Merchants say shoplifting getting worse

By BILL ELDER Staff Writer

When Big Spring police arrested a 34-yearold woman at Gibson's department store late Friday afternoon and allegedly found $42 worth of stolen clothing in her possession, the arrest pointed out a growing problem for local merchants: shoplifting.

Interviews with store managers and owners indicate that a rash of shoplifting incidents have occurred in recent months, and the problem has merchants scratching their heads and seeking ways to reduce the problem.

"I think last week I had $147 worth of merchandise stolen, and the week before $133 (worth)," complained Marge Kolden, manager of Payless Shoe Source on Gregg.

Just minutes before The Herald called Payless on Saturday, an apparent theft had taken place in the small shoe store. A clerk had discovered two empty shoe boxes immediately after some patrons left the store.

The loss: nearly $40

And the problem affects not only the small stores. The large chain stores have their share of headaches from shoplifting.

"There has been an upsurge recently," said Sylke Nejtek, the Czech-born assistant manager of Montgomery Ward in Highland South Shopping Center. "I don't know why there's such a need (to shoplift) now. But from an inventory standpoint, we can tell there has been an increase Montgomery Ward, Payless and K-Mart all were victims of shoplifting in late December when about $400 in merchandise allegedly was stolen from the stores. Four persons from

Lamesa were arraigned on theft charges in connection with the incident. Montgomery Ward, however, has been unable to recover its $300 share of the items, even though the items are in the custody of the police. The reason? "The suspects claimed they found it," said Ms. Nejtek. "There's no way of proving they didn't, since nobody saw them take it from the

The problem of spotting shoplifters is a big one, both merchants and police admit.

'You get 300 or 400 people in a store and it. almost takes a crew of security people walking the floors to monitor the problem in big stores," said police Detective Bud Jones.

Some stores are launching programs to educate clerks and other personnel to spot the incidents of shoplifting as they unfold.

Clerks are being told in some stores not to try to catch offenders - but to learn techniques to prevent potential offenders from ever slipping an item into an overcoat or purse

'We've made our employees more aware of the problem, of what to look for, and we're thinking of installing some systems to avoid the problem," said Ms. Nejtek

The big department stores are known in many cases for laying out whatever expense is necessary to install sophisticated monitoring devices. But the little shopkeeper often finds he doesn't have the budget to employ anything more than a watchful pair of eyes in his shop.

'We try to guard against it," said George Weeks, owner of Gibbs & Weeks apparel store on Main. "We haven't caught anybody, but we know it's going on:' Police, according to Jones, urge the smaller shops that can't afford expensive security to install devices as simple as wide-angle mirrors to keep an eve on their stores."

"It's really a matter of encouraging them not to leave customers unattended," the detective said.

But for some stores, that poses a problem.

"This is a self-service store. We like to let people shop on their own. Sometimes if you follow them around, they get mad," Ms. Neitek of Payless said.

The penalty for shoplifiting ranges from a maximum $2,000 fine and-or one year imprisonment for misdeameanor theft convictions (under $200 worth of merchandise stolen) to a maximum of 10 years imprisonment and-or a $5,000 fine for felonious theft convictions on merchandise worth: between $200 and $10,000, according to police. And the cost of shoplifting can run even higher.

PRICE 50c

"It can cost you your job, your family," Ms. Nejtek warned

Who is the typical shoplifter?

"Usually they're young," Jones said, "and a goodly number of them are female." The high incidence of female shoplifters is attributed to purses which make it easy to conceal items, he added.

But kids have been known to participate in shoplifting escapades, too.

"Sometimes the mother will put the shoes on her children and have them walk out without paying," said Ms. Kolden.

Merchants, it seems, may have to wage war against shoplifters if they hope to wipe out the problem or at least bring it down to more manageable proportions. As Jones put it:

What makes shoplifting a problem is the vast amount of it that goes undetected.

A Big Spring man has been arrested on an attempted murder charge after a warrant was issued for his arrest in Dawson County, authorities said.

Willie Lee Maxwell, who gave his address as the OK Trailer Court, was arrested by Howard County sheriff's deputies at about 9 a.m. Thursday in connection with the alleged pistol-whipping of a Lamesa man on Feb. 14, according to authorities.

Cubs celebrate birth of scouting

About 250 cub scouts, pack leaders and parents showed up at the First Methodist Church last night for the annual district banquet

The event also was staged to commemorate the 75th birthday of scouting, which was started by Lord Robert Baden-Powell.

Six of the nine cub scout packs in the three-county Lone Star District were represented last night. Several dozen cub scouts from all six packs received awards

After a pot-luck supper, district chairman Larry Speck delivered the invocation and made some introductory remarks, recognizing local scouting leaders.

Also helping stage the event was Nancy Doolittle, cub scout coordinator for the district.

The leader of each pack handed out the awards for the

Cosden attorney takes stand

By MIKE DOWNEY Staff Writer

The attorney representing Cosden in a $3.4 million oil fraud suit called eight witnesses to the stand Friday, including himself, as testimony continued in 118th District Court. Donald Godwin, attorney for Cosden, placed himself on the stand to testify as to his aslary and qualifications for presenting civil actions

Cosden is seeking damages and losses from Jaco Oil Company, Inc., Wheelco Oil Company, Inc., Jaco president D.C. "Butch" Wheeler, and Jaco pumper John T. Sims for allegedly selling the same tank of oil repeatedly to Cosden in 1980.

The day's longest testimony came during crossexamination of Jack H. Barton by John Green, the attorney representing Wheeler, Sims, Jaco and Wheelco. Barton is a chemist whose tests run on oil from the Jaco oil lease storage tank showed the oil had been stationary for about 4 months.

Under Green's questioning, Barton said he did not know where the oil samples he tested came from since he did not take the samples himself. He only knew what he had been told by Cosden when the samples were brought to him, Barton said. Barton also testified he did not know what could have happened to the oil before he received it.

Support for Cosden's contention of the legitimacy of the oil and Barton's test results came from two witnesses, both Cosden employees. Thomas A. Harris Jr., lab foreman, told the jury the oil samples from Jaco and Continental had been in his office untouched from February 1961 until November 1961. The samples were allegedly taken on Jan. 5, 1981.

Tommy King, security investigator for Cosden, testified he had picked up the samples in November and taken them to Southwest Labratories in Midland for Barton to test.

In other testimony, George Lee Hash, owner of Dave's Well Service, told the jury about working on the Jaco oil lease from 1979 to 1981 servicing wells. Hash said, on one occasion, he had noticed water, and no oil, coming from one of the wells on the lease. He also supported earlier testimony by saying he had seen Sims apparently turn off a pump on the lease—the pump delivering oil to Cosden. Robert Wash of Forsan Oil Company told the jury he had inquired about purchasing the Jaco lease about a month before Sims, and later Wheeler, were arrested and charged with oil theft. Wash said he had talked with Wheeler about checking production on the lease before buying it but Wheeler never followed through with selling.

Under cross-examination by Green, Wash said he had approached Wheeler about selling the Jaco lease. He also said he had some leases in the general area producing about the same as the Jaco lease is alleged to produce according to the defendants.

Amidst frequent objections from Green, Godwin introduced documents through Cosden accounting supervisor Doris Perkins, of contract agreements and payments by Cosden to Jaco Oil Company. The only female to testify in the five-day-old suit, Mrs. Perkins presented contracts on the original lease from 1954 to 1980.

Following Godwin's brief time on the stand, local attorney R.H. Weaver testified as to the fairness of Godwin's fee and Weaver's work with Godwin. Weaver said they had worked together on a case and Godwin did not "waste time," on the case-a claim made by Green during the Jaco suit.

The civil suit is recessed until 9 a.m. Tuesday

Dozier greeted at home

ARCADIA, Fla. (AP) — This town of 6,000 stopped the clock and borrowed a page from the past Saturday to welcome home its reluctant hero and native son, U.S. Army Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier.

Dozier, in full military dress, and his wife, Judith, were driven in an open car for a four-block parade that covered the main street from one end to the other to celebrate his return after surviving a kidnapping at the hands of Italian terrorists.

The festivities drew nearly 5,000 townsfolk and a sheepish admission from the general, a NATO commander, that he looks forward to the day when the attention subsides

Blushingly, he agreed with his wife when she told reporters, "I'd just as soon get out from in front of your lights, to be honest

For days Arcadia had been preparing for the big event. A podium was built beneath the "Tree of Knowledge," an old moss-laden oak that for years has served as the focus of activities in this quiet cattle and citrus country.

The townspeople gathered beneath this tree to pray when Dozier was kidnapped from his apartment in Italy by Red Brigade terrorists on Dec. 17.

23 die in roof callapse

ANKARA, Turkey (EP) — The roof of a bus terminal on the Turkish-Iraqi border collapsed Saturday, killing 23 people in two buses parked under the roof, officials reported.

One report said an oil truck hit a pillar supporting the roof, causing it to collapse, but officials said they had not determined the cause yet.

Ibrahim Sahin, the governor of the Turkish province of Mardin, where the accident occurred, said in a telephone interview that 23 bodies were removed from the buses: He said 11 people were injured.

Sahin said all but two of the people in the buses were Iraqis. An Egyptian and a Yugoslav were among those injured.

The buses, bearing Turkish license plates, were waiting to enter Turkey at the Habur crossing point.

Dangerous bomb found

EAST HARTFORD; Conn (AP) - Officials at the local historical society thought they had quite a find when they took possession of what they believed was a Civil War cannonball,

But a later, closer inspection revealed that it was an explosive device from the Civil War that was sensitive to heat and pressure

When first given the 10-pound object, historical society officials had tossed the object about to determine its weight as they considered putting it on exhibit.

After agreeing to put the object on display, one society member suggested that police inspect it. After looking over the bomb, police immediately called bomb experts, who detonated the explosive Thursday.

The bomb had been uncovered during a local construction project. Officials speculated that it might have been part of a Civil War memorial that once stood at the digging site:

ATLANTA (AP) - A police officer on stakeout may have been asleep when he says he heard a "big loud splash" in the Chattahoochee River last spring, a sound expert testified Saturday at the murder trial of Wayne B. Williams

Prosecutors contend the splash was made by the body of Nathaniel Cater, 27, the last of 28 young blacks slain in a 22-month string of killings here. Williams is charged with murdering Cater and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of the victims

Williams, 23, first came to the attention of police about 3 a.m. on May 22 when police recruit Robert Campbell heard the splash and other members of a stakeout team saw Williams' car on a bridge above. Cater's body was found downstream two days later.

The sound expert, Mark Oviatt, testified for the defense that Campbell should have heard Williams' car cross a metal expansion joint on the bridge before hearing the splash - unless he was asleep

Campbell testified last month that the expansion joint usually warned him of approaching traffic, but he did not hear or see Williams' car before hearing the splash. He denied being asleep, and prosecutors contend Williams sneaked onto the bridge with his lights off to avoid detec-

Oviatt said Williams' car was driven over the expansion joints at various speeds while a machine measured the sound at the river level, where Campbell was stationed May 22. "A person with normal hearing could hear the expansion joint sound" when the car was moving as slowly as 4.3 mph, Oviatt said.

Oviatt's test results disputed Campbell's testimony that prosecution experiments showed a car traveling at less than 10 mph could not be heard below the bridge. But under cross-examination, Oviatt conceded the noise could have been different in May because of seasonal differences, including temperature.

Prosecutors also contended that the machine Oviatt us ed to measure the sound could not show what Campbell did or did not hear

Saturday's special court session, held to speed up the 8-week-old trial, was cut short after the morning's testimony because defense lawyer Mary Welcome became ill. The nature of her illness was not disclosed, but a bailiff said it was not serious.

Clements suggests federal land sale

By FRANK MAY HarteHanks News Service

COLLEGE STATION-Gov. Bill Clements Wednesday said he has suggested to President Reagan that the federal government sell some of its "tens upon tens of millions" of acres of ranch and farm land to help reduce the federal deficit.

Clements, in a news conference at College Station where he addressed the 24th annual County Judges and Commissioners Conference, said he is "absolutely opposed to the huge deficits" that are proposed in Reagan's budget.

The president's budget projects a deficit of almost $100 billion in fiscal year 1982, $91.5 billion in 1983 and $82.9 billion in 1984. Reagan has conceded he may not achieve his goal of balancing the budget until 1988.

Clements called the proposal to sell government lands west of the Mississippi "an excellent plan" to help reduce the federal debt.

The land sale proposal has been suggested by some congressmen. U.S. Rep. Phil Gramm, a College Station Democrat, says the sale of the real estate and other federal property could reduce the deficit by $45 billion over the next three years.

Clements noted the federal government would not be the only entity getting proceeds from the land sales. He said once the properties are "in the private sector," they will be put on county and state tax rolls.

"I think that's an excellent plan, and I'd be in favor of it, and I've suggested it to the president," Clements said. "I'd like to see the public lands put into the private sector

Clements stressed that he wants "to quickly lay to rest one boogey bear" that the land sale proposal would include valuable federal properties such as parks and beaches.

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Operators of the Three Mile Island nuclear plant on Saturday were at a loss to explain why instruments suddenly warned of potentially explosive amounts of hydrogen inside the crippled Unit 2 reactor. The readings led to a minor alert late Friday that lasted 81/2 hours before it was called off and officials began trying to find out what went wrong

TMI spokesman Doug Bedell said technicians entered Unit 2 to investigate low oxygen burdens that have been historically shouldered by the federal govern-

Asked if the Democrats would offer alternatives to the Reagan proposals. Cranston said, "There is no agreed Democratic plan at this point." But he added that alternatives would be offered later.

He predicted that the Democrats would begin - with some Republican help - by rejecting the president's budget and that Congress would not go along with the projected 18 percent increase in defense spending.

"New federalism" and the proposed cuts in the federal budget will top the agenda at the three-day winter meeting of the National Governors'

Legislatures meets the same day

When the governors go to the White House on Monday to meet with Reagan and Budget Director David A. Stockman, the National Association of Counties will be convening a two-day legislative conference

Getting more local control over programs has widespread support among state and local officials, but they also have expressed fears whether they will have enough money to maintain their new responsibilities.

'The governors applaud the boldness of the president's initiative and his willingness to negotiate the specifics of an intergovernmental association Bit he added that "the plan gives rise to a number of issues that must be more fully explored, including the impact of the fiscal 1983 budget cuts on the states.

A similar theme was sounded by J. Richard Conder of Richmond County, N.C., president of the counties association

"I totally agree with the concept of new federalism," Conder said. "This is the package we've been waiting for. But there are a lot of ramifications that have to be worked out. Most governors said they felt Reagan's proposal to increase defense

The combination of ''new federalism" and the proposed budget cuts also may exacerbate tensions. between state and local governments over who gets what share of federal block grant funds.

Responding to an Associated Press survey, nearly 300 county officials said they were concerned "whether local interests will be protected and whether counties will receive a fair share of the funds" as federal aid is shifted increasingly toward block grants channeled through state governments

"It looks very much as though there may have

Fight secrecy in government

When President Lyndon Johnson signed the Freedom of Information Act in 1966, he said:

"This legislation springs from one of our most essential principles: A democracy works best when the people have all the information that the security of the nation permits. No one should be able to put up curtains of secrecy around decisions which can be revealed without injury to the public."

In its 15 years of existence the act has made it possible for the press to inform the American public of foulups and crimes by federal agencies, of incompetence and inefficiency in government offices, and of business practices that have endangered life, health and property.

BUT LEGISLATION IS now moving through Congress which, if enacted, would seriously reduce the extent to which Americans know about the conduct of their government.

The proposals, sponsored by the Reagan administration, would impose wholesale news censorship on government information by allowing the following information to be kept secret:

*information dealing with unsafe consumer products. *information about illegal acts by government agencies.

*lists of names of people receiving government funds.

*information about security agencies that is not harmful to national security.

*details of lawsuits settled by the government.

It would establish, for the first time, government royalties for reprinting government reports, violating a tradition that traces back to the nation's founding.

One of Reagan's arguments in seeking the legislation is that the act has been used to disclose trade secrets of business.

Actually, there already is an exemption in the current act for "trade secrets and commercial or financial information .... privileged or confidential." The courts have applied this to cover real trade secrets, such as secret formulas which would cause substantial competitive harm to a business.

A RECENT ISSUE of "Presstime," the Journal of the American Newspapers Publishers Association, asks some thought-provoking questions in connection with Reagan's motives in trying to dilute the act:

"Why does the administration want to keep secret all details of legal settlements entered into by the United States? What is it thinking of doing in terms of settling cases that it does not want the public to know about? And why does the attorney general want the unilateral right to exempt all documents relating to terrorism when it was the disclosure of these documents that showed illegal behavior by the bureau in the past? What does the FBI plan to do in the future that it requires this new secrecy?

"If our government is operating as it should be, then it should want to inform the public as much as possible about its actions and policies in order to gain public understanding and trust."

As Katherine Graham, publisher of the Washington Post says, "Nothing so diminishes democracy as obsessive and needless secrecy.'

How to keep your name out of print

Scarcely a week goes by that I don't receive a phone call from someone who wants his or her name kept out of the paper

Every newspaper editor in the country faces this phenomenon

In my experience, the calls most often come on a Saturday morning. Someone has committed an indiscretion, has been arrested for DWI, or picked up for shoplifting, or been arrested in a bar in the company of someone who is not his spouse, or been involved in a family brawl. Because of the embarrassment or family strife that publication of the person's name would cause, the person asks that his or her name be withheld from the story.

I always explain, as gently as possible, that we have a strict policy of never omitting names from public record stories.

The person always has a "special" set of circumstances that he or she feels warrants an exception to the rule. A common plea is that the person's children would suffer embarrassment at school. Or the person might lose his job, and he has six hungry kids to feed. The person's spouse might seek a divorce, and a family would be broken up.

I explain that if we made an exception this time, we'd have to make an exception for others, and where do we draw the line? We don't draw the line. We make no exceptions, not even for employees of this newspaper.

THERE ARE SEVERAL types of people who call. There is the person who is in tears, pleading. I know I seem like a cold, cruel, compassionless person when I explain the policy. The person usually will ask to speak with my boss, the publisher, in a final attempt to quash the story

It's an attempt that never succeeds

I remember what former Herald editor Tommy Hart said about this problem when he retired. 'I've commiserated with them. I've put myself in their shoes. But you either report all things fairly or you don't, and if you make one concession, then the next time you're prone to make two. And although you may seem hard-hearted and cold, like a physician does, you just can't afford to be any other way.

Some other tactics that newspaper editors everywhere hear

"I'm a personal friend of the publisher." In my 17 years associated with various newspapers, I have found this statement hardly ever true, but even if it were it would make no difference.

"If you run my name in this story, I will cancel all my advertising.

The Herald has lost advertising for refusing to omit a name from a story. The Abilene Reporter-News has lost advertising. Every newspaper worth its salt in the country has lost advertising because it stuck to principles of integrity.

"I will cancel my subscription." Same reply, second verse

'What if it happened to your family? You'd leave it out then, wouldn't you?" Wrong. If it happened to my family, or to my best friend, or to me. or to the publisher himself, the story would run.

"I know for a fact that I can get my name left out because I know someone else who got theirs left out." Wrong

"The people at the radio station were understanding." I wouldn't know if this were true or not, but I do know that radio stations do not have enough air time to run all the names in public records, particularly insignificant misdemeanors.

THEN THERE IS the belligerent, threatening caller, who is the least effective of all. "You are not going to run that story, and if you do, you'll be very, very sorry. Mark my words, you'll wish you hadn't

That sort of statement gets the adrenalin pumping, and newspaper editors everywhere have to resist the urge to rush out and put the story in big headlines on the front page and make a much bigger deal of it than it actually is. The end result after such a conversation is always the same. The story runs.

WHAT SOME CALLERS don't realize is that they would be much better off not to call at all. A story that might have been one sentence in the police beat may turn into several paragraphs as a result of their calling and bringing our attention

The more phone calls we get from people trying to help a person keep his name out of a story, the more newsworthy we figure it must be, so we may dig for extra details.

I am always suspicious of such callers, because I've encountered two or three instances when the person trying to "cover up" details of a small incident actually had a much deeper motive for keeping the story out - greed. Investigation has led to the exposing of a much larger unscrupulous activity that results in a major story. By calling, the person has unwittingly tipped his hand and would have been better off blowing a bugle from the top of the courthouse and announcing his misdeeds. At least that way he could plead temporary insanity. The best way to keep your name out of the paper? Think twice before becoming involved in any situation that might result in a criminal charge, regardless of how "innocent" you are.

Youth objects to pro-war society Dear Editor,

I am a 17-year-old high school senior on the verge of turning 18. I recently received a notice from the ever present Selective Service System and some propaganda material from the Navy

It's difficult for me to believe that we still live in a pro-war society. I am not in the least bit proud to live in a country where there are atomic bombs, cruise missiles, and other technical weapons which sole purpose is to annihilate human beings. It is also difficult for me to believe that people assume that killing (in time of war) is morally acceptable. Whatever happened to "Thou shalt not kill"?

It seems to me that there are better ways to resolve political differences than by slaughtering one another. I

I was walking by the White House the other day, when I saw a man marching back and forth with a sign, STOP THE CONVENTIONAL WAR.

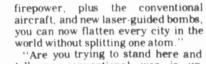

Wanting to be helpful, I said, 'Haven't you made a mistake, sir? Don't you mean, 'Stop nuclear war'? "No," he said, "I mean con-ventional war. The anti-nuke people are protesting nuclear war, but no one is speaking out against conventional war

"What's wrong with conventional war?'' I asked.

"It's lousy," he said. "With the stuff they've got stockpiled now, the major powers can kill almost as many people with a conventional war as they can with a nuclear one. It will just take longer.

"I think you're exaggerating. A conventional war is a Shriners' picnic compared to a nuclear one.'

"People think that because they've seen too many World War II movies. But if they believe that the next conventional war is going to be like the last one, they're out of their gourds. With the non-nuclear disarmament, all they are talking about is trying to stop the nuclear arms race. And they aren't talking much about that any more. But you never hear a discouraging word for the non-nuclear arms buildup. We've got people brainwashed into believing a conventional war is the only alternative to a nuclear one.

"But it seems so old hat to protest conventional war at a time when there are enough nuclear weapons to zap everyone off the Earth," I told him.

"That's why I'm doing it. No one is going to start World War III with nuclear weapons. It's going to begin with conventional ones and will the world. If you add their firepower up they present as much of a danger to mankind as anything the nuclear Dr. Strangeloves have come up with. The worst part of it is, the major powers are selling or giving away conventional weapons to every two-bit nation, on the assumption they really can't do much damage.

Texas investments inefficient

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - Suppose there are three small grocery stores in your neighborhood - each with a likeable owner who works hard to succeed.

You find that your spouse has been spreading the family's food money among the three. Each store has certain specials each week, but your spouse ignores them and buys everything at full price in order to help each store succeed in the grocery business.

Nice generous spouse you have there. But would you be pleased with those shopping practices or concerned that your family isn't getting the most for its money?

Probably anger would be your first reaction, but what if your spouse argued that spreading the business among the stores and ignoring their best bargains are practices that are good for your neighborhood?

The argument would go something like this: If most people shopped at only one store or only took advantage of bargains at all three, only one of the stores might survive. That would be bad for the neighborhood and the survivor might take advantage of its new monopoly to raise prices eventually.

In case you haven't guessed already, this little grocery parable is only a simplified way of pointing out the inefficient way the state invests its money and the reason why the method can be defended.

THE STATE OF TEXAS takes in and spends millions of dollars every month, and there often is a lag between the getting and the spending.

Bill Garland

With that much money involved, possession of it for even a short time can be quite profitable.

The state treasurer is charged with investing these funds in such a way as to earn interest that can alleviate the need for more taxing. That money can be invested in either no-interest demand accounts, similar to your own checking account, or in short-term time deposits that draw interest. A State Depository Board, consisting of the state treasurer, state bankers commissioner and a citizen appointed by the governor, sets the interest rate, currently at 11 percent. In case you haven't noticed, that's quite a bit lower than any interest rate you can get these days. And it's more than 3 percent under what the banks pay private customers for short-term loans. The state could earn higher interest by investing in savings and loan certificates, but state law prevents that. Only banks may be favored with the state's business, and the depository board decides which ones are eligible.

Treasurer Warren G. Harding has the power to decide how the funds are distributed among those chosen banks, and he continues the practice of his predecessor of spreading money around as much as possible. (For those new Texans who are amused that the state has a treasurer with the same name as a disgraced U.S. president, let us add to your mirth by pointing out that Jesse James held the job for many years before him.)

There is general agreement that the state's current investment practices don't produce the highest possible return for the taxpayers'

na na serie de la construcción de l

But bankers argue that handling the state's demand accounts is a burden. They describe their work for the state as almost a public service rather than a lucrative practice.

OFFICERS OF SMALLER banks argue that spreading the money around promotes competition and lets them compete with the big-city banking interest. They counter calls for competitive bidding on state accounts by contending that smaller banks wouldn't be able to compete and bigger banks would obtain a monopoly that eventually would be detrimental to the state. Such arguments, combined with hardball lobbying and generous contributions to legislators by banking interests, have kept the system intact for almost six decades. Attempts have been made in recent legislative sessions to reform state law on deposits. All failed. The 1983 session may see a different result, however.

Gov. Bill Clements is convinced that Texas should obtain a better return on its investment. Any improvement in return would help him hold to his no-new-taxes pledge. He could put both public and private pressure on legislators to produce reforms

Another factor is that the state's savings and loan business has problems and would like a share of state deposits. Its lobby might beat the banking lobby in a fight for the hearts, minds and votes of legislators, or at least win a compromise that banks could accept

WASHINGTON-From the tribe of the Kickapoo Indians on the Rio Grande to the tribes of bankers and oilmen statewide, the eyes of Texans will be steadily set upon Washington this vear

States News Service

Take the Kickapoo, the band of Indians in Eagle Pass made somewhat famous last year by a demand resulting from their realization (and that of their attorneys) that they might not need be treated quite so roughly by the federal government

The old tune about the slowness of an act of Congress must seem less than humerous to them now. In their patched-together huts under the bridge that crosses from Eagle Pass into Piedras Negras, the tribe awaits action on a bill that congressional aides say may pass this year, or may wait until next year. The administration is preparing an analysis that might require another hearing on whether to give the Kickapoos land of their own.

MANY TEXANS KNOW, however, that the decontrol of natural gas is awaiting the waving of the magic Reagan administration wand. While the administration is certainly sympathetic with decontrol, that backing may not develop. The political climate is such that Reagan may need to put most of his political capital into the economic issues that will dominate the session. Even though Reagan may not directly confront the question in a Congress highly divided on the issue, he seems to be doing well through his energy point man, C.M. "Mike" Butler. The Houston attorney has made the Federal Energy Regulatory Administration into something most in the oil business thought it would never be: An advocate agency for the speeding-up of decon-

If the agency succeeds with a new ruling, now being drafted by PBRC staff, the agency may succeed in doubling the allowable price for about 35 percent of all natural gas currently produced. The fight for those in favor of decontrol would be against consumer groups already posed to file suit if PBRC goes ahead with its market-oriented wemaking will be the defense industry, and not the one located at Fort Hood or any other state military installation.

Companies like the LIV Corp., General Dynamics, Tanny Corp. and Bell Helicopter will again have hats in hand when they approach the Pentagon for whooping contracts to build everything from weapons to aircraft. The companies have formed a Texas Aerospace and National Defense Technology Development Council that came to Washington earlier this month to do just that.

THOSE TEXANS on the other end of the financial scale, whether they be impoverished students or residents generally lacking in income, should atune themselves more to the maneuverings through congress of the federal budget in which federal subsidies might be endangered. The Texas State Office in Washington estimated that more than 90,000 Texas students might lose college-level benefits if Reagan's 1983 budget is passed.

Other texans with their focus on Washington are more typical, but the argument has been made that all groups this year are in the same economic boat and that, this year more than others, what's good for one is good for all: lowering inflation, interest rates and unemployment and boosting productivity.

The view goes that Congress will not have time

loan industry will again look to Washington this year for laws that might continue to change their business eyed all

With legislation currently under review in Congress, Texas savings and loans could gain new authority to invest in real estate and engage in commercial banking, while banks might be allowed under new legisltation to underwrite revenue bonds and mutual funds.

Texas farmers again this year will be attempting to get a more attentive ear from both Congress and primarily from the Reagan administration. At question to farmers is whether Reagan, afterall, will be as unresponsive to farming needs as farmers claimed his predecessor was. Such a tactic by Reagan might put him out of favor with the much-needed Texas Democratic conservatives (well-known as "Boll weevils") whose support he probably will badly need again in budget votes

1982 crop season underway

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Farmers in South Texas are starting to plant grain sorghum to officially kick off the 1982 crop season. Planting in that region and in the Coastal Bend should increase in the coming days as soil temperatures continue to warm up but lack of planting moisture may cause some delays, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Many farmers are ready to plant in southern and coastal areas but need moisture to get their crops up, he said. Land preparation continues in other areas along with some preplant irrigation in the Trans-Pecos area.

Soil temperatures are warming up rapidly in southern locations but are still cool elsewhere. Readings by the National Weather Service for the past week at the 4-inch depth averaged as follows: Austin, 45 degrees F.; Eagle Lake, 50; Katy, 50; Beaumont, 53; Victoria, 53; Corpus Christi, 63; Dilley, 64; Uvalde, 54; and Weslaco, 6l. Extension Service recommendations are to wait for soil temperatures to reach at least 50 degrees before planting corn, 55 for grain sorghum and 65 for cotton to improve germination.

A few gins are still handling moduled cotton in the Trans-Pecos and South Plains areas where a lot of cotton was field-stored in modules to enable faster harvesting, Pfannstiel said.

Harvesting of sugarcane, citrus and a variety of winter vegetables continues in the Rio Grande Valley, and vegetable harvesting also remains active in the Winter Garden. The citrus market has strengthened considerably in Texas following the damaging freeze to Florida's citrus crop in mid-January.

Small grains and winter pastures continue to show the effects of the recent harsh winter weather that blanketed the state. Also, dry conditions are hampering growth throughout most of Texas.

Livestock remain in fair to good condition due to heavy supplemental feeding. However, weight losses are evident in many animals due to the recent severe winter weather, said Pfannstiel.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions

PANHANDLE: Farmers are getting back to land preparation following several weeks of harsh winter weather. Wheat growth remains at a standstill due to cold, dry conditions. Cattle feeding remains heavy and conditions have been poor for gains in feedlot cattle

SOUTH PLAINS: A little moduled cotton is still being ginned. Farmers are getting ready for full-scale land preparation. Wheat continues in a dormant state due to recent cold weather. Livestock feeding continues heavy.

ROLLING PLAINS: Recent cold weather and lack of moisture have kept small grains at a standstill. Greenbugs are also causing some damage. Farmers are topdressing small grains with nitrogen but rain will be needed to boost growth. Cotton farmers are busy chiseling and deep plowing their land in preparation for spring planting. Livestock feeding continues.

NORTH CENTRAL: Small grains remain at a standstill due to recent cold weather. Freeze damage was heavy in some oats. Some gardeners are planting early vegetables uch as onions and potatoes. Livestock are in fair to good condition, with supplemental feeding heavy.

NORTHEAST: Farmers need dry, open weather to continue preparing land for spring crops. Small grains also would benefit from open weather. Some oats suffered heavy freeze damage during the recent cold spell. Some early vegetables as well as fruit and nut trees are being planted. Livestock continue to hold up well as supplemental feeding continues.

FAR WEST: Some ginning of moduled cotton continues: labor and machinery problems have caused delays. Cropland preparation continues. Irrigated small grains look good but others along with pastures and ranges need rain. Supplemental feeding remains active, with livestock generally in good condition.

WEST CENTRAL: Small grains are suffering from lack of moisture and the recent cold weather. Greenbugs and armyworms are also infesting some fields. Livestock remain in fair to good condition with heavy supplemental feeding

H & R BLOCK SAYS "MANY WILL OVERPAY"

H & R Block, the income tax people, would like you to read a quote worth quoting. Recently a former IRS official said, "Many taxpayers will leave money on the table, will actually overpay their tax liability.

Taxpayers overpay their taxes because of a lack of Tax knowledge and the fear of an audit. People file the form they receive without checking to make sure that they have taken all of their deductions and credits. H & R Block believes every client should have a complete personal interview and the return done while the clinet is with the tax preparer. Block knows taxes. Not only are they the world's largest tax firm, they also conduct the world's largest tax school

Most Taxpayers feel their return is done correctly and to their advantage if they are not audited, and they receive the refund shown on their tax return. This is not always true. The IRS does not check every return to see if the taxpayer took all legitimate deductions, or if the taxpayer's financial circumstances have changed from year to year. H & R Block, using a thorough interview, makes the tax laws work for the client. Every return is then double checked for correctness in both math and theory.

H & R Block will make the laws work for you at their Big Spring office - located at 1512 Gregg, Telephone Number 263-1931. Appointments available. Closed Sunday

Oil companies catch blame for water and land pollution

ODESSA, Texas (AP) Angry landowners charged at a legislative hearing Friday that their land and water are being ruined because the state Railroad Commission ignores violations by oil companies.

Members of the Texas House of Representatives' water subcommittee held the hearing at Odessa College to hear testimony about pollution of fresh water by oil field salt water injection and disposal.

.Ten West Texas citizens complained about unplugged abandoned oil wells, salt injections used to push up more oil, poor casings and linings of oil wells and excessive use of freshwater to maintain oil drilling. Some brought pictures of open pits of brine, while others brought jars of salty water.

Clayton Smith, a rancher in West Crockett County, said water on his land was the "best in the world" until 1978 when it became so salty he could not use it.

Smith said he reported the problem to the Railroad Commission in San Angelo, and that the commission repeatedly sent a representative to take samples but never made a report to Smith.

'After replacing hot water heaters, dishwashers and plumbing, I didn't feel like those samples were doing anything to solve my problems,' Smith said, adding that he then contacted the Department of Water Resources.

A field representative investigated and told him the pollution came from a salt water disposal well and injection well. The problem was referred to the Railroad Commission, which took no action, he said.

Smith said that although the commission issued orders to plug the well in 1976, 1977 and 1978, it was never done

Jerry Mullican, director of underground injection controls for the Railroad Commission, said the department does not have enough field investigators to cover the number of oil-related pollution complaints received.

"There's been a 100 percent in-crease in the number of well permits we issued in 1981," he said at the hearing.

He said the 120 field inspectors for 200 counties have more work than they can handle.

Gilbert Kretzschmar, assistant executive director of the Department of Water Resources, said that his department investigates pollution of underground water but the Railroad Commission has authority over anything oil-related.

Most of the landowners testifying said the regulatory power should be in the hands of the Department of Water Resoures instead of the commission.

'When you have oil companies that feed money into political kitties, the individual citizen can't fight them,' said Jim Batte of Odessa

But subcommittee members said that argument could be used to criticize any agency.

Study says Houston traffic deadliest of 6 major cities

HOUSTON (AP) - Traffic on the congested thoroughfares here runs "out of control" and is the deadliest of the five major U.S. cities, a study shows.

Traffic in the nation's fifth largest city is not only worsening, it's doing so at an accelerating pace, a study released Thursday by the Safety Council of Greater Houston said.

"Viewed in it's totality ... Houston traffic can only be described as out of control," said Carol Coffee, director of the non-profit organization

The study was drawn from statistics compiled by the National Safety Council, and those figures showed that for every 100,000 residents, 25.5 people died in automobijle ac-cidents last year, Ms. Coffee said. Los Angeles, the country's second-largest city, was a distant second with 15.2 people per 100,000 dying.

In the nation's largest city, New York, the death rate was 9.7 per 100,000, Ms. Coffee said. The study showed that 9.2 people were killed in Chicago traffic while only eight died in accidents in Philadelphia, she said.

Charges of brutality called defense 'tactic'

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) - Testimony from convicts that painted Warden Wallace Pack as sadistic man who tortured prisoners is nothing more than an attempt to confuse the jurors, a prison spokesman says.

"This is a defense tactic to prolong the trial and confuse the minds of jurors as to the reputation of Warden Pack," said spokesman Rick Hartley

Pack's reputation was at the heart of testimony last week in the capital murder trial of inmate Eroy Edward Brown, 31, a convicted burglar from Waco. He is accused of drowning Pack last April 4-near a prison farm, and may be tried later in the shooting death of Ellis Unit farm manager Billy Max Moore

Defense attorney Craig , Washington contends Brown acted in self defense, and introduced testimony that Pack and Moure were cruel and abusive to prisoners and had threatened to kill Brown on the day of the incident

But Hartley disputed testimony that the officials mistreated Texas Department of Corrections inmates, and that Pack had ordered some prisoners drugged and supervised the killings of others.

"The defense seems to be trying the reputations of Wallace Pack and Billy Max Moore, instead of the reputation of Eroy Edward Brown," Hartley said during a three-day recess in the trial. Testimony is to resume here Monday

Hartley said Pack "was a man of high ethics, high morals and honest. I have never heard a complaint aimed at Wallace Pack.'

During the week's testimony about 20 current and former inmates said Pack regularly abused them and subjected them to physical violence. The most startling tale of alleged abuse by

Pack was offered Friday by former inmate Tommy Carlisle of San Antonio, Carlisle was serving a sentence for murder with malice at the Wynne Unit when he said the warden, then a major, tortured him and ordered another inmate beaten to death.

He accused Pack on fivo separate occasions of holding a gun to his head because I was attempting to inform the federal court of an immate's killing," Carlisle testified.

In an effort to get out of prison because he feared for his life. Carlials said he severad his Achilles heel tendon. The former inmate testified he was placed in a straitjacket, put on the floorboard of a car and kicked repeatedly en route to the hospital.

When he got back to prison, Carlisle said he was placed in solitary confinement and stripped. He said Pack handcuffed his hands over his head and said he was "going to teach me a lesson.

The warden took a pair of pliers and plucked the hairs from under Carlisle's arms and crushed his nose and penis with the tool, he said.

The ex-inmate also said Pack, in 1971, ordered other prisoners to beat inmate Melvin Austin. Carlisle said Austin was beaten and placed in cell where he died of a heart attack

Pope seems to have lost some magic

POPE IN THE RAIN - Pope John Paul II's private secretary, Rev. Stanislaw Dzisisz holds

By DENNIS REDMONT Associated Press Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE; 'The writer accompanied, Pope John Paul on his eight-day African tour.

ROME (AP) - He pounded drums and hummed African hymns. He joked with nuns and a Marxist president: He delivered policy pronouncements in French, Spanish, English and Polish - without stumbling once.

But Pope John Paul II, "the athlete of faith," as some Vatican prelates call him, seemed to have lost some of his magic touch as he breezed through our African countries on an eight-day Frip that ended Friday.

The torrid, 8,000-mile xpedition took the pope through oil-rich Nigeria, Gabon, Marxist-ruled Benin and Equatorial Guinea, a former Spanish. colony barely back on the road to economic subsistence and religious freedom after more than a decade of nurderous repression.

In Benin, the leader of the revolution, Mathieu Kerekou, told the pontiff under the portraits of Lenin, Stalin, Marx and Mao Tse-tung that the pope had an equal place in his heart.

In Nigeria, his triumphant return to the Christian region that was once Biafra was marred when Moslem leaders failed to show up at a meeting aimed at warming up dialogue

The pope's message wasn't particularly pleasant to hear that African society was built too thin, for a few at the top, that violence brings The "no effective solution" to social conflict, and permissiveness and waste pervaded youth who rejected Christ.

Many of the Pope's 34 other speeches also failed: to stir some of the 2 million people who saw the white-robed pontiff in person and the millions of others who watched him on television. Many walked away after getting a glimpse of the pontiff as he read through a dozen pages of a homily

Pope John Paul has the dimension of a myth, of a personality, which suddenly becomes approachable," commented an African-based French Dominican scholar, Rehe Luneau. "But when people get in close, or start listening they don't always hear what they wait. So they don't respond !'

An underlying question is whether any of the pope's former spark has been lost because of the May 13 assassination attempt, in which he was wounded

By GREG JAKLEWICZ

Sports Editor It hardly resembled a winner's lockerroom especially with long distance shooting specialist John Green staring at the floor and repeating, "It's sad, man It's sad." The scene courtside a few moments earlier had been one of jubilation, however, as Big Spring again turned giant-killers in District 5-AAAAA.

Coach Ed Haller started his four seniors Friday night and that lineup responded with a 62-59 victory over second half co-leader San Angelo Central, giving the Steers a sweep of the Bobcats in district play

Meanwhile, 125 miles to the east, Abilene High spoiled cross-town rival Cooper's upset plans with a 39-37 victory to claim the 5-AAAAA championship. The Eagles' only loss of the second half came to, you guessed it, Big Spring.

The game played in the Steers' gym Friday night was indeed one of heightened emotion. Haller announced his resignation earlier that day and his players, determined to show him their appreciation for turning the program around during his three years on the court, turned in a gutsy performance against the Bobcats and The Three Musketeers - Lorand White, Hercules Miller and Jeff Kasner

White, the league's leading scorer, was held under 20 points for one of the few occasions this year.

If this game had a script, the Steers followed it perfectly. The Bobcats showed a tendency to put a lot of distance on their opponents in the third quarter in previous games but Big Spring entered the final quarter just two down. See Steers, page 3B

Steers' Coach Haller announces resignation

By GREG JAKLEWICZ

Sports Editor Big Spring basketball coach Ed Haller announced his resignation Friday, effective at the completion of the 1981-82 school year

Haller has served as basketball coach for three years, coming to Big Spring from El Paso where he coached at Austin High School for five years and at Irvin for seven. His 1974-75 Irvin team went 27-5.

'Tonight made it all worthwhile," Haller said after Friday night's win over San Angelo. "I accomplished what I wanted. That is gratifying.

He cited two primary reasons for stepping down as coach. The first, he said is that "coaching is a young man's game, particularly in high school." Secondly, he wanted to spend more time with his wife, Ernestine. The couple married in May of 1981 and Haller said, "I feel like spending more time with her

Haller began coaching at St. Joseph's Junior College in Missouri before moving to El Paso. He obtained his master's degree in counseling during his stay there in addition to his 12 years in coaching He indicated he may stay on at Big Spring High as an instructor or retire and move to Timberon, N.M. "And hit the hound out of the golf ball," he added

They'll huff, and they'll puff...

Comeback Wolves blow opponents away

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

COLORADO CITY - There are those games a team has to win. Coaches and sports writers call them "must" games. Colorado City won those "must" games this season and are now in the Class AAA state playoffs.

The Wolves upended Breckenridge 44-41 in the District 7-AAA championship game last Tuesday to gain a bidistrict berth against perrenial basketball powerhouse Comanche. The come-from-behind victory culminated what has been a season of hard work for the Wolves of coach George Martin.

Colorado City "breezed" though the first half of district play with a 5-0 record. Actually, "breezed" isn't the world. Try "escaped" with an undefeated record.

The Wolves downed Breckenridge by four points, edged Wylie by one topped Merkel by a couple and clipped Clyde by eight in four very crucial games in a very well-balanced district. The only breather was a 64-37 victory over Stamford.

In the second half, the tables were turned. The Wolves dropped a 63-60 overtime game to Wylie, dropped a 47-45 overtime game to Merkel, lost by four to Clyde and fell by 10 to the Buckaroos. The lone win was by 34 over Stamford.

That set up a playoff between C-City and Breck, which compiled an overall record of 9-1. The only loss, of course, was the first half defeat at the hands of the Wolves.

Martin says his team has a habit of coming back when it counts in those "must" games and the Wolves erased a five-point Breck lead late in the game to win by three.

'Everybody took us for granted in the first half," Martin recalls. "I guess they felt we weren't going to be in contention for district. The girls, however, felt like they were

Although Colorado City has just a 15-13 record. Martin used the entire season to build towards the playoffs. His squad was 8-9 before league play but "we played Permian, Eastland and San Angelo, schools with good teams, and we stayed in there with them

In the building process, Martin had to figure out which five girls to put on the court. His starting lineup consists of 5-7 forward Karla Hern, 5-3 guard Kim Feaster, 5-0 post Angi Neff, 5-8 guard Laura Baum and 5-8 forward Darlene Mitchell.

Those five may start but Martin doesn't hesitate going to those players sitting beside on the bench. Tomika Randle, a 5-9 junior forward, "could be a starter" but Martin likes to go with a little more experience. Others on call duty are Carolyn Green, Stacy Hamrick, Kerry Spivey and Hollie Taplin. All four are juniors.

It was an overcast Saturday, with occasional drizzle leaving tiny waterdroplets on the hoods of cars around town. Ed Haller may not have been able to get in his round of golf - an activity which makes him very happy but he still should have had a broad grin on his face after the events of Friday night You see, his Big Spring basketball team knocked off co-leader San Angelo Central, the second time in three weeks his team had turned the trick. It was no grudge match with the Bobcats, mind you. It's just that Haller saw three years of work peak and he could leave his coaching position with a feeling of accomplishment and satisfaction. Haller made the announcement of his resignation as basketball coach to Ron Longback before Friday night's game. It could be said the Steers were trying to "win one for the Gipper" against Central but Haller knew better. His kids had been putting out for the entire season physically and mentally.

'What a good bunch of kids ... they've played hard all the time," Haller said, relaxing in his office after things had calmed down. "I don't know if they really believed . I think they half-believed after the beat Angelo. Then they really started getting after it and played their hearts out.

The Steers spent the first six games of the first half of district play stuck in the mud in the depths of the 5-AAAAA standings. Then came the surprise win over the quickly-improving Bobcats in San Angelo. That's when Big Spring turned the corner.

Next came an amazing three-point win over eventual district champ Abilene. The Steers lined up toe-to-toe with the Eagles, played their transition game to the step and on that particular night, played Abilene's game better than the Eagles could. It was no fluke, the Springers were for real

Then the heartbreakers set in

Midland, after trailing most of the first half, stormed back to take a 10-point win, a final margin that could have been larger. The Bulldogs were the best team on the court that night

The Steers lost by three points to Permian in Mojoland. a game that had been tied in late moments. That was followed by the cardia-crusher of the year, the one-point loss to Lee. Steve Cherryhomes will recount the final moments of that game to his grandkids 100 times some day. It was a game that belonged to the Steers, but one that slipped away at the final buzzer.

Down but not out, the Steers headed east and tripped up Cooper in Abielne. Two road wins in three tries. Not bad, fellas

The Springers hit the road again, visiting their Odessa neighbors again. Victory-starved Odessa High, losers of a double-overtime game to the Bulldogs, pulled out a 41-40 victory in the final half-minute. Good for the Bronchos, bad for the Steers

It all came down to the final game, San Angelo needed a victory and help from the stars for Abilene to lose to Cooper if it had any chance at the second half championship. Neither came true

In their final eight dristrict games, Big Spring won four They should have won three more - five points proved the difference. Instead of the season ending Friday night, the Steers should have been waiting to play the first half champ for the league title.

Haller and his crew know what could have been. There is disappointment. But there is a light at the end of the proverbial tunnel

As Haller tells it, there were plenty of problems when he arrived in the Spring City three years back. "When I came here three years ago, the player attitude and respect was nill," Haller recalls. He decided to get out the deadwood and build a winner with kids who wanted to play. It would have made a fine script for a movie.

At first it wasn't easy. All athletes have a hard time adjusting to a new coach and a new system. Especially from this guy whose size and hair style are more suited to that of a head football coach or military drill sergeant.

It wasn't an overnight success but Haller accomplished what he wanted. Late this year, he assembled a lineup that had no stars. Only a group of kids, each with his own special talent, who worked together, got the easy basket, played hustling defense, stepped up to take that charging foul

'The thing is, it is so hard for people to visualize that you don't have to have the giant player," he said. "All you need is a fundamentally sound group of kids who want to play harder than the devil. They don't have the luxury of relaxing ... they have to play hard all the time.

After Friday night's win, the Steer locker room was rather subdued. Sure it was great to win. But the four seniors who had played such a key role in the victory dressed quietly. This was it. Their careers were over Thanks for sticking with us, coach. You got us this far. And us juniors, baby, it's all the way next year. District champs

And Ed Haller was proud.

What's he going to do now? He may teach, if there's room on the staff. If not, it's off to Timberon, N.M., where house on five acres of wilderness waits for Ed and Ernestine Haller. That's "Ernie" to her friends. She's the one wearing a corsage Friday, courtesy of the basketball team

Ed Haller may not have a whistle around his neck next year. What he has accomplished will live on and transcend to other Big Spring sports. Hey, Steers, everyone's a winner. Just work hard. We're not the A&M of 5-AAAAA. Let's do it.

Thanks, coach. Come back and take a look at our cham pionship trophy next year, okay?

Texas coach Abe Lemons said there was no mystery to the Longhorn loss.

'They just buried us," Lemons said. "We had 13 turnovers at halftime, which is ridiculous because they weren't even pressing us. We started out this year leading in shooting and free throws and rebounding, and now we've lost all that.'

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - Hal Greer, Willis Reed, Frank Ramsey and Slater Martin, all standouts on championship teams, have been elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame

The former stars of the National Basketball Association will enter the shrine along with Clarence "Big House" Gaines and the late Everett Case, who were picked for their coaching accomplishments, and Al Duer, who was selected in the contributor category.

Results of the election by a 16-member committee whose composition was not disclosed, were announced Saturday. Twelve votes were required for induction.

At enshrinement ceremonies on May 3, the seven new members will join the 125 individuals and four teams already in the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame on the Springfield College campus, where James Naismith invented the game in 1891. Besides their individual achievements, all four players were part of championship clubs - Greer with the Philadelphia 76ers in 1967, Reed with the New York Knicks in 1970 and 1973, Ramsey seven times with the Boston Celtics, and Martin four times with the Minneapolis Lakers and once with the St. Louis Hawks.

Case, who died in 1966 at the age of 65, compiled a 377-134 record in 19 seasons as coach at North Carolina State after building a 726-75 mark as a high school coach in Indiana

Gaines, of Winston-Salem State, is the winningest active college coach. Duer was executive secretary of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics from 1949 to 1975

Greer, the eighth leading regular-season scorer in NBA history with 21,586 points, called his election "a great honor" but a belated one.

"It's a little tarnished because it took a little longer than I thought," said Greer, who became eligible for induction five years after his retirement in 1973.

Now 46 and in the real estate business in Philadelphia, the 10-time NBA all-star said, "I don't think I got very much support from the 76ers" in helping him get elected.

Weiskopf ties Miller for lead

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Tom Weiskopf swung and miss ed a shot Saturday in the third round of the $300,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open golf tournament, but still finished tied for the lead with Johnny Miller.

Despite his triple bogey 6 on the 170-yard 16th hole, Weiskopf fired a 3-under-par 68, giving him an 11-underpar score of 202 for the three rounds over the Riviera Country Club course.

Miller, who started the third round 2 strokes behind Weiskopf in a six-way tie for second place, opened with three birdies and finished with 66 to match Weiskopf going into Sunday's final round.

Miller won here last year by 2 strokes over Weiskopf. Tom Watson had the lead after nine holes Saturday, but bogeyed the 11th and double-bogeyed No. 13 to finish 2 strokes behind the co-leaders at 204. He had a 68 in the third round.

About that miss by Weiskopf on the dinky 16th:

'First, I couldn't decide on the wind," he said. "Then, I hit a No. 5 iron that wound up on a cart path. I had a bad lie that ended up under a tree. I whiffed the first time and then hit between my legs to the green and two-putted. I hope I don't do that again.'

Miller said he played a good, solid round but wouldn't predict his course record of 270 of last year would be bettered by the remaining 70 pros seeking the $54,000 top prize

"That golf course can nail you," he said of the 7,029-yard Riviera with its par 35-36-71. "I sank birdie putts of 20 and 3 feet on the 14th and 15th and missed a short birdie putt on the 16th. I didn't have Tom's troubles.

"Weiskopf and I have a little rivalry and it will be nice

Hern scores 11.2, Neff scores 11.0 and Feaster 10.1. That's balance, folks. As a team, the Wolves score 54 points and give up 45. Leading the rebounding corps is Neff with eight a game with Randle chipping in seven more coming off the bench. Feaster leads the team in assists.

Colorado City won the consolation trophy at the San Angelo Lakeview tourney and were second at their own event, losing only to Eastland in the finals.

The C-City program represents a vast turnaround in its six-year existance. Since starting the program again, the Wolves have advanced

Soviet ice-water warriors serious about winter baths

MOSCOW (AP) - Every winter horseplay or complaints about the day, a group of Soviet citizens gathers water tempeature. Their motto apat a frozen pond near Moscow's television studios. One by one they pears to be "the colder the better."

'We swim, no matter what weather enter a small dressing room, strip to no matter what temperature," said a bathing suits, walk to a ladder leading middle-aged enthusiast. "Our club is really democratic - there are drivers to a large hole cut in the ice - and and engineers, workers and Swimming a lap and back to the mathematicians. ladder takes each man about 25

There are about 300,000 people in the Soviet Union who indulge in open-air seconds. Some brave the water for about one minute before climbing out, winter swimming, according to the their bodies glowing red from the commission for health conditioning bitter cold. The next swimmer is and winter bathing. Many bathers already waiting at the ladder for his form "seals' clubs" like Myagkov and his friends. These hearty men are known as

The seals clubs have no regular dues, but money is sometimes collected among the members for purchases of samovars, tea and sugar

"In Moscow alone there are 25 of these clubs with about 2,500 members," says 42-year-old Lev Kovalski, executive secretary of the commission. Kovalski has been a regular winter bather for 14 years.

Many seals in the Soviet capital swim in the Moscow river, others prefer to dive into little holes they cut in lakes or ponds around the city. There are also a number of women among the winter bathers, but usually more men are seen around the iceholes

The tradition of winter bathing in Russia goes back hundreds of years, but in th elate 1940s, and early '50s, it was officially discouraged in Moscow.

In 1954, when a man was barred from participating in the sport, and it took four years and the certification of 12 doctors xefore he was able to swim again

It was not until the 1960s that Soviet authorities started encouraging it as a sport for everybody. Sports officials say club members are required to provide a doctor's written statement that they are fit to take it up.

Some similar clubs exist in the United States, and their members also tout the health benefits of the icy plunge

The deaily Sovetski Sport and other newspapers often publish pictures of winter bathers from all over the Soviet Union, with accompanying articles or captions stressing the "health conditioning" aspect of swimming in sub-zero conditions.

The official news agency Tass also carries reports on winter bathing to popularize the sport.

A physical training instructor in a Siberian village was quoted as saying that "cold is a powerful stimulus of good health."

George Kasatonov takes his six sons, aged three to 10, out in winter for swimming at Lake Arei and for a rub down with snow, Tass said, adding that the children are "immune against the common cold.

We don't need doctors or any pills," boasts one member of the Moscow Seal Club.

National Guard sent to aid flood victims

By The Associated Press Water lapped at sandbags protecting the Idaho governor's mansion Saturday as National Guardsmen were sent to build temporary bridges to families trapped by floods in the Pacific Northwest.

With many rivers already over flowing their banks, a new wet storm packing gale-force winds hit the coast of Oregon and Washington where more than a week of rain has touched off mudslides and left highways and bridges awash

While most of the nation enjoyed mild weather, up to 7 inches of rain fell during the night in south Texas, prompting a flash flood watch.

Flooding aggravated by melting snow also was reported across central and southern Indiana, where many highways were closed and some communities had crews filling sandbags.

Shoplifting Is A Crime

It costs you MONEY!

Big Spring businesses work on a profit motive, and whenever an extra cost occurs (shoplifting), business passes the loss on to the customer. If the businessman had to absorb the loss totally, it would not take long before the businessman would be bankrupt. Therefore, he passes the loss on to the customer. The loss of property due to shoplifting has risen to the point where now businessmen increase the price of merchandise between 3 percent and 15 percent. This means that you, the customer, pay 3 percent to 15 percent more for a product to compensate for shoplifting loss. It can be seen that the customers are the ones who actually pay for the shoplifter.

An Shoplifting is a crime, and is punishable by a fine, or a jail sentence, or both.

Who Will Help You Sell Your Furniture?

A police record for shoplifting is serious! A police record for shoplifting can keep a person out of many professions, can hinder finding a good job, or getting a needed loan.

Help prevent shoplifting by reporting to appropriate store personnel anyone you see shoplifting.

Searching for 'roots' can lead to a degree

PROVO, Utah (AP) – At Brigham Young University you can search for the roots of your family tree and earn a degree for it.

And the director of the program, Dr. Ben Bloxham, professor of family and local history, said if more people compiled thorough family records, history might literally be rewritten.

"The only people we've ever studied academically are the famous, not the common," said Bloxham, "It's almost a distorted view of the past. I'm sure we'd have a different perspective of the settling of Salt Lake City, for example, if we knew more about the first 141 people who entered the valley rather than just studied the journals of their pioneer leader, Brigham Young.

To earn an associate, a bachelor's or a master's degree in family and local history at BYU, a student does more than just compile trivial information about an ancestor. An extensive study of different historical periods, plus specialized study in family and local history, as well as genealogy and historical research and writing are required.

Students are taught to study individuals or families in an historical context within a community and to assess the impact of national or regional events.

'You end up with a lot more than a history of a family. You end up with the history of America," said Bloxham. "Because when a historian comes along who's studying the Depression, and reads about how the Depression affected this family, h gets a personal, grass-roots  $e_\lambda$  perience about that period that he might not otherwise get by just studying an historical account of the Depression."

"If enough family histories were compiled we might be able to reinterpret the Depression, for example," he added.

Although author Alex Haley's book, "Roots," boosted genealogy from a specialty for trained professionals to a popular hobby, it still doesn't have the academic respect in this country that it does elsewhere, Bloxham points out.

Three universities in England - the University of London, Leeds University and the University of Nottingham all offer degrees or specialized study in this area. And Bloxham discovered during a trip to England that the subject is even taught in the public schools.

"Their definition of local history is history of a place as it is made up of people. It didn't occur to them that you should have to call it genealogy or family history because that was just assumed to be a part of local history.'

Interest in genealogy at the university and public-school level is increasing. Ten years ago, Bloxham surveyed 1,500 universities and found that fewer than 20 offered courses in. the subject. A year ago he did a followup study and learned that nearly 300 offer some type of credit.

A few public schools, including a system in Georgia, are consulting with the BYU department about family and local history programs that they intend to start.

"It's incredible to me that it's taken the history world this long to become conscious of the value of the study of human beings, not just as institutions, but as particular individuals," said Bloxham

Because the field has become so sophisticated, a serious amateur can be taught to look beyond the simple birth, marriage and death facts, Bloxham notes.

We suggest they visit the houses where their ancestors lived and interview the current residents or, if possible, get some information about the house

Winston Wrinkle: 'I never thought I'd live this long'

By TINA MILLER Lifestyle Editor

Life on a kidney dialysis machine isn't easy. But for Winston Wrinkle, it's better than the alternative. Wrinkle has had a kidney disease since 1954 and has required dialysis treatments since 1973. To date, he has had almost 750 dialysis treatments.

"I was a perfectly normal, healthy guy through high school and college," Wrinkle said. Then he was inducted into the Air Force at age 20 (in 1953). In 1954, while traveling between air bases, he developed a pain in his lower right side and assumed he had appendicitis. He was met at the base by an ambulance and taken to a military hospital.

"The next day a doctor, a urologist, told me that I had a terrible disease for a young man known as renal calcinosis, which means I had stones in my kidneys. One of those stones had lodged in a tube that comes between the kidney and the bladder. This stone was quite large about as large as my little fingernail.

"It broke into three pieces and over a period of about 60 days we followed the stone by x-rays, and I passed it. They examined the stone and it was a calcium carbonate stone — just limestone. He showed me my kidneys (by x-ray) and told me that I had this disease of both kidneys and it was inoperable because these stones, for some reason, were in all portions of both kidneys."

The cause of the disease, Wrinkle said, is unknown. "Something is wrong with my body chemistry to cause these stones," he said. He has been to many major hospitals and clinics including Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., Baylor Medical Center in Dallas and others, but the results were always the same. "I just happen to be an unfortunate soul that has an inoperable kidney disease," he said. "What happened is my kidneys just gradually gave way."

Between 1954 and 1973, Wrinkle estimates that he was hospitalized 20-25 times for kidney stones. Each time, the doctor would "fish" the stones out with a special instrument, or they would have to be surgically removed.

In 1973, the disease became so serious that doctors told Wrinkle he required dialysis treatments. Wrinkle had realized this would eventually happen and had been following the progress of several local people on dialysis and those who had kidney transplants. "It was nothing but bad news that I knew about until I went to Dallas and a guy told me point blank, 'You have no choice. If you want to live, you're going to have to go on kidney dialysis."

Wrinkle said he was "extremely depressed" when he first faced the prospect of dialysis. He said his depression lasted about six weeks, but his wife Betty says the depression lasted about two years. In 1973, the closest dialysis machine was located in Abilene, and Wrinkle was forced to stay in the Abilene hospital for two or three weeks.

"I really thought I was going to die," he said. I really believed (that) with all my heart. I just prayed diligently for hours when I was on the machine lying on a table. I was so sick all during the time and so fearful of it."

After being dismissed from the hospital, "I was an outpatient where I had to come in every other day," he said. "I thought about my business back here and my family. You do a lot of soul-searching when you find you're terminally ill. I called my attorney and discussed all the procedures in case I died — changed my will. Really, you start getting your house in order.

"Then I began to gain a little faith that I was going to be better and, sure enough, I was able to start back to work and I gained strength. It was just a lot of determination. I was able to push it kind of out of my mind for a while." After being on dialysis for several months, Wrinkle was able to discontinue the treatments for about a year by tak ing high dosages of sodium bicarbonate (baking soda). While he was off the machine he said, "I didn't feel well but I was fighting getting into this (dialysis) process." By the time Wrinkle was forced to resume dialysis treatments, an Odessa hospital acquired a kidney machine and he began treatments in that hospital. The treatment lasted six hours twice a week. Then, in early 1977, Wrinkle started leasing his own dialysis machine. Cost of the machine is $135 per month, but the supplies for each treatment, which can be used only once, cost $65-$70 plus nursing services. Wrinkle said when he began taking dialysis treatments at a hospital the cost was $300 per treatment. "Used to it broke families and they had to take up donations for them to keep them alive. But that's not true anymore," Wrinkle said. In 1973 the federal government decided to include kidney disease in Medicare coverage. "About three months after you have kidney failure, regardless of your income status, Medicare pays for 80 percent of the cost of the medical treatment. "We have people here who do not work and are poverty stricken, and they get the same treatment I get. That's one of the costs the federal government is bearing and it may be a cost that they cut out because it falls under Medicare. And if it does we'll find a way to do it. Wrinkle said about 50,000 people in the United States require kidney dialysis, and he estimated the cost to the government to be about a billion dollars each year.

WRINKLE IS ORIGINALLY from Springtown, located just north of Weatherford. Prior to coming to Big Spring in 1959, he was employed by a pharmaceutical company and worked in Georgia, Delaware and Minnesota. He left the company to avoid moving his family to New York City, and purchased local radio station KBST.

Wrinkle married Betty when he was 21 years old. The couple has four children: David, who works with his father in radio; Susan, a nurse in Baylor Medical Center in Dallas; John, an engineer in Arlington; and Robert, who attends Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

"They hate that their daddy's sick," Wrinkle said. "They kind of push it out of their minds except when I get very sick. They become very concerned. When I get tremendous infections I get high fever, my teeth chatter and I just look terrible. I just look like a poor old kidney patient who's going to die."

'You do a lot of soul-searching when you find you're terminally ill.'

Wrinkle said he has considered having a kidney transplant but found the risks too great.

The best transplant is from a related donor. "That doesn't mean a child," he said. "I have a son who wants to give me a kidney, but I talked with the surgeon about that. He says that's a bad deal simply because he (his son) has half of his genes from my wife and half from me. So you've only got a 50-50 match at best. The best (match) would be a brother or a sister, and the ideal is a twin.

"The new procedure is they do a lymph drainage. They cut in your neck, and for six weeks you're in the hospital and they drain the lymph from your body. Then, after doing all of this, you wait and you wait for somebody to be killed on a motorcycle or in a car accident. This is how morbid it is."

If a matching kidney can be found, it is packed in ice and placed on a machine to keep blood pumping through it. The kidney will then be transported by plane to wherever it is needed. "Then, once you get the new kidney, you haven't arrived yet because your body has a natural rejection to any foreign tissue," Wrinkle said. Any infection means death because no anti-biotics can be given. If the transplant is successful, "You may live a year or two years, five years," he said. The only transplant patient Wrinkle has heard of who lived longer is Gary Coleman, star of TV's "Different Strokes."

"As bad as this (dialysis) is, I probably will keep fighting till the bitter end and live as long as I can. It works a hardship on your family, it really does. I never thought I'd live this long, but there are some people, Betty tells me, who lived 15 or 20 years on dialysis."

MRS. WRINKLE IS A FORMER nurse and helps her husband with the dialysis. But she is also his moral support. "She is it," he said. "Without her I would not be able to sustain life. I don't tell her that very often. She's awfully patient, awfully good to me. I know it gets awfully confining to her. Up until last year she had not had any relief, been away from me at all since this procedure occurred. Now she has trained a family friend who can do this procedure."

A WAY OF LIFE — Wrinkle spends four hours every other night on a kidney dialysis machine. His wife, Betty, spends about an hour on each of those evenings getting the equipment ready. Mrs. Wrinkle is a former

Over-dialyzing also causes problems, Wrinkle said. Blood pressure drops and causes severe cramps in the legs and sometimes even in the stomach or chest.

Though Wrinkle described the dialysis process as "extremely frightening the first month or two," he now says, Hersid photo by Billy Adams nurse and supervises the entire process. The needle used in the treatment is so large that the arm is deadened with a smaller needle prior to insertion. "You never get used to it," he said.

the more I work and the more things I have happening, the less I have to think about myself."

Kidney disease has prevented Wrinkle from doing many of the things he wanted to do.

"You don't have as much strength, you know, and I

Mrs. Wrinkle's training as a nurse has helped her, and she says she doesn't get nervous unless something goes wrong. Many things can, and have, gone wrong during dialysis, she said. "I had run out of the tape I like (used to hold the needles in place)," she said. "I used some other tape and it wasn't sticking. I was going to fix it, and the minute I was going to fix it he moved and pulled the needle out of his arm."

Wrinkle continued, "It (the blood) is under pressure and it's just like a slaughterhouse. Blood went all over my shirt. She's in tears, and  $\Gamma$ m trying to explain to her what to do. That was pretty gory.

"Another thing that occurred is that we've had the tubing actually to spring a leak and spray blood out like a water fountain," he said. "Then we've had the (dialysis) kidney on two or three occasions to burst during the process. That is a panic situation. You have to work very, very fast because the blood clots so rapidly when exposed to air. And you also don't want the salt water (saline) to get into the blood and into your body.

"So you have to use the forceps and cut off everything, throw away what you have and put a new kidney in. You try to get the blood back by asyringe, all you can. Then reprime the saline and start all over."

MORAL SUPPORT — Wrinkle's wife Botty has been his moral support throughout the 25 years he has had kidney. disease. "She's awfully patient, awfully good to me," he

Herald photo by Billy Adams said. The dialysis treatment means Wrinkle is home more often. "That is one of the positive things," Mrs. Wrinkle said. "We are together a lot more."

"It's old hat." Wrinkle said the process is not very painful. "I feel, when I get off (the machine), a washed-out feeling." He said the build-up of waste materials in the blood causes him to be "highly irritable."

"People don't love me when I'm like that," he said. Wrinkle also said a high percentage of waste materials in the system prevents him from thinking clearly. The dialysis process takes the impure fluids out of the body, by washing the blood several times in a salt water bath. What remains is pure blood.

BECAUSE OF HIS DISEASE, Wrinkle must take large dosages of anti-biotics. With repeated use, he eventually becomes immune to them and says the development of new anti-biotics has kept him alive this long. Though beneficial, the drugs are so powerful their side-effects are severe. One drug, Wrinkle said, destroys red blood cells, while repeated use of another will eventually cause deafness.

Another result of Wrinkle's condition is he must have regular blood transfusions because his hemoglobin is not stable. "I'm transfused about every six weeks to two months," he said. "I require about two to three units of washed, red blood cells." The transfusion usually takes place at Malone-Hogan Hospital using blood provided by West Texas Blood Services. The hospital also has a dialysis machine which Wrinkle uses occasionally.

Wrinkle, now 49 years old, has always been active in his community and finds being confined to a chair for four hours every other evening frustrating. "What I normally do is Betty and I visit, and sometimes we play dominoes. But usually I read the Wall Street Journal. I bring home all my reading materials and I read and eat constantly. "That's why I can't ever lose weight, because it is boring. This is a boring procedure. I'm in no pain, but I can't do anything but just sit. And I hate television.'' Wrinkle says only about 10 percent of all kidney dialysis patients can carry on a normal life, but he is determined to remain active as long as possible. "I see so many people who get terminally ill, and all they can think about is their illness. But so help me God, I never think of being sick. God gives me the ability to push this totally out of my mind. I hope that it will always be that way.

"It has not affected my work, the desire to be an achiever or run a business. I do have some real bad days when I have ... a kidney infection. Betty says my personality changes a lot. I don't recognize it because I'm pretty grumpy all the time. But she says that I really get hard to live with before being dialyzed, and after dialyzed that I am very meek. She lives with me — I guess she knows.

"I have a great faith, and I really believe that all things work together for the good of them that love the Lord. Not that He gave me this disease — I don't believe so. But I believe that by having the disease I am able to be helpful to other people who have the disease to show them you can still maintain a productive life, support a family, operate a business and not have it (the disease) to be the dominant thing in life."

IN ADDITION TO OWNING KBST, Wrinkle has been a partner in building Park Village Apartments in Big Spring and Snyder, is a partner in the ownership of Muir Heights addition and owner of an office building.

Wrinkle is an active member of First Baptist Church, and his civic duties have included being president of the Chamber of Commerce and the Big Spring Industrial Foundation, and head of the YMCA membership drive. He has also been a delegate to the Republican state convention for many years and a national delegate on three occasions.

"I enjoy civic work," he said. "I guess the reason I do is twofold: one, I'm interested in building my city, and two, have to push myself to do certain things because the mind is active and wants to, but the body is tired."

"I would love to travel to foreign countries, and I would love to go on vacation periods without having the interruption of kidney machines. I'm a very amateur golfer, and I'd love to go to some nice golf courses."

Before he can be away from home several days, Wrinkle must make arrangements with other hospitals to take the treatments in their facilities. "Before you go on a trip like this, they (the hospitals) have to have an up-todate blood analysis and a medical history from your doctor. They have to have, within the past two weeks, a test to make sure you do not have the blood-transmitted disease hepatitis. I've never had hepatitis, thank goodness. I've had everything else.

"They (the hospitals) have the ability to refuse you," he said. "We got refused one time in Washington. We made arrangements prior to going, but after we got there they just kind of pulled the plug on us. But another clinic felt sorry for us and picked us up."

Wrinkle says kidney disease affects all races and both sexes equally. "I go to dialysis clinics sometimes and it's amazing the mixture that's there. And the age — you see it vary from young teen-agers up to people who are 70 years old."

ALTHOUGH WRINKLE ADMITS to being initially resentful when his kidney disease was discovered, it has helped him see life in a different light. "I had so many things I would like to have done that I couldn't do," he said. "But then you become thankful for the little things. Little things mean a lot more.

'I really believe that all things work together for the good of them that love the Lord.'

"I was always before 'gung-ho' business achievement making a buck. And I still have that but that is not as important now to me, either through age or through this disease. I'm more interested in seeing my children develop to be well-rounded individuals and be able to compete in the present society they're in, and to have some happiness and some family activities."

Of his relationship with his wife, Wrinkle says, "We're going steadier than we ever have."

Mrs. Wrinkle adds, "That is one of the positive things. We are together a lot more."

"When I got the disease, I had a family with my first kid in school," Wrinkle said. "I had a going business, and my desire was to live long enough to get my kids through high school, get them educated to where they could stand on their own. And really, I've accomplished that. Now you say, 'Just give me another day, Lord.'

"My goal is to continue to be the best in whatever I undertake to do," he said, "and I plan to remain active in trying to build a bigger and better Big Spring. I also have a goal to see my kids become well-rounded individuals.

"It kind of sounds 'super-goody,' but probably (another goal) is to be of more service in a Christian way — to help others. I can see direct rewards, not monetary but personal rewards when I help people, and I enjoy doing that. I just feel that's probably the reason my life's been extended. I'm really kind of a living miracle I've lived this long." 2-C Big Spring (Texas) Herald, Sun., Feb. 21, 1982

Pin tucks sharpen pleats

how some garments are able to maintain their pleats and creases while others are not? According to Ms. Jan Saunders, education director for White-Elna Sewing Machine Company, pin tucks can make the difference.

"Tucks can be used to better define the dge of a pleat or to stitch creases into pants," she said. "They can also be used to decorate jean pockets, blouses, gift items, and children's clothes.

"First, mark the tuck placement and pin the fabric so that the pins are perpendicular to the stitching line. Using the blind hem foot on the sewing machine, guide the edge of the tuck along the wing of the foot, removing the pins before the presser foot reaches them," she said. "This tuck requires cluded.

Some children suffer depression

COLLEGE STATION - Childhood is a time of carefree happiness for most, yet some children suffer from depression just as adults do, says Diane Welch, a family life education specialist.

In fact, estimates show that one percent of all children suffer from depression, she adds

Welch is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Adult depression has been carefully studied, but researchers are just begin-ning to recognize childhood depression, she adds. Studies show that some children have the same depressive symptoms as adults being loved - hopelessness, worthlessness, guilt and anxiety.

A depressed child may show retarded physical movements, a sad face and stooped posture, she adds.

His appetite may drop off, and he may have trouble sleeping. Dreams and fantasies are likely to be full of danger and sadness, the specialist says. Other symptoms in children may not be so obvious, she notes.

Depression may be masked by temper tantrums, disobedience, truancy, running away, delinquent behavior, school phobia, accident proneness, cruelty to others or self-destructive thoughts and behaviors, Welch says.

MAJOR CHANGES Child depression is often linked to relationships with adults, the specialist explains.

Such children report feeling abandoned and unloved as a result of family events, such as death, divorce, desertion or any other major changes affecting the family unit, she continues

When the family recognizes and tries to solve their own problems, the child's depressive state is more likely to disappear, the specialist says.

At the other extreme are families in which parents over-criticize or overprotect the children.

Children in these families are likely to become discouraged or depressed, the specialist says.

Parents can learn to prevent these children-at-risk situations.

Parents' "need" to criticize their child vanishes when they learn to carefully listen to the child and provide support and encouragement, she notes On the other hand, over-protected

Children need to learn about life, to explore and experience it and to adjust to mistakes they make, she encourages.

Parents can help by urging their children to become independent and confident, the specialist advises. TEMPORARY DEPRESSION

Of course, there are times when any child will suffer temporary depression, Welch says.

Children naturally feel worried when their families suffer crises, she points out. New situations, such as a new school, new teacher or new surroundings, can trigger depression

LESS TAKE-HOME PAY (FICA Increases)

The 1982 tax cut will be diminished somewhat by øð the offsetting increase in social security taxes that is effective January 1, 1982. The social security tax × rate increases from 6.65% to 6.7%, and the total σ earnings subject to social security tax increases from $29,700 to $32,400. For wage earners, this means an increase in the maximum social security tax from $1,975.05 for 1981 to $2,170.80 for 1982, an increase of $195.75.

> Self-employed individuals will pay 9.35% in 1982 compared with 9.3% in 1981 for a top tax of $3,029.40 in 1982 compared with $2,762.10 in 1981, an increase of $267.30.

Some changes have been made in social security benefits. Social security recipients under ag e 65 can now earn $4,400 a year (without losing any benefits) compared with $4,080 in 1981. Recipients aged 65 to 72 can earn $6,000 a year in 1982 compared with $5,500 a year in 1981 and still receive all benefits. Social security recipients who are 72 years or older can earn any amount of money without losing benefits (changes to age 70 or over beginning in 1983). For those individuals drawing benefits for the first time in 1982 there is an exception to the above rule: a monthly limitation applies instead of the annual limitation - $370 a month for those under age 65, $500 a month for those ages 65 to 72.

If you have questions or need further information concerning social security, write to your nearest Social Security Administration Office and ask for the booklet "Your Social Security." You may also want to ask for two other pamphlets "Estimating Your Social Security Retirement Check" and "If You Work After You Retire."

"The Book of Rock Lists." Dave Marsh and Kevin Stein, paperback, Dell-Rolling Stone Press, 638 pages.

This is not your average, run-of-the-mill book listing the best, loudest and oldest rock and roll hits of the age; this is a savagley subjective, wonderfully biased collec-tion of rock music that will anger many readers. If one agrees with all of the book's lists, the authors have failed in one of their goals: to provoke.

Marsh and Stein have put together lists of everything from facutal hit songs and groups to bizarre collections like rock stars who were in the armed forces. Interesting bits of trivia float up throughout the task of wading through the book: Bob Dylan once played harmonica on a Harry Belafonte record; "Hey, Jude'' was written by McCartney about Lennon's

"Rock Lists" has too many lists which do not really do anything. They just seem to be in the book to fill up space. The reader is not informed. amused or angered by these lists; they are just there. Perhaps Marsh and Stein have some perverse reason for the inclusion of many

Lack of exercise causes atrophy

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a 15-yearold male and have been lifting weights for about a year and a half. I have a good physique for my age, but was wondering how long it would take me to lose my muscle tone if I happened to stop lifting weights.-P.A.L.

You short question raises a point that has wide application for all kinds of exercise, whether to improve the cardiovascular system or to increase muscluar strength.

If you've ever known someone who has had a serious injury, say to an arm or a leg, you have probably noticed what the effect is of having a limb in a cast for six to eight weeks. The muscles, which have been at complete rest for so long, shrink (atrophy). This is an exaggerated example. It is all a matter of degree.

Yes, muscle strength has to be maintained through regular and continuing exercise, whether it is the limited kind of exercise a person with arthritis, for example, can manage, or the more strenuous kind, like your weightlift ing. Exercise has to become a part of one's life, as is eating or sleeping.

If you have been exercising moderately, you can interrupt your training for about 10 days without much muscle loss. But if you have been doing heavy training, you will notice a definite loss in four to six days. This loss is noticeable, for example, among athletes who get a week off between parts of a competitive season and who abandon training.

Dear Abby

I don't mean that you have to train at peak performance levels throughout an entire year. But you have to exercise at least twice a week to maintain what you have now developed. You can train very hard for a couple of months, ease off, and retrain hard again in cycles without any loss. But, even in the off periods, you should not give up exercise altogether. It has become part of your life, and for as long as you wish to maintain what strength you have attained, you must continue.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Will drinking coffee give me a boost so that I will have more energy? I've heard you can run farther if you drink coffee. Is that true?-H.D.

If it is the mild stimulant effect of caffeine to which you refer, I have to say that that will not help your running endurance. All it does is create a temporary alertness edge that quickly dissipates.

Now, what about caffeine as an enhancer of physical endurance? It has been observed that in the first few minutes of a race, perhaps the first 15-20 minutes, we get most of our energy from sugar stored in muscles as glycogen. As those glycogen reserves are depleted, the body turns to fat as an alternate fuel. That fat fuel is made of what are called free fatty acids.

It is true that two cups of coffee about an hour before exercise-running, for example-seems to stimulate a rise in free fatty acids just before the glycogen reserve has been depleted.

What's he hiding under his hair?

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 26-year-old woman who has been living with a wonderful 30-year-old man for three months. We have a very compatible and loving relationship and have begun to talk about marriage.

The problem: Although we are both very open and honest with each other, he has not been entirely honest with me about something. He wears a hairpiece, and he thinks I don't know it. I doubt if any of his friends know because no one has ever mentioned it. He must be very sensitive about it because many times he could have told me, but he very carefully kept it from me.

Abby, it makes absolutely no difference in the way I feel about him. I would love him with or without hair, but his deceitfulness is what bothers me. I've thought of a dozen different ways to tell him I know, but I hate to hurt him. Your advice would help.

BOTHERED

DEAR BOTHERED: Don't regard his reluctance to bare his soul as "decitfulness." It could be vanity and insecurity. If you hate to hurt him, be quiet and be patient. One of these days (or nights) he'll blow his cover.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl. My mother says I can't wear pantyhose until I'm 14, I can't wear makeup until I'm 15, and I can't go out on dates until I'm 16.

My biggest problem is that I am underdeveloped. All the girls in my class have more than I do. I want to wear a bra, but my mother won't let me because I don't have anything to put in it. The boys make fun of my flat chest. It makes me feel like crying. I'm cute - at least people say I am - it's just my body that is totally inadequate. When I tell people I'm in the eighth grade they think I'm lying. What does a girl do when her body isn't right for her age?

UNDERDEVELOPED DEAR UNDERDEVELOPED: Be patient. Some girls worked all day preparing a nice company meal to be served promptly at 4. Our daughter, who has never been on time for anything, decided to take advantage of the after-Christmas bargains and go shopping in the afternoon (without her family) at the mall.

At 3:50, our son-in-law called to say his wife wasn't home yet so they would be at least an hour late as they live 12 miles from us. I told him to forget the dinner, that my wife and I would enjoy the food while it was hot.

Abby, I've lived 59 years and was never late to anything. I happen to believe that if a person wants to be on time, he can be. Do you think I was wrong to cancel the dinner? BURNED UP IN DULUTH

DEAR BURNED UP: No! Chronic lateniks try to train others to conform to their irresponsible behavior. Too bad your son-in-law and grandchildren had to miss the dinner. but I don't blame you for cancelling it.

DEAR ABBY: I've seen several references in your column pointing out the difference between a psychiatrist and a psychologist. I submit my favorite:

"A psychiatrist is a person who has studied medicine, which he does not practice, then attempts to practice psychology, which he has not studied.
