

Gablers look for 'the truth' in textbooks

By RICHARD HORN
Staff Writer

"I never really wanted to read textbooks," Mrs. Norma Gabler said Monday night in Forsan. But she and her husband Mel, a retired Exxon employee in Longview, began reading and evaluating textbooks in 1960, and have become very well-known and influential in the process.

The Gablers have become known as conservatives concerned about values being taught in schools through appearances on "60 Minutes," "ABC News Nightline," "Today," and the "Phil Donahue Show."

Mrs. Gabler spoke to a group of people Monday night at a meeting of the Forsan Study Club at Forsan High School Auditorium. She talked about her own experiences in reviewing textbooks at Texas Board of Education hearings, and she explained how concerned parents can influence what books their children will use in Texas' classroom.

"No other state can compare with the Texas system of adopting textbooks," Mrs. Gabler told the audience. "As a result, Texas has some of the best textbooks in the nation. And Texas is the largest purchaser of schoolbooks; it is very important."

Mrs. Gabler began by explaining how she got involved in the business of evaluating the textbooks used in Texas' schools. It started in 1960.

"Our oldest son (16 years-old at the time) came in and asked Mel what the framers of the constitution had in mind when they wrote the constitution. Mel explained the principal of states rights and our son said that wasn't the way it was in his American history book. That book explained all the rights of the federal government and said that there were no states rights. It said the power was all in Washington."

Mrs. Gabler said that after a few more such experiences, she and her husband decided to look for "the truth." They went to the school superintendent who told them that textbooks were adopted in Austin. They were told it was a long legal process and involved going before committees.

"Mel told me that he couldn't get away from work, so he sent me to Austin," she said.

Since 1970, Mrs. Gabler says, Texas' textbooks have been available for review. Usually the books are chosen a year in advance and any book approved will be in use for six years, she says.

"Publishers submit their books in April and we are given two months to review the books. You have to write a review explaining why you object to the book and turn this in by June 26," she said.

"The book's publisher gets a copy of the review and has three weeks to reply. Then both the publisher and the petitioner (the person reviewing the textbook) are granted equal time before the committee," she said.

The committee is made up of 15 teachers and school administrators. It makes its selections in September, and 10 or more positive votes will allow a textbook to proceed to the local school districts.

Mrs. Gabler says that roughly 500 books are submitted, but usually only 123 are accepted. There are often as many as 50 petitioners at the hearings, she says.

"You have to do a lot of homework," she said. "It can be fun, but there can be a lot of heartaches."

Mrs. Gabler says that her efforts have not always brought warm greetings from publishers or even legislators. "I had one legislator ask me what right I thought I had to do what I did," she said. "I told him I had three rights: First, my

CRMWD water contract faces vote of councilmen

By BILLELDER
Staff Writer

A contract with the Colorado River Municipal Water District which would double the cost of water delivery to the city is expected to be voted on by the Big Spring City Council when it meets today at 6:30 p.m.

The water district's board of directors met earlier this month and approved the contract, basing the new rate on increased energy costs incurred by the district.

The new rate would be 13 cents for each thousand gallons of water delivered, compared with six cents under the old fee schedule.

Both of the other member cities in the water district — Odessa and Snyder — will feel the increase as well: Snyder will pay seven cents if it signs the contract, and Odessa 25 cents. The cost is determined by the distance of the city from the source of water.

In other action, the council will review a request from the federal government to return a grant totaling $29,310 which the city used to renovate a building on the north side of town. The city had planned to turn the building into a day care center.

But the center, which primarily would have served low-income families, never opened since an agency to run the center couldn't be found.

City housing chief Bill Hall has told the council in a memo that numerous organizations were contacted about running the center, which would have operated with federal subsidies for families using the facility.

Interest in operating the center dwindled after President Reagan began dismantling social aid programs and local agencies decided they couldn't run the center on a self-sufficient basis, Hall said.

The city elections will get their official start if the council passes an ordinance calling for the April 3 elections and designating the polling places.

Mayor Clyde Angel and councilmen Larry Miller and Robert Fuller face re-election this year. So far, Jerry Higgins is the only announced candidate to oppose any of the incumbents. All three incumbents have indicated they will try to retain their council seats.

The filing period for the races open Feb. 3. The deadline for getting on the ballot — and for registering to vote — is 30 days prior to the election.

City voters will vote at one of two polling places: the Northside Fire Station or the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

In other matters, the council is expected to give notice of the city's intention to sell approximately $1 million in airport revenue bonds. The bonds will finance the beginning of a major, $4.3 million relocation of the airport hangars and terminal building.

The council also is expected to sign an agreement with the Howard County Industrial Foundation. The foundation is constructing the first of three fixed-base-operator hangars which will be rebuilt at the airport. The city plans to buy the hangar from the foundation after it obtains revenue through the bond sale.

The council meets in room 205 of Big Spring City Hall, Fourth and Nolan.

Time marches on in computer fuss

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

County commissioners were told yesterday the computer time reportedly denied the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal District had been available but was refused by the appraisal office. During last week's tax appraisal board meeting, Ruth Mitchell of the appraisal office had said the office was unable to get the computer time the district had purchased.

Tax Assessor-Collector Dorothy Moore told the commissioners the computer was at the disposal of the appraisal office, but she understood the office was not prepared to use the time. She added that problems with computer time could not be blamed on anyone.

Wayne Bristow, the man responsible for operating and programming the county's computer, was at the commissioners' meeting to support Mrs. Moore's statements. Commissioners said representatives of the tax appraisal office needed to have been present at the meeting to offer their explanation of any problems. Moore said she was to meet with the appraisal office personnel today to work out a schedule.

In other computer action, Moore, Bristow and Bonnie Franklin, county treasurer, asked the commissioners to purchase a CRT printer for the treasurer's office, plus other equipment to increase the capabilities and access of the computer. Commissioners approved the purchase to be paid in installments of $1,000 a month.

Moore also was granted permission by the commissioners to request a self-addressed stamped envelope (SASE) be mailed in with all tax statements she mails out. She credited high postal costs as the reason for the request.

She noted more than half of the voter registration forms she mailed had been returned since they are not forwardable. Voters who have moved need to contact her office to ensure their eligibility to vote, she said.

In other action, commissioners agreed to accept responsibility for the old northside YMCA building in order to give the Howard County boxing team a place to work out. The commissioners took responsibility from the Big Spring Independent School District.

Commissioners also awarded two beds from the district court jury quarters to Frank Martinez at $50 each and the other beds to Eddie Owen at $32.50 each. Bids for the beds were opened by the county auditor on Friday. A manual typewriter was awarded to R.T. Bell for $10 also.

The resignation of county extension agent-home economics Janet Rogers was accepted by the commissioners effective April 30. Commissioners also approved a move to advertise for bids for a pick-up for the county extension agent's office following a request from agriculture extension agent Don Richardson.

County Extension Agent Janet Rogers

Janet Rogers, who announced her resignation as county extension agent home economics, said she is resigning because she and her husband, Don, have purchased a home in Midland County and have already moved into the home.

Mrs. Rogers said she has no immediate plans for a job in the Midland area and added, "I might take a vacation." Her husband is employed by WJC Engineering and Management, and independent oilfield company in Midland.

Mrs. Rogers has worked in the local extension office for more than five years and said she has enjoyed the work and meeting people. "It's gratifying because people come to seminars and activities because they are interested in what you're presenting," she said.

Roberta Johnson, district extension director of District 6 of Texas Agriculture Extension Service, will announce a replacement for Mrs. Rogers at a later date. Headquarters for the district is in Fort Stockton.

son belongs to me and my husband, not the state yet; second, we are taxpayers and we pay for the books; and third, we vote for you and give you your job," she said.

What in the textbooks does Mrs. Gabler object to? Because she and her husband call themselves conservative Christians, they may be best known for campaigns against sex education, evolution and secular humanism.

"You hear about that because that makes good headlines," she said. "Most of our concerns have to do with the simple lack of basics in education today."

In her talk Monday, Mrs. Gabler used several examples, including statistics that she says show illiteracy in the United States at an all-time high, first-grade readers that she says have deliberate misspellings and bad grammar ("They try to teach students that people talk in different ways," she said), and history books that she says leave out parts of American history.

"Of the American history books being used in Texas right now, Nathan Hale is not mentioned in any of them," she says. "Many people have been cheated by a lack of great stories in American history."

Mrs. Gabler was also critical of social studies texts that she claims deal with environmentalism and fire prevention, but have nothing about the American government.

"One book told students to compare the Communist Party structure in the Soviet Union with the American party structures. They had several pages describing the Communist Party, but none telling of the American political parties. The book told the children to call their local politicians. It explained the party structure in the very back of the book, but I was appalled," she said.

Other concerns Mrs. Gabler mentioned include first and second grade textbooks that she says don't give students any basic skills.

"You wouldn't believe what questions are asked in this one book for first graders," she said. "On one page they ask 'What are your feet for?' and then a few pages further they ask 'How much production is necessary to increase capital?'" she said. "They eventually get down to map skills, but after all that," she said.

She was also critical of books and novels used in class that she claims, have an over-emphasis on violence and dwell on the negative aspects of America.

"There is a lot of violence in the world," she said, "but we don't have to have it in classrooms all the time. Let's have something positive. We need to teach that there is something beautiful, that there are good points about life in America," she said.

Mrs. Gabler acknowledges that some people feel she is a threat. Critics say she and her husband are causing textbooks across the nation to be more conservative. Critics also say the couple's evaluation of textbooks are based more on opinions than on facts.

The Gablers in the past have been connected with censors and "book-burners," who are accused of censoring ideas and threatening religious freedom. Although in her talk Monday night Mrs. Gabler did not discuss secular humanism, sex education or evolution ("Those are more my husband's areas," she says), there were handouts available that dealt with these subjects.

When asked, Mrs. Gabler will give her views on those subjects, but they are not a part of her presentation. She says she believes sex education should not be taught in public schools. "I don't object to teaching them about the plumbing, but I object to illicit sex in textbooks," she says.

And creationism? "If you have two theories, why not put them both in," she says. "If evolution is left out, then my children's rights are being violated."

But Mrs. Gabler dismisses charges that she is a censor. "I cannot be a censor in Texas," she says. "The committee decides on the books. All I can do is have a voice."

Neither does she connect herself with organizations which petition to have certain books removed from public and school libraries. "Comparing the two of us is like comparing apples and oranges," she says. "We don't do that. That is a local matter."

Mrs. Gabler says most of the media treatment she and her husband have received has been fair. "60 Minutes" did a piece on us that was very good, very favorable," she says. She was also pleased with articles in Time and People magazines.

The Gablers have been the subjects of documentaries by the British and French broadcasting companies. She said the Japanese Broadcasting Company is doing a film on their work. "It's very interesting how that came about," she says. The Japanese feel that their traditional values are being threatened by the textbooks. Their government is working on a schoolbook adoption process.

Mrs. Gabler completed her visit Monday by urging parents to take more of an interest in their children's education. "If you have a beef," she says, "don't wait until Johnny brings the book home. Every parent should read at least one textbook," she says.

"Do what we do," she says. "We don't go on summer vacations, we read textbooks."

Teachers of Texas history are to be recognized today in conjunction with the 183rd birthday of Mirabeau Bonaparte Lamar, one of "the heroes of Texas history."

But according to Bernard Rains, a teacher at Big Spring High School and one of four Big Spring teachers to be recognized, a birthday celebration today for Lamar may be a little premature.

"Today is supposed to be his birthday," Rains told the Herald today. But through research on his part, he said, "I found his birthday to be in August."

Nevertheless, Lamar is still a Texas "hero," Rains said. He is credited with establishing the Texas public school education system.

Lamar holds the title of "the father of Texas education."

Lamar was the second president of the Republic of Texas. He held the position during 1838 to 1841. During that time, he set up land for public schools to use, and helped co-ordinate a financial system for the schools.

Lamar began his political career as Sam Houston's vice-president. He then ran for the presidency of the Republic of Texas and won. Four history teachers within the Big Spring school system will be recognized today. They are Rains, and three Goliad Middle School teachers, DeWayne Wallace, Ben Neel and Aubrey Todd.

A statewide proclamation noting today as Teachers of Texas History Day was signed by Gov. Bill Clements.

The commemoration locally is being co-ordinated by the Howard County Historical Commission. Certificates will be distributed to local teachers through the Commission. Texas history is a required subject for seventh graders in the state school system. "All Texas high schools offer Texas history as an elective," Rains added.

Reagan to address nation tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will tell Congress and the American people tonight that he will not seek higher taxes, but that the states will have to take over approximately 40 federal programs, well-placed sources say.

Reagan summoned Republican congressional leaders to a White House meeting this morning to begin rounding up the help that will be crucial to passing the program he will outline in his State of the Union speech.

The address, to a joint session of the House and Senate, and a nationwide television and radio audience, is to begin at 8 p.m. CST.

"When you turn on the TV, you'll get a heavy dose of budget economics and the president's hopes to legislatively implement his program: federalism initiatives, and a brief overview of foreign policy with some stern words toward intervention in the Western Hemisphere and stern words about Poland," said one White House official.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the president is weighing a criticism "in straight-forward terms" of Soviet arms shipments to Cuba.

At the heart of the president's budget deliberations were projections that without additional spending cuts or new taxes, the federal deficit would balloon to more than $100 billion in fiscal 1983, which begins next Oct. 1.

"We're balancing a sizable deficit on one side vs. tax increases on the other," said one White House official.

One plan to increase federal excise taxes on whiskey, wine, gasoline and tobacco products was said to have been calculated to raise enough money to hold the deficit to $80 billion.

Sponsor sheets available for local Marathon Walk

Sponsor sheets for the Marathon Walk scheduled Sunday by the Immaculate Heart of Mary School are available now at the Immaculate Heart of March School and Church, 1009 Hearn.

According to Sister Lucy, principal of the school, the 11 mile walk will begin at Highland Mall and go west on FM 700 to Highway 80, east on 4th Street through town to FM 700 east, then returning to Highland Mall.

Sister Lucy said all walkers, joggers, hikers and runners of any age, male and female, are invited to participate in the walk.

Check-in time for the marathon will be at 1 p.m. Sunday at the Highland Mall. Starting time is 2 p.m.

Prizes will be awarded to the walker completing eleven miles in several categories. They are fastest time, most money, most pledges, oldest participant and youngest participant.

The marathon will be the first in a series of events in conjunction with National Catholic Education Week, Jan. 31 through Feb. 6.

Sister Lucy explained that the National Catholic Education Association is supporting National Catholic Education Week across the county. Various schools are choosing various ways to observe the week.

Sister Lucy said she chose the marathon to kick-off the week in part because of a similar event last year.

During last year's marathon, Sister Lucy said she saw "the most beautiful spirit" displayed by people in the community toward the marathon.

"They all got behind us," Sister Lucy said of community interest.

Theme of National Catholic Education Week this year is "The Good News" in Catholic education.

At Chamber banquet 1981 Man and Woman of Year to be named

The Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce will be staging its annual banquet Saturday at 7 p.m. in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. Highlighting the event will be the naming of the Chamber's 1981 Man and Woman of the Year awards.

Keynote speaker for this year's banquet will be Micael Brown, former anchorman and reporter for WFAA television in Dallas.

Approximately 18 months ago, Brown left television to form his own company and he now works almost exclusively as a professional speaker.

Brown has interviewed more than 5,000 people on television ranging from three U.S. presidents to convicted felons in prison.

Many of his speeches are comprised of both humorous and interesting events which occurred during his work in television.

$2,000 missing from wallet

One minute it's there, the next... gone.

J.M. Aleman of 411 N.W. Eighth told police yesterday that $2,000 disappeared from his wallet while he was at home on the night of Jan. 20.

C.A. Smauley of 1000 Howell told police that either on Sunday night or Monday morning someone took two fender covers and hubcaps from his Cadillac automobile while it was parked at his home. • Alfred Patton of 810 Andree told police he was assaulted by someone he knows at a gas station on West Third around 10 a.m. yesterday.

• Cindy Hill of Lubbock told police tapes and cigarettes worth $146 were stolen from her car in the 1600 block of East Third at about 4:33 p.m. yesterday.

Floyd fined after plea

During jury selection in county court today, Travis Floyd, who was expected to go to trial for assault, entered a plea of nolo contendere, or no contest, to the charge of assault.

Floyd was fined $100 and $71 court costs by County Judge Bill Tune. Prosecution for the county was to have been handled by Martin County Attorney Robert Morris. Floyd was represented by Jack Thompson.

Floyd had been charged in the Nov. 13, 1981 assault of his wife Claudene Floyd at the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center. The Floyds have since been divorced.

Howard County attorney Bob Miller said the selection of the jury today was not just for the Floyd case but that several cases were up for trial today. He said the actual process of selecting a jury had led many defendants to enter pleas before "judge."

NIGHT VIEW — This is a time exposure of the Ginna Nuclear Power Plant located in Ontario, Wayne County. An Ontario Sheriff stops traffic from entering the area around the plant. The plant was closed this morning after a pipe broke containing radioactive water. Steam is shown being released from the plant which is part of the cool down process.

Workers return to N-plant

ONTARIO, N.Y. (AP) — Workers began returning to the Ginna nuclear plant today after an emergency shutdown that was ordered when a pipe failure released puffs of radioactive steam into the atmosphere.

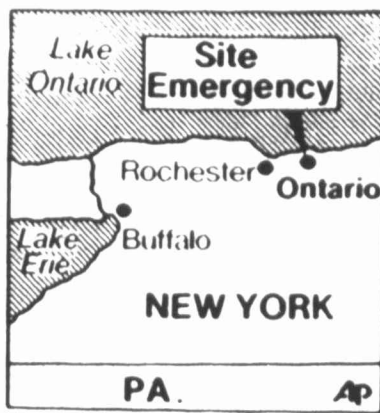

A spokesman for Rochester Gas & Electric Co., the plant's owner, said temperatures and pressures in the reactor gradually were lowered overnight by venting to 340 degrees and 340 pounds per square inch. That figure was low enough to allow most workers to return to the plant site at this small village, 16 miles northeast of Rochester.

"We're still cooling down in the conventional mode," said the spokesman, Richard Peck. "We could have switched over to the plant's residual cooling system at 350 degrees (but) this is the way our operators wanted to do it."

Peck said that by later today the plant should reach a cold shutdown — dissipation of most heat in the reactor. "It'll be pretty much normal operations," he said.

Cleanup of 11,000 gallons of radioactive water inside the plant, and examination of the steam generator will await cold shutdown, he said.

"We are convinced the plant is safe," said RG&E vice president John Oberlies. "Things at the plant are progressing very well. We know it is stable."

A "site emergency" was declared Monday shortly after one or more of the 3,260 tubes in the generator ruptured at 9:28 a.m. and pressure in the reactor dropped. Status was downgraded to "alert" 10 hours later. A "site emergency" is the second most serious of four nuclear emergency classifications. "Alert" is one step lower.

"Everything worked; that's the real story," said RG&E education specialist Frank H. Orient. "All the systems operated the way they were supposed to. Nobody was hurt or killed."

Officials at the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in Washington described the incident as minor, although it was the first "site emergency" since the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident at Three Mile Island near Harrisburg, Pa., in March 1979.

"It might be expensive for the operator to clean up, but in terms of public health consequences, it was not very serious," said Harold R. Denton, the agency's director of nuclear reactor regulation.

The 470-megawatt pressurized water reactor, which opened in 1969, is on Lake Ontario. About 45,000 people live within 10 miles.

Oberlies emphasized Monday's releases of radioactivity were minor, but noted that five workers had been exposed to trace levels of radiation. All went home after showering or wiping off with a cloth.

Radiation was released in a series of five-second puffs totaling three minutes within a one-hour period after the rupture, officials said. RG&E checked for radiation outside the plant, but Oberlies said late Monday. "We are convinced there are no health problems."

Rex Cauble testifies today

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Attorneys for Rex Cauble say the millionaire will testify today in his defense against charges he financed and profited from an elaborate marijuana smuggling scheme nicknamed the "Cowboy Mafia."

"I would welcome the opportunity to testify," Cauble, 67, said Monday.

The rancher has said all along he wants to tell his version of events in 1977 and 1978 at prosecutors allege linked the rancher to an operation that used shrimp boats to smuggle 106 tons of marijuana from Colombia into Texas.

Defense lawyers opened their case Monday in the rancher's trial on federal racketeering, conspiracy and embezzlement charges. Court sources said they expect the defense to rest as early as this afternoon.

Convicted drug smuggler James Holland testified Monday that Cauble was not involved in the smuggling ring and that he would have known if Cauble was.

Holland also said he did not believe Cauble knew smugglers used his ranches to stash the marijuana.

Assistant U.S. Attorney David Baugh questioned Holland about a statement the witness had given implicating Cauble in the smuggling operation.

Holland said he made the statement under duress immediately following his arrest in November of 1978.

"That was a lie. Today, I am not lying," Holland said.

He said Cauble's ranch foreman, Charles "Muscles" Foster arranged for trucks, drivers, offload sites and stash sites for at least four smuggling ventures.

Foster pleaded innocent by reason of insanity and was acquitted in 1980.

Prosecutors contend Foster financed several marijuana trips with money he received in loans arranged by Cauble. But Holland testified the ring was funded by smugglers and not by Foster or Cauble.

Holland said he declined "the same deal" to testify against Cauble that prosecutors offered convicted drug trafficker Raymond Eugene Hawkins.

Hawkins, who pleaded guilty to charges of possession and distribution of marijuana, said he was allowed to keep his ranch valued at $1 million and was promised leniency if he testified for the prosecution.

Hawkins is the only witness who has testified that he knew of Cauble's involvement in the scheme.

Holland said Hawkins, a man who he has known for 20 years, was a liar who often "ripped people off."

Prosecutors contend Cauble loaned Foster thousands of dollars to set up a restaurant and shrimp business as fronts for the smuggling venture.

But Holland testified Foster had intended to go into the shrimp business and had repeatedly told the smugglers never to tell Cauble about the marijuana operation.

"He had us more worried about Mr. Cauble finding out than we were worried about the police catching us," Holland said.

Kremlin's top ideologist dies

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail Andreyevich Suslov, the Kremlin's top ideologist, has died at age 79, his office said today.

A Soviet source said Suslov, a member of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo, died of unspecified heart trouble.

There had been rumors of Suslov's ill-health for the past year but he was seen recently riding in his Politburo limousine. The car always traveled Moscow streets slowly with Suslov sitting ramrod straight in a jumpseat because of a spinal problem.

He was last reported on publicly when he met with Polish Foreign Minister Jozef Czerwinski earlier this month in Moscow.

Suslov, sometimes known as the "red professor," was responsible for preserving Marxist doctrine.

But in the private circles where he operated behind the towering brick walls of the Kremlin, he may have counted as much as a kingmaker as an ideologist.

Suslov gave few speeches and was rarely seen by his countrymen. Yet, on those few occasions when the lanky, white-haired ideologue appeared in public, he was usually at the side of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev. That was illustrative of the important role he played.

It was Suslov, a peasant's son from southern Russia, who appeared to be the No. 2 man in the late days of Nikita S. Khrushchev's rule, and Suslov who, in 1964, evidently orchestrated the house revolt that led to Khrushchev's ouster and Brezhnev's rise to power.

As the story was told then by reliable Communist sources, Suslov met Brezhnev after he returned from East Berlin on Oct. 11, 1964, and told Brezhnev it was necessary for him to move against Khrushchev.

According to the same version, the top party leaders then met twice without Khrushchev, and, three days later, Suslov delivered a lengthy speech to the Communist Party Central Committee successfully making the case that Khrushchev's failures could no longer be tolerated.

Khrushchev was removed; Brezhnev was installed as party secretary. Alexei N. Kosygin became premier and Nikolai V. Podgorny president.

Suslov, as was his habit, returned to the political backstage.

GTE to seek $110 million rate increase

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The president of General Telephone Co. says the company will ask for a $110 million rate hike this week, but he's not saying what that would mean to monthly phone bills.

E.L. Langley announced the rate hike request Monday. He said GTE, which serves about 300 Texas cities, would file the request Friday with the Public Utility Commission.

"The expanding service needs of customers, continued rapid growth, inflation, a changing regulatory environment, the need to modernize facilities and the need for acceptable earnings sufficient to attract investors all contribute to the need for additional revenues," Langley said in a statement.

Information about specific increases for the varying services offered by GTE will not be announced until Friday, Langley said.

Last year PUC granted a $2 million increase for GTE, which asked for $43. That increase meant no hike for most basic services. The commission also ordered a $4 million penalty for poor service.

The penalty was lifted earlier this month when commissioners were satisfied that GTE service had improved.

Langley said less than $43 million of the requested increase would be proposed for basic monthly service.

GTE, the state's second biggest phone company, is based in San Angelo.

Freon fumes kill three sailors on ship

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Two sailors on security patrol "keeled over" dead and a comrade who tried to help them also was killed when they came into contact with fumes from a Freon leak aboard a guided-missile cruiser, the Navy said.

Six other sailors aboard the USS Bainbridge who rushed in to help also were overcome but survived and were hospitalized, the Navy said. A seventh sailor was treated after being overcome while trying to administer mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to one of the victims.

The deaths and injuries occurred Monday evening in the forward air-conditioning plant of the Bainbridge, the nation's first guided-missile frigate. The 565-foot-long, 20-year-old vessel was docked at the 32nd Street Naval Station here.

The deaths initially were attributed to cardiac arrest, although autopsies were planned for today, said Navy spokesman Jim McDonough.

The guards entered the area on patrol about 5:30 p.m. PST and "keeled over," McDonough said. A sailor working part-time for a civilian contractor saw the men pass out and, attempting to rescue them, passed out out himself from the deadly odorless vapor.

The three died shortly after arrival at Balboa Naval Hospital, McDonough said.

The seven survivors were in stable condition today at Balboa after a night of observation, he said.

The names of the victims were withheld pending notification of relatives.

The Bainbridge has a crew of 470. Its missiles provide defense for carrier battle groups.

Bond increased in cheerleader slaying case

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Wesley Wayne Miller's bond on a murder charge was quadrupled — from $25,000 to $100,000 — partly out of fear for Miller's life, said the magistrate who raised the amount.

Justice of the Peace Morris Howeth said he hiked the bond Monday after receiving complaints from "angry and scared" residents and at least two anonymous threats on Miller's life.

Miller is charged with murder in the stabbing death of a classmate and former cheerleader, Retha Stratton.

Miller, 19, and Miss Stratton, 18, were seniors last year at Castleberry High School on the city's north side. Her partially clad body, with 38 stab wounds, was found by her roommate last Thursday.

Police said Miller also is a "strong suspect" in three recent sexual assaults in the area, including the rape of another former Castleberry cheerleader. No charges have been filed in those cases, however.

Howeth said he has "received some calls from people expressing concern about what would happen if he (Miller) got back on the streets. I got to looking at some of the cases ... in this court and I decided the bond in this case was too low in comparison."

Howeth said he also became concerned about Miller's safety after receiving the two anonymous telephone calls. One of the callers said, "If he (Miller) gets out, he's a dead man," the peace justice related.

"These people are angry and scared," Howeth said.

Miller was arrested at his suburban Saginaw home Saturday after neighbors told police they saw Miller's pickup near Miss Stratton's house about the time of the killing.

Police said Miller had given them a statement, and investigators said they also recovered physical evidence linking Miller to the slaying. However, preliminary lab tests to reveal whether Miss Stratton was sexually assaulted were inconclusive, police said.

Police described Miller as a "clean-cut" spurned suitor whose motive was "sexual."

Miss Stratton was buried Monday. If tests reveal she was raped, the charges against Miller can be raised, under state law, to capital murder.

"Should the case be upgraded to capital murder," said Howeth, "I would probably hold him without bond."

He said his telephone "had been ringing off the wall Monday."

"Everybody wants to hang him right now," Howeth said.

In suburban River Oaks on Monday, L.G. Perkins, a criminal investigation division officer, said he had talked with Miller and considered him a suspect in the two recent rapes there.

And in Saginaw, Police Chief Gene Springer said Miller was a "very strong suspect" in the Nov. 11 rape of a 19-year-old former Boswell High School student.

Brown wins endorsement

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown has won the endorsement of a national senior citizens' group, and opponent Jim Hightower says Brown can have it.

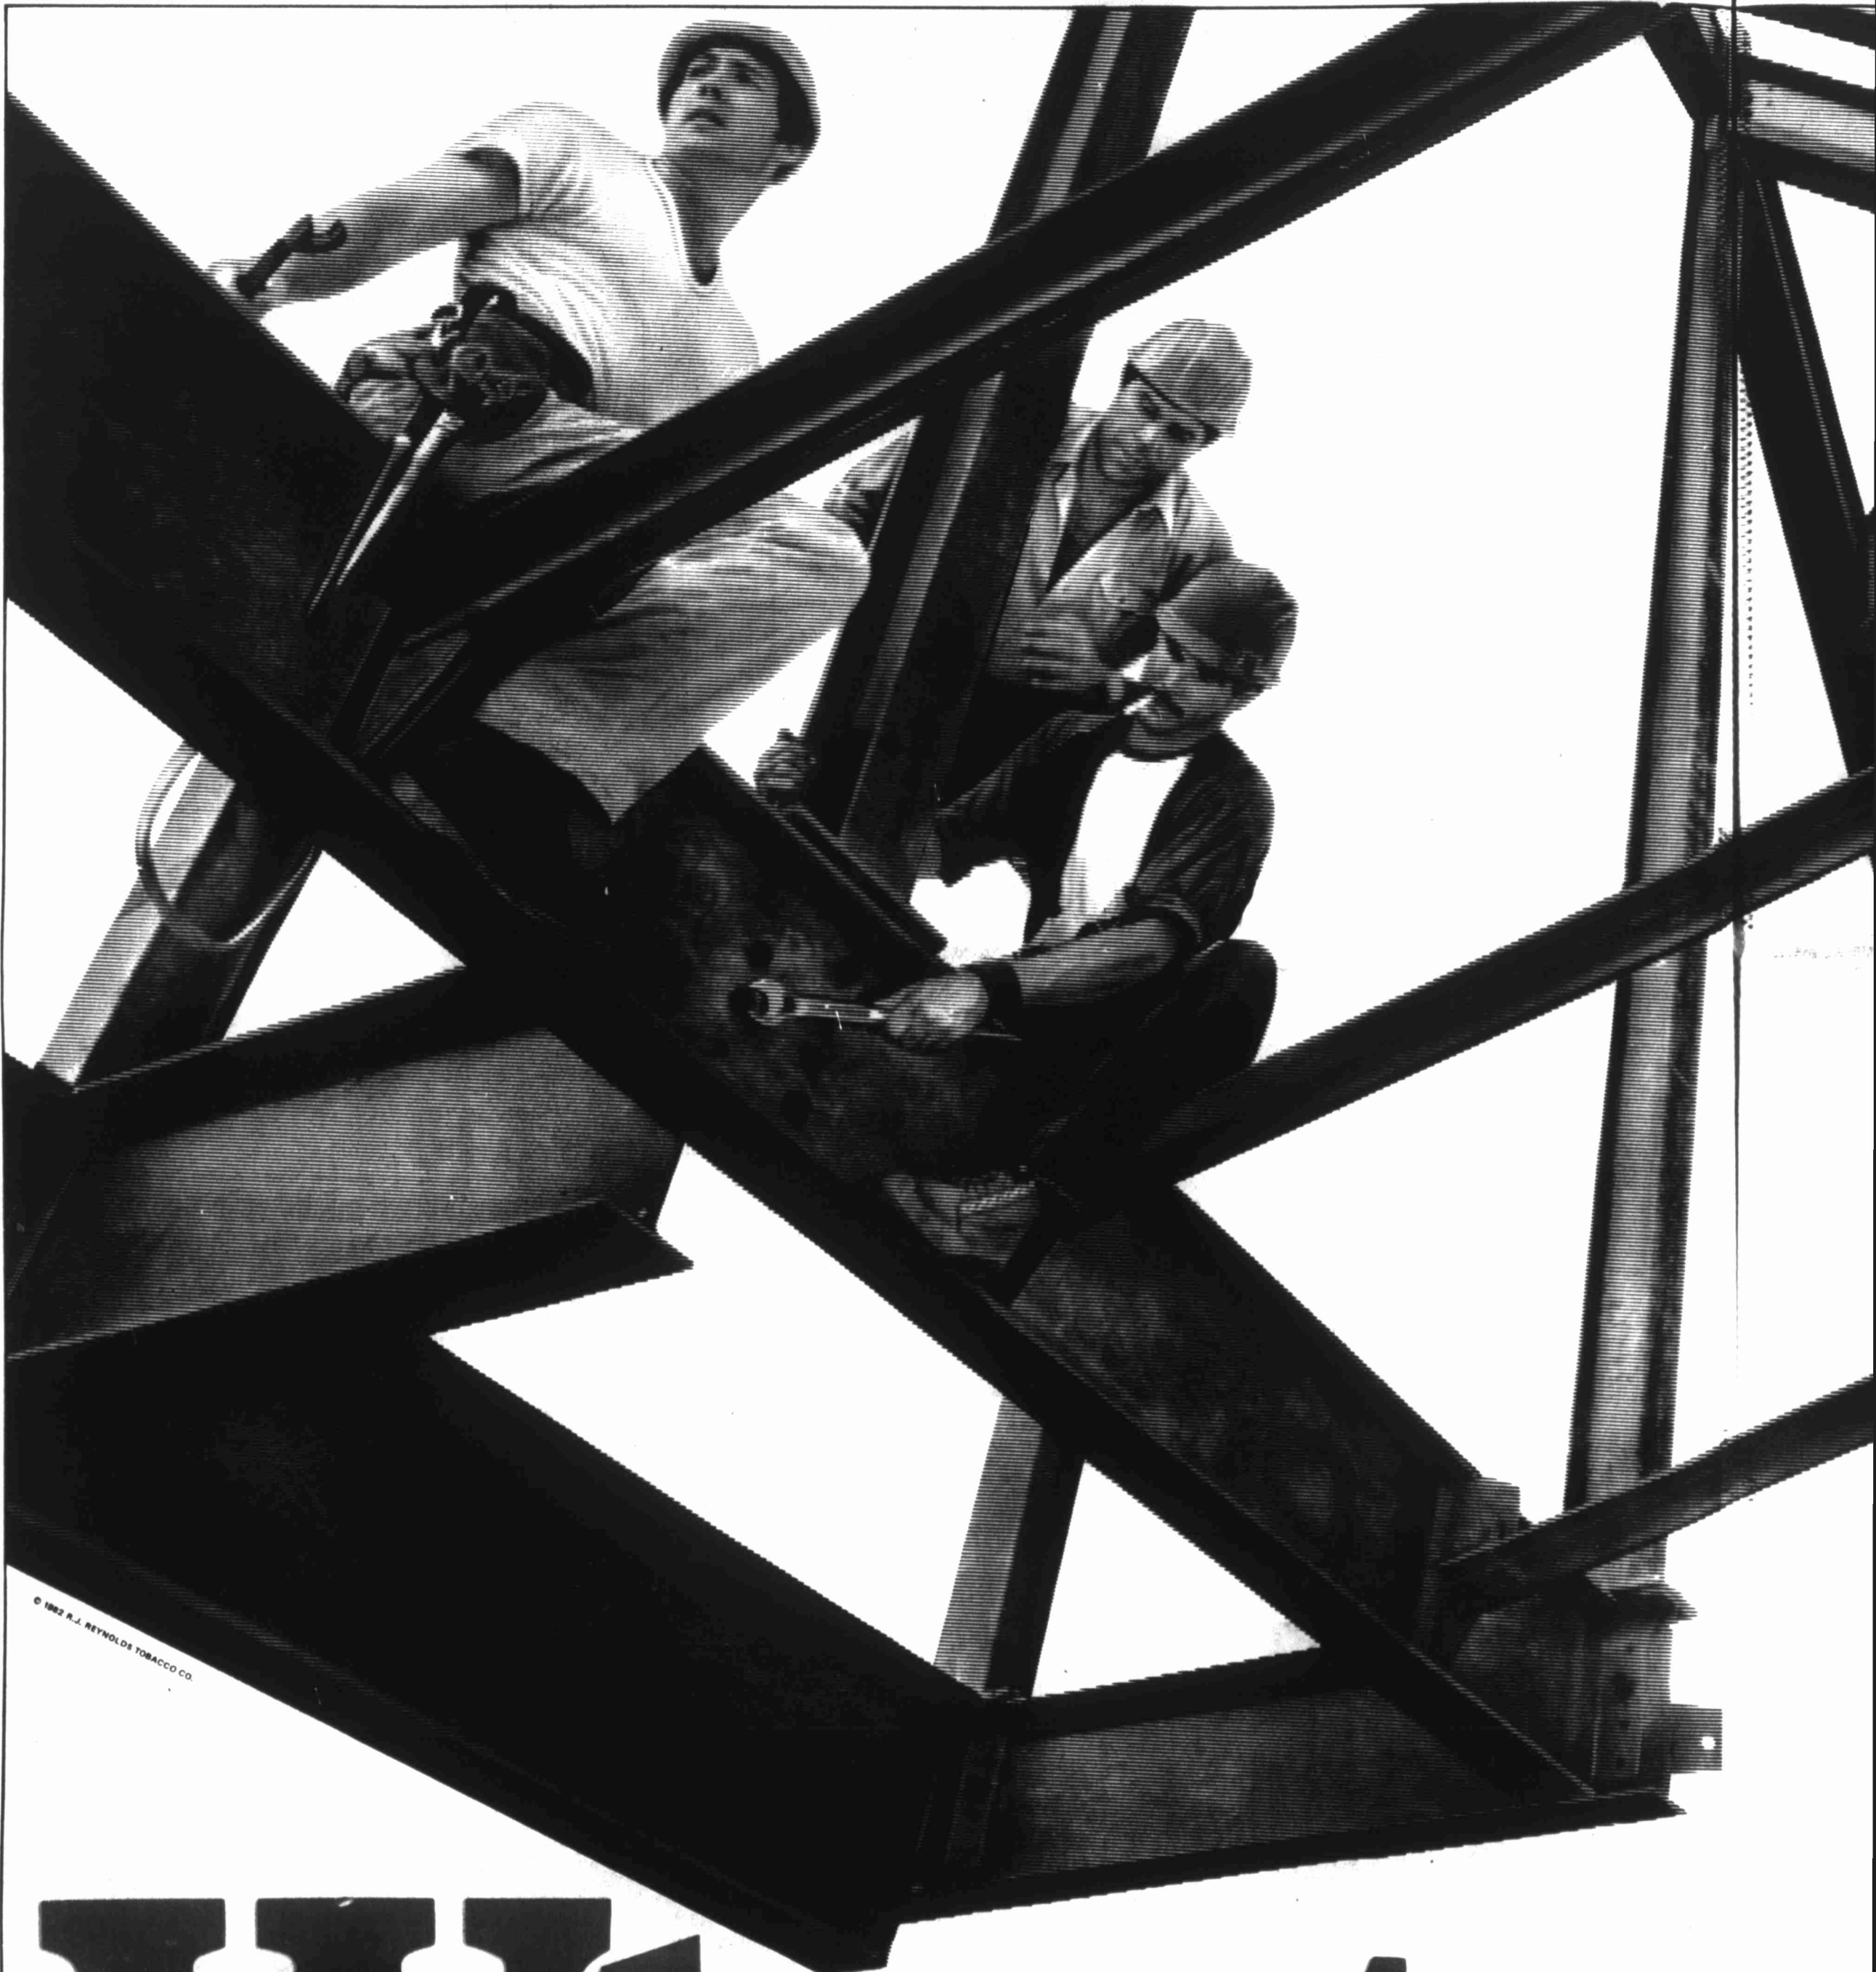

The National Alliance of Senior Citizens, along with other senior citizens' groups, announced Monday its backing of Brown for re-election.

The NASC endorsement was made in a letter from its director, Curt Clinkscales, who called Brown "a frontrunner in the development of programs to help reach those older citizens in need of help in Texas."

Brown and Hightower are the only announced candidates for the Democratic nomination for agriculture commissioner.

Clinkscales is one of five members of the national board of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, a Virginia-based organization which pushes conservative candidates.

Kristy Ozmun, Hightower's campaign manager, said "it's common knowledge that the NASC is a sham, it's an out-of-state front group that was set up just a few years ago by the same people that are behind NC-PAC."

Most 'Boll Weevils' oppose raising taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Sam B. Hall Jr. emerged from a meeting of the Conservative Democratic Forum and said the soaring national deficit is on everybody's mind.

But while all his "Boll Weevil" colleagues would like to cut the deficit, few of them like the idea of raising taxes to do it, the Texas Democrat from Marshall said Monday.

"What I've been hearing from my district is that the people don't want any more taxes of any kind," he said, including proposed increases in taxes on cigarettes, liquor and gasoline.

Hall and others who sat in on the 1½-hour meeting in the office of Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., said their next step depends upon what President Reagan proposes in his annual State of the Union address Tuesday night.

"I'm not in favor of those 'sin' taxes, and I don't think the president is going to ask for them," Hall added. "But I'm waiting to see what the president says, and what the Democratic alternative to it is, if any. There's a lot of speculation right now, but no one really knows what he's going to do."

Both Hall and the CDF chairman, Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, of Stamford, said budget cuts likely will come from defense, although most of the Boll Weevils have supported stronger defense spending.

"We can make some more cuts and still not hurt the thrust of what we're trying to do."

Stenholm said the defense budget should be looked at "with the same budget scalpel that's being applied to everything else."

Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, of College Station said he is anxiously awaiting Reagan's address. The Democratic sponsor of Reagan's bipartisan budget bill last year said he is willing to look at excise taxes, loopholes, users' fees or other ways to raise more revenue.

Stenholm said, however, that he's "having great difficulty getting very excited about another tax that could be perceived as another tax on the little guy. I just don't think we should be raising taxes during a recession."

Of the 47 CDF members, 23 attended, including six of Texas' eight Boll Weevils — all but Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, and Rep. Jack Hightower, D-Vernon.

Stenholm said no one spoke out for delaying the 10 percent income tax cuts planned for next July 1 and for July 1, 1983 as a way of cutting the deficit — a proposal advanced late last year by Hance, the Democratic sponsor of Reagan's bipartisan tax cut legislation.

"There is a strong feeling that the program we passed last year needs additional time before it is changed. I don't think anyone is arguing that it has been successful, but it has not been in effect long enough to be termed a failure," Stenholm said.

Stenholm called the gathering "a preliminary meeting to decide the direction we're going." He said the group agreed on meetings between CDF leaders and congressional, executive and economic officials to work out its stand.

"I found a tremendous amount of agreement that once we see the budget figures from the president and any counter-proposals that the Democratic leadership may have, we are going to want to be very highly involved with the direction things go in keeping the deficit as low as possible," Stenholm said.

"About the only thing we totally agreed on was that it's going to be a long, tough year," said Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Texas, of Marlin. Leath added, "We'd like to have more input in the leadership. Hopefully, we'll be able to get more people to listen to us now than at the same time last year."

Montgomery said the group's top priority is to work within the framework of the Democratic Party, and he and others are seeking meetings with the party leadership to agree on a policy.

"That's always been our priority, since the day we founded this group (14 months ago)," Montgomery said.

THE PRESIDENT'S pledge to reduce the bureaucracy by 75,000 at the end of fiscal year 1984 sounds drastic. But that's three years from now, and the normal turn-over of federal workers is more than 75,000 every year. In other words, the President can keep his pledge without firing anyone if one out of every three bureaucrats who quits or retires is not replaced.

Dear Abby

Responsibility is shared equally

DEAR ABBY: I am a female student at Purdue. A male student and I have been having a discussion, and we can't agree on several points. May we have your opinion?

1. Should the male or female assume the responsibility of contraception in a relationship?
2. If the female assumes the responsibility but she becomes pregnant, either by accident or negligence, how much responsibility does the male then have?
3. If the girl becomes pregnant, who has the right to decide whether she should have an abortion?

NO NAME, PLEASE
DEAR NO NAME: 1. The responsibility should be shared equally by both parties.

2. Regardless of the circumstances, the male shares equally in the responsibility.

3. The girl should consider the male's wishes, but if they can't agree, the final decision should be hers. It's her body.

DEAR ABBY: You told "Born in Illinois" that her children were "technically 100 percent American, but the percentage of Italian blood in the veins of her children is one-quarter."

Abby, for nearly 50 years I have tried to get people to see themselves as Americans, not hyphenates. There is no such thing as "Italian blood," one-quarter or otherwise. Blood has no Italianess or Irishness or Frenchness. Blood has only life, so let's begin to see people as people, four-quarters' worth all the time.

Girl worries about breast cancer

Dear Mr. Donohue: I am 13 years old. I haven't gotten my menstrual periods yet. I've just started to develop. For a long time I've had a question I've wanted to ask. It's not exactly the kind of question you ask at the dinner table.

I think I might have breast cancer. I know very little about this disease. I don't think anyone in the family has ever had breast cancer. I'm really scared. Can you get breast cancer at 10, 11, 12 or 13? I've seen a little on TV about this, and they talk about a lump in the breast. I think I have that. Is that normal in such an age, since I'm still developing? I've stayed up many nights scared I might die of breast cancer. — Really Scared!

Breast cancer is almost never found in women under the age of 25. Before a young girl begins to menstruate, the breasts begin to develop. As part of early development, there is a core of firm tissue that can be felt. That is a normal prepubertal change that indicates the breasts are developing and that the menstrual periods are about to begin.

You're right. This may not be the kind of question you want to ask at dinner. But it should be asked. Start with your mother. If she cannot reassure you, then she can have you see your family doctor or your school nurse. But you shouldn't stay awake at night worrying about it for fear of asking.

no difference between the blood of an Italian and the blood of an Irishman, or any other human; it's just a figure of speech to denote what percentage of that person's heritage is Italian or Irish. However, your point is well taken, so let's not draw any blood over it.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "Not Cheap But Fair," who didn't believe in tipping waitresses just because it was expected, has prompted me to say, "Bless your wonderful father, Abby, for tipping generously when times were tough."

As a grown-up daughter of a waitress, I can say that all those tips that people like your father gave my mother 20 years ago fed, clothed and housed three hungry children. Our father was rarely in the picture and we had no food stamps, no welfare — nothing but Mom, who worked as a waitress. She'd come home tired, with sore and aching feet, and prepare dinner with groceries bought with the tips she'd earned that day. On days when someone had been especially generous, we had something special like an ice cream cone for dessert.

So thanks to all the generous tippers out there. There are still a lot of women who, as your late father said, "are working hard to make an honest living."

Forget your fears of fading after 40

Forget your fear of fading at 40 (and over). There's no reason not to look fabulous. Take a tip or two from top health and beauty experts on hairstyles, make up and fashions for women 40 and over.

• Few women over 40 should keep their hair long or straight. Both styles exaggerate downward lines.

• Chin length hair is long enough, either all one length or layered. Avoid hairstyles that are too big, wild and free.

• Choose necklines carefully. As you get older, neck and chest skin can sag and wrinkle. So, pick soft collars, small cowl necks. Victorian ruffled collars. If you want to show some skin, you can always fill in with jewelry.

• Since one of the first places that goes to flab is the upper arms, consider covering them with long, loose sleeves or short — but not snug — sleeves. If you have bare dress or tops, take along a shawl or jacket to cover up with on occasion.

• Don't fall into the basic-black-and-somber color syndrome. Live up your looks with brights and pastels. The brights perk up neutrals beautifully (try a turquoise blouse with a conservative brown suit.) Pastels, especially those in the peach and rose families, are feminine and flattering.

• Less is best is a good overall rule to follow regarding makeup. Keep it light — light handed, light-textured, light-hued. Too-heavy makeup draws attention to flaws.

• Subtle eye colors are a must if lids are a bit droopy or crepey. Choose neutral tones — like taupe, brown, gray or slate blue — in cake shadows. Other flattering colors include soft warm brown, violet, muted blue or green. Apply over the lids with light, upward strokes. Put the most emphasis at the outer corners.

• Start making up this way: Apply moisturizer to damp skin, then use a flesh-tone concealer, a couple of shades lighter than your foundation, to "lift out" hollows in the corners of the nose, in the lines from nose to mouth, in the indentations at inside corners of eyes.

Former TDC director recommends one prison for retarded inmates

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mentally retarded convicts need a separate prison in which they can live, work and be protected from other inmates, according to a former director of the Texas Department of Corrections.

TDC records show 14 percent of its more than 30,000 inmates have IQs below 70.

George Beto, TDC director from 1962 through 1972, said the retarded convicts' unit should be different from existing maximum security prisons.

"They should not be living in tanks, or as they are euphemistically called — dormitories," he said.

Beto is a member of Gov. Bill Clements' task force on mentally retarded inmates, which met for the first time Monday.

Estimates of the number of retarded inmates vary. Task force member Harry Whittington of Austin, a member of the Texas Board of Corrections, said 14 percent of the inmates were found to be "mentally inferior," scoring below 70 in an IQ test given at TDC.

"They are unable to defend themselves in the criminal justice system and after they get to TDC," Whittington said. The retarded inmates also have trouble in the parole process.

Dr. Jimmy Shaddock, TDC's director of mental health services, said the IQ tests given incoming inmates are inaccurate because many inmates do not cooperate.

About 75 percent of the inmates identified as mentally retarded were shown, by retests, to have IQs above 70, said Dr. Michael Pugh, director of TDC's new program for mentally retarded inmates.

Beto predicted the number of retarded inmates will climb as Texas becomes a more urban state.

Former officer pleads guilty in brutality case in McAllen

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Former McAllen policeman Roberto Ramos said he pleaded guilty to a police brutality charge to spare his family the anguish of a second trial.

Ramos entered the guilty plea Monday, a week after a federal jury deadlocked, 10-2, for convicting him on the misdemeanor charge of ordering subordinates to beat a prisoner.

He was scheduled to be retried Feb. 2 before U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela.

Special Prosecutor Enrique Romero of the U.S. Justice Department in Washington recommended five years of unsupervised probation for Ramos. As part of the plea bargain, Romero stipulated that Ramos not seek law enforcement employment for five years.

Vela at first refused to accept the plea when Ramos said he was not admitting guilt, but was trying to spare his family future publicity.

"I admit I was there (at the scene) but I don't recollect what happened," Ramos said. However, Vela later accepted the plea.

The judge is not bound by the plea bargain and said he would allow Ramos to withdraw his plea if the judge rejects the government recommendation. Vela set sentencing for Feb. 26.

The maximum punishment is one year in prison and a $1,000 fine for the charge of violating a person's civil rights under color of law.

The 33-year-old defendant resigned in September at the rank of lieutenant. He works as an investigator for the law firm defending him on the charges.

Ramos said Ramos' lawyers inquired last week about working out a plea bargain.

Ramos was a police sergeant on Sept. 24, 1977, when Rene Escamilla was arrested following a high speed chase from the scene of a reported nightclub disturbance.

Escamilla, who testified he was drunk and trying to outrun three patrol units, sped off a freeway and into an open field in San Juan, five miles from McAllen.

A San Juan policeman, Leonel Saldana, testified he walked over to where Escamilla was being held and saw officers striking the prisoner. Saldana swore he heard Ramos yell in Spanish, "Beat him. I can't because I have too many lawsuits pending."

At the time, Ramos and several other officers were named defendants in a series of police brutality suits filed by the American Civil Liberties Union. The ACLU has filed 11 suits against individual officers, the police department, the city of McAllen and city officials.

The suits allege a pattern of brutality, especially on the late night patrol shift, which was either sanctioned or ignored by higher officials.

Evidence used at one ACLU suit included videotape recordings of officers processing prisoners at the station booking desk. Some of the episodes showed officers beating and kicking handcuffed prisoners.

The tapes were viewed by the grand jury which indicted Ramos and four other former officers. The others, charged in two separate incidents, will be tried in two weeks before a federal magistrate.

Prosecutors hope to use the videotapes at the upcoming trials. Portions of the recordings were aired on network news programs and a nationally syndicated talk show.

Take over WJCAC lead

Queens win, 75-51

The Howard College Hawk Queens warmed up to the soul sounds of the Gap Band prior to Monday night's showdown with Amarillo College. The group's chart-topper "Burn Rubber" later provided the theme for the battle of the leaders of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference.

Under the floor leadership of Kelli Mull and the hot shooting of Nell Haskins and Pam Roberson, the Hawk Queens left the Lady Badgers in their tracks in the second half to claim a runaway 75-51 victory in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The win boosted Howard College into first place with a 5-1 WJCAC record and an overall 16-6 mark. The loss dropped Amarillo to 4-2 and 13-8.

"It was our best game of the year, both offensively and defensively," said coach Don Stevens. "Our defense was the whole thing... but our offense wasn't bad either."

The offense certainly wasn't bad as Haskins tossed in 22 points and Roberson chipped in 19 more.

The Hawk Queens got off to a slow start, trailing most of the first half until Haskins hit a basket with 7:59 left before intermission to the game at 13. From that point, Howard College did indeed "burn rubber."

Ahead 31-23 at halftime, Haskins and Roberson engineered a scoring spurt that propelled the Hawk Queens into a 20-point lead, 47-27, with 13 minutes left. That lead grew as large as 27 points at one point when Melissa Luna dropped in a shot off a rebound to make it 67-40.

Stevens was then able to clear his bench and get all his players into the game.

The Hawk Queens attack was guided by the smooth ball-handling of Mull who consistently broke through and around Amarillo's fullcourt pressure. When she didn't have the ball, it was usually in the hands of Roberson who galloped away from the pack on several occasions with steals that she turned into easy layups.

Amarillo never got untracked in the second half. Defensive pressure from the Hawk Queens produced turnovers and once the Lady Badgers fell behind, their shot selection dropped off.

Susan Cordell, a 6-6 freshman, scored just eight points for Howard College, but more importantly she kept her 6-2 opponent Nancy Kocurek under wraps the entire game. Kocurek, scoring almost 14 points a game, got only four Monday night.

Both teams had trouble getting started but once Haskins tied the game 13-13, the Hawk Queens stepped on the accelerator. Roberson hit a long jumper, Haskins scored from the lane and again on a turnaround jumper before Roberson laid a shot off the glass on a fast break to make it 21-13.

Haskins had 15 points at halftime.

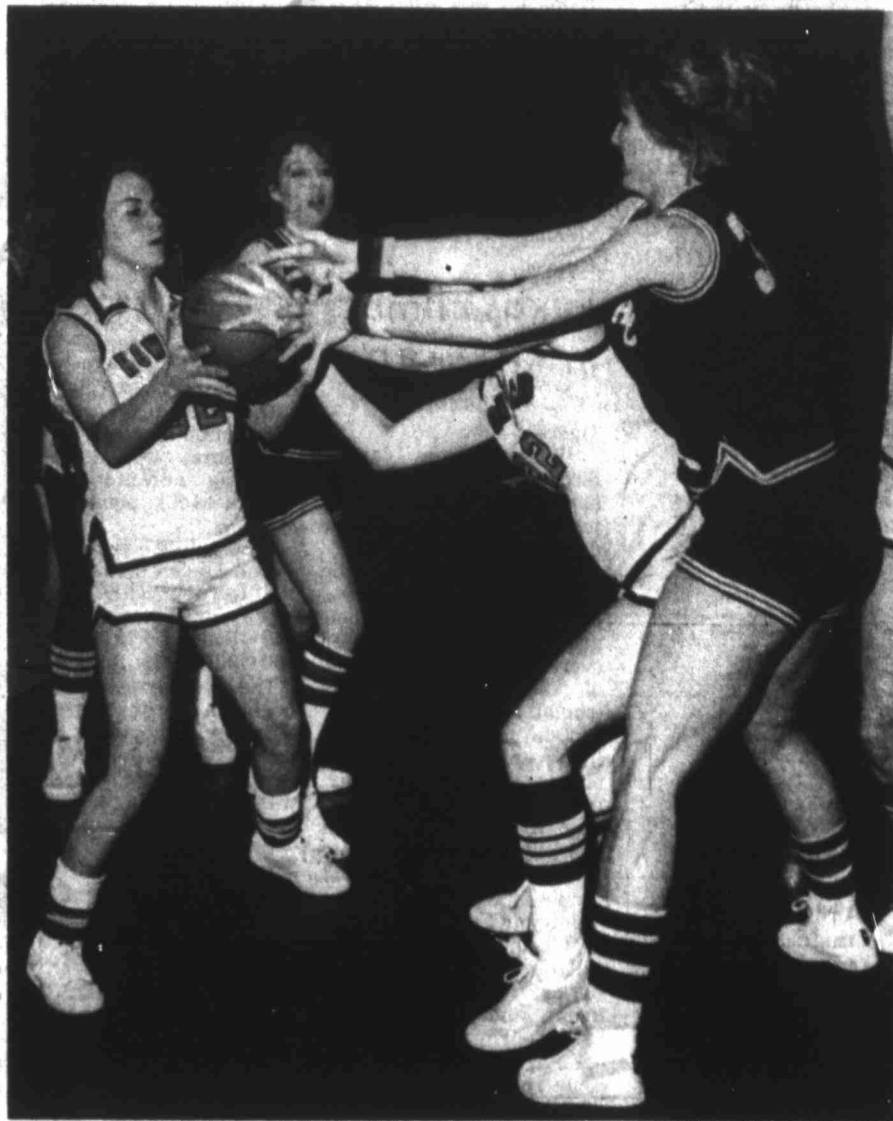

"I told the players to treat it like it was a zero-zero game," Stevens said. "I knew Amarillo would make a run at us but they never did get untracked."

Blocked shots, missed shots and turnovers prevented Amarillo from scoring while the Hawk Queens hit almost everything they aimed at the basket to open their big lead. When the game seemed safely tucked away, Stevens went to his bench and the Hawk Queens cruised into undisputed charge of first place.

"Pam Roberson played her heart out. She played her best floor game and Kelli Mull really took the game in control," Stevens said.

Kelley Richardson topped Amarillo with 18 points.

College Basketball Roundup

Tigers topple Tar Heels

By The Associated Press
Missouri Coach Norm Stewart had a pep talk ready for his players if they didn't emerge as the top-ranked college basketball team Monday.

Stewart, however, didn't have to use it. The Tigers, unbeaten in 16 games, eased past North Carolina and into the No. 1 position in the Associated Press poll to become the first Big Eight squad to occupy the top spot in 23 years.

"If we get No. 1, I'll congratulate them and be happy to see their hard work rewarded," Stewart said a few hours before the poll was released Monday. "If we don't get it, I'll have to explain to them how they got cheated."

Stewart was able to scrap that explanation as Missouri wound up with 30 first-place ballots and 1,154 points to North Carolina's 20 first-place ballots and 1,134 points from a panel of 60 sports writers and broadcasters.

The Tigers took aim at the top spot last week, defeating Oklahoma and Kansas while the Tar Heels were suffering their first loss, to Wake Forest.

Virginia held on to the No. 3 position with 1,101 points. DePaul remained No. 4, and Texas, at 1,440 the nation's only other unbeaten major college team, got one first-place vote and 949 points for fifth place.

It's the first time since Kansas State in 1959 that a Big Eight basketball team has been ranked No. 1, and the first time ever for See "Texas" page 2-B

Slick Badgers trip HC, 77-70

Missing 11 of their first 14 shots, Howard College fell behind 21-6 and never recovered as No. 7 nationally ranked Amarillo downed the Hawks 77-70 Monday night in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The victory was No. 20 of the season for the undefeated Badgers and improved their first place record in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference to 9-0. Howard College slipped to 16-5 overall and to a third place mark of 6-3 in conference.

The slick and quick Badgers buried the Hawks under a dazzling array of shots while the opponents could find only iron on the basket. Although the Hawks made several comeback bids during the game, the Badgers recovered just in time to preserve their unbeaten streak.

The one player who kept the Hawks in position to battle back was 6-6 freshman Nathan Givens. Givens used his leaping ability and strength on the offensive boards to score a game-high 30 points.

Amarillo brought just seven players to Big Spring but rarely had to call upon its two reserves. The balanced Badger scoring attack was led by Robert Dickerson who had 25 points. He was followed by Anthony Chennault with 22, Nicky Jones with 12 and Eddie Bonner with 10 points. The fifth starter, Tim Price, tossed in eight points including four free throws late in the game that provided much of final seven-point cushion.

Dickerson sank two free throws to make it 33-20 late in the first half and things didn't look promising for the Hawks. Jerome Johnson hit a driving layup and Givens converted a three-point play and suddenly it was 33-25.

After a free throw by Price, Howard College came back with two free throws by Johnson and bucket by Givens to cut it to 34-29. Price was fouled with four seconds left and hit both shots to give the Badger a 36-29 lead at the half.

The Hawks drew within four points on three occasions early in the second half but a dry spell a few minutes later proved fatal. Chennault, Jones, Dickerson twice and Bonner all scored in a 10-point spurt that gave Amarillo a 50-36 lead.

The Hawks then caught fire but so did the Badgers. Howard College scored eight straight times down the court but the Badgers retaliated with 10 points to keep a lead 60-52 with 9:35 to go. Then the Hawks went cold and slipped behind 67-54 on a shot by Dickerson.

Again the Hawks charged back and cut the score to 67-63 on two free throws by Wimberly Hardrick. A steal made several comeback bids during the game, the Badgers recovered just in time to preserve their unbeaten streak.

The key to the game was that they executed their game plan well and hit a good percentage of their shots," said Hawk coach Harold Wilder. "We didn't execute well, took poor shots and hit a poor percentage."

We still had opportunities to get back into the game but we didn't take advantage of them."

"We got off to a poor start and were never able to turn it around. We were trying too hard and each player was trying to do it all."

HOWARD COLLEGE (70) — Johnson 1-3-6; Isaac 5-5-15; Barnett 2-0-4; Givens 13-4-7-30; Hardwick 1-2-4; Sharp 2-1-2-5; Childress 2-0-0-4; Campbell 1-1-2-3; Totals 27-14-22-70.
AMARILLO (77) — Chennault 8-4-22; Jones 5-2-12; Bonner 5-0-0-10; Price 1-4-8-8; Dickerson 9-7-10-25; Totals 28-21-30-77.

San Angelo tumbles Lady Steers

Jeanne Bryant exploded for 11 of her game-high 20 points in the second quarter to spark San Angelo Central to a 59-42 District 5-AAAAA win over Big Spring Monday night.

The game was the first of the second half for both teams. San Angelo tied Midland Lee for the first half title with 6-1 records. The loss dropped Big Spring to 11-14 for the season.

The teams battled to a 10-10 deadlock after the first quarter with neither squad establishing an inside game. In the second period, however, San Angelo got the ball underneath to Bryant who responded with 11 of her team's 18 points in the quarter. San Angelo led 28-19 at halftime.

The Bobcats blew open the game by outscoring Big Spring 17-10 in the third quarter and the two teams traded points in the final quarter.

"We never established an inside game," said Lady Steer coach Sandie Brown. Her team had trouble getting the basketball inside to Shell Rutledge and Shirley Dixon. Rutledge took only four shots, hitting one field goal while Dixon scored just six points.

Elise Wheat lead the Lady Steers in scoring with 17 points with no other Big Spring player reaching double figures. Supporting Bryant's big night for San Angelo were Regina Cole with 13 points and Elsa Ornales with 10 points. A good free throw shooting team, Big Spring converted 14 of its 17 tries at the line while San Angelo could drop in just 11 of 25 chances. LaSandra Jackson scored

OVER THE TOP — Elise Wheat (44) goes up and over Lisa Champlin (33) of San Angelo during first half action Monday night at the Big Spring gym. The Bobcats, first half co-champs, downed Big Spring 59-42.

18 points with a lot of help from Jana Matthews but the Lady Steers junior varsity team dropped a narrow 37-36 decision to San Angelo.

Teresa Smith added eight points for Big Spring, now 10-7. Top players on defense were Matthews, Smith, Stacey Bott and Debbie Donelson.

The ninth grade team topped Monahans 26-26 as Tris Clemons hit 12 points and Adrienne Allen seven more. The ninth graders are now 8-4 and host Sweetwater at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Wadkins ends drought

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — It was almost predictable. He'd been down for a while. It was time for Lanny Wadkins — whose career has flowed up and down in a steady rhythm — to reverse the trend.

He did. He broke a three-year non-winning string with an extremely impressive, six-shot victory Monday in Phoenix Open golf tournament. He played his last nine in 65, 6-under par, his last 36 in 128, and the tournament in 263, 21 shots under par on the 6,725-yard Phoenix Country Club course and the lowest score on the tour in at least three years.

And it could be just the start.

"I tend to get 'em in bunches," Wadkins observed. His record supports the statement. He won twice in 1973, twice in 1977 and twice in 1979. And, he's won big ones, including the PGA national title, the Tournament Players Championship, the World Series of Golf. He's finished as high as third on the money-winning list.

But it's been lean times in the off years — as well as painful and frustrating. He's had gall bladder problems, torn muscles in his rib cage and, for the last two seasons, tendinitis in his left hand.

Last year, for example, he won only $51,704. He went beyond that total Monday, collecting $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000.

The last injury may have turned his career around. It forced him to change his grip so that he no longer gets the club beyond horizontal at the top.

"I used to be kind of throwing the club at the ball. I'm more in control now. I think I'm a better player for it," he said. He's also changed his putting style. "I've changed the whole thing, the whole setup. I'm more upright now, don't use the forward press, and I get through the ball better."

"That's what I've got to do to be a better putter. And to be consistent, I've got to be a better putter, make all those 4-footers you have for par."

Irish hand Idaho second loss

By The Associated Press

Notre Dame has put together consecutive victories for the first time this season, and Coach Digger Phelps has never seen anything like it.

"I have never seen a group like this with just pure heart," Phelps said Monday night after the Irish eked out a 50-48 overtime victory over 11th-ranked Idaho.

Notre Dame went into a stall that held the Vandals to 10 points in the second half, and the two teams were tied 46-46 at the end of regulation.

The Irish held the ball for the first three minutes of the five-minute overtime period and took their first lead, 48-46, on a pair of free throws by freshman guard Ron Rowan, who led Notre Dame with 17 points.

Phelps said he told his players to keep cool after Idaho hit 14 of its first 15 shots to take an 18-point lead in the first half. "I told them they couldn't keep it going,"

Phelps said. "I think Idaho got too hot too quick."

The loss was the second straight for the Vandals, who won their first 16 games of the season.

"Needless to say we got a little tentative in the second half," said Idaho Coach Don Monson. "I knew we couldn't continue to shoot 82 percent from the floor."

The victory was only Notre Dame's fifth against 10 losses. Bill Varner added 11 points for the Irish, including a free throw that gave Notre Dame its 50th point. Brian Kellerman, who scored Idaho's only two points in overtime, topped the Vandals with 18.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 7 Kentucky defeated Louisiana State 76-65, and Georgetown clobbered 20th-ranked Villanova 72-56.

Tigers. "We've been ranked through the years, but we've never had the No. 1 spot. It just magnifies everything we do a little," Stewart said.

Stewart and other Big Eight basketball coaches have felt for years that their programs are often overlooked, possibly because of the league's strong football image.

"Our major problem in that regard has come from our own region, I believe," he said Monday. "Now I hope the people in our region will give us the same consideration and respect that people in other parts of the country give us."

"I would think the players will be very pleased. They've worked as hard as other teams, and maybe a little harder. Why shouldn't our team have it? Our state? Our conference?"

Iowa, which had trouble beating Northwestern last week, held on to the No. 6 spot with 889 points. Kentucky, Oregon State and San Francisco took over the Nos. 7, 8 and 9 positions, and Minnesota is No. 10.

Idaho, which suffered its first loss last week, fell from No. 8 to No. 11, followed by Arkansas, Alabama, Kansas State, Tennessee, Tulsa and North Carolina State.

Wake Forest holds down the 18th position, followed by Fresno State and Villanova.

Goliad teams take wins at tourney

The Goliad Junior High black team tripped Monahans 25-21 Monday night to avenge an earlier defeat.

Sherri Myrick, Tabitha Green and Dawn Sampley each scored six points in the victory for the Mavericks, now 7-4.

Leading the defense were Teresa Pruitt with six rebounds and Green with four.

The black team hosts Sweetwater at 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

The black team won the consolation trophy at the Coahoma tournament, downing Stanton 26-9. Myrick had 12 points in the win.

The white team also claimed a consolation win at the tourney with a 31-13 victory over Stanton. Pruitt and Monica Lockridge each had eight points.

The black team had lost to Coahoma A-team with Sampley scoring eight points. Sweetwater's A-team downed the white team 39-22 with Pruitt scoring 10 points.

Lawmakers say Reagan still popular

WASHINGTON (AP) —
Returning lawmakers say President Reagan and his economic programs remain popular in the nation's heartland, but that his support is tempered by growing concerns about the economy.

This was the general view expressed by both Democrats and Republicans as members of Congress returned from a six-week winter vacation.

Both the House and Senate met Monday, but no legislative business was planned until after the president's State of the Union address tonight.

"There is strong support for President Reagan but a growing worry about the road we're traveling," said
Sen. Nancy Landon
Kassebaum, R-Kan.

And Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., said he found voters in his state extremely troubled about the state of the economy.

"There's no doubt, there's a deep reservoir of affection for Ronald Reagan. But the bubble is going to burst," Quayle said. "High interest rates and the severity of the recession will ultimately have their political fallout.
And the president always bears the brunt when things are not going well."

Despite predictable differences on the depth of voter dissatisfaction, Democratic and Republican leaders agreed that Reagan personally remains extremely popular, at least for the time being.

"Sure Reagan's popular," said House Speaker Thomas
P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass. "But I think he's on his way downhill."

The speaker, the highest ranking Democratic official in the national government, said Reagan's popularity
"won't carry his party" in the November congressional elections.

His Republican counterpart in the Senate,
Majority Leader Howard
Baker, said his time in Tennessee during the recess convinced him the economy easily is the most important issue to voters.

Senate Democratic Leader
Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said that while Reagan remains popular,
"There has been some slippage."

Byrd added: "People feel that as of now, at least, the programs are not producing the results predicted. The chief concern there is the economy of the country, the unemployment, the fact that 95 percent of the people are excluded from buying a medium-priced home."

Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-
Ga., said his constituents also list the economy as their
No. 1 concern and
"specifically, a fear about interest rates, a concern the economy is not improving and a fear of what will happen."

Still, people seem willing to give Reagan's programs a chance to work, Levitas said.

Rep. Charles W. Stenholm,

Study shows consumer concerns for 1980s

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A new study of Americans age 25 to 49 shows that young adults are worried about the future — financially, physically and emotionally. And it suggests that marketers can turn those worries into an opportunity for sales of new products.

The study "What Does The Future Hold and Who's Worried About It?" was done by the advertising agency Doyle Dane Bernbach and was released in New York last week. It reflects the results of two surveys of a sampling of 500 men and women, 25 to 49 years old, in 20 major markets. The first survey was conducted in August 1980. The second took place a year later.

Ruth Ziff, executive vice president of the agency and its executive director of research and marketing, said the study provides information on how consumers expect to feel and act in the coming decade. An understanding of this information, she said, "is crucial to strategic planning and definition of target audience for every product or service category."

Ms. Ziff said there are major marketing opportunities for financial and career planning services, for what she called "ego supportives" to reassure people who are worried about their looks or have emotional anxieties and for "self-accomplishment facilitators" to satisfy the do-it-yourself urge.

Concern over finances remains high, Ms. Ziff said. In both 1980 and 1981, more than four out of five people questioned agreed with the statement that their highest economic priority was to provide for their long-term financial security. More than half said they did not think they would be able to achieve their long-term material goals.

The survey takers also asked participants in the study about a wide range of personal concerns. More than four people in 10 said they were concerned about gaining too much weight or being out of shape. A similar number worried about heart and back problems. (Ms. Ziff said the survey did not list cancer as a possible cause for concern "because it seemed obvious.")

"Emotional concerns are as high as health concerns," Ms. Ziff said. Forty percent of those questioned worried about losing close friends; 34 percent worried about being less respected, lonelier and less happy.

Morin seeks new venue

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Accused killer Stephan Peter Morin will not be tried here, but participants in the case have yet to agree on a new location for the trial, a state district judge said.

Morin is charged with capital murder and attempted capital murder arising from a shootout near a San Antonio restaurant Dec. 11. Carrie Marie Scott, 21, was killed in the incident and Dru Darnell-Valdes, 25, was wounded.

State District Judge David Berchelman decided Monday to move the trial to another city after studying evidence that included two packets of newspaper clippings about the incident.

Morin also has been charged with kidnapping and rape in San Francisco, murder and sexual assault in Golden, Colo., aggravated kidnapping in Corpus Christi and murder and kidnapping in St. George, Utah.

Authorities in New York, Iowa, Oklahoma, Virginia and Nevada also want to question Morin about rapes and murders.

Americans willing to take economic pain

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — After having been softened by years of government handouts and easy credit, the question arises: Can the ordinary American still endure economic pain?

You judge. More than 16 million Americans are job-damaged: unemployed, working part time or so forsaken they have ceased looking. Millions of families needing houses cannot afford them, nor can they afford cars.

Millions of families have lowered their diets: the consumption of red meat, considered a good measure of high-cost taste, has been falling in recent years after at least two decades of steady rise.

Increases in purchasing power have been almost insignificant of late, and now workers are giving back benefits they won earlier. They have lost because of inflation too; the 1970 dollar is worth 50 cents now.

In part because of that decline, Americans switched economic philosophy and changed the party in office. The problems grew worse, and there are many indications the worst has not yet been reached. Unemployment, to cite one example, may rise above 9 percent, if it has not already.

At that level, numbers appear in official reports that can't be duplicated without going all the way back to the late and unlamented 1930s and the Great Depression. Because comparable records weren't kept back then, the popular term for the increasingly bad jobless picture is "postwar high," but it really means "worst since the Depression."

As if things weren't tough enough, there remains a possibility that taxes will be increased for the ordinary person. Various excise taxes on consumer goods might be sought, if not immediately then sometime in the next few years. Minimum income taxes might be imposed, too.

In spite of the pain, surveys show, many people who have been hurt continue to believe sacrifices are necessary, and they seem willing to continue in the same direction, hoping thereby to work things out.

The answer to the question, therefore, seems to be that Americans are willing and able to endure pain, at least while they think it will do some good.

They are accepting the turn of economic fortune, and appear to be doing so with good grace. There seems even to be the suggestion that people are willing to endure pain because they feel they brought it on themselves, and that they feel up to the job of working their way back into economic health.

Roll says Americans favor high 'sin' taxes

NEW YORK (AP) — Solid majorities of Americans think federal taxes on cigarettes and alcoholic beverages should be raised, according to the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll.

However, the 1,597 adults in a nationwide scientific telephone sampling on Jan. 18-19 also said they would prefer that President Reagan propose federal spending cuts rather than any tax increases to help reduce the federal budget deficit.

More than two-thirds of those favoring the excise tax increases said they want them raised both as a way to discourage smoking and drinking and as a means of increasing revenues.

Reagan is expected to rule out excise tax increases when he presents his latest economic proposals in his State of the Union address tonight.

Until now, Reagan's economic program has been based on tax and spending cuts. But recent projections setting the federal budget deficit at more than $100 billion have led some administration advisers to propose tax increases, including excise taxes on cigarettes and alcoholic beverages.

The president is said to be decided against any such increases after considering objections from businessmen and other supporters of his programs.

In the latest AP-NBC News poll, 66 percent of those responding said federal taxes on alcoholic beverages should be raised, and 63 percent said federal taxes on cigarettes should be raised.

The figures report growing sentiment for increases in those excise taxes; when the same questions were asked in the October AP-NBC News poll, only 52 percent favored higher cigarette taxes and only 55 percent favored higher alcoholic beverage taxes.

Among all respondents, 72 percent said that if they had to choose between the two, they would prefer that President Reagan propose federal spending cuts rather than tax increases to help reduce the federal budget deficit.
