Sheriff opposes Salvation Army halfway house

A. N. STANDARD
... says crime would rise

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

A halfway house for prison parolees operated by the local Salvation Army may be established in Big Spring soon, but not without stiff opposition from the Howard County sheriff.

While final approval from the Salvation Army advisory board may be a month or more away, Sheriff A.N. Standard already has registered his disapproval of the plan at the board's Jan. 8 meeting.

According to Lieutenant Carroll Braun, commanding officer of the Salvation Army in Big Spring, the halfway house would be for "conditional parolees" only. "People who have lived in the community and are up for parole will be released into the halfway house under the supervision of the Salvation Army," Braun said.

"The halfway house will have a maximum of five people. We expect an average of three. Residents will be in the house for 90 days," he said.

SHERIFF STANDARD objects to the halfway house because he feels the parolees will not be former Howard County residents and the number of house residents will not stay at five. "I am not opposed to a halfway house, but I am afraid the number will increase in a year and parolees will be coming from distant places."

"I would retreat on my opinion if only Howard County residents would be in it," Standard said.

The halfway house would be only for people who lived in Howard County before being sent to prison. Lt. Braun says. "A prisoner would request through the Texas Board of Prisons and Paroles to be released to the Big Spring halfway house. Without the halfway house, the man would have to serve his full time before being paroled." The person would already be accepted for parole, but could serve the last ninety days before parole in a halfway house instead of prison.

House members would live under "tight supervision," Braun said. Members would be expected to follow their parole provisions as well as house rules, he said. "The Salvation Army will assist them in finding work, in money management and in other things," Braun said.

Without the three-month supervision and aid from the halfway house, a prisoner would be released on parole with no job skills and no help, leading him easily back to crime, the Salvation Army commander said.

CRIME IS THE MAIN worry of the sheriff who fears a rise in the crime rate if the halfway house becomes a reality. Some bad experiences with another halfway house here about two years ago is the basis of his concern, Standard said. "Our crime was up then and it was contributed to in my opinion, by the halfway house. It is not worth the new crime to have a halfway house."

The sheriff said he was concerned the house members might be persons who were convicted of serious crimes.

"It (the halfway house) is not in the best interest of Howard County as it may present new crime into the county. The sufferers will be the people in this area," Standard said.

"One of three or one of four or one of five will fall into crime again and we don't need it," he said.

The Salvation Army also is concerned about crime and the occupants of the halfway house, Braun said. "We are not going to get killers or anything like that — just people with light sentences. Parolees can be screened and we would reject anyone who did not meet our standards."

CARROLL BRAUN
... "tight supervision"

Board hikes water fee

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

Directors of the Colorado River Municipal Water District yesterday adopted a set of charges to cities which buy water from the district, and at the same time proposed a method of billing the cities which should ease their financial burden to a degree.

Meeting in Big Spring, the directors heard from O.H. Ivie, general manager of the water district, that energy costs were expected to jump by 58 percent in 1982 over last year and as a consequence the fee for delivering water to the district's member cities would have to go up. Currently the member cities — Odessa, Big Spring and Snyder — pay an even six cents per thousand gallons of water consumed. Under proposed contracts which the council in each city will vote upon, Odessa will pay 25 cents per thousand gallons, Big Spring 13 cents and Snyder seven cents. The fee is based on distance of the cities from the district's water sources.

"THE CITIES WILL benefit to some degree in that they won't have to pay most of the delivery fee until the middle part of the year," pointed out Joe Pickle, secretary-treasurer of the water district.

At the same time, fixed monthly charges to the member cities — which are paid regardless of consumption — would decrease. The board voted to remove the fee for water delivery from the fixed monthly charges — the charge into which the flat delivery fee is currently figured.

"It's a more even cash flow," Ivie said of the new computation.

For the month of January, however, and until the new contracts are signed, the cities' fixed monthly charges will reflect the increases incurred by the water district as it grapples with increased delivery costs. The increased cost — the district is budgeting $4.9 million this year for energy compared with $3.1 million last year — occurs because the district's 17 pump stations primarily have to pump uphill, Ivie said.

Overcoming friction in long-distance pipelines is another factor increasing the district's energy costs, he said.

UNTIL THE NEW contracts are signed, Odessa's fixed monthly rate will go up 30 percent over last year, Big Spring's will be up 24 percent and Snyder's up 14 percent.

Without the new contract, Odessa's monthly fixed monthly charge would be $341,929. Under the new contract, it would be $233,962 — but annual delivery charges, based on estimated consumption this year, would be $1.7 million.

For Big Spring, the monthly charge would decrease from $101,059 to $84,667 — but annual delivery charges would rise from $172,000 to $373,750.

Snyder's fixed monthly charge would decrease from $34,803 to $33,926, with the annual delivery fee expected to rise from $96,000 to $77,000 if Snyder consumes all the water the district calculates it will in 1982.

While overall deliveries to municipal governments increased in 1981, two of the member cities posted decreases in consumption: Big Spring was down nearly six percent over the previous year and Snyder was down 3.4 percent.

Odessa's deliveries were up by nearly one percent, the district said.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Milling around?

Q. It seems the present practice of the water plant maintenance crews is to ride around when they finish repairs because the utilities director doesn't want them "milling" around the plant. What can be done to save taxpayers' money here?

A. "It has never been a policy nor has any utilities director ever told employees to avoid 'milling around,'" says Bill Hall, city administrative assistant. "City employees are not 'riding around'; they are usually on the move to another job site, communicated to them via radio dispatch. This saves time and money, rather than having them going back to the plant for assignments."

Firemen's fund helps 2 area families

By CAROL HART
Staff Writer

Two area families whose homes were extensively damaged in fires Tuesday are being assisted by donations from a local fire department fund and from business associates.

The Nelda Watts home, located on Moore Road in Sand Springs, received about $3,500 damage when fire gutted the home about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Firemen say the fire may have been started due to an electrical short.

Earlier the same day, the Elmer Clinton mobile home on Opal Lane on the Sterling City Route caught fire and burned to the ground. The incident occurred about 1:07 p.m.

Phillips said "each family received a $250 check to be used however they can use it" from the Fireman's Disaster Fund.

Rodney Phillips of the Big Spring Fireman's Association explained that the Disaster Fund was established by area firemen to aid families who suffer extensive losses during fires.

"Whenever someone experiences a fire, we know they need immediate help. Firemen are usually the first ones on the scene. We thought we'd be able to administer financial aid, also."

"The money is available to both city and county residents."

Phillips said that firemen hope to soon have money available to help families whose homes are burned to get instant help.

If a fire severely damages a home, the family "needs a place to stay." Firemen hope to be able to give families enough money for motel costs plus a little extra cash donation within hours of the fire.

ONE OF THE FIRE victims, Elmer Clinton, was contacted by the Herald only a few minutes after Carl Dorton of the Big Spring Fire Department had given him a check for $250.

Clinton and his wife, Melva June, are staying with Clinton's brother, Buddy. Clinton said the check "was very much a surprise. I thank them very much. It was something that sure did help."

The Fireman's Disaster Fund wasn't the only money Clinton and his wife received. Fellow employees at Oilfield Industrial Lines took up a collection and raised more than $1,000 for the Clintons.

Clinton said "we lost everything in the fire. It burned our dog up, too."

Clinton and his wife, who both work at O.I.L., were notified that their home was burning and immediately took off for the scene.

Just as they arrived, the gas tank on their car parked in front of the mobile home exploded. The car was a total loss.

Clinton doesn't know what started the fire.

"We can't figure it out. The only things on were the icebox, the deep freeze, and a clock. Everything else was turned off."

THE ONLY GOOD thing to come out of the incident was the kindness of the people who donated money, Clinton said.

"We appreciate it very much. I'm kind of at a loss for words. When I first got it (the donations) I was a little bit shook up. I can't express my thanks enough. You don't realize how good the people are until something like this happens."

Chamber hires Bill Forshee

Bill Forshee has been named Tourist and Convention director for the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, LeRoy Tillery, executive chamber director, announced today.

In that position, Forshee primarily will be responsible for attracting and recruiting conventions to Big Spring. He also will be responsible for tourist promotion.

In his new capacity, Forshee will be a full-time employee of the Chamber.

Forshee told the Herald today he views his new title as "a great challenge. I'm looking forward to it very much."

Forshee has been a Big Spring resident for 11 years. He served as photographer for the Big Spring Herald for several years until recently and then worked as a mud engineer with the Mesa Mud Company in Midland.

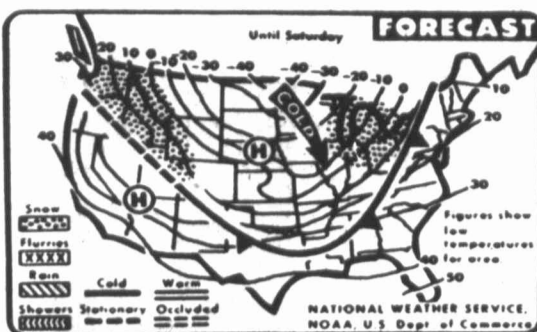

Prior to moving to West Texas eleven years ago, Forshee worked as an entertainment photographer in Nashville, Tenn. There, he took

Weather

WEATHER FORECAST — Cold weather is expected in the forecast period, today until Saturday morning, from the Northwest to the Great Lakes and south to the Mississippi Valley. Mild weather is expected across the southern states. Snow is forecast for the Northwest and Great Lakes.

Another cold front on its way to Texas

By The Associated Press
A travelers advisory was in effect for most of Central Texas until mid-morning today because of freezing water and slush on roads, and the National Weather Service said yet another cold front is on its way.

All of Texas was under sunny skies Thursday, though weather service said, and partly cloudy skies were expected for South Texas today with fair skies elsewhere in the state. High temperatures were expected to be in the 50s and 60s today except for the upper 40s in the mountains of West Texas.

But the weather service said the temperatures will turn colder Saturday as an arctic cold front moves through the state. Two cold fronts that hit the state earlier in the week were blamed for a dozen deaths. The snowfall in most of Texas Wednesday was five inches or less but up to 18 inches fell in some areas and drifts of up to three feet were reported.

The Texas Department of Public Safety said between 600 and 700 motorists were stranded for a time between Abbott and West, north of Waco, but that all of the vehicles had been towed or drive away by Thursday.

Some of the stranded travelers were still in the state. The forecast for West Texas is fair and warmer today. Turning colder north tonight and much colder over most of area Saturday. Mostly cloudy panhandle and partly cloudy elsewhere except fair mountains Saturday. Highs 60s except 50s mountains. Lows mid teens Panhandle to mid 30s Big Bend. Highs Saturday near 20 Panhandle to upper 60s Big Bend.

Gym class for pre-schoolers

The Big Spring YMCA is now registering for the "NEW" gymnastic class for preschool youth, ages 3 to 5 year old. The class will be held on Tuesday and Thursday from 5:15 to 6:00 PM for five weeks (ends February 18th). The class is scheduled to start next Tuesday. Fee for the class is $14 for Y-members and $24 for non-Y-members.

Toxic shock suits filed

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A Beaumont woman and a Galveston County resident have filed separate lawsuits against Procter & Gamble alleging they developed toxic shock syndrome after using tampons manufactured by the company. Linda Halpin, 32, said in a suit filed in state district court in Beaumont Wednesday she was admitted to a local hospital in August 1980 suffering from vomiting, diarrhea, peeling skin, headaches, a swollen tongue and various other physical and mental disorders after using Rely tampons. The suit asks for $500,000 in damages for past and future pain and suffering, medical expenses and loss of wage earning ability. The suit also cites loss of services to Mrs. Halpin's husband William. Galveston County resident gallison Dienst Cotton's suit asks for an unspecified amount in damages. According to the suit, filed Wednesday in state district court in Galveston, Ms. Cotton contracted toxic shock syndrome in July 1980 and suffered complications from the illness. No specific tampon was named in her suit. Ms. Cotton's suit alleges Procter and Gamble "failed to adequately test their tampon product" and didn't monitor possible hazards from product use.

Looking to recordings for clues to crash cause

WASHINGTON (AP) — The critical voice and instrument recorders on board the Air Florida jet that crashed into the Potomac River are intact, a police spokesman said today. Investigators hope to learn from those recorders whether excessive ice accumulation kept the plane from gaining altitude. "Instruments have detected that the equipment is intact," District of Columbia Police Inspector James Shugart told reporters at the site early today. He said three two-man diving teams were to return to the wreckage under the 14th Street Bridge to remove the recorders. Speculation over whether the jet had been properly deiced before it crashed Wednesday grew when the pilot of another jet awaiting takeoff told investigators he had noticed ice on the Air Florida plane as it prepared to take off. Seventy-eight people died in the crash. And Francis McAdam, chief investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said on the NBC-TV "Today" show this morning that ice could have added weight to the plane and affected its performance. Other investigators, however, cautioned against speculating about the possible cause of the crash until information on the plane's voice and instrument recorders becomes known. Shugart said the divers, working without lights in visibility of only 1 1/2 feet were "working by hand" and would likely stay in the water, although for only an hour at a time at most, until dark. The divers deduced Thursday that the plane's fuselage is not intact, Shugart said. Today the divers, working in "a high concentration of debris," hoped to better mark where parts of the plane are, recover the flight instruments and remove some bodies from the icy waters. A temporary morgue would be set up on the river bank, he said. Hampered by sub-freezing temperatures and sporadic snowfall, boat crews pulled the bodies of an infant and a woman from the icy river Thursday, bringing to nine the number of bodies recovered. Seventy-nine people, including five crew members, were aboard the Florida-bound Boeing 737 when it crashed seconds after takeoff from National Airport. Four passengers and a flight attendant were rescued. The death toll rose to 78 when two motorists, whose vehicles were struck by the plane when it clipped a bridge spanning the Potomac, died Thursday in Washington hospitals. Two other motorists died Wednesday.

PASSENGER RESCUED — This photo, made from an ABC-TV News monitor, shows Lennie Skutnik, 28, of Lorton, Va., right, as he rescues passenger Priscilla Tirado Wednesday after an Air Florida jetliner crashed into the Potomac River in Washington, D.C. When Mrs. Tirado lost her grip on a life preserver, Skutnik dove into the icy water and pulled her to safety. Mrs. Tirado was reported in good condition with a broken left leg. The Washington Post reported today that Skutnik had originally believed he had rescued Kelly Duncan.

Faces U.S. neutrality charges

Haitian exile leader seized

MIAMI (AP) — A Haitian exile who masterminded a failed attempt to invade his homeland was being brought here today by the Coast Guard to be jailed on charges of violating the federal Neutrality Act, officials said. Bernard Sansaricq, 37, a gas station owner from Fort Lauderdale, and 25 followers were captured Thursday in the Windward Passage between Haiti and Cuba by the U.S. interdiction force — the Coast Guardsmen stationed in the Atlantic by President Reagan to turn back Haitian refugees. They were put aboard one of the two cutters used by the force, along with their small arsenal of three rifles, a shotgun, two pistols, 15 pipe bombs and supplies for making bombs, the Coast Guard said. The seizure took place 650 miles southeast of Miami. Sansaricq's disabled 45-foot sailboat, which he had chartered for the mission, was put in tow by the other cutter and both U.S. vessels were due here today, although they may be delayed by rough seas, the Coast Guard said. "We authorized the Coast Guard to place (Sansaricq) under arrest based on information that five invaders had been killed and one captured." A U.S. Embassy official in Port-au-Prince, the capital, who declined to be identified, said he had reports from "Haitian government sources" that some of the early invaders remained on Tortuga and continued to fight. Some wounded were flown to Port-au-Prince on Thursday, he said, but there were no dead. However, government television reported three captives "died of their wounds," and a State Department official in Washington said it had a report that five invaders had been killed and one captured.

Two more jurors picked

VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — Defense and prosecution lawyers continued questioning prospective jurors today for the murder retrial of Jerry Lane Jurek after the judge refused to move the trial again. Jurek's trial was moved here from Cuero on a change of venue. State District Judge Clarence Stevenson refused to grant the request from defense lawyer Douglas Tinker as two more jurors were seated Thursday to hear the case. A man and a woman were added to the panel, bringing the total to seven, five men and two women. Jury selection was expected to continue for the rest of this week and possibly into next week, as Stevenson said two alternates would be chosen in addition to the panel of 12. Jurek is being tried in the 1973 rape and slaying of Wendy Adams, 10, the daughter of a Cuero policeman. Her body was found in the Guadalupe River.

Prosecutors say they plan to seek the death penalty for Jurek, whose first conviction was overturned when an appeals court ruled one of three confessions used against him was not given voluntarily. The defendant was the first man sentenced to death under Texas' revised capital punishment law, which was upheld in his case by the U.S. Supreme Court. Jurek came within two days of being executed in 1977 before a federal judge granted a stay.

Lamesa airport talks continue

LAMESA (SC) — Contract negotiations are continuing between the Lamesa Municipal Airport Board and Johnson Flying Service, as the Arbitration process has not yet shown any sign of aiding in the differences between the two sides as they continue the search for a contract agreement for the operator at Lamesa Airport. According to the secretary-treasurer of the airport, Neil O'Brien, negotiation meetings are held about three times a week, but there has been no indication on the progress of the talks. Ray Renner is serving as the impartial party in the arbitration process, while Walter Bray is representing the views of Johnson Flying Service. Wendall Strahan is representing the Lamesa Airport Board. An update on the progress of the negotiations was to have been discussed at the airport board's meeting this past week, but a full quorum was not present at that session and no action was taken. The board will not meet again until its regular session Feb. 22.

Forsan to vote on local sales tax

Forsan voters will go to the polls tomorrow to decide if their city imposes its first ever local sales tax. A special election concerning the one-percent sales and use tax was approved by the Forsan City Council in early December. There will be one polling place: Forsan City Hall. The polls open at 8 a.m. and will close at 8 p.m. A simple majority of the city's approximately 125 registered voters is needed to pass the tax.

Ambush murder guilt admitted

MUSKEGON, Mich. (AP) — A 23-year-old Texan faces sentencing Feb. 11 after pleading guilty to two charges of second-degree murder in the ambush-slaying last July of two migrant workers. Ruben Flores Jr. of San Antonio entered the plea Tuesday in Muskegon County Circuit Court, telling Judge James Graves he fired a rifle at the unarmed men to protect his family. As part of the plea arrangement, Flores will receive a maximum prison term of 40 years, said Steve Corwin, chief assistant prosecuting attorney for Muskegon County. Flores originally was charged with open murder and could have been sent to prison for life if convicted. He was charged with shooting J. Jesus Martinez, 36, of Weslaco, Texas, and Francisco DeLaRosa, 30, of Muskegon as the pair drove in a pickup toward the Flores' family home in Muskegon. The two men apparently were bent on continuing an argument with Flores' father over work assignments at a nearby farm, Muskegon County Sheriff's deputies had said. Corwin said Flores' claim of self-defense, as well as circumstances surrounding the incident, "gave rise to enough questions that pleas of two counts of murder in the second degree are considered by this office to be consistent with what justice requires."

Dale Evans Rogers once said, "All my life I searched for the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow, but I found it at the foot of the cross." Her words inspired these simple lines:

You can search the world for silver and gold, Lay claim to riches of value untold. You can live to see your name in lights, And realize undreamed of heights. You can seek the power to rule the earth, Live to hear millions hail your worth. But you'll come to count your gains but loss Unless you've been to the foot of the cross, For only there at the Saviour's feet Will you find life, fulfilled, complete.

How to raise price of gasoline

Convinced that major oil companies were discriminating against independent service station operators in favor of their own retail outlets, the Maryland legislature passed a law prohibiting oil companies from operating stations.

What has been the effect of the law? More than a year has passed since the law became operative. According to figures released by the American Petroleum Institute, the law has raised the price of gasoline in Maryland.

That of course is contrary to what the boosters of the law and big oil critics thought would happen. They contended the majors were holding prices of gasoline high through control of their own stations.

IN FACT, THE LAW has been a boon for the private dealer-operated service station. And those dealers, absent the competition from the majors' high-volume installations, have increased their margins of profit.

When taxes are taken out of the comparison, gasoline prices in Baltimore were higher than cities of similar size in surrounding states.

Of 248 gasoline stations in Maryland at the time the law went into effect, 36 were closed and several others are operating pending the outcome of litigation.

In short, Maryland's new law effectively lowered the competitive element in the oil marketing business.

CONTRARY TO PUBLIC OPINION, there is more competition in all phases of the oil industry than in any other major U.S. industry. The share of the oil production business held by the top four companies declined from 26.3 percent in 1970 to 25.3 percent in 1980. Declines in other phases of the oil business were similar.

In contrast, according to API, the average share of business of the top four firms in all other industries in the U.S. is 41.5 percent.

Maryland's experience of course grew out of legislators wishing to believe the myth rather than the reality. The public in Maryland probably believed the same myth. It will be interesting to see if the law is changed in view of the results.

Around the Rim

California screamin'

The time is the winter of 1977-78. The place is Santa Cruz: a booming, mountain-side community on the coast of Northern California. It's a sleepy town, a tourist town—a town of young people, students, back-to-nature devotees, panhandlers, merchants and hungry real estate developers.

There's a burgeoning liberal conscience here, as Santa Cruz hurls itself back in time to the 1960s, to the days of long-haired men, political demonstrations, dreamy pop music and the waft of marijuana down the streets.

This is a town that could, in the same election, vote down rent control but approve a slow-growth policy calling for a lush, rolling "greenbelt" around the city's eminently developable periphery.

In the winter of 1977-78, sloshing cold rains threatened to bring that "greenbelt" tumbling down on blissful Santa Cruzans' heads.

Five years later the rains have returned—swift, torrential, wreaking havoc in tandem with the coastal mountains that have spilled their mud again.

The difference is the body count: five years ago, while I was trudging through the foggy Santa Cruz downpour, there were no fatalities. This year, the dead number in the dozens.

As time goes on, California continues to exert its druggy pull on the rest of the world, announcing that this is THE place to let your hair down, that it's THE place to be when you want that oceanside bungalow for the rest of your days in the laidback, carefree, lookout-for-number-one center of the world.

But the fact remains: California is a dangerous place to live, particularly if you like to perch yourself on hillsides. Hot dry winds whip up firestorms in the canyons in the summer; Pacific squalls fill the same canyons with tons and tons of killer mud in the winter.

Perhaps nowhere else is the frailty of human life so readily evident than on a California hillside with a firestorm raging one's way, or a mudslide bearing down on one's matchstick home.

Human elements conspire to make California a dangerous place, too. Bizarre crimes embarrass San Francisco; Los Angeles shows its disease in the pallor of smog.

Kinky and cataclysmic, California is indeed no place for a longevity-minded person to be.

Five years ago I was sitting on a bench along the main drag of Santa Cruz, smelling the slight scent of dope in the ocean air, listening to the dreamy melody of "The Girl from Ipanema" lilting away from the fingers of the jazz band playing on the street corner, watching bums ask for quarters and kids from the University of California campus happily fall farther and farther away from the rough, brutal workaday world.

Today that world impinges on them, hurling disaster at their startled faces. They must wonder—some of them—if there isn't something crazy about getting so hot and bothered about California.

California's just like a high school crush—a quick surge of overwhelming infatuation, but inevitably, it seems, the thrill turns out like the first person you ever wanted: gone.

"Lunchtime," everyone. Class dismissed.

"Elizabeth, what are you doing with that tray?"

"Getting some lunch."

"Your name isn't on the list. You are not entitled to lunch."

"How come my name is not on the list?"

"Your parents did not fill out the correct forms. Under new government guidelines, only those children whose fathers and mothers make less than a certain salary each year are eligible for a free lunch. You can't eat until your parents prove you are entitled to the food."

"What were you daydreaming about?"

"Lunch. I was thinking how nice it would be to have one."

"Elizabeth, I know it's difficult for someone in the sixth grade to understand what is going on in the country. But President Reagan doesn't have enough money to give everyone a school lunch. He can only give it to poor children."

"My father says we're poor."

"Yes, but you're not poor enough. You have to be very, very poor to get a free lunch."

"Does the President get a free lunch?"

"He gets an allowance, and his lunch comes out of his allowance."

"I don't get an allowance."

"Perhaps someday when you grow up and become President you will."

"How am I going to grow up and be President if I don't eat lunch?"

"There is no reason to get sassy, Elizabeth. There are people in Washington working day and night trying to cut the fat out of the budget, and one of the areas where they decided there was too much waste was in free school meals. They hope to save $50 million in this program alone."

"What are they going to do with the $50 million?"

"They're going to give everyone a tax cut so people will have more money to buy lunches."

"Will I get a tax cut so I can buy lunch?"

"Of course not. You have to work to get a tax cut. But your Daddy and Mommy will."

"My Daddy said he doesn't make enough money to get a tax cut."

"He may not get one directly, but the tax cuts other people get, will trickle down to him in time."

"How?"

"It's all in the regulations, if you would just stop wasting your lunch hour, and read them."

"Who wrote this thing?"

"David Stockman. He's the man the President has made responsible for seeing that the wrong children don't get free lunches."

"He got any kids?"

"No, he happens to be a bachelor. Why do you ask?"

"No reason I can think of."

WASHINGTON — Cheers fit for a Super Bowl champion welcomed the appointment of William Clark to succeed Richard Allen as the President's National Security Adviser. Understandably so, for Judge Clark is peculiarly well equipped to ease the personality conflicts that have so far dominated the foreign policy of the Reagan administration.

The personality conflicts, however, only reflect radically different remedies for this country's continued slide in world affairs. Even if Judge Clark recruits a dynamite staff—which is by no means assured—he will face formidable troubles in framing what amounts to a new global strategy.

Relations with Russia lie at the heart of the trouble. The Soviet Union has neutralized American nuclear weapons as a decisive political influence, and established beachheads in the Caribbean, Africa, the Middle East and Southeast Asia. Geography puts Moscow in strong position to exploit the internal weaknesses that menace all the countries around the Persian Gulf. Despite his 75 years and failing health, Leonid Brezhnev has shown deftness in mastering the Polish problem, and in holding down the costs of occupying Afghanistan.

TWO DIFFERENT approaches for containing the latest burst of Soviet power have emerged in the U.S. One emphasizes cooperation with allies and friends, and finds its chief source of support in the State Department under Secretary Alexander Haig.

But the European allies show far more interest in cultivating trade relations with Eastern Europe than in applying economic or political pressure against Moscow. In the Middle East, the conflict between Israel and the Arabs has eclipsed the joint interest in defense against Communist penetration. China has increasingly made cooperation with the U.S. hostage to a more restrictive American policy on Taiwan. And Japan has avoided all positions except commercial advantage.

The second approach draws sustenance from those weaknesses. It emphasizes the assertion of American power, even without the support of friends and allies if necessary. It has been associated with the Pentagon, especially under the leadership of Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger.

But the unilateral emphasis risks a break in relations with the Soviet Union, especially on arms control. It worries traditional friends around the world.

DURING THE FIRST year of the Reagan administration, these divergent approaches came across almost entirely as a matter of personal squabbling. Mr. Allen lacked standing with the President, and had to compete with others for his attention. He feuded openly with Secretary Haig. He showed no capacity to manage the Pentagon.

Thus the National Security Adviser, far from fulfilling the minimal responsibility of assuaging tensions, actually worked to increase friction.

Judge Clark is ideally suited to tame the tigers.

But the taming of the tigers only lays bare the intellectual jungles. The fact is that the crude positions now identified with Haig and Weinberger have to be translated into the higher reality of a presidential policy.

Bismarck himself would find the task staggering. Judge Clark far from being a Bismarck, has almost no experience in foreign policy. He will have to draw heavily on his staff, and he will need a staff that can in turn recruit help from the foreign policy community in the country at large. Working that kind of staff into an administration which tends to regard intellectual acumen as left-wing deviation is itself a Herculean task. So the odds go against Judge Clark, and he will need all the good will he presently enjoys.

A purple-prose touch of divinity

WASHINGTON—Not since the late Evita Peron has the world seen a first lady like Imelda Marcos. The beautiful onetime song plugger and beauty-contest winner has always been unabashedly ambitious. Some regard her as the relentless genius behind her husband's dictatorship in the Philippines.

Imelda's ambition extended to her daughter, Imee; she wanted the girl to marry someone suitable. Imelda's first choice was England's Prince Charles, who — to Imelda's disappointment — did not choose Imee as his queen.

Instead, Imee eloped with Tommy Manotoc, a handsome athlete who did not come up to Imelda's giddy social standards. The young couple's "Romeo and Juliet" story stirred worldwide interest when Tommy vanished on Dec. 29, after dining with Imee in a cozy Manila restaurant.

The Manotoc family — longtime political foes of President Marcos — suggested he had his daughter's lover kidnapped. But some members of the Manotoc family really suspect that Imelda was behind Tommy's disappearance.

Imee, who dearly loves her father but quarrels with her mother, confronted the president with the news of her secret marriage. Tommy later told his family that Marcos has given the star-crossed lovers his blessing. When Imee expressed concern over her mother's reaction, the president reassured them, saying, "I'll handle her," sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado.

Imelda's latest project, meanwhile, suggests nothing less than divine status for Marcos and herself. It is a lavishly illustrated book she arranged for her husband on his 64th birthday.

In royal prose, the birthday book has this to say of Marcos: "He was born with the seeds of leadership; molded on righteousness since infancy; prepared to be better than the ordinary man; purified so that he might travel the path to nobility — to greatness."

Imelda's hired hacks were even more adulatory in their treatment of

Billy Graham

I was wrong

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: For years I claimed to be an atheist, and I actively tried to get people to forsake their belief in God. Now I believe I was wrong, and I would like to become a Christian. However, I am not sure that God will really save me after all I have done against him. — Mrs. L.P.F.

DEAR MRS. L.P.F.: God loves you and he wants you to come to him through faith in Jesus Christ. No matter what you have done in the past, he is willing to forgive you and welcome you into his family. He loves you so much that he was willing to send his Son into the world to die for your sins on the cross.

Think of two people mentioned in the New Testament who denied Christ and even worked against him. One was Peter, who in a moment of pressure during the trial of Jesus denied three times that he even knew Jesus. And yet Jesus welcomed him back after his resurrection, because Peter repented of his sin and turned once again to Christ. Or think of Saul of Tarsus, who later became the apostle Paul. Saul hated Christ and everything for which he stood, and was the chief persecutor of the early Christian church. Yet the time came when Saul turned to Christ, and when he did Christ forgave him.

I urge you to give your life to Christ. There is no reason for you to delay, because Christ is ready to receive you and forgive you.

Thanks given

Dear Editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Sand Springs Volunteer Fire Dept., the Coahoma Fire Dept. and the Big Spring Fire Dept. for the promptness and speed with which they responded to the file at my home on January 12.

They are truly an asset to our community and should be commended. Without their teamwork and combined efforts, my home would have been a total loss.

A special thanks to Fire Chief Jim Ryals of the Big Spring Fire Dept. and his crew for their response to a fire in Sand Springs. Also friends, neighbors and others who were there assisting. Thanks again.

Dear Abby

Mom pays for son's 'perfection'

DEAR ABBY: I'm a widow with a 36-year-old son, and he's my problem. All his life he's been a perfectionist. Picky, picky, picky!

He buys a house he thinks is perfect, then he tears it up and remodels it. He remodeled the same house twice. Nothing ever suits him. His jeans have to fit perfect. He went to the tailor's twice because he wasn't satisfied the first time.

His nose went twice, too. He had his father's nose. (I fell madly in love with that man. All the girls went crazy for him, even if he did have a big nose.) My son thought he would never get a girl because of his nose, so he had it done over by a plastic surgeon. It didn't suit him, so he went back and had it done again.

He finally got a girl, but she didn't marry him for his nose — she married him for his money, and now they're divorced. (I had to pay for the divorce, too.)

Do you think he will ever support himself?
I love my son, Abby, but I'm sick of hearing, "What's wrong with me, Ma?" Please tell me, who's nuts? Him or me?

HAD IT IN FLORIDA

DEAR HAD IT: Neither one of you is nuts, lady. You're a soft touch for a son who's hard to please and knows how to get what he wants. He may never support himself. And why should he as long as he has you?

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Nameless in Maine" could have been written by me a few years ago. My husband never took an interest in our sons when they were little. Like "Nameless," I knew he loved us and was a good man, but knowing how hard he worked to support us, I counted my blessings and kept quiet.

Your advice to "Nameless" was terrific. I hope she tells her husband that she needs his help in raising their children, and they both should get counseling from professionals.

When our oldest was 15, he rebelled and defied all authority, and because he and his father had no relationship, all the responsibility fell on me. I sought help from school counselors and the Family Service Counseling people, who all said the same thing: "Get your husband involved!" So I finally revealed my true feelings to my husband and told him that deep down I was bitter and resentful because he was always "too busy" to spend time with our sons. Abby, it was the smartest thing I ever did.

My husband said his mother had always handled the children, and he was brought up to believe raising children was the mother's job. He said he thought I wanted it that way because I never complained or asked for his help.

Today our sons are fine Christian young men who have a good relationship with their father. Much bitterness and many problems could have been avoided if I had been honest with my husband from the beginning, instead of trying to do it all myself. Please print this for other parents to see.

NAMELESS IN ALABAMA

DEAR ABBY: Last weekend I went to visit a nephew who lives in another city. While there, I attended church with him. When the collection plate was passed, my nephew took a $10 bill from his wallet, placed it on the collection plate, then took three $1 bills from the plate and placed them in his wallet. I was shocked!

Abby, I had never seen anyone "make change" from a collection plate before. Is this proper?

ASTONISHED

DEAR ASTONISHED: Why not? Far better to put in a $10 bill and take out three dollars than to put in nothing because all he had was a $10 bill, which may have been beyond his budget.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby: 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dr. Donohue

Nail fungus and oral medicine

Dear Dr. Donohue: Do you have any information about ringworm? Is there a cure for it? Why does mine disappear and then return in a few days? Does nervous tension have anything to do with it? — S.T.

Ringworm is another of the fungus infections. The Latin word, tinea, means worm, and that is how this fungus infection got this misleading name of a worm that doesn't exist. The "ring" reference is to the ring-shaped patches the fungus causes. That's the etymology of it all. Tinea is classified by the body part affected — tinea pedis (feet); tinea corporis (body); tinea curis (groin), etc. That's the geography of it.

There are many effective medicines for ringworm. Some are applied to the skin, and miconazole and clotrimazole are two examples. Some are taken by mouth — griseofulvin, for example. Tinea of the nails (tinea unguium) is an infection for which you may have to take oral medicine, and may have to take it for a long period of time before it can have its effect. As the growing nail emerges from the base (where the medicine is) it eventually reaches the fungus area and clobbers the enemy. You know how slowly nails can grow. That is why the medicine has to be taken for long periods.

You ask why your tinea recurs. Assuming you are having it treated with a medicine, the answer may lie in prematurely stopping treatment. Even when the signs of tinea disappear, the medicine has to be continued for a while to conduct "mopping-up operations" against remaining guerrilla fungus forces that may be hiding out. That's the most likely explanation. Nervous tension is not a factor in tinea.

Dear Dr. Donohue: About 20 years ago after spending a few days in the Bahamas I was on a flight back to Miami when I was taken with chills and fever, with a high temperature. This lasted about five days. Now and ever since I have had similar attacks that last for five to seven days, then clear up. A young doctor told me he had been in the tropics, and he called this dengue fever, caused by the bite of a mosquito. I would be thankful for any comment you have. — P.E.A.

I am not sure what is ailing you at the present time, but I really do not think dengue can explain your symptoms.

Dengue (DING-ee) is a viral illness, which as you have been told is passed on to man from the bite of a virus-infected mosquito. The mosquito picks it up from a person sick with the illness. When the mosquito bites a person it injects the virus beneath the skin. In about five or eight days, fever, chills, severe headache and body rash appear. The bones hurt so much that the illness is also called "breakbone fever."

A peculiarity of dengue is that the person may recover, then have a relapse quite soon afterwards. After those two episodes the illness does not return. It is not like malaria, another mosquito-borne illness, which can linger on for many years. Although dengue is a serious disease, it is almost never a fatal one.

You should look for other explanations of your important symptoms.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Marathon runner speaks to Hyperions

Cheryl Easterling, a 1981 Boston Marathon runner, spoke to the 1970 Hyperion club meeting Friday. With "Jogging" as her topic, she shared how she began running and some experiences of her eight marathons and other races.

"It is hard to cry and run at the same time," Mrs. Easterling said as she listed the benefits of running. She finds running leaves one physically and mentally relaxed.

Mrs. Easterling demonstrated stretching exercises one should do before and after jogging. In addition she explained the importance of shoes, clothing and diet for the jogger.

Mrs. Robert Haney hosted the meeting and Mrs. Bill Sheppard was co-hostess. Mrs. Dewayne Fraser became a new member.

The next meeting will be Feb. 12 in the home of Mrs. Travis Hunter.

Economy no barrier to travel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The recession won't keep Americans from hitting the vacation trail in 1982, but they will be choosier about where they spend their money, travel analysts predict.

A recent membership survey by the Travel Industry Association of America found that the new year should be a "busy and profitable one" for the tourism business if the widely held belief by economists that things will be brighter in the second half of 1982 comes true.

As before, most leisure travelers will depend upon private cars and campers to get them to their vacation destinations, with 78 percent of households using their own vehicles for their longest trip, the association said.

Prospects for a plentiful supply of gasoline and stable prices should help, it said.

But, it added, "because the number of U.S. households taking a vacation is expected to increase by 6 percent, all sectors of the commercial transportation industry should benefit."

William E. Jackman of the Air Transport Association said if the economic turnaround occurs as predicted, some U.S. airlines foresee a 5 percent increase in passenger levels from 1981's depressed level.

Air carriers that serve Florida already are slashing their fares and offering hotel and rental car packages at bargain rates during the usually top-priced mid-winter period to lure customers.

Robert Oall, marketing vice president of Amtrak, said the railroad expects a 7 percent growth in customers. And if the trend for more long-distance passengers to rent sleeping compartments continues, he said, reservations for the accommodations may have to be made up to three months in advance.

While scheduled inter-city bus service may dip by 2 percent, charter-coach operators may post gains of up to 40 percent because of the growth of tour packages, the survey indicated.

Operators of rental car fleets are restricting their purchases of new vehicles because of high interest rates, but growing competition in Florida and the Southwest should mean more discounts, it said.

The National Park Service sees a 5.5 percent growth in visits to its facilities in the new year and increasing demands for other public and private camping and recreational spots.

The United States attracted a record 23.2 million visitors from abroad in 1981, but Larry Gaffney of the government's Travel and Tourism Administration says inflation and the higher value of the dollar against foreign currencies has clouded the 1982 prospect somewhat.

Nonetheless, Gaffney said in an interview, "we do expect it will either hold its own or post a fractional gain," thanks in part to the increasing number of visitors from Latin America. In general, the travel association said, Americans will pick vacation spots relatively close to home but demand full value for their dollars "with little tolerance for marginal quality."

Testimony ends in water hearing

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — The first round is over, but attorneys say the fight is just beginning in El Paso's lawsuit to get water from New Mexico.

Testimony ended Wednesday in the three-day federal court hearing on the lawsuit, but it will be months before U.S. District Judge Howard Bratton hands down a ruling in the case.

Whatever the outcome, attorneys for both sides say the decision will be appealed and probably will end up before the U.S. Supreme Court.

"The party that wins in the trial court has an advantage when the case goes up on appeal," said New Mexico Attorney General Jeff Bingaman. "Appellate courts are generally hesitant to overturn lower court rulings even though they do it all the time."

Bratton's decision will be made following oral arguments, which will be scheduled after both sides submit their post-trial briefs. Bratton ordered the plaintiffs to submit their briefs by March 1 and ordered New Mexico to respond by April 1. El Paso then will have until April 20 to file its rebuttal brief.

Lawyers for both sides were hesitant to predict an outcome, but New Mexico State Engineer Steve Reynolds, one of the defendants, was confident.

"We had it won a year ago," Reynolds said. "I'm very pleased with the way it went."

New Mexico officials rested their case after testimony from only three of their potential 14 witnesses. "We feel we've put on whatever facts are helpful to us in winning the case," Bingaman said. "The case involves some difficult legal questions for the court. Where he'll go with those is anyone's guess."

The lawsuit challenges an unconstitutional 1953 New Mexico statute that bans the export of groundwater across state lines. El Paso's attorneys contend the statute violates the commerce clause of the U.S. Constitution, which reserves control of interstate commerce to Congress.

New Mexico officials maintain that groundwater was removed from consideration as commerce when federal officials gave control of water to the states in the late 1800s.

Although the attorneys for El Paso have insisted that the lawsuit concerns only a constitutional issue, they say the reasons behind the lawsuit are economic.

Santa Fe geologist Lee Wilson testified that getting water from the Mesilla and Hueco bolsons which lie just across the New Mexico border from El Paso is more than twice as cheap as the city's other alternatives. Those alternatives include sewage reclamation, purchasing rights to Rio Grande irrigation water and desalination of the brackish water that lies under the area surrounding the rapidly growing city of 450,000.

Although the lawsuit was judged the least expensive alternative, it had cost the city $670,000 by Dec. 31, 1981, mostly for legal fees and Wilson's study.

While El Paso generally utilized four lawyers, New Mexico stacked as many as 10 on their side of the courtroom, which was littered with boxes of files and documents throughout the hearing.

El Paso's attorneys attempted to keep the hearing focused on the statute issue, which mainly was argued through briefs. The New Mexico officials however brought in several side issues, which produced the bulk of testimony and in-court arguments.

For example, New Mexico attorneys argued that El Paso's pumping of water from the bolsons would violate the Rio Grande Compact, an interstate agreement that regulates the use of water from the river that flows through Colorado, New Mexico and Texas.

They contended that because the pumping would affect water flows in all three states, the lawsuit should have pitted the state of Texas against New Mexico. Instead, the El Paso utility is suing New Mexico officials, most notably Bingaman and Reynolds.

El Paso's attorneys, particularly Harry Reasoner, argued that the compact should be a moot point because it is not spelled out in the agreement that Texas shall receive water from the Rio Grande.

Reynolds and other New Mexico officials said pumping water from the Mesilla Bolson eventually would cause depleted flows in the Rio Grande because the river flows through the aquifer area. The depleted flows, they said, would result in less irrigation water for New Mexico farmers.

But Reasoner said El Paso would replace part of the water it takes by pouring treated sewage effluent into the Rio Grande. At least part of that water would be counted as Rio Grande Project irrigation flow, which would mean more fresh water could be released to New Mexico farmers.

Defense attorney Bill Lutz had said New Mexico farmers would not benefit from irrigation water released into the river downstream from the state border, but testimony Wednesday from the Rio Grande Project superintendent disputed that contention.

Superintendent Ken Pedde testified that all of the losses and additions of water to the project would be spread equally among the users in both states.

Another major issue in the hearing was whether New Mexico could spare the water that El Paso is seeking. Reynolds said New Mexico's water demands will exceed its supply within 40 years. Both sides brought in expert witnesses to explain their case.

Wilson testified that the other alternatives for bolstering the city's water supply were too costly to be practical.

He also said the return flow from the treated effluent would keep the bolsons in equilibrium for a long time. He said the pumping would not exhaust the recoverable water in the Mesilla Bolson for at least 150 years.

Reynolds disputed that saying the water quality would suffer as soon as the year 2015.

New Mexico's expert witness, Denver consulting engineer Leo Eisel, also contested Wilson's position that the return flow would keep the bolsons balanced.

"You cannot divert enough water to balance it out because we only have a live river here seven months out of the year, but the depletions would be occurring all year round," he said. "Even with the maximum exchange of water, New Mexico farmers would end up with a 6,900 acre-foot deficit."

Eisel also said that the New Mexico water wasn't the cheapest alternative. In his study, Eisel combined several of the other alternatives and came up with a plan he said would be less expensive.

Marshal negligent in deputy's death

ORANGE, Texas (AP) — Rose City Marshal Ray Jackson was negligent but not reckless in the shooting death of a 22-year-old city marshal, a coroner's inquest jury ruled Thursday.

Deputy City Marshal Todd Granger was killed Dec. 19 when he was shot once in the chest by a bullet fired from Jackson's .45-caliber automatic pistol. Jackson, 34, told the jury he and Granger were sitting in the Rose City City Hall talking about guns. When the two men stood up, Jackson's gun caught in a chair and fell out of his holster.

The marshal caught the gun before it hit the floor but it fired one shot as he grabbed it.

Suffering Designer Jeans Syndrome?

MILFORD, Mass. (AP) — It was a seat-of-the-pants diagnosis, but it turned out to be true-blue — the patients were suffering Designer Jeans Syndrome.

Last month, two young women were brought in for emergency treatment at Milford-Whitinsville Regional Hospital's Milford division. They complained of coldness and tingling in their hands, which appeared to have a blue tint.

Jan Iacovelli, an emergency room nurse, found the answer. According to The Road Between, the hospital's monthly newsletter, she discovered the women had been cold and had tried to warm their hands by rubbing them on their stylish new jeans.

Dye from the jeans came off on their skin. When the women saw their hands turning blue, they became anxious and began to hyperventilate, the newsletter said. And that increased their bodies' oxygen level, making their hands feel numb.

They rubbed their hands on their jeans some more. That made the blue bluer, the anxiety higher and the hyperventilation worse.

Death toll soars past 200 as more snow falls

By The Associated Press
The second blast of arctic air in a week charged out of Canada today, promising no relief from severe winter weather that has killed at least 206 people and piled up snow in the South and the Northeast after twin storms.

Winds up to 100 mph in the Rocky Mountain foothills overturned two tractor-trailers Thursday, tore off an apartment building roof and brought unusually warm weather to Colorado, but forecasters said the balmy temperatures would drop sharply with the approach of the frigid air.

"The very strong arctic outbreak means we're going to be in the icebox for a couple of days," said Dean Nesley, a National Weather Service forecaster in Minnesota.

The South was hit with a storm Thursday that followed its twin by only a day. The second storm dumped up to a half-foot of snow on Southern cities that are usually spared the ravages of winter, then iced highways and lashed Florida with gale-force winds that ripped down trees and damaged mobile homes.

It snarled attempts to restore electrical power to thousands of people and schools and businesses throughout the Sun Belt simply closed down, some for a third day, as the snow piled up on the roofs.

Like its twin, it then swung up the Atlantic coast and buried the Northeast under up to 4 inches of new snow, bringing the two-day accumulation to 10 inches in New York City and dragging some states toward the bottom of their snow-removal budgets.

It forced many Northeastern schools to close Thursday — including 90 percent of the schools in Connecticut — and gave children who were off today because of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday a four-day weekend to romp in the snow.

Like Wednesday's storm, Thursday's snow arrived in the Northeast in time for rush hour, but caused no repeat of the traffic jams because the snowplows were out in many cities and many cars stayed inside garages.

In the northern Midwest and as far west as Colorado, high winds and snow blowing down out of Canada were expected to cause a "rerun" of last weekend, when wind-chill factors hit 80 below in Minnesota, Nesley said.

The temperature was down to minus 8 in Chicago early today, but high winds made it feel like 31 below.

But on Thursday, after 6 inches fell on Jackson and prompted most businesses to shut down, people carrying cameras strolled through the city taking pictures of snow-covered buildings and lawns.

The snow in Alabama turned to slush but froze again as temperatures dropped into the teens Thursday night, forcing officials to close roads in the northern and central parts of the state.

Snow and violent storms gave Florida a bitter taste of winter Thursday, forcing public schools and state colleges to close and prompting the closure of three ice-covered bridges near Pensacola.

The Manatee County Sheriff's Department said high winds tore roofs from three mobile homes in the Tampa area.

Gusts of 59 mph were clocked at Miami International Airport, and flights were suspended. Gainesville wallowed in 2.79 inches of rain and about 10,000 homes and businesses lost electrical power.

Power outages, still affecting 186,000 homes and businesses in Alabama Thursday, were a severe problem in the unusually cold weather. Officials said a 79-year-old woman in Sumter County, Jamie Thompson, was found dead Wednesday after she froze in her house trailer, which had no heat or electricity because of a power failure.

Parts of Georgia got up to 3 inches of new snow Thursday, and Atlanta got another inch on top of a half-foot dumped by Wednesday's snowstorm. The second storm left up to 6 inches of snow on North Carolina, giving the state a total of up to 8 inches, and Virginia was buried under up to a foot of snow by the time both storms passed.

A 49-year-old man, Franklin Cox, was found frozen to death Thursday outside the Sanford Surgical Clinic in Sanford, N.C., officials said.

New York City's 6-inch snowfall on Wednesday was covered with 4 more inches Thursday, and parts of Massachusetts got another 5 inches on top of 8 inches left by the first storm.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Works has spent nearly all of its $11.7 million snow-clearing allowance, and the Connecticut Department of Transportation reported it had used 38 percent of its $11.5 million snow-removal budget even before the storms hit.

Deaths due to snow and cold have been reported in 29 states since Saturday. Here is a breakdown:

- Alabama, 16; Arkansas, 2; Connecticut, 1; Georgia, 10; Florida, 1; Kentucky, 2; Illinois, 26; Indiana, 5; Iowa, 7; Louisiana, 5; Maryland, 2; Massachusetts, 1; Michigan, 7; Minnesota, 4; Mississippi, 6; Missouri, 2; Nebraska, 1; New York, 16; North Carolina, 18; Ohio, 6; Oklahoma, 1; Pennsylvania, 16; South Carolina, 6; South Dakota, 2; Texas, 12; Tennessee, 6; Virginia, 12; West Virginia, 7; Wisconsin, 6.

Big Spring bull rider advances

DENVER (AP) — Five-time world champion Joe Alexander of Marysville, Calif., took over the lead in bareback riding Thursday night with a 76-point ride at the National Western Rodeo.

The 38-year-old Wyoming native has qualified for the prestigious National Finals Rodeo for 12 consecutive years, a record in his event.

Taking over second place in bareback riding at the National Western was Monte Elms, of Salado, Texas, with 74 points. Wes Odeal of Colorado Springs slipped to third with 73 points.

Rusty O'Donnell of Big Spring, Texas, took over second place in bull riding with a 75-point ride, and Darrel Hoss of Wild Horse, Colo., moved into the No. 3 spot with 74 points.

Leader in the event was Ken Wilcox, Greenbrier, Ark., who scored 85 points in the rodeo's opening performance Wednesday night.

In team roping, 1978 world champion George Richards, Humboldt, Ariz., and Matt Silveira, Nipomo, Calif., moved into second place in the first go-round with a time of 6.5 seconds. Leaders in the event are Rick Marron, Hollister, Calif., and Roman Figueroa, Sonoma, Ariz., with 6.0 seconds.

Leaders in the team roping average were Fred Davis, Tombstone, Ariz., and Ron Graves, Douglas, Ariz., with a two-ride time of 14.0 seconds. Davis and Graves were third in the second-go-round.

Here are leaders in other events:

Steer wrestling, average, Doug Jenke, Kellyville, Okla., 9.4 seconds; calf roping, average, J.D. Tadlock, Frisco, Texas, 19.3 seconds; barrel racing, average, Martha Wright, Stephenville, Texas, 31.48 seconds; saddle bronc riding, first go-round, Sterling Wines, Ruby Valley, Nev., 7.8 points.

Team roping (first go-round): 1. Rick Marron, Hollister, Calif., and Roman Figueroa, Sonoma, Ariz., 6.0 seconds; 2. Matt Silveira, Nipomo, Calif., and George Richards, Humboldt, Ariz., 6.5 seconds; 3. Dennis Motes, Oakdale, Calif., and John Miller, Chandler, Ariz., 6.9 seconds.

Team roping (second go-round): 1. Bret Beach, Gilbert, Ariz., and Clay O'Brien, Gilbert, Ariz., 6.0 seconds; 2. Jim Rodriguez, Fresno, Calif., and John Pabstian, Fowler, Texas, 6.2 seconds; 3. Fred Davis, Tombstone, Ariz., and Ron Graves, Douglas, Ariz., 6.8 seconds.

Team roping (average): 1. Davis and Graves, 14.0 seconds; 2. Pecos Norell, Rifle, Colo., and Shawn Madden, Lusk, Wyo., 14.1 seconds; 3. J.B. Whalley, Tazewell, Texas, and Gib Bell, Dryden, Texas, 17.4 seconds.

Saddle bronc riding (first go-round): 1. Sterling Wines, Ruby Valley, Nev., 7.8 points; 2. Butch Small, Dubois, Idaho, 7.3 points; 3. Hank Franzen, Sidney, Mont., 7.1 points.

Bull riding (first go-round): 1. Ken Wilcox, Greenbrier, Ark., 85 points; 2. Rusty O'Donnell, Big Spring, Texas, 75 points; 3. Darrel Hoss, Wild Horse, Colo., 74 points.

Stanton election Saturday

The Stanton Independent School District will hold a special election from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday, according to school officials there.

The election will take place in the Stanton Junior High School cafeteria.

The election is being held to replace Delbert Dickenson, board president, who resigned in November. Dickenson said at that time he was resigning because he had accepted the chief appraisers position with the Martin County Tax Appraisal District.

Dr. Randy Moore is the sole candidate for the position.

Look! It's a bird, it's a plane, it's Quetzalcoatlus!

By THOMAS HARNEY
Smithsonian News Service

The dragonlike, long-necked creature with a 40-foot wingspan soars high above the heads of visitors to the new dinosaur hall in the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History in Washington, D.C. Posing in a slow, diving turn, it scans the floor below, its birdlike head with malevolent gold and black eyes tilted to one side.

At first glance, it may seem to be a giant bird from some science fiction film, but this beast is neither a bird nor a figment of a movie scriptwriter's imagination. It is a detailed, lifesized model of the ancient reptile, Quetzalcoatlus northropi, the largest flying animal on record — twice as large as any bird that ever lived.

The creature's double name refers to the serpentine Aztec god (Quetzalcoatl) and to the Northrop Flying Wing, an experimental airplane. The Smithsonian's animal, the first full-scale reconstruction of Quetzalcoatlus, represents the latest scientific thinking about the anatomy and lifestyle of these long-extinct flying reptiles.

Imagine Quetzalcoatlus swooping down and alighting in the dinosaur hall. If it folded its wings about its large furry body and stood erect like a giant pelican on its strong, slender, long back legs, it would be tall enough to look many of the Smithsonian's big dinosaurs directly in the eye.

In its lifetime, Quetzalcoatlus would certainly have been familiar with the dinosaurs, even if it didn't see eye-to-eye with them. Flying reptiles of all sizes called pterosaurs — some as small as sparrows, others with wingspans of 20 feet or more — were flying the skies during the age of dinosaurs. Both pterosaurs and dinosaurs evolved from an earlier common reptilian ancestor, both lived during the same era and both disappeared at the end of the Cretaceous period about 65 million years ago — no one yet knows why.

The story behind Quetzalcoatlus beings in 1784 when Cosimo Collini, a secretary to Voltaire, first reported the discovery of pterosaur fossils in a limestone quarry near the Bavarian village of Eichstatt. Collini thought they were the remains of an amphibious mammal. It wasn't until the turn of this century that the fossils were established to be those of flying reptiles.

Pterosaur remains have since been found on every continent except Antarctica. In the United States, the chalk deposits of western Kansas are a great pterosaur fossil-hunting ground.

Still, no one suspected that pterosaurs had grown to such gigantic size until 10 years ago, when a Texas Memorial Museum field party under the direction of Dr. Wann Langston turned up the massive fossilized pterosaur wing bones of Quetzalcoatlus in Big Bend National Park in west Texas. Later, similar but smaller bones thought to be those of Quetzalcoatlus juveniles were found elsewhere in the park. Additional fragmentary material has also been recorded from Montana, Canada and the Middle Eastern kingdom of Jordan.

"Everywhere throughout the world where we have fossil deposits from the Upper Cretaceous period, dating back 65 million years, we're now finding traces of this big animal," Dr. Kevin Padian says. A University of California at Berkeley paleobiologist, Padian is a pterosaur authority who, in addition to Langston, advised the Smithsonian on its exhibit project.

The Smithsonian model reflects recent advances in the understanding of pterosaur biology and aerodynamics. Not too long ago, scientists believed that a pterosaur's wings were attached to both its front and back legs. Looking at the creature in this way, scientists found it difficult to understand how it flapped its wings and became airborne. One popular theory held that it launched itself off cliffs and glided, flopping around on four legs like a bat when it landed.

Padian and a number of other scientists dismiss this theory. They believe that the wings were only attached to the front legs and that Quetzalcoatlus was a soaring animal, a superb flying machine as perfectly adapted to the air as birds. When the sun warmed the earth to create a thermal updraft, the reptile jumped off the ground, flapped its powerful wings a few times and took off. Riding thermal updrafts, it stayed in the air all day with very little expenditure of energy and, when it landed, it walked around upright on its back legs like a bird.

The Smithsonian Quetzalcoatlus model will never be put to the test of taking off and landing, but simply to make it biologically and aerodynamically plausible in "flight" took more than a year of work and a great deal of thought by Smithsonian scientists and modelmakers.

Dr. Jessica Harrison, a paleontologist working on the development of the Smithsonian's new dinosaur hall, went to Texas in late 1979 to research and photograph Quetzalcoatlus fossils. Because there was so little data to work with, she had to use what she calls "educated guesswork," drawing on such disparate fields of study as physics, biology, aeronautical engineering, comparative anatomy and even architecture.

Harrison worked with Walter Sorrell, supervisor of the Smithsonian model shop, to produce a large, detailed wood and fiberglass model — built on a scale of 2 inches to a foot. After some modifications based on suggestions offered by Padian (he thought the neck was too long), the museum had a pterosaur that could be enlarged to life size. To make the model more dynamic than the usual pterosaur reconstruction, Harrison decided to depict it in a gentle, banking dive.

The big Quetzalcoatlus model was constructed in three sections — body and neck, wings and head. It had to be engineered to be light and strong so it could be suspended in the air without sagging. Modelmakers Bruce Hough and Ben Snouffer tackled the body and neck first, making a hollow wire mannequin and covering it with fiberglass. Next, they worked on the wings, the most time-consuming and difficult part of the project.

The wing bones of the pterosaur are one of the most distinctive features of its anatomy. Supporting the wing membranes, these bones are an evolutionary variation of the forelimb of an earthbound animal that walked on all fours.

The inner wing bone, or humerus, linked the inner wing to the muscular body. The radius and ulna, the outer wing bones, were attached to a wrist and four fingers. The fourth finger was unique. It was greatly elongated — up to 8 feet — and supported as much as half of the length of the wing membrane.

Completely assembled and weighing only about 140 pounds — less than the actual animal would have weighed in life — the finished Quetzalcoatlus model was suspended with four steel cables from the ceiling of the dinosaur hall, where visitors to the Smithsonian may now see it peeling off towards them, as though in search of a meal.

No one really knows what Quetzalcoatlus ate. Some pterosaurs have been found with marine fish in their stomachs, but in West Texas where Quetzalcoatlus lived there were no large bodies of water at that time. Would it have fed on a museum tourist if it were hungry? Smithsonian officials assure anxious visitors that its lifelike Quetzalcoatlus has had its last meal — more than 65 million years ago.

Amtrack official says Texas

top spot for high speed train

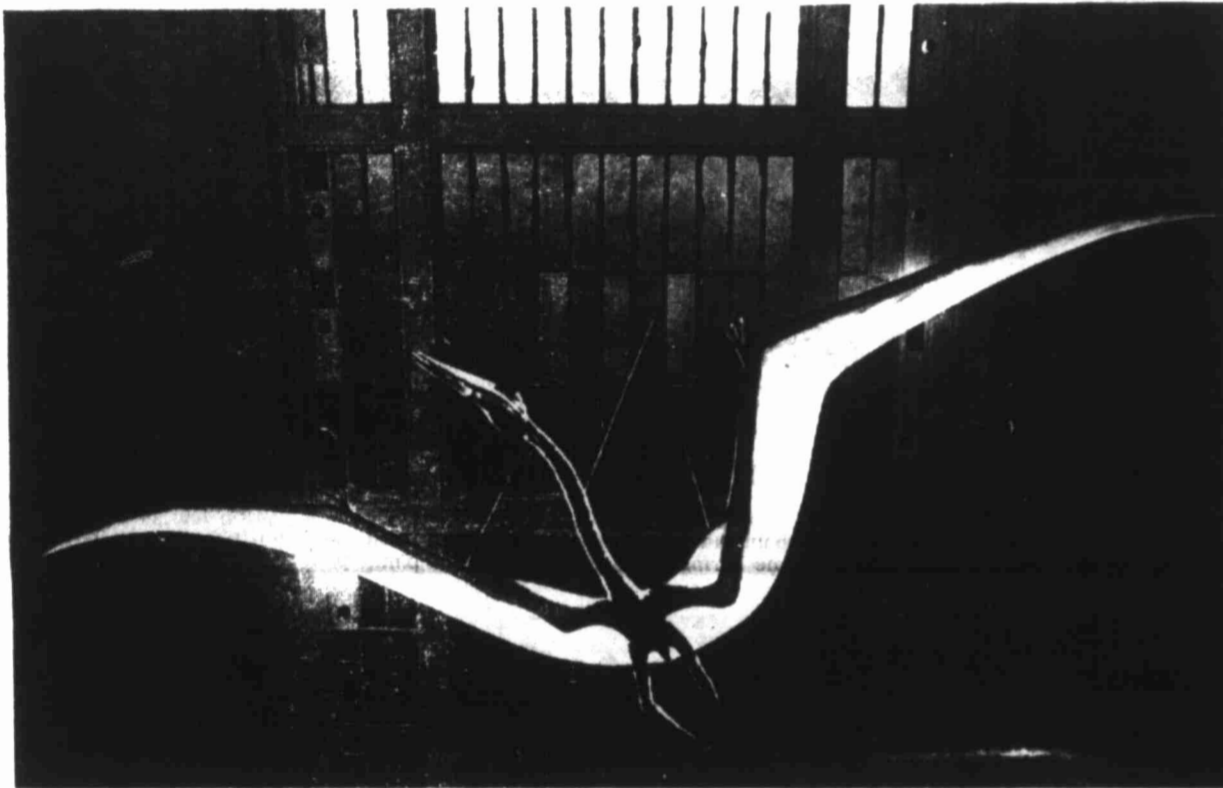

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas ranks "among the highest" candidates for high-speed train service connecting major cities, an Amtrack spokesman said Wednesday.

Nick Brandt, a railroad corporate development official, told a statewide committee studying rail service in Texas that Amtrack is seeking "a strong private investor and governmental approach" in selecting regions for possible development of the "bullet" train system.

But Brandt also said the state has not made the commitment needed for a major study of possible service.

The nine-member committee, chaired by state Rep. Al Edwards of Houston, held a hearing here to drum up support for increased passenger service in Texas, particularly in developing the "Texas Triangle," Houston, Dallas and San Antonio.

The "bullet" trains which operate between Japan's major cities run at speeds between 150 to 175 mph are profitable, in contrast to most rail service which loses money and must be subsidized by the government, Brandt said.

BIG BIRD — The largest flying animal in the history of life, Quetzalcoatlus northropi, has a permanent home under the skylight in the new paleontology galleries which opened Dec. 4, 1981, at the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History.

Plant won't operate before study finished

HOUSTON (AP) — A spokesman for the consortium building the South Texas Nuclear Project says that a federal study conducted on pumps that workers have alleged are dangerous would be complete before the plant begins operating with the devices.

Houston Lighting & Power's Graham Painter said that about 60 of the pumps, which five employees swore in affidavits are faulty, have been received and some installed at the $4.8 billion nuclear power plant near Bay City.

Painter said Tuesday that some of the pumps are in areas of the plant that could affect its safe operation.

But since the first unit is not scheduled for completion until 1986, he said the Nuclear Regulatory Commission would have sufficient time to complete its investigation and determine if any of the pumps have to be replaced.

John Collins, regional administrator for the NRC at Arlington, said Tuesday that five employees of Hayward Tyler Pump Co. of Burlington, Vt. charged the pumps were faulty in affidavits given to U.S. Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass.

A machinist and chief welder were among the five employees who made the allegation against Hayward Tyler. The former chief welder, Fred Lozon, who worked on the Astrodome, said he and three other welders quit the company two years ago after a dispute over what he termed shortcuts in procedures.

"I don't believe (the pumps) were suited for safety-related work. I don't think they were (properly) tested," he said.

Houston Lighting & Power is the controlling partner of a four-utility team building the plant.

Painter said some of the pumps will serve as backups to other pumps in the secondary emergency cooling system.

In conference thriller

Hawks win, 89-84

ODESSA — Howard College's Hawks responded to a tremendous down-the-stretch challenge to defeat Odessa College, 89-84, in Western Conference basketball play here Thursday night... The lead swapped hands several times in the early stages of the second half before the Hawks took the lead for good with four minutes left in the game.

Leon Isaac, a 6-1 guard from Clarksdale, Miss., hit a two-pointer to pad the lead for Howard College... Nathan Givens, who wound up with 26 points for the Hawks, played exceptionally well in the closing minutes of the game.

After frigid first half

HC girls rally to win

ODESSA — Coach Don Stevens had his Howard College Hawk Queens stay on the court for a scrimmage at half time and the strategy paid huge dividends for the Big Spring team... Down 32-18 at the half, the Hawk Queens came storming back to win in overtime, 67-63.

Cheryl Horton paced the home team with 17 points while Karen Widman and Carolyn Williams each had 13... The Hawk Queens are now 3-1 against Western Conference opponents and 12-6 overall.

Elise Wheat scores 24

Steerettes lose, 76-69

Midland Lee took advantage on cold shooting on the part of Big Spring in the second quarter and went on to topple the Steerettes, 76-69, in District 5-AAAAA girls' basketball play here Thursday night.

Elise Wheat led Big Spring in scoring with 24 points, half of which she scored from the penalty line. Shell Rutledge wound up with 17 for Big Spring.

Harris paced the visitors with 22 points while McCabe tallied 14 for Lee... The Big Spring team is now 10-12 in the season and stands 1-4 in conference.

Big Spring returns to play Monday, at which time it plays Cooper in Midland. The JVs will not be in action that night, since Cooper does not have a JV team.

Kite may make run in classics

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — An obscure Japanese rookie had the lead but golf's biggest money-winner last year, Tom Kite, was in a threatening position after two rounds of the five-day Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic... And Kite, who last season had one of the most consistent records in the game, had but one thought in mind — winning more often.

Ozaki, younger brother of former Japanese star Jumbo Ozaki, used his vast distance off the tee to birdie all of the par-5 holes on the way to a 68 at Bermuda Dunes... Tied with Kite at 134 were former PGA champ Lanny Wadkins, Skeeter Heath and Cal Peete.

Most of the celebrity amateurs, including former President Gerald Ford and the host comedian, along with the top-name pros played Wednesday at Eldorado... Masters champ Tom Watson had a 72 and was at 141.

PGA king Larry Nelson was 69-144 at Bermuda Dunes... Ozaki, 28, who gained his playing rights as a member of the American tour after completing the qualifying school last year, is one of the longer hitters on the circuit.

Tornadoes to visit Fort Stockton

LAMESA (SC) — A full slate of area basketball activities is scheduled tonight as the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes varsity basketball team travels to Fort Stockton for an 8 p.m. match with the Panthers in District 2-4A... The Panthers have been struggling this year as they have posted a 2-4 mark in District and are 10-11 overall.

Andrews is favored to capture the first half in District play, with a 6-0 record... The Klondike girls and boys return to the hard court tonight as they host Wellman.

Gophers hard to contain

A change in strategy might lead the way to the change in the ranking that the Minnesota Gophers feel is warranted... Minnesota, 10-2, and rated 11th, beat No. 5 Iowa 61-56 Thursday night in a battle of Big Ten powers.

Minnesota hit on 58 percent of its shots... In other contests involving ranked teams, it was No. 3 Virginia over Wagner 99-67, No. 16 Wichita State beating Creighton 69-56, and 18th-ranked Tulsa topping Drake 71-54.

Portland triumphs

Michigan coach weighs offer from Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M officials say a decision is imminent by Michigan football Coach Bo Schembechler on whether he will accept a 10-year, $2.25 million offer to become the new A&M athletic director... The Bryan-College Station Eagle Thursday quoted A&M Board of Regents Chairman H.R. "Bum" Bright as saying that Schembechler had been offered the job to replace Marvin Tate, who resigned in September.

BO SCHEMBECHLER

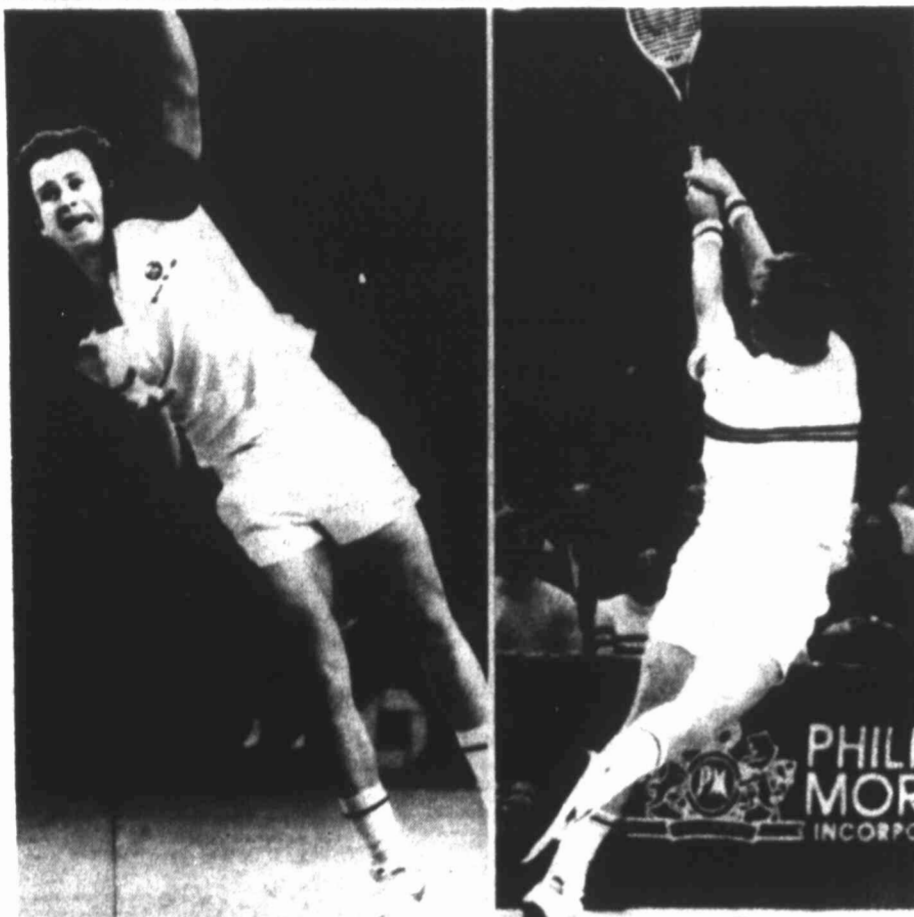

extended last month for another season, will be fired and his contract paid off... Wilson was on a recruiting trip and could not be reached for comment... But interim A&M Athletic Director Wally Groff denied Schembechler had been offered the coaching job.

"If we missed a shot, our guys were crashing the boards and there were a number of long rebounds which Portland took and converted into layups... Ramsay said: "We played better defense against Houston tonight than we did last week. We had some big offensive plays tonight. Our execution was good. We had some high percentage shots and we made them."

THE LIGHT TOUCH By Sherry Wegner To be fair to the younger generation, this week's column is devoted to terms from the old days.

Associated Press Photo THE WAY IT WAS — John McEnroe, left, keeps Jimmy Connors scrambling as Connors goes down 6-2, 7-5 Thursday night in New York in the second round of the Volvo Masters Tennis championships.

McEnroe hard to like; is harder to defeat

John McEnroe is a tennis "tantrum-holic." Like an incurable drunk, he goes off on a temper binge, is sorry later and vows to reform. Then, at the first touch of a sensitive nerve, he is off again in one of his now classic court explosions. He probably will never change. His eruptions are coming at more frequent intervals. The range of his targets have broadened to include most of the top players he must face on the world tour — Jimmy Connors, Ivan Lendl, Jose-Luis Clerc and others. Once very controlled while wearing Uncle Sam's colors, he has even begun acting up in the Davis Cup, embarrassing his captain, Arthur Ashe. What a pity. John McEnroe is possibly the greatest natural tennis talent in the game's history. This is not a rash opinion thrown out recklessly. Champions of the past — Don

Budge, Jack Kramer, Arthur Ashe — repeatedly attest to it. The world's most astute critics subscribe. Yet this 22-year-old left-handed racket wizard from New York is seeing this tremendous gift erode through schoolboy petulance, a short temper fuse and court arrogance. Three times American champion and finally conqueror of Bjorn Borg at Wimbledon, he has suffered eight setbacks this year, twice losing to Lendl of Czechoslovakia and Connors but also bowing to such players as Trey Waltke, Carlos Kirmayr, Bill Scanlon, Vijay Amritraj and Vince Van Patten. Waltke was 46th and Kirmayr 62nd in the 1980 computer rankings. Others ranked as low as 26th and 40th. Don Budge went two years, 1937-38, without losing a tournament match. The tennis world was shaken if Big Bill Tilden ever lost to anyone of lesser stature than Rene Lacoste or Henri Cochet. It's always been tradition that, if you're the best, you don't lose to quarterfinal guys. McEnroe can't help having letdowns. The point is, even going at half-effort, Super Mac can whip most of the guys he faces across the net and he certainly should never lose as often as he does. Most of this can be blamed on a trigger temper which sears and destroys concentration. All experts will tell you: Tennis matches are won in the head, not with the feet, hands or racket. McEnroe came to the Madison Square Garden this week after a tumultuous losing battle with Connors in Rosemont, Ill., in which the game's two most volatile performers almost came to blows. This followed ugly outbursts in previous matches with Clerc and Lendl and at Wembley, England, with Connors, who won there also. "The press blow up my incidents," McEnroe said. "I am usually right. Connors has been acting bad for 11 years and hasn't changed." Wrong, Connors has become Mr. Nice Guy since his marriage and fatherhood.

Sands team register triumphs over Dawson

ACKERLY (SC) — Chris Wigginton scored 22 points Thursday night to leave the Sands Mustangs past the Dawson Dragons 51-47 in a District 9-A basketball battle. Leading the way for Dawson were Joel Bennett with 21 points and Monty Moore with 11. The Mustangs led throughout the game, enjoying a half-time advantage of 28-23. Dawson closed the gap to one at the end of the third quarter, but a strong final stanza won the game for the Mustangs, who are now 2-1 in District play. The Dragons are also 2-1. In girl's action, Sands remained undefeated in District play, as the Mustangs got by Dawson, 50-30. Penny Grantham led the way for Sands with 20 points. Gina Roberts tallied 14 for

Dawson. Sands and Klondike girls may be headed for a District showdown Jan. 21. The Cougar girls and the Mustang girls are both 4-0 in District play. Overall, the Sands boys are 13-6 while the Sands girls have won 18 of their 20 starts. The Sands teams will be at home tonight in Union. Meyer leaving SMU for pros

DALLAS (AP) — Ron Meyer, a young and ambitious coach who said he would leave Southern Methodist University for a chance to direct a National Football League team, was told his squad today he is going to the New England Patriots, a source close to the school's athletic department said. Meyer, 41, scheduled a team meeting at noon to announce he will replace fired Patriots Coach Ron Erhardt, the source said. "Yes, I have been offered the job with the New England Patriots," Meyer told The Dallas Morning News on Thursday. "The decision is up to me. I'll make a decision within 24 hours." Meyer met with Patriots officials in New York Thursday, the source said. "As of now, we do not have a press conference scheduled..." Tom Hoffman, director of media relations for the Patriots. "We can neither confirm or deny anything to do with the coaching situation... until we have the new coach signed and at that time we will make the formal announcement." "We have said all along that we would like to name a new coach hopefully prior to the Super Bowl." The Patriots previously were turned down by Southern California Coach John Robinson and Penn State Coach Joe Paterno as replacements for Erhardt, who led the team to the worst record in the NFL, 2-14, in the just concluded season. Members of the SMU coaching staff told the Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel Star that Meyer met in New York with Patriots President Billy

Sullivan, his son Chuck, the Pats' executive vice president, and General Manager Bucko Kilroy. Meyer was supposed to return to Texas immediately after the interview but made such an impression in the session that he was given the job, the newspaper said. Meyer checked into a New York hotel under an assumed name and met with Kilroy for several hours Thursday, hammering out details of a four-year contract for an estimated $700,000, the Sentinel Star said. Only two months ago Meyer said, "I would not leave SMU for another college... but there is no secret about my ambition to coach in the National Football League." In just six years, Meyer brought the Mustangs from a dismal 3-8 record in 1976 to the Southwest Conference championship with a 10-1 record in 1981 and to their highest ranking in The Associated Press poll in 30 years. But the 5th-ranked Mustangs could not play in the Cotton Bowl because they were on probation. Meyer was 62-39-1 in nine seasons as a head coach, first at Nevada-Las Vegas and then at SMU. He coached UNLV into the 1974 Division II playoffs. Meyer was a scout for the Dallas Cowboys and Gil Brandt, the personnel director who hired him, said. "I've been a Ron Meyer fan since I hired him... He is an extremely bright coach and will do a very good job... he is highly organized." The source close to the SMU athletic department said Meyer was expected to take a number of his assistants with him to New England. Speculation for his replacement has already centered around Cowboy's innovative assistant coach John Mackovic, who has spent a year under Tom Landry. The Sentinel Star also said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne would be considered for the SMU job. Meyer began his SMU career with a pass-oriented attack, but switched to a running game out of the formation when he recruited Eric Dickerson and Craig James. The two juniors both rushed for more than 1,000 yards last season. "It's hard to believe but everybody around here expected it," James told the Dallas Morning News. "It's not the first thing to hurt us, but it's a loss, a big loss."

Jeff Ruland demanding respect

By The Associated Press Jeff Ruland played his basketball in Spain last year and this season he's making a lot of National Basketball Association teams wish he had lost his plane ticket home. Ruland, in a reserve role, had more than 20 points for the fifth time in seven games Thursday night, scoring 24 points, including 15 in the final quarter, to lead the Washington Bullets to a 121-114 victory over the Detroit Pistons. "I really feel that I'm better suited at this time to come off the bench," said the 6-foot-11 Ruland, who hit 10 of 16 shots and also grabbed 15 rebounds. "It seems like I can get into the flow of the game by watching it first. And then when I come in, I'm much better prepared."

In other NBA games, New Jersey ripped Chicago 130-104. Portland tripped Houston 111-100 and Phoenix edged New York 90-89. Detroit took a 34-25 lead in the first quarter as John Long hit 12 of his 32 points. But the Bullets took a 64-55 halftime lead when Greg Ballard poured in 12 of his 24 points in the second period. Detroit closed to within three points, 94-91, with 8:40 remaining in the game. Ruland then took over, scoring three quick baskets and a free throw to help Washington to its fourth road victory in five starts. For Washington, Kevin Grevey scored 22 points and Spencer Haywood 17, while Detroit's Kelly Tripucka led all scorers with 33 points and Isiah Thomas chipped in with 18.

Lynn Swann 'man of year' CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Lynn Swann, the Pittsburgh Steelers' big-play receiver deeply involved in his city's civic projects, has been named the 1981 NFL Man of the Year. The Pro Football Hall of Fame, which administers the annual award for sponsor Miller High Life Beer, announced that Swann had been selected over four other finalists — quarterback Archie Manning of the New Orleans Saints, wide receiver Jerry Butler of the Buffalo Bills, running back William Andrews of the Atlanta Falcons and quarterback Ron Jaworski of the Philadelphia Eagles.

In Midland Lee game tonight Steers out to end streak

The Big Spring Steers will try to play the roles of spoilers in a District 5-AAAAA encounter with Midland Lee in Midland this evening. Tipoff time is 8 p.m. Ed Haller's Longhorns have lost their first three starts in conference play — to Abilene High, Midland High and Odessa Permian, in that order. Lee, masterminded by the dean of conference coaches, Paul Stueckler, entered the race the favorite. The Rebels still have a good shot at the crown, although they came a cropper in one of three of their three conference outings. Overall, Big Spring will be seeking to even its record at 10-10. Haller will likely go with a lineup that includes Robert Rubio, 5-11; Tony Randle, 6-2 1/2; Gary Harris, 6-3; Gerald Wrightsil, 6-2; and either Blake Rosson, 5-9; or John Green, 5-11. Rubio, Wrightsil, Rosson and Green are the letterman, among the sextet. Randal has shown to advantage in recent games. He is the younger brother of

Mike Randle, the former Steer standout who is now a junior varsity coach here. In their last start, the Rebels defeated Abilene Cooper, 54-44, dominating play in the last half after trailing at the intermission, 23-16. Lee had three players in double figures in the contest, Alvin Dunson leading the way with 14 points. Abilene High continues to lead conference standings with a 3-0 record while Midland High, San Angelo Central and Odessa High all have 2-1 records, along with Lee. Overall, Lee is 13-7. The game at Midland will be in the Chaparral Center, rather than at Lee High School. The Longhorns will be at home to district opponents twice next week. They play Abilene Cooper Tuesday and host Odessa High Friday night. Junior varsity units representing Big Spring and Lee clash at 6:15 p.m., in Midland this evening.

Super Bowl ticket may cost more than TV set

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Super Bowl XVI has generated such a ticket squeeze that in many cases it would be cheaper to buy a new television set and watch the game in the comfort of your home. Tickets for the Jan. 24 game between the Cincinnati Bengals and the San Francisco 49ers in the Silverdome sell for a face value of $40 but they are bringing anywhere from $200 to $400 on the resale market. In fact, resale of Super Bowl tickets has become so lucrative that newspapers in Detroit and elsewhere around the country are full of classified ads offering to buy and sell the ducats.

This is the first time the Super Bowl has been scheduled in the snow belt and the fact that several National Football League cities are within a five-hour drive has added to the demand for tickets. "We've got more people than ever before with a bona fide chance to actually see a Super Bowl," said Jim Finks, vice president and general manager of the Chicago Bears. "We're talking about the blue-collar guy who was in the stands before it was fashionable to be in the stands." The NFL distributes tickets on a percentage basis, with 22 1/2 percent going to the two participating teams, 15 percent to the league office, 15 percent to the host team — in this case, the Detroit Lions — and 1 percent to the remaining 25 teams. Once individuals obtain the tickets from those sources, many choose to sell them for a profit rather than attend the game, even though on the ticket itself is a 107-word message that includes the directive: "This ticket may not be resold at a premium." The NFL is not oblivious to the sales. "You just can't control it," Commissioner Pete Rozelle says. "You don't like it, but there's little you can do."

The largest ticket dealer appears to be Dave Adelman, president of Murray's, a ticket brokerage and tour company in Los Angeles that claims it can get you a ticket to anything — from tennis at Wimbledon to Super Bowls in Detroit. Murray's has been advertising in newspapers. Some sellers in Michigan, where scalping is against the law, are displaying remarkable creativity in their ticket offers. For example, gart Dore, a Bay City businessman and sports promoter, is asking $100,000 for a 1922 silver dollar. The coin, according to dealers, is worth no more than $800. To sweeten the deal, Dore is tossing in 29 of his 30 box seats in the domed stadium.

Hawaii edges Miners, 52-49

HONOLULU (AP) — Rodney Jones made a driving layup with 11 seconds left in overtime, then converted a free throw, as Hawaii defeated Texas-El Paso, 52-49, in a Western Athletic Conference game Thursday night. David Hopkins, who had tied the score for Hawaii at 49-49 with a bank shot after stealing a UTEP inbound pass with 1:50 on the clock in regulation time, grabbed a Miners' rebound with five seconds left in overtime to preserve Hawaii's second conference victory against no losses.

Kelly Lyons is lost to Baylor

Fortunes of the Baylor University women's basketball team has been dealt a blow by loss of Kelly Lyons, All-American Junior College transfer from Howard College. Kelly injured a knee three weeks ago in workouts prior to the Baylor and Texas-San Antonio game. Monday she underwent arthroscopic knee surgery at Waco and will be lost for the season. "It's unfortunate we won't have Kelly anymore this year," said Pam Davis, her coach. "We need her coming off the bench."

FAITHFUL FRIEND

A true friend is one of life's richest treasures. Sooner or later, we discover who our real friends are... and we cherish them.

Many years ago an old shepherd died. His dog was at the train depot when the man's casket was placed aboard the train. For years after the dog lived at the depot... he met every train, watching each passenger, always disappointed in not finding his master. Everyone loved the dog and after he died a monument to him was built on a hill above the depot.

We all need to know that we have the kind of friend who really cares about us. The man who walked the dusty roads of Galilee 2,000 years ago wants to be your lifelong friend. Nothing can separate you from His endless love and concern.

Rediscover the warmth of a friendship that never fails. Worship this week.

Biblical principles used

Group settles lawsuits

By TINA M. STEFFEN
 Staff Writer
 During one year, Christians spent $25 million suing other Christians, according to Charles Richards, Albuquerque, N.M., and formerly of Big Spring.
 Richards belongs to a group of "peacemakers" helping others curb that expense through mediation and arbitration, using biblical principles to solve legal disagreements.
 This group is the Christian Conciliation Service (CCS). It is a ministry of the Christian Legal Society. CCS has three full-time personnel and more than 200 volunteer lawyers, ministers and laypersons from diverse backgrounds.
 CCS provides a structure in which trained "peacemakers" use scriptural principles and procedures of conflict resolution to solve disputes between Christians. CCS works through local churches and attempts to resolve conflicts by letting both parties compromise without the expense and time involved in courts.
 "Our burden is not so much for unbelievers to be reconciled to God, but believers to be reconciled to themselves and be examples to others. Live a Christian reconciled life ... working together, not against each other ... in order that unbelievers see the reconciled body of Christ and desire to be a part of it."

process. Fees are waived when participants are unable to pay.
 Richards told The Herald of one couple who recently used CCS to help solve their marital problems. A man went to CCS to get help in settling a marital dispute in which the marriage was heading for divorce. Both parties agreed to come to CCS. The mediation didn't save the marriage because the wife was determined to leave her husband. However, CCS settled the division of property between the couple and the courts settled the divorce.
 The wife left one or two days after the divorce was final. After a week, she began thinking about what had happened. She read the scriptures discussed in the mediation proceedings and those about what the wife is to the husband. In mediation it was asked why they married in the first place. She thought about marriage and studied the scriptures. It finally hit home to her what had happened to them, Richards said. Desiring to get back together, she called her ex-husband.
 The husband wanted to solve their marital problems and be with his wife throughout the whole ordeal. He realized many things about marriage and forgiveness during the mediation that helped him maintain his forgiveness for her. "When she came back to him, he went to meet her ... It was like the story of the prodigal son," Richards said. "They are still together."

An attorney, minister and layman form the group of volunteer mediators assigned to a case. They are the out-of-court judge and jury. "The lawyer provides the legal aspects of the problem, the minister looks at the Christian aspects of the problem and the layman is usually familiar with the particular area in question," Richards said. CCS does not furnish attorneys for cases ending up in court, but instead tries to settle disputes before they get to the court.

A party having a problem makes the initial contact with CCS. CCS then contacts the other party. If the party is Christian, scriptures are discussed with them about settling problems in the church instead of in court. CCS then assigns a mediation team to each party. "CCS is not saying courts can't mediate," Richards said, "but we try to work out the problem without the world knowing about it."

The parties sign a mediation contract and the courts stand behind it. Christians make the decision rather than judges and juries who may or may not have the Christian concept of resolving conflicts.

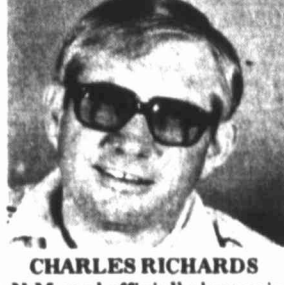

According to CCS, mediation and arbitration are ways by which parties submit the issues between them to one or more persons for a decision. In mediation, the mediator's job is to assist the parties in coming up with an agreement by careful listening, suggesting areas of appropriate compromise, encouraging effective communication and hopefully helping the reconciliation of persons as well as resolving the dispute.

In arbitration, arbitrators seek to decide on what is just after hearing all parties. The arbitrator's decision may by prior agreement, be advisory and the parties are free to accept or reject it. Parties may, however, agree in advance that the decision is final and enforceable.

In general, the process is more informal with less emphasis on adversary proceedings. Parties may, however, be represented by counsel. The procedures are designed to be less "technical." According to CCS, such a process often provides more opportunity for reconciliation, is less costly, and consumes less time than lawsuits. Its essential difference is the inclusion of a spiritual dimension.

Lawyers volunteer their time in mediation. There is an initial fee of $50 which covers the cost of materials, training and administrative functions. If the conflict is not resolved after 16 hours, a fee of $100 is charged to continue the

'We try to work out the problem without the world knowing about it.'

CHARLES RICHARDS

CCS is based in Albuquerque, N.M. and officially began in September, 1980. It is the first full-time program of its kind in the country. It was established in New Mexico because of a 1971 arbitration law giving qualified mediators the authority to make final, binding decisions if a voluntary agreement cannot be reached. Each person using the program signs a release stating he or she will comply with the final decision. The Albuquerque group has received support from all major ministerial associations and church agencies in the area.

Richards has been with CCS for three months. He was employed as an operator at Cosden for ten years. In 1972, he left Cosden and went into full-time ministry. He used to have Solid Rock Christian Center, a counseling ministry and Christian bookstore. He was ordained as a minister with World Ministry Fellowship International and was on the World Ministry Fellowship's advisory board. His livelihood comes from donations.

CCS is a pilot of the Christian Legal Society in Oakland, Ill., that was founded in 1951. In Albuquerque, four attorneys began planning CCS about three years ago. The group is expanding into other areas of New Mexico with offices in Las Cruces and Santa Fe. CCS plans to open offices in five or six other cities within the next year. It has contacted people throughout the country about its ministry hoping to spread it into other areas.

Lanny Hamby, a local lawyer, has been contacted and informed of this ministry.

"(CCS) looks real good. I'm impressed with it," Hamby said. "They are really taking the burden off the courts in Albuquerque. I'd like to see it in operation all over. It takes the cooperation of the local bar association and local pastors to get it going. Maybe sometime we will see it in function here. In Dallas, they are getting it off the ground." Hamby does not know of any others in Big Spring who have been interested about CCS.

Those interested in more information or getting help from CCS may write or phone Christian Conciliation Service of New Mexico, Inc., 2115 San Mateo, Albuquerque, N.M. 87114, telephone: (505) 266-5450.

Reach Out Singers to perform

A concert of contemporary Christian music will be performed by the Reach Out Singers at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 810 Scurry, Monday at 7:30 p.m.

The 1982 Reach Out program will feature familiar hymns, gospel songs, medleys, and spirituals. The group performs music which inspires with words and drama and which will appeal to all ages.

In addition to performances throughout the United States, the Reach Out Singers will minister in Northern Europe and the Soviet Union. The musicians are selected by national auditions and give their time for this ministry.

Richard Harrison, Greenbelt, Md., is musical director. The Reach Out Singers is a ministry of Outreach for Christ International. Outreach is an international witness ministry which seeks to be an arm of local churches at home and abroad. Since 1973 groups have sung and witnessed in 12 foreign countries and more than 25 states.

No admission fee will be charged, but an offering will be taken at the concert.

Linguist says Nixon tapes unfair evidence

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A Texas A&M University linguist who analyzed the Nixon White House tapes transcripts of the recorded conversations should not have been used as evidence in the Watergate trials.
 In an article in the February issue of the university's research magazine "Quest" Dr. Herman Essau said the transcripts cannot be considered an accurate representation of conversations between Richard Nixon, H.R. Halderman and others as they discussed Watergate incidents.
 Essau said the conversations should not have been presented to a jury. The researcher was writing a book on the linguistic analysis of the tapes before he was killed in a traffic accident Dec. 23. The article is the first time the results of the study were made available to the public, the magazine said.
 "The tapes are too ambiguous and the transcripts used during the trial fall far short of representing even the audible portions of recorded conversations accurately. They skew some conversations in a way that makes their use in court highly questionable," Essau said in an interview prior to his death.
