ENJOYING THE SHOW — Hazel Bruns, left, and Nadine Pearce, both of Snyder, were among the crowd that flocked to the annual gem and mineral show held at the county fairgrounds this weekend. The Saturday and Sunday event, which drew dealers and exhibitors from around the West, attracted "the biggest crowd we've ever had," said Calla Mae Perkins, one of the show's organizers. The event has been staged for the past 13 years by the Big Spring Prospectors Club.

New home building surges in Big Spring

By BILLELDER
Staff Writer

Construction of new homes in Big Spring, after slumping in January, has picked up activity in February and the first week of March and shows evidence of a possible single-family home boom.

And residential construction is not the only type of building looking lively these days. Businesses, schools and local governments are launching their own share of projects, according to a report issued by the city of Big Spring's building inspection office.

Approval to build four new homes in Big Spring was given during February by the city's chief inspector, Dewey Byers. During the first week of March, another home project was okayed.

Also approved last week was the preliminary plan for a 30-lot subdivision on the south side of town.

The eastside neighborhood surrounding Moss Elementary School is where much of the recent home building activity is located.

At least one of the homes given the construction go-ahead last month already is sold, according to Byers. That home is a $66,500 project slated to be built at 3202 Greenbrier.

Manna & Associates, developers of the home, already have built several homes in the area around Moss Elementary School.

So has Plainmen Homes, which bought a permit to spend $37,000 building a home at 3313 Duke. The company already has built and sold about 10 homes in the Baylor-Duke area in recent months, according to Bob Ristom of Midland-based Plainmen Homes.

J.L.U. Builders is constructing a $68,000 home in the 2800 block of Coronado after being given a city permit last month. No subsequent J.L.U. projects are anticipated, according to Byers, although if this home sells quickly there are indications J.L.U. will build another one.

Other homes being built after earning city approval in the past five weeks include a $45,000 project at 1709 Runnels by Edward Mayson and a $40,000 home to be built by Ellen Barnes at 600 Baylor.

THOSE FIVE homes, coming after the month of January in which no new home permits were issued, offer evidence that the local housing industry is forging ahead with projects despite high interest rates.

Also giving the local housing industry a healthy shot in the arm is a proposed 30-lot subdivision which was given initial approval by city planners last week.

The subdivision, to be developed by Cunningham Development Corp., was presented to the city zoning board as a preliminary plan last Tuesday.

After earning (with one dissenting vote) the board's approval, the plan now will be finalized and presented one more time to the board as well as to the city council.

Meanwhile, Cunningham Development Corp. is proceeding with the sale of homes in its other south-side subdivision, located in Highland South. The property, which was annexed to the city one year ago, consists of four development stages.

Twelve homes are envisioned in the first stage and seven lots already have been sold, according to Bobby Mealer of Cunningham.

"This is the first serious interest in (building) single-family homes I've seen since I've been here," City Manager Don Davis said when asked to comment on the current spate of home building activity. "Hopefully, it's an indication that the housing market is easing up and we're going to see some more development."

In addition to single-family homes, new apartment units are opening up, too. R.I.C. Corp., owner of the Chief Apartments on West Highway 80, obtained a permit last month to add four new apartment units to the complex, Byers said.

Commercial developers are taking on their own share of the recent building activity, according to Byers' report, with five permits to build new commercial structures issued last month.

Two of the permits were issued for stores at the newly-opened Big Spring Mall, which expects to fill 80 percent of its space by August, according to mall Manager Mark Sheedy.

OTHER BUSINESSES opening up around the city include Rutherford Hughes, which bought a permit to spend an estimated $30,000 on an office and swimming pool showcase at 1001 E. Third.

Schools and the city of Big Spring itself are making hefty contributions

Farmers apply for acre reduction plan

Acceptance of applications for the 1982 farm programs has already begun, according to representatives of the Howard County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Secretary of Agriculture John Block recently announced acreage reduction programs for upland cotton, wheat, corn, grain sorghum, barley, oats and rice.

"To be eligible for loans and target price protection farmers must sign up and comply with the acreage reduction program requirements," Block said.

For reducing their wheat acres by 15 percent, farmers will be eligible for the $4.05 per-bushel 1982 target price for wheat, a regular loan rate of $3.55 per bushel, and a grain reserve loan rate of $4 a bushel.

Farmers who reduce their feed grain acreage by 10 percent will receive federal target prices of $2.70 per bushel for corn; $2.60 for sorghum and barley; and $1.50 per bushel for oats. They also will be eligible for loan rates of $2.55 per bushel for corn; $2.42 for sorghum, $2.08 for barley, and $1.31 per bushel for oats.

The upland cotton program offers farmers a target price of 71 cents per pound and a loan rate of 57.08 cents per pound for reducing cotton acres by 15 percent. Farmers who reduce their rice acres by 15 percent will be eligible for target price protection of $10.85 per hundredweight.

"The acreage reductions and higher loan rates will help strengthen farm prices," Block said. The land taken from production and devoted to conservation uses must be eligible cropland and protected from wind and water erosion.

"Participation in the 1982 farm programs is voluntary. However, only those farmers who take part in the program will be eligible for benefits," ASCS officials say. The sign-up period ends April 16. For more information, call the local ASCS office at 267-2557.

Council to discuss bond sale

By BILLELDER
Staff Writer

Bond sales, changes in zoning laws and the sale of some city property are highlights of the agenda for the Tuesday night Big Spring City Council meeting.

The council has two items of business to act on concerning the bond sale. One is an agreement with First Southwest Co. of Abilene to coordinate the sale of $1,150,000 in Airport Revenue Bonds. The other is an agreement with the four banks in Howard County to purchase the bonds.

The bonds will be used to finance the first part of a major, $4.3 million relocation of hangars and the terminal building at Big Spring Airport. In issuing the bonds, the city expects to owe an estimated $882,600 in interest over a 10-year period.

To pay off the debt, the city will utilize expanded revenue from the industrial park adjacent to the airport.

The zoning ordinance amendments to be considered by the council Tuesday night call for allowing the retail sale of building materials in districts zoned for light commercial business. The ordinance change to be considered by the council also would allow the retail sale of building materials in districts zoned as "planned development."

In order to provide guidelines as to what constitutes retail sales, a definition would be written into the ordinance which says that to qualify as a retail outlet at least two thirds of the business' gross sales during any six-month period — or a majority of such sales during any one-month period — must be made as a retail transaction (in other words, the sales must be made to the ultimate purchaser or consumer of the building materials).

Also on the council agenda: the sale of some city property. Richard Gariepy has asked the city to sell a lot of 409 Westover, and an unidentified individual has contacted the city about buying a lot at 310 N.W. Eighth.

The council also is expected to consider authorizing the mayor to sign an agreement with Texaco to cover surface damages on city property leased to Texaco for oil and gas production.

The council meets at 6:30 p.m. at Big Spring City Hall, Fourth and Nolan.

Board told of book theft

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Howard County commissioners learned today from county Librarian Judith Gray the county library has lost 896 books in the past three years — at a cost of over $13,500 — due to theft. The recently completed two-week inventory at the library revealed the book-a-day loss, Ms. Gray said.

Ms. Gray told the commissioners the book loss is "getting really frightening" and proposed three possibilities for theft protection. The commissioners moved to consider the theft protection devices in the 1982-1983 budget.

Two systems available for around

$1,600 involves the insertion of magnetic strips into books that will sound an alarm if carried through detectors mounted at exits, Ms. Gray said. Another method is to hire persons to check all packages and books to ensure no one takes any library material.

In other library-related business, Ms. Gray asked the commissioners to consider the purchase of a telephone-teletype system for communication with the deaf. One unit, a SSI220, cost $695 and featured a paper printout available from a local company. Another unit, a Superphone, was priced at $595 but had only an electronic readout available. No action was taken by the commissioners.

Ms. Gray also proposed the commissioners consider the purchase of a microcomputer for the library. She said the computer would aid in the basic paperwork of the library and part of the cost would be paid by the Friends of the Library. Funding for the microcomputer could come from the library's book-buying budget, Ms. Gray said.

Later today, commissioners were expected to consider bids on copying machines for the courthouse, discuss radio communications with Sheriff A.N. Standard and hear from Tax Assessor-Collector Dorothy Moore on contract and tax penalty.

JOB HUNTER — Richard Volkman, of Seattle, says he hasn't found full-time work in over a year, owes child support, needs rent money and feels "sort of desperate." So he set up his own special "job-wanted" ad at a Seattle intersection on Friday. There is no word on his success or failure.

Henry Wright

Henry Wright, 74, died Sunday morning in a local hospital.

Services are pending with Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Eddie Hooper

Eddie Ray Hooper, 49, died Saturday in the Veterans Administration Medical Center following a lengthy illness. Services will be held at the Trinity Memorial Chapel of Memories at 10 a.m. Tuesday. Chaplain Clayton Hicks of the medical center and Major Bill Thomas of the Salvation Army Church will officiate. Burial will follow at Trinity Memorial Park under the direction of Trinity Memorial Funeral Home. Pallbearers will be Ted Roden, B.J. Killpatrick, James Weaver, J.V. Anderson, Jewel Edens, W.D. "Red" Lester, Bob Wells and A.J. Williams. Honorary pallbearers will be T.A. Gartman, Bobby Dearden, Billy Ray White, Bill Carlisle, Jerry Lasher, Tom Harrell, Amando Figuera and Floyd Young.

The family will be at 2105 Runnels.

Everett Hood

Everett Hood, 79, died Saturday in a local hospital. Services were set for 3:30 p.m. today in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with Rev. Elra Phillips, retired Methodist minister, officiating. Burial was to be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Pallbearers were Cotton Mize, Ben Boodle, Rusty Phillips, Richard Coakale, E.J. Smith and Larry Doan Hood. All grandsons are honorary pallbearers.

N. Hipp

N.M. (Morta) Hipp, 72, died at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in a local hospital after a sudden illness.

Services will be held at noon Tuesday in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with burial in Trinity Memorial Park. Survivors include his wife, two sons, Bill Hipp of Big Spring and Jackie Hipp of San Antonio; one brother, Glen Hipp of Douglas, Ariz.; three sisters, Jewel Story of Santa Anna, Louise Edson of Junction and Inez Tubb of Blackwell; five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

N. HIPP Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife, two sons, Bill Hipp of Big Spring and Jackie Hipp of San Antonio; one brother, Glen Hipp of Douglas, Ariz.; three sisters, Jewel Story of Santa Anna, Louise Edson of Junction and Inez Tubb of Blackwell; five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

He was born May 15, 1910, in Robert Lee. He married Doris Elizabeth Lambert Oct. 30, 1939, in San Angelo. She preceded him in death on Sept. 8, 1981. Mr. Patterson worked for Couden from 1945 until retiring. He was a member of Airport Baptist Church.

Survivors include one daughter, Mrs. James T. (Sandra Sue) Dixon of Big Spring; two brothers, Eddie Patterson of San Angelo and R.C. Patterson of Robert Lee; three sisters, Mrs. Crowley Harmon of Robert Lee, Mrs. Aubrey Dennen of Bronte and Mrs. Sidney Compton of Colorado City; two grandchildren, Lisa and Troy, Dixon, both of Big Spring; and several nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Wilson

Mrs. Jack (Mary Lu) Wilson, 61, died Sunday evening in a Temple hospital after a three-week illness.

Services will be at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Nalley-Pickle with Rev. Tommy Smith, pastor of Central Christian Church in Roswell, N.M., officiating. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

She was born Jan. 21, 1921, in Dayton. She married Jack B. Wilson May 25, 1942, in Tampa, Fla. They came to Big Spring in 1953. She had taught school in the Big Spring school system for 14 years. She was a niece to the late Texas Gov. Ross Sterling. She was a member of the Christian Church of Big Spring.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Jack B. Wilson Jr. of Arlington; two daughters, Mary B. Merritt of Odessa and Mrs. George (Virginia Ann) Ryan of Big Spring; her mother, Lulu Sterling of Dayton; one sister, Gwen Durrenberger of Houston and 10 grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her father, one sister and one brother.

The family requests memorials be made to the Christian Church of Big Spring building fund or the American Cancer Society.

W. Burchett

W.E. Burchett, 78, of Midland and formerly of Big Spring, died at 9 p.m. Saturday in a Midland Hospital following a sudden illness.

Services will be held at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with Rev. Ross Payne, pastor of Cotton Flat Baptist Church in Midland, and Rev. Phil Thurman, pastor of Christ Fellowship Church, officiating.

Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park. He was born Aug. 15, 1903, in Collins County. He married Norma Ethyl Hudgins Nov. 13, 1930, in New Mexico. She preceded him in death on July 4, 1973.

He was a former resident of Big Spring and later moved to Midland where he worked for the city of Midland in the street department from September 1952 until 1967 when he retired.

He also was preceded in death by one grandson, Kip Brandon White, on Nov. 14, 1981. He was a Baptist.

Survivors include two sons, Wayne Burchett and Terry Burchett, both of Midland; two daughters, Betty Brown of California and Joyce White of Big Spring; one brother, M.G. Burchett of Big Spring; two sisters, Allie Bear of Graham and Rosie Jolley of Waxahachie; 12 grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and a number of nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Willis Burchett, J.C. Burchett, Donald Hale, B.W. Cunningham, Bobby Lindsey, Olce Burchett and Delbert Burchett.

Masons honor Porter today

Lee Porter, longtime resident of Big Spring, will be honored at 6:30 p.m. today with a dinner at the Masonic hall, 211 Main.

He will be presented with his 50-year certificate and a life membership in Big Spring Commandery No. 32.

He started his Masonic work in 1929. He has served every office in the Blue Lodge, the chapter, the council and the commandery. He was elected secretary of the Temple Association in 1944 and still holds that post.

He served a total of 36 years in public office in Howard County as county clerk, county auditor, treasurer and county judge before retiring in 1970.

Oil drilling method may help recover water

LUBBOCK — A technique long used to extend the life of an oil field may be able to prolong the life of the Ogallala Aquifer.

Secondary recovery methods, which have squeezed additional barrels of oil from old fields, are being applied to test water wells and the results are being reviewed by Texas Tech University civil engineers.

Texas Tech Civil Engineering Professor B.J. Claborn said conventional pumping techniques in both oil and water wells only extract approximately a fourth of the liquid in an underground formation. The remainder of the liquid is held by capillarity, or surface tension, among the grains of sand in the aquifer.

Oil companies have for years pumped water or air into the ground to break the bonds of capillarity and to herd the crude oil toward a well where it can be recovered. A Wayne Wyatt, general manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1, which is overseeing the project, originated the idea of secondary water recovery.

"Everyone's first reaction," Claborn said, "was to laugh. But the more everybody thought about it, the more we began to say 'Why not?' I don't think any of us are totally convinced it is going to work, but we hope it will."

By summer's end, Claborn said some answers on the feasibility should be known because of information being gathered at a 140-foot-deep test well near Slaton. Analysis of the old well has shown that in each cubic foot of sand from the aquifer, 60 percent of the space is occupied by the sand itself, 30 percent by water and 10 percent by air.

After an oil well is drilled, normal production methods will bring to the surface about 25 percent of the oil. Another 25 percent is retrievable with secondary recovery techniques, Claborn said.

"We are discovering we have done about the same thing in our water wells — recovered only a fraction of what is down there," Claborn said.

But Claborn cautioned that this preliminary finding is based on only one well. From other reports, Claborn indicated the amount of water remaining in an old well may vary widely depending on the well's location and the characteristics of the aquifer.

One prerequisite for employing secondary water recovery is some type of "cap" over the aquifer, Claborn said. The cap is a formation through which air or water will not readily pass. When air is pumped under great pressure into a well, the water is forced to move away from the air source between the cap and the impenetrable bedrock. In this way water can be pushed toward another well.

At least that's the theory that is being tested. "We will have a much better idea about air injection before the summer is over," Claborn said. "We should know if it is technically feasible and, if not, why."

Should the process prove technically feasible, the study will be extended to examine economic feasibility, Claborn said.

Such a technology could help prolong the life of the Ogallala Aquifer, which extends from Texas through Nebraska. Scientists say the Ogallala is being depleted faster than the aquifer can be replenished by rainfall percolating from the surface, the formation's only source of recharge. The Ogallala is the basis for an irrigated agriculture economy throughout the Great Plains.

$30,000 civil suit filed

A $30,000 civil suit for injuries allegedly suffered in an automobile accident has been filed in the state's 118th District County by Jo Williams and Bertie Murphy against James Cahill.

The suit alleges Cahill was negligent last Jan. 11 when his vehicle collided with a vehicle driven by Mrs. Williams, injuring her, her two children and eight-year-old Cheva Snodderly.

The suit asks for $27,000 in damages suffered by the plaintiffs, plus $1,437 for the damaged vehicle and $1,500 for wages lost. Mrs. Murphy, suing as Snodderly's guardian, is seeking such damages as the court will find fair, the suit states, and she plans to file a future petition detailing damages.

Police Beat

2 illegal aliens captured

Texas highway patrolmen and Howard County sheriff's deputies arrested two illegal aliens at the scene of a motor vehicle accident at 1:30 a.m. Sunday.

According to reports of the incident, the accident happened on Snyder Highway near Vincent when an automobile tire blew out.

The two aliens were turned over to the custody of the U.S. Border Patrol, police said.

• Donna Land of 711 E. 18th told police she was assaulted by an acquaintance at her home at about 2:50 a.m. Sunday.

• Jesse Majors of 1802 Alabama told police someone entered his automobile while the car was parked at home Saturday night and stole two coats worth a total of $125.

• H.G. Aldridge of 407 E. Seventh told police someone entered his home Saturday night and stole a TV set worth $300.

• Jimmy Newsom of 1206 Nolan told police someone entered his pickup truck at about 3:20 p.m. yesterday and stole a .22-caliber revolver worth $125.

• Roy Ferrell of 610 Holbert told police someone he knows stole the hubcaps from his automobile while the car was parked at Fourth and Lancaster between 7 and 8 p.m. yesterday.

• Motor vehicles driven by John Elrod of 403 Washington and Edward Berry of 2604 Richmondell collided on F.M. 700 at about 5:15 p.m. yesterday, police said. Elrod was arrested for driving with a suspended license and for failure to maintain financial responsibility, police said. Laura Karwedyk of 2501 Ann, a passenger in the Berry vehicle, was taken to Malone-Hogan for treatment of possible injuries, police said.

Senator says Williams should have walked away from FBI ploy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senator who rejected a potential Abscam bribe says Harrison A. Williams also should have walked out when an FBI team tempted him to take improper actions.

"I can see a reasonable man getting involved in one or two meetings," said Sen. Larry Pressler, "but Williams kept going back for more."

Pressler, 39, a freshman Republican from South Dakota, declined to say how he will vote when the Senate decides this week — perhaps Tuesday — on whether to expel Williams, 62, a fourth-term Democrat from New Jersey.

The Senate was resuming deliberations on the Williams matter today.

Senate Minority Whip Alan Cranston, D-Calif., is leading an effort to censure rather than expel Williams, who has been sentenced to three years in prison and fined $50,000 on bribery and conspiracy convictions.

In other Capitol Hill business this week, President Reagan is scheduled to meet Tuesday with all 53 Republican senators, many of whom have called on Reagan to narrow projected budget deficits by cutting in his defense buildup or trimming some tax cuts.

Senate GOP Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee is assembling a list of alternatives, but Senate Finance Committee Chairman Pat Domenici, R-N.M., conceded Sunday there is no consensus on what Republican senators will agree on as a substitute for Reagan's program.

"We're moving in the direction of getting a package together, but it's not there yet," Domenici said on NBC's "Meet the Press." "Hopefully, it won't be too far off."

He said he believes Reagan is willing to negotiate if Congress convinces him that any changes in last year's tax cuts will not be used as an excuse to temper the spending cuts the president wants in domestic programs. On the Williams case, Cranston argues that the FBI unfairly targeted the New Jersey Democrat and other members of Congress despite no advance indication that they might accept bribes.

The Abscam operation, says Cranston, was "totally out of control" because the FBI continued to lure unsuspecting public officials into wrongdoing even after their initial refusal to participate.

But Pressler, one of the unsuspecting public officials Cranston was talking about, said he believes Williams' misconduct far outweighs the FBI's own faults in Abscam.

"Some of the stuff in those tapes is so indefensible," Pressler said of FBI videotapes in which Williams is seen and heard meeting with a phony Arab sheik.

In the meetings, the sheik offers money in exchange for pushing immigration legislation or help in obtaining government contracts for a titanium mine in which Williams was given a part interest. At least 85 senators have seen the videotapes.

In November 1979, Pressler met in a Washington townhouse with a group of men whom he believed to be businessmen interested in making a political contribution.

"They were good actors," Pressler recalled in an interview, "but I thought they were strange businessmen." He said he concluded later that "these guys were off the wall."

Pressler said he subsequently learned he was a second choice for the meeting because two House members who had been targeted failed to appear.

The meeting was hurriedly arranged and, Pressler said, marked the final effort to draw House members and senators into the Abscam net.

Bell to fight telephone fraud

MIDLAND — As part of an effort to reduce the amount of money lost through telephone fraud, Southwestern Bell operators in Texas along with operators throughout the Bell System have begun attempting to obtain authorization for charges to third-party numbers before completing calls from public telephones.

Clay Styles, district manager of residence services for Southwestern Bell, said that during the first phase of the change, operators will tell customers, "One moment while I check the number, please." Operators then will attempt to obtain an authorization for the billing charge from someone at the third number. Initially, if the third number is busy, or if there is no answer, calls will be put through for the caller.

Prior to the change, operators verified third-number billing on a spot-checking basis after calls were completed.

Housing

to the building boom: the Big Spring Independent School District with a $477,000 project and the city (through a private intermediary) with a $269,000 construction project.

The school district plans to spend its money on adding 10 classrooms and expanding the cafeteria at Goliad Middle School, according to district Superintendent Lynn Hise.

The addition is being carried out, not because the district expects an increased influx of students at the school, but because of mandated programs such as special education which require more space than typical educational programs, Hise said.

And out at the city airport, the Howard County Industrial Foundation is building two new hangars for the city as part of a major relocation of the city's aviation facilities.

Three hangars and the airport terminal are being moved from one side of the airport to the other to allow for expansion at the adjacent Big Spring Industrial Park. The $4.3

million project is being financed with bond issues — but because of the time lag involved in setting up the bond sales and receiving revenue from the sales, the industrial foundation is building the first two hangars with private financing so the city can buy the completed hangars when it has cash from the bond sales.

The foundation was issued a permit (at no cost, since the city intends to buy the hangar) to build the first hangar last month, estimating it will cost $269,000. The city council approved a $1.1 million bond sale last month to generate revenue for the purchase of the first hangar. Rent money from expansion inside the industrial park will be used to pay off the debt incurred by the city in the bond sale.

LAST WEEK the foundation offered to build the second of the three hangars and sell it to the city upon completion. As with the first hangar, the design work was offered to local architects, (in this case, Gary & Co.) and the construction work is being to put to bid.

A land-use agreement with the city council and a permit from the city inspection office are needed before the foundation can construct the second hangar, and both are expected to be obtained by the foundation. Will the foundation build the third hangar?

"It depends on how quickly the city gets the money," said Jim Little of the foundation. "We didn't know how long we'd have to carry the paper on the first one. But we can see our way clear now."

Arson possible in hotel blaze

HOUSTON (AP) — Evidence discovered at the Westchase Hilton Hotel, where 10 people perished in a fire, has raised the possibility of arson, a fire department investigator says.

"New developments" in the form of physical evidence has prompted investigators to suspect that the fire may have been intentionally set, investigator Richard Benson said late Sunday. Investigators will meet today in hopes of determining the cause of the early Saturday morning blaze.

Benson would not elaborate on the developments but said the evidence was recovered from the fourth floor of the 13-story glass structure. Investigators will review all evidence and expect to make a statement about the fire sometime this week.

More than a dozen investigators spent the weekend combing through the charred remains of Room 404 where the four-alarm blaze broke out early Saturday morning, said Chief Fire Marshal E.A. Corral.

Officials are also trying to determine if hotel personnel were properly trained in the use of the fire alarm system.

Investigators said a night clerk at the hotel turned off the fire alarm that first sounded at about 2 a.m. Corral said that if the hotel employees' training in the use of the alarm system was insufficient, misdemeanor charges could be filed against the hotel's management.

"If they did not have a fire plan and they were not properly instructed, then we could fine them," Corral said. Maximum penalty for such a fine is $200.

The clerk, James Harvey, apparently didn't realize that when he shut off a desk buzzer activated by guests on the upper floors, he was also turning off the entire alarm system, said Deputy Chief L.H. Mikeska.

Mikeska said the alarm system would have worked perfectly "if it hadn't been for human error."

Corral said that when the buzzer sounded on Harvey's console, he repeatedly reset it, thus preventing it from sounding the general alert that might have awakened guests on the fourth floor.

Thick black smoke filled the fourth floor and was sucked into rooms by the hotel's ventilation system, investigators said. A medical examiner said all the victims died of smoke and soot inhalation.

The victims were a Louisiana family of four and a Dallas woman who were in Houston for a wedding, and five members of a Houston family who had lived at the hotel while waiting to be transferred to Venezuela.

The Houston family was identified as Hernando Espanol, his wife Isabel, their two daughters Sonia and Luz Adriana, and Mrs. Espanol's mother, Isabel Hernandez.

The Louisiana family was identified as Ronald Pabst of Metairie, La., his wife Cecile and their two sons, 5-year-old Ronald "Chuck" and 3-year-old Jonathan.

The Dallas woman was Susan K. Ilvento. Her husband, Dr. Joseph Ilvento, was among the 11 people injured in the fire; he suffered smoke inhalation and was listed in serious condition at Hermann Hospital.

Ron Holt, president of Texas Electronics Systems, the installing contractor for the alarm system, said Harvey told him he thought the alarm would sound after three minutes even if the buzzer were turned off.

Houston Fire Chief V.E. Rogers said the hotel's general fire alarm system automatically switches off the ventilation system when it is activated. But because the clerk repeatedly turned off the buzzer, the ventilation system came back on and sent the smoke through the rooms.

Rogers said his investigators had received conflicting information from some of the hotel's 200 guests about whether the alarm and smoke detection system operated properly.

Hotel Manager Eric Huemer, 36, said the hotel's fire alarm system had passed an inspection only three days before the fire. Each room is equipped with a smoke alarm, checked daily by the hotel staff, he added.

Hotel officials said they weren't sure when the 300-room facility would be reopened.

Haggard begs Reagan's pardon

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — It was an insiders' joke between President Reagan and country music singer Merle Haggard and most of the 500 people in the concert audience didn't get it.

In what many took to be nothing more than a smiling apology for singing about America's problems, Haggard joshed to Reagan: "I beg your pardon one more time."

But Reagan caught Haggard's double meaning and broke out laughing. As governor of California in 1972, Reagan granted an executive pardon to Haggard, who had spent nearly three years in San Quentin State Prison on burglary and escape convictions.

Reagan, his wife Nancy and an audience studded with Hollywood celebrities sat on bales of hay in a chilly barn Sunday to hear Haggard perform in a White House concert series that, until now, had featured opera and classical music from the East Room of the Executive Mansion.

This time the setting was a 1,200-acre horse and cattle ranch in the Santa Ynez Valley near the president's own ranch, where he had been vacationing since Thursday.

No black tie audience here; it was cowboy boots, cowboy hats, leather jackets and goosedown vests. Reagan sported a string tie with a silver longhorn slide.

The president, who was returning to Washington this evening to face mounting economic problems and Republican plans to rewrite his budget, didn't want to talk business as he wound up his vacation.

Asked prior to the concert whether he would scale back on defense spending when he returned to Washington, the president replied, "Let's not even think about things like that until we get there."

By concert's end, Reagan told the audience, "I leave here inspired. I can't wait to get back on Capitol Hill."

The president travels to the Capitol Tuesday to confer with the 53 Senate Republicans, many of whom are searching for alternative budget plans to trim the record deficit forecast for 1983.

Gas prices drop fast

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Average gasoline prices nationwide have taken the biggest tumble since the 1960s, plunging more than 2½ cents a gallon in the past two weeks, according to industry analyst Dan Lundberg.

Lundberg, who publishes the weekly "Lundberg Letter" that tracks oil industry trends, said Sunday a survey of 15,400 stations nationwide revealed what amounts to a "price war."

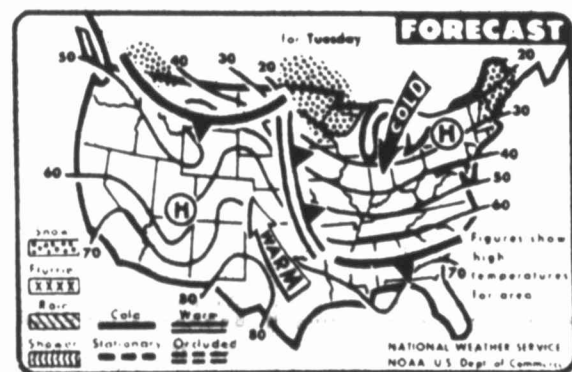

The price-cutting resulted from rebates to dealers offered by refiners as an incentive to increase volume, he said. Most of the rebates were replaced by across-the-board price reductions.

The survey found the average price at the pump is down 12 cents a gallon from a record high of $1.378 a year ago, Lundberg said.

He predicted prices will stabilize soon, although "they will continue a more gradual downward slope unless the world overproduction of crude eases off."

Prices dropped an average of 2.68 cents per gallon in the last two weeks, Lundberg said. Leaded regular dropped 3 cents.

Warmer weather returns to Texas

By The Associated Press

Clear skies and warmer temperatures were forecast for all of Texas today.

Forecasters said the warming trend was expected to continue through Tuesday when even warmer temperatures are forecast.

Highs today were to be mostly in the 60s and 70s, ranging upward into the mid 80s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Lows tonight will be in the 30s in Northwest Texas and in the 40s and 50s over the rest of the state. Highs Tuesday will be slightly warmer, mostly in the 60s and 70s.

Skies were clear over most of Texas early today with a few scattered high clouds reported over North Texas and West Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s. Extremes ranged from 33 at Midland to 47 at Abilene.

Some early morning temperatures around the state included 42 at Amarillo, 45 at Wichita Falls, 43 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 34 at Lufkin, 37 at Houston, 42 at Corpus Christi, 38 at San Antonio and 40 at El Paso.

Republicans approve ballot questions for May primary

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Republican Party, trying to maintain its momentum but faced with a May primary that features only one hot contest, will spice up its ballot with five opinion questions intended to arouse emotions and interest.

After some arguing, the State Republican Executive Committee voted Sunday to ask Texans about horse-race betting, gun control, the Blue Law, jail sentences for repeat DWI offenders and initiative and referendum on the May 1 ballot.

Party officials say the outcome of the referendums is not important. What is important is that the controversial questions could bring voters to the GOP May 1 primary, and a big turnout could carry over to November.

"One of our motivations is to encourage more people not to go to the Democratic primary," said Wayne Thorburn, the Texas GOP executive director. "One of the ways to do that is to have something controversial."

Sunday's committee meeting was highlighted by an appearance by Gov. Bill Clements, who said he favors the sale of at least half the federally owned lands. The proceeds should be used to pay off part of the national debt, he said.

"I'm highly in favor of the federal government liquidating over half of the land, to start with," said Clements, who said there is little federal land in Texas.

The governor said the land-sale idea is being "seriously considered" by the Reagan administration.

Most of the federal land is west of the Mississippi River. Texas, as a result of the treaty that brought the state into the union, has little federal land and the federal government "sure as hell is not going to sell our state lands," said Clements.

The land sales would bring the federal government much-needed money and would put the land back on the tax rolls, said the governor, "as opposed to just sitting out there."

"We are not talking about Yellowstone National Park or Yosemite ... of course we need those things," he said.

Clements also announced that President Reagan, Vice President George Bush and former President Gerald Ford will attend a June 15 campaign dinner in Houston, at which Clements plans to raise a record $3 million for his re-election bid.

The five opinion questions, proposed by a subcommittee, stirred up an internal squabble. Thorburn told the committee that controversial questions draw voters.

The GOP primary ballot features only one solid statewide battle, a fight between U.S. Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas and state Sen. Walter Mengden of Houston for the senatorial nomination. There are three candidates for land commissioner and two for comptroller, but neither race has drawn much attention.

The horse-race betting question almost proved too controversial for the committee. On first vote, it was rejected 24-22 after committee member Marcus Anderson of Abilene said it would force churches to mount a "frivolous campaign" against legalized pari-mutuel betting.

After the other four questions were approved for the ballot, the horse-race question was reconsidered and won 30-19 approval.

The SREC also approved two resolutions slamming the redistricting efforts of the federal courts and the all-Democratic Legislative Redistricting Board.

Packwood recently said he was concerned that Reagan, when asked questions about the economy, responded with an anecdote "on a totally different track."

Coroner may rule out choking as cause of John Belushi's death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — As tight-lipped coroner's officials kept a lid on the inquiry into comedian John Belushi's death, one investigator said he is "pretty sure" choking could be ruled out as the cause.

He said, however, that a heart attack would not necessarily be ruled out, an opinion shared by an experienced pathologist.

"I'm pretty sure you could rule out choking. That would have been obvious in the course of the autopsy," coroner's supervising investigator Donald Messerle said Sunday.

However, an initial autopsy like the one conducted on Belushi's body Saturday would not rule out the possibility of a heart attack, he said. The coroner has not officially ruled out anything, he added.

Coroner Thomas Noguchi has declined to give any details about the investigation of the death of Belushi other than to say the autopsy was inconclusive and more tests will be done.

Belushi's naked body was found on a bed Friday in the $200-a-day bungalow he had rented at the Chateau Marmon Hotel on the Sunset Strip. He was in California for the filming of a Paramount comedy, "Noble Rot."

The 33-year-old rotund comedian rocketed to fame as one of the stars of television's "Saturday Night Live." He later went on to star in such movies as "Animal House," "The Blues Brothers," "1941," "Neighbors" and "Continental Divide."

A new spirit of accommodation

At least one plank of President Reagan's election platform has borne fruit.

Washington, D.C., Circuit Court Judge Patricia Wald has reported a "dramatic drop" in the load of the court. The D.C. court is one of the busiest in the nation, reflecting the overwhelming number of legal battles spawned in the nation's capital.

The drop has been credited to the Reagan administration's effort at regulatory reform. Judge Wald says there may be a new climate in Washington. Businesses or individuals who, in the past, might have appealed an administrative agency's ruling now seem to be able to "work it out with the agency."

THERE IS EVIDENCE to support Judge Wald's conclusion. New filings at the appeals court are running 12 percent behind last year, but the most significant drop has been the decrease in administrative law caseload.

According to The National Law Journal, appeals of Environmental Protection Agency decisions have dropped from 18 a month a year ago to two a month. Appeals of Federal Communication Commission and Federal Energy Regulatory Commission decisions have dropped about half.

THIS IS WELCOME news. The explosions of lawsuits involving administrative agencies has, for several years now, threatened to strangle us. The adversary system of the courtroom is not the best place to resolve technical administrative matters.

If regulatory reform produces a new spirit of accommodation, while still providing necessary governmental protection, our nation will be well served.

Pressing the flesh

I wonder if politicians ever get tired.

Now that election time is coming up the polls are going at a breakneck pace to get their names and faces indelibly stamped in the minds of the voters. Especially those hopefuls who are trying to get elected for the first time.

Anonymity is a candidate's worst enemy so he must hit the campaign trail. And that means pressing a few pounds of flesh, eating an inordinate amount of chicken and roast beef dinners and being asked a multitude of questions by packs of reporters.

It must be a tough grind to make five or six stops a day and keep smiling and acting like you're very happy to see everyone. Of course, if no one shows up then a politician doesn't have much to be happy about.

THAT CAMPAIGN takes its toll on some polls. I've seen them come in off the road with glazed eyes and mechanical smiles trying to fight off fatigue and opponents at the same time.

Since I started this job seven months ago I've met approximately 20 politicians and with the exception of one I've actually admired everyone of them.

Now I know that's strange.

Billy Graham

10 commandments

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Do you think Christians are still supposed to keep the Ten Commandments? — P.S.R.

DEAR P.S.R.: Yes, I do. One reason is because every one of the Commandments, either by example or teaching, was repeated by our Lord and echoed in the rest of the New Testament.

The Ten Commandments are more than a set of rules. They reflect the very nature of God himself. God is holy and perfect, and his Law (given in the Ten Commandments) gives us his will for human life. Remember that the Bible commands us to be holy, and it would be impossible to fulfill this command unless we followed the Law of God. "Be holy, because I am holy" (1 Peter 1:16, New International Version). Remember that if you are a Christian you are called not only to believe in Christ, but to follow him and obey him as his disciple. We are called "to obey everything I have commanded you" (Matthew 28:20, NIV). Jesus said, "If anyone loves me, he will obey my teaching" (John 14:23, NIV).

Sometimes I think we fail to see just how profound the Ten Commandments really are. Take the Commandment, "You shall not steal" (Exodus 20:15). Does that only apply to things like burglary or shoplifting? Yes, it applies to such things, but think also of other ways we steal. Perhaps we cheat our employer by being lazy or taking too much time from our work. Or perhaps we take credit for what someone else has done. The point is this: there are all kinds of ways we can gain wrongfully what is not ours, and the Bible commands us here to be absolutely honest in every situation.

Remember, however, that we are not saved because we keep the Ten Commandments.

Bloodied, broke, but not beaten

WASHINGTON — Last January, I reported the story of David Shuffman, a young New York attorney who had the temerity to challenge the all-powerful federal courts — specifically the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. His treatment by the judicial establishment, a law unto itself, has now gone from bad to outrageous.

Shuffman's struggle began in 1974, when he represented his widowed mother in a claim to collect $80,000 owed her by Hartford Textiles, Inc., now known as the Hartford Corporation. But the company tried to wriggle out of its obligation to the widow by filing for bankruptcy, and hiring a prestigious New York law firm to contest Mrs. Shuffman's claim.

The young attorney argued his mother's claim before U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Roy Babbitt, who ruled against the widow. Shuffman then produced canceled checks as evidence that Hartford Textiles had indeed had a contract with Mrs. Shuffman. Lo and behold, the company reversed its position, admitting that it owed Mrs. Shuffman some money.

At the hearing, however, Judge Babbitt, without allowing any argument, awarded Mrs. Shuffman a paltry $3,346.17. Young Shuffman decided there had been a fix. He had evidence that the judge had met privately with Hartford Textiles before issuing his award.

So Shuffman appealed to the U.S. District Court and then to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. Unfortunately for Mrs. Shuffman, her son is not the kind of obsequious lawyer that federal judges, in their majesty, seem to prefer. Perhaps carried away by his personal involvement in the case, young Shuffman failed to treat the Second Circuit's judges with the respect they feel is due them.

That's the only reason I can think of that could lead to Shuffman's subsequent harassment by the Second Circuit bench. Sources told my associate Don Goldberg that the man behind Shuffman's troubles is Second Circuit Chief Judge Irving R. Kaufman.

Kaufman is the judge who sentenced Julius and Ethel Rosenberg to death for espionage 30 years ago. He clearly didn't enjoy a young attorney's charge that there had been a judicial fix in the Shuffman case.

But Shuffman had filed four motions in support of his charges. He was assured that no decision would be made before his motions were heard by a panel of three judges. Kaufman ordered a hearing.

But the hearing was a farce. Certified copies of ballots signed by Second Circuit judges in advance of the hearing denied Shuffman's motions. In other words, the case was decided long before the "charade" hearing.

Shuffman had also filed a motion to send his case back to the District Court, so he could present new evidence. It was crucial, however, that the case be remanded to the lower court with "guidelines." This is the technical way of saying that the Appeals Court had to give the District judge permission to rule — if he saw fit — that Shuffman's mother ought to receive more money from Hartford.

The motion was denied; Shuffman would have to continue his struggle within the Second Circuit.

A week later, Shuffman was informed the ruling had been "corrected." The case would be returned to the District Court, all right, but with no guidelines attached. In other words, the lower court could hear Shuffman's arguments, but could offer no relief. The Second Circuit judges had found the perfect way to rid themselves of the bothersome Shuffman. Even the District judge found the order "incomprehensible."

The young attorney then discovered that the Appeals Court hadn't even bothered to hide its duplicity. A clerk had simply amended the original denial of motion by typing in the new order. Shuffman appealed to the Supreme Court, but so far it has refused to hear his case.

His struggle with the courts, meanwhile, has left him virtually penniless. Angered by his persistent motions, the Second Circuit has levied numerous fines against him and has attached his bank accounts. The Court has also demanded a list of his clients so his fees can be collected to pay the fines.

Still, David Shuffman refuses to give in. He may be broke, but he has not yet been beaten.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES — Textile manufacturers who treated baby clothes with the cancer-causing agent TRIS tried for a tax break during the Carter administration that would ease their suffering from a federally imposed ban on the chemically treated infantwear. Two political opposites, Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., and his successor as Judiciary Committee chairman, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., sponsored an amendment to benefit textile companies in their home states, but President Carter vetoed the bill. Now Thurmond has succeeded in getting the legislation through the Senate by attaching it to a bill to charter a club of former congressmen. House Judiciary sources say there's little likelihood that the estimated $50 million bailout will be enacted this year, what with the midterm elections.

—The word Senate derives from the Latin, and it means a council of old men. But the United States Senate has been getting collectively younger in recent years. In 1977, the average age of a senator was 54.7. By 1979, it had dropped to 52.7, and by last year it was a relatively youthful 52.1. The average age will probably drop still more next year. Two incumbents, 75-year-old S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., and 67-year-old Harry Byrd, I-Va., are retiring, and their replacements are certain to be younger.

Mitterrand as ally

PARIS — Francois Mitterrand entertains no illusions about what he can accomplish in the Middle East. "I'm not going to negotiate," he said in an interview on the eve of his visit to Israel. But he hopes to break "the feeling of isolation" in Israel and to convince the Arabs it is possible to support the Jewish state while also favoring justice for the Palestinians. If so, he believes he can smooth the way for American mediation between Israel and the Arabs. "Let's not play with words," he said. "We are allies."

Not always entirely comfortable allies, of course. The French president disagrees frankly with the approach of the Reagan administration in Central America. He believes El Salvador and Nicaragua are now undergoing the national revolutions that swept Europe in the 19th century. He thinks the national revolutionaries will turn Communist only if the U.S., by trying to suppress them, pushes them into the arms of the Russians.

If such secondary issues can be subordinated, genuine cooperation between Paris and Washington on the primary issues of Europe and Russia is possible. Since his election last spring, Mitterrand has become a total convert to the idea of Franco-German accord. He has developed a warm personal rapport with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. He is prepared to bind the Federal Republic more tightly than ever within the ambit of a unified Europe and the Atlantic alliance.

Germany, the French president believes, is not subject to a reassertion of national feeling. One reason is that the country remains divided. The other is that West Germany, while bristling with nuclear weapons, has no control over their use. "The Germans," the French president said, "feel they are not masters of their own fate."

In the area of defense cooperation with West Germany, Mitterrand is prepared to go very, very far. Further than common strategy and joint planning for conventional defense. He believes that with West Germany and France standing together, Italy, Britain, and the smaller countries can be brought to play a more robust role in European defense. "We can create a Europe that has far more solidarity than ever before," he said. And he sees that Europe working with the U.S. within the Atlantic alliance.

To be sure, there are conditions for French cooperation with the U.S. — in economic policy first of all.

High American interest rates, Mitterrand complains, oblige the Europeans to hold their rates high, thus slowing growth and promoting unemployment. Mitterrand wants the U.S. to tighten its budget, to allow for an easing of rates. He is trying to organize, before visiting the U.S. in May, an international lobby. He believes he already has the Germans, the Italians and the Canadians on board. He will take his case to Japan next month, and put it with special force at the summit meeting of industrial countries scheduled for Versailles beginning June 4. While he has no special remedy in mind, Mitterrand warns that continuation of the present state of affairs will have dire consequences. "It will isolate America and Balkanize Europe," he said.

Preservation of France's special role outside the NATO organization, and with an independent nuclear force, is a second condition of cooperation. Mitterrand asserts firmly that he did not become president to undo all the things Gen. DeGaulle did. But he is equally clear that if the forms are observed, there can be practical cooperation in the highest degree.

Family upset after funeral

Dear Editor,

On Jan. 11, 1982, our father W.B. Estep was buried at Mount Olive Cemetery. We were told at the funeral home that we needed to go out between 8:30 and 9 o'clock to pay a $200 opening and closing fee. My brother and sister and myself went out to pay the fee and the men out there told us to come back after the funeral, as all we had were out-of-state and out-of-town checks.

That was fine with us and we thought they were real nice, but then before the funeral at the cemetery was over, the men came down there and asked one of the mourners who did they talk to get their money and said they wouldn't cover the grave until they were paid.

We didn't get to say a proper goodbye to our father. They still had to take a check from Dallas. If that is their policy we can understand why people don't want to use that cemetery a second time.

Is this the way our City Dads run the city?

EDITOR'S NOTE — Assistant City Manager Paul Feazelle responds with a memo:

"I have investigated the situation regarding the complaint on the personnel at Mount Olive Cemetery with regards to the letter from the Estep family.

"Members of the family visited with John Ramirez about the location of the plot and opening services for the W.B. Estep funeral. Mr. Ramirez was told the family members did not have a checkbook with them at the time, but would return later that morning, prior to the service, to pay the grave opening fee. A family member later called and said they would pay at the service.

"Mr. Ramirez called the funeral home involved to try to alert the family to the city's policy of payment in advance. The funeral home agreed to convey the message to the family.

"At the burial service, the cemetery manager and park superintendent were in a vehicle, remaining some distance from the service to avoid any interruptions. Upon completion of the service, one of the family members approached the vehicle to offer payment for the services.

"The cemetery personnel did not attempt to contact any of the family members upon their arrival at the cemetery, or at any time during the service. Mr. Ramirez added that the family was not told by our personnel that we would not cover the grave.

"I feel a breakdown in communications likely occurred, and regret any ill feelings that may have been caused."

Not provoking the Soviet Union is a third Mitterrand condition. He calls the Russians "a great people," put "on the defensive" by the failures of communism. He believes the leadership in Moscow has three choices — first to go to war; next to step up the arms race; and finally to negotiate arms limitations.

He thus attaches tremendous importance to the current Geneva negotiations between the U.S. and Russia on the limitation of nuclear weapons in Europe. He hopes there will be an agreement that will then lead to a resumption of negotiations on strategic intercontinental missiles. If not, he thinks world conditions will change dramatically for the worse in the year ahead. "I don't mean war," he said, "but terrible tensions everywhere."

Many Americans, including this one, believe Mitterrand underestimates the assertiveness of the Soviet Union. Still, his position leaves wide scope for cooperation to revitalize the Atlantic alliance. Among the many stone paths stretching before the Reagan administration in foreign policy, working with the French for Atlantic harmony is perhaps the best to explore.

Dear Abby

'The Best of Dear Abby' praised

DEAR ABBY: Our children gave me a copy of "The Best of Dear Abby" for Christmas. I had expected to find it filled with wisecracks and funnies. On the contrary, seriousness seems to be the keynote. It is evident that you do not lightly take your responsibility as an adviser.

Your book reminds me of a rose. The pages become petals, rich with fragrance of empathy, compassion, seriousness, wit and humor. The stem has its thorns. The book is mighty near to being a documentary on humanity.

May I please have permission to reproduce by Xerox pages 48, 49 and 50, which contain correspondence from "Miserable in Phoenix?" I desire to give copies to our children and grandchildren and their friends who may be raising teen-agers.

I am 94 years old and my beloved wife of 64 years is 87. We both enjoy your book immensely.

Rather than becoming an old pest, I will say "Goodbye." Love,

CHARLES ALBERT SMITH, ALTADENA, CALIF.

DEAR CHARLES: An "old pest?" Never! Your letter made my day. You may use the specific material from my book to share with family and friends. Everyone desiring to reproduce copyrighted material must request permission, as you did.

P.S. To those who have complained that their local bookstores are out of my book, it's available by sending $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling to: "The Best of Dear Abby," 4400 Johnson Dr., Fairway, Kan. 66205. Make checks payable to Universal Press Syndicate, and please mention the name of the Big Spring Herald.

DEAR ABBY: Many parents spend the entire month of January recuperating after their grown children have come "home" with their families to spend the Christmas holidays with Mom and Dad. I'm one of those moms.

Here's a terrific letter I hope you'll print. I'm sure not many moms have received one like it:

"Dear Mom: Thanks for sending that big box of stuff I left behind when we spent the Christmas holidays at your house. Everything arrived beautifully packed, as usual. And thanks for washing and ironing everything, and mending my good blue sweater. Glad you found the brown sock behind the bed. (I thought I had looked there.) Sorry about forgetting my camera and sunglasses.

"It was sure great to see you and Dad. You always treat us like royalty, feeding us three scrumptious meals a day and waiting on us and the kids and all our friends. We didn't have to lift a finger. You did all the cooking and cleaning and laundry, too!

"Next year we kids are going to carry you and Dad off to the shore for Christmas at that nice lodge, and somebody can wait on you for a change. OK?"

"Oh, enclosed is a check to take care of all those long-distance calls I made, and also to cover the gas I charged to your credit card. (Thanks for lending it to me.) Your loving son"

Isn't that a great letter, Abby? Of course we never received one like it, and I'll bet not many mothers have. But I believe in miracles, so it might happen yet!

Americans eating out more often

More than one-third of our food spending goes for eating out, says Dr. Rose Tindall Postel, a foods and nutrition specialist.

That bill reached $87 billion in 1978 — 35 percent of the total. This was up from 26 percent of the total food spending in 1960.

Dr. Postel is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Dr. Donohue

Alcohol causes flushing

Dear Dr. Donohue: I hope you can help me. I notice that if I have a few beers, wine, or almost any alcoholic beverage, my cheeks, neck and chest break out red. The only time this happens is if I get nervous. I have a checkup every six months and my blood pressure is OK. It is very embarrassing. I also feel very warm when the rash starts. I am 41, have regular periods, and am very healthy. I hope you can explain this situation to me. — B.C.

Because flushing is usually of so little medical consequence, not much study has been done on it. But the fleeting reddening of the face, neck or upper chest is due to expansion of the blood vessels in those areas. The same expansion probably occurs throughout many other parts of the body.

Areas that turn red do so because there are more vessels there. We also know that blood vessels expand because hormones (like catecholamine) have been released into the blood. There are also ethnic differences in the tendency to blush. That is an observed fact.

But to your alcohol specifically: Alcohol induces flushing by activating the vessel-dilating nerves. Or it can be caused by certain substances in alcohol — tyramine and histamine — that make those vessels expand. A few authorities state that alcohol-induced flushing may identify the person who has a propensity toward alcohol addiction.

Easy blushers, furthermore, are more apt to develop the skin condition called rosacea later in life. I really don't know where all this is going, or really what to tell you to do. I, myself, would avoid alcoholic beverages if they cause the reaction. I would bet that, in the long run, this is the healthy course for you.

I must not neglect to add that blushing is a clue to a few illnesses — carcinoid syndrome, thyroid overactivity, mastocytosis — but easy blushers should not jump to the conclusion that they have those illnesses.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have a question that may seem small to you, but I hope you will enlighten me about it. Several times a week, for the past two months, I have been awakened in the middle of the night with a stomachache. The obvious answer would be an empty stomach, but could it be something else? — N.D.

Don't take abdominal pain that wakes you up in the night too lightly. Don't dismiss it as due merely to an empty stomach. In fact, such pain at night is more likely to be a sign of a true illness than would similar daytime pain.

Nighttime abdominal pain can indicate many disorders. Ulcer can cause it, or hiatal hernia, the kind of hernia that occurs deep in the esophagus, where it meets the stomach. If there is splashing up of stomach acid, that may be felt as general abdominal pain. That's the most I can tell you from this distance. You take the next step and see your doctor.

Dear Dr. Donohue: How does the doctor differentiate between Parkinson's disease and other disorders of the nervous system? — Mrs. J.F.

There is no single test that tells if a person has Parkinson's. However, in its fully developed stage, Parkinson's is not hard to diagnose. The stooped posture, the slowness of movement, the fixed facial expression, the tremor (one that is most pronounced at rest), the shuffling gait, all point most clearly to Parkinson's.

In its early stages, when all the signs may not be present, it might be mistaken for other nervous system disorders. But it generally does not take long for the picture of Parkinson's to fall into place.

Hot water and irons cause laundry problems

Annoying laundry problems may be spreading gloom in your laundry room. Colors in fabrics fade, shirt collars mottle, holes or white specks appear on clothing or linens. It's difficult to figure out what has gone wrong.

These are common problems, according to the International Fabricare Institute, the world-wide association of launderers and drycleaners. And commercial launderers can share some solutions.

The crackling clean bed sheets, the plump terry towels and the dazzling whites that make up professionally finished laundry bundles are the products of heavy equipment and professional detergents. But they are also the result of knowing what can damage fabrics and dyes and staying away from problem-producers.

Washable printed fabrics may lose color — some colors, such as pink, more than others. Colors will retain their vibrancy, IFI-member launderers advise, if warm temperatures are used in the wash and rinse waters.

Lower your temperatures, keep your colors. The heat from pressing can also vaporize colors used in polyester fabrics, giving a faded appearance to garments. Use the lowest possible temperature settings for ironing polyester fabrics and the colors will remain truer.

If your white and colored shirts are becoming discolored, specifically in the collars and cuffs, the culprit could be the way the shirts are manufactured.

Collars and cuffs on shirts are stiffened with an interlining held in place with an adhesive. It is invisible through the shirt fabric when new but when the garment goes through washing, the adhesive may absorb the soil, giving a muddy look to collars and cuffs.

IFI's solution: wash such shirts by themselves, use extra amounts of soap or detergent and put such shirts through more sudsing cycles.

Another problem you might discover that commercial launderers have already solved is the appearance of scattered white specks or spots on colored fabrics.

These specks are the result of bleach acting on dyes and IFI advises launderers — its commercial members and you who do family washes — never to add bleach to colored loads already in the washer. And IFI advises you watch out for powdered bleaches that have spilled or blown into wash loads.

The damage is quick and permanent.

Fabrics that have been spotted or wet with bleach may also erupt with irregular holes that appear after washing. Chlorine bleach that is allowed to dry on a fabric will so weaken it that the mechanical action of a washer will flush away those weakened fibers, leaving a hole.

Having some professional insight into laundry problems can brighten your outlook, as well as your wash.

Diet and exercise stressed in March

"Feel Nutrific!!!" is the theme dietitians will promote throughout March for the 10th annual celebration of good nutrition and fitness.

"To feel your best requires a sound diet and moderate exercise. They're the starting points," says Miriam Curry, registered dietitian and president of the West Texas Dietetic Association. "They set you on the way to feeling 'nutrific!'"

"Each person has to map out his or her own fitness strategy." In nutrition, quantity and quality of the foods you select are equally important. Good starting points are minimum servings of the essentials: two servings of milk or cheese; four to five ounces of meat or an alternate, such as eggs, poultry, fish, chili, dried beans and peas; four servings of fruits and vegetables — one should be deep green or yellow and one a source of vitamin C; and four servings of whole grain or enriched breads and cereals. Then add special attractions for fun and flavor and of course to meet your energy quota. These could be more of the essentials.

In exercising, a gradual approach is the name of the game. Ms. Curry said. Don't try to do it all at once. "To stay on top and really feel nutritive, make sure that both the food you eat and the exercise program you choose are kinds you enjoy."

National Nutrition Month is sponsored by the American Dietetic Association (ADA) and its affiliates. With 46,000 members, ADA represents the largest group of nutrition professionals in the country.

Students place in District 17 contest

Big Spring's winners in district competition of the National PTA's "Reflections" cultural arts contest were announced recently by the Big Spring Council of the Parent-Teacher Association.

Austin Biel, a fifth grader at Moss, won first place in the intermediate music division with his original composition "The Austin Boogie." As a first place district winner, Austin's entry has been forwarded to the contest's state level to compete with entries from across Texas.

Jennifer May, a second grader at Washington, won second place in the primary art division. Melanie Martin, a third grader at College Heights, won second place in the primary literature division.

Leigh Ann Wallace, a fifth grader at Marcy, won third place in the intermediate literature division.

Big Spring PTAs tallied more local entries than any other city in the large slice of West Texas covered by PTA District 17. Big Spring's five PTA schools turned in 528 entries compared to Midland's 26 PTA schools which had about 350 entries.

Certificates recognizing their participation in the national cultural arts contest were awarded to local PTAs at the March meeting of the Big Spring PTA council.

Food Club plans bake sale

Mrs. Jane Thomas was guest speaker at Thursday's meeting of Big Spring School Food Service Club. The meeting took place at Runnels Junior High.

Mrs. Thomas spoke on the book, "Wait Till You Have Children of Your Own," by Erma Bombeck.

Monthly reports were given and a nominating committee was appointed to suggest officers for the coming year. The club's bake sale, scheduled April 3 in Highland Mall, was also discussed.

Following the meeting, Runnels cafeteria workers served refreshments.

Guidance given for guarding family valuables

Most families have more valuables than they realize, says the American Council of Life Insurance. That's the reason for safe deposit boxes and home safes.

Both have advantages and disadvantages. For example, experts agree that a safe deposit box is safer but not nearly as convenient as a home safe.

However, a safe deposit box can be sealed immediately by the bank upon notification of the owner's death, until the tax authorities say it's OK to open.

This means it could be weeks or months before a family member would be allowed to touch the contents of the box with the exception of the will, life insurance policy and burial plot information.

How then, does the average family head decide where to put the family's valuables? Here are some guidelines:

• Keep savings account passbooks in a home safe, since a spouse will need money to live on until insurance benefits and pension or profit-sharing plans are available to her.

• Armed forces discharge papers can be kept at home.

• Large amounts of cash should, logically, be kept in a safe deposit box for sheer safety.

• Marketable securities, stocks and bonds, coin and stamp collections and valuable jewelry should be kept in a deposit box.

• Naturalization papers, divorce decrees, passports, birth certificates and tax records belong in a home safe.

The death penalty Survivors' terror becomes anger

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Terror gripped Ellen Trammell as she lay handcuffed and blindfolded on her son's bed, where two shotgun-wielding robbers had left her to die.

She listened as the men crumpled paper around the modest house where she and her retired husband lived alone about 2½ miles outside the city limits. Later she would learn they were shredding sheet music from her piano bench.

She had no doubts. She had seen the Coleman lanterns they had carried. It didn't take a genius, she said, to figure out the intruders intended to steal a $30,000 gun collection, kill the couple and burn the house to conceal the crimes.

As she strained to hear what the men were saying, suddenly two shots rang out from another bedroom.

She knew instantly that her husband of 27 years, Victor Trammell, was dead, murdered.

Unlike his wife, he either could not or did not try to fake sleep from a sedative the intruders had injected into their victims. The shots came after the men had handcuffed the pair and used tape to bind their legs and cover their eyes.

"I knew I had to get out of there because I couldn't help my husband anymore," she said in a strong, clear voice during an interview eight years later.

Second in a series

The nightmare had begun shortly after 9 p.m. Jan. 12, 1974, when two men arrived to interest Trammell in purchasing some guns. After being invited in, they brandished a sawed-off shotgun and announced, "This is a stick-up."

"I knew after they got in there we were in bad trouble," said Mrs. Trammell, now 70.

After hearing her husband's murder, she managed to slip one of her hands out of the handcuffs, push out a screen and crawl out a window.

She stumbled out into the cool night and hobbled in her slippers across a freshly plowed, muddy field.

Had the killers discovered her escape? She looked back at the house and saw no one.

Exhausted from the sedative and anguish, she crumpled in hiding near the bottom of a drainage ditch and fell asleep.

At 4 a.m. the next morning, she awoke to the sound of the newspaper delivery man calling out her husband's name.

"Vic..."

She looked over to see the smoldering remains of their house.

Her later testimony helped send Jerry Joe Bird of Corpus Christi to death row at the state penitentiary. The other robber, Emmett Leroy Korges of Corpus Christi, was handed a life prison term in a separate trial.

She is not unique in having lost a loved one at the hands of a killer later sentenced to die in return.

Two women and 165 men currently are under sentence of death in Texas. Some were convicted in multiple killings and others have additional charges pending.

SURVIVED TO TESTIFY — Ellen Trammell, 70, holds one of the some 100 antique moustache cups police recovered after two men broke into her Harlingen home, killed her husband and burned the dwelling in 1974. She escaped and testified at the trial which eventually sent one man to death row.

Unlike most surviving relatives, who can only imagine the trauma their family members suffered, Mrs. Trammell knows first hand the terrors that raced through her husband's mind before he died.

If the years have softened her pain, they have not diminished her hate. Her only regret is that Korges was spared the death sentence.

"At the time, I thought maybe he (Korges) wasn't quite as guilty. Now I feel like they should have both been burned," said the attractive blue-eyed widow, whose looks belie her age.

She married Trammell in 1947, after her first husband died in World War II.

"You wake up and your husband is gone. Your house is gone. It certainly makes you resentful," she said. "You think people like that should live to do it to somebody else? No way. If someone takes another life, especially something premeditated, I can't see any reason why they should live."

After a three-day hospital stay for exhaustion and a broken toe, Mrs. Trammell said her only thought was to catch the two men who tried to kill her.

Investigators brought her books of mugsshots in hopes she would recognize her assailants.

She did. Five days after the night of death and arson, Bird and Korges were arrested in Corpus Christi.

Some of the guns were recovered. Mrs. Trammell got back only a handful of the 100 antique moustache cups she had displayed in a corner cabinet.

Some friends let her move into their second home until she was ready to find a permanent home. Her daughter from Corpus Christi and a son in college came home to help her recover.

Like other crime victims, she was forced to re-live the tragedy from the witness stand in court.

She never shed tears during testimony at two trials.

"I didn't cry. I wouldn't let myself. They (the media) made a lot of that," she recounted.

The trials meant not only reconstructing the terrifying scenario but coming face-to-face with Bird and Korges.

"I'm sure his (Bird's) lawyers told him to stare at me. I just stared right back at him. I didn't feel intimidated," she said.

At one point, she was asked to identify her husband's killer with a tap on the shoulder.

"I must have gone over and hit him, since my friends told me afterward I really brought my hand down. You wouldn't touch a rattlesnake, and that's what I thought about him," she said.

Bird was convicted and sentenced to death. The case was overturned on appeal. Before Bird's retrial, Korges was found guilty and sent away for a life term.

Mrs. Trammell suffered a mild stroke after Korges' trial. Her doctor would not let her testify at Bird's second trial but prosecutors were allowed to use her statements from the original proceeding and sent Bird back to death row a second time.

"My health just about did me in. I was in good health before," she said. "My husband the stroke on the harrowing experience and first two trials."

She says she leads a quiet life now, reading and visiting close friends and family. She tries to put the events out of her mind, although she says she has gotten over her initial difficulty of talking about it.

"It's incredible the way they did it. They had it all planned," she said. "My husband tried to reason with them. He told them, 'Take everything, just leave us alone. Don't hurt us.'"

She asked the robbers why they were taping her eyes shut.

"They said, 'So the fuzz will know this is a professional job.' They had answers for everything," she said, shaking her head in disgust. "I told them at one point I had to go to the bathroom. He took the tape off my legs and let me go. He (Korges) forgot to put it back on and that helped me get away."

She said she had never felt afraid in their rather isolated homestead and often stayed there at night alone. The Trammells had moved to Harlingen in 1949 from California. He retired after a career in teaching and farming.

He enjoyed his gun collection. His killers apparently learned of it from seeing it at a gun show.

A year before his death, Trammell discovered some guns had been stolen from a barn behind their house. His wife feels the same men came back a second time for the rest of the loot.

She still owns the acreage surrounding the former homestead. It is leased for cultivation. She purchased a condominium five years ago in town to be near people.

The long appeals process in a death sentence case irritates Mrs. Trammell.

"I think there are too many loopholes. People wear it out," she said. "If they're going to sentence somebody to something, they should do it."

Sixteen go on trial for Dozier kidnapping

VERONA, Italy (AP) — Sixteen alleged members of the Red Brigades went on trial today for the kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier, but the defense attorneys obtained a week's adjournment to give them more time to study the 1,000-page indictment.

One of the defendants, 23-year-old Cesare di Lenardo, claimed he and other defendants had been tortured. Standing in the defendants' metal cage in the medieval courthouse, he displayed bruises on one hand and said, "If I could pull down my pants, I would show you signs of electric shock."

Prosecutor Guido Papaglia said all 16 defendants were indicted on two counts of terrorist kidnapping, which could get them a maximum of 30 years' imprisonment. But eight of the 16 have not been caught and are being tried in absentia.

One of the eight in custody, Ruggiero Volinia, 25, also was absent today. Under Italian law, defendants are not required to attend their own trial, and Volinia, who allegedly drove the getaway car after the kidnapping, chose to stay in his prison cell.

"Losing Hair?" Try This At No Risk"

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss...and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done". But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss, but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped. But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it's certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair—now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days—at their risk—if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail. ADV.

Witness says wrong man lynched

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An 83-year-old man who says he wants to clear the record before he dies claims the wrong person took the blame for the 1913 murder of a teen-age girl in a sensational Atlanta murder case.

Alonzo Mann of Bristol, Va., says he is certain Leo Frank, a Jewish pencil manufacturer, was innocent of the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan, the Tennesseean reported in a copyright story Sunday.

Mann, who worked as an office boy at the National Pencil Co. in Atlanta in 1913, said he believed Jim Conley, a black sweeper at the company and the key prosecution witness in the case, killed the young white girl April 26, 1913, for her $120 in wages to buy beer.

Conley, who died in 1962, maintained throughout the trial that he was with Frank when he disposed of the girl's body.

Frank was convicted and sentenced to death, but his sentence was commuted by Georgia Gov. John Marshall Slaton, the newspaper said. In August 1915, a group of vigilantes who called themselves the Knights of Mary Phagan stormed the Milledgeville, Ga., jail where Frank was held and dragged him out at gunpoint. Frank was lynched about 175 miles away in an oak grove near Marietta, Ga.

Hold-out juror not pressured, majority says

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A majority of jurors in the capital murder trial of Eroy Edward Brown did not try to force one hold-out juror to change her mind and acquit, the Texas Department of Corrections inmate, according to a statement released Sunday by six jurors.

Dorothy Kemp, 43, of Texas City said in a newspaper interview that she was "cussed at" by fellow jurors for refusing to join the majority and acquit Brown, who was accused of drowning Ellis Unit Warden Wallace Pack on April 4, 1981. "You talk about hollering and yelling," Mrs. Kemp said of the other jurors.

State district Court Judge Henry Dalehite declared a mistrial Thursday after the jury repeatedly told him they were "hopelessly deadlocked" and unable to reach a verdict.

"We did not want anyone to change their vote if they could not change how they felt in their heart; that's not the way our system was designed," said juror Al Chandler.

The jurors at the news conference refused to identify themselves and two others left before the news conference began. The remaining jurors could not be located, Chandler said.

The jury members issued a two-page written statement saying they were "pushed to the limit. When the blockbuster charge was presented to us, that's when the confusion began."

Seeded No. 1 in NCAA Tourney Tar Heels drop Virginia

By The Associated Press

Top-ranked North Carolina had just beaten Virginia in the title game of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament, and Coach Dean Smith was unhappy.

The Tar Heels claimed their 10th ACC title with a 47-45 victory over No. 3 Virginia Sunday afternoon, but a North Carolina stall that consumed 7½ minutes of play was a major topic of post-game questioning.

"Isn't it amazing?" Smith asked rhetorically. "We just had a great basketball game out there until eight minutes left to play, and that's all you want to talk about."

North Carolina led 44-41 with 8:44 to play with the help of four buckets by freshman Michael Jordan. Jeff Jones put Virginia within one point at 7:34, and neither team scored a basket until Cavaliers center Ralph Sampson hit a slam dunk at the buzzer.

In the meantime, North Carolina was in its four-corner offense — a euphemism for stall — and scored its final three points from the foul line, all by Matt Doherty.

"That's one of our offenses," Tar Heels forward James Worthy said of the four-corners. "We look for layups off back doors, and if we don't get those, we look for them to foul us."

Worthy led North Carolina, 27-2, with 16 points, all in the first half as the Tar Heels built a lead that grew to as many as 12 points, 24-12. At that point, Worthy had half of North Carolina's points, but the Cavaliers stormed back behind Sampson, their 7-foot-4 junior.

Both teams, along with No. 16 Wake Forest and North Carolina State, received NCAA tournament bids.

Two other conference titles — and NCAA berths — were decided Sunday. Freshman Keith Lee powered No. 13 Memphis State to a 73-62 victory over Louisville in the Metro Conference, and North Carolina A&T beat Howard 69-67 in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference.

Metro Conference

Lee, a 6-11 center, scored 27 points and grabbed 15 rebounds for Memphis State, which just squeaked into the Metro final with a 71-70 victory the day before over Virginia Tech.

Memphis State, 23-4, took a 61-45 lead with 9:33 left after outscoring Louisville 22-7 in a span of eight minutes. The Cardinals, who received an NCAA at-large berth, had not lost in the Metro tournament since 1979.

Tournament titles were decided in 18 conferences Saturday. The upsets were in the Southeastern Conference and the Eastern Eight. No. 18 Alabama defeated No. 15 Kentucky 48-46 at Lexington, Ky., in the SEC, and Pittsburgh won the Eastern Eight with a 79-72 victory over No. 9 West Virginia.

No. 5 Missouri won the Big Eight, sixth-rated Idaho won the Big Sky, No. 8 Georgetown won the Big East, 10th-ranked Tulsa won the Missouri Valley and 14th-ranked Arkansas won the Southwest. No. 7 Minnesota clinched the Big Ten title by beating Ohio State in their regular-season finale.

Southeastern

Eddie Phillips scored 13 points, including a basket with three seconds left, to pace Alabama, 23-6, over Kentucky. Kentucky, 22-7, was led by Dirk Minnifield with 11 points. Both teams, along with Tennessee, were selected for the NCAA tournament.

Eastern Eight

Clyde Vaughan scored 21 points as Pitt surprised West Virginia. The Panthers ran off a 19-7 burst late in the first half to win. West Virginia gained an at-large NCAA berth.

Big Eight

Ricky Frazier and Steve Stipanovich led Missouri to a 68-63 victory over Oklahoma. Frazier had 24 points, and Stipanovich 14 for Missouri, 25-3. Oklahoma was invited to the National Invitation Tournament.

Big Sky

Ken Owens scored 19 of his 27 points in the second half to boost Idaho over Nevada-Reno, 85-80. Nevada-Reno failed to get a post-season bid.

Big East

Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, who had 17 points, led Georgetown on a 28-7 burst down the stretch, and the 26-6 Hoyas blew past Villanova 72-54. Both teams, along with two others from the conference — St. John's and Boston College — received NCAA bids.

Missouri Valley

Bruce Vanley scored 21 points, 14 in the second half, as Tulsa erupted for a 90-77 Paul Pressey added 19 points for Tulsa, 24-5.

Southwest

Alvin Robertson's 23 points helped Arkansas beat Houston 84-69. Both teams were selected for the NCAA tournament field.

Big Ten

Center Randy Breuer scored a career-high 32 points to boost Minnesota past Ohio State, 87-75. Minnesota, Iowa, Indiana and Ohio State were selected from the Big Ten to participate in the NCAA tournament. No. 11 Iowa lost at Purdue, 66-65, in its regular-season finale.

NCAA tournament assembles strongest 48-team field ever

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — NCAA officials, breathing a sigh of relief over the lack of conference tournament upsets, believe they've assembled the strongest 48-team field ever for their national basketball championship.

At the same time, Dave Gavitt, commissioner of the Big East Conference and chairman of the NCAA Division I Basketball Committee, admitted Sunday that the tournament did not take in the nation's best 48 teams.

"But we're closer to having the best 48 than in recent history," Gavitt said in announcing the tournament pairings and seedings on national television. "We did not get many upset winners in post-season tournaments at all."

By majority vote of NCAA members, the committee is required to give automatic invitations to the champions of 28 conferences, leaving 20 at-large invitations. Most conferences, in an effort to get as many teams into the tournament as possible, stage post-season playoffs to determine their automatic qualifier. When teams that otherwise would not be considered get hot and win post-season tournaments, the result can be dilution of the field's overall strength.

But Gavitt believes that is not the case this year.

"This is the deepest and strongest field we've ever had," he said. "The word 'upset' no longer applies in the NCAA Tournament." In making the 20 at-large selections, he added, "there were some very close calls. Four or five years ago, teams with nine defeats, people would have said didn't belong in the tournament. Last year, our champion (Indiana) had nine losses."

North Carolina, DePaul, Virginia and Georgetown were named the top seeds in the four regionals. Geographically speaking, top-ranked North Carolina got the best deal and Georgetown, ranked No. 8 in The Associated Press Top 20, got the worst.

North Carolina is the top seed in the East Regional and never would have to leave its home state until the semifinals in New Orleans. Georgetown was assigned to the West Regional, about 3,000 miles from its Washington, D.C., campus.

Second-ranked DePaul is the top seed in the Midwest, and Virginia, ranked No. 3, is seeded first in the Midwest. Fourth-ranked Oregon State, the Pacific 10 Conference champion, is the No. 2 seed in the West.

Among the more notable teams left out and later picked up by the National Invitational Tournament were Bradley, 21-10, Iona, 24-8; Nevada-Las Vegas, 19-8, and San Diego State, 20-8.

The top four seeds in each region are given byes into the second round. The regional championships will be March 19-21 at Raleigh, N.C., in the East and at St. Louis in the Midwest. The semifinals and finals in the Midwest will be March 18-20 at Birmingham, Ala., and March 18-20 in Provo, Utah, in the West.

HE'S "POP" TO HIS TEAMMATES — Willie Stargell, left, of the Pittsburgh Pirates wears a grin as he is presented a cake on his 41st birthday Saturday in Bradenton, Fla. at the Buc's Pirate City training camp. This will probably be Willie's last season as an active player.

Stargell refuses to give up

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — "Sometimes," said Willie Stargell, "I think it would be nice to be a horse."

The hulking 41-year-old first baseman of the Pittsburgh Pirates sat in front of his locker, enmeshed in birthday greetings, and reflected on life generally and his baseball life particularly.

The laughing man, everybody's hero, everybody's friend, without an ugly strain in his 6-foot-3, 225-pound body, found himself in a rare somber mood.

This time two years ago he was the game's most celebrated athlete. The season before, a modern miracle at age 38, he had led the Pirates to the world championship, molding them into a tightly knit family unit and buoying them with his little gold stars for outstanding deeds and unflagging spirit.

Drawing youth from some hidden reservoir, he set the example in deeds as well as attitude, taking MVP honors both in the National League, which he shared with Keith Hernandez of the Cardinals, and the World Series and receiving broad acclaim as sports "Man of the Year."

Now aging, hurting and maybe a bit tired, he could look back only on two years in which he spent more time on the bench than in the field, causing him to ponder: Should he continue?

All day long, people of the press passed his locker and made inquiries: "How's the right knee?" "The injured ankle okay?" "The hamstring?" "That old sore thumb?"

"Would there ever be another '79 for Willie Stargell?"

"The tough thing about this business," said the Pirates' old field leader, "is that you are always having to explain why you do good and why you do bad."

"That's the reason I envy the horse."

He laboriously pulled the white stirrup socks over his knees and picked up one of his seven pairs of cleated shoes.

"Horses are strong and they have a great heart," he continued. "They go out and run their guts out. Only one of them wins. But they're all cooled off and taken back to their stalls."

"They don't have to explain anything. They just stand there and gulp oats or hay. Ballplayers are like horses. They are thoroughbreds, too. All of them want to win, do good. But they've always got to explain."

"You know what I think? Horses really can talk. They just don't let the people know it, so they won't be bothered."

"Every day at noon everybody ought to stop what they're doing," he said, "meditate for a minute — say a little prayer."

Old "Pops," as they call him, is a rare human being with gifts far beyond his athletic endowments.

Nicklaus hunts for 69th career victory

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus had planned a fishing trip today.

Those plans were canceled.

Instead, he's going hunting, hunting for the 69th victory of his matchless career.

"I've played well all year, but this is the best shot I've had so far," Nicklaus said Sunday after he'd taken a one-shot lead over veteran Ray Floyd in the storm-disrupted third round of the $300,000 Bay Hill Golf Club championship.

Due to earlier weather delays and postponements, a double round of 36 holes had been scheduled Sunday to complete the tournament. But along came another thunderstorm. It caused a delay of almost four hours, made the completion of a double round impossible and set back the final 18 holes until today.

Although it wiped out Nicklaus' planned fishing trip off the Florida Keys, it didn't really bother him.

"I'll take a win any way I can get it," said the man who holds almost all the records worth having, but who has gone without a victory since taking the 1980 PGA national championship.

"I've been in contention in every tournament I've played this year, but this is my best shot," Nicklaus said after he'd compiled a third round 67, 4-under-par on the rain-soaked 7,089-yard Bay Hill Club course.

His 203 total, 10 under par, was a single stroke better than Floyd, who trailed by three late in the day but trimmed Jack's margin with a birdie-birdie finish in chilly, gusty winds. That closing burst put Floyd in with a 66, matching the best round of the tournament.

"I'm tickled to death," he said. "We all know who Jack is, and you just can't afford to let him get too big a lead."

Floyd, however, was the only man within three shots. South African Denis Watson, in his second full year of competition on the tour, was third at 206 after a 69.

Dave Eichelberger, who holed a full 8-iron shot for a remarkable par on the first hole, and PGA champion Larry Nelson were next at 207. Eichelberger, a former winner here, had a 67 and Nelson 69.

Tied at 208 were Jerry Pate, Lanny Wadkins and Woody Blackburn, who moved up with a 68. Pate, twice a runnerup this season, and Wadkins each shot 70 in the difficult playing conditions.

Nicklaus is playing well. He's missed by a single stroke in two starts, was third in another and was in contention through three rounds last week.

But he hasn't won.

"I'd like to win," he said. "I'd like to get it over with. Besides, I don't want to have to answer all those questions about 'why haven't you won?' when I get to Augusta."

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Third round scores Sunday in the $300,000 Bay Hill Golf Classic on the 7,089 yard, par 71 Bay Hill Club course:

Jack Nicklaus	66-67-62-203
Ray Floyd	66-70-66-206

McEnroe wearies of constant fan abuse

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Weary of fan abuse, John McEnroe says the American public only sees him in a black hat — never in red, white and blue.

"Here I am out there playing for my country — in my own country — and the fans, some of them, are cheering for the other guy," McEnroe complained Sunday after the United States completed a 4-1 triumph over India in first-round Davis Cup play.

"I am not John McEnroe when I am playing Davis Cup. I am the United States of America," said the star of the defending U.S. team.

The temperamental 23-year-old, currently the world's top-ranked player, aired his frustration after an incident that almost cost him a second penalty point in three days.

It came during the third set of McEnroe's 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 victory over Ramesh Krishnan.

With the games tied at 4-4, McEnroe stalked to the edge of the stands and glared at a heckler for almost a full minute.

"I didn't say a word to the guy but the umpire assumed I had," he said, explaining the penalty point.

U.S. team captain Arthur Ashe appealed on those grounds and the penalty was rescinded, but McEnroe wasn't totally pacified.

"In any other country in the world, the fans would have been rooting for a complete destruction of the other team. Here, they root for the underdog, even at the expense of patriotism," he said.

McEnroe was levied a penalty point in his 6-4, 9-7, 7-5 victory Friday over India's ace, Vijay Amritraj, for making remarks.

Davis Cup rules prohibit players from talking to anyone other than the captain.

The U.S. squad, passing its first test since beating Argentina for the Cup in December, advances against Sweden in a second-round test later this summer at a site yet to be determined.

The Americans bolted to an unbeatable lead over India with two victories in Friday's singles and a doubles triumph on Saturday.

Eliot Teltscher overpowered Krishnan 6-3, 6-3, 6-4 Friday and McEnroe and Peter Fleming teamed up to defeat Amritraj and his brother Anand in doubles.

Vijay Amritraj prevented a sweep by upsetting Teltscher, No. 7 in the world, Sunday 7-5, 6-3.

Hagler KO's 'Caveman' Lee

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—"We want Hearns! We want Hearns!" chanted Marvin Hagler's fans, who had very little chance to cheer their hero during his defense of the undisputed middleweight title against William "Caveman" Lee.

It took Hagler 67 seconds Sunday to get rid of Lee, who still seemed confused at the post-fight press conference when he said, "I just got caught with a lucky punch."

The 25-year-old Lee got caught with everything Hagler threw, was knocked down and lost when referee Larry Hazzard stopped the fight by grabbing Lee to keep him from falling through the ropes after he got hit by two smashing rights to the head.

That set Hagler's fans at the Bally's Park Place Casino Hotel to chanting for Hearns, who was at ringside.

Hagler also wants Hearns, the former World Boxing Association welterweight champion, who has won twice as a middleweight.

"Hearns is next in our contract," said Hagler, who will be 30 May 23. "We have a signed contract. I'm looking forward to the big fight, the big money."

"A fight against Marvin would be a very tough fight, but I feel like I'm a much better fighter," said Hearns.

Hearns, who also appeared at the post-fight press conference, said he expected to fight Hagler in the next couple of months. Although agreements have been reached in principle, the money reportedly still is to be raised. Hagler is asking $5 million and Hearns $3.5 million.

With win over Houston

Hogs capture SWC

DALLAS (AP)—The Arkansas Razorbacks got their wish: They'll be coming back to Reunion Arena.

After the Razorbacks earned the Southwest Conference basketball tournament championship with an 84-69 victory over Houston Saturday night they were hoping for a bye into the Midwest Regional second round in Dallas.

They had some 10,000 fans in the stands each night of the SWC tournament and hoped their followers would get to come to Dallas again.

That's exactly what they got. They will play the winner of Friday night's Kansas State-Northern Illinois game next Sunday afternoon.

Houston also was rewarded for its fine season by drawing a first round Thursday night game against Alcorn State in Tulsa. Should the Cougars beat Alcorn, they will play Tulsa on Saturday.

DePaul also will be in Dallas on Sunday, meeting the winner of the Boston College-San Francisco game on Friday night.

Texas A&M, third-place finisher in the SWC, on Sunday was selected for the National Invitation Tournament in New York City. A&M hosts Lamar at 7:30 p.m. CST Wednesday in the first round of the NIT. Lamar finished second in the Southland Conference.

Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton was the center of attention both during and after Saturday night's game in which he drew two technical fouls for his sideline antics. He said he may have gone too far.

"I lost my cool, I admit that," said Sutton. "I've only had one technical foul all season long but I deserved those two tonight. I felt it was a horrible call."

A blocking call on Keith Peterson in the first half triggered a Sutton explosion that saw him tear off his coat and fling it into the Arkansas bench area.

"I regret the way I said some things out there but what I said was right," Sutton said.

Houston guard Rob Williams said Sutton was just trying to get the referees on his side.

"He always does that," said Williams. "He has a knack for getting the officials to lean his way. But he's a great coach and you have to admire a guy like that."

Houston Coach Guy Lewis said "The tactic has worked so many times before for him that I guess it's a good tactic."

"I believe coaches ought to have to stay in their chair the entire game except for times out. I think that would improve the game of basketball."

Exhibition season begins Wednesday

This is a time of the year filled with anticipation for baseball teams working out in spring training. Exhibition games begin in earnest this week and for those clubs still on the sidelines, the start can't come soon enough.

"I can't wait to begin," said Pat Corrales, new manager of the Philadelphia Phillies. "Everybody's ready."

Corrales' club must wait a couple of more days before beginning exhibition games with a pair of contests against Toronto Wednesday and Thursday. The manager has lined up his pitchers for those two games, opening with a pair of regulars, Dick Ruthven and Larry Christenson.

"We'll also use some of the other guys out of the bullpen in these and the early spring games," Corrales said. "We've got the numbers in the bullpen and we have to get some answers."

Rain Sunday washed out the Phillies' workout at their base in Clearwater, Fla. The same thing happened at Winter Haven, Fla., where Boston has lost two straight days of work. Still, Manager Ralph Houk remains optimistic about the progress his pitchers have made.

"For them, it has been outstanding," Houk said. "We haven't had any setbacks at all, and that's important in early spring. I don't like the fact that the hitters don't get a chance to face live pitching in game situations. But at this point, it shouldn't really matter that much. Besides, the pitchers are always ahead of the hitters for the first three games."

Houk would rather have the Red Sox playing than sitting right now. "But I think if you ask me on July 2 if missing these two simulated games hurt the

from the CARROLL RIGHTEER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MAR. 9, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Despite an early morning annoyance you can easily attain your personal desires later in the day. Make yourself available to new contact who can be helpful to you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Avoid an irate associate in the morning and then the rest of the day goes smoothly for you. Be more positive minded.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Do necessary work early in the day and then get in touch with higher-ups for the advice you need. Strive for happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can make progress where new situations of importance are concerned. New allies can be helpful to you now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try not to lose your temper in a family dispute even though you could be right. Show more affection for loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Know what is expected of you by associates and then you can coordinate efforts most intelligently. Use common sense.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study career matters and plan to handle assignments wisely. Do something to build up your strength. Relax tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to engage in recreational activities that you enjoy. Bring your best skills to the attention of higher-ups.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Ideal day to entertain persons who can help you get ahead in your line of endeavor. A new project needs more study.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Arrange a meeting with key persons so you can advance more quickly. The evening should be quiet and restful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Finding a better method of operating can pave the way to greater success. Be sure to cut down on unnecessary expenses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You may feel at a low ebb in the morning but the rest of the day you can accomplish a great deal. Express happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to obtain the truth of a situation that is puzzling to you. Make sure your work is done before engaging in recreation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she should be taught humanitarianism to go along the desire to get ahead. A good education must be provided in order to achieve success. Don't neglect religious training. Be sure to expose to sports and teach fair play. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Reduce muscle tension to ease headache

DALLAS (AP) - A 57-year-old Dallas man was wracked by severe headaches for 17 years, the pain more prolonged and intense each year.

But he says that by using techniques taught at the pain clinic at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School, he has been able to ward off mild headaches and has not suffered a severe headache since December.

The clinic battles headaches with a host of innovative techniques, ranging from self hypnosis to biofeedback. The latest techniques reduce muscle tension when the skin temperature is raised.

Almost everyone has headaches sometime, but most cases are mild, says Dr. James Lipton, a psychologist and member of the pain clinic team.

"Some patients are in sheer misery," Lipton said. "It hurts like hell. I've seen grown men in tears over these headaches. They develop a fear of pain of future headaches. They become fearful of going out. Their lives become rather circumspect."

The exact cause of the headache is unknown, but its symptoms are familiar. In tension headaches, the muscles in the head and neck become tense. In migraines, blood vessels to the head first constrict, then dilate and swell. There is pain - and flickering vision, nausea, and light-headedness. The migraine can last a few hours, or several days.

"Headaches are tough to work with," Lipton said. "There's little information on how to treat them. Working with headache patients takes a tremendous amount of time."

Chronic headaches are not treated with medication at the clinic, but rather with techniques that can be learned and implemented by the patient.

Patients are taught to use their imaginations to reduce muscle tension and raise their skin temperatures. Relaxation therapy also eases muscle tension.

"It's a form of self-hypnosis," Lipton said. "There is a production of an altered state of sensitivity to both internal and external stimulation."

Patients learn to tighten their muscles, starting at the feet and eventually working up to the head. Then the muscles are relaxed until the body goes numb.

"Their heart beats, but they can no longer feel it," Lipton said. "They don't feel the ring on their finger. They don't feel the slacks on their legs."

Biofeedback equipment can measure skin temperature and muscle tension, allowing patients to learn what thoughts and relaxation methods enable them to relax the muscles that trigger headaches and raise their body temperatures.

TIPS FOR ENERGY SAVERS
How to Save Electricity Before It Comes To You

During late afternoon and early evening hours, the load on the nation's electrical systems usually reaches its peak. To meet the heavy demand, electric utilities often must use back-up generating equipment that is not energy efficient.

Try to use energy-intensive appliances such as dishwashers, clothes washers and dryers, and electric ovens in the early morning or late evening hours to help reduce that peak load.

This energy-saving tip is brought to you by the classified advertising department in the interest of energy conservation. To save on your rent, piece your ad in the classified section. CALL 263-7331 Herald Classifieds Get Results! BIG SPRING HERALD

X-rated rock 'n' roll causes some objections

LOS ANGELES (AP) - When a group calling itself People Against Obscenity posted a picket line outside a Pasadena radio station to protest broadcast of a song called "Johnny Are You Queer?" longtime listeners had to laugh.

The amusement was not so much over the reaction to a tune in which singer Josie Cotten wonders aloud about a young man's sexual preferences, but more because of the many songs the station has played without drawing a single demonstrator.

Rock 'n' rollers have had their problems with censors since the first electric guitar was plugged into an outlet. It's hardly surprising, since rock's roots are in the earthy rhythm-and-blues.

Elvis Presley's songs were banned in some communities; in the 1960s, the Rolling Stones were considered daring when they recorded a tune called "Let's Spend the Night Together."

Have things changed much since then? Once-demure Olivia Newton-John drew protests from some radio stations for her recent song, "Physical," because of its suggestive language - "Let me hear your body talk" - but that didn't stop the tune from becoming a No. 1 hit. And the J. Geils Band's current chart-topper about a high school sweatshirt who took it all off.

"Centerfold," has been widely played on radio. On the other hand, most radio stations won't touch songs with outright obscenities: San Francisco-based Romeo Void's "Never Say Never" is frowned on not so much because of its catchy refrain - "I might like you better if we slept together" - but because of its off-handed use of a certain expletive.

What's new in the field of controversial music is not so much that it exists, but that in the last year or two it appears to be gaining more acceptance by major record companies.

Two years ago, Warner Bros. Records released Marianne Faithfull's Grammy nominated-LP, "Broken English," which included a track with extremely strong language, "Why D'Ya Do It." Another Warner Bros. artist, Prince, has earned considerable critical acclaim for his amalgamation of rock, rhythm-and-blues and provocative lyrics - for instance, on a tune called "Head."

Cortez Thompson, the company's national promotion director for black music, says that particular song got only "minimal" airplay, but did become a hit in dance clubs. "Lyrics have changed with the times," he says. "Language in movies today definitely is not the same as it was a few years ago."

Networks launch third try

Audiences yelling, 'Cut,' all during this TV season

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Cut...That stinks...Do it again. That's a universal refrain from directors, and, in a sense, it applies to 1981-82 television. All season long, the ultimate directors, the viewers, have been panning Hollywood's product.

Through mid-February, the networks lost four percent of their share of the prime-time audience, as compared to the season before.

Figures from the Ted Bates Advertising Agency reflect that only 84 percent of the viewing audience watched an average minute of prime time on ABC, CBS and NBC this season. Most of the loss comes from NBC's dismal ratings, with the missing audience turning to movies and sports on cable and independent stations.

The networks are launching their third season, experimenting for the fall with more new programs. The old-new programs have fared poorly. The highest rated, CBS' "Falcon Crest," ranks 13th, but even test patterns would benefit from a lead-in from top-rated "Dallas."

The only new shows to crack the top 40 are "Fall Guy" (26th), "Bret Maverick" (29th), "Father Murphy" (35th) and "Love, Sidney" (39th).

The first two shows to debut in March, however, were, at least, innovative: the TV detective spoof, "Police Squad," and the multi-character "Chicago Story."

Will the other new shows continue this trend?
Monday: CBS unveils two sitcoms April 5. "Report to Murphy" features Michael Keaton as an idealistic parole officer who takes chances with his ex-convicts. "Making the Grade" stars James Naughton as dean of a tough St. Louis high school.

Tuesday: ABC's "Joanie Loves Chachi" begins March 23. It's another spinoff from "Happy Days," starring Scott Baio and Erin Moran. Joanie and Chachi move to Chicago to play music in a night club. That same night, CBS tries something different with Sam Waterson as an American professor who travels to England in 1912 to study science. The series is created by John Hawkesworth ("Upstairs, Downstairs").

Wednesday: The movie "Love Bug" comes to CBS March 17 as a series. Dean Jones and a Volkswagen, "Baker's Dozen," about two undercover cops who are in love, debuts the same night on CBS.

Thursday: ABC offers "Police Squad" and "9 to 5," based on the movie and being produced by Jane Fonda in her first foray into television. It debuts March 25, as does CBS' "Cagney and Lacey," about the on- and off-duty lives of two female police partners.

Friday: Until "Dallas" goes to reruns, nothing on NBC or ABC would get a fair chance. The only change is NBC's "Friday Night Movie," replacing low-rated "Cassie & Co" and "McClain's Law."

Saturday: NBC debuted "Chicago Story" March 6 and ABC unveils William Shatner as "Sgt. Hooker" March 13.

Sunday: Dick Clark's "Inside America" on ABC April 4 is a softer magazine than its time-slot competition, "60 Minutes."

Services set

Tuesday for

Ayn Rand

NEW YORK (AP) — Services will be held Tuesday for novelist Ayn Rand, who in her novels "The Fountainhead" and "Atlas Shrugged" extolled selfishness as the ultimate virtue and advocated boundless individualism and capitalism.

Miss Rand, who died Saturday of natural causes at her Manhattan home at age 77, once said, "My philosophy, in essence, is the concept of man as a heroic being, with his own happiness as the moral purpose of his life, with productive achievement as his noblest activity and reason as his only absolute."

She stressed she did not advocate the "pursuit of mindless self-interest at any cost." Rather, her philosophy of objectivism held that only individual ability and effort produce results, and that unrestricted capitalism best promotes individual freedom.

Miss Rand was born in Russia in 1905 and graduated from the University of Leningrad in 1924. Two years later she came to the United States, where she worked in Hollywood as an extra and screenwriter.

She married Charles Francis O'Connor, an artist, in 1929. He died in 1979.

After moving to New York she wrote screenplays for several studios. In 1937 she worked without pay as a typist for the architect Ely Jacques Kahn so she could gather information for what became "The Fountainhead," published in 1943, the story of an architect who blows up a construction project when his design for it was adulterated by others.

The book was made into a film, for which Miss Rand wrote the screenplay, starring Gary Cooper and Patricia Neal.

After "Atlas Shrugged" was published in 1957, she turned her energies to nonfiction books "The Virtue of Selfishness," published in 1965, and "Capitalism: The Unknown Ideal," in 1966.

The last manuscript she completed before her death will be published as "Philosophy: Who Needs It" in November.

She served as editor of The Objectivist, a monthly journal, from 1962 to 1971 and wrote The Ayn Rand Letter from 1971 to 1976.

Her public appearances in the 1970s made her a cult figure among students who believed in libertarian philosophy. But in 1976 she spurned libertarians in a letter to The New York Times as a "random collection of emotional hippies-of-the-right who seek to play at politics without philosophy."

Her last public appearance was in November in New Orleans at a conference sponsored by the National Committee for Monetary Reform.

Miss Rand had no immediate survivors.
