ALL PLANS MADE FOR PARTY HERE FOR TRAVELERS

Many Mysteries Await Annual Banquet for Knights of Bar-Famed Satchel
"Do you want it?" That is the big question that is being put to every traveling man, business man, visitor and spectator that is expected to attend the Third Annual Traveling Salesman's Stag Party and it has reference to a mysterious secret, dark and dangerous order to be known as the R. O. R. E.—an order that has all of the sinister possibilities of the Arditi, Maure Rouge, the Apache, the Black Hand and the rest of them—yet as harmless as a lovestick old maid.

What it is nobody knows. What it means nobody dares suggest. You are warned not to say "No," and most certainly you are afraid to say "Yes" and there the matter rests for the present.

OFFICIALS HERE PLAN SYSTEM OF CENTER PARKING

A new and more convenient system of parking for the downtown section of the city is being worked upon now by members of the city commission, according to Judge James H. Goodman, municipal magistrate, Tuesday morning. Reasons for the change in the present system were given up as the greatly increased traffic here and the several bad accidents which have resulted recently on downtown thoroughfares.

Drenching Rains Boost Already Fine Prospects for 1924 Crops

Wasn't that a hum dinger? That rain that soaked the entire South Plains and West Texas? The rain drops sounded just like nickels hitting the roof! And crops—doggone my cats boys, ain't they hoping themselves these warm days that have followed that good rain? And yet some petrified old cusses were looking down their crooked noses and predicting that this would be the year for the country to go to the how-wows for sure.

Extravagant charges are being made, counter charges, denials and implications are in order. Parties, parties, and machines are being employed. The great American public is preparing to elect our leaders—men in whose hands shall rest the happiness, safety, prosperity and hope of not only our own 115,000,000 people but of the entire world that is looking to America for unselfish leadership.

Compliment for Lubbock The choice of Lubbock county as one of the three in the state and as one of the dozen in the cotton belt is considered as being a compliment to this county, and to the enviable record made here last year.

In addition to the investigation of production costs the experts will also later plan methods of cutting the present cost of production. It was stated that the fact that no money or labor must be expended for control of the boll weevil and other cotton pests should enable the investigators to find other ways where the farmers of this district can save money in the cost of producing the raw product.

Just how long the survey will take has not been estimated but it is an established fact that the experts here at the present time will stay in this vicinity until their work is completed.

ALL PLANS MADE

Stag Party Informal Program As announced, the party will be a strictly stag affair. Chris Harwell is in charge of eats and promises that no one will be disappointed or go away hungry.

The program will be starting. All windows will be opened in the roof to keep it from being blown off. The sky is the limit and it will be so nearly reached that all altitude records will be smashed. While Jed Rix is supposed to be in charge of the program the chances are that it will get away from him. It always has for when you get from 500 to 1,000 good fellows together, all feeling at home, friendly, full of pep, the honest to goodness joy of living and being among good sports in a strictly informal stag party—why things just simply have a way of happening without any consideration of a set plan or program.

But one thing is certain—the coming party is going to be different, dangerously different and if you are afraid of grinning, afraid of forgetting your dignity and being human, afraid of being one of the boys with the rest of the crowd—you had better stay at home, 'cause you are certain to get your artificial veneer of assumed importance severely cracked and the varnish of your dignity hopelessly scratched.

Something Worth Selling Opening the Big Party the Traveling men, visitors and local citizenship will stage a fifteen minute parade around the square with many unusual features that will indicate something of the tone of the rest of the party.

The Big Show starts promptly at 7:30 Saturday evening, June 14th and quits on or before 11 of the same evening. The public is invited to be around the square to see the Big Parade and the male citizenship of Lubbock is invited to have a ticket for himself, another for a guest and to be on hand by seven fifteen or a bit earlier.

DRENCHING RAINS

ing planted to cotton. General Business and Agriculture It is a waste of ink to warn against the planting of cotton. As long as cotton brings around 30 cents a pound it will be grown to the almost total exclusion of all other crops.

But economically the policy is unsound and sooner or later the cotton farmers will get gloriously stuck. It has happened with every one crop system in the world and eventually will strike the cotton farmer again for he has been stuck a number of times before. Diversified farming with poultry, hogs, grain and a year around program of feed crops, dairy, cows, a little small farm work is the only safe, sane, sound business basis for successful farming.

And some day the South Plains farmer will come to it. But for the present Cotton is King—and he is a ruler that is despotic to the limit—driving without mercy, requiring the best, not only in the man, but of the entire family and at a sacrifice of education, community life, and satisfaction of living a well regulated, normal, prosperous year around life.

Lubbock Recognized

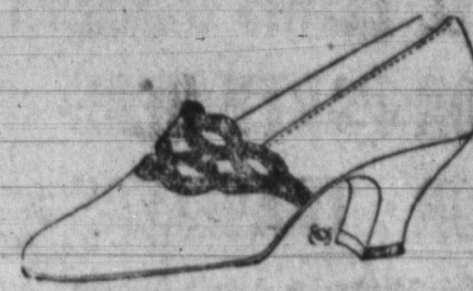

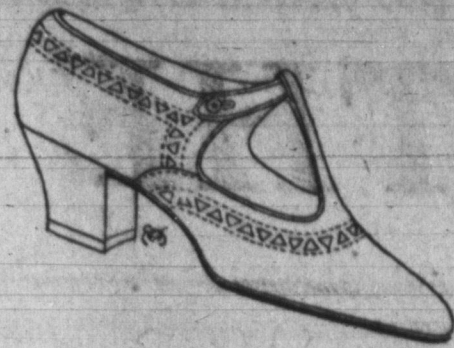

That Lubbock county is recognized as a cotton country is cited the fact that when the Federal Department of Agriculture decided to investigate the cost of production, methods of cultivation etc., of cotton in the United States, only 25 counties were selected to act as key counties to give this average. Three of these counties were in Texas and one of them was Lubbock county. That is national recognition of our position as a cotton producing section—and our crops of this year—every thing being only reasonably favorable—will drive that recognition home further and result in the greatest inflow of farm immigration ever enjoyed by any section.

Crops are looking up, business is picking up, folks are grinning and the world seems bright. Let's hold a level keel, be prepared for the unexpected, start that diversified program little at a time, and continue to build up these great South Plains of ours and the cities that serve them.

Local Amateur Team Loses Lorenzo Game

Clyde Whitaker, former star hurler of the West Texas Normal and of the Wayland college, held the locals safely throughout the nine innings although they reached him with enough base hits to tally six scores. The business school team will play here again this week, their opposition not yet having been chosen.

Some Things I Remember About Fighting In The Philippines In 1899 And The Story Of A Wound In Battle

BY J. WESLEY SMITH

(NOTE: The writer of this article was asked to submit it to the Plains Journal for publication. It has already appeared in part in another South Plains newspaper but upon the insistence of his friends he re-wrote it and it is here with presented.)

Late in the evening of November 23, 1899 the steamer sailed from San Francisco and lowered its anchor in Rear Harbor Hawaiian Islands the 9th day. The readers will recall that in 1897, President McKinley sent a treaty to Congress which was passed by said Congress in June and July, 1898, annexing the Islands aforesaid to the United States. At Honolulu General Funston boarded the steamer and was there a passenger on same when we anchored in Manila Bay, December 28.

On the night of December 17, we passed a volcanic island seventeen hundred miles from Manila. Another steamer was sailing along at a distance of about two miles. Its many electric lights and the great volumes of smoke arising from its smokestack presented a most beautiful picture scene, but the splendor of that attraction paled into insignificance when compared with the grandeur of the attractiveness of the volcanic island.

General Lawton Killed

When the steamer anchored in Manila Bay the first news to reach us from shore was that General Lawton had been killed in an engagement with the insurgents. I then recalled the fact that a few months prior to that time while connected with a newspaper at Sulphur Springs, Texas, or reading in the Dallas News that in 1896 the General was visiting a friend in New Orleans, during which time, said in substance, that a bullet had been molded or would be that would give him a fatal shot.

Sees Manila

December 28, the gang plank was lowered and I bid the good ship adieu and for the first time in life I walked on the streets of the city founded by Legaspi, who conquered the Philippines in 1571. The walls of old Manila stood in good condition and formed one of the best existing models of a walled town of the period. Within the walls were grouped the government buildings and many old time Spanish houses, numerous monasteries and archbishop's palace on the north bank of the Pasig river were the commercial and native quarters and the most expensive cathedral I had ever seen. Also modern suburbs. The streets were narrow. In 1893 the place was severely shaken up by an earthquake. The Spaniards surrendered Manila to the military and naval forces of the United States in August, 1898, and in October of the year aforesaid the commission of Spain and the United States met in Paris, where a treaty was drawn conceding to the United States the sovereignty of the Philippine Islands.

After being on land a month I took malaria, fever and went to the first reserve hospital, which had been used by the Spaniards as quarters of the Eighty-first regiment of infantry. I was a patient there five weeks, during which time I learned how quinine tasted, and went from there to the southern part of Leyon, where the regiment had gone. From there I went to Cagayan, Mindanao Island. Five gun boats sailed along by the side of the steamer Francisco Reyes, and close to the shore and near the town aforesaid the flagship's big guns fired a salute of eighteen shots and hoisted a flag of every nation declaring the port of the town aforesaid open to the commerce of all lands.

Insurgents Attack

At five o'clock P. M. the insurgents attacked Cagayan and killed five of the boys and wounded twenty, but lost seventy-six of their countrymen and were beaten and driven out of town.

The first of May two hundred men of the regiment marched down the bay ten miles from Cagayan, where they met and killed a band of insurgents in an engagement, but two Americans were killed and three others wounded. The next day I was with a detachment of troops, who reconnoitered over the same ground and when returning from the preliminary survey after sunset, the right platoon, of which I was a member, marched along under a tree, and right over my head a cock crowed, which reminded me of the history of how General Lawton and his brave command were slain by the Spaniards in 1876. I realized the fact that there was a possibility of insurgents treating members of those who opposed them as inhumanely if they ever found an opportunity.

Hold Memorial Services

The last day of May memorial services were held and the graves of the seven unfortunate ones aforesaid were decorated with beautiful blossoms and left there to decay on the graves of the once living flowers who had been cut from the stem of life by the sting of insurgents' bullets, although the insurgents aforesaid were compelled to exchange their robes of mortality for that of immortality.

The Story of a Wound

On the morning of June 13, I met the secretary of the regimental Y. M. C. A. (of which organization I was president) at an army canteen, where we drank two glasses of wine. That night at 11:30 I awoke and dressed and ninety-nine others did likewise. We drew rations for a "hike" crossed the Cagayan river and marched off up an old Spanish military road, where American soldiers had not been hitherto. As light began to appear next morning we had begun the descent of a "caprock" down to the valley of the river aforesaid. We marched up the valley about one-half a mile to a narrow pass, from which place the enemy could be seen as he was moving around and getting behind his breast-works on the summit of a high hill. I was then reminded of the crowing of the cock, like Peter was reminded of his denial of the Savior when the cock crowed thrice. I believed that we were going to have to fight for our lives if we went on and to turn back would have been cowardly. We marched on to the foot of the hill aforesaid. Fourteen hundred Filipinos were not far from us with every advantage and one hundred Americans were up against it for, on account of traps being set, we could not form a skirmish line and charge the enemy. We could go see him only when a head would bob up from behind the breast-works aforesaid. Under such conditions the engagement was commenced. The advance guard of which started up the road marching single file and shooting at an enemy's head gained $250,000.000 from the Federal Government. Some Things I Remember (cal. 2) when it could be seen. By the time the sun had risen the engagement was fought and twelve were killed and ten wounded, including myself. The insurgents were not beaten. The company had retreated, the advance guard not hearing the signal for retreat when it was blown. A bullet passed through my right arm, breaking it between the elbow and shoulder and my gun slipped to the ground. I picked up the same, turned around with my back to the enemy and started back down the road, when a comrade took it and fell mortally wounded. Three comrades had assembled behind a large boulder at the foot of the hill and north of the old road and I joined them. A comrade took my first aid package, bound up the wound and put my broken arm in a sling. The enemy ceased firing and we commenced planting as to what course to pursue. We quickly decided to leave our place of shelter.

Hard Going
We proceeded to ascend our way to a nearby hillside which was steep and brushy, in order that I might be more able to climb I left my canteen and empty canteen by the side of the boulder aforesaid, but kept my belt, which contained more than 50 rounds of ammunition. In climbing I would reach up and take hold of a limb, pull up and brace myself and take hold of another one. On the hill's summit the enemy saw us and fired at us killing one comrade. I lost sight of the other two comrades as we disappeared in the brush. My plan was to join the company on the top of the "caprock" where it was joined by the two comrades aforesaid. I came to an opening from which place I was seen by sharpshooters, who fired several shots at me. I then turned from my easterly direction and walked northeast into a grove of trees and hid down on my left side between some large rocks. I now decided to conceal myself there until dark and then go back to Cagayan. Twenty of the boys volunteered to take a hunt for me, but the hunters failed to find the hunted and the company returned to Cagayan. In the evening I took my knife, cut the button from off the buttoned jacket and made a sling out of the front of my shirt, leaving the wound bare. My clothing from a little below my shoulders to below my waist were saturated with blood and a little pulse in my pocket was saturated with blood, as were the threads of my shirt. I could not get up the hill. I then started walking down the same, keeping close to the bank to miss the outpost below there. I walked only a short distance when I saw two armed natives in the brush close to the bank. They saw me about the time I saw them. The moon was shining brightly and they could see that I was unarmed as I stood there in water above my waist. I watched them and they watched me. In the night it clouded up and commenced raining. I decided to go back up the river and try to go around the natives. They peeped through the brush at me as the distance was lengthened between us. Presently an insurgent walked down a little trail into the river in front of me. I was headed off again. When it was not long until dawn, I climbed to the top of the bank, where I was confronted with like armed Filipinos. I hid them in English that I would be unable to take up arms against them in the future and asked them to let me go back to my command, but they would not utter a word. I then turned around and walked off and saw them no more. I missed the old road and walked on down the valley to where it came to an end. The river on one side and the "caprock" on the other. I tried to climb to the top but failed. I then undertook to wade across the river, but did not succeed.

Tried Climbing

I tried the climbing proposition again, but failed to accomplish my purpose. I made another effort to wade across the river, but the rocky shoal was so slick and the water so swift that I did not have the strength to wade across. Just below there was a small cataract and not far from there there was the deepest place in all of the ocean—six miles deep. Luckily I was able to stay on my feet and get back out of the river. The sun was now shining and my hope was still strong. I walked back up the narrow valley and came to a trail the natives had made, which I successfully followed to the top of the "caprock" aforesaid. A treeless plain seemed to welcome me as I walked across its level surface to the road, where I left my foot prints along the same road (the Spaniards had traveled for centuries). I could walk awhile and sit down and rest. I came to a grove of trees and by this time was so weak that I could hardly get up when I sat down. On the other side of the palms I found that I was in the suburbs of Cagayan. I saw two natives coming toward me, one of whom had a parasol. We soon met, one of them took hold of my left arm and the other, walking on my right side and held the parasol over me.

No word was spoken and I did not stop. We came to a neat looking bamboo house, where one of my escorts took me. I went into the house and returned with a stool upon which I sat down. He went back and returned with a container of water and a mango—a tropical fruit. I drank the water and ate the mango. The first I had eaten in forty-three hours, thirty of which time was severely wounded and without medical aid. I got up and walked on toward the river with the same assistance given me, where I found a waiting boat and a native boatman.

Returned to Camp

I stepped into the same and sat down. The said boatman commenced rowing the canoe across the river. A good many of my comrades saw me and ran down to the water to meet me. Sergeant Chandler waded into the water as far as he could, picked me up and carried me to the bank. Mr. Levers, a former citizen of Lubbock, was one of the boys aforesaid. They went with me to the hospital, which was about two blocks from there. I had as much to be thankful for as the Greeks did, who participated in the retreat of the ten thousand when they reached the Bosphorus.

To Manila and the States

In August I boarded a Spanish steamer for Manila. After anchoring at the place about two hours and another four—where one hundred head of cattle were loaded on the lower forward deck—we sailed on toward Manila, anchoring in Manila Bay on the 6th day. In September the news reached there that General Lawton had been destroyed by a tidal wave. One evening in the middle of September, a steamer carrying the United States mail anchored in the bay. It was reported that a middle aged lady, a passenger on same, was weeping and when she met her husband—for whom she had crossed the ocean to see—was surprised him of the fact that their little eight-year old boy had fallen overboard a few hours sailing from Manila.

Held Band Concerts

Every night during the week a United States army or marine band gave a concert on the Luneta "Down by the Seaside" to which place amusement seekers would resort. People from every civilized land were there. Sometimes I would go down there to while the time away. Over at one place Hollanders and Scotchmen were in evidence, from whose countries mother's ancestors came.

In another place stood a number of French in whose land a little French girl first saw the light and grew to womanhood, whose grandson I was to love close to the water's edge, whose English quietly listened. Across their nation a little English boy was reared and became a Methodist, one of whose sons was to be my father.

In November I boarded a small vessel, crossed the bay and cruised around the eleven sunken Spanish war ships Admiral Dewey attacked and destroyed, May 1, 1898.

The last of November it was a sad sight to look at the five hundred boxes containing the remains of unfortunate ones, which were to be shipped back to the United States.

After spending one year to a day in the islands I carried myself up the gangplank of the transport Warren, which sailed for San Francisco with one hundred and two dead bodies on board. Twenty days of the voyage I saw no land. Then the day came when we passed through the Golden Gate and anchored in San Francisco Bay.

ATTORNEYS WEEP AS WOMAN TELLS STORY OF CRIME

Liquor Charges are Dropped as Truth Comes out When Story of Hard Luck Is Told

OKLAHOMA CITY, (INS)—Hardened states attorneys, who have pleaded for the death penalty before juries, have pushed countless investigations and been present on many heart touching affairs, turned to just "soft-hearted" humans when they heard a liquor case here this week.

A few days ago deputy sheriffs raided a home here, arresting a woman for the possession of sixteen gallons of chock beer. Later Mrs. Beula Linthicum came to the county attorney's office and asked that she and not the other woman, her sister, be charged in connection with the case.

At the time of the raid Mrs. Linthicum was in Norman, when her husband is confined in the insane asylum. According to the story as told the attorneys she had tried to get work of any kind and still be a mother to four little tots whom she is trying to rear away from the stigma of poverty. All sources failed, so she started the manufacture of beer. She did not realize just what a violation of law it was and would not do it again.

At this juncture in her story the four small children came into the office. One look at their bright faces, their clean but plain clothes, and the impending charges against the mother of the four were dropped.

GOES TO CONVENTION

AUSTIN.—Mrs. Percy Pennybacker former president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs, left Saturday for New York City, where she was called by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt to a meeting of two delegates from each national organization of women to counsel concerning the world movement for peace. While there Mrs. Pennybacker will also attend a great dinner of the International Non-Partisan Relief of which she is trustee, to launch Golden Rule Sunday in December.

"Now!" remarked the counsel, as he proceeded to put one of the witnesses to wily Scotsman through a severe cross-examination, "you stated that you were just going home to a meal when this happened. Let us be very clear on this point, as it is a very important one. Tell us with as little variation as possible, what meal it was that you were going home to?"

"What meal?" echoed the Scotsman, as he shot a hasty glance round the court, as if to indicate that fun was to follow. "Ya wad lig-tee-know what meal, wad ye?"

"Yes, sir, I should," replied the counsel sternly.

"Well, then, it was oatmeal!" answered the wily Scot.

Dr. Crabbe had almost succeeded in dissuading Mrs. Gasaway when she stepped in the doorway, exclaiming: "Why, doctor, you didn't look to see if my tongue was coated."

"I know it isn't," said the doctor wearily. "You never find grass on a race track."

"Bobby," said the teacher sternly, "do you know that you have broken the eighth commandment by stealing James' apple?"

"Well," explained Bobby, "I might just as well break the eighth and have the apple as to break the tenth and only covet it."

"What became of that portable garage of yours?"

"I fled the dog to it the other day and a cat came by."

"Rastus say Pahson Brown done ketch him in Farmer Smith's chicken coop."

The stock salesman, after pointing a beautiful word picture, said: "Now, Mr. Jones, you know this company hasn't got a dollar's worth of water stock in it. How much are you going to buy?"

"Young man," he said, "the next stock I buy is going to have four legs, and I will water it myself."

"Gee, Mable, I wish some one would start a campaign for savin' darkness instead uv daylight."

Editorially Speaking

Confidence in Traveling

Lubbock will be, as she has been during the past months, host to a large number of conventions, delegations and gatherings of various sorts. The Federation of Women's Clubs, the Epworth League, the Radio Dealers, the West Texas Retail Druggists, the Boys' and Girls' Clubs, Church conferences—and a dozen others have met here or are planning to meet here. It is a part of the pleasure and the responsibility of being an outstanding town in this part, progressive, growing section and every citizen should exert himself in making our guests feel at home, enjoy their stay with us and take away with them a friendly feeling toward Lubbock, toward Lubbock folks and a sincere appreciation of Lubbock's hospitality and future possibilities.

Growth of any kind brings additional responsibilities. The greater the man, the greater his ability, the broader his experience and his obligations to his fellow man, his city and his God. The only man, if he might be termed a man, that enjoys freedom from responsibilities, is the half-wit negro in the forks of the creek in East Texas that don't know how old he is, what his name is, that goes half clothed and is thrown scraps from the tables of the ragged end of negro town. Increasing from that stage to the mightiest man in our nation are the responsibilities of living.

If you, as a part of Lubbock, are too busy to take any part in the community life, in the convention entertaining, in the constructive upbuilding of this city of ours and this section that we aspire to serve—then you are shirking a responsibility that is as truly yours as the bills you owe for groceries or rent—and are classing yourself in the same civic level with the aforementioned negro half-wit.

Let each one of us make a personal effort to meet and chat with our visitors from day to day—to assist in entertaining our conventions, and in meeting the obligations of leadership that have come to our city with our recent progress and growth.

Freedom from Responsibilities

Do you remember the first time you changed gears in the old second hand hooper that you bought against your wife's wishes? They stuttered, sputtered, ground, clashed, rattled and howled as if the entire back end of the old bus were coming loose. But now you step on the starter, slip into low, run through into intermediate, speed up to about fifteen miles an hour and slip into high and are away in a cloud of dust at 40 miles per hour—with perfect safety, without noise, friction or conscious effort.

The difference is just a matter of confidence. In driving this old hooper of ours through life the same law applies. It is not the matter of speed that is dangerous in handling our work, taking on new responsibilities, branching out into greater undertakings—in getting somewhere in the race of life—it is necessity of confidence, experience, conscious ability in handling ourselves, our reserve strength, shifting our mental and spiritual gears from low through intermediate into high—that marks the difference between an "also ran" and the winner. Fast driving is not dangerous if you are a careful driver. Not necessarily so dangerous, in fact, as slow driving without confidence, or in a half-hearted, careless way.

The difference is just a matter of confidence. Building cities comes under the same great law. When a town first gets under way there is more or less friction, some grinding of gears, lack of confidence, but with increasing speed and experience increasing confidence is gained and the rate of growth is not the dangerous element in the progress of any city or section—but it is the confidence with which a city or section approaches the future and the problems of today and tomorrow.

Lubbock is stepping out. The great South Plains country is stepping out. Confidence in the resources of the section, in the capacity of our leaders, in the working machinery of our city; county and state governments, and in the future development of the section eliminates the danger from our increasing speed in building, expanding and development. Regardless of how hard you are working, personally, you have not yet reached your limit. With confidence in yourself, in your business or profession, and with a sound judgment of values, step on yourself just a little more and increase your pace. Life is yours for the living—live it!

Destructive vs. Directed Energy

The wild mountain stream plunges from its snow fed heights leaving desolation; destruction and waste in its wake. The mind of man conceives a huge dam, flood gates are installed, a waste way is provided and the river is harnessed to produce electricity, the expended power is transferred hundreds of miles to produce material wealth, articles of comfort and the surplus water is used to give life to arid areas, to the production of nourishing food, upbuilding of prosperous communities and the sustenance of life and happiness.

That is a physical application of "destructive vs. directed energy." The same benefits have been made the property of mankind through the proper direction of the energy of heat, of electricity, of all of the fundamental forces and energies of nature.

The wild, ceaseless and limitless energy of the boys and girls of Lubbock, fed from the eternal recuperative sources of physical and mental well-being, as created in them by the God who gave us invigorating climate, healthy sunlight, nourishing foods, and a mind to direct all of these things, if left to expend itself without direction or control may leave in its wake broken lives, destroyed homes, wasted weeks, impoverished ambitions and a perverted outlook on life and its privileges and obligations. Properly directed, the energy of the boyhood and girlhood of Lubbock is enough to bring a complete change over the whole mental, moral and civic life of this community. Properly directed this energy will produce powers heretofore undreamed of that will be transferred through the long periods of coming time into the production of useful lives, of worthwhile ambitions, of clean, clear thinking, and the final reward of strong, clean, healthy manhood and womanhood.

Nearly 3,000 boys and girls have been "turned loose" for the summer. Less than third of them have any definite program, regular direction, or constructive suggestion offered them for the coming three months. They are loose to roam wild over the town and the surrounding country, to roam the alleys of the city, to expend their enormous energies in destructive, wasteful occupation, pranks, or fits of foolish fancy. And the brain of Lubbock has not seen the profit of properly directing this wealth of human energy and potential power for good, for progress and advancement.

We have voted our millions for paved streets, for storm sewers, for magnificent buildings. We build schools, enlarge our churches, construct retail stores and residences. Our wealth is growing, and our reputation is expanding. But our boys and girls are not included in our permanent program. They are turned loose for the summer.

City parks cost money. Play grounds, with their equipment cost money. Physical directors, free clinics, public health nurses—all of these things cost money. So does everything that we need for the continued growth, development and prosperity of our city and county—and that we regularly provide when that need is sufficiently felt. And yet the things we provide for are only material things; things that can be destroyed by wind and storm and fires; things that are man made, that can be replaced, that are only temporary. While the God-given things, the immortal things, the souls, lives, ambitions, influences—all of the eternal possibilities of our boyhood and girlhood are allowed to run wild through the summer months—and for a large part of the winter months—for even during school term these energies are undirected more than fifty percent of the day.

If Lubbock, through an intelligent appreciation of the problem of growing childhood, should be able to give to the world only one Edison, one Pascal, one Franklin, one Wesley—or create in the mind of one child a fuller, cleaner, sweeter appreciation of life and what it means to constructively live it—more eternal wealth would have been created than all of our building, all of our growth, all of our business and prosperity in material things put together.

Why do we not have public play grounds? Why do we not have play ground directors? Why do we not have an active, full-time scout master? Why do we not have an active, full-time band director for boys' bands? Why do we not have a community club, a supervised recreational center where good music, good magazines and a good, clean, happy time can be had every evening in the week? Has the dollar blinded our eyes to the value of the soul, life and constructive growth of our boys and girls? It is the city's responsibility and the city is nothing more or less than the sum total of its citizenship. If you live here—it is your responsibility. What are you going to do about it?

Grin and Say "Howdy"

Get off the grouch, brother. Grin and say "howdy." It don't take a second's time, darned little effort after the first try or two, and certain will mean a lot to you and to the world in the days to come.

Maybe things are pretty rotten, you're broke, and the joke's on you—but what of it? Grouching won't help matters—and takes all the sap out of you. So why not can it—and grin? You will be surprised how different it will make you feel. A grin is the seed, a promise of a laugh—and a genuine laugh is the healthiest, most appealing music in the world. Try it on yourself. The very next dozen fellows you meet—"Grin and Say Howdy."

Nothing---And Less

Our idea of nothing is a fellow that has no ambition other than to eat, dress himself, and get by. He scarcely sees to the end of his nose, cares nothing for his city or community, never goes out of his way to accommodate a friend or speak to a stranger. He's nothing.

Our idea of less than nothing is this same bird when he laughs at the efforts, even though they be dismal failures; of the man that is trying to get somewhere, amount to something, carry his share of community responsibilities, make a good citizen, a wholesome friend and get something out of living more than a little to eat, less to wear and a place to sleep.

Kurrent Komment

The Northwest Texas Association of Epworth leagues has scheduled a meeting in Lubbock on June 9. Probably 400 or 500 visitors will be here for the meeting and again the problem of housing confronts those here behind the convention. Lubbock people must again open their homes for the visitors to maintain this city's enviable reputation for community hospitality.

"What's in a name?" Former wrestling champion named Zbysko sues for divorce on the allegation that his 98-pound wife abused him, and Asbestos, Maryland, had a bad fire. —Gadsden Journal.

Some rain! The precipitation here recently is worth its weight in gold to the farmers of the South Plains. It just means another fine crop year, another season of unprecedented progress and advancement for all of this section and for Lubbock especially. It means money and money means good business. It means we're off again on the road to advancement. Some rain!

"Don't withhold your approbation 'til the parson makes oration and we lie with snowy lillies o'er our brow!" —So went the jingling rhyme of an unknown poet years ago. While his work cannot be lauded as perfect in a literary sense we must all admit the principle which prompted his verse is a true one. There is too little complimenting being done now-a-days and too much parading of the demerits of the other fellow. If you see a man doing well, tell him about it. If someone does a good job despite adversities, tell them about it. It is surprising how much good a compliment will do.

By a bare margin the senate passed the soldiers' bonus bill over the veto of President Calvin Coolidge and therein lies a peculiar situation. Coolidge, his party's leader and the leading candidate for the presidency again next term, according to Wall Street figures, could not be swayed to come out for the bonus despite the fact that it meant the swinging of many votes to him in the coming balloting. The smaller men, however, voted to fix the bonus and increase, rather than decrease the nation's taxes, when the whole country is crying for succor in that line. They probably recognized that concerted action on the part of those in favor of the bonus would be more likely than concerted action by those against the bonus and took no chances on returning to their posts. An apt comparison between politicians and executives,

Texas Passes the Word

The pronouncement of the Texas State Democratic Convention at Waco favoring immediate adherence of the United States to the League of Nations covenant expresses the opinion of the largest Democratic state in the Union that the League of Nations is far from a dead issue as campaign material. A clean-cut and unmistakable plank of the same tenor in the platform that is to be constructed at Madison Square Garden is the logical course for the national convention managers.

Many political observers are persuaded that the present is the psychological moment for awakening the conscience of America to overthrow the structure of prejudice and misrepresentation which for five years has beclouded the league issue in the politics of the country. The very extent of the progress of Europe back toward stability under the guidance of the League, and despite the terrible handicap of absence of America's great economic and moral force in its lineup, is argument of the innate greatness of the league plan. If the league has done so much without America, what might it not do with America?

Taxation, railroads, agricultural relief and a multitude of other "issues" await the builders of the Democratic national platform. Unfortunately for party, the attitude of its representatives in congress upon perhaps the most important of these issues has been open to serious criticism as more demagogic than sound politically and economically. The same criticism has been applied to the attitude of the Republican members of congress. There is no room for an "issue" here between the two parties, if the national conventions back up the votes and speeches of their representatives in Congress. An "issue" that both parties claim is no issue at all.

But there is room for a direct issue on the subject of our relations with the other nations of the globe. In the camps of the enemy this is realized, and the various improvisations on the World Court idea furnished illuminating evidence of the prospect of a campaign waged upon the test of whether or not we, as a country, shall march along with the rest of the nations of the world toward peace and restoration, or shall continue to be the greatest single menace to world peace and restoration through withholding our aid and moral support. —Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

BUSY SCENES IN GREAT FORDSON PLANT WHERE 400 TRACTORS ARE BUILT DAILY

All over the country, from farmers who produce the nation's foodstuffs, from the builders who undertake great construction jobs and from road makers who smooth the way for transportation, there is an increasing demand for tractor power.

This is fully demonstrated to anyone making a little journey through the Fordson tractor plant of the Ford Motor company at River Rouge, Mich., near Detroit, where these power plants are being produced at the rate of about 400 every eight-hour working day. That's close to one a minute.

Not only are farmers more keenly realizing the advantages and economies of power farming, but the adaptability of the Fordson to belt and gear driven work is drawing a surprising increasing number of them into industrial and commercial activities.

Popularity Great

Sturdy, dependable, easy of operation and adaptable to more than 100 power uses all through the stages of farming and through commercial power requirements, the Fordson tractor is enjoying the greatest popularity in its history.

With the manufacture of the various component parts of the Fordson brought up to the best possible development under the most exacting standards, the assembly of the tractor comes with automatic precision.

From the casting of the cylinders in the River Rouge foundry, the largest foundry in the world, everything all through the manufacturing process moves in endless procession until the completed Fordson emerges ready to take its place on the field of the modern farmer or out in the industrial world where new things are in the making and where power demands are as varied as the industries themselves.

Assembly on Big Scale

Into the great shops, equipped with scores of modern machines, come the cylinders from the foundry and the other parts from the drop force and heat-treating units, all to be accurately machined. As the work progresses and these parts are completed, they move on to the assembly division.

Along this assembly line you begin to realize the magnitude and efficiency of the Ford manufacturing methods as the numerous parts are put together, each coming to its proper station along the way at just the exact moment it is needed.

First is the steam bath. Motor blocks cylinder heads, crankshafts, fly wheels, parts must pass through this bath before they go on for assembly. Under the flow of boiling water with its mixture of soda, every particle is removed and the parts come out thoroughly cleaned and without danger of any rusting.

Quickly Take Shape

Sent along on a great conveyor, lines on either side by busy workmen, the Fordson motors quickly take shape, part after part being attached as the motor slowly moves down between the working forces. And on the way tests are made so that when the completed motor reaches the numbering station it is ready for installation.

At the end of the line the motor is picked up by an overhead lift and passed on to the final assembly line, where before the astonished eyes of the visitor the tractor is built in an amazingly short time.

First the rear axle is attached, then the front axle, steering wheel, seat, wheels, tank and other parts in order, all being fitted on rapidly, exactly and at just the proper time.

Driven Off Lines

From lines of hose dropping from overhead pipes you notice workmen supplying water, oil, gasoline and grease. As the tractor nears the end of the line a driver mounts the seat, an ingenious electrically driven cranking machine cranks the motor, there are a few chugs and off it goes under its own power and then on up another line. Here scores of painters are ready to receive it and the final coat of paint is applied as it moves along the conveyor.

Another crank, a few more chugs, and the driver takes his tractor off the line for the final tests and then on out to the loading docks where it is sent on its way to bring greater efficiency and economy in the operation of agricultural and industrial pursuits.

All Fordson Tractors are made and assembled at the River Rouge plant under the constant supervision and inspection of the Ford Motor Company's tractor inspectors. The quantity production and high standards of manufacture enables the company to deliver the Fordson tractor to the purchaser at an exceptionally low price and at the same time assures him of the greatest of service facilities through an organization of more than 9,000 dealers.

FRANCE TAKES STEPS TO HAVE BEST AIR DEFENSE SAYS FORMER ADMIRAL

By W. F. FULLAM Rear-Admiral U. S. Navy (Retired) (Copyright, 1924 by International News Service)

WASHINGTON, May 29.—France is wide awake to the approaching domination of air power in peace and war. She is leaving no stone unturned to keep in the forefront of progress in the flying game.

"At a recent meeting of the Aero Club of France the Under-Secretary for Aeronautics, made the following announcement: "A prize of 140,000 francs to be given to the constructor of the airplane which beats the world's speed record, 60,000 francs to the engine builder of this plane."

"One hundred thousand francs to the builder whose hydroplane beats the world's speed record, 50,000 francs to the engine builder.

"And under the same conditions 50,000 francs for the world's long distance record, to which will be added another 50,000 francs if the endurance record is broken at the same time. The engine builder to receive 50,000 francs and 20,000 francs, respectively.

"These prizes to be awarded to the constructors, even if the airplane belongs to the State. But all expenses incident to these records must be borne by the constructor.

"If the present altitude record held by France is broken anew, the constructor of the plane shall receive a prize of 25,000 francs. This holds for the altitude record for hydroplanes as well.

"Further, if during the Beaumont race a new record is established, the constructor of the plane shall receive a prize of 15,000 francs and the engine builder a prize of 5,000 francs. These prizes are confined to French airplanes only, and are open until December 31, 1924.

What Air Power Does It is admitted that the Grand Fleet of Great Britain could not venture into the English Channel in a war with France; it could not approach within 100 miles of the French Coast; it is doubtful if it could safely enter the Mediterranean if France properly employs her overwhelming air force and her submarine fleet.

And consider conditions on the Continent. France has practically allied herself with Poland, Rumania, Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia. These ententes are perfectly justifiable as defensive measures by France and the smaller powers to protect themselves against any possible menace by Russia and Germany. These small nations will naturally look to France as the one big brother that can save them from their powerful neighbors.

French air power is the one dominating factor. It is only necessary that France control the air and prevent Germany and Russia from seeing it from her.

French air lines now link Paris with Warsaw, Bucharest and the other capitals of her natural allies. France can jump through the air over Germany and Austria if need be, to bring air power to bear against her enemies and to protect her friends.

Chemical Warfare Foreseen The great French Ace of Aces, Captain Rene Fonck, sounds the alarm for France. "With her enormous chemical machine Fonck thinks Germany could almost overnight supply gas and explosives for a potential air fleet. Mobilization of these chemical factories and airplanes will bring an immediate appearance in the air of the most terrible scourge humanity ever suffered. When the wing of a giant German airplane has whisked by, upon the face of the earth will lay thousands upon thousands of dead men, women and children. That will be the war of tomorrow. The Germans are preparing for this aero-chemical war by the realization in peace time of air supremacy. The spirit of Germany and their scientific abilities constitute for France an eternal menace."

This picture is not an exaggeration. What wonder then that France offers enormous prizes to her inventors and encourages her air plane building industry? And France also realizes the full value of commercial aviation as a means to bring an enormous reserve of trained pilots with thousands of planes to protect her against threatened onslaught from the air. It is common sense on her part, nothing more. It is a recognition of the inevitable. France is not dealing with dreams—she faces a useful reality.

U. S. Weakness Envisaged In the meantime, what are statesmen of the United States doing to protect and safeguard their country?

What is the condition of our airplane industry? What are we doing to encourage aviation—the merchant marine of the air?

Is our army air force adequate? Is the naval air force strong enough to give our fleet control of the air above itself in the next sea battle?

Let us answer these questions very briefly but truthfully. 1. Congress has passed no laws whatever for the regulation and control of air power, nor made any organized efforts in support of commercial aviation, with the exception of the air mail route from New York to San Francisco.

2. Our airplane industry is starving to death in the face of the greatest war menace to which the world has ever been subjected.

3. Our army air force is totally inadequate to protect this country or the Panama Canal, or our foreign possessions against air attack.

4. Our naval air force is pitifully unequal to the duty of commanding the air above our fleet against an enemy that is prepared for modern war on the sea.

Nation's Security Unsolved In short this great country sits supinely in complete helplessness, facing the unsolved problem of national security. The navy, the first line, that should meet a hostile fleet hundreds of miles from our shores and turn it back or destroy it, has no means of successful attack or defense.

And yet, conservatism, sitting on the lid of progress, rejects or subordinates the new and long-range weapons—the "flying fire" that might forbid an enemy fleet even to start across the ocean to attack us, and which, if properly utilized, would destroy him before his comparatively short-range 30,000-yard guns could get into action—that will not protect our coastline, satisfies itself in advocating deships and urges the futile elevation of our guns that cannot and will not save us from the long-range "flying gun" of a hostile fleet that "commands the air!"

Command of the Air spells "Command of the Sea."

An old colored janitor's employer asked why he was sporting around in his Sunday clothes when it wasn't a holiday. "Well you see, boss," he replied, "I'm celebratin' my golden wedding." "What isn't your wife celebratin' it with you?" "Oh, Mandy! She ain't got nothin' to do with it. She's jes' my third wife."

TODAY Hunt Bears with Bow and Arrow Rents Cheap in San Francisco Whales Ekult as Harpoon Fails

BY COPELAND C. BURG International News Service Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22.—Modern man is not weaker than the savage.

The male of the species can hunt and kill without modern weapons just as the savage met and conquered his enemies long ago.

These are contentions of Arthur Young of San Francisco, who has set out equipped with a bow and full quiver of arrows to hunt bears and other wild animals in Alaska.

Young will carry no guns with him in his northern hunt and will meet Alaska's wildest animals on equal ground, using his bow and arrow as sole protection.

The San Francisco hunter believes that game should be given a fighting chance when hunted and to live up to this he has always pursued animals of the forest and mountains with the arrow.

In connection with Dr. S. T. Pope, of this city, Young has killed eleven bears, four mountain lions, thirty deer, wolves, lynx, elk and other animals. Throughout the mountain ends of the West these two archers have plied their craft.

In Alaska Young will make a special quest for a Kodiak bear. These are larger than the California grizzly bear and often weigh more than 2,000 pounds. The Kodiak bear, according to Young, is the most powerful and ferocious in the world.

The rest of the country may gnash its teeth over high house and apartment rents, but San Franciscans are calm.

The can rent rooms at the rate of $20 per month.

That means a three-room apartment, living room, bath and kitchenette, for $20. And the landlords say this is cheap in comparison with rates in other cities. Records show, however, an increase of 55 percent in rents here in the last ten years, although rates have remained at a level for the last two years.

San Francisco's stabilized situation according to the landlords and builders is due to the recent erection of apartment and flat buildings totaling 120,000.

This city, next to New York, boasts the largest number of hotels in America, and new structures are being built every day.

Gigantic whales and small ones, too, off Golden Gate, are shooting more spray than ever these days and pounding the seas in great glee.

All because a harpoon gun on the whaler Traveler blew up higher than the sky.

Leonard Larson, prize Pacific harpooner, sighted a big fountain 40 miles off the Gate and started in chase in the Traveler. He aimed his deadly gun at the mounting stream of water but just as it fired the harpoon machine exploded.

Larson sustained slight injuries when pieces of the exploding gun entered his body.

Meanwhile the water fountain increased its height, as the big whale escaped and passed the good word of the harpooner's failure to his fellows.

Bootleggers here are paying men to serve their jail terms.

Already one instance of substituting a paid "prisoner" for a bootlegger is on record here and an investigation is being made in other cases.

James Greenan, convicted bootlegger, hired Nick Semy, who looked like him, to serve his 30-day sentence. The plot was exposed when a jailer recognized Semy as a former inmate. On investigation Greenan was found busily plying his trade.

Greenan is now serving eighteen months.

It's not an offense, criminal or civil, in California to compare a man with a coon dog on the basis that neither of them is good for anything else.

A court ruling to that effect is on record here in the case of Daniel C. Imboden, secretary of the Three Cities Chamber of Commerce, who sued District Attorney Franklin Swart for $15,000 libel.

WEANING PIGS

BY TURNER WRIGHT

The age at which to wean pigs largely depends on the system of management followed on each farm.

Sows usually will not breed until after the litter is weaned. Therefore, if the practice is that of raising two litters per year it will be necessary to wean the pigs as soon as practicable in order to get the sows bred for farrowing at a proper time in the fall.

It is the usual practice when the sow is to raise a fall litter to wean the pigs at eight weeks of age. Some breeders are able to induce the sow to come in heat by keeping her and her litter separated several nights in succession. In that case the litter can be nursed a greater length of time, but this system can hardly be recommended because it places a double burden on the sow when she should be storing nutrients within her body for the litter to be farrowed in the fall.

Sows that are good milkers and are retained in the herd, but are not to be bred for fall farrowing, should be allowed to suckle their pigs till they are ten or eleven weeks of age.

The practice of letting the sow wean the pigs usually is not profitable unless the sow is a good milker because she may do more damage by way of robbing her pigs of feed than benefit by way of furnishing them milk.

If the litters have been provided with a creep, abundant feed, and are on good pasture the process of weaning or litter because the pigs have learned to depend on other sources of food than that supplied by the mother. On the other hand, if they are on short, unpalatable pasture and look upon the hog trough as a good place to set stepped on or roughly rooted out of by older pigs while trying to grab an occasional mouthful of slop during the meal time hours, under such conditions weaning with work-hardship on them because they have learned to depend largely on their mother for food. For three or four days previous to weaning time the sows should receive one half of the ordinary ration. This will cause a decrease in the milk flow. It is usually most satisfactory to take the sow away from the litter, leaving the litter out on the pasture where they will continue to be under sanitary conditions and surroundings which are conducive to rapid growth and gain in weight. The sow should be placed in a dry pen on scant rations until her udder begins to shrivel and dry up. Some breeders prefer to allow the runts to remain with the sow for sometime longer or to turn the litter with her two or three times to empty the udder. The latter method no doubt is a good practice if the sow is giving a large amount of milk.

INCREASE SCHOOL TAX
SAN ANGELO.—The Tankersley school district in the western part of Tom Green county has voted to increase its tax for school maintenance from 50 cents to 75 cents on the $100 property valuation, being the third district to take such action recently. Increasing the school tax further qualifies a rural school for state aid, and indicates that the amount allotted to Tom Green county next term will exceed the $7,349 obtained last year.

Houston Movie Men Condemn Censorship As Futile Expense

(By International News Service)
HOUSTON.—Publicity over local censorship rows is reaping a harvest for movie playhouses here.

A picture that fails to draw the fire of the Houston censorship board is not worth the time viewing, so hold the majority of the show-going public. When a picture is condemned by the censors, great throngs crowd the "unfortunate" movie. Of course the manager is arrested and pays a fine but the publicity from the attack by the censors and the subsequent thrills loving crowds, more than compensate his expenditures, which is really considered a good advertising investment by the managers.

AUSTIN.—Chief Justice Cureton and Associate Justice Greenwood of the Supreme Court late Monday certified their disqualification by the Galveston Court of Appeals in the case involving the eligibility of former Gov. Gov. Neff is out of the State not to return until June 12, which leaves Lieut. Gov. T. W. Davidson as the acting Governor, and he is being opposed for the gubernatorial nomination by Mr. Ferguson. No word has been heard from Acting Gov. Davidson as to whether he will appoint two special judges to sit with regular Associate Justice William Pierson of the court.

One Man and His Town

A man by himself is just--one man. Multiply him by hundreds or thousands or millions and he becomes a town or city or nation. If he "gets on in the world" so will hundreds or thousands of his associates. If he fails, so will a greater or less number of others--for no one man can affect only himself by his actions.

Science Makes Silk Purse of Sow's Ear

(By International News Service) Modern science has disproved the old aphorism that "you can't make a silk purse from a sow's ear." Prof. Alexander Silverman, head of the department of chemistry in the University of Pittsburgh, says in a statement describing America's advance to world leadership in the natural and artificial silk manufacture.

A Boston chemist, resenting the pessimism of the poorer, has literally made a beautiful colored silk purse in this way. He obtained the ears from a Western abattoir, extracted the gelatine, purified it, hardened it with formaldehyde, rendered it flexible with glycerine and dyed and spun the resulting filaments.

While artificial silk is not manufactured commercially from "sow's ears," Prof. Silverman points out, "this example of the fallacy of a time-worn saying should bring us a further realization of what science can do if driven to furnish the proof."

Ladies! Luncheon Fit For King Is Defined

LONDON. (INS)—"A luncheon fit for a King" is an often used phrase, but few people are able to state just what it is that kings feast upon. When King George and Queen Mary visited the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley a reporter determined to learn just what they had to eat. He discovered that the luncheon "fit for a King" was as follows: Soles Colbert Caneton a la Gelee d'Orange Salade Russe Asparagus Fraises Romanoff And when they brought the truly stupendous wine list to the King he ordered Scotch ale, the reporter found. Queen Mary drank mineral water.

This experiment can be used in the regular field of cotton, preferably with rows ending next to the highway, so that stakes can be put up to show the nature of the experiment. Four rows are ideal for a plot. The rows need not be longer than 100 yards. At harvest time, each plot should be weighed separately."

Form Rescue Circle For Unhappy Spirits

LONDON. (INS)—A "rescue circle" for suffering spirits undergoing punishment in the next world has been started by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Lady Doyle. The "circle," Sir Arthur declared, interviews these stricken spirits. Each spirit comes in turn and receives instructions as to what to do to be happier in the hereafter. "There is no torture in the next world," Sir Arthur continued. "There is no hell, but a dark life of bitterness for those who have sinned above the material in their earthly life." Such spirits, he declared, were still earthbound and it is to make their lot happier and more bearable that the "rescue circles" have been formed.

Make Tests to Show Right Distance For Setting Out Cotton

STILLWATER, Okla.—(Special)—How far apart should cotton be planted in the row? To determine the answer, the experiment station at Stillwater is conducting 100 tests in various parts of Oklahoma, in co-operation with county agricultural agents and farmers, according to announcement by Prof. Adrian Daane, of the agronomy department. "By next fall we should know something definite about spacing cotton on different soils and under different climatic conditions, as there always is a wide range of such conditions when considering the state as a whole," Professor Daane says.

"In China, cotton is sown broadcast. In some places in the United States it is spaced four feet between hills. "Recent experiments show that close spacing causes early maturing and increases yields. Both results are desirable under boll weevil conditions. "The tests have been outlined as follows: "Plot No. 1—not thinned (left just as planted); No. 2—hills spaced 6 inches apart; No. 3—9 inches apart; No. 4—12 inches; No. 5—18 inches; No. 6—24 inches; No. 7—30 inches.
