CONCERNED CITIZENS PROTEST 'BOAT TAX' — Over 100 unhappy Howard County residents turned up at the tax appraisal district board meeting Wednesday to protest recent appraisals on boats. Bill Chrane, one of the organizers of a petition against boat appraisals, is seen addressing the seated board and the crowd. Board President Roy Watkins, is standing (left) with his back to the camera.

Boat owners grill tax appraisal board

Nearly 100 angry Howard County residents crowded into a muggy county courtroom Wednesday afternoon to fire question after question at the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal District board and the district's chief appraiser concerning possible taxes on boats and other personal property.

The citizens, primarily boat owners, attended the board meeting to protest forms they had received appraising their water craft. A belief they were being singled out for an unnecessary and avoidable tax prompted most to attend, based on numerous comments made during the marathon session.

FOLLOWING NEARLY two hours of heated queries and pointed accusations in addition to the board's regular business session, the board approved a motion around 5:30 p.m. from one of the members, Clay Reid, to undertake a two-year feasibility study. The study would determine whether or not to place boats, recreational vehicles and other personal property on the tax rolls. The board met in closed executive session before taking action.

Board President Roy Watkins said the chief appraiser, F.E. "Gene" Pereira, would conduct the study.

Steve Chrane, who had called for Pereira's dismissal in a letter to The Herald Sunday, told reporters boat owners were satisfied with the board's action.

The board's effort came after board members and Pereira fielded demanding questions from an often-hostile audience who supported its members with applause and cries of "Amen." Answers from the board or chief appraiser and questions from the crowd were often cut short as people interrupted each other with other questions and more answers.

The board itself erupted occasionally into internal squabbles between members or between members and the chief appraiser.

The disorganized and occasional unruly question-and-answer session had begun with Pereira explaining he sent rendition forms to boat owners because of his understanding of the law.

"I have checked everything carefully and I would violate the law if I did not send out renditions," Pereira said.

"Nobody can challenge me on that," he added.

But challenge they did with a flurry of questions ranging from where Pereira got the addresses of boat owners to whether beer joints as recreation were going to be taxed next. Many of the "questions" were not seeking answers; they were accusations directed towards Pereira.

ONE PERSON SAID, "It is left up to the county tax board to decide on taxing boats" while another cried "Mr. Pereira has taken it upon himself to do it." Yet another stated "He hasn't sent taxes on others; why us?" to the murmured "Amens" and other rumbles of approval.

Other voices from the crowd accused the chief appraiser of upping the expenses of the appraisal district.

Board President Watkins momentarily stemmed the questions, saying, "You're picking on the chief appraiser unfairly." He told the crowd the board is only a part of the taxing entities set up to help accomplish the county-wide reappraisal. The crowd's reply was that the board could stop the taxing of boats.

Pereira stepped in to say "We're charged with appraising property; it's the local (taxing) entities who are required to calculate the tax rates. You people can recall the tax with a roll-back election. We operate under Senate Bill 621 — the board has to follow it."

At this point, Steve Chrane presented the board with a petition opposing the boat appraisal containing 577 names. He then read from the Texas Constitution and said Pereira was "picking out of context" items from the state property tax code.

Steve and Bill Chrane, owners of a local boat dealership, had organized the petition drive and had prepared statements during the meeting which they presented.

Many citizens objected to the boat renditions as a new tax. As one man said, "You're adding new items to the tax roll. That's where our objections lie. We'd like an answer to that. If it's not mandated, we don't want it done."

A woman added, "We're upset about taxes on our personal recreation. You come down on boats, RVs, golf carts and maybe raise some taxes — everybody gets stirred up."

An elderly woman spoke for many at the meeting when she told the board taxes were hurting senior citizens. "This boat tax is hitting us hard. We look forward to taking it easy, but we can't even afford to go fishing if we're taxed to the limit. There's no recreation in the county anyway," she said.

The board was then pressed for individual responses to the question of the necessity of the boat appraisals. Board president Watkins repeated his belief the renditions are under the law, but said the question of the feasibility of doing boat appraisal had to be considered.

BOARD MEMBER Jack Watkins stated flatly he knew nothing of the boat renditions. "There is a lack of communication between the chief appraiser and the board and we're caught in the squeeze. Our opinion was not sought in this matter."

Reid said he was unaware of the boat renditions until a reporter called him about them. "I attended three meetings ... and never heard a word said about them. But

Three men appointed to board of review

By MIKE DOWNEY

Despite being shaken from their usual placid meeting by concerned citizens, the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal Board appointed three members to the Board of Review for 1982-83. Gerald Harris of Big Spring was approved for a one-year term while J.M. Sterling of Vincent and Jimmy Ray Smith of Big Spring were tapped for two-year terms.

In other action, the board learned from Chief Appraiser F.E. "Gene" Pereira the county-wide reappraisal could be ready for use by the taxing entities this year. "We can do it by June or July with some overtime, but it will contain a certain amount of errors," Pereira said.

While noting a completed appraisal should save money and that the entities wanted the new tax rolls, Pereira said he needed authorization for some $27,000 in overtime costs. The board decided to take action on the matter at the next meeting.

The board opened bids for a depository for the appraisal district's funds and awarded the bid to State National Bank. The depository term is to be for two years.

An audit report of the district's funds by CPA Maxwell Green revealed the district "doesn't have much of an accounting system," in Green's words. Green suggested the district buy time on the county computer for its full-fledged controlled system and general ledger.

Board member Jack Watkins presented a plan for the recording of daily mileage reports by appraisal district personnel to take the place of the $250 car allowance. After lively discussion, the motion was voted down after the board conceded the plan could be acted upon in the 1982-1983 budget.

Watkins maintained taxpayers' money was being paid out to persons not driving their cars. Lila Estes said the board "can't pull the rug out from under them now." Pereira added that some people would leave if the allowance was cut.

The board also heard from Pereira that computer time was readily available for the district office. He affirmed "good cooperation" existed between the district office and the county tax assessor-collector's office.

I'm not going to be a party to ripping people off."

After she thanked everyone for attending, Lila Estes stated the board's function: "We are not making the decision to tax. All we do is appraise — to get the value of something — so it'll be fair to everybody. The different entities will decide whether to tax or not."

Board member Billy T. Smith was unable to explain his position on the boat renditions due to the next onslaught of questions.

Many of the boat-owners expressed dissatisfaction about being singled out for appraisal and taxation. As one woman holding a baby said, "We resent you selectively assessing values on visible recreation." Another person questioned why anything recreational was taxed at all.

Pereira interjected into the rising babble of voices that, according to the law, "I cannot extend preferential treatment to any one class." The tumult quieted while Roy Watkins read at the request of Steve Chrane, three letters concerning boats and the state property tax code.

Following the reading, the Chrane unleashed their attacks.

Steve: "One man is calling the shots here and he's under you people (the board). Why don't we decide about the boats before we spend the money on appraising them?"

Bill: "The board had no earthly idea he was going to do this. He (Pereira) overstepped his authority. We ask the board not to render boats. We have no qualms with the board; we think one man is running this. The board should re-appraise the man."

After these salvos, the questions increased in intensity concerning the fairness and feasibility of the boat and other personal property renditions. Pereira answered a charge that he was "raising money" by saying he did not assess taxes. The session ended following an announcement from Board President Watkins that the board was going into its regular business meeting.

Telephone cable cut

Telephone service to Big Spring and the surrounding area was disrupted today at 8:15 a.m. when a "main feeder cable" between Big Spring and Midland was cut, according to a Southwestern Bell spokesman.

Although local service was still intact, long distance service into and out of Big Spring was out. Bell estimated the service would be restored by 6 p.m. today.

The Herald's Associated Press printer and photo receiver were out of service this morning, due to the cut cable.

Devilish statements hard to trace

'Satanic seal' rumors fly

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

The scenario for the rumor is always the same: "Sally heard from Uncle Bill's fishing buddy that the president of Procter and Gamble was on the Phil Donohue show and said the company's seal of the half-moon and stars glorified Satan and made them rich."

Is one of the largest corporations in America a den of Satanic worshippers? Did a Procter and Gamble spokesman make such a claim on national television? Did Phil Donohue have anything to say in outrage?

The answer to all these questions is, of course, no.

A Procter and Gamble representative has never appeared on the Phil Donohue Show, the Merv Griffin Show, or any of the daytime talk shows — nighttime either. Therefore, the "Satanic seal" statement was never made on television. Speaking of the seal, it does not represent — nor has it ever represented — anything to do with the worship of the devil.

The Herald's investigation began with a phone call from Beverly Hall, 1709 Purdue, with an Action-Reaction question. Mrs. Hall wanted a transcript from a Donohue show she had heard about in which a P & G official had made the Satanic remarks.

"Donohue" is carried in the area by KMD-TV (Channel 2) in Midland. A call to the programming director revealed no show fitting the description of Satan with P & G had ever been broadcast. Since the show is syndicated and shown on a five-week delay, the director checked the upcoming shows, but no Procter and Gamble officials.

The next call was to Chicago, Ill., to the Phil Donohue Show. A spokeswoman in the production department said, "No people from Procter and Gamble have ever been on the show. This stuff has been going on for six months or so." She said the rumor had been rampant in the area a few months before.

SATANIC SYMBOL? — This "Moon and Stars" trademark has been the official seal of Procter & Gamble since 1859. Recently, rumors have circulated around the country that the logo represents devil worship or satanism.

Mrs. Hall also suspected the devilish statement may have been on the Merv Griffin show so the Herald next called Los Angeles, Calif., for Merv Griffin Productions. Two of Merv's minions had plenty to say about the so-called Satanic P & G official, noting no one had ever admitted actually seeing the show he was supposedly on.

Andrew Goldsmith, on the production staff, said "No one from Procter and Gamble was ever on 'Merv' so the statement was never made. We had a couple of calls today about it, but most of everything was earlier (in the year)."

A member of the show's public relations staff, Fred Silverman, said the "wild rumors" had been around for several months, but no P & G people were ever on the show.

Silverman said most of the furor with the Satanic issue had already passed. "In fact, a couple of months ago, the L.A. Times did a big story and talked to all of the talk shows, Davidson and everybody, but no appearance on any show by anyone saying anything about a 'Satanic seal; it's just a rumor."

Silverman added that Procter and Gamble had come out with "a bunch of literature explaining their seal" that had been sent to several newspapers and other media. He felt the company was probably overreacting.

As the center of this controversy is Procter and Gamble, the next logical call was to the corporate headquarters of P & G in Cincinnati, Ohio. The response to the Herald's explanation of the seal and Satan was an explosive "That's a lie!" from a company representative.

Carol Boyd said this was her tenth call in 32 minutes concerning the P & G official saying the seal glorified Satan. She verified no official ever made such a statement primarily because it wasn't true. "We've had rumors like this going back to 1851. This one started about three or four months ago, before Christmas; it even got to Washington."

The company received 6,000 inquiries about the seal last month alone, according to Ms. Boyd. She noted an explanation of the seal was available from the company adding "Mr. Procter picked it" in the 1850's.

Rumors have plagued the company before. "Three or four years ago, everybody thought the Rev. Sun Myung Moon (leader of the 'Moonies') had bought Procter & Gamble and the moon was him," she said.

Where had the rumor started and why? "No one knows," Ms. Boyd said. "We'll never know."

Sources say Williams may resign from Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harrison A. Williams Jr., fighting what even his backers say is a losing battle against expulsion from the Senate, has tentatively decided to resign, knowledgeable congressional sources say.

One source said the 62-year-old New Jersey Democrat, who has waged a 7-month campaign against a recommendation that he be expelled because of his convictions in the Abscam case, has told at least one congressman he intends to resign.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said there is still a slight possibility Williams might change his mind before the Senate votes on the expulsion resolution which, if approved, could make him the first senator to be expelled since the Civil War. Williams was described as being distraught over his situation and that has accounted for his hesitation about his intentions, sources said.

Publicly, the 23-year veteran of the Senate said Wednesday that he would continue to fight expulsion.

"Right now, I'm not thinking about resignation," Williams said on the fifth day of Senate hearings on his case. An aide added that Williams has "no intention of resigning."

It could not be determined whether Williams would resign before the Senate votes on a proposal that he be censured, a lesser penalty that has been urged by those who argue that he was the victim of FBI and prosecutorial abuse.

The Senate had been expected to

Baby girl swallows pills

A 19-month-old girl was rushed to Malone-Hogan Hospital by police officers yesterday after she swallowed an unknown amount of pills, according to police reports.

Police said they received a call shortly before noon reporting that the baby, Melissa Huckabee, had accidentally swallowed the pills.

After contacting Shaffer Ambulance Service and learning that their ambulances were tied up answering other calls, police officers then rushed the baby from the 208 N.E. Seventh Huckabee home to Malone-Hogan Hospital, said Sgt. J.D. Carter.

Officer Gary Parker carried the baby in his cruiser along with the 13-year-old babysitter who had notified police of the baby's problem, Carter said. Carter drove ahead in his own cruiser to provide an escort.

On the way to the hospital the baby stopped breathing, according to Carter. Hospital emergency room personnel are credited with saving Melissa's life since they knew in advance that the baby was being rushed to the hospital and were able to administer immediate aid when Parker and the baby arrived.

The baby's stomach was pumped and she was given oxygen, Carter said. A hospital spokeswoman said the baby was in fine condition this morning and was scheduled to be returned home today.

'Boll Weevils' face tough votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A resolution to increase the spending by committee staffs is the latest in a series of "hard" votes that the House Democratic leadership has insisted upon, a conservative Democratic congressman says.

"I, for one, am getting tired of it. These kind of votes hurt us, either with our leadership or with the people back home, and we don't like to take them," he added Wednesday, requesting anonymity.

The result of the leadership's no-compromise stance — dating back to last year's economic battles — is that in order to represent their constituents, many Boll Weevils have been forced to vote with Republican rather than Democratic leaders, he said.

He and other members of the "Boll Weevil" coalition — formally known as the Conservative Democratic Forum — cheered Wednesday's decision by Democratic leaders to pull back the resolution before a vote.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, the CDF chairman, said the increase should never have been proposed.

"It was unfortunate we were even scheduled to have a vote on a resolution calling for increases of some $4 million for committees of the House at a time we are having to consider cuts of terrible consequences," Stenholm said.

There is a growing perception back home of unfairness in the cuts made by Congress and the administration, Stenholm said — a perception that Congress is willing to cut programs for the people, but not programs that benefit Congress itself.

"There were a large number of Democrats that were not going to be voting for it. It was an error having that choice presented to us," Stenholm said.

Boll Weevils met Wednesday morning to discuss the issue, and Stenholm said there was widespread agreement that Congress should be cutting expenses, not raising them.

Stenholm, on behalf of the CDF, asked the Democratic leadership Wednesday for an opportunity to meet quickly in an effort to reach a compromise, but was turned down.

"They made the very good argument that this was the will of the committee," Stenholm said.

At the time, Democratic leaders also apparently felt they had the votes for a victory despite the opposition of the Boll Weevils.

Assuming a bloc vote of the 191 Republicans, it takes 26 Democratic defections to overcome the Democrats' 52-vote edge in the 435-member House of Representatives.

Defections by Boll Weevils were assumed from the start, House Speaker Tip O'Neill said, but he said he had been assured at least 25 Republicans would support the resolution. The resolution was jerked after a GOP liaison informed him that the 25 had dwindled to 10.

Democratic leaders could have had a victory, instead of another embarrassment, had they been willing to talk compromise with Boll Weevils, said Rep. Buddy Roemer, D-La.

"We in the Boll Weevils really wanted to work with the leadership on this, but we asked them earlier today to meet with us, and we were turned down flat," Roemer said.

"After today, I'm hopeful that next time they'll take us up."

"The Boll Weevils, like Congress, are made up of a variety of people and if we had been able to sit down with the leadership and work out a reasonable compromise, they would have found quite a bit of support from us on this," Roemer said.

Show of evidence wins rave reviews

Proves outside direction in El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's presentation of evidence to support its assertion that the insurgency in El Salvador is being directed from other countries has won a ringing endorsement from a bipartisan group of former high-level officials.

"It is important for the American people to realize their government is telling the truth," said William P. Rogers, secretary of state under President Nixon.

Rogers was among 24 former senior government officials who received a private intelligence briefing Wednesday from Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and CIA Director William Casey.

Robert Strauss, a senior member of the administration of President Carter, said the briefing was "a rather impressive bit of evidence indicating in a persuasive way the outside involvement" in El Salvador.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, national security adviser to Carter, said the information "was disturbing."

However, the administration apparently didn't completely satisfy all the former officials that the Salvadoran insurgency is under Nicaraguan and Cuban control. Rogers, for one, said he didn't want to "take a position" on that.

The briefing was part of a public relations offensive by the Reagan administration to generate broader public and congressional support for its Central American policies, including its backing of the Salvadoran government in its war against leftist guerrillas.

Haig told a Senate subcommittee separately Wednesday that U.S. military aid is essential for the Salvadoran government's struggle to beat back the leftists.

Withholding aid, he said, probably would strike "a fatal blow to the government's ability to sustain itself."

While the administration's next step in El Salvador isn't clear, Haig said the role of American military advisers, now numbering about 50 confined to non-combat situations, might have to be re-evaluated if the fighting worsens after the March 28 election. There was a hint they might be allowed into combat situations.

But in response to a question on whether the administration would continue military aid if a far right party headed by former Maj. Roberto D'Aubuisson wins the balloting for a constituent assembly in El Salvador, Haig said, "It is too early to say."

The administration's campaign for public support has included both public and private intelligence briefings and testimony before congressional committees by Haig and other senior administration officials.

Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., a critic of the administration's Central American policies, accused it of "whipping up a war hysteria."

"It's almost as if the administration wants a war in Central America," he said Wednesday in a speech on the House floor.

The administration had planned to unveil information Friday to support its contention that Nicaragua and Cuba are directing the Salvadoran insurgency. However, sources said the information might not be released until early next week.

Belushi died of cocaine, heroin overdose: coroner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian John Belushi died of an overdose of injected heroin and cocaine, authorities said, and three of his associates reportedly said he had been using the drugs for years.

Both drugs were found in the Sunset Strip bungalow where Belushi was found dead, Los Angeles County Coroner Thomas Noguchi said Wednesday.

Three unidentified show business colleagues who said they knew Belushi well were quoted by The Los Angeles Times today as saying he had been injecting himself with heroin for the past two years.

"He was shooting heroin and that was all he was shooting. He was snorting cocaine," one of the producers, who requested anonymity, told the Times. But the three, a studio executive and two producers, said he did not normally mix the two drugs in injections.

The three also said they urged Belushi, whom they described as "alert and dependable" while working, to get off heroin. The actor had promised them he would "straighten out," the Times reported.

Belushi's wife, Judy, was instrumental in keeping him away from heroin, and "if she had been with him, he'd still be alive today," one of the producers said.

Meanwhile, a doctor who had treated Belushi said the portly comic had been warned that an allergy he suffered would increase the chance of respiratory failure if he used cocaine.

Belushi, whose popularity on TV's "Saturday Night Live" launched a movie career that included "Animal House," died Friday at the age of 33, and police initially said he appeared to have died of natural causes. But an autopsy Saturday failed to show the cause of death, and more tests on blood and tissue samples were conducted.

In a statement read by his secretary Wednesday, Noguchi said:

"The deceased died of an overdose due to intravenous injections of heroin and cocaine. Both the cocaine and heroin were found on the premises."

AYKROYD AT FUNERAL — Actor Dan Aykroyd pulls on a pair of gloves as he sits on a motorcycle following cemetery services for fellow actor John Belushi Tuesday in Chilmark, Mass. Earlier, Aykroyd, driving the motorcycle, preceded the hearse from church services to the cemetery.

Police Chief Daryl Gates also broke the department's silence on the case Wednesday.

"We determined right at the outset it appeared to be an overdose," he said. "There appeared to be cocaine and there appeared to be heroin. There was a substance found there and it was found to be cocaine."

Rex Cauble is beaten at ranch

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Millionaire Rex Cauble was expected to remain hospitalized for five days after his nose and two ribs were broken and his lung was punctured in a beating at his ranch, a spokesman says.

The 68-year-old Cauble, who was convicted Jan. 28 of financing a huge drug-smuggling operation, was attacked Tuesday evening when he asked an unidentified man to stop taking photographs of him, Cauble spokesman Eddie Barker said.

"He really whacked him pretty good," Barker said Wednesday. "He's awfully sore, as you can imagine." Cauble was admitted to Westgate Medical Center, where a hospital spokeswoman said Cauble was listed in stable condition. Barker described Cauble's condition as good.

Barker said Cauble's assailant struck him with three "karate-type kicks."

Cauble said he did not recognize the man, but described him as about 6 feet tall, weighing 200 pounds, having dark, shoulder-length hair, and driving a dark color, late model, foreign economy car, Barker said.

Cauble first saw the man taking pictures at his ranch late Monday afternoon, but the man left when Cauble approached, Barker said.

As Cauble returned to his ranch shortly after 5 p.m. Tuesday, he saw the man with a camera again, Barker said. The man left the ranch property at Cauble's request but kept taking pictures from across an access road, the spokesman said.

When Cauble got out of his car and again asked the man to stop taking his picture, the man attacked him and then fled, Barker said.

Cauble is appealing his conviction on federal charges of conspiracy, embezzlement and racketeering. He was sentenced to 10 five-year terms, to run concurrently, he could have been sentenced to up to 95 years in prison and fined up to $125,000.

U.S. halts all Libyan oil trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — The European allies are resisting quiet appeals from the Reagan administration to join in a ban on oil imports from Libya, blunting the impact of the U.S. move against the radical Arab country, officials say.

The American embargo also appears to contradict President Reagan's judgment last fall that a boycott would have to be worldwide to work.

But the president and his key advisers decided to cut off Libyan imports, and block sales of American oil and gas technology, because of mounting irritation with Col. Moammar Khadafy, the Libyan leader who was branded public enemy No. 1 early in the administration.

Outlining the U.S. case against the flamboyant Islamic revolutionary, a senior U.S. official accused the Libyan regime on Wednesday of an "outrageous plan" to assassinate American diplomats and their families in Sudan.

The official said the plot was uncovered last November before two stereo speakers packed with plastic explosives could be flown from an unidentified neighboring country to Khartoum, where they were to be placed in the American club. He said hundreds of Americans could have been killed or maimed if the "particularly horrible mission" had succeeded.

The boycott decision was taken by the National Security Council Feb. 26, but the formal announcement was deferred for two weeks to allow talks with the West Europeans and oil company executives.

In those consultations, officials said, the allies declined to go along with the ban. Pressure tactics were not used, but the administration decided not to embargo other goods, such as trucks and bulldozers, that Libya could buy elsewhere.

However, the boycott blocks sales of American computers and other technology that could be used by Libya in a military connection, and imposes restrictions on strategic materials, said the officials, who asked not to be identified.

Khadafy is in Vienna, Austria, on an official visit. Members of his delegation refused comment on the U.S. boycott, but the Libyan leader scheduled a news conference for today.

Last October, Reagan dismissed former President Nixon's proposal for an economic boycott of Libya, saying "no one country could affect them (the Libyans) by having a boycott."

Once the third largest source of foreign oil, Libya now sells only about 150,000 barrels a day here.

Panel says 'No' to additional domestic cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concluding that domestic programs already have been cut to the bone, members of the House and Senate Appropriations Committees are making clear they can't meet President Reagan's call to slash them an additional $14.2 billion.

At the same time, congressional Democrats say Reagan's partisan attacks have given a hollow ring to his overtures for bipartisan compromise on his fiscal 1983 budget.

A number of subcommittee chairmen of the Senate Appropriations Committee are telling Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., the panel's chairman, that no further reductions can be made in the domestic programs under their jurisdiction, according to a congressional source.

The full committee was meeting today to consider its recommendations to the Senate Budget Committee.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said the full committee's spending recommendation is likely to be for $17.8 billion more than Reagan requested for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

"We've just about cut as far as we can," said Rep. Jamie L. Whitten, D-Miss., the appropriations panel chairman.

Bad politics, bad public relations

When Congress voted itself a tax break just before Christmas, there was a justifiable uproar among us common folk.

It wasn't only what was done, it was how it was done. The final step in the tax scheme was tacked onto an appropriation for brown lung disease benefits.

The tax provision allows Congressmen to deduct $75 per day for every day of the year except those included in a recess period of five days or more. It was aimed at helping Congressmen defray the cost of maintaining a residence in Washington.

NOW THE SIZE of the deduction is becoming clear. Members of the House will be able to deduct $19,650 — Senators $19,200 — from last year's income without chronicling any business expenses at all and without being subject to IRS audit on those deductions.

If Congressmen can prove their Washington expenses were higher than those amounts, they can deduct much more. But only non-Washington area Congressmen can take the deduction. IRS says Washington area members do not have reasonable and necessary business expenses away from home.

Needless to say, the whole situation doesn't sit well with the rest of us laboring over our 1040s here at home.

THERE IS LITTLE DOUBT that Congressmen are feeling a financial pinch from the high cost of Washington living. But Congress could have avoided much ill will had its members openly voted themselves a compensatory pay raise, or the deduction.

Slipping through a massive tax break under the veil of the brown lung disease bill was not only bad public relations, it was bad politics. Congress ought to take another look at that tax break and repeal it.

Nightmare movies

With the return of nice weather to this area, the reminder is that summer isn't too terribly distant. Summer brings swimming, vacations, icy watermelon and those great motion picture extravaganzas that have been previewed for months by the catchline, "Coming this summer, to a theater near you."

Summer is a great time to head indoors to see a movie. Good way to beat the heat. If there is an afternoon matinee, that's a good way to beat the high cost of going to the movies.

you'd ever want to meet.

Now with all this blood and gore and killers around every corner, the dedicated spooky movie fan should be in seventh heaven, right? Not exactly.

The only problem in mass productions of these type of films is they are done at a low budget, have poor scripts and are never original. Sometimes the only thing scary about them is the fact you're spending too many $3.50s on an hour and a half of junk.

Many movie critics give Jamie Lee Curtis a hard time for being the "Queen of Scream" but frankly, the movies she makes are among the best horror flicks these days. And you can bet a work by John "Halloween" Carpenter will getcha to cringe and jump at the same time.

SUMMER MOVIES generally fall into two categories. The first is the good-time movie. That category can be further broken down into the comedy and the musical. Many big budget jobs by the movie companies splice both together and come out with the musical-comedy. One of those is due out this summer, "Grease II."

The second category is my favorite, the summer horror movie guaranteed to send chills down one's spine. The original classic "Jaws" debuted in the summer as did "Alien," "The Amityville Horror," and "The Shining." "The Shining" had months of pre-release billing, complete with the scene of blood gushing from the elevators to wash the lens camera in its flood. That scene, by the way, appeared at the very end of the movie and wasn't nearly as spine-tingling as Jack Nicholson's line "Heere's Johnny!"

Being a horror movie buff, I am anxious to see what's in store for us this coming summer season. My main concern at this point is if there will be any scary movies left to show.

Since it is a proven fact that people like to be scared out of their wits (perhaps that's what is wrong with our country), movie companies do not wait until summer anymore to come out with their thrillers and chillers.

On almost any given weekend year-round, a horror movie is playing in a theater not too distant from your own haunted house. And don't expect to see Casper the Friendly Ghost in these flicks either. Now there are hungry alligators, psycho killers, supernatural beings and werewolves who in daylight are some of the nicest people

THEN THERE ARE those movies such as "Nightmare" that toss in enough detailed gore and skin to attract a crowd and leave them shaking their heads or mumbling under their breaths as they leave the theater.

Perhaps it was "Nightmare" that led to this writing. The movie truly was a nightmare... terrible script, terrible acting, terrible soundtrack. The freshman filmmaking class at Bubblingbrook University could have done a better job with this one.

I guess the people behind the movie are slapping their knees now. It doesn't really matter how good the movie is but how much money they make. "Nightmare" is tempting enough to get the folks in their seats. Whether they leave them halfway through the show doesn't matter.

Perhaps I have a bad attitude towards the recent ventures into horror but what can I say, I like to have the socks scared off of me.

Please John Carpenter, give us something to scream about this summer. Make me yell at the unsuspecting female to look behind her. Get me to jump and toss my popcorn on the couple beside me. Let me leave the theater overcome with apprehension, checking all my closets and locking all my doors when I get home.

Then I can have a really good... nightmare.

YET THE AGENT sued ABC and the House investigators for violating her civil rights. How did this happen? Simple enough: An attorney representing American Family Life in another lawsuit slipped his business card under the door of her boyfriend's apartment in Alexandria, Va., in mid-1980.

"He is the one who originally brought this to my attention and set up the whole — the whole case for me," the insurance agent said in sworn testimony.

She said the attorney, Anthony Dilimetin, paid for her September 1980 trip to New York. In the presence of an American Family Life vice president, the attorney played a videotape of the ABC news show for her.

Did Dilimetin suggest, she was asked, "that you ought to file suit?" The insurance agent replied: "Yes."

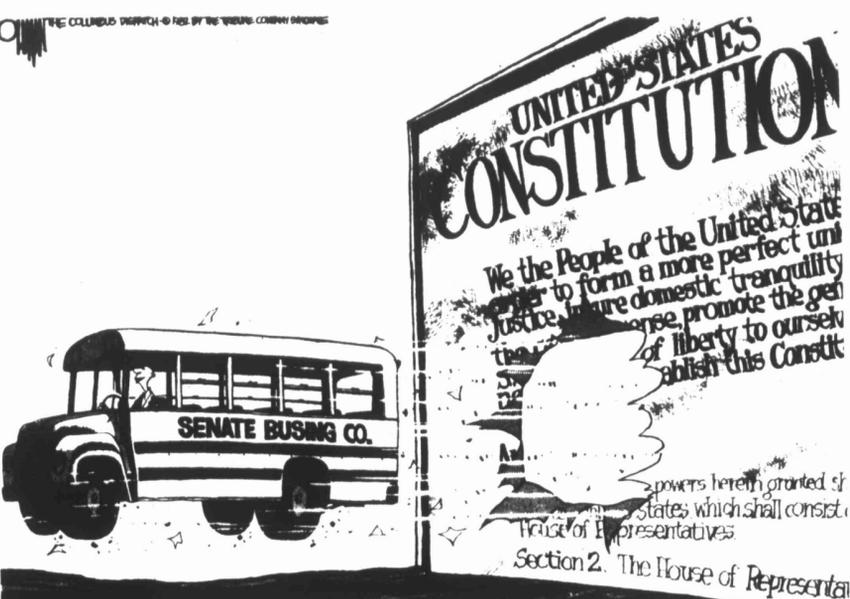

She testified that Dilimetin helpfully identified the House investigators who appeared on the TV show and were also sued. "Since I had no idea who had to be sued," she testified, "Mr. Dilimetin was informing me of the proper persons that would be involved in the lawsuit."

Her attorney told us that the insurance company purchased depositions of the House investigators and lent them to him because his client couldn't afford the transcripts.

Despite all this, the agent doesn't feel she was used as a "front" for American Family Life. And Dilimetin insists that "we absolutely did not have a role in encouraging the suit; we did not pay for legal fees." The jury, by the way, took just 40 minutes to decide that the agent had no case.

In a similar case involving an American Family Life agent in Maryland, the company sued ABC and the House investigators. Company president John Amos said at the time, "We are prepared to answer malicious stonewallers with cannon fire." The case is still pending.

A new twist in lawsuits

WASHINGTON — Americans have become increasingly lawsuit-happy in recent years. The courts, already overburdened by legitimate legal actions, are being swamped by nuisance suits that have no business on the docket.

As an investigative reporter, I've had my share of legal threats from corporations and individuals whose particular ox I've gored. They rarely get beyond the grumbling stage.

Now I've discovered a new wrinkle in the litigiousness that is sweeping the country — the lawsuit instigated behind the scenes by a third party with an interest in the outcome.

Sworn statements filed in connection with a recent lawsuit against ABC News show that the legal action was prompted by the nation's largest seller of cancer insurance, which had been criticized on a television series by the defendants. Yet the company, American Family Life Assurance, of Columbus, Ga., was never a party to the lawsuit.

The plaintiff was a Virginia insurance agent whose questionable sales pitch was clandestinely filmed and was then shown briefly on the nationally broadcast news program in November 1978. It was part of a series on the House Aging Committee's probe of so-called Medigap insurance policies, which supposedly plug the gaps in Medicare coverage. The investigation, incidentally, led to corrective legislation by Congress.

The agent's sworn depositions, and conversations with her, make clear that she didn't file the suit after suffering financial harm, viewing the TV show herself or even being told about it by friends. In fact, she said in a deposition, "I had no idea that such a thing had ever been aired." And she told my associate Tony Capaccio that "people came up to me after the show and talked about it, but no one associated it with me."

Election Commission records, American Family Life sponsors one of the top 10 corporate political action committees in the country. During the 1980 election campaigns, the American Family Life PAC raised $334,005 and contributed $187,200 directly to candidates.

UNDER THE DOME: Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, is an outspoken foe of Big Oil. But his hostility doesn't extend across the whole industry. In a recent "Action Report" by the National Association of Royalty Owners, the group's chief lobbyist, Jim Stafford, told about a meeting with Metzenbaum. After being told of all the small royalty owners in the country, according to Stafford, "Senator Metzenbaum softly told his aide... These aren't the people we had in mind."

—House and Senate members usually don't throw verbal rocks at each other. But Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., couldn't restrain himself from a bitter attack on anti-busing legislation being considered in the Senate last month. Said Mitchell: "I am convinced that some who voted for these amendments... (have) contempt, or hidden hatred, for those who are black... Their contempt and hatred for those of us who are black are a part of the cloth from which the cloak of tyranny is woven." House parliamentarians persuaded Mitchell to delete the remarks from the printed Congressional Record.

—Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., had the best attendance record for Senate votes last year: 100 percent. Close at his heels comes Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., with 99 percent. As for party loyalty, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., scored lowest, voting with his party only 38 percent of the time. Sen. Russell Long, D-La., went along with his party on only 46 percent of the votes.

Reagan go home

There is an old French proverb which says, "When David Stockman sneezes, the world catches pneumonia."

Nothing could substantiate this more than when the Europeans hit the ceiling last month over President Reagan's budget.

"This is outrageous," Hans Hefner, a German banker, told me at Washington's International Club. "West Germany cannot live with a $100 billion American deficit for 1983."

"Why not?" I said. "President Reagan says we can."

"But," said Francois de Noisette, the French economist, "this will mean continuing high interest rates which will drive capital out of my country. Without capital investment, France will not be able to modernize its plant to compete with the Japanese for business in the United States."

Sako Sato, president of Sako Watches, said, "My people believe that President Reagan is much too optimistic about revenues and an early upturn in the U.S. economy. Tokyo does not share this optimism, and until we see an upswing in the U.S. Gross National Product, we are all going to be faced with a lackluster U.S. recovery."

"But one of the reasons for the spot we're in," I said, "is that the Europeans and Asians have been overproducing and underselling us in the world markets."

"Don't try to change the subject," the West German banker said. "Our economy is dependent on a strong and healthy American market for our goods. If your people are not working, they can't buy our superior products. That's why we're not happy with Reagan's budget."

"Nobody's happy with Reagan's budget," I said. "But one of the reasons we're not producing more is that you people won't let us sell anything we make in your countries."

"If you're going to insult us," said Monsieur De Noisette, "please sit at another table. The reason we have to be careful about what we allow to be imported into France is that we must keep our own people working."

Mr. Sato nodded his head. "The first duty of a government is to protect its own industries."

"But gentlemen," I said, "our problem is no different from yours. We have to keep our people employed, too. We can't do it if you keep flooding the United States with your goods."

Hefner became red in the face. "We are not flooding the United States with goods. The Japanese are."

Mr. Sato became blue in the face. "That's because we can produce better products more cheaply than you can."

Monsieur de Noisette said, "You're both wrong. The Third World, led by Hong Kong, Taiwan and South Korea, is flooding the markets with the same things we make."

"So why blame Reagan's budget for your troubles?" I asked.

"Because our political parties cannot stay in power if we don't say the United States is responsible for our recession," De Noisette said.

"All right. If you don't like Reagan's budget, where do you think he ought to cut it?"

"That's not for us to say," said Mr. Sato.

"What about cutting back on the defense?"

"My country will not approve of that," said Hefner.

"Neither would mine," said Sato.

"I'll check with Paris, but I'm sure the answer is no."

Billy Graham

She's worried about her son

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: We lost our teenage son to cancer last year. I believe he had really accepted Christ, but now I find myself worrying about whether or not he really is in Heaven. Can you give me some assurance about this? — T.B.D.

DEAR T.B.D.: There is no reason for you to worry about this if your son had accepted Christ into his life and was trusting him for his salvation. As a young person he may not have been as spiritually mature as other Christians you know (although that is not necessarily the case), but if he trusted Christ that is the important thing.

Your problem is really one of doubting what God has said in his Word. Throughout the New Testament we have many problems concerning our salvation. Repeatedly we are told that salvation is not dependent on our own good works, but on Jesus Christ and what he has done for us. "For Christ died for your sins once for all, the righteous for the unrighteous, to bring you to God" (1 Peter 3:18, New International Version).

You must understand what Jesus Christ did on the cross. Jesus Christ was perfect, because he was the sinless Son of God. You and I (and your son) on the other hand are sinners, burdened by the load of our sins. What did Jesus Christ do? He took our sins upon himself. He took the punishment which you and I deserved, and he died in our place. All my sins were placed on him, and he took them away. Because Christ took away my sins, I stand pure in the eyes of God, and "there is now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus" (Romans 8:1, NIV). As the Bible says, "God made him who had no sin to be sin for us, so that in him we might become the righteousness of God" (2 Corinthians 5:21, NIV).

Rejoice that your son had come to know Christ, and rejoice that he is now in the presence of his Savior. Rejoice also that some day you will be reunited together in Heaven, and that he is now in a place where sickness and pain will never touch him again. This is the hope of every person who sincerely puts his trust in Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior.

Marathon was success

Dear Editor,

Immaculate Heart of Mary School has just completed evaluating the results of our second Annual Eleven Mile Marathon Walk during National Catholic Education Week in February. We are very thankful to the people of Big Spring and surrounding communities for their interest and support.

We thank in a special way the City of Big Spring Police Department for their protection of the walkers and in guiding each one safely across the traffic of FM 700.

Radio stations KBST, KBYG and HEM as well as the Big Spring Herald were all so wonderful in their publicity.

We appreciate Mayor Clyde Angel as he proclaimed January 31-February 6, Immaculate Heart of Mary School Week in Big Spring. Highland Mall was so helpful in offering necessary facilities as we gathered together there.

We appreciate the businessmen and individuals who donated awards for the participants, who permitted us to display posters, and who made generous pledges and contributions.

Our goal was to make ourselves better known in the community, promote the health of students, families, and friends, and raise funds for continued growth of the school. All of you helped us to achieve these goals even more successfully than last year.

We are encouraged to strive harder to make our contributions for better citizens in our city.

May God bless you all.

AP Special Correspondent
BALYPOREEN, Ireland (AP) — The main street in this tidy Tipperary town, which may be the widest in all Ireland, is poised, painted and all prettied up for the president of the United States to come parading past the Ronald Reagan pub in celebration of his Irish roots.

BALYPOREEN'S LADDIE — He says he didn't know his roots until after he moved into the White House.

Like the pope showing up in Ireland a few years back on the strength of an invitation to tea from a monsignor in County Mayo, the townfolk are sure the visit will happen before long. Having a pub named for you is the closest a non-Catholic can get to beatification in this part of the world.

The pub, which now flies both the Irish and American flags, has become Ballyporeen's main and some say only tourist attraction. It changed its name from O'Farrell's Lounge to the Ronald Reagan and added an upstairs gift shop selling presidential T-shirts as well as the traditional cable-knit wool sweaters a few weeks after Ragnall O'Riagain, the Gaelic spelling of the name, was elected Uachtarian, which means president.

Reagan's great-grandfather, Michael Regan, was baptized in the gray granite parish church here on Sept. 3, 1829. He moved to London about the time of the Great Potato Famine, where he put the first "A" back in the family name, and in 1858 emigrated to Illinois as a farmer.

Situated in a lovely green valley between the Galty and Knockmealdown Mountains, Ballyporeen looks as if it had been made to order by the Irish Tourist Board for a presidential visit.

The wide main street, just waiting to be panned by TV color cameras against a background of fleecy sheep, purple glens and emerald fields, has six pubs to accommodate the world press. The friendly, always quotable natives in their Donegal tweeds and cloth caps might have drifted over from the set of a John Ford film. The low slate roofs of the now pastel-painted houses, sending up a tangy furl of turf smoke from their chimneys, seem to have been designed for easy surveillance by the Secret Service. With, of course, plenty of room in the middle for the big parade.

No one in town seems to have any doubt that Ronald Reagan will turn up one of these days in a scream of sirens and skirl of bagpipes. Didn't John Kennedy, another third-generation Irishman who got the Big Job out in America, make the scene at New Ross, only 80 miles away? Didn't Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon discover some Hibernian branches in the family tree when the going got tough in the Oval Office?

"The minute a Yankee president's popularity starts to skid in the polls, he feels this urge to commune with his Irish ancestors," says one of the regulars at the Ronald Reagan Lounge. "I look for your man Reagan to be here any week now. And he'll bring Pat O'Brien with him, to make sure the telly crews don't miss a frame."

By the widest of Hibernian coincidences that not even Hollywood could invent, both Ronald Reagan and Catholics were deemed legal or important enough to be registered by the British civil authorities, which is why the search had to be confined to rare and irregularly kept parish records.

Father Eanna Condon, curate at the Church of the Assumption, still has the old parish journals in his keeping and unveils them with great ceremony and fireside hospitality for visiting Americans. An amateur historian himself, he has written an excellent pamphlet on the Reagan family tree and was instrumental in leading Debretts' team to the Ballyporeen connection.

The yellowing baptismal records reflect the heartwrenching emigration statistics that reduced Ireland's population by more than half in the generations after the Great Famine. Before the potato crop failed in the late 1840s, the parishioners numbered more than 5,000. The church today, the curate says, serves a population of about 1,400.

Father Condon drew a map showing how to get to the little churchyard at Doolis, but warned not to waste my time looking for pre-presidential artifacts. He thinks that the Reagan or Regan tombstones either sunk from sight in the loamy clay soil or else the family was too poor to have the stonemasons erect any.

President Reagan recently told the American Irish Historical Society he knew very little about his family tree until the genealogists traced its tap roots all the way back to Brian Boru, the Celtic warrior king who beat the Danes with one hand (having a cross in the other) at the battle of Clontarf, outside Dublin, in 1014.

"My father was orphaned at age 6," he told the Society while accepting its gold medal. "He knew very little about his family history. And so I grew up knowing nothing more beyond him than an old photograph, a single photo that he had of his mother and father and no knowledge of that family history."

"But somehow a funny thing happened to me on the way to Washington, when I changed my line of work about a year ago. It seems that I became of a certain interest to the people in Ireland who very kindly began to fill me in."

Aside from the handsome pub, the White House imagemakers will have their work cut out for them finding local landmarks for the president to visit in the company of television cameras, the way John F. Kennedy had tea with the widow Ryan, his closest Irish cousin, in her whitewashed cottage.

The farms of County Tipperary are much more prosperous and diversified now than in Michael Regan's boyhood, although a dip in Common Market prices has brought about a recent depression. The price of a pint of stout in the Ronald Reagan has gone out of sight, the regulars will tell you, although inflation doesn't seem to have thinned the nightly crowds.

"We just start later, as an economy measure," says one of the lads. It was "ballads night," dancing and a sing-along with a live band, and the bearded accordion player introduced a new song called, "Do You Want Your Old Lobby Washed Down."

MAN BEATEN AT "DOOMSDAY" PARTY — A man injured at a Miami "doomsday" party tells an officer what happened early Wednesday morning after he was beaten by a gang of youths at Crandon Park on Key Biscayne. The party was supposed to be a celebration of the possible end of the world (predicted as "The Jupiter Effect" in a recent book) but instead many who attended were subjected to stabbings, gunshots, and scattered vandalism.

Inmate says warden's name carved in chest

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Texas Department of Corrections inmate who claims other prisoners carved a slain warden's name on his chest is being held in solitary confinement for inflicting the wounds, prison officials say.

Robert Reed, an Ellis Unit prisoner who refused to testify at the capital murder trial of Eroy Edward Brown, said a group of inmates jumped him Feb. 22 and cut the name "Pack" on his chest, KHOU-TV reported Wednesday night.

Reed refused to take the witness stand at the 53-day trial, saying he feared prison officials and other inmates would retaliate.

But TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said Reed, 45, mutilated himself with a pin or razor blade.

Brown was charged in the April 4 drowning of Warden Wallace M. Pack, but a mistrial was declared because the jury could not reach a verdict.

Doctor crisis worsening, report says

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas currently has only one general practitioner for every 3,197 people and is producing less than half of the doctors it needs to meet a growing shortage, says an article in this month's Texas Medicine magazine.

The article cites figures from the a Texas College and University System Coordinating Board survey that shows 17 counties now have no general practitioners, 26 more have only one, and 24 counties have only two GPs.

Glen R. Johnson, an Austin physician and director of the Central Texas Medical Foundation's Family Practice Residency Program, says the ideal ratio would be one GP for every 1,250 Texans, the magazine said.

The Texas Medical Association and Texas Medical Foundation conducted a year-long study of doctor ratios by county, based on 1980 census figures, the article said.

The results showed that 64 percent of the counties in Texas have a greater ratio than the ideal. The worst ratio is in Upshur County, where there are three GPs for 28,595 people — or a ratio of one doctor for every 9,532 people.

Corpus Christi physician Everett L. Holt says the shortage may be even worse than the numbers indicate, the article said, because many of the physicians are semi-retired or nearing retirement age.

The Texas Academy of Family Physicians recently held a second seminar for family practitioners, in an attempt to attract doctors to more rural areas.

THE SCHOOL NURSE — Peggy McNally spoon feeds medication mixed with applesauce to an ill child at the Joseph E. Hill School for handicapped children where she works as a nurse. Responsibilities of school nurses have expanded greatly in recent years. Rose Tilley, a classroom aide, is helping with the sick girl.

New nursing students go beyond Band-Aids

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Adults over 30 probably remember the school nurse as the lady who measured their height and weight, bandaged skinned knees and provided a place to lie down when they had a headache.

No more. At Martin Luther King High School in the Germantown section of Philadelphia, Constance Badger and Elaine Sellers are among a new breed of the nation's 30,000 school nurses who are not content with a Band-Aid approach to health and learning.

They still patch knees and keep basic health records. But they also counsel pregnant teens, help overweight students improve their self-image, and work with youngsters whose learning disabilities once meant frequent trips to the nurse's office.

"We look at more than just the physical health stuff," says Ms. Badger. "You look at peer relationships, family relationships, school adjustment, career plans — more of the total person."

An example occurred recently when a teacher referred a 16-year-old girl to Ms. Badger after the child missed three weeks of school. The teen-ager was given a physical and asked for a family health history.

It turned out the girl was missing school because her family was sick. In visits to the home, Ms. Badger found a mother too weak from hunger to leave. The nurse arranged for food stamps and helped the family shop for groceries. "Given the same situation 15 years ago, I'd still have tried to help," Ms. Badger says. "But now I have the tools to make a much more complete assessment of the child's problems."

The days of just jotting down the results of eye and ear examinations began to end in the 1970s as school nurses pressed for added professional challenges and new laws and changes in the American family simultaneously placed new responsibilities on public schools.

As more mothers took jobs, schools — and their nurses — were left to care for children with chronic illnesses, says Judith Igoe, director of the University of Colorado's School Health Program.

At Martin Luther King High, for example, Ms. Badger and Mrs. Sellers treat 150 youngsters with chronic ailments including epilepsy, sickle cell anemia or mental retardation. A weakening economy has also placed new burdens on school nurses, says Ms. Igoe. As more and more families feel they can only afford emergency care for their children, they leave routine dental and medical care to schools.

February was a particularly busy month for the nurses at Martin Luther King High. By law, students must be immunized against a long list of contagious diseases. So in a three-day burst, Ms. Badger and Mrs. Sellers gave 2,421 doses of vaccine to students in the gymnasium.

Two federal laws have also added to the workload.

In 1972, pregnant girls and teen-age mothers were given equal rights to an education. There are "hundreds" of teen mothers at 3,500-student Martin Luther King High, and each year about 100 more join the ranks.

In addition to regular sex education classes and pregnancy counseling, Mrs. Sellers, Ms. Badger and a pediatric nurse from the Medical College of Pennsylvania hold special classes for about 20 expectant girls.

"We talk about how it feels to be a teen mother. We go over signs of delivery, types of anesthesia, nutrition, how the baby grows month to month. Most of all, they're encouraged to ask questions of the doctor, not to treat him as God," says Mrs. Sellers.

In another major change, a 1975 federal law entitled handicapped children to a public education. The Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J., estimates the law added 2 million such children to the nation's public school rolls.

A short distance from Martin Luther King High is the Joseph E. Hill School for the handicapped, where nurse Peggy McNally and others care for 120 children, some with IQs in the 30s.

A recent afternoon, for instance, found Mrs. McNally crouched on the floor, coaxing a 7-year-old blind girl named Lydia to swallow apple sauce containing her anti-seizure medicine.

Office employees enjoying firm's 'no smoking' policy

NEW YORK (AP) — There are no "No Smoking" signs posted as you enter the Manhattan offices of Furniture Consultants Inc. But the ashtray outside the doorway provides the first clue, and the clean, smoke-free air inside confirms that a ban on smoking is in effect here.

The firm, a dealership that specializes in office furnishings, is among the growing number of companies to adopt some type of no-smoking policy. Though only a fraction of U.S. employers — 3 percent, according to Public Health Reports — have or sponsor smoking-control policies or programs, at a recent Conference on Smoking and Health, it was reported that employer involvement is increasing.

In the case of Furniture Consultants, the no-smoking rule evolved when the three principals of the firm, all exsmokers, formed their partnership in 1978.

"At that time," explained David Itkin, one of the partners, "there were only the three of us plus the office manager, another non-smoker. The staff has since grown to 40. During hiring interviews we would mention in a 'by-the-way' fashion that employees do not smoke on the job and we'd hope this practice would be respected. So, what was the norm for us became an unconscious, unwritten but accepted personnel policy."

Ironically, the staff increase has meant that smokers now outnumber non-smokers. Concerned that employees might become dissatisfied with the informal prohibition, Itkin asked Consumer Response Corp., a research firm, to conduct an attitude survey and determine exactly how the majority felt.

"The results surprised everyone," Itkin says.

Sixty-five percent of all employees said they approved of the policy and, of those who smoke, 46 percent wholeheartedly endorsed it. Additionally, as a direct outcome of the no-smoking rule, smokers in the company have reduced their total cigarette consumption by 34 percent, Itkin notes.

Mark Schlossberg, a two-packs-a-day smoker, joined the firm as service manager two years ago.

"When I was told about the no-smoking policy, I didn't know if I could handle it. My first thoughts were 'Would I have to give it up totally? Where would I smoke?' Once I saw that other smokers were coping so easily, I knew I could do it too."

Schlossberg is now down to one pack a day and finds that he's more conscious of his smoking habits in public and at home.

"Now it's easier to give it up in other places. I find myself requesting no-smoking sections on planes and at the movies."

His wife, Deborah, a nonsmoker, is delighted with the fact that he's not smoking on the job and recently implemented a policy of her own at home, mostly to support her husband's attempts to give up smoking altogether. Smoking at the Schlossberg home is now restricted to the bathroom and Schlossberg says he's found it easy to comply.

"I like the idea. The air is noticeably cleaner and easier to breathe," says comptroller Ron Santore. He described himself as a heavy smoker of the type that can stop smoking whenever he wants. He has cut his cigarette intake in half, from one-and-a-half packs to three-quarters of a pack a day.

"Some days are harder than others," he admitted, "but I haven't had to resort to gum chewing, snacking or any substitute habits."

In addition, Santore noticed that he's been "sensitized" to the smoking habits of others.

Mayor backs out of Braniff support plan

DALLAS (AP) — Mayor Jack Evans says he gave up the idea of forming a committee of area mayors to support Braniff International after American Airlines officials complained.

American president Robert Crandall told him it would be improper for Evans and Fort Worth Mayor Bob Bolen to aid Braniff because the two cities are investors in the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport land, Evans said Tuesday.

"American Airlines pointed out that Braniff chose to establish a two-for-one offer that didn't raise the money needed," Evans said. "American also noted that Braniff made other decisions as a private enterprise to take on too many air routes that were not profitable."

American Airlines officials could not be reached for comment. Evans had attended a breakfast at which Dallas and Fort Worth business leaders planned a television special to discuss public support for Braniff and other financially troubled companies.

Evans had offered to be on the special, but withdrew the offer after talking with Crandall, Braniff spokesman Sam Coats said.

Texas official outlines options other than jail

COLLEGE STATION — Jail overcrowding is becoming a major problem in Texas because of the state's growing population and a general increase in crime (30 percent since 1979), according to an official in jail standards.

That's why alternatives and options are needed to reduce this overcrowding, pointed out Bob Viterna, executive director of the Texas Commission of Jail Standards.

Viterna discussed a number of pre-trial and post-trial alternatives to jailing at the recent 24th annual County Judges and Commissioners Conference.

He listed pre-trial alternatives as a central intake facility, a continuous magistrate service and daily jail call. In many cases these procedures could eliminate incarceration of up to 40 percent of offenders and expand the bonding procedure.

Viterna also noted other alternatives to jailing, including field citations, release on own recognizance, third party release, conditional release, monitored release and supervised release.

"These options keep people out of your jails and reduce your costs," he told the judges and commissioners. "And these are good ways to deal with people who have committed minor offenses. For instance, less than 4 percent of the people who are released on their own recognizance fail to show up for their trials. That's a pretty good record."

Viterna also called for elimination of incarceration for public intoxication. He said that this practice alone could reduce jail numbers by 25 percent or so.

And he emphasized that mentally ill people have no business in jail.

To further relieve overcrowding in jails, the official suggested regular deliveries of convicted offenders to the Texas Department of Corrections, partial confinement such as weekend and work release sentences, probation, various treatment programs, halfway houses and community services work.

"To increase incarceration means constructing more and bigger jails, and that's expensive," emphasized Viterna.

Another conference speaker, assistant attorney general Jim Allison, addressed the issue of county road and bridge damage by oilfield traffic. He said that the county commissioners court has the authority to regulate maximum weight limits.

To be legal, though, several specifications must be met, Allison noted, weight limits must be set during an open meeting of the court, these must be recorded in the minutes, and appropriate signs must be erected stating the load limits.

Allison noted that any Department of Public Safety officer, sheriff or deputy can enforce the load limits and issue citations and that a county can bring suit against an individual or company causing damages to roads and bridges in order to recover damages.

"Texas statutes provide for counties to be able to protect their roads and bridges," said Allison. "It's important to follow details in setting weight limits so that you can enforce the regulations and bring suit if necessary."

He added that overweight permits may be issued for up to 90 days. These provide for the posting of bond to pay for damage should it occur.

County road and bridge load limits are the same as for state highways, he noted, unless otherwise specified. These are 20,000 pounds on one axle, 34,000 pounds on a tandem axle, and 80,000 pounds overall.

The annual conference of county judges and commissioners was sponsored by the V.G. Young Institute of County Government.

Helicopter smuggling scheme investigated

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — The investigation of a scheme to smuggle sophisticated Cobra helicopters from the United States to Libya has resulted in a psychologist's arrest, according to authorities in California.

A 51-year-old man surrendered Wednesday to U.S. Customs Service officials at Los Angeles International Airport. Thomas R. O'Conner of Torrance, Calif. was arrested at 2:30 p.m., bringing to five people the number being detained by customs agents.

Three men remain in Potter County jail without bond on sealed indictments from a federal grand jury in Dallas. A 71-year-old real estate broker was arrested Saturday in Los Angeles, said Ed Fortier, customs spokesman in Dallas.

U.S. Attorney James Rolfe in Dallas said the men arrested in Amarillo are charged in the indictments in a multi-million dollar scheme to transport Cobra gunships from the Bell Helicopter Textron Co. facility there out of the country.

"That is one of the accusations," Rolfe said Tuesday. Had the plot been successful, Fortier said, certain foreign countries would have received some "dangerous equipment."

Bell spokesman Jack Tarpley said no helicopters had been stolen from the facility, and the scheme was the first he had heard of in the Panhandle city. He said no employees were suspected in the smuggling plan.

Company officials said the Cobras targeted in the scheme were undergoing repairs and outfitting at the Bell Textron facility.

The three men arrested in Amarillo were identified as Carl Michael Kulungian, 34; Alfonso Lopez Quesada, 41; and Paolo C. Maruzzi, 37. The Los Angeles man was identified as Max Field.

Los Angeles officials said Field is being held at a federal prison on Terminal Island in lieu of $500,000 bond.

Tarpley said none of the three arrested in Amarillo ever worked for Bell. Rolfe said that Quesada and Maruzzi were aliens.

Fortier said more arrests may be made as a result of the investigation, which lasted several weeks. The three arrested in Amarillo are accused in conspiracy counts of violating the U.S. Neutrality Act, a law which prohibits exporting of military arms or munitions out of the country.

"This involves the transportation of some helicopters out of the country in violation of the law," Rolfe said.

He said "several million dollars worth" of helicopters could have been destined for Libya, but declined to discuss further details.

The three men were arrested and arraigned Saturday before U.S. Magistrate Bob Sanders in Amarillo, who did not set bonds.

Federal officials earlier had been hesitant to talk about the investigation. A U.S. Customs public affairs officer in Houston said any comment might jeopardize an investigation with international implications that affects a "large geographic area."

He said he had been ordered not to comment on details of the case or whether the three were U.S. citizens.

Judge awards fortune to 2 lucky teen-agers

WACO, Texas (AP) — A small fortune dug up five years ago by two teen-agers who went on a storybook spending spree before being caught has been awarded to McLennan County.

The youths, James D. Bridges and Percy A. Garcia, had $483,604 stashed in the trunk of a new 1977 Thunderbird when they were stopped for a traffic violation in Waco on Jan. 31, 1977. They said they dug up the money on a south Texas ranch.

By the time U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon finally awarded the money to the county Wednesday, after a five-year legal battle, the money had been deposited in two Waco banks and grown to more than $700,000, officials said.

McLennan County commissioners were talking about using the windfall award for a tax cut, but attorneys for the two boys said they would appeal Shannon's ruling.

Bridges was 15 and Garcia was 16 when they told police they dug up the cash, in $20, $50 and $100 bills, from a hiding place on the ranch of Bridges' father near Alice.

They used the money to pay a bellboy $3,000 to buy a new Thunderbird for $8,000 in cash and drive it off a Dallas showroom floor, gave $100 gifts to waiters and $20 tips to waiters, stayed at a luxury Dallas hotel and went on shopping sprees to buy cameras, clothes and stereo equipment, the boys told police.

District Attorney Felipe Reyna said the county was awarded the money based on a 1981 jury decision that the teen-agers had stolen it.

Bridges' father, James Hiroms, a welder and racehorse owner, went to jail in February 1977 rather than testify about the origin of the money, which police alleged could have been related to drug smuggling. Hiroms was released a few days later and never filed a claim on the cash.

Dear Abby

Ceremony isn't medical report

DEAR ABBY: I'm surprised at the pastor who thinks it is "sacriligious for a couple to say 'I do' after they have already done it."

Done what? The vows "I do" are to love, honor, obey, cherish, etc. I could find no references in either civil or religious marriage texts to sexual intimacy or pregnancy. So the bride was obviously with child. So what? If they have already loved, honored, etc., is it sacriligious to repeat those vows before God and witnesses? The ceremony is a mutual commitment to moral values — not a medical report.

So why the fuss? Here is a loving couple making the holiest vow of all: to bring their child into the world together, "legitimately," and with as much chance for a normal life as God gives any of us. This is wrong?

A rite is only as good as the wrongs it corrects or prevents, and you are right on, Abby.

Dr. Donohue

Allergies can cause polyps

Dear Dr. Donohue: Could you please tell us if there is some way to get rid of polyps in the nose without an operation? My husband has had two operations. Are there any injections to get rid of them? — J.W.

Nasal polyps are an overgrowth of the lining of the nose or sinuses. The polyp forms because the lining has become irritated. You can think of them as calluses of the nasal lining. They aren't really calluses, though. Polyps are soft and moist and usually on a stem. When they grow large, they can obstruct the nose and interfere with breathing.

Frequently, an allergy is behind the irritation causing the polyps. If so, controlling the allergy helps keep the polyps in check. That may require injections (not of the nose, of course) to desensitize the person to the allergic trigger — the dust, pollen or another substance. Finding and correcting an allergy is taking a giant step toward preventing polyps.

Allergy is not the only cause of polyps. A chronic sinus infection can produce them. Again, control of the infection leads to control of the polyps.

In many instances, no causes of the polyps can be found. Quite often, the only answer is surgery to remove them, especially if they are blocking the nasal passage. Some have tried spraying the polyps with steroids to shrink them, but that works for only a limited period.

If your husband can find the cause of the polyps, he may not need surgery if that cause can be corrected. If not, surgery may be the only answer when they become troublesome.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Which joints are most often the first to be affected by rheumatoid arthritis? — L.V.

Those usually affected initially are the hands and feet. The pain is usually two-sided, by which I mean that both hands or both feet begin to hurt at the same time. It is the kind of pain that most often occurs upon arising in the morning and which subsides later on in the day. Of course the knee is another common site of arthritis onset. The booklet "How You Can Control Arthritis," which you ask for, should have more in-depth information about this. Other readers can order by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My doctor has told me that I suffer from classical migraine headaches instead of the common migraines. Can you explain the difference? — Rev. H.R.W.

"Classic migraine" is called that because it has the symptoms included in the first complete medical description of migraine headache. It was described as a headache preceded by some disturbance in the nervous system — visual phenomena, for example, like flashing lights, or speech disturbance. In a short time, the one-sided headache appears, with nausea and vomiting. That's classic migraine.

As time went on, it became clear that some people suffered from migraine headaches without all those classic symptoms in the early description. In fact, classic migraine affects only from 15 to 20 percent of those who have migraines. To distinguish them from the others, doctors say they have "common migraines."

Common migraine happens without the preliminary nervous system warning. No visual symptoms, for example. The headache may be on one side only, or it may be on both sides of the head.

Both kinds are true migraine headaches and both have the same body disturbance as their basis — a spasm of the blood vessels leading to the brain followed by the sudden expansion of those vessels, which is what produces the throbbing, violent pain.

DEAR P.D.: Apropos brides who are with child, read on:

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are faced with a problem we don't know how to handle. Our first child, now 12, was born seven months after our wedding. I'm sure she's already put two and two together, but hasn't said anything yet. If she asks, should I give her that "premature baby" story and hope she buys it?

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: No. Tell her the truth.

DEAR ABBY: Please help resolve a crisis that is threatening my relationship with my girlfriend. She says that only two kinds of men wear plaid slacks in this day and age — golfers and old men.

I am 23, and I happen to like plaid slacks. We await your opinion.

IN A PLAID PANIC

DEAR IN: Plaid slacks are out! But don't let that bother you. If you like plaid slacks (and are thin enough), go ahead and wear 'em.

DEAR ABBY: I live on a canal in Florida, and my husband and friends go fishing quite often. My problem is that when he brings fish home I cannot help crying because I feel so sorry for the fish.

Am I the only person who feels this way?

SAVE THE FISH!

DEAR SAVE: You are not alone. I'll bet a lot of my readers will take the bait on this one.

DEAR ABBY: Why all the fuss about whether "I feel bad" or "I feel badly" is correct? Why not say, "I feel lousy," and let it go at that?

History of St. Patrick presented

Mary Arnold Hefley presented a St. Patrick's Day program at the Tuesday meeting of Past Matrons' Club Chapter No. 67, Order of the Eastern Star. The dinner meeting took place at Alberto's Restaurant with Mary Ann Hartin presiding, Vera Gross and Ruth Pittman were co-hostesses.

Mrs. Hefley recounted a brief history of St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland. During the fifth century, Patrick was kidnapped by pirates and taken to Ireland and sold as a slave, she said. Patrick grew close to God during his years in the forest watching over sheep. Patrick eventually escaped on a ship and later returned to his home in Britain. He remembered the poor people of Ireland, however, and resolved to be a teacher and priest among them. He became one of the wandering saints, and traveled from one monastery to another to study. Patrick taught in Ireland for many years and is the subject of many legends.

One legend says that the three-leaf clover represented the Holy Trinity to Patrick. Tradition places his death in the year 461.

Members reported 220 visits and calls to the sick and shut-ins. The next meeting will be April 13. Ina Richardson and Bernice Davis will be co-hostesses.

LASHING — Shelley Hills, 18, of Newtonville, Ont., got a special tongue lashing from Tufferfluv, a 3-year-old quarterhorse during grooming for a show in Toronto Wednesday. Hills was trying to give her charge a trim when he proved he isn't as tough as his name would suggest.

The 'gray wave'

Today's elderly are trying to change the stereotype

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

After years of swimming in the youth movement and bucking the ornery tides of the baby boom, the nation can take heart. Age is coming back into style.

But it is almost as unrecognizable as the fading sepia portraits of our great-grandparents. The stereotypes of old do not hold anymore. There is a new gray wave, and it can only be described as the avant-garde of the art of living.

Every day some 5,000 Americans celebrate their 65th birthday. There are now some 25.5 million who have passed that mark, 28 percent more than a decade ago. That's 11 percent of the population. It will be 16 percent by the year 2000.

"The new entrants into the older population are quite different from those already 65 years of age and older," writes Beth J. Soldo of Georgetown University in the Population Bulletin. "They differ not only in age, but also in life histories, experiences, attitudes and preferences."

In short, they are redefining the notion of old. They are, on the whole, better educated, better off, healthier and more active than previous generations.

They are likely to change the rules by which their government measures them — from when they will retire to how much they will be paid. They have the political power to do it.

A third of the nation's elderly were officially poor in 1959. Today, by rough statistics, only 14 percent fit that category. And, says Drs. Alvin Rabushka of Stanford and Bruce Jacobs of the University of Rochester, if you meld in various government benefits and payments, that figure drops to 6 percent. Truly those 6 percent need help. But they do not reflect the status of more than the nine out of 10 older Americans who do not need help.

More and more Americans are putting the lie to arbitrary retirement at age 65, an anachronism that Bismarck set as a social standard for Europe in the mid-1800s and that lingers on. He probably thought no one would live that long anyway.

There is growing sentiment that aid to the poor of any age should be a separate program, in addition to Social Security, not drawn from it. Social Security, this view holds, should be the retirement savings fund it was originally intended to be.

The increase in the retirement rate has dropped from 8.4 percent in 1972-4 to 2.7 percent in 1978-80, and if the trend continues there will be fewer Americans retiring at 65 in 1985 than there are now. More than a million and a half Americans retire each year, but more and more are having second thoughts about it. Some do not want to settle for retirement income. Some would just like to stay active, at least in part-time work, although they are frequently dissuaded by restrictive laws, from Social Security income limits to the minimum wage.

If Browning's Rabbi Ben Ezra was right — that this is the last for which the first was made — then people like the Alperets of Solano Beach, Calif., only approaching 65, intend to make the most of it.

Mary Alpert is 61, a survivor of a quadruple bypass a year ago, a model at age 14, still a model, mother of two, grandmother of five, taking acting lessons to sharpen her skills for a new and budding career in television commercials. There is a growing demand for older people in television, because they sell products to a growing number of older people who have the money to buy them.

In her modern, graceful, sunlit living room, she crosses her legs, modestly, touches her skirt, and talks about her children, slyly:

"Oh, I put on a little giddy for them, a little fey. That way they won't know when I get senile."

Her husband, Mike, 64, tall, vital, twice retired, once from the Navy, then from a property-management firm in Dallas, dreams of turning his lifelong interest in athletics into a third career, perhaps coaching or helping coach youngsters. "I'd even work for less," he says, smiling.

People like the Alperets are forcing a more hard-headed look at the process of growing old. They are more indicative of the gray wave of the future than the park benches of St. Petersburg, Fla., a decade ago, before they took the benches away.

Most older Americans, seen in one psychological study, rate themselves as "highly optimistic." Less than half said they were merely coping. Only a fifth — and this includes many very old people — consider themselves casualties of age, usually burdened with health problems.

Sickness, say the experts, is the greatest tormentor of older Americans, the destroyer of spirit, the emblem of vulnerability.

Medical experts in the phenomenon of aging insist that the only true way to look at the later years of life is to separate what is sickness from what is aging. The healthy older person is the reality. The grim statistics reaped from hospital beds, morbidity reports and nursing homes reflect the exception.

Some 32,000 Americans claim to be 100 years old or older. Without birth records or other proof, the number can be discounted by half or more. But Census records also show 1,500 Americans 112 or older.

Yogurt commercials aside, says Dr. Richard W. Besdine, director of geriatric training at Harvard, the oldest surviving humans are no older today than the oldest surviving humans 50, or 100, or 1,000, or probably 5,000 years ago. The maximum human life span seems to go somewhere around 110, perhaps 115 years.

"Then people do in fact die of old age, even if there are no identifiable diseases."

The great increase in longevity — some 25 years of added life in this century alone — is actuarial, due largely to saving the lives of the young so that they can make it to old age. Dr. Besdine estimates that 90 percent of our extra years came from advances in fighting maternal, childhood and adolescent diseases. Only 10 percent were added by coping with adult ills, although there is progress coming in that department, against heart disease and cancer.

Official warns against cooking meat in microwave

ATLANTA (AP) — Meat cooked in microwave ovens may still be infected with trichinosis or similar diseases, a scientist at the national Centers for Disease Control says.

Dr. Peter M. Shantz of the CDC said in a report in the Veterinary Public Health Notes that pork must be heated throughout to at least 137 degrees Fahrenheit to destroy trichinosis.

But because microwave ovens do not always heat food evenly, some parts of the meat may not be heated sufficiently to destroy the disease, he said. The thickness of the meat, the amount of bone and the model of microwave oven also affect how evenly the meat is heated, Shantz said.

Shantz's report expanded on research by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which last year showed that trichina-infected pork thawed in a microwave oven and cooked on a charcoal grill still contained live trichinella larvae. Pre-cooking infected pork in a microwave oven and finishing it in a deep fat fryer also did not kill the larvae, the USDA said.

Suspended officers return

HOUSTON (AP) — Thirteen police officers suspended with pay for allegedly terrorizing guests at a small hotel will report to work as clerks in the dispatchers office.

Deputy Chief L.L. Wunsch said the suspended officers were ordered to return to work, beginning Monday.

"We thought that since they were getting paid, they ought to be putting in some time," Wunsch said.

On Tuesday, a Harris County grand jury began its investigation of the alleged rampage at the Della Apartment Hotel in this city's predominantly-black Fifth Ward.

The officers, all assigned to the night shift, were suspended after they allegedly roused guests from their beds at gunpoint.

Project brings space-age astronomy to life

By RITA C. BOBOWSKI
Smithsonian News Service

Q. Do you remember the 1910 passing of Halley's Comet?

A. Yes. Just. I was 12 and I think I had the measles. There were three or four nights when I was led to the eastern window and saw it coming up before sunrise. Of course, I've seen pictures of it since ... but I really think I remember the great big fuzzy tail, going way up, and would like to be around to see it do it again.

A simple boyhood recollection? Yes — and no. As it happens Theodore Dunham has long since grown up and distinguished himself in the field of astronomy. Did his vivid memory of Halley's Comet influence his life's work?

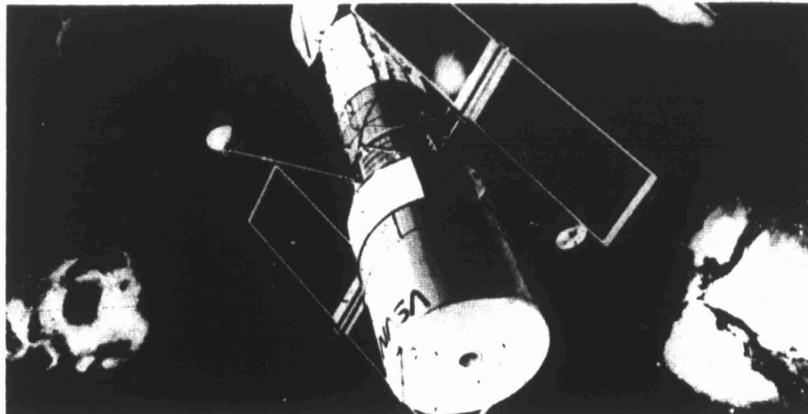

"It was a dramatic experience," he recalled nearly 70 years after Halley's appearance. "Everyone was talking about it. I was perfectly aware of what was being said. (I think it was the measles that had me down a bit.) But I remember all the papers with their flaring headlines and pictures, and people talking about the dire risk to the human race."

Dunham's story — and scores of others like it — were gathered in an oral history project during the 1970s by the American Institute of Physics in New York City, a project funded by the National Science Foundation and the Sloan Foundation.

Today, a continuation of that effort is being launched at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. Its purpose: to bring alive a field considered by many to be foreign and mysterious at best — astronomy.

ORAL HISTORY is a relatively new addition to the traditional methods used by historians, sociologists and other researchers to gather information. Though written records and published reports provide invaluable data, the result often is a picture devoid of the "human experience."

The museum's oral history project, sponsored largely by the Smithsonian and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, plans to bridge that gap. Over the course of the next two years, historians will interview 30 to 40 astronomers, engineers, physicists and others involved in space astronomy, a field that differs from ground-based astronomy in its use of balloons, airplanes, rockets and satellites to study celestial objects — planets, stars, comets and other heavenly bodies.

SPACE STUDY — The NASA space telescope will give astronomers a clear view of the universe. The birth of this exploration is being probed at the Smithsonian National Air and Space Museum.

"Science is a human activity," says astronomy historian and project manager David DeVorkin of the museum's space science and exploration department. "Yet many people feel alienated by it. They view astronomers as old geezers who climb mountaintops to look at the stars. I want to place scientists in a human light. While I'm not advocating hero worship, I am advocating a solid appreciation of the field."

DeVorkin's project will resolve around two major areas. One is the Space Telescope, a major space astronomy program conducted by NASA. Although the space telescope will not be launched until 1985, its origins date back to the early 1960s. Through a series of related interviews, DeVorkin plans to examine closely the beginnings and development of the telescope, the policy decisions that determined its ultimate design and the character of the Space Telescope Science Institute at Johns Hopkins University which will be responsible for its operation.

Evaluating astronomy prior to the 1957 launch of the Russian satellite Sputnik is DeVorkin's second theme. In this area, he will emphasize the German-made V-2 and American-designed Aerobee rockets and their use as platforms for astronomical research.

The V-2s bombarded Allied targets in England and on the continent in 1944 and 1945. After the war, V-2s captured by the United States were used to train American technicians in missile launch procedures and to carry the first scientific instruments into space.

In 1946, an American scientist, James Van Allen, developed the concept for the Aerobee rocket. Because of its reliability and relatively low cost, the Aerobee rocket quickly became the workhorse of the infant U.S. space astronomy program. In essence, the V-2s and Aerobees represented the beginnings of modern rocketry, laying the foundation for space launches a generation later.

"SCIENTISTS PUT equipment on the V-2s to study, among other things, the structure of the atmosphere and the nature of the light we get from the sun," DeVorkin explains. "Although there were many flights and the results were well-documented, the behind-the-scenes action has seldom been covered."

"How were the flights decided? Who were the people involved?"

"Picture the excitement, the tension. For the first time, instruments could be sent beyond the atmosphere of the earth. What a gamble it must have been — to do an experiment on a spinning, turning, gyrating rocket that could blow up any minute."

If there were moments of excitement and risk, there were also times of humor. "The V-2 was in some respects an embarrassment to the scientists involved in early flights," astronomer Herbert Friedman, a pioneer in the development of space astronomy, noted at a recent symposium at the Air and Space Museum. "Odd assortments of packets of frog eggs, seedlings and cosmic ray emulsion packs were often taped into whatever free space could be found just before flight. Inevitably, failures occurred from unanticipated interference between different experiments."

"Their performance was agonizingly unpredictable," Friedman continued. "Some rockets exploded on ignition, some somersaulted end-over-end; one landed on the edge of Juarez, just over the Mexican border."

To DeVorkin, such personal agonies are grist for the mill. Although he acknowledges the value of published sources, he feels such publications are "often sanitized to convey the results of the work in the best possible light. They do not usually convey the process, the problems, the daily setbacks and advances," he says.

"A report will tell you who was involved in the research but not why. Were they volunteers or assigned to the task?"

College students' aid could be cut in half

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal aid to college students would be nearly cut in half by 1984 under President Reagan's budget proposals, Congress' top budget adviser said today.

Alice M. Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, said federal grants, loans, job subsidies and other aid peaked at $14.7 billion in fiscal year 1981.

Because of unrestricted loans that year "roughly 20 percent of all aid ... went to students from families with incomes over $30,000," she said.

She told a House subcommittee on post-secondary education the $14.7 billion helped finance the education of half of all college students — 5 million to 6 million — and paid "one-third of all student expenses for tuition and room and board."

She added that 75 percent of all student aid provided by governments and colleges came from Washington.

She said cuts already approved by Congress will reduce the federal aid to $14.3 billion this year and $12.7 billion in fiscal 1983.

Reagan is seeking further cuts in loans and grants that would lower the aid to $10.9 billion next year and $7.7 billion in fiscal 1984, she testified.

The administration is making, with respect to Guaranteed Student Loans, some quite drastic proposals which "clearly would eliminate a lot of students,"

Ms. Rivlin said.

She suggested cutting the loan interest payments to banks government makes to banks as one alternative to Reagan's bid to bar graduate students from the program.

"I agree that this is risky," she said. "But as an alternative to just cutting off all graduate students in order to save money, maybe it's worth exploring this."

An estimated 600,000 to 700,000 graduate students now get Guaranteed Student Loans. Reagan wants to shift these loans to a new 14 percent loan program on which they would have to pay interest while still pursuing their studies.

"We are doubtful they would be served by the alternative program," Ms. Rivlin said. "That program doesn't exist in most states and it has very high in-school interest rates."

Pell grants are outright federal gifts to students based on family size and income.

DENY FRAUD — Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara cups his ear as he listens to a question during a news conference on Tuesday. Three opponents in the race have charged that Guevara and running mate Ramiro Ponce Monroy, seated right, have been aided by incorrect vote counts.

New Guatemalan leader defies U.S. critics

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Defying U.S. critics, Guatemala's next military president says he will not tolerate any kind of imperialist interference in the internal affairs of this embattled Central American country.

"Guatemala wants to be a friend of all, but we are not going to tolerate foreign interference or any type of imperialism in our internal affairs," Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara told reporters Wednesday.

The statement appeared aimed at U.S. expressions of concern over opposition charges of irregularities in the election Sunday and U.S. criticism of the military regime's human rights record, as well as at the Soviet Union and Cuba, accused by the government of helping the leftist guerrillas. Guevara, 56, said he would carry out a "dynamic foreign policy to improve the image of Guatemala."

"Peace, justice and progress will be reached during the new era," said the government coalition that back him. "Nothing or no one will block it."

Critics of Guatemala's military dominated government claim it tolerates or supports rightist death squads that prey on suspected leftists and guerrilla sympathizers. An estimated 300 people are being killed each month in political violence and the war between an estimated 4,000 guerrillas and the 16,000-man army. Church and human rights groups blame most of the political killing on rightists.

The U.S. government cut off military aid to Guatemala in 1977 because of alleged abuses of human rights, and the government wants the arms supply resumed to aid its war against the guerrillas.

The slow count of the paper ballots cast in the presidential election ended Wednesday. The Electoral Council announced that Guevara, the candidate of the Institutional Democratic Party that has run the country for the past 12 years, bested his three conservative civilian opponents with 379,051 votes, or 35.1 percent of the ballots.

Reagans are booed at ballet

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife were booed by several members of the audience when they entered the presidential box at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts to watch a performance of the Joffrey Ballet.

A similar demonstration greeted the Reagans when they returned to their box after the first of two intermissions Wednesday night.

It was impossible to determine how many people were booing, but it was a small percentage of the capacity audience of 2,200. However, the boos came from several sections of the auditorium and were clearly audible along with the traditional applause that greets a president on such occasions.

An official who has been with Kennedy Center since it opened in 1971 said it was the first time a president has been booed there. Each president since Richard M. Nixon has visited the center.

The president added: "He probably had a broken spring in his seat."

Youth who posed as Hunt nephew sent to prison

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Gavin Nash Avila, 18, who went on a two-day spree in Dallas while posing as the nephew of millionaire Ray Hunt, has been sentenced to at least five months in prison.

The high school dropout said he "kind of went over the edge" when he ran up more than $700 worth of restaurant and limousine bills last November while posing as a member of the wealthy Hunt family.

Avila already was on probation in El Paso for stealing a 1961 Chevrolet Corvette from Rudolph Chevrolet in January 1981.

A Dallas judge sentenced him to four years' probation in February for the Hunt hoax.

Tuesday, District Judge Sam Callan, after calling Avila "a sociopath and a con man at age 18," revoked his probation on the car theft charge and sentenced him to between two and six years in prison.

He told Avila he would consider shock probation canceling the prison sentence and placing him back on probation — after about five months.

Avila said two Dallas public relations agents and Dallas oilman Ron Hall contacted him about going to drama school after word about his temporarily successful caper began to spread.

"I'm pretty famous right now, at least all over Texas," he said.

He said the idea for the stunt "just came out of my mind."

Avila broke the conditions of his probation by leaving El Paso County without his probation officer's permission and by committing felony theft of service.

Avila's lawyer, Herb Marsh, argued his client's epilepsy and "problems with sexual identification" should keep him out of prison for the "crime of impulse."

Callan could have sentenced Avila to as much as 20 years in prison and assessed a $10,000 fine.

Avila started his two-day bout as Chez Hunt on Nov. 15 when he burst into the swank Antares Restaurant in the Hyatt Regency Hotel, accompanied by five men he met at the downtown YMCA in Dallas.

He convinced restaurant management to charge their $191.66 dinner bill to Ray Hunt, who owns the restaurant. The restaurant did not press charges.

Avila and a restaurant hostess spent about 10 hours the next day being chauffeured around the Dallas area. Limousine Services of Dallas filed charges on Avila for the $617.50 tab he ran up.

Avila was arrested later that night when Dallas police were called to a fight outside the YMCA where he had been staying.

Woods to run for Senate

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Former mayor Woodie Woods says a group of Republicans has convinced him to run for the 12th District Texas Senate seat.

Woods resigned last fall as mayor, saying he would campaign against House Majority Leader Jim Wright. But he then surprised supporters by announcing he would not enter the race.

Tuesday, the 61-year-old plumbing company owner said the Republican campaign selection committee had urged him to run. GOP leaders said they expected him to be unopposed for the nomination in the May 1 primary.

Thursday Notes

Now that the gloves and bats are out, how about a little baseball news from Southwest Texas State.

Dickie Wrightsil is alive and well in the Bobcat baseball program. The former Big Spring ballplayer had five hits in a recent doubleheader sweep of Bee County, scoring three runs in the process. The SWTS right fielder is obviously happy with the way things are going for him and I'm sure the home folks will want to keep up on his progress in San Marcos.

Also enjoying recent success were Big Spring's two area resident marathoners, Sherril Easterling and Donald Webb. Easterling won her 30-39 division at the Woodlands Marathon in Houston with a time of three hours, nine minutes, despite having a numbness problem in her right leg.

Webb was third in the 50-59 division with a time of three hours, three minutes. More importantly, however, he qualified for the Boston Marathon. Webb reported he was in better condition than he thought and held back too much for the first 20 miles, kicking in the first six miles.

Both runners felt the effects of running the long distance on concrete and will try to get back on their schedules next week. That's the 10-12 miles-a-day routine. Less than two months away is Boston and both runners are very excited about the trip north to run with the big boys and girls.

From The Herald Hole-in-One Scrapbook, Red Womack is the latest local golfer to achieve the feat. Red used a five-iron to knock in a shot on the 190-yard No. 13 hole at the Country Club recently.

Witnesses were J.D. Nelson, Guil Jones, Bill McClendon, Jack Cook and Dick Pfeifer.

And finally, reaching for the final note on my spike, Ty Bethell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bethell of Baytown, has signed a football scholarship with McNeese State. Ty is the grandson of W.H. "Lefty" Bethell of Big Spring who played on the 1939 state football championship team from this community.

Splittin headache

Rosson's basehit gives Coronado migraine

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

All Big Spring coach Frank Ibarra could do was smile. His team hadn't played particularly well but with Blake Rosson's two-out single in the bottom of the seventh inning, the Steers gained a split of a Wednesday afternoon doubleheader with Lubbock Coronado.

Rosson's timely hit capped a five-run rally in the seventh that lifted Big Spring to a 13-12 slugfest win over the Mustangs. Coronado won the first game in similar fashion, scoring two runs in the top of the seventh to claim a 5-3 victory.

Big Spring is now 5-5 entering the Abilene baseball tournament this weekend. The Steers battle Weatherford at noon Friday with Adam Rodriguez expected to start. Coronado will also play in the event.

Coronado dropped its first game of the year with the seventh inning loss and now stands 4-1.

Big Spring battled back from a 5-0 deficit in the second game to take a 6-5 lead after four innings. Sparking a three-run rally in the fourth that pushed the Steers ahead was a two-run home run by Alan Trevino over the left field fence. The blast tied the game 5-5 and a balk by pitcher Brett Marshall sending Marcus Armandariz home put Big Spring ahead by a run.

Coronado came right back with a big five-run fifth to grab a four-run lead. Gary Beard's two-run single sent the Mustangs into the lead. Greg Conley sacrificed Beard home and Marshall gave his pitching a big boost with a two-run homer to left, upping the score to 10-6.

David Anguiano singled home Tom Cudd in the bottom of the inning to get a run back for the Steers but catcher Jay Lindstrom got his fourth hit of the game, a two-run homer in the top of sixth to put Coronado ahead 12-7.

Armandariz reached on an error and scored on a double by Jinx Valenzuela to make it 12-8 at the end of six innings and reliever Oscar Limon set down the Mustangs in the top of the seventh, thanks to a doubleplay he himself began.

Tommy Olague began the Steer seventh with a single but Danny Stephens popped up for the first out. Anguiano then singled and Big Spring got the break it needed when Beard dropped a flyball for Trevino in right field. Armandariz singled in a run and Valenzuela sacrificed in another.

With two out, Limon doubled to drive in the tying runs and Rosson one pitch later drove his lead-off hitter in with a single to give the Steers the doubleheader split.

Limon got the win in relief of Tony Ontiveros who went five innings, giving up 14 hits and 10 runs.

Four errors with two out in the third inning staked the Mustangs to a 3-0 lead in the first game. Limon scored on an error in the third inning, drove in Armandariz with another in the fifth and Rosson tied the contest with a solo home run in the sixth inning, the first roundtripper for Big Spring this season.

A one-out double by Mark Gillham in the top of the seventh put the Mustangs ahead by two runs and reliever Jerry Foster got the win by setting down the side in order in the bottom of the inning.

Limon and Rosson had two hits each in the first game, the only basehits for the Steers. In the second game, Anguiano picked up three singles and Cudd rapped a pair of doubles. Valenzuela, Trevino and Armandariz each had two hits to aid the comeback victory.

Cards deal pair of aces

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

Sports Editor's note: Because of the breakdown in telephone lines Thursday morning, a report from Queens coach Don Stevens was not received nor could calls be made to the Tyler or Athens newspapers. Story information is based on this writer's notes taken from the radio broadcast.

TYLER — The dream ended Wednesday night.

The scoring combination of Margaret Peters and Lola Reescano combined for over 30 points in the first half and sparked the Henderson College Lady Cardinals to a whopping 89-62 victory over the Howard College Hawk Queens.

The win sends the Lady Cards, 31-6 into the national junior college tournament which begins Tuesday in Kansas City. The loss leaves Howard at home with a final record of 27-8 record of 27-8.

If coach Don Stevens had to point to two areas of the game that spelled the eventual runaway victory for the Lady Cards, it would be fouls and the first six minutes of the game.

Before the Queens could be untracked, sophomore team leader Kelli Mull picked up her second foul and fouled out early in the second half. Melissa Luna picked up her fourth foul just before the first half buzzer sounded, and Susan Cordell had three fouls at the half.

Those foul problems had to affect the Queens defense, which had a distinct height advantage on the Lady Cards.

Nell Haskins scored the first two points for the Hawk Queens at 14:31 in the first half and by that time, Henderson had taken a 12-0 lead on two free throws by Sheila Van Shoubrouk.

Two free throws by Luna cut it to 20-10 at the 9:14 mark but Henderson spurred to a 36-16 lead with four minutes to go as Emmer Lott came off the bench to lead the Cards.

Yancy Toran came off the bench to hit eight points to bring the Queens within 12 but Howard couldn't convert an opportunity to cut its deficit to 10 and Henderson streaked into the dressing room with a 45-28 lead at halftime.

The Lady Cards moved immediately into a 20-point lead in the second half and Henderson built leads as large as 33 points, 63-50, late in the game. The final score represented a 27-point margin.

Peters finished the night with 33 points and had 19 rebounds. Reescano added 20 points and 16 rebounds, giving Henderson a huge 51-36 advantage in that department over the taller Queens.

'We need new leadership'

UT fires Lemons

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Abe Lemons, who often masqueraded as the clown coach of college basketball, has performed for the last time with the Texas Longhorns.

Lemons, 59, was fired Wednesday following a disappointing season, but Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds and others in the athletic department said that was not the "specific" reason for the firing.

"It's a simple statement of fact that we need new leadership. We need to set a course for the future and continue to progress — nothing more or less than that," Dodds told a news conference.

Dodds said the final two years of Lemons' $52,106-a-year contract would be honored and that Texas would search nationwide for a new coach.

"When a person hires you, he's got a right to fire you," said Lemons.

He said Dodds told him on Tuesday, "I've got bad news for you — you're fired." I looked around the room and thought someone else was in there. But it was just me."

Lemons came to Texas six years ago "to see if I can make it in the big time," after coaching at Oklahoma City University and Pan American in Edinburg, Texas.

His teams won Southwest Conference championships in 1978 and 1979, and his 1978 squad became the only Longhorn team to win the National Invitational Tournament. That year he was named co-coach of the year by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

His career total of 474 victories makes him the seventh winningest active coach in college basketball.

Lemons has a reputation of getting good performances out of mediocre players, but this year he could not stop the Longhorn slide that started when 6-foot-9 forward Mike Wacker, the team's second leading scorer and rebounder, was lost for the season with a knee injury on Jan. 26.

Texas was 14-0 and ranked No. 5 in the nation but lost that game to Baylor and won only two of its last 13 games.

"Basketball's just a game," he said, "and I had a hard time figuring out how to be mad at the (Texas A&M) Aggies or how to be mad at Houston."

Asked why he thought he got fired, he said, "I think I'm a little too crusty for them."

Yanks top Rangers in exhibition

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Dave Revering had three hits and Brad Gulden had two RBIs while winning pitcher Gene Nelson hurled three perfect innings as the New York Yankees defeated the Texas Rangers 3-1 in exhibition baseball Wednesday night.

The Yankees opened the scoring in the second inning against loser Charlie Hough. Designated hitter Ken Griffey singled, moved to third on Revering's double, and scored on Gulden's ground out.

New York added a run in the fourth against Jon Matlack. Graig Nettles' single and walks to Dave Winfield and Revering loaded the bases, and Gulden walked to force in a run.

The Yanks added their final run in the seventh off Ronnie Darling on Andre Robertson's RBI infield single.

Texas scored its lone run in the ninth off reliever Rich Gossage.

Blackman leads Mavs by Portland

DALLAS (AP) — Guard Rolando Blackman's 16-point outburst in the fourth quarter keyed a Dallas rally, but he had to share scoring honors with two fellow rookies — Jay Vincent and Mark Aguirre.

Vincent scored 23, Blackman 22 and Aguirre 14 as the Mavericks defeated Portland 104-102 in National Basketball Association action Wednesday night.

Aguirre also aided Blackman in the fourth quarter, scoring eight of his points in the final 3:34.

"I thought the bench responded very well in the second half," said Dallas coach Dick Motta, referring to Aguirre and Blackman. "I told the players that if they just stayed close, we had a chance to win."

Dallas trailed by as many as 16 points in the first half, and did not catch the Trail Blazers until 5:31 left in the game as a Blackman field goal that made it 90-89.

Portland coach Jack Ramsay said, "We missed our free throws and opened up the doors for them. Dallas simply took advantage."

It was Dallas' second victory in as many games, improving its overall mark to 21-41.

NIT Roundup

A&M eliminates Cardinals, 60-58

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M forward Claude Riley says he was just reacting automatically when he scored the winning points with 35 seconds left in the Aggies' first-round game in National Invitation Tournament against Lamar.

Riley slam-dunked the ball off an assist by Reggie Roberts, and was fouled by Lamar's Bryan Kellybrew. He then hit the free throw to put A&M ahead 60-56. The Aggies held on for a 60-58 victory Wednesday night.

Riley said the play not assigned to go to him, but he knew just what to do when he did get the ball.

"We practiced on that situation a lot, the 2-on-1 and 3-on-2," Riley said. "I felt that because we've been in many situations like that, he was going to get the ball to me."

Riley totaled 20 points and 13 rebounds, eight in the second half, in leading A&M to the second round against Washington on Monday in Seattle. A&M, third-place finisher in the Southwest Conference, is now 19-10 for the season.

A&M burst to an 18-9 advantage with 11:06 remaining in the first half, but the Cardinals fought back to tie the score at 22 and trailed at the break, 31-30.

The Lamar comeback got the Aggies' attention, especially Riley's.

"Once they started catching up on us, I saw that their intensity started picking up," Riley said. "They really played us tight. I felt like it was going to be a tight ball game all the way through."

Lamar led on six occasions in the second half. The Cardinals' biggest lead was three points while the Aggies never led by more than four in the final half.

Senior guard Milton Woodley followed Riley with 14 points, while senior center Rudy Woods and Roberts had 10 points apiece. The 6-11 Woods also contributed 12 rebounds for A&M, which outrebounded the Cardinals, 38-35.

Pacing Lamar was senior guard Terry Long, who hit 11 of 20 shots from the floor for 22 points. Adding 15 points for the Cards was junior forward Kenneth Perkins, who also had 10 rebounds.

Lamar, runner-up in the Southland Conference, ends the season at 22-7.

DENNIS THE MENACE

"YOU REMEMBER WHICH DRAIN ALL THAT MONEY WENT DOWN LAST YEAR?"

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"I borrowed them for my robot."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, MAR. 12, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This could be a day of arguments and much tensions coming into the open unless you make a point to maintain self-control. The pose you display can impress others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Ask questions of an associate and then you will know better what is expected of you. A private matter can be resolved now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make certain you know the motive behind a favor a friend wants to bestow upon you. A social affair could be costly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Carry through with what a higher-up expects of you instead of being obstinate. Safeguard your reputation tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be sure to handle important business matters before engaging in social activities. Show that you have wisdom.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Keep friends and advisers apart and avoid trouble. You have latent talents that should be put to work.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact higher-ups and gain the support you need. Show kindness with one who offends instead of becoming vengeful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) It's important that you carry through with regular routines today instead of going on a foolish fun spree.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't jeopardize your security by spending lavishly for entertainment. Save your money instead and invest it wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't join an argument between a family tie and a friend at this time. Streamline your social activities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Although you may be provoked, don't argue with a co-worker who happens to be out of sorts at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Find a more practical system for operating in the days ahead. Listen to what a successful friend has to suggest.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to get at the bottom of an unpleasant situation at home and establish more harmony. Strive for increased happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be inclined to get in arguments and with little accomplished, so teach to get at underlying causes of trouble. Make sure your progeny develops the right philosophy of life. Don't neglect ethical training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Senators deny GOP ganging up on Williams

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Republican leadership today sharply denied a suggestion by Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. that partisan politics might influence the outcome of the Senate vote on whether to expel the New Jersey Democrat.

Williams, who has been convicted of bribery and conspiracy as a result of the FBI's undercover Abscam investigation, said Tuesday he understood that the 53 Senate Republicans had met and were "solidly in favor of expulsion," which he called "fundamentally wrong."

As the Senate was about to begin debating a proposal today that Williams be censured rather than expelled, Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said there had been no Republican meeting, and no attempt to gang up on Williams.

"That simply is not so," said Baker, who did say Tuesday he had found almost no support among GOP senators for a censure resolution. The Senate Ethics Committee unanimously recommended expulsion.

Similarly, Senate Majority Whip Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said today, "There has been no partisanship at all."

Baker said he and Stevens were trying to arrange with Williams' defenders a specific time for a vote on whether to impose on Williams the lesser penalty of a censure. There appeared to be a chance the vote might be delayed until Thursday.

The chief sponsor of the censure resolution is Senate Minority Leader Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who said Tuesday that Williams faced "a cruel, unreasonable, unwarranted, improper test."

Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama, senior Democrat on the Ethics Committee, said, "I think it will be an expulsion vote."

BIG SPRING, (TEXAS) THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1982

ELWOOD HOHERZ
...moving to Central Texas

Police chief resigns

By BILLELDER
Staff Writer

Big Spring Chief of Police Elwood Hoherz has resigned from his job — a surprise move, since Hoherz had been in command of the Big Spring force for just 15 months.

City Manager Don Davis made the resignation public at a press conference held in Davis' city hall office yesterday afternoon.

Hoherz will move on to Weatherford, a town of 12,000 in north central Texas, where he will become chief of police.

His last day behind a Big Spring badge will be March 31.

Hoherz said he was moving on primarily because he is acclimated to the area and prefers its recreational opportunities. Such opportunities are important for unwinding from the stress-filled job of police work, he said.

Hoherz, who will leave an approximately 70-man force for a 33-member department, said he "loved it out here" but had been considering the Weatherford position for three months. The position opened up because the Weatherford chief resigned, he said.

"I've had a great relationship with the council and Don (Davis)," Hoherz added.

As achievements during his 15 months here, Hoherz cited his decision to put more manpower on the streets and thus concentrate on "preventive rather than apprehensive law enforcement."

The results of that decision appeared to have been reflected in a major drop in the burglary rate during 1981. There were 390 burglary reports made to police that year, versus 562 in 1980, according to police statistics.

Davis pointed out that Hoherz had improved morale on the Big Spring force and had reduced the turnover rate.

"We've been since October without a resignation and in this day and age that's almost unheard of," Davis remarked.

Hoherz has 18 years of police work behind him and at 44 will be assuming his second job as chief of police when he travels to Weatherford next month. He came to Big Spring in December 1980 after serving on the Waco force for 13 years. His last position in Waco was administrative aide to the Waco chief of police.

Hoherz was picked after a five-man committee was formed in the wake of Stanley Bogard's resignation as Big Spring police chief. Davis said he was unsure whether he would seek help from a panel again as he searches for a new chief.

Until a permanent chief is found, an interim chief will be picked from within the department, Davis said.

Sale of $1.1 million airport bonds approved

By BILLELDER
Staff Writer

Financing of major construction projects at Big Spring Airport became assured last night when the city council approved a private sale of $1.1 million in revenue bonds to the four Howard County banks.

The bonds, which will finance the first part of a $4.3 million rebuilding of the airport terminal and hangars, will be purchased by the banks at 12 percent interest.

Total interest owed by the city over the next 10 years is expected to be $882,600, according to calculations submitted to the council. To retire the debt, the city will use rental revenue earned at the Big Spring Industrial Park, where O.I.L.'s expansion into airport acreage necessitated the rebuilding of the hangars and terminal building.

The sale to the banks, as city Finance Director Tom Ferguson pointed out prior to the council meeting, benefits both the city and the banks. The city is assured of a speedy sale (a public sale of the bonds could take considerably longer) and thus it will have cash when the time comes to pay for the hangars, the first two of which are being built by the Howard County Industrial Foundation. The banks, on the other hand, benefit by the deal from an investors' standpoint because of the high interest they will earn on the bonds.

First National is buying $550,000 worth, State National $350,000, Security State $150,000 and Coahoma State $100,000. The bonds have an average maturity date of 6.4 years.

City planners calculate that the city's average annual principal and interest payments will be $203,260 — or about $17,000 a month. The recently signed lease with O.I.L. states that O.I.L. will owe the city nearly $33,000 a month in rent when it assumes all the acreage it wants at the industrial park. It's out of that pool of rent money from O.I.L. that the city will draw funds to pay off its bond debt.

In related action, last night the council also approved an agreement with First Southwest Co. of Abilene to have First Southwest direct and coordinate the bond sale. For a $15,000 fee, the company will pay for the printing, registration and delivery of the bonds, as well as related expenses incurred by the bond issue.

In other business, the council passed an amendment to a city ordinance which will pave the way for retail sales of building materials in areas zoned for light commercial business as well as areas zoned s "planned development." Such sales are prohibited in those zones at the present.

City Manager Don Davis explained that the request to have this zoning change made had originated with an Odessa lumber company contemplating a move to Big Spring. That company, Cashway Lumber Home Center, is being represented by local real estate agent Jeff Brown, who went before the council to explain Cashway's plan.

The company, Brown said, has an option on three and a half acres on F.M. 700 across the street from the new Big Spring Mall. The property is zoned for light commercial business and thus Cashway, without the zoning change, would be prohibited from opening up shop on that site to do retail lumber sales.

Cashway, Brown added, is looking at spending a total of possibly $750,000 to construct an outlet in Big Spring.

When Cashway first went shopping for the site, Brown explained, it sought an opinion on whether the city might issue a specific use permit for those three and a half acres, which in effect would be a variance from the actual zoning designation, or whether the city might change the zoning on that site to heavy commercial business, under which Cashway could quality for both retail and wholesale building sales.

The problem with the specific use permit, Brown said, was that the city apparently frowned on issuing such variances. And the problem with changing the zoning designation to heavy commercial was that, if Cashway decided not to open shop in Big Spring and the city didn't change the zoning back to light commercial, then a business incompatible with surrounding businesses might open up on the site.

During the course of finding out what zoning changes if any were possible for the site, Brown pointed out that several department stores in Big Spring already were selling retail building materials in light commercial districts.

Dr. Donohue

Causes for cloudy urine

Dear Dr. Donohue: My urine is always cloudy and I notice a sediment in it at the bottom when I take samples. I am told this represents pus. I am being tested for TB. I do have some kidney damage because of my diabetes. The doctor says that if TB is not present, then the diabetes is to blame. I think it is too easy to blame diabetes for everything, while overlooking important symptoms. I guess my question is, what causes pus in the urine, when no infection can be found? This worries me. — M.L.S.

Pus cells can cause cloudy urine, but they are not the only cause. Quite often, cloudy urine does not indicate abnormality in either the kidney or bladder. Common mineral deposits can cloud it. These deposits are phosphates or carbonates, which are found in urine. That may be the sediment you mention.

This is easily determined. If one adds a little acetic acid to a urine sample, the deposits dissolve. A little vinegar serves the purpose. If the urine clears up, then the cloudiness is laid to the minerals I spoke of.

White blood cells (pus cells) in urine generally do indicate an infection. Urine clouded with white blood cells does not clear when acetic acid is added to it. The WBC's can, of course, be detected by examining a drop of urine under a microscope. Usually the bacteria causing the infection can be seen at the same time.

Kidney inflammation (nephritis) can cause white blood cells to shed in urine, but they may appear without the accompanying presence of the bacteria causing the infection. Hence, the plan to test for other infections — TB, for example, as in your case.

The real point here is that not all cloudy urine means infection. Of course, diabetics, like yourself, are very apt to develop urinary tract infection. But to base a diagnosis of infection on cloudiness of urine many times leads to false conclusions.

Dear Dr. Donohue: After a recent physical examination my doctor found a condition of the heart, which he said was common. He called it a micro prolax. Could you please state your knowledge of this — what it is, and what it means in terms of limitations on life-style? — A.R.

Mitral prolapse (I'm sure you mean that) refers to the fact that the mitral valve of the heart is a bit floppy. The mitral valve prevents backflow of blood when the heart pumps. Even so, having a floppy version is fairly common and causes no great problem for the many who have it. At times, there can be peculiar heartbeats associated with it, so any subsequent examining doctor might be told about its presence.

It is a little more vulnerable to infection than is a perfectly normal mitral valve. But for most, mitral valve prolapse is not a serious problem. If your doctor didn't think it was worth worrying about, you shouldn't either.

Headaches — you can beat them! Write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Tame Headaches." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Photography program is presented

Dale Olson of Photography by Dale presented tips on amateur photography during the 1970 Hyperion Club meeting Friday. Mrs. Skip McKenzie hosted the meeting and Mrs. Skipper Driver was co-hostess.

Olson demonstrated various types of photographic equipment available and its care and maintenance. He gave suggestions in taking portraits and scenic photographs.

This year's club project is a $200 donation to the public library's Renovation Fund for the children's section.

The next business meeting will be held in the Chapel of First Baptist Church March 31 at 12:15 p.m. Other Hyperion clubs will join the group for a program on "The Trial of Jesus" by Gul Jones, attorney, at 1 p.m.

COLORADO CITY (SC) — An engineering study of Colorado City's waste water plant and water treatment plant dominated Monday night's city council meeting.

Five engineering firms made presentations to the council.

The price on the studies ranged from a low of $4,600 for the water treatment plant to a high of $10,000. Estimated costs for studies on both plants varied from a low of $7,600 to a high of $23,000.

The five engineering firms which met with the council were Sherrill Engineering of Irving, Parkhill, Smith and Cooper of Lubbock, Freeze and Nichols of Fort Worth, S.K. Engineering of San Angelo and Willis Environmental of Marble Falls.

Four arrested in Loraine

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Four persons were arrested early Monday morning in a Loraine residence.

Officials identified the four persons, charged with the possession of a controlled substance, as Darryl Dwayne Mosher, 23, Route 1, Loraine; Raymond Darrell McDowell, 28, 108 West Fourth, Colorado City; Carmen Sanchez Mosher, 30, Route 1, Loraine; and Allen Bennett Mosher, 25, Route 1, Loraine.

According to Mitchell County Sheriff Wendell Bryant a warrant was issued for three men and one woman by County Judge Bill Tarter.

Suspects were arraigned before Judge Henry Doss who set bond at $3,000 each.

Assisting in the arrests were Assistant District Attorney Lonnie Markley, Texas Highway Patrolmen James Burson and Frank Constable and Loraine city officer Edgar Haltom.

'Tastes O' Texas' recipes recalled

When dredging up old recipes, my mother came across a recipe section the Herald published in November of 1962. It was called "Tastes O' Texas" and was a collection of local recipes. It was almost 20 years old. My mother showed it to me while I visited my family in Kerrville last weekend.

I brought it to the Herald and showed it to several people. We thought it would be fun to reprint some of the recipes. Most of the contributors to the old recipe section are no longer living here, but the women who contributed the recipes below are.

1 package cream cheese
Heat juice of pineapple, fill up cup with boiling water. Add cream cheese and Seven-up. When partially set, add pineapple and pecans. Fold in whipping cream.

Hawk Queens ready to deal out the 'Cards'

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

To find bi-region competition for the Howard College Hawk Queens, National Junior College Athletic Association officials had to go all the way to Athens, Texas, that is.

Trying to pick a winner in this one is all Greek to the forecasters as Henderson College matches all-American Lola Reescano against Nell Haskins, Kelli Mull and the rest of the high-flying Hawk Queens.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. on the campus of Tyler Junior College in Tyler. The contest will be broadcast in Big Spring over KBST 1490. Winner of the game advances to the 16-team national tournament which begins Tuesday in Kansas City.

Henderson brings a glossy 30-6 record into tonight's bi-region game. The Lady Cards rallied to defeat Temple in a best-of-three series to advance as the champions of Region XIV. The teams each won on their home courts but Henderson claimed a 63-58 victory Saturday night in Waco to take the championship.

The loss to Temple in the first game of the playoff snapped a 20-game winning streak for the Lady Cards. Henderson appeared in last year's national tournament and has won two consecutive region titles and three straight zone crowns.

Tyler had been the pre-season favorite to win the region Howard coach Don Stevens reports but "that didn't pan out at all." Gary Ashlock's team may have surprised a few folks and would like nothing better than to join the men's team at the national tourney.

"We'll have size on them and they are not especially quick," says Stevens, "but they are great leapers." The strategy for the Hawk Queens is simple—work the ball inside and make the Lady Cards stop Haskins, Susan Cordell and Melissa Luna.

"Our defense will hurt their inside game," Stevens added. He is glad that Henderson is not too quick, saying that quick teams have been the hardest for the Queens to play against this season.

Priority No. 1 is to stop the scoring of Reescano who was named first team all-American as a freshman. Her 22-points a game should make her a top choice at repeating that honor this spring. The 5-10 forward scored 17 points and pulled down 14 rebounds in Saturday's title game against Temple.

Another player that makes the Lady Cards go is point guard Darlene Primeaux. Both Reescano and Primeaux are sophomores giving Henderson good leadership and experience on the court.

Freshman post Margaret Peters scored 20 and hauled in 16 rebounds Saturday night and will have to be stopped. Rounding out the starting five are Sheila VanShoubrouek and Kay Kieckie.

The Queens will counter, of course, with the high-scoring Haskins who also put in 22 points each game. She is an all-American candidate for this season, also contributing almost 11 rebounds a game.

Rebekah Lodge to celebrate

Mildred Collins installed Gracie Lee Grider as musician and Rosa Lee Hill as right support to the chaplain at Wednesday's meeting of Big Spring Rebekah Lodge No. 284. The meeting took place at the Odd Fellows Lodge Hall.

Members reported 36 visits to the sick and voted to supply cookies to Big Spring State Hospital April 5 and Oct. 4.

The Lodge will celebrate its 60th birthday March 20. Lodges in the area including Snyder, Lamesa, Midland and Odessa are invited to the 6:30 p.m. event. Those attending should wear old fashioned dresses. Pot luck supper will be served and entertainment will be provided by Marvin Holland and his band.

Members of the March refreshment committee are Gay Smith, Janel Barnhill, Jewel Fields and Myrtle Morris. March birthdays will be celebrated at the 7:30 p.m. meeting Tuesday.

Study Club attends musical

Members and guests of the GFWC Forsan Study Club attended the Midland Community Theater production of "Funny Girl" Sunday.

Following the musical production, the group met for dinner at the Blue Star Inn.

The next business meeting will take place March 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Claudie Patterson. Members are reminded to bring gifts for the children at M.D. Anderson Hospital, Houston.

Hyperions tour home

Members of the 1955 Hyperion Club toured the home of Nan McKenney during the club's March meeting.

The home is located northeast of Big Spring. Mrs. McKenney collects antiques, quilts, art work, lanterns, yellow ware and other items of the past. She combined the beauty of the past with the present conveniences to create a unique atmosphere.

Mrs. Gwen Fryar and Betty Barr assisted Mrs. McKenney in serving refreshments. The country setting including a red-checked tablecloth, straw baskets and wood burning stove.

TIPS FOR ENERGY SAVERS
Maintaining Your Car: Check tire pressure regularly.

Underinflated tires increase gas use. You can lose about 2 percent in fuel economy for every pound of pressure under the recommended pounds-per-square-inch.

Dear Abby

Organizations help prostitutes

DEAR ABBY: In reference to a letter asking if there is a "Hookers Anonymous": There is an organization made up of former madams, call girls and streetwalkers who counsel people trying to get out of prostitution. That group, formerly known as CAT (California Authority of Trollops), counsels at the Mary Magdalene Project in Los Angeles, where up to six prostitutes can live temporarily while they make the difficult transition into legitimate employment.

"Children of the Night" is a Los Angeles organization that helps 10- to 17-year-olds who have been forced out on the street to hustle as prostitutes. (About half of all prostitutes are 18 years old or younger.) Father Ritter renders a similar service to young male prostitutes at Convent House in New York City. It was my research and work with prostitutes that led me to develop programs for both adult and child prostitutes, who are often disregarded by more traditional agencies that provide social services. Our hotline for referrals to specific programs for the prostitute is (213) 550-7188.

DR. LOIS LEE Thank you for bringing attention to a widely neglected and often overlooked population of people who are entitled to social services like everyone else. If organizations such as yours do not exist in other metropolitan areas, they should. ***

PUNK FASHIONS — Laura Warren and Cavan McMahon were in high fashion at a recent "punk party" at Dora Roberts Community Center. The party was organized by a group of Big Spring High School senior boys and chaperoned by parents. Approximately 135 guests attended the evening of music and dancing.

Art Association plans April show

Big Spring Art Association will sponsor an area art show April 16-18 at Big Spring Mall, F.M. 700. Mike Thornton, head of the Fine Arts Department at Western Texas College, Snyder, will be judge. The show will consist of 11 categories: graphics, pastels, mixed media, watercolor, acrylic, oil, crafts, sculpture, photography, youth, and class or copy work. There is no limit on size or number of entries. BSAA will take a 20 percent commission on all sales made.

African Violets

Mrs. Thelma Montgomery presented a program on growing African Violets at the Texas Star African Violet Club meeting Thursday. The club met in the home of Mrs. Allie Moore with Mrs. Lona Crocker presiding.

Mrs. Montgomery said to have the room where the violets are grown set up nicely and kept as clean as possible. The temperature should be kept at 65-75 degrees during the day and about 60 degrees at night. Open the windows often for ventilation.

She said leaves should have a healthy, clean look. Holding the violets under the faucet sideways and allowing the tepid water to wash over the leaves is something violets love. The violets should not be dried out in the sun afterwards.

Mrs. Montgomery suggested fertilizing the violets each time they are watered by using a small amount of fertilizer mixed with water. Humidity is very important. The simplest way to raise humidity is to put containers of cool water among the plants.

When potting, the pot should be one-third the diameter of the plant. If the plant is nine inches wide, use a 3 inch pot. Repotting often gives a plant new life.

The soil should be light so the roots can spread out and the water can seep through easily. Mrs. Montgomery said plants do not like to be cramped. Give them a chance to flatten out so they can bask in the light. Occasional spraying with warm water for humidity and cleansing is good for the plants.

When buying new plants, it's best to keep them away from other plants a few days to make sure they do not have any diseases or pests and will not spread to other plants. When watering, water should be at room temperature. The plant should not be overwatered. If soil is wet, wait. If it is dry, water.

The Club's next meeting will be April 1 in the home of Mrs. Delia Sullivan.

The Mall Street Journal

Let me start this column off by thanking everyone that made the opening of the Big Spring Mall the great success it was. In the coming weeks I will be writing this column to inform and enlighten you of what is going on at the Big Spring Mall. I am very proud of the new mall it has brought to Big Spring the kind of retail Big Springers have needed and wanted for years. I am especially proud from a life long resident of Big Spring point of view, it goes without saying that just a few short years ago things didn't look so good for us, but all that is over now and the new Mall is just another sign of our progress.

The Big Spring Mall is a wonderful mix of local, national, and regional tenants. Bealls and Bealls are the anchor stores and are managed by two of the finest managers one could hope for. Gene Madson of Bealls and Don Fisher of Penneys are both wonderful additions to the community in fact both have already in the short time they've been here joined civic clubs. They have also given a lot of valuable advice to yours truly. Which brings me to another point, any civic club or organization that would like to have a function at the mall please contact me and if it is within my guidelines, we will be happy to help in any way. The Big Spring Mall also has several annual promotions for your shopping enjoyment, coming soon is the Easter Bunny, an art show, an arts and crafts show, an antique show, flea market, and a community bazaar. All of these events are designed to make your shopping experience more enjoyable. If you haven't seen the new mall, please come by many of the merchants are still having their grand opening sales, or come by to see some of our old friends that have moved to the mall like Helen Vaughn of Helens, formerly Helens Shoe Shop, and Roxanne Rich of the Kopper Kettle and don't forget Rick Miller of Zales, or Gage Mims at Radio Shack. Take time to make friends with the new managers they are new citizens of Big Spring and have made an investment in our future.

Well, this just about brings to an end the first Mall Street Journal. I will be back next week with even more to say about the new shopping experience, the new Big Spring Mall.

Police Beat

Theft by appropriation count names local man

Big Spring police arrested a man on a charge of theft by appropriation yesterday after Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin issued a warrant for the man's arrest.

Pete Campos of 108 Carey was arrested by officers at his home at 3:54 p.m. yesterday on the theft charge, according to police reports.

According to Detective Avery Falkner, Campos had been in possession of a TV set worth $300 which allegedly was stolen by someone else from the Holiday Inn. Campos allegedly sold the TV set to an informant, Falkner said.

Campos additionally was arrested on two traffic warrants, according to police reports.

Survivors file first suit in hotel blaze

HOUSTON (AP) — A 17-year-old survivor of a family killed in the Westchase Hilton Hotel fire has filed a lawsuit accusing the hotel, its parent chain and the company that sold the alarm system of "gross negligence."

Attorneys for Silvia Espanol, whose parents, two sisters and grandmother died in Saturday's pre-dawn blaze, filed the wrongful death suit Tuesday in Harris County probate court. The suit did not specify compensation sought by the teenager.

Hernando Espanol, his wife, Isabel, and the couple's two daughters, Sonia and Luz Adria, and Mrs. Espanol's 70-year-old mother, Isabel Hernandez, died as they tried to escape the dense smoke that filled the hotel's fourth floor.

Espanol was an employee of Gulf Oil Corp., and the family was staying at the Houston hotel while waiting to be transferred to Venezuela.

A Dallas woman and a Metairie, La., family of four who planned to attend a wedding here also died in the second-worst fire in this city's history.

The surviving Miss Espanol, who was staying at a friend's house the night of the fire, claimed in the suit her family suffered "extreme physical pain and mental anguish" as they tried to escape the flames and smoke.

Spokesman for the hotel and the Hilton chain refused to comment.

Ron Holt, president of Texas Electronic Systems Inc., said the company sold the alarm to the hotel but did not manufacture nor install the system.

A fire safety specialist investigating the possibility that toxic fumes — other than carbon monoxide — killed the victims is expected to report his findings by Friday, authorities said.

Fire officials say the blaze probably started in an overstuffed chair from an unattended cigarette.

Sonny Crocker is improving

City Employee Sonny Crocker of 1740 Purdue, who recently was injured in a gas explosion at Malone-Hogan Hospital, is improving after receiving burns to his right hand, right ear and face.

Crocker, son of retired Fire Chief H.V. "Burr" Crocker, is listed in good condition in Malone-Hogan Hospital. His room is No. 330.

police said.

• Adela Robles of 4209 Walnut was arrested at an entrance to Comanche Trail Park at 1:57 p.m. yesterday on a charge of driving with a suspended license, according to police reports.

• Henry Granados of 3707 Connally was arrested on a charge of public intoxication after a car he was driving allegedly struck a parked car in the 800 block of North West Fourth, police said.

Granados received minor injuries in the accident, which happened at 12:50 a.m. today, but declined medical treatment, police said.

• Don Adams reported to police yesterday that a burglary recently had taken place at Tex-Pack, 501 N.

Local jobless rate jumps

By BOB CARPENTER Staff Writer

The unemployment rate in Big Spring rose to 5.7 percent in January — a 2.8 percent increase over December figures, according to Gerald Damm of the Texas Employment Commission. However, the local jobless rate is still 3 percent below the national rate of 8.8 percent.

Gerald Damm, TEC office manager, gave several reasons for the increased rate.

"When these statistics were compiled the cotton harvest was ending and Christmas activity was also ending, so it's really just a seasonal thing," he said.

He also said there had been a slowdown in drilling and oil field activity in the area. Damm said that Big Spring was still experiencing a population growth which inflates the city's civilian work force and adds to the jobless rate.

"A lot of people are still coming in here because of the bad economy in other places. We had about 1,000 more people in the work force in January '82 than we did in January '81," Damm said. TEC figures showed Big Spring to have a civilian work force of 15,832 for January 1982 contrasted with 14,802 in January 1981.

"The boom might be slowing down just a bit, but there are still jobs available," Damm said. He said currently his office has approximately 100 job openings.

Big Spring's 5.7 percent unemployment is average in Texas with the state's overall jobless rate hovering at 5.9 percent.

The rate in selected cities included Amarillo, 7.2 percent; Lubbock, 4.4 percent; Midland, 5.4 percent; Odessa, 4.6 percent and San Angelo, 4.2 percent.

HC schedules career forums

By BOB CARPENTER Staff Writer

The Howard County Junior College District will present a series of programs March 15, 22, 29 and April 5 pertaining to career choices. The four programs will include medical, business, agricultural and technological fields.

HCJCD has scheduled members from the Big Spring community to speak about their careers and answer any questions people may have.

"We're trying to approach career day in a different manner. We want to get the community involved in this year's career program," said Cheri Sparks, associate vice president for student life.

"We are getting people from the community to speak realistically about their professions. People will be informed of salaries, working conditions and educational requirements of different fields," she said.

The programs will be held on four consecutive Mondays starting March 15 in the Tumbleweed Room of the student union building on the HCJC campus. The programs will last 7-9 p.m. and there will be no admission. Interpreters for the deaf will be furnished.

For more information about the HC career programs call the college at 267-6311.

The Blue Knights are bringing the benefit show to Big Spring in order to raise money for the charities they support.

Birdwell. Missing are automotive tools worth an undetermined amount of money, according to police reports.

• Motor vehicles driven by Dorris Carmichael of Box 216 in Ackerly and Lisa Sledge of 2715 Rebecca collided in the 1100 block of Highway 87 at 4:02 p.m. yesterday, police said. There were no injuries reported.
