(Author's Name Below)

From all over the world agents of pharmaceutical research organizations are sending back thousands of different samples of earth. They are collected from back yards, forests, jungles, farms, etc.

Millions of dollars are spent to analyze them with the hopeful wish that a better antibiotic may be discovered. Perhaps even cancer may be cured someday by something from the earth.

One thing we do know. New medicines are being perfected rapidly, and as soon as they are approved for safe use, we stock them in our pharmacy.

GEE GEE'S Chit Chat!

While Jewell (NEWS secretary) is off admiring her new grandson, Larry Wayne, who put in an appearance to Mr. and Mrs. Leon Nolan, at Odesa, about 9:34 a.m. last Wednesday, I've been trying to hold down this front desk. Not doing a very good job of it, either. I might add for Jewell's edification.

Anyway, that brings up the situation of the many and varied calls I've received since my sojourn at said desk. A large number of the calls have been from persons who have not received their papers since we went semi-weekly. As most of you know, at the same time we started two publications a week, we also started our new delivery by carrier boy system. All of you have been most patient with these young men while they've been in the throes of learning their routes. We hope to have things squared away by the time this issue is delivered, but if you do not receive your paper, please call Cecil Davis at 4717 and report same.

Also along this line, I would like to explain why those of you who have heretofore received your paper via post office box no longer do so. Since we established our carrier boy system, we feel that you will be able to get your paper while the news is fresh by having the paper thrown in the yard, so we have abolished the local mailing routine. Another good reason for this is the fact that our local merchants often have sales beginning early on Thursday or Monday mornings. By having your paper delivered by 7:30 Thursday and Sunday mornings, you are able to learn of the sales in time to attend. We feel that this is an added service to both you and our advertisers.

Where, oh where, has little Sparky gone? Karen Sue Jennings has lost her little honey colored Pekingese dog, Sparky, and she thought, maybe I could help find him. He has a white spot on his right front shoulder and if you should find him, please call 2177 and leave word with Cass. Karen and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jennings, will be gone on vacation for a week.

Want to join a club? Theola Wheeler called me earlier this week to suggest a "plant exchange" club wherein all you green thumbed people would take your excess plants to one place and exchange same. If this interests you, call her at 2502. Or how about ceramics? A group of women would like to start a ceramics club here and if you're interested, please call Mrs. Sam Houtchens at 3294 for more information.

You have only until Sunday to order your famous birthday calendar, sold each year by the Barracca class of First Methodist Church. I think you are all familiar with this calendar and know you'll want one. I think they're almost indispensable because they carry not only birthdays and anniversaries, but club meeting

Blonde oak furniture in modern design is covered in solid materials in gold, red and green and the floral print of the draperies echoes these tones to blend the two rooms together perfectly. The Magic Of Seed From Cotton Yields Food For You And Me And Food For Our Livestock

"Wear More Cotton"

But it does not stop there . . . if we are looking for really magical qualities in the cottonseed, most of them are found in the linters, which are almost pure cellulose. Cotton linters are utilized in the manufacture of bedding, cushions, automobile and furniture upholstery. They are also used in the making of smokeless powder for small and big game hunting rifles, and during the war practically our entire production of linters were used in making smokeless powder for the 2-inch guns on battleships and artillery shells. They are also used in the making of phonograph records and movie film. It can truly be said that linters are one of the marvels of cotton.

The Clarence Lewises Occupy New Home at 1301 East Buckley...

SUNNY DEN-STUDY—This sunny room doubles as den and study, with the big blond oak desk looking out toward the street. Draperies are a printed antique satin and walls are specially designed by Mrs. Lewis in Sarka wood paneling. Between the entry hall and the den is a large storeroom for card tables, vases and other hard-to-store items. The room is carpeted in pink, which continues into the front bedroom, with its polished cotton draperies and pink satin bedspread. Leading off the bedroom is a pink bath with green tile and glass shower. To the left of the den is Mrs. Lewis' dressing room with built-in cabinets and chests and a closet, with folding doors. High glass panels add plenty of light to this inside room.

Across the hall is a full bath, with brown and suntan tile and fixtures and turquoise walls and accessories. Just down from this is the "spare" bedroom, which is done entirely in blue and is furnished in modern mahogany. Both bedrooms have ample closet space and slatted folding doors are used. A remote lighting system has a master panel in the pink bedroom, facilitating the turning on or off of lights anywhere in the premises. In the den, Mrs. Lewis has designed a striking display for wood carvings and antique objects de art, including some rare Limoges crystal. Beneath the display are built-in television and record player, which can be closed off with doors.

ROOMY LIVING ROOM — Opaque glass dividers separate the entry way from the living-dining area in the Lewis home. Looking from the entry you see this comfortable grouping of gold sofas and red easy chairs. Of modern blond oak the lamps and coffee and occasional tables are a perfect foil against the gray-green walls. The floor length goldtone plate glass windows look onto the circled patio at the rear of the house. The wrought iron and stucco planter is full of the greenery that Mrs. Lewis loves and has in every room of the house. The carpet is an oatmeal color and the draperies repeat the golds, greens, reds in a floral printed Fortisan gauze material. To the extreme left is the dining area where blond modernistic furniture is grouped so that diners may look out onto the patio and that Mrs. Lewis' many interesting articles of china and crystal are shown off to advantage. All lighting fixtures in the house are flush and a particularly functional fixture is a small spotlight directly over the dining table. All draperies in the home are by Sexton's.

ULTRAMODERN KITCHEN — After leaving freezer unit and more cabinet space. At the front entry (the polished native stone continues into the house interior for a way before the carpeting starts), a left turn leads you into the ultramodern kitchen of the Lewis home. Walls, ceiling and cabinets are painted gray-green to blend with the pink and maroon tile cabinet tops. The built-in range and oven, as well as the hood over the cooking units, are polished aluminum, as are cabinet pulls. To the right of the oven is a built-in refrigerator.

BRAND SPANKIN' NEW — Is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Lewis at 1301 East Buckley. Of Green stucco and pink Arizona stone construction, the house has some 2100 square feet under roof, and is located on a corner lot that has already been landscaped even down to the underground sprinkler system. A circular drive at the extreme left leads to the double car garage that features storage space along the entire West side. Leading off the garage interior is a heating and airconditioning closet that also doubles as a hot house for Mrs. Lewis' many plants and flowers — one of her hobbies. Pink asbestos siding highlights the front entrance of the home and the entry way is paved with polished native stone. Note the grillwork that is painted pink and the planters that are abloom with geraniums, elephant ears, caladiums and many other plants.

Pasture Production Saved By Rotation; Good Management

A cultivated pasture's production can be effectively measured by its management! Once a pasture is established, good management usually means good grazing, says Extension Pasture Specialist E. M. Trew. Continuous grazing can slash forage production in half! Reduce these losses by cutting pastures into small blocks with portable electric fences and rotating cattle — allow time for regrowth between grazings. Such a system of rotation grazing maintains vigorous plants while providing rest periods for building good root systems. Use surplus forage as hay or silage, advises Trew. Instead of wasting large portions of lush spring growth, efficient producers will store it for winter use or possible summer drought. Adequate feed reserves supplement good pasture management, he adds. Properly timed mowing means added production of vigorous, more palatable pasture plants. Mowing controls undesirable weeds, conserving valuable plant food and moisture! Another benefit of mowing lies in the tendency of this practice to revert maturing plants to a growing, vegetative, more nutritious condition. No pasture management program is complete without adequate fertilization, declares the specialist. A ton of grass hay contains about 30 pounds nitrogen, 10 pounds phosphoric acid and 30 pounds potash, he points out, and legume hay contains about 30 per cent more. "A soil test will determine the type and amount of fertilizer needed.

Are Stamps Unfair Competition?

From 150,000 to 200,000 retail firms are said to be using the trading stamp plan as a means of promoting business, and the Federal Trade Commission is investigating the practice to determine whether it is in violation of statutes against unfair competition.

Along with the rapid extension of trade stamp use there have been widespread efforts to restrict or prohibit them, especially during the past four years.

Bills to this effect were proposed in most of the states having legislative sessions last year. Of 50 bills offered in 24 state legislatures, 47 failed to pass. As it stands, three states — Utah, Kansas and North Dakota — have restrictive regulations.

The movement to ban or limit the use of trading stamps is based on the theory that the merchant who does this is taking an unfair advantage of his competitor.

This seems to be about as valid an argument as contending that it is unfair for a retailer to attract customers to his establishment by offering them ice water.

Another complaint is that stores often charge more for merchandise to defray the cost of the stamps. Merchants are said to pay from $10 to $15 for 5,000 stamps. They have the additional trouble of issuing them.

However, the merchant who raises prices imposes upon himself a competitive disadvantage. It appears that the future of trading stamps is more likely to be determined by the economics of competition and business efficiency than by restrictive legislation.

Most legislators profess to believe in free competitive enterprise. Yet we have seen enactment in many states of legislation that negates this principle. Passage of so-called fair trade laws is one manifestation of such restrictive practices.

Recently a number of the latter have been knocked down by the courts on the ground that they violate constitutional due process guarantees. In some instances courts have held restrictions on trading stamps invalid for the same reason.

Whether trading stamps are unfair depends upon the point of view. It is not unusual to encounter the notion that any real price competition is not good for business.

The fault of many legislators is that they are influenced not by whether a certain competitive practice may be in restraint of trade, but by the amount of pressure upon them from people who simply do not relish competition.

Whether it is good business for a store to offer stamps and premiums to its customers is not a matter for a legislature to decide. In a free economy that decision must be left to the individual merchant.

Trading stamps are basically a method of business competition just as advertising is. If it is conceded that it is within the power of legislatures to prohibit their use, then it must be assumed that a variety of ordinary practices employed to stimulate business are unfair and to be regulated or forbidden by law. If we adopt that view, we will have gone a long way toward denial of the principle of free enterprise.

Good dictating equipment is one of the modern-day wonders and some firms are selling it at moderate cost — which is welcome.

Advertising promotes sales and lowers selling expense. If this is passed on to the customer, advertising saves consumers money, too.

Brownfield News Editorials

This Week in Austin

By PRESTON SMITH
State Senator

Practically every discussion concerning honesty in state government usually ends with a remark something like this:

"Well, if the people would pay more attention to what goes on in Austin there'd be fewer dishonest officials."

That statement, true as it is, does not reveal exactly how such attention can be created, but it certainly does bring up a question that leads the way to better state government. How CAN we get the voters more interested in state government?

If a successful answer to that question is found, Texas will be well on its way toward more efficient, honest government.

This column was begun to furnish more information to the people of this senatorial district. There are similar programs by lawmakers in other parts of the state. The Texas Press Association releases an information column weekly, and news services are furnishing more complete coverage of government activities than ever before.

All these things help explain state government. But if we do the job we need to, someone's going to have to come up with more ideas.

THE AMERICAN WAY

ECONOMIC EQUALITY?

By George Peck

Both the Communists and Socialists would have people believe that economic equality is possible of accomplishment — this despite all the teachings of history, which clearly prove that equality of incomes is but a wild, impractical dream.

Man never has been able, despite many attempts, to set up and maintain a civilization in which there has been absolute equality of incomes. The drastic failures of the past and the failures of the present, for example, in Russia, would seem to indicate that he never will be able to do so. The various religious faiths teach of heavens where all will share alike—but that this ideal state will come to pass after man's death—not while he still trods the earth.

The basic reason for the failure of every attempt to equalize incomes is because there never has been on this earth a civilization in which each individual has made an equal contribution to the needs of society. And as long as humans are human, there never will be such a civilization. Faced with this fact, it becomes apparent that rewards cannot be equal and that, therefore, there must always be disparity of incomes.

Under our American Capitalistic System of Free Enterprise this nation has come closer to equality of incomes than has any other nation in all history. This is because that System which the Commies so despise, operates on the sound theory that a greater reward shall be make such unequal donations to the public weal? It would be the height of absurdity to cut the reward of the biggest contributor down to the level of that going to the smallest. Not only would it be absurd, it would be unjust, and sooner or later would adversely affect every individual because the aggregate contribution to society would be smaller. All would be losers thereby.

This columnist does not maintain that under "The American Way" rewards always are fair and equitable. Some Americans have made contributions to science, technology, medicine, art, literature, etc., and have not received commensurate financial compensation. He does maintain, however, that such cases have been the exceptions, not the rule, and that in the vast majority of cases, rewards have been meted out in keeping with the service rendered to society.

Every decent American (and most Americans are decent) has an underlying desire not only to improve his own condition, but of others as well. But by the same token, he knows that society as a whole cannot be improved, except for a transitory period, by arbitrarily redistributing wealth as we are doing now through the medium of our sliding-scale income-tax law. We are drifting dangerously to the point where men no longer will have incentive to work harder and better. When that point is reached stag nation will set in and the era of prosperity will come to an end.

Economic equality is not possible—it is a fantastic theory. The sooner we realize that, the sooner we will insist that something be done to repeal or drastically amend the 16th Amendment which permits almost confiscatory taxing of those who contribute in great measure to the general welfare. Unless this is done, and soon, the United States of America will go down in history as just one more nation that rose to the heights and fell by the wayside.

"Wear More Cotton"

Lets Make This Our Year Round Motto . . . And Help Keep Our Economy Strong.

Cotton Is First In Many Ways . . .

FIRST IN SALES — Cotton accounts for 65 per cent of all textile sales. Throughout the years customers have learned to depend upon and want cotton for its crisp, clean freshness, its complete washability, its sturdy wearability, its value . . . and its year-round fashion smartness. This is why cotton outsells all other fibers put together.

FIRST IN PROMOTION — 1956 National Cotton Week saw more than 17,500 retail outlets, wholesalers and manufacturers actively tie in. Top stores planned regular cotton promotions on a storewide and departmental basis. There's every indication that 1957 National Cotton Week will see even greater acceptance.

FIRST IN CONSUMER ADVERTISING — Retailers placed Cotton Week advertisements in 1956 totaling in excess of 1,000,000 lines in daily newspapers throughout the country. Top women's magazines, such as VOGUE, HARPER'S BAZAAR, MADEMOISELLE, LADIES' HOME JOURNAL, and WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION, carried hundreds of pages of advertising devoted to cotton in their April and May issues. National Cotton Council car cards featuring the Cotton Week

Theme were posted during these same two months in transit systems in 300 cities.

FIRST IN CONSUMER PUBLICITY — Leading women's magazines carried over 400 pages of editorial copy devoted to cotton in their April and May issues. Special Cotton Week editions appeared in newspapers across the country. Major news syndicates featured Cotton Week in their releases and numerous radio spots were heard through merchandising and promotion done by the Broadcasting Advertising Bureau to its 800 member stations.

FIRST IN TRADE ADVERTISING AND PUBLICITY — This year the Cotton Council has run five full pages of Cotton Week advertising in DAILY NEWS RECORD, WOMEN'S NOMIST and MERCHANTS TRADE JOURNAL. These four leading trade magazines published special Cotton Week edition. FIRST IN POINT-OF-SALE DISPLAYS — Top merchants are well aware of the value of dramatic displays featuring cotton merchandise. A record high use of official Cotton Week display materials were made in 1956.

Agronomist Lists Factors Favoring Silage Storage Instead of Cured Hay

Silage is a safer forage bet than hay at this time of the year. There's less risk in storing grasses or legumes in silos than in attempting to cure hay under present weather conditions.

From several standpoints, silage is now a more desirable form of harvested forage. Extension Agronomist Ben Spears says it is the best available substitute for pasture and can be satisfactorily stored much longer than hay.

Grasses should be harvested for silage in the boot or early bloom stage, but vetch is ready when the first seed are formed. Harvest oats and barley when seed are in the milk to dough stage and alfalfa in the quarter bloom stage. Best time for sweetclover is the bud or very early bloom stage.

Burclover may be harvested in full bloom, while a legume-grass mixture recommendation depends on the most abundant plant in the combination which is at the proper stage. Cut grass shorter than 1/4 to 3/4 of an inch, advises Spears, to insure proper packing in the silo.

Green plants may contain as much as 80 percent moisture, Spears says, and should wilt to about 70 percent be-

Brownfield Scholars To Finish At ACC

Two Brownfield students, Orville Miller and Glenn Sargent, are among 234 seniors who are candidates to receive bachelor's degrees from Abilene Christian College on May 27.

Miller, the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Miller of 317 West Tate, is scheduled to receive the bachelor of science degree in secondary education.

Sargent is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sargent of Rt. 5, Brownfield, and is a candidate for the bachelor of arts degree in Greek.

Also, Glenn Paden, formerly of Brownfield, is a candidate for the bachelor of science degree in religious education. He is the son of G. V. Paden, now of Cleburne.

fore storing without a preservative. Check moisture content by squeezing a handful of chopped forage in both hands.

If moisture appears between fingers and forage remains in compact ball, it is dangerous to store without an additive. If the ball falls apart, forage is too dry, the specialist warns, adding that under optimum conditions the ball should expand gradually when released.

In extremely bad weather it may be advisable to use a preservative and get forage into a silo quickly. However, more nutrients are leached from high-moisture forage than that stored dry.

In hot dry weather, recommendations call for chopping plants almost immediately after mowing, while under humid conditions they may require at least a day's wilting. If there is any doubt concerning excessive moisture content — use a preservative. A good one is Sodium Meta-Bisulfide which should be used at an 8 to 10 pound per ton rate, mixed thoroughly with silage as stored.

Spears recommends planting such crops as sorghums and corn for silage reserves. Sorghum produces the highest yields, he says, but recommends that Hegari and Sourless be planted only after May 1. Cut sorghums and corn at medium dough stage.

Honeybees Proved Important to Clovers

Honeybees are tremendously more important in the cross-pollination of White Clover than are moths, butterflies, and other insects which live in the clover says Dr. Nevin Weaver, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station Entomologist.

Caged plots containing small colonies of bees yielded about seven times more seed than plots caged without bees at the Beaumont Rice-Pasture Experiment Station.

Uncaged clover yielded slightly more seed than clover in the plots caged with bees. Weaver attributes this to the effect of caging on plant vigor. Seed produced in the cages without bees, he adds, likely came from a few self-fertile plants, a degree of cross-pollination by insects living in the clover and contact between blossoms of different plants.

Weaver recommends a field examination of White Clover to determine whether adequate pollinating insects are present. Open, fresh-looking blossoms from bottom to top of many flower heads usually means there are not enough bees in the field to do a good job.

White Clover blossoms may remain in this condition for more than a week if not pollinated, but will begin to wither a few hours after being visited by a bee.

If many flowers have a band of withered blossoms at the bottom, a band of buds at the top and about 20 or fewer open blossoms in between, the entomologist says adequate pollinators are present.

The number of honeybees required to pollinate clover is affected by many factors. Most important are the number of other pollinating insects; competition from other blossoms; weather conditions; plant vigor and number of blossoms in the field.

Management Is Key To Forestland Profit

"Multiple management" is the key to profitable use of forest rangeland in the East Texas timber area. A three-fold approach aimed toward developing maximum production of timber, livestock and wildlife will definitely pay big dividends in this 10-million-acre section of the state, asserts Extension Range Specialist G. O. Hoffman.

What is "multiple management"? Why spread resources and time over three farming industries at once? Hoffman says the smart East Texas farmer will consider the three as interdependent and conduct management practices facet of such a system, how with this in mind.

Timber is the most important ever, for East Texas trees produce more total income than either livestock or wildlife. The big question is — how to attain higher, more efficient timber production. Properly managed cattle grazing is a partial answer, Hoffman declares. Cattle eat grass which reduces fire hazards, and under good management goats will eat practically all the small green brush. With a well-handled timber and livestock program, wildlife have a much better natural environment.

How does a farmer start a "multiple management" program? Hoffman says millions of young pines are now being crowded out by worthless hardwoods and brush! Begin by stepping up pine seedling and grass growth with chemical brush and hardwood control.

Just seven years of the resulting improved grazing will pay for a chemical application. Don't allow potential grazing to be shaded or smothered out of existence. Use properly supervised stand thinning, improvement cuttings and prescribed burning. Plan forest range grazing for spring and early summer when grass is most nutritious. Hoffman advises a green pasture for winter; plenty of fresh water and salt; and a good protein supplement. Control all livestock parasites and follow sound breeding plans so that calving coincides with best grass growth. Early spring pasture deferment and proper stocking are other money-making points to remember.

Wildlife Values Recognized in Program

The value of wildlife in the overall conservation program has recently been recognized by the addition of practices to the Conservation Reserve. These practices, says Ed Cooper, extension wildlife specialist, will enable landowners to provide needed habitats and food crops for wildlife.

Under the Conservation Reserve program landowners sign agreements which run for a term of years. Rental payments are earned on an annual basis while special payments to help cover the cost of establishing conservation practices may also be earned, and three such practices have been approved by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation branch of USDA for use in Texas. Cooper says the practices include the establishment and management of cover specifically beneficial to wildlife. This includes establishment of field borders or wildlife travel lanes such as planting multiflora rose hedges in East Texas or shrub windbreaks in west Texas.
