Valentine's Day perks sales of roses, candy

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Traditionally, Valentine's Day has been a time for fresh flowers and luscious candy. With inflation, diets and conservatism, those luxurious gifts might have been expected to go the way of the messenger pigeon, but not in Big Spring where sales are expected to equal or top last year's.

Fresh red roses seem to be the most popular flowers in town since the florists contacted at 2 p.m. Saturday said they were already out of the thorny beauties. All the florists were optimistic about their sales for this Valentine's Day.

Dori Mitchell of Flowers from Dori's said her shop's sales would probably top last year's, crediting terrific sales. Her shop was already sold out of cut flowers by Saturday afternoon.

Bill Draper of Faye's Flowers reported "very good sales of flowers this year." Draper credited his delivery service, the First Methodist Church Bellringers, for keeping the shop caught up on its orders and deliveries.

Helen Hicks at Jane's Flowers said "things were a lot busier than last year." She said most people must have waited until today (Saturday) to buy roses — a flower the shop was out of at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Sales were better this year than last year, according to Rita Fott of Rita's Flowers. "We are having excellent sales and our candy is selling well, too," she said. Fott added her shop had run out of roses on Friday.

The standard, heart-shaped, box of candy is still the staple of Cupid's Day's candy sales, based on a survey of stores selling valentine goods. Wright's Prescription Center has had "no slackening of candy sales," says Bruce Wright.

Noting that most sales are made just before Valentine's, Wright said this year looks to be "as good or better" than previous year's sales. C.G. Evans, manager of Newsum's Food Center, said the heart-shaped box of candy and other candies were selling "extremely well." Evans could not predict if this year would be better than last year.

Candy sales must have been going well at Rainbarrel Gifts since an unidentified female voice could only reply "Fine — there are 100 people in the store and I'm the only one here and I can't talk now."

Lovers love Valentine's Day

By WALT FINLEY
Staff Writer

All the world loves a lover and lovers love Valentine's Day since it provides a timely excuse for addressing the objects of their affections.

On Feb. 15, the Romans celebrated the feast of Lupercalia as a lovers' festival for young people. Partners were chosen by drawing names by chance from a box, after which the designated partners exchanged tokens of affection.

Many continued these paired associations and numerous such courtships ended in marriages, making Lupercalia the original dating game.

After the spread of Christianity, attempts were made to give Christian meaning to this popular festival. Pope Gelasius in 496 changed the Lupercalia festival to Saint Valentine's Day earlier to the familiar Feb. 14.

There were, in fact, two Saint Valentines. One, a priest in Rome was under Emperor Claudius II, was jailed for aiding Christians, from Roman persecution and beheaded about 270 A.D. He is credited with curing his jailer's daughter of blindness.

The second, a bishop of Terni (60 miles from Rome) was beheaded in 273 in punishment for converting a Roman family to Christianity. Both symbolized unselfish love.

Customs die hard. According to an English historian, the holiday was celebrated in the British Isles as early as 1446. Young people then wrote their names (or made their marks) on slips of paper which were drawn at random from a vase.

By the 18th Century, young men were wearing the names of the damsels drawn from the vase on their sleeves for several days after St. Valentine's eve, when the drawing was held. "He wears his heart on his sleeve" probably came from this custom.

The giving of expensive gifts to lady loves—frequently gloves—and staging of elaborate balls gradually gave way to the custom of sending sentimental messages.

Observation of Valentine's Day staged a comeback in the United States about the time of the Civil War, when Victorian elegance and sentimentality peaked. It was considered by many as exciting a holiday as Christmas, more elaborate and frequently were handpainted. In the following decades, the "hearts and flowers" theme came into its own.

Since many of these elaborate greetings were trimmed with satin, ribbons, lace, feathers, tassels, imitation gems, seashells and dried flowers, and cost as much as $10 each—a magnificent sum in those days—they were treasured by their recipients and often became heirlooms, leading to the custom of collecting Valentines.

Washington's birthday on the ball

By WALT FINLEY
Staff Writer

It's an outrage, by George!! What Congress has perpetrated with reference to the first President's birthday this year shouldn't happen to the lowliest son, let alone the Father of his Country.

Especially one who could not tell a lie. The nation has been lying, in a sense, about George Washington's birthday ever since 1971 when a law went into effect that, in order to give federal employees a three-day holiday and to establish some regularity, certain legal, public holidays would be observed by the United States government on Monday.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S birthday, they decreed, henceforth would be observed on the third Monday of February instead of Feb. 22.

George had more than the average trouble with his birthdate, anyway, before an upstart Congress began messing with it, a couple of centuries, give or take a few years, after his death, when he was hardly in a position to fight back.

The original problem had its inception centuries before Washington's birth — in 46 B.C., when Julius Caesar, then emperor of Rome, adopted a calendar based on the computations of a Greek scholar.

THE GREEK, Suogenes, figured every year was 365 days long, so every fourth year produces an extra day. The Venerable Bede, an Anglo-Saxon monk, announced in 730 A.D. that the 365 1/4-day Julian year was 11 minutes and 14 seconds too long, making a cumulative error of about a day every 128 years.

People of that era probably figured he was just a religious crackpot. Nothing was done about it. By 1582, the cumulative error was computed to amount to about 10 days. In that year, Pope Gregory XIII decreed that the day following Oct. 4, 1582, should be called October 15, thus dropping the 10 days.

SOME EUROPEAN NATIONS put the decree into effect immediately, but the British government did not adopt it until 1752. That year it was decreed that in all British possessions, including the American colonies, the day following Sept. 2 should be called Sept. 14, a loss of 11 days.

New Year's day was moved from March 25 to Jan. 1. What had been March 24, 1700, under the old reckoning, was followed by March 25, 1701.

WITH ALL THIS CALENDAR tinkering, poor George, who actually had been born Feb. 11, 1731, See Washington, page 2A.

Jury selection begins Monday

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Jury selection begins Monday in 118th District Court in the $1.5 million civil suit brought by Cosden Oil and Chemical Company against John T. Sims and D.C. "Butch" Wheeler. Sims and Wheeler are accused of fraud in the suit by repeatedly selling the same tank of oil to Cosden in late 1980.

The Jaco Oil Company Inc. and Wheelco Oil Company, both of Midland, were also named in the original suit. Wheeler is president of Jaco while Sims is a company pumper for Jaco.

The $1.5 million suit was filed against the two men on Jan. 8, 1981 by Dallas attorney John Dunlap who is representing Cosden in the case. The original petition asks for $500,000 in losses resulting from the oil fraud and $1 million in damages.

A criminal charge of attempted theft over $10,000 in the alleged oil fraud ended July 28, 1981 with a Howard County jury finding Sims and Wheeler not guilty. The case was heard in 118th District Court before Judge Jim Gregg although the trial itself was held in Martin County Courthouse due to air conditioning problems at the Howard County Courthouse. Odessa attorney John Green defended the two men in the criminal case. Howard County District Attorney Rick Hamby and Don Richard, special assistant to the DA, handled the prosecution.

The civil suit alleges that Wheeler and Sims sought to sell the same tank of oil from the W.B. Currie lease to Cosden over and over again. The lease is located 5 miles west of Forsan north of the Continental Oil lease in the same area.

An investigation coordinated by Texas Ranger Eddie Almond that included ex-Herald photographer Bill Forshee, two Howard County sheriff's deputies, Texas Railroad Commission agents and Cosden security agents concluded in January of 1981 with the arrests of Sims and Wheeler.

'Starved for rock'

Foreigner flattens fevered fans

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Staff Writer ABILENE — It had been almost two years since Abilene and a greater portion of the West Texas area rock-n-rolled. A tired but happy saxophonist Mark Rivera said after the Friday night concert that the 9,000-plus fans packed into the Taylor County Exposition Center had indeed been "starved for rock."

ROCKIN' GUITAR — Foreigner lead guitarist Mick Jones put on quite a show for rock concert fans Friday night in Abilene's Taylor County Exposition Center. Foreigner and Bryan Adams played before over 9,000 rock-n-roll fans and played the Ector County Coliseum Saturday night.

"Louann" followed at an almost non-stop pace before the group sent chills down the audiences' collective backs with "Cold as Ice." With the stage doused in red, leader singer Lou Gramm eased into the group's No. 1 single of this year, "Waiting for a Girl Like You." The placement of the group's biggest hit to date in the middle of the concert was strange as most fans anticipated the slow ballad to come at the end or even as an encore performance. Still, the female members of the crowd went wild when Gramm directed the main lyrics to them.

Perhaps their latest album is doing well enough on the charts and at the bank without having to push it on stage but Foreigner proved to be one of the few groups that played a combination of their biggest hits and best concert music instead of trying to sell their latest work, "4."

That fact was brought when the group went into a hard-rocking version of Star Rider" from their first album and on to "Seventeen" from the "Head Games" LP. Although the audience was obviously enjoying the performance to this point, the roof almost sailed off the Expo Center during "Like a Rock." The song, which tells the story of a fan without a ticket to the show who later becomes a rock star himself, was accompanied by a 15-foot inflatable jike box that whooshed back to the earth in a cloud of smoke on the song's final note.

The regular agenda of tunes continued with "Double Vision" and ended with the group's first hit, the top five smash "Feels Like the First Time."

After a hasty departure, the lighters flickered in the halls as the crowd chanted "Foreigner." Appeasing the hungry beast, the group returned and launched into "Hot-Blooded." Even a long version of the hit song didn't satisfy the rock-starved crowd and they begged for more.

Foreigner returned for a second encore with "Headknocker," another selection from the group's first album.

Instead of hurrying off to their dressing rooms, Gramm, Jones, drummer Dennis Elliott and bassist Rick Willis went to the stage's edge and touched hands, tossed out picks and drumsticks and took a final bow, all four abreast.

Hopes of more music were dashed when the house lights went on. The feast was over.

Not many of those in the Expo Center had heard of Bryan Adams, the warm-up group, but the five-man band played solid rock-n-roll in preparation of Foreigner. The group played a number of selections from their new album, "You Want It, You Got It," including "Lonely Nights."

After 10 strong rock tunes, the group played an extended jam and left an appreciative audience hungry for the main course on the nights rock menu. Foreigner continued their tour with stops in Odessa and Lubbock.

Big Spring 'blackout'

Early risers on the north side of Big Spring may have found their clocks stopped and their lights not working Saturday morning. About 1,200 customers lost electricity from approximately 6:20 a.m. to 7:30 a.m. Saturday, according to Texas Electric Service Company Division Manager Hooper Sanders.

The power loss stemmed from an incident when a truck hit a utility pole in the city. "The truck hit a down guy on the pole and snapped the top of the pole off, snapping several wires. It just so happened the pole held a feeder line for a lot of customers," Sanders said.

Sanders said power was restored about 7:30 a.m., and no further problem was expected from the incident.

More than 1,363 persons assisted by Salvation Army

More than 1,363 people were assisted by the local Salvation Army in January, according to the monthly meeting report from the Salvation Army Advisory Board.

The report states 1,268 persons received cheese from the Salvation Army while 95 others were given either food, clothing or financial assistance. Services also included during the month of January were lodging for 672 persons, including 21 women and 16 children. 1,524 meals were supplied by the SA, according to the report.

The board credits community support and the United Way for the over $12,000 used to assist the residents of Big Spring in January.

Tickets are on sale for the Feb. 25 symphony concert which will feature Ken Kercheval of the "Dallas" nighttime soap opera fame. Kercheval, who plays the brother of Pamela Ewing and the arch enemy of J.R., will be featured in a "Lincoln Portrait."

He will be accompanied by the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Choral, which is supported by the Big Spring

Big Spring police arrested four persons Saturday afternoon who were suspected of shoplifting from several stores in the College Hills Shopping Center.

Arrested and charged at 5 p.m. Saturday were Delayne Lott and Carolyn P. Butts for theft over $20 and under $200, and Shirley Larry and Nebraska Butts for theft by appropriation.

Other arrests made by city police Saturday included Patsy Shewmake who was charged with theft over $20 and under $200. She was arrested at Gibson's Department Store after security guards determined she had shoplifted about $53 worth of items from the store. Arrested for theft by appropriation included Oscar Solis, 20, and Iren Jimenez, 17.

Jeffery Whitley, 21, was arrested at Chapparral Trailer Park on the charge of issuance of bad checks. While executing a search warrant Friday night, police "patted down" Felipe Alvarado Juarez, 53, and found a .22 caliber revolver on his person, according to police reports. Juarez was charged with unauthorized carrying of a weapon.

Police also arrested Cynthia Walker at 1:45 p.m. Saturday on the charge of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle. Shortly after noon Saturday, police received a complaint from Mrs. S.A. Wilson, 2500 Seminole, that a person unknown to her had used his vehicle to kill her dog. A witness told police the registered white toy poodle, valued at more than $500.

Black Heritage Month being observed locally

By CAROL HART Staff Writer

February is being observed nation-wide as Black Heritage Month. Locally, a committee composed of five Big Spring citizens is working with people throughout the community to plan a series of special events in commemoration of the month.

Composing the Black Heritage Committee are Dock Voorhies, Lala Moore, Georgia Chatman, Doris Paschall and Maxine Kimble. The five are all employees of the Veteran's Administration Medical Center.

The group is operating under the auspices of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. One of the highlights of Black Heritage Month locally will be a city-wide celebration Feb. 25. The event is scheduled at 3 p.m. at the Big Spring Municipal auditorium.

Keynote speaker for the ceremony will be Essie Person. Mrs. Person is past president of the Stokes-Parker District, and former president of the Texas Association of Women's and Girl's Clubs.

The ceremony's theme will be "Afro-American History: Blueprint for Survival." Voorhies explained that the program will not only be "for Black people. It's a program about Americans for Americans."

During the event, several Big Spring residents will portray famous Black Americans such as Harriet Tubman, Gwendolyn Brooks, Martin Luther King, and Dr. George Washington Carver.

Abraham Lincoln will also be portrayed during the program. Taking part in the city-wide celebration will be employees of VAMC, the Chamber of Commerce, and Mount Bethel, Baker's Chapel and Power House. A community choir will perform, as will a special guest choir, "The Generation of Faith," from Angelo State University in San Angelo.

Dr. Carter G. Woodson designed February as Black Heritage Month in 1926. Voorhies said "Dr. Woodson didn't feel Black accomplishments were being adequately recognized."

In addition to the city-wide commemoration Feb. 28, the group will sponsor a pictorial exhibit in the main entrance lobby of the VAMC Feb. 22 through March 1.

The Canteen and Dietetics Service of VAMC will dedicate a meal in observance of Black Heritage on Feb. 24.

Feb. 26 has been designated as "Cultural Day." Native dishes will be prepared by various VAMC staff members representative of their ethnic backgrounds. A film on Black Heritage will also be shown.

Voorhies said Black Americans, in celebration of their heritage, have a set of national colors, including Black, for the people, red for the blood and green for the land.

"Lift Every Voice and Sing" is the Black national anthem. "It is a song of hope and pride, as opposed to segregation and anger," Voorhies explained.

Voorhies said he wanted to thank John Steward, VAMC administrator, because "He's been very supportive of the EEOC, and of Black Heritage Month."

Famous Black Americans to be honored this month include Benjamin Banneker, 1731-1806, who designed the plans for the Capitol in Washington, D.C.; George Washington Carver, 1864-

1943, a famous botanist; and Dr. Charles Drew, 1904-1950, who headed Freedmen's Hospital in Washington, D.C.

Dr. Drew discovered a way to separate plasma from blood and a method to store the substance. He also established the world's first blood bank.

wound up with a birthday of Feb. 22, 1732. (Good thing they didn't have Social Security in those days.) Now, the Queen of England has the prerogative of selecting her birthday. Elizabeth II was born April 21, which sounds like a pleasant enough day ("Oh, to be in England, now that April's there").

But Elizabeth observes her official birthday in June, because she is expected to review the troops (Or is it the Palace Guard?) on that day and June can be counted on to produce more propitious weather for such outdoor activities.

BUT SHE'S A WOMAN, all of whom are noted for certain propensities of mind-changing, and besides, she's royalty, and rank, as everyone knows, hath its privileges. Poor George has been kicked around considerably in recent years where his birthday is concerned. First he had a holiday all his own, and so, in some states, did President Abraham Lincoln. Then there was a move to combine the two and call it "President's Day."

Technically, there are no national holidays in the United States. Each state has jurisdiction over its own holidays, designated by legislative enactment or executive proclamation.

IN PRACTICE, however, most states observe the federal legal public holidays: New Year's Day, Washington's birthday, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Columbus Day, Veteran's Day (once called Armistice Day), World War I veterans had to give a little, too), Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Thanksgiving!! One would have thought the Congress would have learned its lesson about tinkering with holidays during the Thanksgiving fiasco of four decades ago when, in 1939, President Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed the third Thursday of November as Thanksgiving.

FOOTBALL-MINDED AMERICANS weren't about to have the season of their sport shortened by a week (they should see us now: football nearly to February) and the constituents raised such a furor that in December, 1941, despite war clouds looming on the horizon, Congress enacted legislation that restored Turkey day to the fourth Thursday, as God and the Pilgrims had intended.

Actually, the President and Congress legally can designate holidays only for the District of Columbia and for federal employees.

FEDERAL EMPLOYEES: aye, there's the rub. Technically, employees of the U.S. Postal Service no longer are federal employees, but they still observe the holidays, and whether the mail is delivered more or less determines whether banks and many businesses operate—and how many excuses does the average Joe need to stop work for a day, let alone a three-day weekend?

So what's the beef this year? Just that everyone will be taking advantage of George's 250th birthday on the third Monday of February when the actual day (as amended by Pope Gregory and the British government) falls this year on the fourth Monday.

Despite cries of horror, don't expect deficit to fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans and Democrats who greeted President Reagan's budget with cries of horror are beginning to concede the difficulty of chopping the administration's record deficit forecasts for 1982 and 1983.

Congress could spend a rancorous election-year session debating defense spending, Social Security reductions and changes in the president's cherished three-year tax cut — only to see deficits that still approach $90 billion or $100 billion.

Several congressional aides say their bosses are likely to give up, go home for an election campaign and return afterwards for another try at passing a budget.

Almost everyone agrees the deficits are too big. House Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois said conservatives feel they've been "pole-axed."

The problem may be even worse. Republicans and Democrats alike say Reagan's official deficit forecasts of $98.6 billion in 1982 and $91.5 billion in 1983 are based on faulty assumptions about the economy.

One GOP senator estimates Reagan understated the deficits by $5 billion to $10 billion. Democrats say the gap is even bigger.

In addition, the president's figures assume Congress will approve $56 billion in spending cuts and other savings, some of which already have been rejected. Without Reagan's proposals, the deficit would be more than $150 billion next year.

"He (Reagan) can't create these kinds of budget cuts with this type of Congress," Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., conceded last week in a speech in Chicago.

"I find that only one-fifth of the president's proposals are realistically obtainable from this Congress," said Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., a dedicated budget balancer.

Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., last week issued his own budget proposal forecasting a $90 billion deficit next year, only $1.5 billion less than the president's.

But Boschwitz would hold spending growth to 3 percent a year in the future and increase tax collections by the same amount to produce a slight surplus in 1986, when Reagan forecasts a $66 billion deficit.

A variation of Boschwitz' plan eventually may prove attractive to members of Congress who feel they need to show the financial markets and the country that they at least have a plan for balancing the budget.

Holling's big-reduction proposals to eliminate next July's tax cut and Social Security cost-of-living increases for a year, defer the 1983 tax cut and freeze the defense budget are tempting, but appear unattainable.

Eliminating one year's cost-of-living increase for Social Security would cut the 1983 deficit by $15 billion to $17 billion. But the proposal seems so far-fetched that the Congressional Budget Office didn't even mention it in its book of several hundred pages on budget-cutting options.

Reagan doesn't want to change Social Security while a commission studies it and Republicans are unlikely to make such a move without the president's help. Most Democrats feel they have Reagan on the defensive with his earlier proposal for cuts in Social Security.

Cancelling the 10 percent cut in personal income taxes scheduled for July would reduce the deficit by about $40 billion. But so far, Hollings is the only member of Congress to propose such a step — no Republican has even remotely suggested it — and the White House rejected it immediately.

Some members of both parties favor just the opposite approach. They want to accelerate the tax cut to help the economy recover from the recession. Skeptics say that would increase the deficit, not shrink it.

Deferring the 1983 tax cut would trim the deficit by an estimated $8.5 billion. Democrats almost certainly will try to force Reagan to accept a change in the 1983 tax cut as a price for their help in spending cuts. But even so, it would leave the deficit above the level acceptable to many members of Congress.

Freezing the defense budget at the 1982 level is probably impractical, given the nature of Pentagon contracts. GOP and Democratic staff aides agree that any large savings would take several years to realize and that cuts in major weapons systems do little for the deficit in the immediate future.

Eliminating the controversial B1 bomber, for example, would cut the deficit in 1983 by only half a billion dollars.

Eventually, of course, the savings would be billions of dollars. But as is the case with so many ideas, that wouldn't do much good to a politician worried about the deficit in his 1982 re-election campaign.

Labor leaders plot resistance to Reagan

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — AFL-CIO leaders are converging on this sunny resort city for a policymaking meeting that almost certainly will send fresh storm signals to the Reagan administration.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and the federation's executive council will mount a rhetorical assault against President Reagan's domestic and foreign policies while fine-tuning a political master plan aimed at electing union allies to Congress in the fall.

Threatening an apparent improvement in relations between the 15 million-member federation and the administration is what Kirkland's aides describe as his growing impatience with Reagan's response to the imposition of martial law in Poland.

When the 35-member executive council convened for its mid-winter meeting here a year ago, the AFL-CIO's differences with the new administration focused on Reagan's tax and spending policies. Now there are indications of a widening rift over foreign policy.

Following Reagan's most recent peacemaking session with Kirkland on Feb. 5, the AFL-CIO chief reiterated that he has "fundamental, principled differences" with Reagan's handling of the economy.

Asked if the disagreement over U.S. policy toward Poland was nearing that point, Kirkland responded, "I hope not. The administration has still not closed the door on taking those additional measures they have indicated they might take" if martial law is not lifted.

Relations between the White House and the AFL-CIO plummeted last summer following the chief executive's firing of 11,500 striking air traffic controllers, who walked off the job despite having signed no-strike oaths.

Kirkland responded by refusing to invite Reagan to the AFL-CIO's biennial convention — in a break with the federation's tradition.

At a Dec. 2 White House meeting with union leaders, Reagan lamented his poor relations with labor. Reagan said he never thought he "would be estranged" from unions and called for a fresh start.

He named Vice President George Bush the administration's point man for dealing with the AFL-CIO.

Bush will appear before the executive council on Tuesday — one day after it is expected to reiterate its view that Reagan's economic recovery plan is unworkable.

Green Cross walking Salvadoran tightrope

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — They are street-wise humanitarians treading a perilous middle road through the carnage of civil war, the saviors of El Salvador's sick and wounded refugees.

Although eyed suspiciously by government forces and leftist rebels alike, the Salvadoran Green Cross keeps rushing its jump-suited volunteers to this Central American nation's battle zones.

Few other Salvadorans experience the difficulty of staying neutral in the conflict more acutely than the 1,700 young men and women who work in the Green Cross' 36 field offices and ride in its 27 ambulances.

"We are caught between the sword and the canyon," said Jose Eliseo Franco, 35, a director of El Salvador's most active relief agency. Like other men of military age, he was asked by both sides to fight in a war that has killed an estimated 32,000 of his five million countrymen. He told them both: "I wasn't born for this."

The Green Cross is a non-political, non-sectarian international agency founded in France. It has no ties to Caritas, the Roman Catholic relief agency in El Salvador, but does deliver aid supplied by Caritas to outlying towns. There are about 200,000 displaced people in El Salvador, 33,000 of them cared for by Green Cross.

Francisco has been developing a plan to use new ambulances and two-way radios to evacuate wounded civilians trapped by the hostilities that have raged the past 2 1/2 years.

But there are obstacles. Green Cross volunteers are far outnumbered by the ruling junta's 20,000 troops and the estimated 5,000 guerrillas, both of whom kill unarmed civilians suspected of supporting the other side.

They kill civilians more often than they kill each other. Five Green Cross workers are among the dead, and 18 others have been interrogated by both sides, Franco said.

The United States arms the junta and, according to Washington, the Soviet bloc aids the guerrillas. Meanwhile, the Green Cross has run out of medicine while waiting for the junta to allow it to use medical supplies and radios donated from other countries.

Government officials contacted by The Associated Press could not explain the four-month delay in paperwork that normally is completed in four weeks. But Western diplomats said the delay isn't surprising because the army suspects the Green Cross of sympathizing with leftists.

"The war has challenged those in our generation who want to serve the country in a practical way," said Luis Enrique Franco, 28-year-old brother of Jose Franco. Six members of the Franco family are Green Cross paramedics.

One night last week, Luis Franco and an ambulance driver escorted a wounded refugee and a reporter past an army checkpoint, a guerrilla roadblock and through a firefight on a highway near Usulután City, 75 miles southeast of here.

"If I die, it will be serving mankind, not with a gun in my hand," Luis Franco said later.

Williams jurors taken to bridge where two bodies allegedly dumped

ATLANTA (AP) — Wayne B. Williams' murder trial jury climbed through brambles and peered into the murky waters of the Chattahoochee River Saturday on a 19-minute visit to the bridge from which prosecutors say he threw the bodies of two young blacks.

Helicopters carrying police officers and reporters clattered overhead as the 12 jurors and four alternates — under judge's orders not to talk during the inspection — walked slowly up and down the two-lane, steel-and-concrete span. One of Williams' lawyer was at the scene but Williams remained in jail. Sheriff's deputies blocked traffic and curious spectators from getting near.

Jurors were given a free run of the quarter-mile-long bridge and spent some of the time climbing through the brambles where members of a police stakeout team were stationed last May, when Williams was stopped near the bridge.

"They're doing a good job. That indicates they did follow the testimony," said presiding Judge Clarence Cooper of Superior Court, as jurors walked to several of the key positions mentioned during the sensational trial.

Williams, who is black, has pleaded innocent to murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of the 28 young blacks slain during a 22-month period here. No arrests have been made in the 26 other cases but prosecutors have introduced evidence they say connects Williams with 10 additional slayings.

The bodies of Cater and Payne were found in the same area of the river about a month apart last spring, and prosecutors contend both were thrown from the same bridge.

The jury, which has been sequestered at a suburban motel since the trial began Dec. 28, was taken to the bridge in a white Fulton County jail bus, its windows covered with iron grillwork.

After receiving instructions from Cooper, jurors filed out of the bus and immediately headed to where the bridge crosses the river. They spent most of their time on the south edge of the bridge, where witnesses testified Williams' car was spotted moving slowly close to the railing.

The jurors walked up and down the bridge while court personnel and the reporters waited at one end. The jurors peered over the edge at the brown river water and the railroad tracks that pass underneath.

Before boarding the bus for the return trip to their hotel, jurors also examined the liquor store parking lot at one end of the bridge where police said Williams turned around before they stopped him.

The prosecution had attempted to bring the bridge into the courtroom, using a $15,000 scale model and hundreds of color photographs to depict the concrete and steel span where Williams first came to police attention. But defense lawyers had requested the jury be taken to the bridge to see the scene for themselves because of its importance in the trial.

Besides Cooper, the jurors were accompanied by defense lawyer Mary Welcome, Assistant District Attorney Joe Drolet, dozens of sheriff's deputies, two sketch artists and court personnel. Media coverage was limited to one reporter from The Associated Press and one from United Press International.

Court reporter Susan Northington set her stenograph machine at one end of the bridge, its paper flapping in the frigid wind. No testimony was taken while the jury was at the bridge.

Ms. Welcome said a gag order issued by Cooper barred her from saying what she hoped the jurors would see. But she added, "You can assume what I hope they'll see."

Williams, who remained at the Fulton County jail Saturday, was stopped at the two-lane bridge at 2:50 a.m. on May 22. Defense lawyers have contended the stakeout team members were out of position the night they stopped him. They also argued that the 23-year-old freelance photographer and self-styled talent promoter is not strong enough to throw bodies over the 4-foot concrete railing.

The stakeout team, one of 24 such teams secretly assigned to bridges after the bodies of young blacks began surfacing in rivers, stopped Williams after an officer heard a loud splash in the water and saw Williams' car above the ripples, witnesses have testified.

But none of the officers saw Williams' car approach or stop on the bridge, and the officer underneath did not see what made the splash. Williams claims he threw nothing from the bridge, but a friend of his testified he told her he threw garbage in the water.

Cater's body was found about a mile downstream, two days after Williams was stopped and questioned at the bridge, which is known locally as the Jackson Parkway bridge.

What happened at the bridge, one of dozens connecting Atlanta with suburban counties, has dominated testimony at the trial, which enters its eighth week on Monday.

Defense lawyers began presenting their arguments last week, calling witnesses who claimed the decomposed state of Cater's body indicated it must have been thrown into the river long before Williams was stopped; that a body thrown from the Jackson Parkway bridge could not have surfaced where Cater's or Payne's bodies were found; and that the stakeout team officers were incompetent.

The defense also called two pathologists to contest the findings of the Georgia medical examiners who ruled that Cater and Payne were murdered. The pathologists said medical examiners did not rule out heart disease or drowning in the deaths of the two young blacks.

A BRIDGE IN QUESTION — The jury hearing the murder trial of Wayne Williams is shown in this artist sketch as it visited the Jackson Parkway Bridge Saturday. Williams is accused of the murders of two Atlanta black males and the prosecutors contend he dumped the body of one of his alleged victims from the bridge.

The war over gas decontrol

The battle over decontrol of natural gas is growing, not only in Congress but in the gas industry itself.

It's a familiar story that divides the natural gas industry into those benefiting from the present decontrol (control?) laws and those penalized by them.

The split in the industry is caused by the function of an unwritten law: that of unintended results.

Congress, in passing the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978, intended to phase out gas price controls by 1985. It immediately lifted price ceilings on "deep well" gas, defined as gas being produced from formations below 15,000 feet.

Because prices on the rest of natural gas remained controlled, production and exploration for shallow natural gas has remained relatively stagnant but there has been a market for all the deep well gas that can be delivered at prices four times as high as shallow gas.

Decontrolled gas prices were pegged to the BTU equivalent for oil, which at the time, was bringing $15 per barrel. Since, however, oil has soared to $34 per barrel.

The intended result has been to make it greatly profitable to seek and produce deep gas but unprofitable to seek and produce shallow gas.

Deep well producers, quite understandably, want things to stay just as they are, i.e., controlled, while the much of the rest of the industry wants immediate decontrol.

Against this backdrop, don't look for Congress to rush to decontrol. And if it does, you can bet there will be a big wellhead tax disguised as a "windfall profits" tax.

The shame of the situation is that there is little doubt total decontrol would produce a boom in shallow well exploration and production resulting in much more gas being produced and an attendant downward push on natural gas prices.

That, of course, is liable to be lost in the argument we will hear on the subject.

A cold joke, and a cold reality

Joe Mitchell, who works for Texas Electric Service Company and also is famous for carving arrowheads, called this week to share a Cold Joke. Here it is:

There was this Indian named Talking Waters. People were always asking him how he got his name. He said his mother was on the riverbank when he was born, and she and several other Indians had heard strange voices coming from the river.

Sometimes there would just be one voice, sometimes two and sometimes a whole congregation of voices.

The Indians were frightened. But there was a missionary there with the Indians, and he said he would get to the bottom of it. He said he didn't know what the voices were, but he recognized the language. He figured some witch had bewitched the waters. So he went hunting.

He hunted and hunted, and about three years later, he stumbled onto a cabin in a valley about 100 miles north of the Indian camp. He noticed a trapper lived there and the trapper had a wife who was a perpetual talker.

The missionary watched as the trapper and his wife prepared the hides out in the severe cold weather. The missionary noticed the woman was talking all the time, but nobody could understand her or hear her talking. No sound ever came out of her mouth.

The missionary also noticed that everyday the trapper would clean up the area where they had been working. He would pick up some strange-looking material that was on the ground and bundle it up and put it out on the river every morning.

The old trapper didn't know what the material was, but he was afraid if it ever warmed up it would explode.

The storms came and embedded this material on the ice in the rivers. The missionary got suspicious about the material.

When the spring came, the ice broke up and started flowing down the river, and the missionary followed the ice flows down the river, and sure enough, above the Indian camp, there were some hot springs that flowed into the river.

The hot springs melted the ice, and thawed out the old woman's conversation!

Thanks, Joe, for sharing that joke. I received several other versions of the same joke, involving other noises that emit from the human body (such as a belch, for one).

This was one of those weeks when nothing seemed to go right. And as I drove home Friday afternoon, I was thinking, thank Goodness this week is over.

About that time I saw two little Mexican girls skipping along. They were so pretty, with long gleaming black hair. They obviously had just been to the 7-11 Store to buy some candy and were digging into the sack with glee. I was saying to myself, "Ah, to be young and carefree again..."

Then I saw one of the girls drop down on one knee, roll up her jean on the other leg and extract a candy bar from her socks. The reality hit me with a sickening thud. These cute adorable-looking girls, no more than 10 years old, had been shoplifting.

I pulled the car over to the side and waited for them to catch up. They realized I had spotted them and acted nervous. They started running and crossed the street just as a long line of cars was coming. I had to wait for all the cars to pass, and then I turned down the street the girls had taken off on. They had vanished. I drove around the block once or twice, then down the alley, but they were nowhere. I gave up my search and decided to drive on home.

But as I was driving home, I felt compelled to turn around and try to find them. I was hoping I could say something that might deter them from ever committing such an act again.

I drove up and down the streets on the neighborhood where I had last seen them. Just as I was about to give up, I spotted them. They thought they had lost me, and were casually walking down the street eating candy. They didn't realize I was pulling up behind them, and when I got even with them and rolled down my window they were so shocked they didn't run.

"What's your name?" I asked the girl I had seen pulling the candy from her sock.

She gave me a name. "Where do you live?" She pointed to a house.

"Did you take something from the store?" I asked.

"Honest, I didn't steal anything, I was just scratching my leg."

Pretty quick thinking for a 10-year-old.

"I'm not going to turn you in this time," I said.

"But don't ever do it again. You can get into a lot of trouble."

"Okay," she said, looking down at the ground.

We talked some more, and I was satisfied the girls had learned a lesson. So I drove on.

But as I was driving away, the little girl yelled, "But I promise I didn't steal anything!"

Maybe she didn't trust me.

Maybe she didn't give me her true name. Maybe my detour from home after a hard week was a waste of time. I am not a parent, but at that moment I think I knew how a parent must feel. You can love kids, teach them, and show them the way to go, but in the end, they're on their own.

Unemployment fears

After Ronald Reagan's Federalism speech the White House said its telephone calls were running 2 to 1 in his favor. Isn't that part of the contract with AT&T?

If you want to call in and protest Reagan's new program you may not get an instant line to the White House but you won't have a bit of trouble reaching one of the TV networks.

MANY LEGISLATORS are eager to keep the U.S. employment service healthy. Until they've run for reelection they won't know how much they'll need it.

Former Big Spring resident Lawrence Welk is giving up his band performance on TV at the very time it's becoming legal to promote champagne music in Oklahoma.

BEAUTEOUS BERTINA DELEON, former Herald word chaser now employed at Malone-Hogan Hospital, says:

"Nancy Reagan finally found an occasion to use her $1,000-a-place-setting china. She decided she couldn't wait to celebrate balancing the budget."

"After a foreign head of state eats off that $1,000 china, he'll probably double the amount he was going to ask for."

Let's see if any Democrat runs for president on a promise to serve all White House guests on paper plates.

It's not clear yet what kinds of tools are needed by a repair man for solar heating.

FORMER HERALD WORD CHASER, Barbara Wood, who celebrates her birthday Wednesday, says:

"The national debt our children will inherit will keep them from one form of piety—ancestor worship."

Admiral Rickover declines an offer to take an Administration job after he retires from the Navy. He doesn't want to work for anyone as old as Reagan.

Admiral Rickover has been a Navy man so long that people figure when he was a kid he played with boats in the bathtub. But he didn't... that was before he invented the bathtub.

REAGAN IS EXTENDING the program of draft registration. And surely the Russians will understand that it's by popular request.

We are still waiting for the first draft-age fellow to complain that he registered on schedule but the Army hasn't called him.

The battle over creationism is going to continue. The Bible says God took only six days to create the universe, but then he didn't have to deal with appeal courts.

SIGN ON A MINNESOTA PRISON wall: "Any prisoner who escapes during January or February will not be allowed back in."

Nineteen prison inmates have been moved from Big Mac in Oklahoma to federal institutions. Anything to make room for more Oklahoma county commissioners.

Many of us still can't believe it's considered progress in our society when a daytime soap opera moves into prime time.

AND WE'LL NEVER REST easy until the history of the Middle East is no longer published in loose-leaf notebooks.

My ice-eatin' aunt, Fannie Everett, asks:

In this entire land isn't there one person—just one—who will step up and says he likes Ronald Reagan's program but can't stand him personally?

Stop the leaks in Washington

Ronald Reagan, as with all recent presidents, is obsessed with leaks in his administration. He doesn't understand why people who work for him continually spill the beans to the media. And as with all presidents, he insists he's going to put a stop to the leaks at any cost. With all due respect to Mr. Reagan, he has as much chance of stopping leaks in Washington as he does getting his wife to serve State Dinners on Tupperware.

There are all sorts of leaks in Washington. The most common is the "official government leak." Any administration learns very quickly the best way to set off a trial balloon is to leak it to one or two news sources.

Example: "This is Apollo at the White House and what I'm going to tell you is not for attribution. The President is going to put an excess profits tax on suntan oil."

The story is printed in Krupnik's column. All hell breaks loose with the suntan oil lobby, and the President decides to forget it.

THE NEXT DAY the President's press secretary announces, "There is absolutely no foundation to the story that there will be an excess profits tax on suntan oil."

Krupnik calls up Apollo at the White House. "You made me look like a fool."

Apollo says, "We'll make it up to you. We're sending over a top-secret CIA report to you on a KGB call girl ring at the United Nations."

The second most common leak involves someone in the administration who is out to get someone else.

"If you write it, I'll deny it, but Malibu was chewed out by the President yesterday for telling Ed Meese the only one in the administration who believes the 1983 budget figures is Bonzo."

The reporter calls up Malibu and asks him if the story is true.

Malibu says, "The one person who could have told you that was Burbank. If you want the real story, Burbank was caught red-handed stealing jellybeans out of the President's personal jar, and he's been banned from the Oval Office, unless there is another person in the room."

The third type of leak, which is impossible for Mr. Reagan to stop, comes from a disenchanted bureaucrat who sends inside memoranda in plain white envelopes to columnists all over town.

They read like this:

"From the Secretary's Administrative Aide: To All Employees:

"You will soon receive a questionnaire which must be filled out and returned to the Secretary's office no later than Friday, giving your views on Abortion, Gun Control, Busing and Prayers in School."

The purpose of this survey is to help the Secretary get to know his staff better and to encourage a smoother and more efficient relationship in the department. If you do not wish to fill out the questionnaire, you may return it with a note stating your reasons why you refuse to be a team player."

THERE IS ANOTHER type of leak that everyone in Washington is familiar with, and that's one where a person wants to get credit for something he or she has done.

"I'm sorry I'm late for dinner, but I've been working behind the scenes to

Commercials pay for "bad" TV

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am disgusted at some of the television talk shows I see from time to time. Often the guests on these programs are very anti-Christian in their outlook and urge ways of living that are immoral. Is there anything that can be done about this? —Mrs. G.O.

DEAR MRS. G.O.: Television producers and programmers schedule such things because they believe they are what people want. In our society, the television producers will almost never keep a show on the air if they discover no one is watching. In a similar vein, most programs cost a great deal of money to produce, and this money comes from companies which advertise their products on the program.

If the advertisers discover no one is watching, or that people are offended in large numbers by the program and refuse to purchase their product, they will decide not to sponsor it.

That is why you should not hesitate to write those who are responsible for programs you find offensive, both the television station (or network) and the sponsors. You might be surprised how often a relatively few letters can sway a producer or sponsor.

Write also to encourage those who are responsible for good wholesome programs. If a fine program appears, let your station know that you appreciate it. Also, encourage them to give more time to programs of that nature. Remember that talk shows on television (or even on the radio) may have some things which you do not like — but if people show interest in having guests on those programs that stand up for high moral standards they will often allow those kind of guests to appear.

We live in a society which has allowed immorality and evil to be glamorized and excused. Christians have a responsibility to speak out whenever they can. At the same time, we need to realize that we live in a sinful world, and we are called to bear witness to Jesus Christ in the midst of this world. "You are the salt of the earth. ... let your light shine before men, that they may see your good deeds and praise your Father in heaven" (Matthew 5:13, 14, 16).

Some folks not all choked up about completion of dams

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer
CALLIHAM, Texas (AP) — The Choke Canyon Dam — a $100 million government project to provide water for Corpus Christi and the Texas Coastal Bend Area — is nearing completion outside this relocated old oil boom town.

"We're about 95 percent complete with the Dam. We should probably finish it by May," said Allen C. Gates, project construction engineer for the Department of Interior's Water and Power Resources Service.

Gates said the water can begin collecting behind the 116-foot tall concrete dam by April or May, but that it could take anywhere from 8 months to five years before the reservoir reaches its capacity.

At "average inflows," the reservoir would be full in 3½ years, "but you very seldom get average conditions. You either get a dry spell or a wet spell," Gates said.

Known as the "Nueces River Project," although the dam is across the tributary Frio River, the Choke Canyon Dam has been a dream since 1964 and has been under construction since 1978 to provide industrial and municipal water in the South Texas coastal area.

Building the dam has not been accomplished without problems and hard feelings against the government.

Some nearby residents are still upset that their land was taken by eminent domain and others that the entire 64-year-old town of Calliham was moved two miles.

Workers had to relocate two highways, several county roads, utility and telephone poles, plug about 350 oil wells with cement and spend eight years haggling with some disenchanted land and oil lease owners over acquisition of 35,000 acres of land and easements. Gates says land and easement acquisition is now 99 percent complete.

Besides the stable water supply for Corpus Christi and the Nueces River Authority, the main intent of the dam, the reservoir will stretch 19 miles upstream to Tilden, providing a site for at least three new state parks to provide recreation.

Jeff Parrish, a Texas Parks and Wildlife agent stationed here, said Calliham eventually will be a park on a peninsula of the lake featuring a 1,000-foot fishing jetty, a seven-lane boat ramp, a golf course, swimming pool, tennis courts and cabins.

"It's supposed to really be something," the wildlife agent beamed. "It'll be one of the biggest recreational areas in the state."

Although thousands of South Texans will benefit from the dam, several former residents of Old Calliham are not too happy they had to leave their town to make way for a state park and campground where their homes used to be.

Calliham was founded in 1918 after a hole on Charlie Byrnes' land began to blow warm sulphur water and gas 120 feet into the air every eight days, providing the town its own geyser that drew curiosity seekers from miles around.

Then known as Guffeyola, after storeowner H.H. McGuffey, the town grew into a booming community of tents and shotgun houses after driller W.M. Stephenson brought in a 62-million-cubic-foot-a-day natural gas well that spewed out of control for three months.

Eventually the well was capped and a pipeline was run 68 miles to the north to San Antonio, providing that city with its first natural gas.

Several residents such as Travis Calliham, 33, grandson of the rancher for whom the town was renamed in 1924, and Calliham's father-in-law, Doug Smith, agreed to sell their land, located in the flood plain, to the government for the reservoir project.

But they said they had little choice. And they are having second thoughts now that the land they sold for an average $450 is selling for up to $3,500 because of inflation and appreciation brought on by the proposed recreation facilities.

They also said government negotiators misled residents into thinking Calliham would be under water, when that now is said to be highly unlikely.

"It bothered me (to move)," said Calliham, an oilfield worker wearing a T-shirt inscribed "I Could Do Great Things If I Weren't So Busy Doing Little Things."

"Anytime you come and tell a man to move out of his house and he's not wanting to move, it kind of hanks you off," Calliham said.

"Some people were pretty well satisfied. Some weren't," added Smith, who had lived in Old Calliham since 1927 and went to school there. "But there's not one damn thing we can do about it now but bellyache."

Calliham said he did not see any choice but to settle for the government offer because, "you don't go into somebody's backyard (the federal courts) and fight them. A little person can't buck them. Any person who'd make any money would be the attorney."

Smith advises other communities faced with mass condemnation to "get together. That's one of the things that tore us up here. We were not an incorporated town."

Arthur Byrne, 75, on whose grandfather's ranch the geyser began to blow in 1918, has been one of the last holdouts on giving up his land.

Byrne said last week he had reached a tentative agreement, but still had not signed any papers or touched any of the government money put in escrow for the 254 acres of his ranch taken by eminent domain.

"Listen, I was raised out there and there was no way," Byrne said at his automobile repair shop in nearby Three Rivers. "They were taking it for a park. They took it by eminent domain a year before I knew it — no hearing, no nothing. All I could do was get on my knees and pray that justice would be done. I sure wasn't going to let them run me off for nothing."

"They were mad at me because I wouldn't jump when they said frog. They're no better than bank robbers. Our biggest fault is that eminent domain is placed in the hands of immature and incompetent people. I'm obeying the federal law to stay off the property, but I'm not conceding. I don't think my government is the kind of government that would take a man's land without a hearing for both sides."

Gates said he sympathized with the landowners' position, but that eminent domain was exercised for the overall public good only after property owners and the government could not reach a price after extended negotiation.

"The problem is that anytime you decide to build a dam or highways, the landowner says, 'hell, put it somewhere else. I've lived here all my life and want to continue to live here.' You can see there's no way everybody can be happy. Even if he felt in his own mind he was treated right financially, he didn't volunteer to move," the federal official said.

"The people of Calliham have been very fine people. We feel we've made every effort to be fair in all our dealings with them. We feel we have to protect the general public, too. It's federal funds, taxpayers funds we are using and have certain regulations we have to follow. Generally speaking, I feel we're getting along very well with the majority of people in Calliham. They could not have stuck together, but they did stick together and they did stay in their little community because they did love it."

However, Edna Hamblet, 65, who came here in 1952 and has been postmistress the past 17 years, said the government relocation did slice Calliham's population in half.

There were 40 families and about 200 people in Old Calliham, while only 26 families allowed the government to finance their move up the hill to New Calliham, which still is under reconstruction and has no store of its own, she said.

At her last count, Calliham now has 94 people living in it, she said.

"I have a better house, but not as good a location," she said. "Some people have been helped, some hurt. Some got tired of waiting.

They didn't think we'd have another town. Some moved to Normanna, Three Rivers, Pleasanton, Abilene, all over."

"I think everybody was upset," said Santos Valdez Jr., 21. "Everybody loved the old place. I grew up over there."

Gates conceded that only in extreme flood situations would the water ever inundate Calliham, but that federal regulations required that all the land in the flood plain be acquired to prevent any damage suits should major flooding occur.

Gates said the government — besides purchasing the land and houses — paid moving expenses for those who wanted to stay in the new town, plus up to $15,000 extra for those who could not find housing of comparable value in their new places of residence.

"We tried to be liberal with it, but that does not help Mr. Byrne and others with sentimental value. I can certainly feel for them," Gates said. "My own father had a state highway cut one corner off the farm. We felt the same way. I understand. Even though financially we treated them fairly, we can't do much about the sentimental part. This is a problem we always have to face."

Hand-to-hand combat

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Hurling grenades and firing assault rifles, flak-jacketed troops fought house to house and in some cases hand to hand Saturday against diehard anti-government Moslem extremists holed up in the northern city of Hama, Syrian officials said.

There were indications from several Syrian officials that the Moslem Brotherhood rebels hiding in the alley-laced Hida section of the city would fight to the death and that Syrian soldiers were not offering the option of surrender.

"The search is continuing and will continue until each hostile ant is exterminated," said Information Minister Ahmed Iskandar. The outlawed Moslem Brotherhood is fighting to oust the 12-year-old leftist government of President Hafez Assad and replace it with an Islamic fundamentalist regime.

Well-placed government sources said that since the fighting started Feb. 2, the fundamentalists suffered 2,000 wounded and Syrian troops 400. There was no official estimate of the number killed, but Western diplomatic sources said the death toll was in the high hundreds.

The state news agency and several Syrian officials said the army had retaken almost all of the city of 250,000, located 120 miles north of Damascus.

But other officials, who requested anonymity, said diehard rebels not only were holed up in the ancient Hida quarter but in more modern government buildings, preventing the army, which rings the city, from leveling artillery at their hideouts.

Until Friday night, Syrian authorities had characterized the Hama fighting as a limited police-army action to arrest criminals hiding in the city.

What's worrisome to the Syrians is how well armed the extremists are. "The army thought they could get it over with in 24 hours," said a well-placed Syrian source. "They did not expect them (the fundamentalists) to have such weapons."

The Syrian sources asked that their names not be disclosed.

Actress out of hospital

DALLAS (AP) — Actress Shelley Winters was released from Presbyterian Hospital Saturday after a two-day stay for treatment of the flu.

The 60-year-old two-time Oscar winner had canceled performances Thursday and Friday at a local dinner theater, where she has been starring in Neil Simon's comedy, "The Gingerbread Lady." She planned to resume performances Saturday night.

Miss Winters entered the hospital Thursday in satisfactory condition, said Presbyterian's assistant administrator Bill Mays.

"She is being treated for a flu she's been fighting," Pamela Sweeting, Miss Winters' secretary, said Friday. "But she's looking much better today. She has more color in her cheeks."

Miss Winters was starring in a five-week run of the play at Granny's Dinner Playhouse.

The play had been scheduled to end Sunday, but the two canceled shows now have been reset for Monday and Tuesday.

Miss Winters felt nauseous and weak when she got up Thursday and a doctor insisted she be hospitalized, Ms. Sweeting said.

Her susceptibility to colds, a back injury suffered in Chicago last year and the fact that she has "pushed herself" during the Dallas show all contributed to Miss Winters' exhaustion, Ms. Sweeting said.

Miss Winters has won Academy Awards as best supporting actress for "The Diary of Anne Frank" in 1959 and "A Patch of Blue" in 1965.

Boll weevil proposes spending cuts, revenue hikes

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, a Democrat who co-sponsored Ronald Reagan's economic packages in Congress last year, today proposed a package of spending cuts and revenue increases designed to trim $142 billion off the proposed deficit the next three years.

Gramm, distraught over Reagan's projected $91 billion deficit, wants to trim tax loopholes ranging from the businessman's "three-martini lunch" to interest payments on consumer loans.

He also wants to double the excise tax on alcohol and cigarettes. The administration considered, then rejected, raising such taxes.

Gramm thinks the requirement that the government pay the "prevailing wage" to workers on federal construction projects should be waived.

He also wants a cap on defense spending increases.

Gramm, of College Station, is a former Texas A&M economics professor. He was in Fort Worth to keynote the annual Economic Outlook Conference of the chamber of commerce.

The Boll Weevil congressman said his economic package would pare the proposed deficits from $91.5 billion to $58.8 billion in 1983, from $82.9 billion to $34.7 billion in 1984 and from $71.9 billion to only $10.4 billion in 1985.

Gramm is expected to run into substantial opposition in Congress, especially from consumer groups, labor unions and the liquor and tobacco industries.

He said the federal government could cut the deficits by a total of $45 billion over the three-year period through the sale of "non-essential" federal properties, including abandoned military bases, deserted federal buildings, vacant urban lots and public grazing land.

The proposal that will anger consumers is the one where Gramm will urge that personal income tax deductions for interest paid on consumer loans — including credit card purchases — be limited to home mortgages and the first $1,000 on interest on auto loans. This would increase revenues by $14.6 billion over three years, he said.

Gramm said the current allowance of tax deductions for interest paid on credit card purchases acts to "promote consumption and discourage saving," thus limiting the money available for investment.

By LILA ESTES

Q. I understand quite a lot of what is called "fee-splitting" goes on among real estate agents. I know this practice is often frowned upon in some other professions. Why is it permitted in real estate?

A. The reason fee-splitting is respectable and above-board in real estate is quite a few people may be involved in one transaction. It is, for example, unusual for one real estate agent to represent both buyer and seller. Services performed by many different people may include: putting the property on the market, showing the property, finding a buyer, negotiating the final selling price and completing the legal paperwork for both buyer and seller. Several people have worked on the transaction, each necessary to its completion.

Texas entering most costly political season in history

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas, awash in oil and bustling with business — the golden buckle of the Sun Belt — is entering the most expensive political season in its history.

The importance of money in the May primary and November general elections was underscored when one contest, which almost developed, was described as being between "a rich millionaire" and "a poor millionaire."

Dave Helfert, partner in an Austin advertising agency, has estimated that Texas candidates for statewide offices, Congress and the Legislature, will spend $90 million in 1982.

Possibly the best illustration of how much political campaigns cost was the withdrawal of state Sen. Peyton McKnight, D-Tyler, from the governor's race.

McKnight is a Daddy Warbucks-type independent oil operator whose long limousine used to stick so far out into the Capitol drive that people would joke that it blocked traffic.

He has wealthy friends in the oil and gas industry and among thousands of Texas A&M ex-students, yet he backed out Feb. 1 rather than borrowing $1 million to keep his campaign going. He had already spent $1.5 million of his own money on the abbreviated race, and said, "Money is the bottom line in the election and that is why I got out."

McKnight is the "poor millionaire." The "rich millionaire" is Gov. Bill Clements, who spent a record $7.2 million in the 1978 campaign that made him Texas' first Republican governor in 100 years.

Published reports said Clements — founder of SEDCO, Inc., an international oil well drilling company — is prepared to spend $10 million this year even though he has no major GOP opponent and can concentrate on the general election. Although the $10 million figure has been greeted with general denials, Clements has said he would "spend whatever is necessary to win."

"When it's money vs. money, the Republicans are going to win," said Dwayne Holman, campaign director for Attorney General Mark White, a Democratic candidate for governor. "Ultimately, they have more of that particular weapon. I don't think you can pick a political fight with the Republicans and make money the weapon."

Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple might prove that theory wrong. Temple, a last-minute entry in the Democratic governor's race, is the son of Arthur Temple Jr., vice chairman of Time Inc.

"He can raise the necessary funds," said McKnight. "I don't perceive of him running short of cash," said Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas. "These people are multi-billionaires, I suspect."

"Buddy Temple and the millions and millions his daddy is going to give him will not buy the office," said Lefty Morris, campaign director for Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, the third major Democratic candidate for governor.

"I do fully intend to spend some of my own money, some of my family's money," said Temple. "but I do not go into this thing saying I'm going to throw as much money at this as somebody might think it takes."

Temple was asked how much it would take to "stay competitive" if Clements spends $10 million, and he replied:

"I haven't run the numbers on it, but I think $4 million to $5 million, possibly less than that. I think the only reason Gov. Clements is talking about a $10 million budget is because he realizes — as I realize — that he's in bad trouble. ... I don't think it's going to take anywhere near matching what he spends to defeat him resoundingly."

With so much talk about big bucks, it seemed quaint when David Young, who quit his job as a department store salesman to run for the Democratic nomination for governor, announced that he would spend less than $10,000 of his own money and would not seek contributions from others. "Money talks, sure ... the tycoon mentality that you go out and buy what you want ... but right ideas and right thinking can talk even louder," said Young.

In the U.S. Senate race, Democratic incumbent Lloyd Bentsen has raised nearly $2 million for his re-election campaign — more than twice the amount raised by all three Republican Senate candidates — and Holman notes, "There's a lot of competition for the political dollar this year. If I had my druthers, I wouldn't run in the same year that Lloyd Bentsen's running."

Bentsen was out front so fast in fund-raising that he even got the maximum personal contribution of $1,000 from the younger Temple and his wife.

Bentsen estimated he would spend $5 million on his campaign, and one of his opponents, Rep. Jim Collins, R-Texas, said he also would have to raise that much money to beat Bentsen.

What also is expected to be the most expensive lieutenant governor's race in history matches Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, a Democrat, and Republican George Strake, former secretary of state.

Hobby has gotten by with only token campaigning since he was elected in 1972, but this year an aide said of reports that Hobby might spend $2 million — "that's a little light."

Strake hopes to raise as much as $3 million to break the Democrats' century-plus lock on that office, and Hobby's Dallas campaign director, Ron Kessler, says, "From what I hear, he (Strake) has got money, and anybody who has money in politics gets my attention. Money ... will legitimize a gorilla."

Even campaign budgets for "down-the-ballot" races such as comptroller, treasurer, land commissioner and agriculture commissioner have reached six and seven figures.

When state Sen. Mike Richards, R-Houston, announced for comptroller and estimated the race would cost $2 million, GOP candidate Buddy Clarke of Dallas withdrew, stating that Richards "is able to raise the necessary funds to defeat the incumbent" — Bob Bullock.

Rep. Bill Keese, D-Somerville, also gave up his dream of statewide office when former Travis County Commissioner Ann Richards said she would be a candidate for state treasurer.

"Frankly," said Keese, Ms. Richards "has the basis of a more substantial statewide campaign organization than I now do and more likelihood of raising the funds necessary for a successful statewide campaign."

House Speaker Bill Clayton collected more than $300,000 as part of a $1 million campaign for land commissioner, then pulled out, saying he had a farming deal that was too good to pass up. State Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson, D-Midland, also said he could raise $1 million for the race.

State Rep. Dan Kubiak said Clayton's withdrawal was the key to his decision to run for land commissioner. "With Bill Clayton in the race, it would have been impossible for a person with my limited resources to get into the race, because that would have been a multi-million dollar race," said Kubiak, D-Rockdale.

Garry Mauro, former director of the Texas Democratic Party, has indicated he expects to spend more than $500,000 in the land commissioner's race, and Kubiak said 50 supporters have promised to raise $250,000 for the May 1 Democratic primary. He admits, however, he will run "on instinct and intuition more than anything else."

Congresswoman blasts Reagan administration

HOUSTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is "destroying the quality of life for America," particularly for the poor, ethnic minorities and women, U.S. Rep. Shirley Chisholm says.

"Many of the things we (blacks and women) have gained in the last 15 years are on the legislative or executive assault," Chisholm said at a meeting sponsored by the Congressional Black Caucus and the Minority Women's Association.

The caucus also sponsored a march on Houston City Hall Saturday, where about 200 people protested federal budget cuts.

Chisholm, at a Friday news conference, stopped short of calling President Reagan a racist but said his actions "lead me to think there are some racial overtones."

The congresswoman, who in 1968 became the first black woman to win election to the U.S. House, announced last week she would not seek another term. Mrs. Chisholm indicated her future activities would include organization work for female political candidates, but she declined to specify.

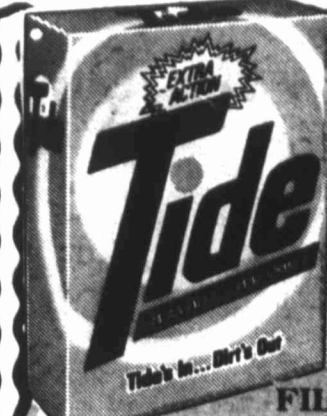

"This is not my funeral," she said. Mrs. Chisholm, who ran for president in 1972, said there was a bloodless "revolution" taking place in Washington.

"The restructuring of the federal government under the guise of the New Federalism concept is actually destroying the quality of life for America," she said.

She also called the president's federalism program "another name for a return to state's rights" and blasted the administration-sponsored tax cuts as "fraud and deception being perpetrated on the American people."

The Republican administration has embarked on a military spending program that could result in federal expenditures of $1 trillion, almost 60 percent of the budget, on defense by 1985 to the further detriment of social programs, Mrs. Chisholm said.

Reagan too busy to meet with beleaguered farmers

States News Service WASHINGTON — President Reagan has told 42 farm legislators, including U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, that he is too busy to meet with them to discuss the beleaguered farm economy.

Some of the congressmen, including several southern Democrats who supported Reagan's budget proposals last year, charge that the refusal proves Reagan is unsympathetic to farmers.

The congressmen requested an "urgent" meeting with the president in a letter last month. "It is impossible to overstate how bad economic conditions are for the agricultural sector," stated the letter which also was signed by U.S. Reps. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, Sam Hall, D-Marshall, Jack

Hightower, D-Vernon, Marvin Frost, D-Dallas, and William Patman, D-Ganado. Gregory Newell, a presidential special assistant, replied in a two-paragraph letter Thursday: "I know the president shares your concerns. Unfortunately, because of the heavy demands of his schedule, it's not possible to arrange a meeting at this time."

Rep. Hance questioned whether Reagan actually saw the letter and plans to resubmit the request next week.

"If that's their true answer, it shows a callous position towards a large segment of society that has more problems than anyone," Hance said.

The congressmen say farmers are living in Great Depression conditions and need emergency assistance.

According to the Agriculture Department, the national farm debt rose $16.8 billion in 1980. Moreover, farm net income decreased significantly in 1981 and bankruptcies increased.

The farm state leaders believe that their constituents are dissatisfied with the $11-billion farm bill of 1981 which authorizes lower price supports.

The letter to Reagan was organized by South Dakota Democratic U.S. Rep. Tom Daschle.

"He can meet with the Chamber of Commerce, with just about anyone but not us. It shows that this administration has no concern for the plight of the farmer," complained Chuck Timantis, a Daschle aide.

Valentine Dance held for patients at BSSH

Hearts, cupid, ribbons and lace were all part of the decorations at the Valentine Dance held on Wednesday for the patients at Big Spring State Hospital.

Sponsoring the fun filled evening was the All Veterans Planning Council. These volunteers provided and served refreshments. Three of these members also served as judges for the king and queen contest.

Each unit had previously selected a king and queen candidate to compete in the contest. Winners of the contest were representatives of the West Psychiatric Unit (South). The winners were awarded corsages, a box of chocolate candy and canteen books. All other contestants were presented corsages and a box of candy.

The Adolescent Unit also had an equally fun time on February 9, thanks to 12 members of the Big Spring High School F.H.A. and their sponsors, Mrs. Virginia Martin and Mrs. Charliotta Hamilton. They, too, provided an served refreshments.

This is the second year the F.H.A. has sponsored the Valentine Party for the Adolescent Unit.

The love month has certainly been a fun month at Big Spring State Hospital.

82,000 Texas students' aid faces federal ax

By BILL GARLAND
States News Service
WASHINGTON — A total of 82,000 Texas college students could lose $153 million in federal aid if Congress passes President Reagan's proposed 1983 budget.

That estimate was made late Thursday by the Texas State Office in Washington, which analyzed in greater detail the effect of Reagan's budget cuts on specific Texas programs.

As anticipated, major areas affected by budget cutbacks in Texas would include funding for programs in human resources and education. Funds would be cut for energy, natural resources, community development and transportation programs.

The Reagan budget may meet strong resistance in Congress, and many of the cuts may not be approved.

A significant cut in human resources would be in the Medicaid program, which Reagan wants to reduce and then switch back to state government as part of his "New Federalism" proposal.

Under the 1983 budget, Texans would receive approximately $70 million less in Medicaid funding than in the current year. "A number of people would be cut off," said Lynn Leverty, human resources coordinator at the Texas office.

The office estimated that Texas would receive $639 million in Medicaid funding for 1983, down from $709 million for 1982.

Both the food stamp program and the program for Aid to Families with Dependent Children would be reduced in Texas by approximately 5 percent. In 1982, Texans received $698 million in food stamp funds and $102 million for AFDC.

Also in human resources, cuts would be made in social services, community services, low income energy assistance and programs for maternal and child health.

In the area of natural resources, the state would lose approximately $10 million in sewage treatment construction grants. Overall soil conservation funding would drop in the Reagan budget although certain programs would receive an increase in funding, including a new program allowing state agencies to plan and manage soil conservation.

The Farmers Home Administration would lose money under the 1983 plan, but the Texas office indicated that the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund would pick up the slack, keeping overall farm credit loans and guarantees about the same.

In community development, Texas would receive the same funding as in fiscal 1982 for Community Development Block Grants and for general revenue sharing, which under the Reagan budget would only go to local government.

The Economic Development Assistance program, which provided Texas with $12 million in 1981, would provide no funding in 1983, when the program would wind down and be eliminated.

In addition to the loss of student loans, Texas will drop significantly in the amount of funds it would receive in the program for compensatory education for the disadvantaged. The state would get about $152.8 million in 1983, a cutback of approximately 38 percent.

Bilingual education also would be cut to about $13 million for Texas, down 40 percent from the present school year.

SPOUSES AT CONVENTIONS (A Business Deduction?)

If your spouse accompanies you on business trips and conventions, what can you deduct and how must it be substantiated?

As a general rule, expenses for your spouse are deductible only if it can be established that a legitimate business interest was served by your spouse's presence. Incidental services by your spouse, such as typing notes and assisting in entertaining customers, are not sufficient to warrant a deduction.

To deduct expenses in connection with a convention, the regulations provide a two-part test which must be met: 1) the meeting itself must be an ordinary and necessary business expense for the company; and 2) there must be scheduled activities such as meetings, seminars, product displays, etc. These programs must constitute the principal activity of the convention.

If you are unable to deduct the expenses incurred by your spouse, you can, however, take the full cost of a single person attending. If you rent or drive a car, you are entitled to the full expense even if your spouse accompanies you. The single "full fare" for an airplane ticket and lodging are deductible even though the family plan may have allowed you a reduced price.

If you are traveling as an employee, your spouse could have an arrangement directly with your employer for special duties at these meetings for which her expenses would be reimbursed.

The tax court and the Internal Revenue Service have hashed this ground over thoroughly and anyone contemplating a sizeable deduction should review the tracks of those who walked before them.

It's almost quittin' time for Alexander the Great

Broken broncs, broken records, broken bones

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — No regrets, says Alexander the Great.

It's been highs and lows, peaks and valleys, heart-stopping and heart-breaking.

Broken broncs, broken records and broken bones.

It's been Cheyenne and Denver and San Francisco and Oklahoma City and Houston and Albuquerque and Kansas City and Phoenix and Reno and Dallas.

And last week Fort Worth.

It's been one wife, five world bareback championships, $500,000 in prize money and hundreds of thousands of miles via car, bus, plane, taxi and horseback.

"And the best fight you ever saw," grinned Joe Alexander, 38, a native of Jackson Hole, Wyo., and now a Marysville, Calif., rancher.

But it's almost quittin' time, says Joe, one of professional rodeo's winningest bareback riders and, his colleagues say, one of its nicest guys.

It was the late sports columnist Red Smith who nicknamed him "Alexander the Great," which is a little deceiving.

At 5-8 and 155, Joe more closely resembles a gentleman jockey than the rider who dominated bareback bronc competition during much of the last decade.

Size, says Joe, is unimportant. "You got to have timing, a rhythm with the animal, and you got to be fairly strong and agile, with good balance and a good attitude."

And being a little crazy "wouldn't hurt," he added.

Since 1970, when he began specializing in bareback riding, Joe has won five world titles and two Professional Rodeo Cowboy Association crowns.

He qualified 12 times for the National Finals Rodeo. The NFR is to the nomadic cowboy what the World Series is to baseball and the Super Bowl to football.

But Joe's last world championship came in 1975 and his final PCRA title in 1977.

"I kept saying I was going to slow down, maybe take a year off," he said during a lull in the recent Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show rodeo.

"I never did."

Why?

"I don't know. I like riding broncs. It's a fairly easy way to make a living. I like the people, if not the travel. And after I'm home a bit, I get the urge to go again."

Still...

"I've got to quit. A guy hates to quit, but there is a time and place for everything. I think it's about that time. I can still ride and compete, but not as often."

"You can't beat that youth. Those young guys, they got you."

"I grew up a-dreamin' of being a cowboy,
"And lovin' the cowboy ways,
"Pursuin' the life of my high ridin' heroes,
"I burned up my childhood days." — Willie Nelson, "My Heroes Have Always Been Cowboys."

As a youngster growing up on his parents' ranch near Cora, Wyo., Joe Alexander took naturally to fishing, hunting, skiing and ranching.

In high school, he excelled in football, track and basketball, then headed for college, first at Casper Junior College and then the University of Wyoming at Laramie.

As a collegian, he became enamored with rodeoing, competing in saddle bronc, bareback and bull riding, as well as steer wrestling and ribbon roping.

"I never liked the bulls," Joe recalled. "I did it to help the team get points. I could ride them pretty well, but they scared me."

They scared him mostly, he laughed, when they stepped on him, which was not infrequently.

"I was always about half crippled."

Bareback was something else. "It was easy for me. A piece of cake."

He won the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association bareback championship in 1966 and was runner-up in 1967, the same year he earned full membership in the Rodeo Cowboys Association.

The RCA picked up the word "professional" a few years ago and is now the PRCA.

About the time Joe was seriously considering a rodeo career, the sport was undergoing sweeping changes.

Casey Tibbs and Jim Shoulders and Harry Tompkins and Bill Linderman were household words, but mostly in old households. Rodeo needed new blood and a new image.

It would be one and the same, and he would forever alter the public perception of the rodeo cowboy, as well as the cowboys themselves.

His name was Larry Mahan, and he would do for rodeoing what Arnold Palmer did for golf.

"He was the best thing to ever happen to rodeoing," said Joe, who, like Mahan, is a non-smoking athlete with no time and little inclination for boozing and brawling.

"Larry was the toughest man I've ever seen. He worked three events every day. He would be one place in the afternoon and someplace else that night.

"He was good, tough and smart. And still is."

Mahan rode bulls, saddle broncs and bareback broncs like no one before or since, winning world championships as the best all-around cowboy six times between 1966 and 1973.

"He was the only one I can recall who could hold up under that pace," said Joe.

It hardly hurt that Mahan also was handsome and had a tongue to match his silver belt buckle, rarely meeting a reporter he didn't like.

"He was just a winner," recalled Joe.

Like Mahan, Joe chose not to walk on the wild side, saying: "I could name you a dozen really good guys who traveled in the fast lane. But they didn't last long."

Joe recalled the heady moments when he won his first national title in 1971, and his last, with an amazing finish, in 1975.

"It makes you feel super," he said. "Like it's all worthwhile. The money's not too bad, but more importantly, you feel like you're on top of the world."

And then there were the other times, like Ellensburg, Wash., and a horse named Necklace. Necklace nearly killed him.

"Got my hand hung in the bareback rigging," Joe remembered, vividly. "Dragged me around the arena a lap and a half. And it was a big arena."

"She kicked me in the head and knocked me unconscious. She finally stepped on me—both legs—and pulled me loose."

Necklace sent Joe to the hospital overnight and home to Wyoming for 10 days.

Wilson named Employee of Month at prison

Dan O. Wilson, correctional officer, has been selected as Employee of the Month at the Big Spring Prison for the month of January 1982.

...high performance

According to officials at the camp, the award is presented to an employee who has demonstrated above average or outstanding performance, or who has provided a special service or contribution to a special program.

Since November 1981, Officer Wilson has been assigned to the receiving and discharge section of the FPC, Big Spring. Normally, this assignment is given to a veteran officer with extensive time in service.

Wilson performed the duties of this post as an experienced and veteran officer. During the Christmas holidays the furloughs, receiving of new commitments, and packages were twice the normal workload; however, Wilson was able to deal with all work put before him and in most cases within the allowed or limited amount of time.

In addition, Wilson has been highly essential in assisting the correctional supervisor in rewriting and updating of Post Orders.

Dan's consistent high performance of normal work duties during the month combined with his superior effort in the above service has qualified him for Employee of the Month for January 1982.

'Nice Jewish boy' reviled by many

By KATHY BAKER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — He describes himself as a "nice Jewish boy," who's been reviled by "Negroes, rednecks, all kinds of weirdos, religious fanatics, Jews, women's libbers, Indians."

The amused offender is Richard Friedman, a kind, 35-year-old, sure-nuff nice Jewish boy from Austin.

But when he hides his sensitive brown eyes behind dark glasses, dresses in flamboyant cowboy garb and strides onstage, he is transformed into "Kinky Friedman" — an outrageous, satirical mutation of a country-western singer, who calls his band "The Texas Jewboys."

Many of his songs can't even be described in a family newspaper, but the milder include "They Don't Make Jews Like Jesus Anymore," "Get Your Biscuits in the Oven and Your Buns in Bed" and "The Ballad of Charles Whitman."

But he's also written some poignant, folksy-country tunes like "Western Union Wire," "From Billy at the bottom to Baby at the top... Don't leave me (stop)."

A songwriter who isn't really into music — "I haven't owned a victrola for as long as I can remember" — Friedman turned to butchering everybody's sacred cows back in the early '70s in Austin.

"I had the idea for this band of Texas Jewboys, putting together the dominant roots of my background — my Texas background and my Jewish background," he said in an interview at an Austin restaurant. "It was pretty much like oil and water. It worked good from a media sense, but in a commercial sense — the name couldn't be used in television, it couldn't be used on radio and it couldn't be used on records. Other than that, it was pretty good."

The band toured the country for several years, but the road became "tedious, and it was dangerous out there when you stop and think about what we were doing." Now he's settled in Manhattan and is sort of the house act at the Lone Star Cafe — New York's not-even-a-reasonable-facsimile of a honky-tonk.

Although he's seen so rarely in Texas any more that fans wonder whatever happened to him, he is busier than ever. He is writing the music for Larry King's next theatrical effort following the rousing success of King's "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." This one is a musical called "Kingfish" about assassinated Louisiana Gov. Huey Long.

Friedman's also pushing a new album — one of those "operators are standing by" TV offers — called "Live at the Lone Star Cafe."

"This is in the tradition of Slim Whitman and Boxcar Willie," Friedman said. "This album has more integrity than anything since 'Jim Nabors' Greatest Hits.'"

He hopes the TV album will make money, but he's particularly excited about the collaboration with King on "Kingfish."

"It's a big shot for me. It's something I've never done," he said. "I've written some good, hummable, catchy melodies. The lyrics are a little off-the-wall. But if we can keep this thing zany and slightly offensive enough to make the Broadway sophisticates shudder, I think we've probably got a winner."

He's even found a personal link with Huey Long. "He was killed by the grandfather of a friend of mine. You know the guy from 'Chuck E.'s in Love'? The Ricki Lee Jones song? That's Chuck E. Weiss. His grandfather was the Dr. Carl Weiss who killed Huey Long."

Although no one ever tried to assassinate him, Friedman was physically attacked on occasion during a career that he said germinated in Borneo — a land he claims would never have experienced the cultural advantage of the frisbee, if it weren't for him.

He joined the Peace Corps after graduating from college and planned to go to Africa, but was "deselected" from that group — an act he views as suspicious and possibly connected to one of his early recording efforts, a ditty called "Beach Party Boo-Boo."

Instead he went to Borneo and operated a kind of boys' club for the native children.

"My mother sent 40 frisbees over to me. That's my claim — I believe I am the man that brought frisbee to Borneo."

"I had a wonderful time and got to know a lot of the people over there. Kind of left them on the other side of a dream and came back here."

But if Friedman got on well with the natives of Borneo his Texas Jewboy persona frequently displeased a variety of groups when the band took to touring in the mid-70s.

"We did a show in Buffalo, and I guess women's lib was just getting very militant at that time," he said. "We did this song, 'Get Your Biscuits in the Oven and Your Buns in Bed' — it's a comedy song, it's just a funny song."

"But these women started charging the stage. Some of them were just hysterical and crying. They started pulling equipment out of the walls. It got pretty ugly. So the police came in and started carrying these girls out."

Atlanta storm dumps snow on Virginia

By The Associated Press

A storm off Cape Hatteras spread up to half a foot of snow from Virginia to New Jersey on Saturday and pounded some coastal areas with gale-force winds.

Gales raked the Virginia coast and Chesapeake Bay while heavy rains fell in the Carolinas.

Dense fog made driving difficult in central and southern Illinois, most of Indiana, and southwestern Michigan.

But, for the most part, milder weather returned to the frozen Midwest with only a few places reporting temperatures below zero. Pellston, Mich., was the coldest place in the nation at 18 below.

In Hawaii, a storm that had produced 150-mph winds abated Friday afternoon and 26 students who had been trapped in a cabin at a dormant volcano crater for two days walked out to safety.

The Saturday storm pushing northward off the Atlantic Coast dropped 6 inches of snow in southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore, putting into effect snow emergency plans in 10 counties.

Maryland state police reported numerous minor accidents. "Roads are dangerous," said state police Sgt. Gary Bounds. "Most people are staying home. If they get out, they are going to be in trouble until they get all those roads plowed."

Parts of Virginia got up to 5 inches of snow, with 3 inches reported in Richmond, Lynchburg and Farmville.

Washington, D.C., got only about an inch, while Philadelphia and New York City escaped with only a dusting.

Heavy snow was falling in southern New Jersey, snarling traffic in the Atlantic City area, and a forecaster for the National Weather Service in Pomona, N.J., said South Jersey would get 3 to 4 inches as the storm pushed northward toward Cape Cod.

A storm moving through

Kentucky on Friday evening dumped up to 4 inches in Lexington and some other areas, disrupting rush-hour traffic and causing a rash of accidents. Hopkinsville got 3 inches and Louisville 2.5 inches.

Elsewhere, a high wind warning was posted along the Front Range of the Rockies in Colorado for winds of 40 mph gusting to 75 mph.

Some cities in northern Minnesota and northern Michigan reported subzero temperatures, but temperatures were above freezing from eastern Texas to the southern Atlantic Coast states, with morning lows in the 50s and 60s across Florida. By contrast, on the same date in 1899, it was 7 below zero at New Orleans, 1 below at Mobile and 2 below at Tallahassee, Fla., the coldest reading ever for Florida.

Future of job placement programs in Texas hazy

By DIANE BALLARD
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A bill passed by Congress last week may solve immediate funding problems for the Texas Employment Commission, but the future of job placement programs in Texas still is uncertain.

After a series of deep federal cuts that wiped out about 30 percent of the Employment Commission's budget, some commissioners and staff members suspected the Reagan administration is trying to dismantle the entire job placement program.

The cuts forced 71 of TEC's 146 local employment offices to close and hundreds of employees to be laid off.

Responding to political pressure, President Reagan requested that Congress restore a 12 percent cut to employment agencies that was made in December. That extra money, which Congress approved last week, would only cover fiscal year 1982, however.

"There needs to be some looking forward to long-term solutions," says Ernie Tullis, TEC administrator. Tullis has asked the three commissioners to send several staff members to Washington to contact the Texas Congressional delegation about funding.

Commissioners and staff say the public outcry over local office closings has created support among the Texas delegation for increased agency funding.

"From what I hear, there is a feeling among the delegation to do some good," commissioner Ken Clapp says.

Jerry Biscoe, TEC information director, says, "I think there is a feeling of support for us in Washington."

Although the bill before Congress to restore the 12 percent cut has passed, Texas still will come up short.

Only about 56 of the 71 offices closing can be reopened with the restored funds, Tullis says. The extra cost of reinstalling telephone lines and equipment and renegotiating leases for offices that already have closed will prohibit reopening all the offices, he says.

Even with the restoration, at best, the agency will have lost 21 local offices and about 800 employees the past year. Reagan's proposed fiscal year 1983 budget for employment agencies is less than allocated under the present budget for 1982, says Floyd Edwards, regional administrator of the Department of Labor office in Dallas.

Although the agency's budget would decrease over the next few years under Reagan's proposals, Edwards says: "I don't think there's any move to dismantle the programs."

Some agency staff members and state leaders say the answer to long-term funding problems is to allow states to administer and retain a large portion of FUTA, the federal unemployment tax paid by employers in each state.

Texas employers now pay $42 a year per employee to the federal government under the FUTA tax, which is then divided among the states. Part of the money is kept by the Department of Labor and Internal Revenue Service.

Currently, Texas only gets back about 37 percent of what Texas employers pay into the FUTA pot.

Some of the rest of that money goes to other states, mostly in the north where the unemployment rate is higher.

House Speaker Bill Clayton favors returning the FUTA program to states as a solution to TEC's ills.

He says: "...the root of our problem is the federal program of collecting FUTA taxes from the states and returning the funds disproportionately to the contribution that each state has made. One of my goals is to seek the return of the FUTA tax problem to state control."

Commission Chairman Nolan Ward says he is for any program whereby Texas receives a better share of FUTA. "We want more money for Texas," Ward says. "If it means we retain the federal system but Texas gets a more equitable share — whatever method is used, we're for either one that gets us more money back."

Ford, UAW near agreement on contract

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers union reached tentative agreement Saturday on a contract intended to save the nation's No. 2 automaker hundreds of millions of dollars while ensuring jobs for thousands of Ford workers.

Neither side could give an exact dollar estimate of the union's concessions or the number of jobs that would be saved. It came after 13 consecutive days of emergency negotiations, including a 16-hour session Friday and 11 hours' work Saturday.

Ford and UAW officials said the agreement offers company workers wide job security through wage and benefit concessions over 31 months, a freeze on wage and cost-of-living raises and elimination of some holiday pay during the period.

In return, they said, Ford agreed to a guaranteed income for high-seniority workers and restrictions on subcontracting work to foreign and non-union companies.

If it is ratified by the 170,000 UAW rank and file, the agreement would go into effect immediately and expire Sept. 14, 1984.

Ratification was expected to take about two weeks.

"We believe the agreement represents a major achievement in terms of providing UAW members at Ford with greater job security," the UAW said.

Union president Douglas Fraser said he could not estimate the savings to Ford, which said it lost more than $1 billion in 1981. "You can't put a figure on it because you would have to put a lot of assumptions on it," he said.

Analysts who worked on Ford's original proposal said it would save about $1 billion. The talks were requested by Ford in an attempt to make it more competitive with foreign automakers.

Asked if he could say how many jobs the pact would save, Fraser said, "I can't; there isn't any way. It depends on the economy and interest rates. It certainly enhances the worker position because it obviously strengthens Ford Motor Co."

Ford has nearly 55,000 hourly workers on indefinite layoff and an additional 8,800 on temporary layoff, the result of slumping car sales and plant closings over the past three years.

Ford chairman Philip Caldwell, who was in Hong Kong, released a statement calling the pact a "historic agreement."

The union said the tentative agreement includes a 24-month moratorium on plant closings caused by

"outsourcing," contracting out the manufacture of components to non-union and foreign firms, and agreement to inform the union on any such decisions in the future.

Church asked to resubmit invitation

DALLAS (AP) — The government has asked a Dallas Bible school to resubmit its invitation to sponsor a Russian family that has been living at the U.S. embassy in Moscow for four years.

"It is the first breakthrough we've had," said Norma Anderson, spokeswoman for Christ for the Nations Institute.

The request came Thursday after Soviet officials appeared to ease their position on two families known as the Siberian Seven. In 1978, the families forced their way past Soviet guards and into the embassy in an attempt to leave the Soviet Union, where they say they are not free to practice their Pentecostal faith.

The same year, the institute's request to sponsor one family, 59-year-old Maria Smykhalov and her 19-year-old son Timothy, was returned unopened by the Soviet embassy, Miss Anderson said.

She said she and Mrs. Gordon Lindsey, president of the institute, talked to Timothy by telephone Thursday.

"He told her that Lydia Vashchenko had been released from a Moscow hospital and allowed to return to her hometown in Siberia," Miss Anderson said. "He sounded so hopeful. It was the first time in all these months we ever heard Timothy laugh."

Lydia, two of her sisters and her parents comprise the second family. The 30-year-old woman and her mother had been on a hunger strike since Christmas, and Lydia was moved to a hospital in Moscow when she became ill.

"She was allowed to visit with another sister and her brother while she was in the hospital," Miss Anderson said. "That is the first time any of the seven have had that privilege without any guards."

Later Thursday, Lydia and her brother and sister returned to the embassy. "Tim said Lydia was told to return to her hometown and formally apply for permission to emigrate," Miss Anderson said.

He was appointed to the United States Military Academy Band at West Point, New York, where he spent one year in the concert band and two years in the Jazz Ensemble.

He received his master's degree from Long Island University. While in New York, Mendez studied with Joe Allard, professor at the Juilliard School of Music. Mendez has been with the El Paso Public Schools for seven years, and holds membership in the National Association of Jazz Educators, Texas Bandmasters Association and the Texas Music Educators Association.

Queens take 'Battle of the Bricks'

Late baskets help in 65-61 win

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

Should Howard College elect to do further expansion to their campus, there is no need to purchase bricks for the new structure. About 150 of them are still laying on the court inside Dorothy Garrett Coliseum today.

Howard and Midwestern State University met in a non-conference basketball game Saturday night and the 40-minute contest was not an exhibition of shooting technique. In a game marred by 150, yes that's 150, missed shots, the Hawk Queens still managed to pull their act together in the crucial final moments of the game to escape with a 65-61 victory over the Lady Indians.

As Hawk coach Harold Wilder pointed out from his seat in the stands, all that really matters is what the final score reads on the scoreboard. The four-point margin extended the Hawk Queen winning streak to 15 games and continued their remarkable turnaround from a 2-5 start this season.

The Lady Indians, playing with several freshmen in the lineup, dropped to 13-12 with the loss.

The term "brick," for those not familiar with basketball jargon, refers to a shot that has no touch and usually takes a loud whack off the glass or iron, whichever it encounters first. Needless to say, with 150 shots missed between the two teams Saturday night, a good portion of those off-target attempts fell into the brick category.

The Hawk Queens led 58-56 with 2:40 to go and were fighting for their lives. Cindy Robinson hit a free throw and Pam Roberson turned a steal into a layup to boost Howard to a five-point lead. Susan Cordell hit a basket from underneath and Kellie Mull sank two free throws to keep the Lady Indians from making any plans for a last-minute rally.

Hawk Queen coach Don Stevens spent most of the night with his hands on his hips, a wry grin on his face, pacing in front of his team's bench searching for the answer that would make the Queens play a crisper game.

Howard hit just 26 of 80 shots for the evening, a lowly 33 percent. But that was better than Midwestern. The Lady Indians could put only 22 of 101 attempts through the iron, good for just 22 percent. In all, that's 48 makes in 181 tries.

With the game tied 2-2 and indications already surfacing on what kind of game might be in store for the Saturday night crowd, Steven called time-out just 1:47 into the game. His pep talk seemed to get the Queens going in the right direction as they jumped to a 20-12 lead despite a string of four missed shots. But at the same time, the Lady Indians went five minutes without scoring.

A driving layup by Stella Bickley cut the score to 22-18 but Pam Roberson scored six straight points, to throw the momentum back in the Queens' direction. A rebound basket by Holli Holloway and another by Christi Adams gave Howard a 33-22 advantage at halftime.

That 11-point lead was the biggest of the night for the Hawk Queens.

Midwestern roared out of the dressing room and began taking huge chunks out of the Howard lead. A bank shot by Alice Edwards cut it to three, 37-34, and a steal and layup by Bickley made it a one-point ballgame with 14:34 to play.

The Queens managed to hang onto the lead until Bickley scored on another layup after another steal to tie the game at 43. It was tied three more times before Kim Enos hit two free throws to make it 51-49 in favor of the Lady Indians.

Carrie Lutrick came off the bench for the Hawk Queens and nailed a long jumper to knot the score and Kellie Mull followed with a bank shot to give the Queens the lead back again.

Susan Cordell re-entered the game and blocked a couple of shots on one end of the court and connected on a turnaround jumper on the other to make it a three-point game, 55-52. Howard then withstood a barrage of late shots by Midwestern to win the game.

Cordell finished with 11 blocks to break the school record of 10 held by Kelly Lyons. She also scored 11 points in limited playing time.

Midwestern held Haskins to just nine points but Cindy Robinson countered with 10. Roberson led Howard with 14. Edwards finished as the game's top scorer with 21.

Howard returns to conference play Monday with a 6 p.m. game with Odessa College.

Halftime Score — Howard 33, Midwestern 22.

PARDON ME — Karen Sorenson (35) of Midwestern State University gets a little physical while trying to control the basketball in front of Howard College's Melissa Luna (50). The Hawk Queens used a late scoring spurt to win their 15th straight game with a 65-61 non-conference victory over the Lady Indians Saturday night.

Steers trample Coogs on the road, 43-39

ABILENE — It was a sharp contrast Big Spring coach Ed Haller's mood after Tuesday night's loss to Midland Lee. Friday night he was all smiles and said, "It's about time one of these games goes our way."

Haller had just watched his Big Spring Steers win for the second time in five second half District 5-AAAAA games, clipping Cooper 43-39 on the road.

The win boosts the Steers to 2-3 in the second round and 12-16 overall with two league games remaining. The Cougars, having the same type of luck the Steers have had in district, fell to 2-3 and are now 8-20 for the year.

Haller can only shake his head and wonder about what could have happened in the second half had a few bounces come Big Spring's way. Revising a three-point loss to Permian and one-pointer to Lee, the Steers could very well be sitting in a three-way tie with Abilene and San Angelo at 4-1 instead of being stuck in the middle of the pack.

Cooper led by four, 32-28, after three quarters but the Steers went to work in the final period. A Cougar and is doubtful even for Tuesday night.

Jerald Wrightsil under wraps all night but leaving John Green open outside.

Green provided the heavy artillery in the fourth quarter, gunning in eight points to guide the Big Spring comeback. A basket at 4:19 left in the game gave the Steers a 34-33 lead.

With less than two minutes to go, the Cougars have jumped back on top after two foul shots by Greg Dusckas, who had 14 points for the game.

Green retaliated with another jumper to give the Steers a 40-39 advantage. Jinx Valenzuela hit a free shot to give Big Spring a two-point lead.

Cooper missed two shots in the final half minute of play and Big Spring controlled the ball. Valenzuela was fouled again and sank both efforts to provide the Steers with a four-point victory.

Haller was of course pleased with the win, especially on the road and especially without the services of Blake Rosson. Rosson, who comes off the bench when Haller shuffles his guards in and out when pressing, turned an ankle in practice Thursday and is doubtful even for Tuesday night. Down by five points, rather than to his full-court press and it produced turnovers that helped the Steers get back into the game when they turned the Cooper mistakes into points.

For the night, Big Spring hit 19 of 43 shots for a solid 44 percent. After a horrible shooting slump in the first half of district play, the Steers have climbed back to near the 50 percent mark in the second half.

Green hit seven of 11 shots for his 14 points and Wrightsil, bottled up by the Cooper zone, hit five of just 10 shots for 10 points. He still grabbed 11 rebounds.

Kevin Watson was held scoreless by the Cougars but the Steers in turn held Cooper's Kyle Coody without a point.

Abilene outscored Central 9-6 in the overtime period to win the game.

Michael Spinks stops Wasajja

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks retained his World Boxing Association light heavyweight title Saturday, stopping Mustafa Wasajja of Uganda at 1:36 in the sixth round of their scheduled 15-round bout.

Spinks, now 19-0, jolted Wasajja in the fourth and fifth rounds with solid right hooks to the face, creating a welt under his opponent's left eye, before referee Tony Perez halted the bout.

Wasajja, 24-1-1, showed good hand speed and aggressiveness until the sixth. But he had a four-inch reach disadvantage and could not land any blows that appeared to hurt the 6-foot-2 champion.

Wasajja was most effective in the second round as he surprised Spinks by repeatedly bullying his way inside, landing several punches, then quickly moving back out of range. The tactic seemed to offset Spinks' timing. But by the next round, Spinks, also 175, effectively blocked Wasajja's rushes.

It was Spinks' second defense of the title he won July 18 1981, by defeating Eddie Mustafa Muhammed. Spinks, 25 and Wasajja, 28, had never seen each other fight before.

At indoor championships

McEnroe in finals

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe marched into the finals of the U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championships by defeating defending champion and third-seeded Gene Mayer 7-5, 6-3 Saturday.

McEnroe was to play Sunday the winner of Saturday night's other semifinal match between eighth-seeded Yohan Kriek and Buster Mottram, the surprising player of the weeklong tournament.

McEnroe, who has yet to lose a set in this week's tournament, grew stronger as the day's match grew longer. He attributed his early problems to a doubles match Friday night with Peter Fleming that lasted until midnight.

"I wasn't seeing the ball all that well early, and I was mishitting the ball a lot at first," McEnroe said. "But as the match went on, I seemed to get it all back."

McEnroe moved ahead in the first set 5-3 and had a chance to put the set away on his serve. But, he double faulted twice in the game, giving Mayer the break.

Lady Buffs continue to roll

FORSAN — The plain truth of the matter is that Forsan split two District 5-AA games with Plains Friday night.

The Buffalo Queens turned a four-point halftime lead into a 16-point advantage in the second half to defeat Plains 49-37.

The win boosted Forsan to 2-4 overall and 4-1 in the second half. The first half winners still trail Seagraves by a game and coach Ronnie Taylor says the probable district playoff with be Feb. 11.

Seagraves is 5-0 in the second half, having nipped Forsan by a point in overtime, and 21-4 for the year.

The Buffalo Queens led 26-22 at halftime point guard Karla Creager broke up the Plains defense in the third quarter as Forsan moved into a 10-point lead.

Rhonda Gaskins scored 16 points and Creager hit 12 from the outside ranges to pace Forsan while Irene McKibbons scored a dozen for Plains. McKibbons, an all-starter in volleyball, gave the Buffalo Queens trouble underneath with her 6-2 size.

Plains scored two more points in the third and a point more in the fourth to top the Buffaloes 47-44 in the boys game.

Forsan dropped to 17-11 and 2-3 in second half plays while Plains improved to 4-2.

Cougars upend Hogs, 55-53

HOUSTON (AP) — Rob Williams and Clyde Drexler of Houston each scored 14 points to stave off a last-minute comeback by Arkansas and beat the Razorbacks 55-53 Saturday in a regionally televised Southwest Conference basketball game.

It was the second straight loss for the eighth-ranked Razorbacks, who are now 8-4 in the conference and 17-5 overall.

The victory boosted Houston's conference record to 7-5 and 16-6 overall and left five teams with a chance to capture the conference crown.

The Cougars had built an 11-point lead over the struggling Razorbacks early in the second half behind the shooting of William, Drexler and Akeem Abdul Olajuwon, but Scott Hastings pumped in 16 points to bring the Razorbacks to a 53-52 margin with 47 seconds left.

Olajuwon then fouled Darrell Walker but the junior guard failed to hit the free throw that would have tied the game.

Lynden Rose secured the victory for the Cougars on two free throws with 28 seconds left.

Baylor 64, Texas Tech 61

WACO, Texas (AP) — Terry Teagle scored 19 points, including the last eight Baylor points of the game, as the Bears held off Texas Tech for a see-saw 64-61 Southwest Conference basketball win Saturday.

Teagle hit one field goal and six free throws in the final 7½ minutes of the contest to keep the Red Raiders at bay, after Tech had closed to within two points.

Jeff Taylor led all scorers with 22 points for Texas Tech, while Raider Joe Washington is the rebounding leader with eight.

A&M 82, Rice 71

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Rudy Woods, Tyren Nauls and Claude Riley combined for 61 points Saturday night as Texas A&M nailed down a first-place tie with Arkansas in the Southwest Conference basketball race by beating Rice 82-71.

However, the tie won't last long because A&M plays Arkansas at Fayetteville Monday night.

Woods racked up 22 points, Nauls scored 21 and Riley hit 18 as the Aggies ran their season record to 15-7 and SWC mark to 8-4.

Ricky Pierce poured in 34 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Owls, who fell to 13-12 and 4-8 in the conference.

The Aggies led 36-32 at halftime and never trailed after that.

TCU 85, SMU 70

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian's Darrell Browder, battling the flu and Southern Methodist University, poured in 27 points here Saturday night to pace the Horned Frogs to an 85-60 win over the Mustangs.

The Horned Frogs trailed only once during the game, 4-2, early in the first half as they rolled to a 43-35 halftime bulge over the Mustangs.

TCU improved its record to 13-10 overall and 8-5 in Southwest Conference play. The Horned Frogs moved into a third-place tie with Baylor in the conference standings.

SMU dropped to 6-17 overall and 1-12 in the SWC.

Doug Arnold helped Browder in the scoring department as he pumped in 17 points and pulled down eight rebounds.

SMU was led by Larry Davis who scored 18 points.

TCU outrebounded the Ponies, 38-29, to aid their scoring attack.

Texas 84, North Texas 70

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Five Texas players scored in double figures — led by LaSalle Thompson's 18 points — as the Longhorns defeated North Texas State 84-70 in a non-conference basketball game Saturday.

Senior Longhorn forward Virdell Howland and freshman guards Jack Worthington and James Tandy each had 16 points, while James Booker scored 13 in his first start for Texas.

The victory raised the Longhorns' record to 16-6. North Texas lost its fourth straight and is now 12-9.

HAVE A BALL — The Los Angeles Lakers' Bob McAdoo (11) grabs for a loose ball just ahead of San Antonio Spurs forward Gene Banks (20) during first-half action

Friday night at the Forum in Los Angeles. The Spurs went on to win the game, 106-94.

Rockets bite the Bullets

HOUSTON (AP) — Moses Malone rammed in 32 points and pounded the boards for 12 rebounds Saturday night in leading the Houston Rockets to their eighth straight victory, a 111-104 National Basketball Association win over the Washington Bullets.

Malone's effort was aided by Elvin Hayes, who tossed in 21 points and also grabbed 12 rebounds.

The Rockets, 27-22 and winners in 11 of their last 12 games, had to fight off a Washington rally to preserve the win.

Jeff Ruland hit two free throws and Frank Johnson scored on a layup to pull the Bullets within a point, 101-100, with just over two minutes left in the game.

But Robert Reid connected on a three point play, then hit another free throw seconds later, for a five-point lead and the Bullets could get no closer. Malone pitched in a pair of free throws with 19 seconds left to ice the victory.

The Bullets, 24-25, were led by Ruland and Don Collins with 20 points each.

The Rockets led by one at the half, 51-50.

Bill Willoughby finished with 15 points for Houston while Tom Henderson and Major Jones each scored 10.

Spencer Haywood and John Lucas each scored 14 for Washington.

San Antonio 100, Los Angeles 94

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Everything was rolling along fine for the Los Angeles Lakers midway through the second period of their National Basketball Association game against the San Antonio Spurs. Then, the bottom fell in.

The Lakers held a 46-33 advantage over the Spurs with halftime approaching Friday night, but San Antonio scored 12 of the final 16 points of the half to draw to within seven points, 52-45, at the intermission.

The Spurs continued their surge by outscoring the Lakers 26-9 in the third quarter to grab a 71-61 advantage entering the final period. Los Angeles was able to get as close as two points late in the contest, but San Antonio tallied the final four points of the night for a 100-94 victory.

"This game was a continuation of our game with Kansas City Wednesday night," said Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley, referring to his club's 125-102 loss to the Kings. "We could not get on track and we can't seem to put away teams after leading by 15 points. The third quarter was a nightmare."

It sure was. The Lakers, who were outscored 38-13 in the stretch when their 48-33 advantage turned into a 71-61 deficit, made only four of their 27 field goal attempts in that third period and connected on just 36.4 percent of their floor shots overall.

All-Pro Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had only 10 points, making just five of his 16 floor shots. His tip-in with 22 seconds remaining, which made the score 96-94, extended his streak of regular-season double scoring to 347 games.

Mike Holland, Fuzzy Zoeller and Bob Gilder all posted nine-hole scores of 29 in tournament play in 1981.

Bruce Lietzke had three eagles on one round in the 1981 Hawaiian Open Gold Tournament.

In the 1965 Texas Open, Mike Souchak played 72 holes in 257 strokes, 27 under par.

In 1948, Byron Nelson played 19 consecutive rounds of tournament golf in less than 70.

College Basketball Roundup

Virginia stays on top

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Craig Robinson converted a rebound into a basket at the final buzzer that gave top-ranked Virginia a narrow 56-54 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Clemson Saturday.

The Cavaliers, now 24-1 overall and 9-1 in the ACC, struggled against a Clemson defense that limited 7-4 All-American Ralph Sampson to just seven points. However, Sampson led all rebounders with 13.

Clemson's Fred Gilliam topped all scorers with 18 points.

The Tigers trailed by seven points entering the second half. With 1:51 remaining, the score was knotted at 54-54. Clemson's Horace Wyatt missed the front end of a 1-and-1 and Cavalier substitute guard Ricky Stokes cleared the rebound.

The Cavs called a timeout, then stalled, working against the Tigers' man-to-man defense and getting the ball to Wilson, who missed. But Robinson got the rebound off Gilliam for the winning shot.

Missouri 89, Oklahoma St. 82

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Senior forward Marvin McCrary scored five of Missouri's last 11 points as the Tigers held off a late rally to beat Oklahoma State 89-82 in Big Eight basketball Saturday.

The fourth-ranked Tigers led 72-57 with eight minutes left when the Cowboys went on a 15-point scoring spree to narrow the gap to 76-72. But Missouri held onto the lead by connecting on seven of eight free throws in the final two minutes.

Thirteen of McCrary's game-high 25 points were made at the free throw line. He missed only one free throw and hit six of eight baskets from the field. Junior guard Jon Sundvold and senior forward Ricky Frazier also notched double figures for Missouri with 24 and 18 points, respectively.

DePaul 98, Loyola 92

CHICAGO, Ill. (AP) — Gene Sullivan had a game plan ... but it didn't include how to stop Terry Cummings.

"In my book," said the coach of the Loyola (Ill.) basketball team, "there is nobody who can stop him."

The "unstoppable" DePaul center virtually had his way with Sullivan's team Friday night, scoring 33 points and grabbing 19 rebounds to lead the third-ranked Blue Demons to a 98-80 victory over Loyola.

"Terry Cummings is probably the hungriest player in the country right now," said Sullivan. "We figured we could beat them if we held Cummings to 20 or 25 points, but there was no way."

Cummings scored his game-high point total despite a nine-minute drought at the beginning of the second half.

"This year it is a different Cummings and a different DePaul team," said Sullivan, referring directly to the absence of 1981 star Mark Aguirre. "They play much more intensely. When Cummings took charge, he just destroyed us."

Indiana 73, Iowa 58

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Ted Kitchel put on an awesome display of offense for the second straight game as Indiana romped to a 73-58 victory Saturday over fifth-ranked Iowa in Big Ten basketball.

Kitchel scored 33 points, including including Indiana's first 13 in the second half, then led the Hoosiers on the 14-4 spurt that gave them a 57-44 lead with 9:21 to play.

Then the Indiana defense took over, led by Jim Thomas and freshman Winston Morgan.

The victory lifted the Hoosiers' record to 14-7 overall, 8-4 in the conference, Iowa dropped to 18-3 overall, 10-2 in the Big Ten.

Oregon St. 94, Oregon 51

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Lester Conner and Danny Evans scored 18 points apiece Saturday as No. 6 Oregon State beat Oregon 94-51 to take sole possession of first place in Pacific 10 basketball standings.

The Beavers, 11-1 in the conference and 18-3 overall, sank their first eight shots to open a 19-6 lead eight minutes into the contest. Oregon State hit 14 of its first 17 shots to turn the game into a rout.

The Ducks, who have lost to Oregon State seven straight times, dropped to 3-9 in the Pac-10 and 8-13 for the season.

Minnesota 53, Purdue 52

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Darryl Mitchell brought Minnesota within one point on a rebound basket with 16 seconds to go Saturday, then sank a pair of free throws with one second left to lift the ninth-ranked Gophers to a 53-52 Big Ten basketball victory over Purdue.

Mitchell, a 6-foot-5 senior, finished with 18 points.

ALEXIS ARGUELLO ...defends title

Arguello defends title

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Alexis Arguello, ignoring the chants of a hostile crowd, stunned hometown challenger Bubba Busceme with a thunderous left hook in the sixth round, then followed with a brutal series of punches Saturday to defend his World Boxing Council lightweight championship.

Arguello, 74-4, who scored the 60th knockout of his career, patiently waited his chance through five rounds, trying to decipher the left-handed style of the challenger.

Then, in the sixth, Arguello opened with two good right hands and clearly was going for a knockout. The champion then landed a staggering left hook that started Busceme's downfall.

Busceme, 27-4, had planned to keep his distance from the powerful Arguello but, instead, tried to match the champion punch for punch.

It didn't work. Busceme, fighting before a capacity crowd in his home town, appeared to tire in the fifth round when Arguello delivered a strong right hand and followed with a left-right combination.

Arguello, who won the lightweight title last June, successfully defended his title for the third time. He knocked out Ray Mancini in October and decisioned Robert Elizondo in November.

Arguello, 135, was ahead on the cards of all three judges when the fight was stopped at 2:35 of the sixth round.

Judges Mike Jacobs of London and A.D. Bynum of Dallas both had Arguello ahead 48-47 and judge Jose Mayorga of Managua, Nicaragua, had the champion ahead 49-48.

North ties Levi for Hawaii lead

HONOLULU (AP) — Andy North birdied the 13th and tied Wayne Levi for the third-round lead Saturday in the $325,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

North, who earlier scored his third eagle in two days, shot a third consecutive 3-under-par 69 on the 6,881-yard Waialae Country Club course.

North, who hasn't won since taking the 1978 U.S. Open, and Levi shared the top spot at 217, 9 shots under par, going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $58,500 first prize.

Levi, 28, a notorious streak player who has collected two titles in six years of tour activity, surged out of the pack with a no-bogey, 5-under-par 67 in the warm, sunny weather that helped dry the course, which was partially flooded by torrential rains Thursday.

Tom Watson, the Masters champion who is seeking a return to the form that won him four consecutive Player of the Year titles, had a share of the top spot but couldn't hang on to it.

He finished with a 70 and was tied for third, 2 strokes back of the leaders, at 209. Also at that figure were veteran Charles Coody, whose last victory came in the 1971 Masters; 21-year-old Bobby Clampett, and Scott Simpson.

Coody shot a 68; Clampett and Simpson 70s.

Ben Crenshaw was alone at 210 after a 68.

Arnold Palmer, the National Seniors champion, had a 69 and was 3 under par for the tournament at 213. Bill Rogers, who last year ended Watson's string of Player of the Year titles, was at the same figure after a 68.

North, who had two lean years after his Open triumph, then made a comeback last season, regained his share of the top spot about 10 minutes after television coverage ended.

"I hit a driver for my second shot — got greedy and decided to go for it — and hit it in the bleachers," North said.

He got a drop from the stands, pitched on to about eight feet and made the putt for a birdie-4 that tied him for the lead.

"The other highlight of his round came on the 13th, where he made eagle-3 for the second time in as many days. He stroked a long iron to about 15 feet and made that putt."

Fastest indoor mile

Decker sets mark

NEW YORK (AP)—For Mary Decker, it was a nightmarish experience. Here was one of the world's premier middle-distance runners getting ready for the women's mile at the 75th Wanamaker Millrose Games Friday night at Madison Square Garden, and an unknowing security guard was brusquely attempting to get her off the track.
"I told him I was going onto the track and he said, 'No, you're not!' He almost threw me out of the building," said Decker.
So, Decker went around the official, climbed over a stanchion and made it onto the track.
And when she did, the result was a world indoor best.
Running away from a first-rate field, she was clocked in 4 minutes, 21.47 seconds, breaking the indoor best of 4:24.6 she had set Jan. 22 at Los Angeles.
While the women's mile was a runaway, most of the other events in the Millrose's Diamond Jubilee meet were close.
The closest finish was in the women's 60-yard high hurdles, with Candy Young of Fairleigh Dickinson University and Stephanie Hightower finishing in a dead heat in 7:38, a world indoor best. They had shared the old mark of 7:47.

In the Wanamaker Mile, Steve Scott, the leader for the final three-quarters, had to withstand a furious finish by Tom Byers to win in 3:55.37, the fastest time of the indoor season. Byers was clocked in 3:55.41.
Doug Padilla held off fast-closing Nick Rose of Britain to win the 5,000 meters, a race that included Tanzania's Suleiman Nyambui, who set the world indoor best in this meet last year, and Alberto Salazar, the 1981 runner-up with an American indoor record time.
Padilla, who collapsed after crossing the finish line, broke Salazar's American mark with a time of 13:20.55 and was just short of Nyambui's world best of 13:20.4. Salazar, the early pacesetter, faded to fourth and Nyambui, never a factor, wound up fifth.
In another surprise, Earl Bell won the pole vault at 18-6 1/2, beating Billy Olson, holder of the world indoor best at 18-9 1/4. Olson finished second at 18-4 1/4.

Stacy leads LPGA golf by a stroke

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Hollis Stacy, who fired a sizzling 6-under-par 66 in the first round, carded a 1-under 71 Saturday to retain her 1-stroke lead after 36 holes of the $125,000 LPGA S&H Golf Classic.
Stacy's two-round total of 7-under-par 137 places her one shot ahead of defending champion JoAnne Carner and Patty Sheehan heading into Sunday's final round of the 54-hole tournament. The winner will receive $18,750.
Three golfers — Vicki Ferguson, Beverly Klass and Chris Johnson — were tied at 139, two shots off Stacy's pace, while Betsy King, Connie Chillemi, Debbie Austin and Jeannette Kerr were at 140.
Kathy Whitworth, Bonnie Lauer and Carole Charbonnier were in contention at 141.
Carner, who won last week's $125,000 Elizabeth Arden Classic, began the day two shots behind Stacy, winner of the Whirlpool Championship of Deer Creek two weeks ago.
Nancy Lopez-Melton missed the cut for the first time this season after shooting a second-round 74 to push her 36-hole total to 151.

Capital murder trial is moved to Beaumont

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A state district judge today ordered the capital murder trial of Stephan Peter Morin, who is charged in four slayings and suspected in several others, moved to Beaumont on a change of venue.

During a late morning court hearing, Judge David Berchelmann asked Morin if he was satisfied with the new trial site.

"Sir, I prefer Europe," Morin answered.

Morin is scheduled to go on trial March 22 on charges in the shooting death of Carrie Marie Scott, 21, in the parking lot of a San Antonio restaurant Dec. 11.

The defendant is in a protective isolation cell after being beaten by a fellow inmate at the Bexar County Jail, his attorney says.

Lawyer Pete Torres said Morin's nose was broken and his face cut Wednesday night when he was beaten in his cell after returning from talking with a psychologist for two to three hours.

"As Morin entered his cell, a 220-pound man who has testified for the state in a couple of cases and is considered a jailhouse stooge jumped him and broke his nose," Torres said, adding he does not know what prompted the attack.

But Sheriff Joe Neaves said the beating took place in a day room and that a dozen other prisoners were in the room at the time. He said Morin apparently got into a fight with another inmate after inmates thought Morin was an informer for jail guards.

"All we know is he had a fight with someone," Neaves said. "Morin has refused to identify his assailant, and he told us if we press him, he will say he walked into a wall."

"We found a hacksaw blade in the area where the other prisoners were. At about the time the deputies searched the area and found the blade, Morin was taken away so he could talk to his attorney. Apparently some thought he (Morin) squealed," Neaves said.

Morin, 34, is being held without bond on capital murder and attempted capital murder charges in the shooting of two San Antonio women.

He is also wanted for questioning in as many as 20 other rapes, kidnappings and killings in nine states and has been charged with three other killings of young women in Utah and Colorado, police say. He is charged in Corpus Christi with the kidnapping of a young woman.

Taxpayers who move expecting refunds should notify IRS

Taxpayers who move after filing their federal income tax returns and are expecting a refund should notify the post office serving the old address, the Internal Revenue Service says.

The IRS center where the return was filed should also be notified in writing of the address change. This will help the IRS to forward the refund check to the new address as soon as possible. When advising the IRS of the address change, the taxpayer's Social Security number should be included in the correspondence.

San Antonio man convicted of threatening president

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A federal jury has convicted a San Antonio man of threatening the life of President Ronald Reagan while Reagan was in South Texas last November for a pre-Thanksgiving turkey hunt.

Emile Mitchell Robin, 34, faces up to five years in prison and a $1,000 fine.

U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon scheduled sentencing for March 12 after the jury returned the guilty verdict late Thursday.

Robin was described as an unemployed poet, freelance writer and verbal genius.

Bexar County psychiatrist John Sparks and county psychologist Betty Lou Schroeder testified that Robin was sane at the time, however.

Nagging of women execs misplaced?

NEW YORK (AP) — "Why aren't more women at the top of corporations?" The lecturer, a woman, was indignant — or she appeared to be — as she declaimed loudly about injustice and even hinted at female cowardice.

Her audience, mostly women, some of them aspirants to managerial jobs in their companies, picked up the mood. Later, they would buy her book. They would become angrier. Some might even conclude they had failed.

"A cruel hoax," says Eugene Jennings. The Michigan State University professor and management authority has heard the refrain at seminars and conferences. The anger is misplaced, he says. His own anger rises.

Many self-styled female advocates don't know what they're talking about, he says. He calls them "kibitzers who don't have the courage to play the game, and who talk and write for self-aggrandizement."

Jennings, a professor of management, is known among other things for his role as advisor to corporate boards on executive policies, a role which grew out of his pioneering studies of mobility patterns.

"These advocates are unaware that it takes a quarter-century to develop a generation of corporate presidents," he says. "Early arrivals will make it in 22 years, but the majority will take 26."

The earliest large batch of women to seriously enter the management programs of major corporations left college in the years 1972-1977, and now are at second levels above non-managerial positions, he says.

Jennings, who conducted what probably was the first national seminar for female presidents and vice presidents back in 1965, is especially critical of the damage advocates do to certain very successful women.

The woman often brutally hurt by advocates, he observes, is the one who does not seek the brass ring, who is happy with a challenging job, who has self-imposed immobility. But such people, he contends, are perceived by "the chorus of cheerleaders as weak, passive creatures who are betraying the cause of women."

He suggests that the well-intentioned advocate should "encourage executives to do well in their jobs, take their time and build a good platform of results."

The clock, he advises, "cannot be set ahead without irreparable harm to the individual and the corporation."

WATCHES RAIN — Catherine Elizabeth Parrett, 33, of Seattle, watches the rain from her new home in the Morrison Hotel after she had spent 46 days in jail on a suspicion of shoplifting. Parrett somehow missed being scheduled for an arraignment the day after her arrest on Dec. 27 and got lost in the system until she told a jail employee she hadn't been to court.

Judge will drop charges against woman lost in jail

SEATTLE (AP) — A woman arrested on a shoplifting charge, then accidentally held 46 days before anyone realized she had not seen a judge, says she "kind of got to like it" in the King County Jail.

"Some people might have been harsh about it, but I expected to be in jail for three months for shoplifting the makeup..." Catherine Elizabeth Parrett said in an interview Thursday. "I don't know why I took (the items). It must have been a sudden reflex."

Meanwhile, Municipal Court Judge Stephen R. Schaefer called the incident "the worst case I've seen in five years on the bench." When Mrs. Parrett, 33, finally appeared before him Wednesday, the judge said he would "definitely" dismiss the charge.

State law provides that anyone arrested be brought before a judge for arraignment on the next day that court is held.

Schaefer released Mrs. Parrett to Rick Gilbert, a probation officer who arranged for her to live in the Morrison Hotel, a downtown facility for indigents. However, she was later reported to have checked out of the hotel. Another court appearance is scheduled for next Wednesday.

"She was content in jail," said Gilbert, who described Mrs. Parrett as mentally disturbed. "She was reading books and wasn't worried."

Mrs. Parrett was arrested Dec. 27 at a Capitol Hill Safeway store. Police said she had placed about $50 worth of cosmetics in her purse. She was then jailed.

Mrs. Parrett, who is divorced, said she is not bitter.

"Jail was kind of quiet and I kind of got to like it," she added. "People were friendly and participated in activities, like going to the library and arts and crafts. We'd go to church and I made some friends."

She said she has undergone treatment for mental illness and "I would still like to go to more mental therapy."

After Mrs. Parrett's arrest, her case got lost, said Tom Johnson, commander of jail operations. He blamed the municipal court.

Tanker carrying molasses snaps apart in storm

FALMOUTH, England (AP) — A tanker broke apart in the North Atlantic early Friday in 40-foot seas and the coast guard said 13 crewmen were missing and 18 others were in danger of going down with what remained of the vessel.

A Belgian ship radioed from the area that the seas were like a "cauldron and rescue impossible," according to a coast guard official, who added: "The stern section is still well afloat but in grave danger of sinking quickly."

Rescue helicopters were standing by but 70 mph winds prevented them from reaching the crippled tanker, the Greek-registered 12,487-ton Victory, which broke in half 840 miles west of Lands End — the southwest tip of England. The Victory, carrying a cargo of molasses, was headed from Florida to the northwest English port of Liverpool.

"There are three aircraft on the scene, but we can't get a helicopter there because of the weather, and we won't anticipate using helicopters until tomorrow," the coast guard official said.

He said two U.S. Air Force rescue planes, including a C-130 transport, and a Royal Air Force Nimrod reconnaissance plane were in the area.

Nelson Bunker Hunt, U.S. will argue value of land

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — A U.S. land commission will hear arguments next week between attorneys for Nelson Bunker Hunt and the government over the value of land needed for the McGee Creek Reservoir.

At issue is the price of about 14,000 acres of land near the lake that would supply water to Oklahoma City and the southern part of the state. Hunt, a wealthy Texas oilman, and a nephew, Hugo W. Schoellkopf III of Dallas, own the land in Atoka County for which the government has offered $290 per acre. Hunt has refused the price and is seeking at least $478 an acre, according to court records.

The difference totals nearly $2.9 million.

If the government loses it could more than double the price to be paid for reservoir property, said Donald W. Redd, Department of Justice attorney who is handling the government's case.

Since Hunt's 14,198 acres would be the first to have an official price tag, most remaining owners would be expected to ask the same amount.

"This is the most unique case I have experienced in land acquisition," Redd said. "Never before have I seen a case where we had one or two landowners own as large a part of a project as here."

Redd says Hunt paid from $32 to $250 an acre for the property that has three active cattle ranches — the DOK, the Spears and the Fuggate — on which 8,000 head of cattle graze, said Ed Vallandingham, project realty officer.

Schoellkopf is scheduled to take his case before the commission in late April.

Clifford K. Cate, Muskogee attorney who is assisting Hunt's Dallas attorneys in the case, has said the government's offer of $4.2 million is about 50 percent less than what Hunt says the land is worth.

Hunt's lawyers intend to call six witnesses to testify, according to a pre-trial statement. Hunt is listed as a witness but officials are doubtful he will come to the Muskogee hearing.

Atheist leader protesting rites denial

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Atheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair said today her group has been denied permission for a ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery during an atheist convention in Washington this April.

O'Hair distributed to the press a letter from Col. Charles E. Dexter, chief of staff at the U.S. Army Military District of Washington, saying the request had been denied because the ceremony as described did not comply with the cemetery's visitor rules.

The conventioners had planned to honor "their most famous dead, Col. Robert G. Ingersoll," O'Hair said in a press release.

In her letter to Dexter, O'Hair had asked to have "some military personnel deliver the appropriate type of salute to Col. Ingersoll" and that buses be permitted to "take our conventioners as close to the Col. Ingersoll grave as possible."

Ingersoll "was known world-wide during the time of the Civil War in the United States for his attacks upon religion, upon the Bible and upon the support of religion by the state," O'Hair said.

O'Hair said the organization would proceed with plans to visit Ingersoll's grave even without approval of the ceremony.

No agreement on how many die and why

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Each side in El Salvador's civil war blames the other for the soaring civilian death toll, and everybody's claims are suspect. But one thing is certain — a lot of civilians are dying.

The national guard says those it kills are leftist guerrillas or their collaborators, and the rest are murdered by the rebels.

The guerrillas say most of the civilian dead are innocent bystanders murdered indiscriminately by the government's security forces or right-wing death squads.

One apparently neutral source, a relief agency worker who travels to refugee camps throughout the country, said the guerrillas are more selective in their killing.

"They know who their enemies are," he said. The army often isn't sure."

Last month, President Reagan certified to the U.S. Congress that President Jose Napoleon Duarte's junta was improving the government's human rights record. The certification was required by law to clear the way for $65 million in military and economic aid to the junta.

Critics disputed the State Department's claim that violence in El Salvador is on a downward trend. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., said the administration was trying to "shrug away" reports of murders and other atrocities by the junta's troops. The U.S. branch of Amnesty International said "the pattern of abduction, torture and murder" in El Salvador is unchanged.

On Wednesday, as members of Congress debated the administration's plans to increase support for the junta, it for the first time officially charged a group of its soldiers with some of the estimated 32,000 civilian deaths since the October 1979 coup launched the current warfare. But the dead were Americans, not Salvadorans. A sergeant, a corporal and four privates were brought in handcuffs before a judge in the small town of Zacatecoluca and charged with the murder 14 months ago of four American women, Roman Catholic missionaries. President Duarte gave a detailed account of the killing in a televised speech, but the judge said it could be three months before he decided whether the evidence was sufficient to warrant a trial.

The death toll figures in the brutal conflict, where bodies are left on the roadside or in clandestine cemeteries, are as much in dispute as who is responsible for the killing.

The State Department said the U.S. Embassy reported 6,116 violent deaths in El Salvador last year. The report noted, however, that some church sources suggest the death toll might be twice as high.

Monsignor Arturo Rivera y Damas, the leader of the church hierarchy, said earlier that 11,723 civilians were killed in the first 11 months of 1981, and most of them were non-combatant peasants.

MOBIL BOUND — Winning the Texas Junior Miss competition gives Dawn the opportunity to represent the state in national competition in Mobile, Ala. The event is tentatively scheduled for the first two weeks in June. Dawn plans to prepare for the pageant by taking aerobics and ballet classes.

ASPIRING MODEL—Dawn hopes to model while attending college at Southern Methodist University, but must wait until her year's reign as Texas Junior Miss has ended. At right, she is pictured wearing the gown she wore for the poise and appearance division of the pageant. Dawn says her parents don't actively encourage her to enter pageants. "I bring it up and they'll help me," she said.

Dawn Estes is 1982 Texas Junior Miss

By TINA MILLER
Lifestyle Editor

When the winner of the 1982 Texas Junior Miss Pageant was announced, Dawn Estes was "shocked." The name she heard was her own.

"I started jumping up and down," she said. "They didn't call finalists, they just named fourth through first runner-up. There were 20 some-odd of us still standing back there, so nobody had any idea."

"I started crying—I was really shocked. My parents were shocked too. Mother said she was sitting out in the audience thinking, 'Oh, she didn't even get a runner up, poor thing.'"

The state pageant took place Jan. 28-30 in New Braunfels Civic Center. Dawn won the opportunity to compete against the 30 state contestants by winning the Permian Basin Junior Miss title in November, 1981. Nineteen contestants from 17 counties took part in the area competition.

The Junior Miss program was initiated in 1953, Dawn said, making it one of the oldest pageants for teenagers. The program is for high school seniors only. "I think that makes it real special because it's girls who you really have a lot in common with," she said.

Her winnings at the state pageant included $2,500 in cash scholarships, and these winnings must be used for college. She also received a diamond pendant, a $100 savings bond and her choice of more than $57,000 in scholarships from various colleges.

Though the 17-year-old has only entered five or six pageants, she said the competition "gets in your blood." Her first competition, when she was 13 years old, was the Cinderella Girl Pageant. She was first runner-up in that event and went on to capture the district title. She later entered the local Silhouette Pageant and won.

But the Junior Miss Pageant, Dawn said, is different. "There weren't the feelings, hard feelings, between the girls. At least I don't think there were. Even some of the girls that were in the Permian Basin Pageant came to see me in New Braunfels."

"It's competitive, yes, but it's not the 'hard' competitiveness," she said. "Before you go, you think, 'Gee, I'd really like to win this. Wouldn't it be neat.' But I don't go just to win. That's in the back of your mind. Foremost is that you make a lot of friends. I made so many friends, and it was so nice."

The people of New Braunfels were another "nice" aspect of experience. Describing the people as "civic minded," she said, "A different club would feed us every day...It was really nice. That's what made it so special. We stayed in families' homes instead of in a motel, so that made it real special, too. I was kind of wondering about that (staying in homes) at first, but the house I stayed in was wonderful. It was down on the river, and it was just luxurious."

Dawn had little time to enjoy the luxury, however, since most of her time was spent in rehearsals. The contestants also traveled to Austin one day for a tour of the state capitol and other sites.

She describes the pageant as well run but said that she was very nervous. Two nights of preliminaries, Jan. 28-29, preceded the main event on Jan. 30. "One night you do your physical fitness and one night you do your talent," she said. "So I was just a bag of nerves both nights. I was so nervous in the physical fitness. We had to dribble a basketball. I kept bouncing it on my feet. I could just see it rolling into the orchestra pit or something."

"Then, on my talent I was so nervous my hands were just sweaty," she said. Her talent presentation was a song entitled

"You Took My Heart by Surprise." Dawn won the talent competition in Friday's preliminaries, and another girl won the talent event Thursday evening.

In addition to dribbling a basketball, the contestants also had to perform several dance routines. "They have you do more than one," she said, "and they see who's breathing the hardest...I held my breath when I walked by the judges. I'm not a dancer at all, but it was fun and I ended up enjoying it."

Other phases of competition in addition to talent and physical fitness were poise and appearance, scholastic achievement and judges' interviews. The Junior Miss program de-emphasizes the appearance, Dawn said, and concentrates more on the girl's personality and interview with judges.

"They're trying to get away from calling it a pageant," she said. "They're calling it a scholarship program." As winner of the state competition, Dawn received a medallion instead of a traditional pageant crown.

Prior to the competition, each contestant also participated in Kraft "Plan a Party" and Simplicity "Jiffy Sewing" programs. Dawn planned a mid-morning Spanish-style party and sewed pants and a blazer for those events. Her sewing entry was named second runner-up.

Though Dawn plans to model while going to college, she is under contract with Junior Miss for one year and cannot model until her reign is ended. Her current plans are to attend Southern Methodist University in Dallas and work toward a career in law.

"I'd like to do criminal law for a while or civil law maybe," she said. "Then settle down into corporate or business (law). But I think I'd like to delve into the criminal. I think that would be real interesting, but I know it would probably be a lot of pressure."

Dawn is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Estes, 501 Highland, and has lived in Big Spring all her life. Her hobbies include playing tennis and playing with her cat. "But mostly music keeps me busy all the time," she said. She takes both piano and voice lessons and student teaches piano to small children. She is a member of Big Spring High School Meistersingers.

Her primary concern is the national Junior Miss competition to be held in Mobile, Ala. The event will probably take place during the first two weeks in June, she said.

To prepare for the stiff national competition, which will include a 10-minute physical fitness routine, Dawn was advised to take classes in ballet and aerobics. She plans to take the advice since she found herself winded and with sore muscles following the state competition.

Senior girls from each of the 50 states as well as Washington, D.C. and Puerto Rico will compete for the national title. Prizes will include a $25,000 cash scholarship.

Dora Roberts Community Center was the site of the 19th Annual Beta Sigma Phi Charity Ball Saturday night. Sweethearts from each of the four chapters, as well as the City Council were presented at the ball. Jimmy Blakeley and The Warhorse Band from Lubbock provided entertainment for the evening.

Guests entered the Center through a candlelit path ending in a white archway adorned with ivy, roses and Spanish moss. Mu Zeta Chapter was in charge of decorations, while Alpha Phi members provided banners. Xi Pi Epsilon was in charge of arrangements for the Center, and City Council arranged for entertainment. All Beta Sigma Phi members combined efforts to provide hors d'oeuvres.

Guests were seated at tables centered by small dolls, candles and roses. Chapter sweethearts were presented through a heart-shaped opening edged in lace. Barbara Kennedy of Alpha Kappa Omicron read a brief resume of each sweetheart's responsibilities and honors in the sorority.

The Exemplar Chapter, Xi Pi Epsilon, named Ruth Vineyard as their sweetheart. Ruth was manager of Ann Lee Sportswear Shop for seven years prior to her retirement. She currently enjoys substitute teaching in local elementary schools. Her husband, James, is employed by Cameo Energy Homes. The couple has two daughters and three grandchildren.

In addition to her activities in Beta Sigma Phi, Ruth is an active member of St. Paul Lutheran Church. She previously taught Sunday School and is currently treasurer for St. Paul Lutheran Parish Workers.

Sharon Richardson is this year's Mu Zeta sweetheart. Sharon is a teacher at Big Spring High School. She is married to Don Richardson, Howard County extension agriculture agent. The couple has two children, Blair and Shauna.

Sharion has been an active member of Beta Sigma Phi since 1977 and transferred to the local chapter from Alice in 1979. Since that time she has served as vice president as well as on various committees. She was named Girl of the Year by her chapter in 1981. Her current activities include serving as treasurer and chairman of the Ways and Means committee.

Alpha Kappa Omicron's sweetheart, Janie Swafford, enjoys substitute teaching, reading and sewing in her spare-time. Janie's husband, Raymond, is employed by Guthrie Oil. The couple has two children, daughter Cheyenne and son Cash.

Janie has been a Beta Sigma Phi member since 1977 and has held the office of recording and corresponding secretary. She has also chaired several committees.

Big Spring's newest chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, Alpha Phi Delta, chose Beckie Baker as their sweetheart. Beckie is a hair stylist at Carol's Beauty Boutique and the mother of two children, D'Amberly and Rusty. She serves her chapter as program committee chairwoman and is a member of the yearbook committee. Her hobbies include water skiing, sewing and playing the piano.

This year's City Council sweetheart is Joan McCollum. Joan is employed by the Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service in Colorado City, where she has worked 15 years. Her husband, Weldon, is employed by Cosden Oil and Chemical Refinery. The couple moved to Big Spring from Loraine in 1978. The couple has two daughters, one living in Big Spring and the other in San Angelo. Joan is a member of Xi Pi Epsilon where she is recording secretary. She serves as treasurer for Beta Sigma Phi City Council.

Proceeds from the ball will be used to purchase equipment for the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center.

Dear Abby

Caring minister ready to talk

DEAR ABBY: In the last year I have been arrested twice for drugs. I'm 15. About four weeks ago, the minister from our church stopped me and asked if we could sit down and talk. I was scared and made up some excuse, so he said he would call me sometime in case I changed my mind. He is super nice and seems so understanding.

I've changed my mind and think I should talk with him. I've been in trouble off and on since I was 12. I even attempted suicide.

The problem is I am scared to walk up to him, or even send him a note asking for help, since he never called. I can't talk to my parents because they are one of my big problems. We can never have a discussion without ending up yelling at each other.

I'm sorry now that I didn't talk with my minister when I had the chance. Now I don't have the nerve to approach him. What would I say? Do you think he really wants to talk to me, or was his just being nice?

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE
DEAR NO NAME: I know your minister really wants to talk to you. Please go to the phone right now and call him. Tell him you are sorry you didn't accept his offer to talk, but you'd very much like to take him up on it now. Ask him when it would be convenient to see you. I promise you he will be delighted to hear from you. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: I know I did a dumb thing, but I need advice, not a lecture. For the last 2½ years I've been having an on-again, off-again affair with my husband's brother. (He's married too.) Nobody suspects a thing.

I have a baby who's nearly a year old and I have a funny feeling he's my brother-in-law's child. I'm not going by looks because my husband and his brother look a lot alike. It's just this funny feeling I have.

I am going crazy wondering if my feelings are right. Is there any way to tell for sure?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: Keep that "funny feeling" to yourself and assume the baby is your husband's. Attempting to confirm your feelings could wreck two marriages and still leave the father's identity in doubt. You've been lucky so far. Don't press your luck.

DEAR ABBY: Please comment on people who allow their dogs to run free, leaving their deposits on everyone's lawns but their owners'.

This problem is not restricted to any "class" of neighborhood. I just recently moved to one of the more desirable areas of our city, and it's no better here.

Abby, please let these ignorant people know how inconsiderate and unlawful this practice is. Just as bad — if not worse — are the people who walk their dogs and stand watching while their dogs foul their neighbor's lawn, just as they have been trained to do! Sign me...

DISGUSTED IN RENO, NEV.

DEAR DISGUSTED: The "dog walkers" know how inconsiderate and unlawful they are, but they don't care. Confront them in the act and demand they either get a "pooper scooper" and use it, or be reported to the animal control authorities. A stiff fine will clean up their act in a hurry.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Today is St. Valentine's Day, so be a sweetheart and call someone who's alone and say, "I'm thinking about you." Take some flowers to someone in a nursing home. Put all your discarded clothes in a box for Goodwill. Donate some blood. Pay your dentist bill. Listen to your teen-ager. Tell your parents you think they're great. Tape a love note on his (or her) mirror. Forgive an enemy.

Washing dishes part of love

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Too many couples, particularly those in their teens, overlook a key question when deciding if they're ready for marriage, an expert in family psychology claimed in a special report on the problem of "young" marriages.

According to Dr. Sol Gordon, professor of child and family studies at Syracuse University, couples should ask themselves just how obsessed by love their prospective partner really is. As Dr. Gordon put it, can he "take out the garbage, do the dishes, get ... homework done, and still be in love."

No matter how romantic the image of all-consuming love may seem Gordon claims that people who can think of nothing else are not the best prospects for a stable marriage. "People whose feelings are authentic and likely to last have lots of sober energy," he noted. "On the other side of the coin are people who seem exhausted by their relationship. They don't keep their appointments or meet their obligations — they are completely overwhelmed by love." Their ability to handle multiple demands, Gordon maintains, will most likely not improve after marriage.

Considering the fact that a bride under the age of twenty is three times more likely to divorce before her fifth anniversary than an older bride, the report pointed out that teens face special considerations and problems in marriage. "Young people have a marvelous naivete' about romance and the prospect of marriage," Dr. Gordon said. While he admits that such a positive outlook can have certain benefits, it also often clouds the teen's overall perspective on marriage. In contrast to the fairy-tale vision of marriage most young people have, Gordon claims that "early marriage involves a lot of sacrifice."

A group of brides who had wed in their teens agreed. "I was only nineteen when we decided to get married," Gwyneth, now twenty-two, recalled, "but I felt sure I was ready ... I thought marriage would be like playing house." Gwyneth admits she was soon forced to change her early expectations. "As I imagined it, the house was always clean and I never had to ask (my husband) to dust or sweep — an assumption that was definitely a fantasy!"

Not all of the young women interviewed had found, like Gwyneth, compromise possible. "If I hadn't gotten married at eighteen," Stacy from Newton, Massachusetts said, "I could have done anything on a whim, like moving to San Francisco — or anywhere." After five years of a rocky marriage, Stacy admits she and her husband no longer move in the same direction at all. "At nineteen, my idea of a good time was to drive into town with my husband ... and hang out with friends," she recalled. "Now, I'm more interested in films and concerts ... (but) he didn't want to change any of our old patterns." As a result, Stacy said, she and her husband have separated and are considering divorce.

While many differences in expectations can be worked out, most experts claim that marrying for the "wrong" reason is one of the most common causes of divorce. Sometimes teen-agers marry to escape a troubled family life, to prevent being separated by college, or to ease existing tensions in a relationship. "Marriage almost never improves a romance," Dr. Gordon maintained.

While you can not improve the romance itself, you can improve your chances of a happy marriage, by openly discussing several questions with your partner before committing to marriage. Included in the list of questions are:

- Do you support and respect each other's career goals?
- Will you have children? If so, how many ... how soon?
- If you both work, who will do the housework? Who will cook meals?
- What income level do you hope to reach?

• Are you interested in each other's thoughts? Can you spend hours talking without the aid of TV?

Convection oven tips

Forced convection cooking has been used in commercial baking ovens for many years. Now a portable, countertop model is available for the home. Forced convection ovens differ from other ovens because a fan blows heated air over and around food. This air movement increases the rate of vaporization of moisture from the food and decreases cooking time and energy consumption. Before purchasing a counter-top forced convection oven, answer the following questions:

● Is convenient counter space available for it's use? Some ovens may be 24 inches wide, 18 or more inches high and up to 17 inches deep.

● If counter space is available, is adequate clearance available for both sides, the back and the top? A minimum of 4-6 inches is needed. More is desirable, especially for ovens with no insulation or air space between inner and outer walls.

● Is an electrical outlet on a 20-amp circuit close to the counter space or cart where the oven will be used? The common wattage rating is 1500 with some units rated at 1650.

● If portability is important, is the oven height enough to be lifted and carried? Weights vary from 20 to 50 pounds.

● How much or how often will the oven be used? Will it be used often enough to repay the original cost that varies from $100.00 to $300.00? All units can be used for roasting and baking. Some have racks for dehydrating foods.

For additional information that will help you select a convection oven, request the fact sheet from the Extension Office.

Shin splints can be overcome

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a male, 51, am 6 feet, and weigh 180. About six months ago I weighed 218. I went on a diet and now that I have lost 38 pounds I feel very good. After I got my weight down to 180 I started jogging. At first I could go about three quarters of a mile. Now I can go four miles at one time. I enjoy it.

Here's the problem. My legs, about halfway between my knees and ankles, are sore next to the shinbones. All these spots next to my shinbones seem to get worse. They hurt practically all the time. My question: Can jogging cause muscles in the front part of my legs to stay sore? — R.M.C.

Your symptoms suggest to me shin splints. That term is used for just about any kind of pain on the inner side of the legs between the ankles and the knees. Running on hard surfaces does lead to shin splints. In fact, even running on hard-soled shoes can cause it.

Right now you have to rest. In the early stages (the first few days of pain) apply ice. After the pain lessens, use moist heat for 20-30 minutes at a time. Do that three or four times daily. Aspirin, if you tolerate it, will relieve the pain and even quiet any inflammation.

When you start jogging again, and I encourage you to, run on a softer surface. Try a school running track. Get good shoes with shock-absorbing soles. Do warm-ups before you jog — to stretch your heel cords. Don't overdo. DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have had flat feet all my life.

I've gotten into the jogging craze and wonder if my feet will affect my running. — B.B.

Flat feet are caused by fallen arches. Do you have that? A way to test is to dampen the sole of the foot and place it on a piece of paper. If the sole has made flat contact all over, flat feet can be suspected. Actually, this may not always be true. Some people with normal arches may have this flat configuration of the soles. I just mention all this because frequently people just assume they have flat feet, when they really have normal arches.

But if you have the arch problem, you are in for trouble jogging unless you take corrective measures. For that activity normal arches are very important. The arch provides the stability for the foot. A flat foot often is a lax foot. It wobbles somewhat when the foot hits the ground. That makes the leg muscles work overtime and often those muscles are not in synchrony, as they should be. This leads to fatigue during running, abnormal running posture, and increased possibility of injury.

Be sure your shoes are made with good heel counters for support. In addition, you may have to have special shoe inserts to stabilize your feet. As a first step, make sure your running shoes have sturdy heel counters.

You should use only the best shoes. And if you notice any leg pain you'll have to consider getting orthotics for your shoes. Read the booklet "Relief and Care of Your Feet," which is in the mail. Others can order by writing me care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

An Established Newcomer Greeting Service in a field where experience counts for results and satisfaction.

By using a little culinary imagination and some shrewd shopping tactics, you can find nutrition bargains in the supermarket.

Plan ahead. Figure out a week's menus and the number of meals you will eat away from home. Then make a complete shopping list.

Since meat, fish and poultry take the largest chunk out of your food dollar, consider the main course of each dinner first. Then round out the meal with seasonal foods and advertised specials.

Don't be too rigid: If lamb cubes are on special, substitute them for the chuck you usually use in stews.

When buying meat, calculate the cost per serving instead of the cost per pound. Fat, bone and gristle reduce the number of servings and have no nutritive value. Choose those cuts that provide the largest proportion of cooked lean for the money spent.

Consider serving smaller portions of meat extended with potatoes, pasta and other nutritious carbohydrate foods. The average adult needs only 2-3 ounces of cooked meat or fish to provide enough protein at a meal.

Plan low-cost protein alternatives into menus. Dry beans and peas, breads and grains, eggs and peanut butter are good choices.

Use meat bones from cooked roasts as the base for soups — just add water, seasonings and leftover cooked vegetables.

Make substitutes for some or all of the meat in your favorite recipes. For example, chopped eggplant can stand in for ground beef in lasagna, and chicken livers add interest to spaghetti sauce.

Don't overlook economical frozen fish fillets such as cod, perch and whiting. They're low in calories and waste, too.

For top nutrition, choose fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables when possible; processing can deplete nutrients. Fresh produce in season is usually the best buy.

Vegetables should be cooked as little as possible, to maximize their nutritive value.

Don't end up feeding your garbage can! "Planned-overs" can save time and money. For example, a roast on Sunday and use the dividends in a casserole or stir-fry dinner Monday night.

Ties: a key to fashion look

COLLEGE STATION — Men's neck ties serve many purposes — especially as a key to the well-dressed look of today's fashions, says Becky Saunders, a clothing specialist.

"Perhaps most importantly, a tie 'ties together' or coordinates the suit or jacket and slacks with the shirt," she says.

Mrs. Saunders is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

A tie also extends the wardrobe, and it adds versatility, she says.

For example, garments that ordinarily would not be worn together can look dynamic when worn with the "right tie."

In making sure a tie is "right," colorwise, remember a tie "works" if it does one of the following:

- accents a secondary color in the suit, jacket or shirt,
- repeats colors from the suit, jacket or shirt.

Once you understand how to make colors "work," you can advance to additional fashion-combination techniques.

For example, you can experiment with patterns — you can combine a patterned tie with another-patterned suit or shirt as long as one pattern is noticeably dominant.

Tie width is important, too, Mrs. Saunders says. Since a tie is a focal point, it helps draw attention to the face. Because of its shape and placement, a narrow tie makes the face and body look slimmer.

Today's most popular widths are two to three inches. If you want to make wider ties narrow, just do this: Release the stitches from the back side, starting at the widest end to the middle of the tie.

Determine the amount to be reduced. Trim the tie interfacing that amount. Then fold under or trim away extra tie fabric.

Extension Homemakers Hotline

Two extension homemakers clubs, The Creative Homemakers and Fairview Homemakers, met recently.

Refreshments were served and the door prize went to Evelyn Vigar.

The next meeting will be Tuesday in the home of I'Neil Smauley.

CREATIVE

The Kat's Meow was the site of the Feb. 8 meeting of the Creative Homemakers Club. Jackie Casey and Jerry Spencer took the members on a tour of the store to help them better understand the merchandise they carry. They pointed out several unique and specialty gift items as well as a display of bed, bath and kitchen accessories. The ladies were given a "thank-you" gift of homemade cookies for donating their time for the program.

Members then gathered in the home of Mrs. Bonnie Proctor for a meeting and refreshments. Donna Thurman and Patsy Foster were welcomed as new members.

The next meeting will be March 8 at 2407 Alamesa. Mrs. Joy Boyd will be the guest speaker and visitors are invited.

FAIRVIEW

Members answered roll call with their place of birth at the Feb. 2 meeting of the Fairview Homemakers Club. The club met in the home of Bernice Micallef. A majority of members attending were born in Texas with one from Ohio and one from New York.

News of Ann Walker's recovery was given. The program given by Evelyn Vigar concerned making butterfly pins which each member made.

MRS. CHARLES WAYNE VERNON
...formerly Jill Ann Miller

Miller-Vernon

Jill Ann Miller, De Leon, became the bride of Charles Wayne Vernon in a ceremony held Jan. 2 in First Baptist Church, De Leon. The Rev. Pete Bradford, pastor, officiated the ceremony before an altar flanked by an archway decorated with orchid mums, white gladioli and palm leaves accented by white bows.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Miller, De Leon. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Vernon, 1805 Morrison.

Music was provided by Kirk Scott, San Antonio, cousin of the bride. Scott, vocalist, was accompanied by the organ and piano.

The bride wore a princess gown of white satin, featuring a bolero jacket affect bordered with appliques of silk Venice lace and pearls at the throat and around the border. The bishop sleeves were of sheer organza with a deep cuffs applied with matching lace. The train was a modified chapel-length. A chapel-length veil of bridal illusion capped by a tiara-style headpiece of Venice lace and pearls, completed the ensemble.

The bride carried a bouquet of blue rosebuds and white daisies accented by blue satin and white lace streamers.

Jodean Miller, sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Donna Nowlin and Peggy Nowlin, both of De Leon, Debbie Vernon, sister of the bridegroom, and Rhonda Cox, Comanche. Christal Koonce, Desdemona, and Kimberly Roberson, Tuscola, cousin of the bridegroom were flower girls.

Tim Sullins, Hillsboro, was best man. Groomsmen were Kim Sullins, Stephenville, Duane Kolina and Anthony Meurrer, both of West, and Craig Bailey. Ushers were Mark Miller, De Leon, brother of the bride, James Johnston and Kenneth Roberson, Tuscola, cousin of the bridegroom. Rusty Miller, El Paso, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Following the ceremony, the couple was feted with a reception in the church's Fellowship Hall. The bride's table was centered by the bride's bouquet and two crystal candle holders on each side. The table featured a four-tiered white wedding cake.

The bridegroom's table was centered by a bouquet of orchid, blue and white spring flowers and featured a two-layered chocolate cake covered with chocolate shavings.

The bride is a graduate of De Leon High School and is employed by Farmer's First National Bank, Stephenville.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Big Spring High School and attended Hill Junior College, Hillsboro. He is a senior at Tareton State University, Stephenville, and is employed by Stephenville Funeral Home.

Following a wedding trip to Dallas, the couple is making their home in Stephenville.

Measure before buying paint

When you're planning a do-it-yourself paint job, there's an easy way to determine how much paint to buy.

First measure the width of each wall with a yardstick. Then add the numbers together and multiply the total by the height of the room. This gives you the number of square feet to be covered. Now check the label on the paint can and see how many square feet that can covers. To determine the number of cans to buy, divide the square feet on the can into the square feet of the area.

Book review

Geology book entertaining

"BASIN AND RANGE"
Published by Farrar, Straus and Giroux
By JOHN MCPHEE

The terms, concepts and complexities of geology in general are enough to keep the average person from really understanding what goes on with this planet.

But in this part of the country, geology is the foundation for one of our major industries: oil exploration. An understanding of it would be useful, but most people can only deal with the generalities.

That's one reason I so much enjoyed John McPhee's "Basin and Range," a book that discusses the subject in an easy to understand, entertaining and compelling way.

McPhee, a New Jersey native, is a staff writer for The New Yorker magazine. Since 1965 he has published some 15 different books, each one on a wildly different subject.

Some of these subjects include Alaska ("Coming Into the Country"), homemade canoes ("The Survival of the Bark Canoe"), the hydrogen bomb ("The Curve of Binding Energy"), tennis ("Levels of the Game") and even oranges ("Oranges").

Now he has taken a fancy to geology. For "Basin and Range" he traveled across the country on Interstate 80 accompanied by Kenneth S. Deffeyes, a noted geology professor from Princeton University.

The results are far from boring and dry, as far as they are from being simple-minded and trivial. McPhee calls geology a "fountain of metaphor," a phrase that could warm only the heart of an East Coast intellectual. Most of all, however, McPhee is writing about the people who have made a career out of studying the science. He gives us an idea of what compels them to travel about the world looking at rocks.

As an interviewer, McPhee never lets his own personality overpower his subject's. His writing is devoid of cute anecdotes about his experiences.

What makes him occasionally hard to read are his digressions. He goes deeply into the history of geological study and the plate tectonics revolution. It's not difficult to understand, but I found myself wishing he'd get back into the profiles that are so entertaining.

He captures the geologists' excitement. While talking to one about the coming separation of California from the U.S. mainland ("It is just a matter of time," one of them says), he makes you understand the wonder they all probably feel underneath the horror.

"Basin and Range" may not get every reader excited about its subject, but it is good entertainment for the curious.
