Big Spring man shot, suspect surrenders

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

A shooting at approximately 9:30 p.m. last night outside of the American Legion Post 355 building on Driver Road has left one man in Malone-Hogan Hospital and another charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Terry Watkins, 42, 1708 Owens, was admitted to the hospital with a single bullet wound to the abdomen. He remains in stable condition at Malone-Hogan today, ac-ording to a hospital spokesperson.

Watkins' alleged assailant is Delbert Gene Chesney, 47, of 1102 Runnels. Chesney turned himself into the Big Spring Police Station at 10:30 p.m. where he was arrested by Howard County sheriffs' deputies. Chesney's bond of $10,000 was set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin and posted by Harvey Hooser and Elden Barnes at 11:40 p.m. when Chesney was released.

According to the report filed by investigating deputies Alvin White, Bill Shankles and Allen Parrish, the events of last night took place as follows: Chesney had sent Louis Puga into the American Legion lounge to get Watkins outside. Once outside the building, Watkins was allegedly shot once by Chesney. American Legion Manager Louis A. Casillas and another patron, Melvin Altom, then wrestled the gun from Chesney.

Altom then rushed the wounded Watkins to the hospital in his vehicle while Casillas kept the .22 caliber weapon, which he turned over to police upon Chesney's arrest.

Casillas told deputies that Chesney and Watkins had a long-running disagreement and Chesney had taken a shot at Watkins earlier.

The investigation into the shooting is continuing by the sheriff and deputies.

School board contenders comment on major issues

The Herald has given questionnaires today to three candidates running for the four year unexpired term on the Howard County Junior College District Board of Trustees. Only one of the following candidates will be elected to a place on the board.

The questionnaires are designed to give the voters information with which to compare the candidates. Today's hopefuls are Gail Earls, Jerry Higgins and Louis Stallings.

The candidates were asked to keep their answers limited to 50 words per question. Their answers are being run exactly as received.

Gail Earls

1. Do you think Southwest Institute for the Deaf should become a separate entity from Howard College. Why?

Yes, I would like to see both Howard College and SWICD function on their own, but at this time I am not familiar with the Federal laws on funding or what it takes for both to function on their own. I think right now I am too new, to really go in to details, without getting all the facts.

2. What is the most important thing a junior college should offer its students?

A good educational curriculum with the best educators we can have to prepare the students for a higher education at a four-year college or university.

3. If you feel changes should be made in the Howard County Junior College District, explain those changes.

No comment at this time.

4. What do you have to offer the HCJC board?

My time and my support and a willingness to learn more about Howard College and how I can best serve.

5. What sort of programs would you like to see come to Howard College?

At this time I don't know all the programs that are offered at Howard College and what is available for Howard College in the future, but feel that Howard College will have the programs that best, serve the students.

6. How do you feel each board member should be involved in the board's activities?

I feel board members should be

Jerry Higgins

1. Do you think Southwest Institute for the Deaf should become a separate entity from Howard College. Why?

Yes, any special education programs should be under the direction of people that are experts in the area in question. I realize it cost more in this procedure, but if you are going to get any results then it is best to do the job right at the beginning of these programs.

2. What is the most important thing a junior college should offer its students?

It is common knowledge that all junior colleges should offer two year vocational programs and the first two years of required courses for the students to enter four year institutions. Howard College has adequate programs in these areas. However, the priorities in budget spending need some adjustments.

3. If you feel changes should be made in the Howard County Junior College District, explain those changes.

Howard College is a good junior college. I feel that the faculty at Howard College, in their particular divisions, know how to run their programs. The important thing for the trustees to do is to see to it that the departments have adequate money to carry out their programs.

4. What do you have to offer the HCJC board?

I have been involved in various universities as a chemistry professor for over 20 years. During this time I have been a member of several committees some of which were financial committees. I know how college budgets are

Louis Stallings

1. Do you think Southwest Institute for the Deaf should become a separate entity from Howard College. Why?

Yes, I do—originally when SWID was established, it was projected that enough State & Federal funds would be available to finance operating cost of SWID that no additional revenue burden would be placed on the local tax-payers, but that has not been the case. The Howard County Jr. College District had to subsidize SWID by approximately $230,000 the first year.

2. What is the most important thing a junior college should offer its students?

Primarily, I feel a junior college should strive to offer a quality education, training our students for today's job market at an economical cost to the student.

3. If you feel changes should be made in the Howard County Junior College District, explain those changes.

HCJC should constantly be attempting to upgrade its curriculum and one of the best ways, would be offering educational fields that would be compatible with industry changes and demands, particularly in our own area.

4. What do you have to offer the HCJC board?

As a life-long resident of Howard County and over twenty-five years of business experience in Big Spring, I believe I have a solid background with a grasp of the needs of our community in relationship to the goals of HCJC.

5. What sort of programs would you like to see come to Howard College?

Reagan tries to cool drive for nuke freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is trying to blunt a congressional drive for an immediate nuclear arms freeze by saying it would leave the United States dangerously behind the Soviet Union and prompt the Kremlin to spurn real weapons reductions.

Reagan, declaring in a nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday there could be no winner in a nuclear war, also invited the Soviets "to join with us now to substantially reduce nuclear weapons and make an important breakthrough" for lasting peace.

The Kremlin, responding today on Radio Moscow said, "The president supported a speedier buildup of U.S. strategic armaments, including new bombers and ground- and sea-based nuclear missiles."

"Only when that was completed, he said, would his administration begin talks with the Soviet Union on nuclear weapons. This proves President Reagan's intention to break strategic parity and to achieve military superiority over the Soviet Union," the statement said.

Reagan said Wednesday night that the nuclear freeze proposal by Sens. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., would maintain a "definite margin of superiority" favoring the Soviets.

"The Soviets' great edge is one in which they could absorb our retaliatory blow and hit us again," he said.

Hatfield and other proponents of an immediate freeze reacted coolly.

"When he talks about the Russians being able to absorb a retaliatory strike, that indicates fantasyland thought or feeling," the Republican senator said.

Reagan threw his support to a rival resolution, backed by a majority in the Senate, that would not block his plans to deploy new strategic bombers, missiles and submarines pending a Soviet-American accord on arms reduction.

On El Salvador, the President said, with a right-wing coalition apparently emerging in El Salvador, any attempt to retreat from current reforms there "would give us great difficulties" in continuing support for the Central American nation.

The president, in his first public comment on Sunday's elections in the strife-torn country, said the voting "really showed that there is a real desire for democracy there, and I am therefore going to be optimistic about what happens."

Asked whether the administration would back away from supporting any government in El Salvador that abandons social reforms instituted by the current U.S.-backed military-civilian junta led by Jose Napoleon Duarte, Reagan avoided endorsing the idea that the rightists would form the government.

"We are watching this very carefully. I think that it would give us great difficulties if a government now appeared on the scene that totally turned away from the reforms that have been instituted," he said.

On the nuclear weapons issue, Reagan said the Soviet Union has achieved "a definite margin of superiority." An immediate freeze of U.S. and Soviet arsenals, he said, "would not only be disadvantageous, in fact, even dangerous to us" but also would remove Soviet incentives to negotiate substantial reductions.

District, county clerks to discuss elections here

A retirement gift is expected to be presented to Pat Finley, county clerk of Ward County. David H. Weant, county and district clerk of Crockett County, will give the response.

Afternoon roundtable discussions are scheduled to cover a variety of topics, but especially aspects of the upcoming special election, the May Democratic primary and the general election in September.

Bingo issue draws 153 absentee votes

Final figures for the absentee voting in the Howard County bingo special election, the Howard County Junior College District board and the Big Spring Independent School District board indicate a good early turnout for the elections, according to County Clerk Margaret Ray.

Absentee ballots for bingo totaled

153 with six mailed out. The HCJC board ballots tallied 148 with six mailed out while the BSISD board race had 137 absentee ballots including five mailed out.

The city council absentee voting reached 64 ballots cast, according to a spokesperson in City Secretary Tom Ferguson's office.

Reagan to enter hospital for tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will undergo tests today at the National Naval Medical Center in suburban Bethesda, Md., because of a "slight discomfort" in his urinary tract in recent weeks, a White House official said today.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the discomfort had occurred a few weeks ago but had "cleared up after a few days on its own."

He said Reagan, who held a nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night, was not experiencing any pain today. Reagan celebrated his 71st birthday on Feb. 6.

In 1967, while he was governor of California, Reagan underwent surgery to remove calcium deposits in his urinary tract.

Reagan planned to fly to the hospital in Bethesda by helicopter in early afternoon and return to the White House later in the day. White House officials said a statement would then be issued by Dr. Daniel Ruge, the White House physician.

"We will tell you everything we know," Speakes promised.

FCC gives approval for long-distance rate hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was authorized today to restructure its interstate long-distance phone rates in a way that will add an average of about 1.8 percent to the rates for most consumers.

Under the order adopted by the Federal Communications Commission, the price of "short hop" phone calls that cross state borders but travel a distance of 55 miles or less will rise the most, anywhere from 11 percent to 21 percent.

The cost of operator-assisted calls of three minutes or longer will also rise, as will the rates for long-distance calls during business hours, even if dialed directly.

The rates for most calls dialed directly during evening hours, rates will be lower because the standard discount offered now between the hours of 5 p.m. and 11 p.m. will be increased from 35 percent to 40 percent.

The cost of credit card calls also will fall, dropping below the rate for placing calls collect or through a pay phone. In addition, the initial billing period for operator-assisted calls will be reduced from three minutes to one minute, meaning consumers won't pay for unused time under three minutes.

Polish plane hijacked

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A Polish plane was hijacked from Krakow to Vienna today, touching treetops along the way to evade Communist radar, police said. The hijackers were thought to be soldiers and the plane a military aircraft.

Witnesses said the plane, traveling at an altitude of only 200-260 feet, flew along the Danube and the Danube Canal before touching down at the Vienna airport.

"In order to evade radar detection in Czechoslovakia the plane was flying so low it touched tree tops. Parts of branches can still be seen on the damaged wings," a police spokesman said.

"It appears that the plane was hijacked by two Polish soldiers, but we have initial language problems and are looking for an interpreter."

Lamesa ASCS official to discuss set aside plan

LAMESA (SC) — Eddie Brown of the Lamesa ASCS office has scheduled a meeting for 10 a.m. Friday to discuss the set aside program with area farmers. Farmers will be able to ask any questions they may have about the program and there will be no time limit on the meeting.

"There are several questions farmers have which makes them unsure about the program," Brown said, "so I'm taking the time to clear up any misconceptions they may have."

"I've set no time limit on the meeting and I'm going to answer every question to the best of my ability and hopefully farmers can understand the complete program," Brown said.

TEC in Lamesa operating with trimmed staff, budget

LAMESA (SC) — The TEC in Lamesa Employment Commission is open and operating on a slim budget with members from the Big Spring and San Angelo TEC offices handling employment chores as best they can.

According to a spokesman for the San Angelo TEC the Lamesa office will continue to operate with temporary help until the TEC has authorization to hire permanent help.

Persons needing to file for unemployment are reminded that due to the small staff at the office, Thursday is the only day set aside to file for unemployment insurance.

Higgins

Continued from page one distributed and the normal procedures in which the monies are used. The students come first and I shall be a taxpayers' watchdog.

5. What sort of programs would you like to see come to Howard College?

At the present time I believe Howard College has all of the programs it can afford. These programs are standard programs and are adequate for the proper training of students. However, we must see to it that these standard programs are properly funded.

6. How do you feel each board member should be involved in the board's activities?

It is the responsibility of each board member to see to it that each and every dollar of taxpayers' money is used to educate the student. The student comes first! If any money is left over then priorities may be established for the beautification of the campus.

7. Where do you feel the finances of the college district should be concentrated?

All monies should be concentrated under the direct control of the Trustees and the president of the college. However, it should be pointed out that there are proper procedures and budget categories for which taxpayers' monies are distributed. These procedures should be followed to the letter. Also, since Howard College is a county college the budget funds should be distributed equally among all of the city banks.

7 missing after avalanche

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — and dog sleds to reach the victims. The National Weather Service said 12 feet of snow had fallen in the area since Sunday — including 5 feet that came down in a 24-hour period ending Wednesday afternoon — and snow was 16 feet deep in places.

"We really don't know how many victims we are looking for," Placer County Sheriff's Sgt. Steven Reader said. "The lodge says there are four to seven employees unaccounted for, but there could be civilians on top of that."

Reader said avalanche experts began blasting away snow overhangs at dawn.

"It's such a slow process because of the amount of snow involved," he said. "But we've got 75 searchers poised to go, and we hope to move them in shortly," he said.

Outlaw Band to provide music for annual party

The Outlaw Band of the Big Spring Federal Camp will provide dinner music for the annual Chuck Wagon Party scheduled for Thursday, May 6, in the Dora Roberts Community Center.

Only those persons holding membership in the Heritage Museum will be eligible to attend the barbecue, which will be catered by Travis Mauldin. Reservations for tickets are now being accepted by personnel at the museum.

Because this is the centennial year of the City of Big Spring itself, pictures dating from 1882 are being gathered by Joe Pickle for display during the party.

Decorations will be in charge of a committee headed by Ruby Allred. Miniature cotton bales, oil wells and windmills will be displayed.

Efforts are being renewed to rebuild membership in the museum. The costs can run as little as $5 per person.

The party gets under way at 7 p.m. Tickets for last year's barbecue actually sold for more than is being asked for this year's tickets, when an Odessa catering firm served the meal.

Colorado City principal quits
COLORADO CITY (SC) — Colorado City ISD has a vacancy in its system with the resignation of Middle School Principal Doyle Lowrance.

Lowrance will be leaving at the end of his contract in June to become superintendent in Munday.

According to Lowrance, "These opportunities come along and we can't say 'No'. I'm looking forward to getting started in my new job although I can't say we're glad to leave Colorado City. I think the school system here is excellent and I've seen the dedication of those connected with it."

Lowrance formerly was connected with the Munday school system in the capacities of assistant football coach, head football coach and high school principal.

School superintendent Harlie Charlie Uselton stated losing a man of Lowrance's caliber leaves a gap in the school system and currently a replacement for the middle school position is being sought.

Duarte defies rightist ouster campaign

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Defying a rightist campaign to oust him, President Jose Napoleon Duarte said his Christian Democratic Party — with him at the helm — must be part of El Salvador's new government.

"Five hundred thousand voters cannot be ignored," Duarte said Wednesday, as nearly complete returns from Sunday's Constituent Assembly election gave his party 41.2 percent of the votes, 11 percentage points more than their closest rivals.

Right-wing leaders said one of their conditions for inclusion of the Christian

Democrats in a majority coalition was the ouster of Duarte, who has headed the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta for the past 15 months and is anathema to the rightists because of the junta's reforms, including land redistribution and nationalization of the banking system.

Duarte, who was robbed of the presidency in 1972 by the military, insisted he would retain control of his party and would not be forced out.

"I can't sit idly by while people wonder what happens," he told supporters at the party headquarters.

"We are the first political force in El Salvador and it has been shown that a Christian Democratic presence is an indispensable element in the solution of the country's problems," the centrist party said in a two-page newspaper advertisement.

"The Salvadoran people have voted massively against violence and in favor of democracy, reforms and peace, granting a mandate to the (party) to continue direction of the process."

The leftists, waging a guerrilla war to take over the government, boycotted the election, but the voters repudiated them with a turnout of nearly 1.2 million, a fourth of the population.

Returns from 4,500 of the 4,556 polling stations indicated the rightist parties would get 36 of the 60 seats in the Constituent Assembly to 24 for the Christian Democrats. The rightists formed a "caucus" that they said could lead to a coalition. But it was learned that no formal alliances exist yet, and any that may have been formed immediately after the election have since been broken.

The Holy Week holiday begins Friday night, and since it traditionally halts all work in El Salvador and most other Latin American countries, it was expected that the political infighting would be shelved until after Easter.

President Reagan at his news conference Wednesday night warned the rightists that any attempt to retreat from the junta's reforms would give his administration "great difficulties" in continuing its support of the Salvadoran government and its war against the leftist guerrillas.

Sen. Y KAUM, Kan., who led the eight-member U.S. observer team at the election, said despite the combined majority of the votes, Congress may cut off aid if they take over the government.

HAITIAN DEATH TOLL MOUNTS — Boca Raton police and Broward County medical examiners inspect the body of a Haitian male on a dock in Boca Raton, Fla. Wednesday. Ten additional bodies washed ashore today along an area of Florida's coastline from Pompano Beach north to Boca Raton. The Haitians are all victims of the capsized freighter "Esperancia."

Second volcanic eruption raises death toll to 12

PICHUCALCO, Mexico (AP) — The second volcanic eruption in three days near the Reforma oilfield in southeast Mexico has raised the death toll to at least 12 dead and hundreds injured, rescue workers and doctors reported.

Rescue workers said they still had not determined whether any bodies were still in three villages at the foot of El Chichonal that were buried under burning lava and ashes from the first eruption of the 4,314-foot volcano early Monday. But Gov. Juan Sabines Gutierrez of Chiapas state told reporters he did not believe the death toll would increase much.

Rescue operations and relief work were set back briefly Wednesday morning when El Chichonal erupted for the second time, spewing out more rocks, lava and ash. There was some panic, but the eruption was less intense than the first one and began subsiding shortly after it started.

The first eruption covered rigs in the adjoining oilfield with a layer of ash almost two inches thick, but officials said the equipment was not damaged and production was not affected.

Peasants living around the volcano continued their exodus along the roads of Chiapas and Tabasco states Wednesday. They walked wearily beside mules and horses carrying whatever belongings they were able to take.

Many did not appear to know what their final destination would be.

Florencio Hernandez, a 32-year-old farm worker with six children, said he was leaving because "the land is dead, it will no longer serve for anything."

El Chichonal is on the border of Chiapas and Tabasco, about 800 miles southeast of Mexico City and 18 miles from Pichucalco, a town of 20,000 people.

White defends rebate suit; GM holds back interest plan

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A new Texas Motor Vehicle Commission regulation that prohibits incentive offers requiring dealer contributions will exclude Texans from a new 12.8 percent interest rate program for General Motors cars.

Commission Executive Director Russell Harding said GM representatives declined to negotiate the effect of the rule adopted by a 5-1 vote Wednesday on the interest rate incentive program.

"General Motors Acceptance Corp. made the decision not to offer its special 12.8 percent retail financing rate program in Texas very reluctantly," said GMAC President Robert F. Murphy in Detroit.

He said the company wanted to offer the program in Texas but the new regulation specifically prohibits the plan.

"No other state prohibits this type of incentive program," said Murphy.

GM officials announced Tuesday that Texas would be excluded because of the new rule and because of the state's pending lawsuit against the automaker's "Let's Get Moving" rebate offer that expired Wednesday.

The interest incentive is banned by the rule because dealers must agree to give up 70 percent of the finance charge income — about 1 percentage point on a loan — they normally receive to finance a car through GMAC.

"That's a considerable amount of money to dealers," Harding said. "It would be unrealistic to expect dealers to ignore that. The whole point is there are ways to design these programs where they are open and aboveboard."

Harding said Ford and Chrysler offered rebate programs in Texas and did not require dealers to contribute to the cost. Ford's program did require dealer contribution, but not in Texas, he said.

Texas Attorney General Mark White declined to endorse the new rule Wednesday, but he defended the lawsuit.

He said as long as dealers must contribute part of the cost of the incentive, consumers can expect to pay hidden costs.

"I think in this case General Motors has acted in bad taste, if not worse, and I think they have attempted to be abusive and intimidating, and I will not permit the office of attorney general to be intimidated by any corporation," White said.

Asked if the rule was based on a presumption that dealers would deceive consumers, White said no.

"I'm going on the basis they're all human," White said. "Human nature tells you he (a dealer) is going to try to recover his loss."

"Honest business people with honest deals, that's all we're asking for," White said.

Davis, Malone have the edge

Harold Davis, David Huff and Dr. P. W. Malone are candidates for the regular six-year terms in the Howard County Junior College District trustee election. Two of the three will be elected Saturday.

All three are intelligent men, and all three are devoted to education. The election of any two of them would not result in any drastic changes in the way the college is operated.

Huff may be a little more contemporary, and his election would add young blood to the board.

HOWEVER, DAVIS AND MALONE have the edge because of their experience. Malone has been on the board for 37 years and was chairman of the board during its great building period. Davis has been on the board for 11 years, the last four as vice-chairman.

The experience and insight of these two men are invaluable. They have helped build the college and watched it grow. It's obvious they both care deeply about Howard College. Having invested so much time and effort over the years toward the success of the college entitles them to continue serving on the board.

AT TIMES WE FEEL the college board is in dire need of someone who isn't afraid to ask questions and who isn't afraid to speak up. Not to disrupt, not to rabble rouse, not to engage in mudslinging — but simply to promote the kinds of checks and balances between itself and an administration that are healthy for any institution.

With the choices available in this election, however, we see no compelling reason not to reelect the incumbents.

'Chariots' cherished

It was a victory of sorts Monday night. After having driven 90 miles round-trip to Midland to catch this darkhorse film "Chariots of Fire," I raised my fists in triumph when the Oscar for best picture went to the well-done English film.

Upon leaving the theater, I was ready to mail my ballot to Price-Waterhouse in favor of "Chariots." Not having seen "Atlantic City," (who has?), I was most fortunate to have caught the other four nominees before the Academy Awards for a change.

In fact, that was the mission of Monday's trip. The night before, I finally had the time to spend with Warren Beatty's "Reds" after only a couple weeks earlier having seen "On Golden Pond." There had been no problem catching "Raiders of the Lost Ark." I've seen that one three times or approximately five, under the national average.

AFTER LEAVING the theater Monday, I made a bee-line to the nearest record store to pick up a copy of the "Chariots" soundtrack by Vangelis. No such luck. I walked into the store toward the clerk and before I could open my mouth, she answered, "Sorry, we're out."

Theaters lucky enough to possess the reels of "Chariots" are probably doing a heated business now. Its release, however, was kept such a great secret, second only to Atlantic City whose distribution was as secretive as the results in Monday night's envelopes.

For those not having had the chance to view the film, the work is a pleasant surprise. I thought perhaps my enthusiasm was heightened because it dealt with sports but its non-athletic elements made the picture complete.

It was a story about two men and their ideals, one for God and the other a battle for personal recognition. In addition, the work captured the time when Americans were held in high esteem across the globe and national pride and dignity were supreme. In addition the 100-meter dash starting point was lined with fair-skinned athletes (no wonder their records haven't stood.)

SOMETHING I didn't realize until the final portion of the movie was that the film brought the two competitors to life so well, I was pulling for them in the Olympics against their American counterparts. Now that's what I call a successful movie.

"Chariots" echoed the tone of the year in motion pictures — a refreshing look away from our daily grind. With the exception of "Atlantic City" (which again I didn't see), all four top nominees and other works such as "Arthur," "Dragonslayer," "Ragtime" and "French Lieutenant's Woman" took audiences away to another day and time or made them laugh their cares away.

Hats off to the motion picture industry in 1981. It must have been tough to pick a winner this year because of the excellence of choice. Best of all, when it came time to pick a champ, the Academy may have surprised a few but warmed the hearts of many with its nod to "Chariots" as the year's finest.

Brezhnev's deadly missile game

WASHINGTON — To be fitting, Leonid Brezhnev should have waited until today to announce his missile "freeze." It would have been a grim April Fool joke.

Top-secret documents make it clear that the Soviet boss is playing a deadly shell game with his nuclear missiles. And it could well be a game of winner-take-all.

Brezhnev's offer to halt deployment of his SS-20 medium-range rockets in the Western Soviet Union was an empty gesture. Not only would it lock NATO into a dangerous disadvantage (if the West agreed not to deploy 572 additional nuclear systems starting next year), but the Soviets were giving away nothing. Brezhnev was offering to stop at the 300-missile level — but that's the number the Soviets had always planned to stop at.

With 300 missiles to secure his European flank, Brezhnev could easily afford to deploy future SS-20 missiles east of the Urals. In fact, intelligence sources told my associate Dale Van Atta there's a harrowing possibility that the purported "pullback" of SS-20s would give the Kremlin many more missiles capable of reaching the United States.

HERE'S WHY: By attaching a third-stage rocket, the Russians' two-stage, intermediate-range SS-20 becomes a full-fledged SS-16 intercontinental ballistic missile that can hit targets in North America. And adding the 10-foot third-stage component to an SS-20 is a relatively simple process.

The Soviets' SS-16 ICBM is a fearsome weapon that has been developed and tested in extraordinary secrecy since at least 1973. According to top-secret CIA reports, the Russians went to elaborate lengths to keep the SS-16's performance from being monitored by Western intelligence agencies. The precautions included "the use of canvas and camouflage netting at test ranges, test-firing only at night and building roofs over rail sidings at a production plant" — all designed to thwart U.S. spy satellites.

Despite these measures, the CIA was able to gather information on the super-secret SS-16. The agency counted a total of 32 test firings, and detected five failures. The final launches were made by soldiers during troop exercises, which indicated that the ICBM was about ready for deployment.

Toward the end of their series of SS-16 tests, the Soviets began regular tests of its precocious "kid brother," the SS-20. The CIA discovered a scary thing: Both missiles use the same basic elements and the same mobile truck launchers. As a result, the CIA report said, "it may not be possible to determine which missile a support base contains." The only way to tell for sure is to check the missile's performance after launching.

The SS-20 is a super-smart missile. It has, according to the CIA, "an accuracy of about .02 nautical miles if a presurveyed launch position is used." That's less than half the length of a football field.

Not only that, but the SS-20 is fully mobile; it's fired from the same truck that carries it around. It "can be launched within 30 seconds if it is at its highest state of readiness," the CIA reported, adding: "Otherwise, about 20 to 30 minutes are required..." And a new missile can be launched within a few seconds if major rearming isn't needed.

That's the SS-20, the missile arrayed against our Western European allies. Brezhnev has offered not to deploy more than the 300 already in place — if no new U.S. missiles are sent to Europe.

What many Europeans fail to understand, though, is that each SS-20 can be converted into a long-range missile. Realizing this, U.S. negotiators at the SALT II talks got the Russians to agree not to produce the third-stage "conversion kit" for its SS-20s. That concession, of course, is now inoperative.

The CIA estimates that the Soviets already have at least 100 of the third-stage components in their secret stockpile. And one CIA agent in Russia estimated that the Russians plan to produce 1,600 to 1,700 of the versatile, pinpoint-accurate SS-20s.

That's what makes Brezhnev's pious promise to keep his additional SS-20s in Siberia such a sham. By attaching the extra rocket, the missiles would be able to hit Europe anyway — or even the United States.

KOCH'Y KLATSCH: In a recent, exclusive interview with my associate Bill Gruver, New York mayor and gubernatorial candidate Ed Koch was his usually candid self. Some examples of Kochismo:

"The United Nations has become an abomination. It is a clique for the Arab and Soviet majority — it is a tool of the Arabs and doesn't serve the cause of peace anymore."

"The Democratic Party has left its own people — the middle class who built the party... In 1980 the voters rejected not just Democratic candidates but the party as well. We tried to embalm our past success... We have become an echo, not an alternative. We must get the center back if we are to win elections."

"I didn't vote for Ronald Reagan, but I like him. He kept two promises he made to me" (on taking over Medicaid and giving New York City credit if its fiscal affairs were put in order).

"I didn't want to run for governor and I told (Hugh) Carey that. I urged him to run. He would have won. When he is good, he is superb. I would have been with him all the way."

"Most people are fearful that we may return to the 1930s. They smell it and are deathly afraid it will happen again."

Art Buchwald

Our Town (apologies to Wilder)

News Item — The town of Kennesaw, Ga., has just passed an ordinance requiring the head of every household to own a gun and ammunition. The law was prompted by a recent ordinance passed in Morton Grove, Ill., banning the possession of handguns by all residents, except police officers and military personnel.

Stage Manager — "The name of the town is Kennesaw, Georgia. It's a nice town, y'know what I mean? Nobody remarkable ever came out of it's far as we know. We're just plain simple folk here, we can't claim to be nothing more than just another town along Route 41.

"I better show you around a bit. That large yellow house with the funeral wreath in front of it belongs to the Kettermans. Two days ago Hodding Ketterman shot his son, Junior, who was trying to sneak in the window at three o'clock in the morning and Hodding thought he was a thief. The town feels terrible about it, but everyone says Junior should have known better.

"There's one of our leading citizens, Jeffrey Bean, on his way down to the Sear's Roebuck parking lot to have a shootout with Abel Grimstead. It seems Jeffrey's dog knocked over all of Abel's garbage, and this made Abel real mad and he took his Smith and Wesson and pumped the dog full of lead. Most folks in town think Abel overreacted, but Abel says that's what guns are for, and there's nothing on the books says you can't shoot a dog on your property."

"Here comes Doc Lafferty. He looks a little peaked. He's been at the hospital all night removing a bullet from Hart Doubleday, who was practicing drawing his gun in front of the mirror and shot himself in the leg.

"Over there is the Court House. There's lots of excitement there because Betty Bentley is on trial for emptying her 45 into Lorelei Lee, who she suspected was playing around with her husband, Charles. Betty says it was an accident, and the gun went off while she was showing Lorelei how she won a silver cup at the Kennesaw Handgun church picnic last month.

"Here comes Hiram Dollop, who's become the village idiot because he refused to have a pistol in his house on religious grounds. Everyone thinks he's crazy, but he's harmless and except for the kids throwing mud at him because he doesn't own a gun, we leave him alone.

"Don't get nervous about those shots you just heard. That's 80-year-old Sam Francis. Every time the postman forgets to bring Sam his Social Security check, Sam starts shooting at the mail truck.

"Well, it's getting on to bedtime. The Putnams are having a party to celebrate the opening of a new pistol range they built in their basement. Outside of that, most of the people in our town are tucked into bed, their guns under their pillows, sleeping sweet dreams after another eventful day. Good night all."

Billy Graham

Why always on Sunday?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why do most churches worship on Sunday? Wann't Saturday the original Sabbath or seventh day of the week? — W.L.

DEAR W.L.: There are a few Christian groups who maintain the seventh day (Saturday) as their day of worship. In general, however, most churches accept Sunday (the first day of the week) as the day of worship.

The reason for this extends back many centuries, and there is in fact a strong indication that this was the practice of the earliest Christians in the New Testament. When Paul met the church in Troas the Bible states "On the first day of the week we came together to break bread" i.e. worship and observe the Lord's Supper (Acts 20:7). Paul also urged the church in Corinth to collect money for Christians in need "on the first day of every week" (1 Corinthians 16:2).

The basic reason most Christians churches have adopted Sunday as the day of worship is to celebrate the resurrection of Jesus Christ and the beginning of the new age that dawned with that event. (It was on the first day of the week, Sunday, that Jesus rose from the dead and appeared to his disciples). Christ has fulfilled the Old Testament prophecies, and he also has fulfilled the Old Testament law by keeping it perfectly. The principle of one day in seven being set aside for the worship of God is clear in Scripture, and this is maintained in the observance of Sunday as the Lord's Day.

There is one other important thing we need to keep in mind, however. While it is important to set one day in the week aside and commit it to God, there is also a sense in which every day should be committed to him. Are you living each day in fellowship with Christ? Make it a habit to turn to him at the beginning of the day, and then walk with him in faith and obedience during the day.

Mailbag Higgins defended

Dear Editor: I would like to express my personal opinion of an editorial that appeared on March 30 titled "Mayor Angel deserves reelection."

I suppose the newspaper has its own philosophy as each person does, but certainly "ethics" is not included in that philosophy. I believe the editorial was a cheap shot directed at Jerry Higgins.

I realize the only way a newspaper can express judgmental viewpoints is through an editorial, however, an unsigned editorial leads the public to believe this opinion is the opinion of the management, publisher, and newspaper as a whole rather than that of the individual who wrote it. In my opinion any media should not take sides, because it is that media's professional responsibility to inform the public fairly about current issues and events.

According to the editorial, "... if Higgins were to be elected, he might prove to be disruptive too often..." Without dissension or objections in this country, without the Ralph Naders, or the ones who question things, the public will be uninformed on issues that affect their daily existence due to the so-called "... council bloc, a tightly-spun and homogenous unit which almost always winds up voting unanimously on each item of city business..."

Any decision made by the council affecting 30,000 people should be taken extremely seriously and all sides at ALL times should be brought out and properly discussed.

The editorial also stated that "... Higgins likes to stand up against the current tide of leadership..." This seems to imply that Jerry Higgins has no other purpose in mind than to harass the city leaders.

According to the editorial "... Higgins' fight would be a fight for fighting's sake when the tide is inevitably against him..." implying not only Higgins' objections are unwarranted and valueless but also assuming the city council will not be open-minded to his suggestions regardless of importance. This seems to be an insult to the integrity of the city council.

Clyde Angel has been a diplomatic mayor, but the real praise in the success of the recent growth of our city lies in the dedicated efforts of the people instrumental in bringing new businesses to this town, such as Granville Hahn, Winston Wrinkle, and countless others.

EDITOR'S NOTE — This column is composed of excerpts from some of the 88-odd papers published during the time of the Texas Republic (1836-1845). Texas will celebrate the 150th anniversary of its independence in 1986. The news items are designed to give readers a glimpse at life in the republic.

We are deeply pained to learn that a party of fourteen have been all massacred by the Indians, about thirty miles north of Austin city, between the waters of the San Gabriel and Brushy creek. We regret it the more sincerely, because some of the unfortunate victims of that tragic event, were among the most respectable and beloved of the citizens of Brazoria county...

A GENTLEMAN of this neighborhood, who has returned from Austin within a few days, relates the following particulars: On the 28th ult. Dr. Webster and family, (late of Mississippi) who desired to settle some where on Brushy Creek or the San Gabriel, left Austin in company with 13 young men, most of whom were land locators. The company had negotiated with some surveyors to meet them in about one week afterwards, by which time they could have their lands selected, and would proceed to locate immediately.

Accordingly the surveyors proceeded to comply with their engagements, and when about 35 miles from Austin, they came upon the dead bodies of the whole company, except Mrs. Webster and two children, who are no doubt carried into savage captivity. The appearance of things around indicated that they did not surrender without a desperate struggle; all their guns were discharged, and most of them broken.

Mr. Hicks' was broken at the breech, a part of which he held in his hands as he lay on the field of slaughter. Some of the oxen and horses were killed — one wagon was broken, being completely riddled by the enemy's bullets, and the hind wheels of another carried off. The action was

Armstrong receives check from Willie Nelson

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Dough, re, mi ... Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong got a nice gift in the mail recently, a $25,000 check to help him chase the May 1 Democratic primary nomination for governor.

Armstrong, a fair guitar picker himself, received the no-strings-attached contribution from country music celebrity Willie Nelson.

"All Willie wants is good government," chuckled Armstrong's campaign manager, Lefty Morris. "I don't think he wants to be secretary of state or anything."

Good government, apparently, is one thing and good music is something else. Invitations sent out for an Armstrong fund-raising party in Houston promises "by popular demand, Bob Armstrong will not sing."

DODGING THE ISSUE ... State Rep. Wilhelmina Delco of Austin has asked Attorney General Mark White at least 13 times for a legal opinion on whether predominantly black Prairie View A&M is entitled to a chunk of the state's Permanent University Fund.

She never received what she considers a satisfactory answer, so she asked again when White and the two other top Democratic gubernatorial candidates — Buddy Temple and Bob Armstrong — attended a recent question-and-in an open prairie, and it is supposed the whites were entirely surrounded.

Two companies from Austin, under Col. Bursleson and Col. Lynch, were in pursuit of the Indians when our informant left ...

(Colorado Gazette and Advertiser, Austin, October 26, 1839)

The Texian Schr. of War, "Invincible", Capt. J. Brown, returned a few days ago, from a cruise along the coast of Mexico, in company with the "Terrible," Capt. Allen, without meeting with a single Mexican armed vessel. The "Invincible" sent a challenge to the Mexican Brig. of War, El Vencedor del Alamo, and the other vessels lying at Vera Cruz, which was not accepted, on the pretext that the crews of the "gallant challenged" were not in a condition to fight for want of pay.

The Invincible's crew landed at the river St. John and St. Paul, where they compelled the inhabitants to bring them wood and water. Subsequently, the Terrible has sent into Galveston a prize, the Mexican sloop Matilda, loaded with dry goods and provisions, and taken between Sisal and Campeachy.

It appears that the powerful Navy of Mexico, as well as their Grande Armee, has caught the panic; and to get another fight, they must be sought for on terra firma, in their own country. The Invincible fell in with a British, a French and Dutch vessel, all bound to Vera Cruz; the Frenchman was very much alarmed, for the stripes and single Star of our naval flag, were to him an inexplicable mystery and he supposed it to belong to pirates.

When informed that it was the flag of Texas, he was still more amazed; he had never heard of such a country; knew not where it was, and the creation of a new Republic not known to him, not even mentioned in the books he had read, appeared to him like a fairy tale. Captain Brown treated him politely and he went on his way rejoicing.

(Columbia Telegraph and Texas Register, August-October, 1836)

A LITTLE REMEDY AGAINST INDIAN ARROWS ... Take about 16 or 24 sheets of common blotting paper; lay them between some kind of thin layer of cotton or silk; Make a kind of pancer or jacket of it to be put on the monument of danger, and you will be invulnerable from the chin to the leg, from the most of Indian arrows and even bullets.

It is no more cowardice than to stand behind a tree or to have a cuirassier; and in our big European wars the lives of many thousand brave soldiers were thus preserved. I recommend it by experience.

answer session in Austin.

Turning to Railroad Commissioner Temple, White said, "Let her ask you for awhile, Buddy."

"I'm going to give her an answer," Temple shot back.

CAMPAIGN TRAIL TRAVAILS ... Running for statewide office isn't the healthiest of projects, either physically or mentally.

Take the race for attorney general. Former U.S. Attorney John Hannah of Tyler, a Democratic contender, has clasped so many hands in search of votes that he suffered tennis elbow.

State Sen. Jack Ogg of Houston, another Democratic hopeful, lost his briefcase following a breakfast briefing in El Paso. He located it that afternoon, but still found the loss mentally upsetting since it contained his appointment book and travel schedule.

Democratic AG candidate Max Sherman of Amarillo is so concerned about putting on a few pounds during campaign forays that he and his wife have set a goal of jogging two miles every other day.

Fire ant wit? ... As chairman of the House Select Committee on Fire Ants, State Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale, who also is running for state land commissioner, has aired some of the more folksy criticism of the state's fire ant program.

His profferings include:

"What this state is doing to fight the fire ant is like trying to dig the Panama Canal with a short-handed hoe."

Concerning the federal commitment of only $1 million for fire ant research: "That's like fighting a war with a BB-gun."

Political wags, meanwhile, are still startled at House Speaker Bill Clayton's recent endorsement of Kubiak since he led the fight to pair Kubiak in the same district with another legislator during the recent redistricting tussle.

Clayton even donated $200 to the Kubiak campaign and promised to drum up more.

CAMPAIGN CHALLENGES... Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby hit the campaign trail in East Texas this past week and if he bothered to read newspapers in some of those towns he discovered half-page ads "welcoming" his arrival.

Those ads were placed by Hobby's Republican opponent, former secretary of state George Strake, who invited his adversary to talk about some key issues.

It's not an attack plan Strake's camp intends to pursue, however.

"We did it because it's good for our morale," said Strake spokesman C. Davis Rankin. "It lets our people out there know we're working."

Thunderbirds to fly again despite crash

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — The Thunderbirds precision team will keep flying and will switch from training planes to advanced jet fighters, the Air Force says, despite the deaths of four pilots whose planes slammed into the desert last January.

The status of the aerobatics group was in limbo until the investigation into the Jan. 18 accident was over, Gen. W.L. Creech, commander of the Tactical Air Command at Langley Air Force Base, said Wednesday.

The investigation determined that the lead plane was unable to pull out of a loop because of a mechanical problem, and all four planes rammed into the ground in the accident at Indian Springs auxiliary base, 40 miles from Nellis Air Force Base near Las Vegas, Nev.

"The Thunderbirds are a very valuable asset," Creech said at a news conference. "They're helpful for recruiting...for showing the flag overseas. They more than pay for their cost."

The team will start looking for replacement pilots for training in their new F-16s, Creech said.

All scheduled performances through mid-August have been canceled and the pace of practice will determine when the team flies again.

"We hope to be back by the end of the year," the general said.

The Thunderbird pilots and their F-16s will be available for immediate deployment in the event of war, Creech said, something that was not possible when they used T-38 trainers.

In their 29-year history, the Thunderbirds have lost 25 aircraft and 19 pilots.

The accident happened because a device called the horizontal stabilizer load relief cylinder, which acts as a sort of shock absorber, jammed in the lead plane piloted by Maj. Norman Lowry III.

The other three planes were flying in such close formation, "looking over their shoulders" at Lowry, they followed the leader into the ground.

Such problems have happened before to Air Force planes, Creech said, but he called the fact that it happened just when it did during the practice flight "a highly random occurrence."

The odds were extremely small that it would happen to a Thunderbird plane, he said, even smaller that it would happen to the lead plane and even smaller that it would happen as the pilot was trying to come out of a loop.

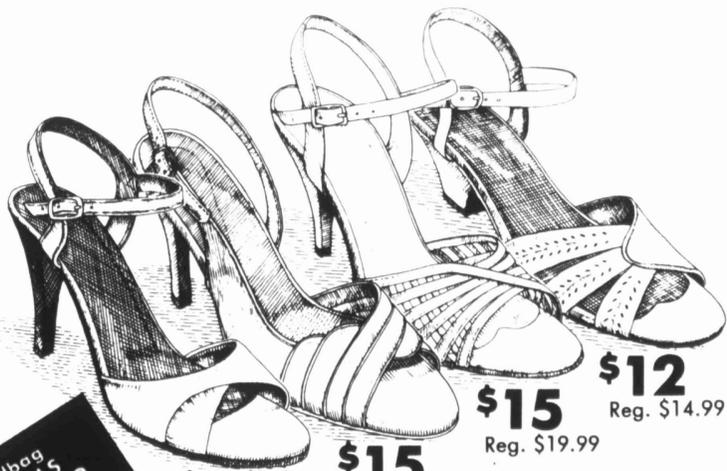

"This does not have profound implications for the rest of the fleet," he said.

The Navy's precision flying team, the Blue Angels, recently resumed air shows after an accident killed a team member Feb. 2.

Space missions' security to tighten

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Space buffs who have followed the ins and outs of space shuttle missions closely had better enjoy it while they can, because many details of the flights may soon be cloaked in military secrecy.

The Air Force will start using the Columbia to launch military cargo during its fourth flight in late June or early July of this year, and officials say the military's policy will be a far cry from the sort of openness the public is used to with the civilian National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"It's likely that some types of information the public is accustomed to will not be released," said Brian Duff, NASA's chief of public information. "We will at some time say that there are aspects of a space flight that won't be discussed."

There are at least 25 military satellites scheduled to be taken aloft by the shuttle. Some of the missions will be all-military — part of what is referred to as the "blue fleet."

The first "blue shuttle" mission is tentatively scheduled to take place in a year. Air Force officials say national security requires that no information be released about military payloads the shuttle will carry into orbit.

Defense Department officials also want to withhold details about shuttle flights that might give clues to the type of military satellites being launched.

NASA has always prided itself on the openness of its space program, and some of its officials are bristling at the security demands. But, Duff said, "We have no choice — the decision has been made by the president that we are to share the shuttle with the Air Force."

NASA and Air Force officials say the details are still being worked out but restrictions under consideration include:

— Carefully controlled air-to-ground conversations with astronauts to avoid giving clues about the military satellites the spacecraft is carrying.

— Restriction of television beamed from space to make sure there are no pictures of military hardware. During the first three flights of Columbia, hours of television showed the payload bay and its scientific cargo. Such pictures, instead of being transmitted live, might be tape-delayed and restricted when there are Air Force satellites aboard.

— Withholding details about shuttle maneuvers. There is concern such information would reveal when and where Air Force satellites have been released. Restrictions, officials said, could include such things as the altitude of the shuttle, its inclination of orbit and its location in space at a given time.

The Air Force is developing its own launch and landing site for the shuttle at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., 165 miles north of Los Angeles, to share the load with Cape Canaveral. The first shuttle scheduled to use Vandenberg is the Discovery, in 1985.

One Air Force official said he could even visualize instances when there would be a blackout on the precise time and date of a launch. Military satellites often are launched on unmanned rockets without public warning, but the official admitted a secret shuttle launch would be almost impossible because of the hundreds of technicians involved.

Some NASA officials say the Air Force proposal to make the orbit and altitude of the shuttle secret also would be impossible.

Debriefings begin

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronauts Jack R. Lousma and C. Gordon Fullerton, back from eight days in space, started an intensive two weeks of debriefings while technicians at the New Mexico landing site battled blowing sand to ready Columbia for its ferry ride back to Florida.

Lousma and Fullerton, exhausted from Tuesday's return to earth, were permitted to sleep late at their homes Wednesday, but came to the office in the afternoon to start a 15-day debriefing.

Space agency doctors who examined the astronauts said they were in excellent health and had recovered well from the motion sickness both suffered during the first two days of their mission.

At White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico, where the astronauts landed space shuttle Columbia on Tuesday, officials said the spacecraft appeared to have suffered less damage than on its first two flights.

"The vehicle appears in terrific condition," said George Page, director of shuttle operations.

Higher meat prices boost grocery bills

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Led by higher meat prices, grocery bills rose by almost 1 percent last month, according to an Associated Press marketbasket survey.

The AP also found that the cost of a sample of food and non-food items increased 1 1/4 percent during the first quarter of 1982, a sharp contrast to the 3.6 percent decline in prices in the same period of 1981.

The survey covered 14 commonly purchased products, selected at random. The items originally were priced at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973 and have been repriced on or about the start of each succeeding month.

The latest survey showed that the marketbasket bill went up at the check-out store in nine cities during March and declined in four cities. Overall, the marketbasket bills increased by an average of nine-tenths of a percent last month.

Prices also increased in January, but they declined in February, helping limit the rise so far this year.

In its latest survey, the AP found meat prices up sharply in several areas. Meat accounted for 21 percent of the items on the AP checklist, but it accounted for 29 percent of the increases reported during March. Chopped chuck went up in price at the checklist store in nine cities — more than any other item. The price of center-cut pork chops increased last month in four cities and all-beef frankfurters rose in five cities.

The price boosts generally reflect the situation on farms and in feedlots.

The USDA said, for example, that the number of cattle being fed for slaughter as of March 1 was down 4 percent from last year and down 8 percent from 1980. The hog and pig herd was down by about 10 percent from 1981 levels.

While meats were to blame for much of the latest boost in grocery prices, there were other culprits as well. The AP found that the price of eggs, for example, increased at the checklist store in seven cities last month and peanut butter and sugar each went up in six cities.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes or comparable substitutes were used for the survey. The AP did not try to compare actual prices from city to city. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white egg cream, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar. The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Bongo Joe to get cabin

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Bongo Joe apparently will get the cabin he wants to live at the 12th Street Courts, which are scheduled for demolition.

"Things are starting to look a little brighter," said Bongo Joe, whose real name is George Coleman.

Two weeks ago, Bongo Joe said he would take his oil drum act to the beach at Galveston if he was forced to move from his tiny one-room flat. He has entertained tourists more than a decade playing the makeshift drums near the San Antonio River.

But the San Antonio Museum Association, which owns the dilapidated courts where he lives, has told Bongo Joe that it will not tear down the best cabin and will fix it up for him to stay, the drummer said.

Border towns fight alien juvenile crime

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Juvenile delinquency spills daily across the border here from Matamoros, Mexico, creating a special problem for state judges and local probation officers.

More than one in 10 juvenile offenders referred to the Cameron County juvenile probation office are illegal aliens.

Most are caught either shoplifting or stealing cars and trucks. Ringleaders often pay the car thieves between $100 to $500 for each stolen vehicle driven into Mexico.

They range generally in age from 14 to 16, frequently have dropped out of school and usually come from an extremely poverty-stricken section of Matamoros, where houses lack running water.

Juvenile probation officers say the young offenders do not respond to traditional rehabilitation programs because of language and cultural difficulties.

"When they wrote the Texas Family code, they didn't think of the unique problem we have along the border," said Joan Macrum, a Cameron County juvenile probation officer for nine years.

"I see these kids and they could be helped with just the right counseling. It would be real easy but there are no services over there (in Mexico)," she said. "We can't follow through. We have no jurisdiction."

Texas officials cannot research a juvenile's background in Mexico. "We have no way of checking on their records over there," said State District Judge Melchor Chavez. "If they come here, they're considered first offenders although they may have been in trouble over there."

In 1981, 199 of the 1,731 juvenile cases involved aliens.

After years of worrying about the problem, state and county officials have gotten an offer of help from Mexican authorities.

Matamoros Mayor Jorge Cardenas ordered construction of a $500,000, 120-bed juvenile center built with Mexican federal and local funds.

His wife, who is charge of social and family programs for the city, told him of the problem after hearing about it from a friend, Cameron County District Clerk Aurora de la Garza.

The nearest Mexican facility for juveniles is more than 200 miles away in Ciudad Victoria.

Cardenas and Texas officials say the center will help the crime problem on both sides since many alien youths arrested in Brownsville also have gotten in trouble at home.

Although some sticky, jurisdictional problems remain, authorities say they hope in the future an alien juvenile will be released by Texas authorities with the condition that he periodically report to or spend time at the Matamoros center.

Cardenas took the judges, district attorney, probation officers and other officials on a tour of the center under construction last week.

"This will help greatly," Cardenas said. "Every house must wash it's own dirty laundry," he said of how the problem must be dealt with on both sides of the border.

The complex of two one-story buildings is located on 80 acres about 12 miles from downtown Matamoros. Residents will grow their own crops, raise cattle and have space for basketball and other outside activities.

Cardenas estimated it will open in one or two months.

It will take time to work out technical details of transferring juveniles to another nation.

"Right now, we're exchanging our laws and translating the entire part of the family code dealing with juveniles," Miss Macrum said.

Under current procedure, juvenile authorities first try to locate the family of young alien offenders and get proof that they are under 17.

Mexican Consul Enrique Hubbard of Brownsville frequently is called to help find families and birth certificates.

Charges are not always filed, depending on the evidence, said Amador Rodriguez, Cameron County juvenile probation director.

If charges are not filed, the alien is turned over to the U.S. Border Patrol and bused to the International Bridge. A case often will be held as "inactive" with charges left pending in case the offender returns and is arrested a second time.

Under an agreement with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, parents otherwise lacking

JUVENILE HOME — Matamoros Mayor Jorge Cardenas, left, tells a reporter about the juvenile detention center under construction in the background. Cardenas ordered the facility built after hearing that delinquents from his city were illegally crossing the international border into Brownsville and posing problems for authorities there.

visas into the United States are allowed to visit their child if authorities have decided to detain him.

"We pick them up at the bridge and take them back," Rodriguez said.

If charges are filed, a hearing is conducted on whether to hold the youngster at the county detention center or release him to his parents.

Under Texas law a juvenile can be detained if:

— He lacks proper home supervision.

— No one is available to vouch for his future court appearances.

— Authorities believe he would flee their jurisdiction.

— The offender has a prior record.

Those released to their parents are told to return for hearings or to pay restitution.

"You might not expect it, but they do come and pay it," Rodriguez said.

He cautions that the Matamoros center will not solve the problem immediately.

"It's not as easy as it sounds because you're dealing with federal law, between countries, not just city to city," he said.

Other border areas face similar problems. In El Paso, a juvenile probation officer complained last year that she was forced to transport aliens to a center in Juarez, Mexico.

"I would never take them across personally, because you could always be held responsible, say if there were an accident," said Miss Macrum.

"The way I understand it, if we get an illegal juvenile, we will coordinate his transfer to the agency in charge of delinquency in Matamoros," Rodriguez said.

"There are still quite a few bridges to cross but there's quite a few people concerned enough to do something about it."

Pictorial history of Permian Basin

A major pictorial history evoking the lore, legends, and people of the West Texas — Southeastern New Mexico oil boom will be published in early April.

Written by Walter Rundell Jr., the book is titled "Oil in West Texas and New Mexico: A Pictorial History of the Permian Basin". This will be the first publishing venture undertaken by the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library, and Hall of Fame, Midland.

Published for the museum by Texas A & M University Press, this history of the Basin includes photographs selected by Dr. Rundell from the museum's archival collection of over 6,000 photographs in addition to others from major collections in Austin, Lubbock, New York, Washington, and elsewhere.

The book features over 270 illustrations together with a text written by Rundell who is professor of history at the University of Maryland. The 208-page volume, published in limited edition, is handsomely bound in hard covers.

The museum undertook the book project in 1980 with the assistance of a grant from two members of its Board of Trustees, Ford Champman and Richard Donnelly, both of Midland.

The new pictorial history describes how oil was first discovered in quantity in the Permian Basin in 1923 and it records the rise of cities and towns through the decades following. Unlike other oil provinces in the United States, the Permian Basin saw the cable tool rig, with all its magic in evoking recollection, remain dominant until the mid-1930s, and survives even today in some of the region's shallow fields.

Sale of the new book will begin in early April at the museum's gift shop at a cost of $24.50 each. Proceeds from the book sales will benefit the museum.

Dr. Rundell will be in Midland on Saturday, May 1, for two receptions and to autograph his book. Details of the May 1 engagement will be provided later.

Campaign chiefs busy during 'wartime'

By JAY ROSSER

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Dwayne Holman is a political junkie, a behind-the-scenes professional whose expertise could help earn his boss a new home — the Governor's mansion.

And while he hopes Attorney General Mark White climbs the political ladder, Holman says he's not looking for a governor's appointment. "I'm interested in politicians during wartime only," laughed Holman, 38. "During peacetime I'm not the least bit interested in them."

For the campaign managers of White's chief opponents — Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple — the job is an all-or-nothing, one-shot, strictly volunteer venture.

"Some people like to hunt, some like to play golf, I like politics," said Luther Jones, 35, Temple's aide-de-camp. "But I'm quite certain I'll never do this again."

Echos Big Spring native Lefty Morris, Armstrong's 41-year-old campaign manager and law partner: "As soon as this is over I'm going back to my law practice."

The future for Dary Stone, a political hunderkind at 28 and Republican Gov. Bill Clements' campaign manager, is as uncertain as the election.

Stone's past work with the governor netted him two appointments: deputy general counsel to the governor and director of the Texas Office of State-Federal Relations in Washington D.C.

The successes of the Democratic campaign manager will be measured by the election returns in the May 1 primaries, and not by political critics reviewing their campaign styles.

Stone's success will be measured in November since Clements faces only token primary opposition.

The resumes of the four campaign managers resemble a mini-Who's Who of Texas Politics.

Holman, a native of Bonham, was former executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, a Wharton Junior College political science teacher, national president of Young Democrats and campaign manager for White's successful 1978 attorney general bid.

He has made a living running political campaigns.

Morris is a former president of the Young Democrats of Texas at Texas Christian University whose previous campaign experience included political work with former Attorneys General Crawford Martin and Schhhil.

Jones served eight years in the Texas Legislature through 1980 representing El Paso. He sought the chairmanship of the Texas Democratic Party in 1980, but was defeated. This is his first role as a campaign manager.

Stone, of Dallas, left his work with a law firm to join Clements' 1978 campaign, first as an advance man and then as the candidate's personal assistant.

All three Democratic candidates, Temple, White and Armstrong, could be in the midst of what sailors call the calm before the storm. In fact, things are so complacent, it's as though the candidates had taken a refresher course in political etiquette.

With the three agreeing on most major issues, each campaign manager is struggling to convince Democratic voters his candidate is the best one for the job, but the strategies are different.

"I'm sure you can expect the sweetness and light to get a little less sweet and a lot less light," Holman said. "We are not going to get nasty or anything, but we are going to start pointing out some differences. The candidates have got to start taking tougher stances."

Getting that message across, he said, means budgeting about $900,000 for media advertising.

"We're not going to blitz the media in April or anything," Holman said, "but things will intensify."

Jones, meanwhile, wants the campaign to continue pretty much as it has been.

"Buddy is going into this thing hoping that if he wins, Bob Armstrong and Mark White will feel good about it and be willing to help him beat Clements in November," Jones said. "He doesn't want to jeopardize that."

Temple, he said, would continue to attack Clements as "a bad governor who needs to be retired. Plus, the Democratic Party needs to run a candidate who has the resources to take the field against Clements."

Temple, a millionaire East Texan whose father is on the board of directors of Time, Inc., has the financial resources to defeat Clements and the other candidates don't, Jones said.

"The real issue is leadership based on the candidates' past records," Morris said. "We're going to tell people who can do what we all agree needs to be done..."

Morris said Armstrong will attempt to compare his record as a state legislator against Temple's and his record as land commissioner against White's work as attorney general.

Stone is watching the Democratic fray with delight. He's also getting the Clements campaign rolling; earlier than some would say is necessary.

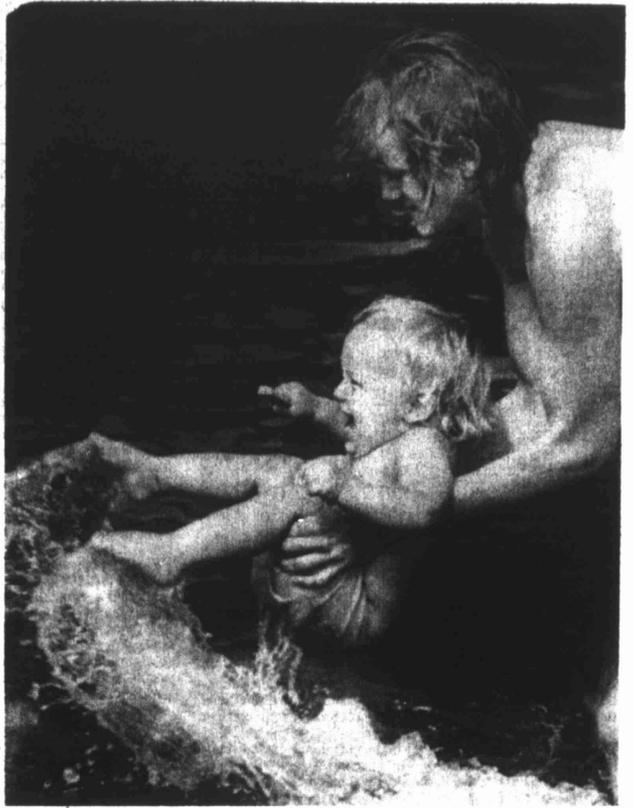

"I'm really surprised how busy it's been," he said. "I'm convinced the front end is busier than the back end. That's when you're getting all the organization and people together. I've just got a feeling it's going to be easier on down the line."

Professor is flying thanks to candy power

WACO, Texas (AP) — The sweet smell of success flowing from Dr. Max Shauck's experimental airplane comes from its fuel. The single-engine craft is flying high thanks to candy power.

Shauck, an air pollution researcher and stunt pilot who teaches mathematics at Baylor University, says his plane's exhaust "smells just like a Snicker's bar."

The fuel is made locally in a solar-powered fuel production unit which turns discarded candy from Waco's M&M-Mars factory into ethanol. "This is the first experiment I know using airplane fuel exclusively from ethanol," Shauck said.

Fast start predicted for HC baseball team

None of this slow start-up stuff for Bill Griffin. "We are planning on being a national contender next year," he told Downtown Lions of his plans for the new Howard College baseball program.

Griffin has some credentials to back up his optimism. He holds the second best record for junior college baseball wins in the nation in his 24 years at Panola College. He left there to become dean of students at Howard College, and to install a baseball program.

As for facilities, a new field is now being laid out north of the men's dormitory. Griffin hopes it will be in top shape by the 1983 season and that there will be bleachers and lights. A veteran at recruiting, he is aiming at about 40 in the program a year from now plus another 10 others for bat-girls. He said he is going after recruits in the West Texas area — the same calibre of players who will be sought by the major colleges. He also emphasized that he is stressing academic abilities as well as playing skills.

Griffin is aiming at a 50-game schedule next spring, including as many home games as possible. He will book teams from Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and Colorado as well as Texas. Baseball, he is confident, will revive college spirit in the spring when there is now no major sports activity.

As president, Jimmy Holmes heads up a slate of officer nominees who will be voted on two weeks hence, said Jerry Phillips, current president. Phillips also urged all members to vote Saturday in the school-city elections.

Department of Education draws flak from educators

AUSTIN — The Association of Texas Professional Educators (ATPE), the state's second largest education association, wants to see the Federal Department of Education dismantled.

In calling for the shutdown of the mammoth agency which employs 7,583 persons and has a 1981 fiscal budget of $15.5 billion, the associated cited bureaucratic red tape and the department's failure to deliver services to the children for whom they were intended. The resolution was overwhelmingly adopted by more than 600 delegates attending ATPE's annual convention last week in San Antonio.

According to one national survey taken early this year, Americans were found to disapprove of the Department of Education by more than a 2-to-1 margin.

"It's almost impossible to get a child into a federally funded special education program, one delegate from Stanton said. Georgia McMeans, who teaches in the migrant program at her west Texas school, explained that when she requested special education for one of her students with visual problems, she was given a packet full of forms and federal guidelines.

"When," she asked, "am I supposed to interview the parents, neighbors and other teachers to get the full histories of both student and family including medical data and I.Q.'s of parents? I teach six classes a day and have a 45-minute conference period. In reality, the paperwork is killing many of the programs."

Newly elected president Sally Wiedemann, Vernon, who has served as ATPE's legislative chairperson for the last year, said, "It is politically naive to think that dismantling of the Department of Education will mean the end of federal monies for education of our children. Block grants distributed by the state through the local school districts can be more effective and save both time and money."

OFFICE EDUCATION WINNERS — These two Coahoma High School seniors recently attended the state Office Education Association Conference held in Houston and while there they captured two awards. Kristi Franklin (right) won first place in the state information communication contest, and Todd Anderson took third place in the state stenographic contest. Kristi is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Franklin of Sand Springs, and Todd is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Anderson of Coahoma.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics have long lambasted Congress for doing nothing. Not true. Just this year, amid the pressures of the federal budget, lawmakers have found time to give official recognition to peaches and patriotism, bald eagles and ballet.

Those are among the hundreds of commemorative resolutions introduced every year by congressmen. It all costs money, but nobody knows for sure how much. Nobody knows, either, how much time explanation, debate and voting consume on limited floor schedules, or how many staff hours are taken up typing, copying and circulating pleas for support on a pet resolution.

"It's got to cost," said Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., whose Post Office and Civil Service subcommittee on the census must handle most such bills in the House. "It bothers me, but I don't control the situation. I didn't make the rules."

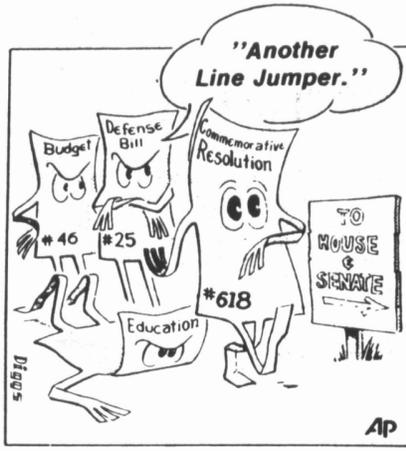

By one estimate, the introduction of a brief resolution costs nearly $1,300 for printing and distribution. If the sponsoring senator or representative makes a speech supporting his bill on the floor, space to print it in the Congressional Record costs another $475.68 per page. Roughly 700 such bills were introduced last year.

"Those costs are nominal," said Mike Ferrell, staff director of Garcia's subcommittee. "The expensive item is the time taken up on the floor of a billion-dollar Congress. It takes at least 10 or 15 minutes to explain a resolution."

What some considered to be an example of the problem occurred last Oct. 20, when Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, demanded a roll-call vote on a resolution declaring the fourth Sunday in October to be National Mother-In-Law Day. It passed 305 to 66, with 28 voting "present."

"One of the dangers — and the mother-in-law thing highlights this — is that sometimes these things come up on the floor and there's some squabble between Democrats and Republicans, and they use this as a mechanism to delay and stall by asking for votes on these things," said Garcia.

So far this year the House has passed 11 such resolutions, the Senate more than two dozen. A few are on serious governmental topics, such as National Agriculture Day or Afghanistan Day. But most, Ferrell said, are not.

"The ones that predominate are in the classic sense a special interest: a group, an association or whatever constituency that makes a request to a member, who innocently or blindly obliges that request."

Earlier this month the House considered Joint Resolution 361, granting official recognition to the international ballet competition to be held in Jackson, Miss.

Rep. Jim Dunn, a freshman Republican from Michigan, criticized "the activities that the U.S. government is involved in such as ballet days versus what we really should be involved in, and that is solving the economic problems... These are not normal times, and we cannot go on tradition in this body."

But Garcia rose to defend the bill as important to Mississippi and to Rep. Wayne Dowdy, D-Miss., "who has worked so hard to get this through." The measure passed.

The House also has declared the third week in February as National Patriotism Week and 1982 as the Bicentennial Year of the Bald Eagle, and the Senate has designated July as National Peach Month.

Although any member can introduce a bill, both Garcia's committee and the Senate Judiciary Committee, which handles similar chores in that chamber, have rules to limit and discourage them from reaching the floor for action. That has kept National Junior Bowling Week, International Franchise Day and Parliamentary Emphasis Month from gumming up the floor calendars.

The House requires 218 co-sponsors — a majority — and forbids action on bills naming any commercial or political group or any particular state, city or school. The Senate rules call for 25 co-sponsors and bar politics and specific businesses or products.

The Senate rules are being re-evaluated to make it tougher, perhaps by requiring more co-sponsors. "There is some feeling that they've been taking too much time," said a staff member who asked not to be named.

Farrell said the co-sponsorship requirement, imposed in 1975, drastically reduced commemorative bills for a time because congressmen were reluctant to tie up office staff running around Capitol Hill to collect colleagues' signatures.

But lately the numbers have been creeping upward again. The special interests involved are volunteering their own staff to do the legwork. "Obviously if a member can do someone a favor without committing a lot of staff time, he's gonna do it," said Ferrell.

Two years ago Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., made an effort to cut the practice out altogether and leave it up to the White House, which can issue proclamations without the aid of Congress. That effort was largely ignored, and Glickman, recognizing an upstream swim, hasn't tried again.

"I don't see how you can stop introducing resolutions, I just don't," said Garcia. "How can anyone decide which ones are crucial, and which are absolutely hogwash?"

State crime commissions fold after LEAA demise

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

With the demise of the federal agency that provided their money, many state law-enforcement commissions are disbanding. Others are still in existence, and how they fare may provide an insight into the potential success of the Reagan administration's New Federalism.

The reason for the shuffle is the phaseout of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which between 1968 and 1980 appropriated nearly $8 billion to states for police departments and ancillary facilities like courts, prisons and probation departments. Its offspring were the state commissions, set up to parcel out money coming in from Washington.

The LEAA dies April 30, victim of a consensus reached during the Carter administration that it was too cumbersome, too wasteful, too bureaucratic. As a result, many of the state commissions set up to handle the money and paperwork are also dying.

But not all. Some states have absorbed the best features of the LEAA into their own budgets, running them from the governor's or attorney general's office or public safety and state police departments. Others have found enough state money to make the commissions permanent. Many are waiting for some federal program — several proposals are pending in Congress — to replace the LEAA.

That development portends what President Reagan proposed in his State of the Union Address — turning over heretofore federal programs to the states.

"What's happening in the states certainly could be a portent of the future if the new federalism goes through," says Gwen Holden of the National Criminal Justice Association, a Washington advocate of the disparate state law-enforcement agencies.

"The LEAA was a classic case of the block grant — 'here's the money, you hand it out.' Now the burden is on the states. They're going to have to decide what gets priority in criminal justice and the related social services. In a way, having less money can help. When there's money, everybody's jumping in looking for his piece of the pie."

Ms. Holden is one of many law-enforcement professionals who concedes that LEAA's time has come.

Created as a response to widespread urban rioting in the late '60s, the agency in its early years poured millions into anti-riot equipment like armored personnel carriers for small cities and counties with problems little worse than teenagers congregating on street corners.

It was also the kind of bureaucracy that's an easy target for budget-cutters. Self-perpetuating, it created a new layer of government whose function was to serve simply as a conduit, and generated bundles of paper. One example: the 1968 law creating the agency covered 10 pages in the Congressional Record; an amendment passed in the mid-'70s covered 80 pages.

Moreover, for whatever reason, the crime rate rose steadily during the LEAA's lifetime.

Defenders of the federal concept say its most enduring contribution may have been to get law-enforcement officials thinking about coordinating efforts.

"I don't think many people are sorry to see the LEAA go," says Ms. Holden. "But something ought to replace it."

Dr. Donohue

Store shelf may hold answer

Dear Dr. Donohue: This is the second time I am writing you. In three months I will be 90 years old. I have a sister who is 10 years older. If I live that long, I hope I can get rid of the itching I have on my scalp. Can you tell me anything I could use to get rid of it? Hope you can suggest something. — M.H.E.

Believe me, it was unintentional on my part to ignore your letter. I pay attention to anyone who has made it to 90, even more so to one who is healthy at that age and has a sister who has made it to the century mark. I want to learn your family secrets.

I wish I could give you a simple home remedy for an itchy scalp. I can't. There are too many different conditions that lead to it. At times, itching can be a sign of seborrheic dermatitis — dandruff. The scaling may not be prominent.

Let me suggest in a general way that you search the over-the-counter shelves for products like shampoos that contain such things as selenium sulfide or zinc pyrithione. And remember, it's the scalp, not the hair, that needs the medicine, so you have to massage the shampoo over the scalp.

The itching may be due to dryness of the skin. If so, an oil preparation immediately after shampooing will help keep the skin hydrated. Or the itching may be due to eczema, or to an infection. I haven't given you the one answer you asked for. That one answer will come only when the question of what is causing the itch has been answered. Many happy returns on your 90th birthday, M.E.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Do you have any information on how to control the intraocular pressure on the eye? Are there any foods or drinks that should be avoided? Are there any natural vitamins or minerals that would aid in controlling the pressure? — B.F.

If the intraocular pressure of the eye is high, that is glaucoma. The most common form of glaucoma is open-angle type, and it is controlled by eye drops that lower the pressure. I know of no dietary restrictions for most common forms of glaucoma. No vitamin or mineral aid that I know of controls the pressure.

How do you know you have pressure? Are there symptoms, like eyeaches? First, you need to have the pressure measured by a tonometer, a sensitive device that is gently placed over the eye. Then you need to get whatever treatment matches your kind of glaucoma, if you have any. Study the booklet "Cataracts and Glaucoma." Other readers can order a copy by writing me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents to cover handling and printing.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband will not go to a doctor, and I am so worried about him. Last year (one time only) he had a bowel movement that was colored red with blood. Then he told me the same thing happened just today. So that's two times in one year. I don't understand if there is something seriously wrong or not. Could it be slow cancer? If you could shed some light on this I would be thankful. If he saw something in writing, he might be scared enough to do something. — L.O.

Even though this has happened only twice to your husband, and even though he has remained in good health for over a year since the first episode, he must find out why this has happened. There are many possible explanations for his bright red bleeding with elimination. Conditions such as hemorrhoids or fissures could do it. And so can what you must fear most — cancer. Diverticulosis is another possibility.

Dear Abby

Mother, child can't communicate

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem many teen-agers have. I can't communicate with my parents — especially my mother. My father works most of the time, and when he gets home, he's tired. The last thing he wants to do is hear about my problems. He just reads the paper, has dinner and goes to bed.

My mom is another story. She's from Europe, and when she was my age, all she did was study and milk cows, so I can't blame her for being "dumb" when it comes to understanding American teen-agers. I can't seem to get through to her. I try to talk to her when she's not busy, but our hostilities get in the way and we always end up in a big fight. We're better off not talking to each other at all. I'd really like to have a good mother-daughter relationship.

I hope you have space in your column for this letter. My mother reads you faithfully, and if she sees it, it might open up some channels of communication. Thanks for listening.

sincerity comes through. Better communication can be established between you and your mother if, when you engage in a dialogue with her, you make it a point never to interrupt. Listen carefully, and when you speak, maintain a controlled, soft tone. If you disagree, do so respectfully. European-born mothers whose youth was spent studying and milking cows are far from "dumb." They're otherwise.

DEAR ABBY: You advise that when friends and relatives phone to say they are coming to visit — expecting to be houseguests — if you don't want houseguests, to say, "Lovely. We will be glad to make hotel or motel reservations for you."

Our questions is, who picks up the tab? Our relatives (and friends) assume that because we live well, we can afford to pick up the tab. It's true that our income is more than most of our relatives, but we aren't that well-off.

We love our relatives, but we can't accommodate them in our home without inconveniencing ourselves, which we don't want to do. And we're afraid if we offer to make motel reservations for them, they will assume we'll pick up the tab. So how can we make this clear without appearing cheap?

BARELY MAKING IT

DEAR BARELY: Tell them you will be glad to inquire about motel rates and let them know what it will cost to be sure it's within their budget.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "QUIET IN KOKOMO": Better to remain silent and be thought a fool than to speak and remove all doubt. (P.S. Today is April Fool's Day.)

Ask questions before opening IRA account

Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) are the hottest thing in town these days, with life insurance companies, banks, savings and loan institutions, mutual funds, brokerage houses and credit unions all offering IRA programs.

An estimated 90 million potential IRA customers are being confronted with a confusing profusion of different products, interest rates, restrictions and penalties, making it difficult to determine which is the best IRA to buy.

The American Council of Life Insurance suggests the following checklist of questions to help you shop for an IRA:

•What is the interest rate offered? How long is it guaranteed? How is it calculated? How often is it compounded?

•How much is the minimum initial investment? What is the minimum for succeeding investments?

•Is there a charge to open the account? If so, is it a flat fee or a percentage of the deposit?

•Are there any annual charges? How much?

•Is there a charge to transfer your money from one fund to another at the same institution?

•What is the withdrawal penalty if you want to close out your IRA to invest the money elsewhere?

You also should find out whether you can make payments toward your IRA through payroll deduction at work, the Council advises.

Truman's agriculture secretary remembers his 'total freedom'

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Charley Brannan was Harry S. Truman's secretary of agriculture, he didn't have to worry much about White House interference in his job.

"I had almost total freedom," says the 78-year-old Brannan. "I don't even remember clearing a speech at the White House."

Brannan, who was secretary from 1948 to 1952, said he didn't have a bunch of budget-trimmers looking over his shoulder, either, telling him which program to cut and which to increase.

"We got practically no instruction on how to operate, and the president only told me to employ one individual in all of the time I was in the department," he said.

Early in his tenure as a Cabinet officer, Brennan proposed some programs "which became famous or infamous, depending on your point of view."

Congress rejected his proposal, but Brannan said Tuesday the farm subsidies and controls he unsuccessfully advocated in 1949 may be needed to rescue today's troubled agricultural sector.

Moreover, Brannan said farmers may be in more of a mood to accept his program than they were 33 years ago.

The concept he proposed in 1949 basically scrapped the old system of price supports for key farm commodities and used direct subsidies to farmers when market prices dropped below specified levels.

In return for those income supports, farmers would have had to agree to strict federal acreage controls and marketing quotas. The program — immediately labeled the Brannan Plan — was rejected by Congress.

Brannan, 78, said he doesn't think his plan is out of date "in any respect" and that farmers "may be a little more ready" to accept federal production curbs than they were at the time.

"The present situation may be so severe that they will see their participation in that manner as a reasonable price to pay for governmental stabilization efforts," he said.

Brannan said in an hour-long meeting with reporters that target prices introduced in the Agriculture and Consumer Protection Act of 1973 represented "part of the concept" he proposed in 1949.

Current law also provides deficiency payments — subsidies — to farmers when market prices fall below specified levels or target prices.

Since 1970, the thrust of government farm programs for the key crops — including wheat, feed grains and cotton — has been "market oriented" and less federal control. Brannan said his original plan, if adopted in total, would not mean a repudiation of that policy.

"Fundamentally, the proposals (of 1949) would allow the price of farm commodities to seek their supply-and-demand level in the marketplace," he said. "I don't think it's a repudiation of any of the present programs."

Budget-conscious members of Congress and administration officials have rejected massive increases in direct subsidies as a way of relieving the crunch on farmers who are seeing net incomes decline for the third year in a row.

Brannan, a lawyer, has served for many years as general counsel of the National Farmers Union, which has its headquarters in Denver.

He went to work for the Agriculture Department in 1935 and was appointed an assistant secretary of agriculture by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944, a post he held until President Truman tabbed him for the Cabinet four years later.

Asked to elaborate on the mechanics of running the Agriculture Department in those years, Brannan said that while Truman kept a loose rein there were "a couple of guys on the White House staff" who occasionally tried to apply some pressure.

One case involved one of Truman's closest aides, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, who wanted Brannan "to help a fellow who had got stuck with a whole batch of mules" back in Missouri — Truman's home state.

It seems foot-and-mouth disease had broken out posing a threat to cattle, sheep, goats and hogs there and in the United States. The disease does not affect horse and mules.

'American Family' revisited

Ending to the Loud saga may surprise viewers

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Once upon a time, Bill and Pat Loud lived with their five teenagers in a stucco ranch house on a scenic mountain drive with three dogs and two cats. Out back was the heated pool. The Jaguar, Volvo and Toyota were parked in the driveway.

An American family living the American dream. The fairy tale took a nasty twist a decade ago. The Louds' marriage crumbled and the family shattered in front of a nationwide television audience. It happened the American way — at 9 o'clock Eastern time, 8 o'clock Central, on public TV.

They were "An American Family," their glossy but troubled lives played out in a living soap opera without background music, scripts or staging. The real-life documentary of the Loud household, filmed over seven months of 1971 and shown on a dozen consecutive Thursdays in 1973, became as analyzed and criticized as any show in television history.

Stardom wasn't far behind for the Louds. They appeared on talk shows and magazine covers. They were examined in the public prints.

The surprise ending comes now, without fanfare: The Louds have turned out just fine. The mother and father have made new lives for themselves on opposite coasts. The children are out on their own.

Once accused of being a family that "touches without meeting and meets without touching," the Louds today keep in touch with each other more than many families similarly spread across the country. Five of the seven went skiing together at Aspen, Colo., over Christmas; Papa Loud picked up the tab.

But the days when the cameras were recording their every move, and Dick Cavett was hanging on their every word, are not forgotten.

The same television screen that brought America the Brady Bunch and Ozzie and Harriet had brought a real family's real laughs and real tears — and a real marriage breaking apart. It was like transom peeping.

Pat Loud's concern for her homosexual son, Lance, for example, was apparent when Mrs. Loud visited him in New York City and the cameras followed. The youthful mother, with long black hair, took a room at Lance's rundown hotel and spent a week with his circle of friends.

Lance took his mother to a play the actors appeared in drag and later had a long talk. Lance told her that he felt "like a little mouse trapped in a box" when he lived at home. "There's always been something in me I could never understand," he said.

At home, Pat and Bill Loud's marriage, marked by verbal jousts, began to fall apart. Mrs. Loud decided to get a divorce.

She gave her reasons in a talk with her brother and sister-in-law in episode eight.

In episode nine, the breakup: "I have... I've spoken to a lawyer," Mrs. Loud told her husband. She handed him the lawyer's card. "And I'd like to have you move out."

"Well, that's a fair deal," Bill said.

"I figured you'd think that."

Viewers saw Pat Loud boot her unfaithful husband out of the house, and Bill Loud try to get his attorney to keep the divorce settlement low. "Nothing for entertainment, nothing for birthdays."

They saw a house of five adolescents, ages 14-20; not one looked like Ricky Nelson.

They saw the oldest, Lance, take up his homosexual life in New York, saw him give makeup tips to his two sisters. They saw his brother, Grant, balk at getting a summer job and wreck a family car. They saw a brush fire come within inches of the Loud home. They watched Delilah talk for hours on the phone, pursuing her first true romance.

'At one time I was uncertain how anybody was going to turn out. It was dangerous in that house.'

—Bill Loud

Meanwhile, Kevin was becoming a high-school politician, showing signs of maturing into a businessman like his father. Michele was a quiet girl of 14 who loved pets.

Today, the famous "broken family" appears to have healed itself. The Loud children are making their father prouder than he ever expected. "At one time I was uncertain about how anybody was going to turn out," Bill said in a recent interview. "It was dangerous in that house."

Bill, now 61, remarried in 1977 and lives in a wealthy suburb of Santa Barbara. He still heads his own mining-supplies firm from the bright office that appeared on the television series.

Pat, 55, lives on New York City's Upper East Side and is a writers' agent. She hasn't remarried.

Lance, 30, attends the School for Television Arts in New York, where he plans to graduate in June. Kevin, 29, got a master's degree from William & Mary and now is a finance manager for a petroleum company in Houston.

Grant, 27, lives in Los Angeles, writes and performs music, and works part time as a waiter. He appeared singing one of his own songs in a horror movie called "Graduation Day."

Delilah, 26, is a commercial producer for an advertising firm in Los Angeles. Michele, 24, is a pattern maker in New York's garment district.

Craig Gilbert, producer of "An American Family," who lives in Malibu, Calif., is developing feature films.

Gilbert conceived the idea for the series, theorizing that if a camera stayed with any one family long enough "something important would be revealed about why men and women in their various roles were having such a difficult time in America during the early 1970s."

The Louds provided a powerful screen portrait of a family that looked outwardly in control but inwardly was in trouble. They were not a typical American family, as the producer cautioned in the opening frames. Still, they were a family, and viewers often saw something of themselves in the Louds' struggle.

"We had thousands of letters that said, 'I loved the series... I think it was painful for people,'" Gilbert says now. "People thought: 'One or another or several aspects of this is exactly what I'm going through.'"

The $1.2 million series comprised 12 hour-long episodes gleaned from 300 hours of film shot in five states and several countries.

"For one shining moment, there was a glimmer of what television could do as a way for us to see ourselves in a constructive way," Gilbert says. "It was one of the few times Americans could say, 'I am not alone. I don't have to pretend any more that everything's terrific.'"

Shana Alexander called the show "a glimpse into the pit." America magazine called it "a painful and unnerving look at the American Dream turned nightmare. More important, it is a look at ourselves."

The Louds had little quarrel with the final product before air time. After seeing a preview of several episodes, Mrs. Loud wrote Gilbert a thank-you note, for handling the film "with as much kindness as possible and still remain honest."

But when the public criticism began, the family was hurt. They had become specimens in a laboratory of popular sociology, and they lashed out at Gilbert. The media were quick to pick up their anger.

"What nerve have we touched?" an exasperated Mrs. Loud asked after the show had been on the air only four weeks.

"We weren't ready for the shock of it being presented as a picture of a declining family," Bill Loud says now. "We thought we were going to become the all-American, California family and we came out as the super tragedy."

The family took a closer look at itself, taking some of the criticism to heart. "The critics said we didn't communicate with each other and we didn't," Michele says. "They said we didn't confront each other and we still don't. But a lot of people find it difficult to confront others."

But the Louds also discovered advantages. As Lance put it: "The series was the fulfillment of the middle-class dream: you can become famous for being just what you are."

Interviewers sought Pat and Bill Loud's opinions on marriage and divorce. Pat wrote "A Woman's Story," a book about her divorce. Lance, Grant and Kevin formed a rock group called Mumps.

Fame waned, however. The rock group disbanded. Mrs. Loud's book never became a best seller. Life went on.

While the family was in the spotlight, producer Gilbert was sensitive to the critics and the Louds, who had become his friends.

"The Louds thought — and they were right — that they had been living their lives the best they could. It was only when they were called fools, idiots and bad parents that they got angry. And they directed it at me," Gilbert says.

He had also taken a personal look in the cracked mirror, a prop he used in the opening minutes of each episode. His own marriage of 16 years had broken apart the year filming began. Like many of the viewers, he found the Louds' story personal and painful.

Gilbert, a sympathetic figure with a graying beard and burly frame, has talked little about the series since that first hectic year. He's been torn between his pride in "An American Family" and his desire to be known for something other than "this bizarre series," he says.

The problem, he says, is that the series was "aired amid such enormous controversy and media hype that the content and truth of the thing — good or bad — got lost in the shuffle."

Planning makes kids more helpful at home, author of book claims

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's ironic that before children are old enough to be very useful at home tasks their one passion is to help Mommy. Alas, by the time they are 10 or 12, and could give working parents a real hand, excuse-it's has set in," says Esther Hautzig, author of a number of activity books for children.

"I wasn't told... I didn't know how... I couldn't read your note... you forgot I had a meeting... the job was too hard." These are some of the common excuses of children, along with the old favorite, "I forgot," notes Mrs. Hautzig, whose book, "Life With Working Parents," is written from the child's viewpoint.

If parents need chores done after school, without supervision, it's better to settle for modest help given regularly, instead of spasmodic major efforts, she advises. By planning, they can forestall alibis and structure tasks as "set-ups for success," she explains.

"If you and your children agree on what is reasonable, and make sure the task is do-able, they find a lot of satisfaction," she observes. "Then there's a chance for helping to become a habit."

Ingredients for a working plan, she points out, include a family calendar, so a chore assignment won't overlap a play rehearsal, for instance. Then there's "Message Central," a bulletin board or chalkboard everyone learns to consult automatically upon coming home.

It's a big help to supply each child with large zippered netting bags to use for socks, underwear or other knitted clothes requiring no ironing or folding. Bags can go from hamper to washer and dryer and back into rooms with no sorting on anybody's part.

American art tries to reflect everyday life

By DAVID M. MAXFIELD
Smithsonian News Service

Once in the gallery, it takes only a moment to sense a kinship with the characters in the works of art. These figures are, in a way, the "American family," generations of ordinary people going about everyday life on the frontier and the farm, in America's small towns and big cities. This room is a family album.

The mountain man, the trapper of beaver in the Rockies, is here. So, too, are the emigrants heading west in 1840 by oxen and Conestoga wagon. Union troops stand in formation in a later painting, while pedestrians scurry for safety in a New York street scene. Dock workers relax at noon in another canvas.

One turn-of-the-century painting shows two lovely young women in a sunny parlor, one writing letters, the other reading. A 1936 photograph, taken as part of a New Deal art program, documents life passing by on a sidewalk in Vicksburg, Miss. In the artworks of the 1960s and '70s, many subjects — children and elderly alike — look isolated and detached in their urban settings.

ALL OF THESE artworks are in the permanent collection of the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., and will be exhibited in the coming months on a nationwide tour organized by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service. The paintings, drawings, photos and sculpture belong to a category of fine art that historians call genre, meaning "a style of painting concerned with depicting scenes and subjects of common everyday life."

Throughout the 20th-century's preoccupation with abstract painting, genre art always maintained some following and, now, as the interest in realism revives, this art is gaining wider favor. Since genre emerged in the early 1800s in this country, it "has never gone out of style," Corcoran Director Peter C. Marzio says, "yet it has never been the height of style."

One reason for this, he believes, is that each generation of critics and artists thinks "either that there is no tradition of art from everyday life in America or that the previous generations were hopelessly romantic, uncritical and totally out of touch with reality."

Then, too, comments Lois Fink, the curator in the department of research at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American Art, other types of art, be they the abstractions of recent years or the grand "elevating" history scene paintings of the 19th century, have tended to capture fashion's passing prizes. In the last century, history paintings such as "Washington Crossing the Delaware" were popular with the public, critics and artists alike because of that era's interest in uplifting subjects based on events from the past and themes from American literature.

FADS AND FASHIONS IN ART come and go, but throughout American cultural history there have been artists interested in capturing scenes from American life. Horace Bonham's "Nearing the Issue at the Cockpit," shown here, is a commentary on the way American life, whether at a cock fight or during an election sometimes mixes different social classes.

STILL, THE ART of everyday life got off to a popular start in the early 1800s because of its availability through newly developed printing processes and because the realistically presented subjects conveyed an appealing story or a moral, often emphasizing that truth comes from everyday life. "In this period," Fink says, "there was a good deal of idealization of the common man by artists, who thought of him as a source of wisdom."

For the most part, however, the art ignored America's early social and political problems, depicting instead scenes of healthy yeomen tilling the soil and taking delight in music, country dances and friendly political argument; scenes of innocent children romping barefoot in the green fields, fishing in the sparkling streams, sledding on snowy hills and scenes of down-to-earth women sewing, cooking and caring for family.

The strength of this art form is that "the viewer can quickly assimilate what is depicted and can place the image he sees within a familiar historical context," the Corcoran's Edward J. Nygren, curator of the exhibition, explains. On the other hand, genre does have drawbacks. Simply put, there may be more to a picture than meets the eye. "Because the content is so accessible," Nygren says, "the viewer may not go beyond what is readily apparent to seek additional levels of meaning."

He cites an 1868 painting, "Leisure and Labor," to illustrate the point. The picture depicts a blacksmith at work; standing nearby is an idle young man. Ostensibly, the painting is an accurate record of a blacksmith shop in rural Maryland, but a closer look, Nygren points out, will reveal "that it alludes to the transient nature of life and the rewards of hard work" and is a variation on Aesop's fable of the ant and the grasshopper.

About 1865, genre took on cosmopolitan tones, reflecting the changes in American society and its people. Coming from the artist's easel then were works portraying the industrialization and urbanization of the nation, as well as scenes related to the problems — and the hopes — of the millions of immigrants arriving on American shores.

AT THE SAME TIME, there was a new interest in the solitary figure, particularly the middle- or upper-class woman in a domestic setting, reflecting, according to Nygren, both the compartmentalized lives of the sexes in their everyday activities and the idealization of women who are portrayed as "physically and spiritually detached from the aggressive world of business."

Painted objectively and with dispassion, the females in these slice-of-life portraits "sometimes were a little like houseplants" in their insulated worlds, Fink says. They also were very much alone, "inner directed" and isolated in contrast to the earlier genre subjects who, Fink adds, usually were shown "relating to someone — or some thing — outside themselves." This "psychological change" carries over to the present day.

About 1900, a group of young artists, referred to as the Ash Can School, began to challenge the traditional concepts of beauty in art as defined by previous generations. The urban poor, for example, once considered coarse and unsuitable as subject matter, were admired by these progressive artists. Robert Henri, their leader, stressed that it was not the subject which determined that a work was beautiful: "The subject can be as it may, beautiful or ugly. The beauty of the work of art was in the art itself."

In place of the Victorian women languishing in their parlors came such works as John Sloan's portrait of working-class girls laughing and drying their hair in the sun on a tenement roof. Henri and his circle were basically optimistic and idealistic in their art, viewing working people as the promise of the American dream.

BUT AS THE LATER Depression years began and wore on, the misery confronting so many of the poor became a central theme of another generation of genre artists, many of whom viewed their art as instruments of protest. Philip Evergood, who during the 1930s called himself a "social painter," once recalled an incident that came to affect his artistic sensibilities and his work.

Hong Kong's 'fragrant harbor' has turned into garbage dump

By TSE PUI SHAN
Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) — Hong Kong is having difficulties in living up to its name, which in Chinese means "fragrant harbor," as some 10,000 tons of not-so-fragrant refuse are indiscriminately dumped into its harbor every year.

The streets of this British Crown Colony appear no cleaner than its picturesque harbor despite previous government efforts to keep them tidy.

The authorities therefore decided last October to launch a territory-wide "Clean Hong Kong Campaign" which will last until the end of this year and cost taxpayers about $10 million.

Plans are also afoot to use a computer to track down chronic lap sap chuns (litterbugs) who have so far escaped heavier fines because it has proved difficult to differentiate between first and repeat offenders.

To put more teeth in the campaign, the maximum penalty for littering has been raised from about $345 to about $860 and six months' imprisonment.

Lap sap chuns are already feeling the pinch of tougher legislation. In the first two months of the campaign, 3,678 litterbugs were fined.

Some people seem to have discovered that the most convenient way to dispose of their garbage is out of their windows.

Rubbish thrown from high-rise buildings in this densely populated city ranges from empty soft-drink and beer bottles to broken-down television sets and discarded furniture.

Five people died and 253 others were reported injured by objects thrown from buildings.

To counter the anti-social behavior of lap sap chuns, the government has embarked on a massive education and publicity drive to arouse civic pride.

Stickers featuring a pair of angry eyes and the slogan "Hong Kong is watching" are prominently displayed in key public places to remind potential litterbugs that they could be fined heavily or even jailed.

Television and radio stations have offered free air time to promote the campaign. Some business firms are donating litter bins carrying their names, without advertisement, however.

A Chinese message, "Please do not dispose of empty cans improperly," is being embossed on cans of popular beverages.

The wide world of sports has many varied events and this week's column is no exception to the rule...

From the runner's world, our top area marathoner Donald Webb geared up his preparation for Boston with a half-marathon run recently in Abilene. He covered the 13.1-mile course faster than any participant of any age. Remember that Donald is just 53.

Another youngster is Big Spring's Martha Saunders. Martha fired a 198 for three rounds of golf to win the National Senior Sports Association tournament in Las Vegas March 22-26. Not only was the victory satisfying but Martha also received a three-day vacation to rest up from her hard work.

The NSSA is designed for all youngsters somewhere over the age of 50.

Things are rolling right along for several Big Spring bowlers. In the latest release for the Texas Women's Bowling Association, the Class E doubles team of Carol Fowler and Anna Thompson are second while Joyce Davis is listed second in the open division and third with Annie Ward in the open division doubles.

Big Spring's Phil Reingener was 37th at the $100,000 Greater Miami Sunshine Open earlier this month, winning $810.

Jerry Dudley won first place in the March tournament of the Big Spring Bass Club held at Oak Creek. Dudley caught three fish for a total of nine pounds, 14 ounces.

Second went to Dewey McSwain, third to Maxey Ware and fourth to Jerry Avery. The April tournament will be scheduled at tonight's meeting.

In the final Western Junior College Athletic Conference stats, Howard College had the second leading scorers in both men's and women's stats.

Nathan Givens ended the season with a 24.8 average to finish behind Charles Prescott of New Mexico (25.5). Leon Isaac was 10th with an 18.3 mark.

Givens was also second in rebounding at 11.4 behind Midland's Chester Smith at 11.7.

Nell Haskins was second in scoring with a 21.9 average to Cassandra Crumpton of Clarendon (22.8). Nell was third in rebounding with a 10.6 average. Susan Cordell, of course, led the conference in blocked shots with 118, setting a record for 13 in one game against Odessa College.

Finally, the Howard College Junior College District All-Sports Banquet is Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Cactus Room of the student union building. Jack Himes, NIRA all-American is guest speaker. Tickets are $4 each and be on sale through Friday.

Montreal blanks Texas after swap

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Wallace Johnson and Andre Dawson stroked run-scoring singles in the third inning and Ray Burris pitched six scoreless innings as the Montreal Expos blanked the Texas Rangers 3-0 in exhibition baseball play Wednesday.

Burris, in one of his last tuneups before the start of the regular season, allowed only a pair of singles to earn the victory, his fifth in as many decisions this spring. Bill Lee worked two innings and Bob James one.

Montreal scored twice in the third against Charlie Hough, the Rangers' starter and loser. Terry Francona singled, advanced to second on Burris's sacrifice bunt and scored on Johnson's single. Dawson then singled to score Tim Lincecum, who had walked ahead of Johnson's hit.

A wild pitch by Texas reliever Paul Mirabella enabled Tim Blackwell to score the Expos' third run in the eighth inning. Blackwell had reached base with a single.

The Expos have a 12-11 won-lost record in the Grapefruit League.

Minutes before the game, the two clubs were involved in a three-player swap. Montreal sent third baseman Larry Parrish and first baseman Dave Hostetler to the Rangers for outfielder-first baseman Al Oliver.

Carner hopes for win in richest tourney

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — JoAnne Carner has won 33 tournaments on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, but never the $310,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore tournament — the richest event in women's golf.

"I'm baffled," said Carner, who could have a dual celebration should she win the tournament on Sunday — her 43rd birthday. "When they held the Triple Crown (match play) at Mission Hills, I retired that trophy."

This will be her sixth try in the tournament. She and defending champion Nancy Lopez-Melton headed the select field which began today.

Carner is coming off a second-place finish in the LPGA's tournament in Hawaii last week. Amy Alcott won by a stroke, and Lopez-Melton finished third, two strokes back of Alcott.

Bob Lemon and Earl Weaver are in their final seasons as managers of the New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles and Bobby Cox starts his first with the Toronto Blue Jays. But the biggest news in the American League East this year is Reggie Jackson's defection from New York to California.

Despite the Yankees' World Series loss, Lemon was given one final year at the helm for his longtime loyalty to owner George Steinbrenner.

The owner bade Jackson farewell — whether it was a fond one remains open to discussion — after acquiring Ken Griffey from Cincinnati for right field. The rest of the outfield has Dave Winfield in left, Jerry Mumphrey in center. All can fly and the Bronx Bombers have become Steinbrenner's Striders, although Lemon insists it "doesn't mean that the Yankees are forgoing the long ball."

The infield finds Graig Nettles, Bucky Dent and Willie Randolph back at third, second and short, respectively, and first base will be platooned between Dave Revering and Bob Watson, with Rick Cerone behind the plate. That doesn't leave much room for free agent Dave Collins except as designated hitter, where he must contend with

With her team too far back to challenge for a berth, Big Spring junior Patricia Jones must rely on her own talents if she wants to make a trip to Lubbock.

Midland High and Midland Lee will battle it out on turf Thursday as the District 5-AAAAA golf tournament plays its final 18 holes at the Hogan Park Course.

Midland leads its crosstown rival by one stroke. Bulldogs have a 753 team score, just a stroke behind Lee's 754. Big Spring is third at 813 while San Antonio is fourth at 909.

In the medalist race, Jones stands third after ahead of her is Midland's Kelley Mobley with a 168. Jones is still in contention with a 168 while Odessa Highmie Wylie is fourth with a 173.

"She has a good chance if she'll play some smart shots," said Coach Howard Stewart. "She's seen the course before and knows how it is playing."

Other Lady Steer golfers are junior Diana Arellano, Chrissy Percoskie and freshmen Sandra Arellano, Deborah Edwards, Barbara Holmes and da Shirey.

"I am proud of the way they are trying," Stewart said.

Will Swedish star qualify?

Doubt is 'Bjorn' at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — If Bjorn Borg has to qualify for Wimbledon it will shake the Bank of England. But it will not move the All-England Tennis Club, that very British institution that rides every calamity and goes its own way.

The Bank of England owns the little tennis club at Roehampton, where every year 32 lesser players compete in a qualifying tournament for the last Wimbledon places.

"I should think the Bank of England will be jolly worried if Borg has to play there," said Air Chief Marshal Sir Brian Burnett, chairman of the All-England Club.

"There are no facilities for spectators or security. They will just have to do without spectators. None will be allowed in if Borg plays."

Burnett goes to Monte Carlo next week to consult the Professional Tennis Council concerning the Swedish star, five times Wimbledon champion and the world's undisputed No. 1 until John McEnroe took his crown from him last year.

Under the rules, Borg must either play in a minimum of 10 Grand Prix tournaments in 1982 or qualify for Wimbledon like any newcomer to the circuit. Until now, he has not agreed to do either.

If Borg does not play at Wimbledon, which opens June 21, a lot of fans will be disappointed. But the All-England Club has taken bigger disasters in its stride.

In 1973, almost the entire squad of professionals walked out of Wimbledon at short notice in a dispute over Yugoslavia's Nikki Pilic, who was suspended because he refused to play for his country in the Davis Cup.

That might have been expected to kill Wimbledon as a spectacle. Instead, the crowds were among the biggest of all time.

Wimbledon is Wimbledon and has been the world's No. 1 tennis tournament since 1877.

Burnett said he and his committee have "a very clear view" of what should be done about Borg. But he didn't say what it was.

Most English tennis fans believe Wimbledon is big enough to do what it wants to, on this issue or any other.

The whole professional tennis circuit got going in a big way in 1968 because Wimbledon defied the International Tennis Federation, went it alone and ran an open tournament, for professionals and amateurs. Any other tournament would have been disowned or suspended. Wimbledon had its own way and carried the world with it.

Rangers trade Oliver to Montreal

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The Montreal Expos obtained Al Oliver in a trade with the Texas Rangers on Wednesday, and Expos Manager Jim Fanning immediately called the productive left-handed hitter "exactly what this club needs."

In a deal announced prior to an exhibition game between the teams, the Expos of the National League got Oliver in exchange for third baseman Larry Parrish and minor league first baseman Dave Hostetler.

"We're happy to have acquired one of the premier hitters in this game," said Fanning, who announced that Oliver will bat cleanup between Andre Dawson and Gary Carter.

The 35-year-old Oliver has made a habit of hitting .300. He batted over .300 in 1976 and 1977, his final two years with Pittsburgh Pirates, and posted four more .300-plus seasons after joining Texas, an American League club, in 1978.

Montreal General Manager John McHale has coveted Oliver for several seasons, hoping to add left-handed hitting badly needed by the Expos.

"It's a good feeling to know that a ball club has tried to get you for six or seven years," said Oliver, who will play first base for the Expos.

"Everyone has an ego and wants to feel wanted."

The Expos apparently were not alone in their pitch for Oliver and his .296 career batting average. New York Yankees had serious discussions with Rangers General Manager Eddie Robinson.

"They took us through the wringer for a long time," McHale said of the Rangers. "We knew the Yankees wanted Oliver badly and we didn't want Eddie Robinson to go back to (Yankees owner) George Steinbrenner and make a deal."

The return of Oliver to first base for the first time in 12 years pushes Warren Cromartie, the incumbent, to right field. But Cromartie, who went to Fanning a few days ago and told him the team must strongly pursue Oliver, said he was a happy to shift positions for "one of my heroes."

To replace Parrish at third, Fanning said he planned to use Tim Wallach and possibly Brad Mills, a left-handed batter, against certain types of pitching.

Oliver, described by McHale as "35 going on 29," said that by hitting cleanup he might be helpful to Dawson.

"Dawson has put pressure on himself because he thought he had to carry the club," said Oliver. "Maybe I can take some of the pressure off him."

Texas Manager Don Zimmer said that with Buddy Bell a fixture at third base, he wants Parrish to play right field, his position when he broke into baseball.

"I'll just have to take some fly balls and try to get used to it," said the 28-year-old Parrish, who has a .263 career average.

Hostetler, 26, was hitting .333 after 36 exhibition at-bats. Last season he slammed 27 home runs and drove in 103 runs with the Denver Bears, the Expos' Class AAA farm team.

The wide world of sports has many varied events and this week's column is no exception to the rule...

From the runner's world, our top area marathoner Donald Webb geared up his preparation for Boston with a half-marathon run recently in Abilene. He covered the 13.1-mile course faster than any participant of any age. Remember that Donald is just 53.

Another youngster is Big Spring's Martha Saunders. Martha fired a 198 for three rounds of golf to win the National Senior Sports Association tournament in Las Vegas March 22-26. Not only was the victory satisfying but Martha also received a three-day vacation to rest up from her hard work.

The NSSA is designed for all youngsters somewhere over the age of 50.

Things are rolling right along for several Big Spring bowlers. In the latest release for the Texas Women's Bowling Association, the Class E doubles team of Carol Fowler and Anna Thompson are second while Joyce Davis is listed second in the open division and third with Annie Ward in the open division doubles.

Big Spring's Phil Reingener was 37th at the $100,000 Greater Miami Sunshine Open earlier this month, winning $810.

Jerry Dudley won first place in the March tournament of the Big Spring Bass Club held at Oak Creek. Dudley caught three fish for a total of nine pounds, 14 ounces.

Second went to Dewey McSwain, third to Maxey Ware and fourth to Jerry Avery. The April tournament will be scheduled at tonight's meeting.

In the final Western Junior College Athletic Conference stats, Howard College had the second leading scorers in both men's and women's stats.

Nathan Givens ended the season with a 24.8 average to finish behind Charles Prescott of New Mexico (25.5). Leon Isaac was 10th with an 18.3 mark.

Givens was also second in rebounding at 11.4 behind Midland's Chester Smith at 11.7.

Nell Haskins was second in scoring with a 21.9 average to Cassandra Crumpton of Clarendon (22.8). Nell was third in rebounding with a 10.6 average. Susan Cordell, of course, led the conference in blocked shots with 118, setting a record for 13 in one game against Odessa College.

Finally, the Howard College Junior College District All-Sports Banquet is Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Cactus Room of the student union building. Jack Himes, NIRA all-American is guest speaker. Tickets are $4 each and be on sale through Friday. For more info, call 267-6311, ext. 229.

Montreal blanks Texas after swap

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Wallace Johnson and Andre Dawson stroked run-scoring singles in the third inning and Ray Burris pitched six scoreless innings as the Montreal Expos blanked the Texas Rangers 3-0 in exhibition baseball play Wednesday.

Burris, in one of his last tuneups before the start of the regular season, allowed only a pair of singles to earn the victory, his fifth in as many decisions this spring. Bill Lee worked two innings and Bob James one.

Montreal scored twice in the third against Charlie Hough, the Rangers' starter and loser. Terry Francona singled, advanced to second on Burris's sacrifice bunt and scored on Johnson's single. Dawson then singled to score Tim Lincecum, who had walked ahead of Johnson's hit.

A wild pitch by Texas reliever Paul Mirabella enabled Tim Blackwell to score the Expos' third run in the eighth inning. Blackwell had reached base with a single.

The Expos have a 12-11 won-lost record in the Grapefruit League.

Minutes before the game, the two clubs were involved in a three-player swap. Montreal sent third baseman Larry Parrish and first baseman Dave Hostetler to the Rangers for outfielder-first baseman Al Oliver.

Carner hopes for win in richest tourney

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — JoAnne Carner has won 33 tournaments on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, but never the $310,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore tournament — the richest event in women's golf.

"I'm baffled," said Carner, who could have a dual celebration should she win the tournament on Sunday — her 43rd birthday. "When they held the Triple Crown (match play) at Mission Hills, I retired that trophy."

This will be her sixth try in the tournament. She and defending champion Nancy Lopez-Melton headed the select field which began today.

Carner is coming off a second-place finish in the LPGA's tournament in Hawaii last week. Amy Alcott won by a stroke, and Lopez-Melton finished third, two strokes back of Alcott.

AL East: Goin' to the Birds?

Bob Lemon and Earl Weaver are in their final seasons as managers of the New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles and Bobby Cox starts his first with the Toronto Blue Jays. But the biggest news in the American League East this year is Reggie Jackson's defection from New York to California.

Despite the Yankees' World Series loss, Lemon was given one final year at the helm for his longtime loyalty to owner George Steinbrenner.

The owner bade Jackson farewell — whether it was a fond one remains open to discussion — after acquiring Ken Griffey from Cincinnati for right field. The rest of the outfield has Dave Winfield in left, Jerry Mumphrey in center. All can fly and the Bronx Bombers have become Steinbrenner's Striders, although Lemon insists it "doesn't mean that the Yankees are forgoing the long ball."

The infield finds Graig Nettles, Bucky Dent and Willie Randolph back at third, second and short, respectively, and first base will be platooned between Dave Revering and Bob Watson, with Rick Cerone behind the plate. That doesn't leave much room for free agent Dave Collins except as designated hitter, where he must contend with

NBA Roundup

Denver nips Mavs

DALLAS (AP)—Denver Coach Doug Moe had visions of the Nuggets' 11-game winning streak slipping through the ice-cold hands of his squad when they missed five of six free throws in the closing seconds.

Denver, thanks to Dallas' Jim Spanarkel missed shot and Jay Vincent's failed attempt to tip the loose ball in at the buzzer, eked out a 120-114 National Basketball Association victory over the Mavericks Wednesday night.

"We really worried at the end. Dallas had their shooters in but it wouldn't drop for them," said Denver Coach Doug Moe.

Denver led 120-114 with 1:02 remaining, but Dallas forward Mark Aguirre put the Mavericks in striking distance with a basket and then, after a Denver miss, a three-point basket with 16 seconds left.

Spanarkel then missed a game-winning shot from the corner and Vincent's tip-in effort bounded out of the rim at the buzzer.

"We got the shot we wanted in the end, we just didn't get the call. That's two nights in a row. It's hard to take," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta. He questioned the officials on whether Vincent had fouled on the tip-in effort.

"You're going to get good shots against Denver. In order to beat them you've got to control the tempo. We did that. We just didn't make our shots drop," Motta said.

The streak, which includes four consecutive road victories, put Denver in good playoff position with its 42-30 record, only two games behind first place San Antonio in the Midwestern Division.

"Before the 11 game winning streak, nobody figured we had a shot at the playoffs and we have proved we are a playoff team," said Nuggets center Dan Issel.

Alex English led Denver with 27 points, and Kiki Vandeweghe had 25.

Vincent scored 31 points for Dallas, and Aguirre chipped in 30. Dallas lost its eighth game in the last 10 and saw its record fall to 24-49.

Around the League... Larry Bird, who had just scored 35 points and pulled down nine rebounds, still wasn't satisfied with his game.

"I did well on the offensive end, but there's other things out there too," said the 6-foot-9 forward after he led the Boston Celtics to a 119-109 National Basketball Association victory over the Washington Bullets Wednesday night.

"I felt the passing and rebounding weren't going my way," said Bird, who came off the bench for the 12th straight time since returning from a broken cheekbone.

"Luckily, my shots were going in. It seems like anytime I'm shooting well, the rest of my game goes down."

Bird hit 15 of his 20 field goal attempts and all five free throws as the Celtics won their first game since Philadelphia snapped their 18-game winning streak Sunday.

Kings 116, Sonics 109
Mike Woodson scored 22 of his game-high 28 points in the first half as Kansas City played the spoiler role by beating Seattle.

The Kings, who won't make the playoffs, never trailed after Woodson, who sank 10 of 14 shots in the game, gave them a 6-4 lead.

Kansas City led by as many as 16 points early in the third quarter before Seattle cut the deficit to 80-78 late in the same period. But the Sonics couldn't draw even, and they fell three games behind first-place Los Angeles in the Pacific Division.

76ers 99, Bulls 98
Julius Erving scored 18 of his 32 points in the third period and scored Philadelphia's last three points in its victory over Chicago.

Erving broke a 95-95 tie with a basket and he hit two free throws to give the 76ers a 99-96 lead after the Bulls' Ronnie Lester missed one of two free shots. Dwight Jones' last-second shot cut the deficit to one.

Pacers 108, Pistons 106
Billy Knight's basket from 20 feet with three seconds left lifted Indiana over Detroit.

The Pistons, who fell three games behind Atlanta and New Jersey in the battle for the final playoff spot in the East, blew a nine-point fourth-quarter lead.

Kelly Tripucka, who led all scorers with 32 points for Detroit, tied the game for the seventh time with a basket before Knight's winning hoop. Don Buse led Indiana with 18 points.

Nets 103, Cavaliers 87
Backup guard Darwin Cook scored 19 of his 23 points in the second half to lead New Jersey past Cleveland, which lost its eighth game in a row and 22nd in 23 contests against Atlantic Division teams.

The Nets never trailed after Cook's 18-footer gave them a 64-63 lead with 4:31 left in third period. A 28-16 advantage in the fourth quarter put the game away.

Ron Brewer led the Cavaliers with 23 points.

Suns 127, Clippers 106
Phoenix handed San Diego its 11th straight loss as Walter Davis scored 24 points and Dennis Johnson added 21.

The Suns, who are tied with Golden State for the sixth and final playoff spot in the West, never trailed after taking a 35-23 lead after one quarter behind Johnson's 10 points.

Exhibition Baseball Roundup

Braves continue roll

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Bob Horner belted a three-run home run and a single to pace the Atlanta Braves to a 7-3 victory Wednesday over the Houston Astros in an exhibition baseball game.

The Astros took a 1-0 lead in the second inning as Alan Ashby scored on a single by Terry Puhl.

But Horner's home run in the fourth inning put the Braves ahead to stay.

The Braves, who improved their pre-season record to 16-6, scored three more runs in the seventh. Brett Butler sent Rafael Ramirez in to score on a sacrifice fly, Glenn Hubbard hit back-to-back doubles and Horner drove in Claudell Washington to make the score 6-2.

The Astros, who dropped to 6-11, added another run in the eighth when Art Howe singled in Alan Knicely.

But Randy Johnson closed the game with a home run in the ninth.

The Houston Astros weren't all that impressed with J.R. Richard and asked him to take a trip to Tucson. Ron Jackson wasn't all that impressed with the Detroit Tigers and took a hike.

Richard, once one of the most imposing pitchers in the major leagues, is trying to make it back from a near-fatal stroke in 1980. He fell short of a big-league performance Tuesday — and on Wednesday, the Astros suggested his best route back to Houston might be through Tucson, the Astros' top minor league team.

"That's his only chance to pitch," said General Manager Al Rosen. Richard said he will "let God take care" of the decision.

If Richard chooses not to join the Pacific Coast League team, the Astros will put him on their injured reserve list. "He's still a ways away," Rosen said after the 6-foot-8 right-hander gave up seven hits, two walks and three runs in three innings during an intrasquad game Tuesday.

Three of Houston's rostered pitchers didn't fare much better on Wednesday. The Atlanta Braves pounded Vern Ruhle, Dave Smith and Joe Sambito for 14 hits, including Bob Horner's three-run homer and RBI-single, and downed the Astros 7-3.

Ron Jackson helped the California Angels. On Wednesday, he gave them one — a three-run homer, the difference in a 6-3 victory over Seattle.

Fernando Valenzuela made his first spring appearance for Los Angeles a satisfactory one. The rookie sensation of a year ago, a holdout this year, pitched two innings of relief, allowing three hits and one unearned run in the Dodgers' 10-inning 8-7 victory over Boston.

The Expos beat the Rangers 3-0 as Ray Burris pitched six innings of two-hit ball and Wallace Johnson and Andre

Cartilage removed from Rivers' knee

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Texas Ranger centerfielder Mickey Rivers had a piece of cartilage removed from his right knee here Wednesday during arthroscopic surgery performed by orthopedic specialist Dr. Dan Kanell.

The torn cartilage was discovered during what began as an arthroscopic examination. Rivers is expected to be sidelined for two to four weeks and has been placed on the disabled list.

There was no damage to the ligaments, emphasized Texas trainer Bill Zeigler. We're not going to rush him or anything. We'll see how quickly he recovers and quickly he can start working on the weights to build his strength back up.

Rivers had been unable to play in exhibition games here for more than two weeks since injuring his knee in a slide at second base in a game versus Atlanta at West Palm Beach.

Dawson hit run-scoring singles in the third inning.

Among the day's other impressive pitching performances, Larry Christenson of Philadelphia stopped Detroit on two hits over six innings, fanning eight batters, as the Phillies romped 8-1, Mike Norris of Oakland hurled seven shutout innings as the A's downed Cleveland 3-1, and Tom Lollar pitched seven four-hit innings in San Diego's 5-1 victory over Milwaukee.

Garry Templeton had a two-run homer and Dave Edwards a two-run double in the Padres' triumph, Gary Roenicke hit a two-out, ninth-inning home run to propel Baltimore past the Chicago White Sox 4-3, and George Brett (who had homered earlier) hit a one-out single in the 11th inning to give Kansas City to a 4-3 victory over Pittsburgh.

St. Louis beat Toronto 4-3 as George Bjorkman hit a two-run double in the ninth inning, then scored the winning run on Mike Ramsey's single. Doubles by Cesar Cedeno, Paul Householder and Ron Oester in a six-run fifth inning carried Cincinnati to a 7-2 victory over the New York Mets. The Chicago Cubs won their fourth in a row with Junior Kennedy's seventh-inning single producing the winning run in a 3-2 triumph over San Francisco.

The New York Yankees took a 9-1 victory over the University of South Florida.

THE FLYING RED — Cincinnati Reds second baseman Ron Landestoy is airborne trying for catcher Alex Trevino's throw as New York Mets Mookie Wilson steals second base in the Wednesday game.

Digger creates controversy

What's alarming is 'So what?' attitude

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Notre Dame's Richard "Digger" Phelps opened up a can of worms — Pandora's box or a hive of bees, whichever suits your fancy — with his charge that college coaches are paying as much as $10,000 a year for select basketball beef on the hoof.

"A conservative figure," responded Oregon State's Ralph Miller, named Coach of the Year for 1982 by the Associated Press. "They were talking about that kind of money 10 and 15 years ago. We've now got inflation."

"Digger must have had his reasons," said Tex Winter, 60-year-old coach at Long Beach (Calif.) State, new president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches. "But there is a time, a place and a method to handle such charges. It might have been wiser if Digger had followed the prescribed procedures."

Phelps' informal comments created a mild tempest in New Orleans last weekend and stole some of the pre-game attention from the business at hand — deciding the NCAA national basketball championship, which North Carolina won dramatically over Georgetown.

Coaches were sharply divided on whether Phelps was discreet in blowing the whistle as he did. But the most alarming feature of the controversy was the "So what?" attitude with which the charge was treated generally.

"They've been doing it for years and years," coaches conceded. "The only thing that's changed is the size of the payments."

The NCAA acknowledged as much.

"I wouldn't say abuses are rampant," said David Berst, director of the NCAA enforcement staff, from his headquarters in Mission, Kan. "but there's no doubt they exist. Little is different except the scope of it."

"Remember the University of Illinois slush fund in the 1960s? Athletes were getting paid $40, $50 and $60. That seemed like a lot then. It might be trivial today. "We believe a vast majority adheres to the rules. There are occasional violators who are seeking that extra edge. There always have been."

Berst and his staff are kept busy rushing around answering alarms such as posed by Phelps and putting out brush fires. But it must seem to them that, when one blaze is extinguished, two or three pop up some place else. It's almost a losing cause.

Berst said 17 of the nation's colleges are currently undergoing some sort of sanctions while 30-odd are under investigation. One of the latter is Clemson, which produced the 1981 national football champion. "The largest illegal payment we've investigated," Berst said, "was between $50,000 and $75,000 a few years ago." The violator, unidentified, was properly punished.

Sneed looking for Greensboro win

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Ed Sneed, a quiet, soft-spoken man, had a brush with golfing immortality three seasons ago, missing a victory in the Masters by a quarter-turn of the ball.

It was by that margin, on the final hole, that his par-saving putt failed to fall. The bogey sent him into a playoff, which he lost.

Now, he isn't even in the elite, international field which next week will play in the first of the year's Big Four events. His only chance to make that field is with a victory in the $300,000 Greater Greensboro Open.

That, of course, is a longshot. But, Sneed said, it isn't out of the question.

"I'm playing well enough to win," he said before teeing off today in the first round on the 6,984-yard, par 72 Forest

Oaks Country Club course. "I've played pretty well ever since Hawaii (in February) I'm probably playing better now than at any time in the last year and a half, maybe two years. It has been particularly effective for Sneed, a veteran of 14 years on the PGA tour, in his last three starts.

Texas coach gets job in New Mexico

HOBBS, N.M. (AP) — Ken Clearman, an assistant coach for several years at Port Neches-Groves High School in Texas, has been named head football coach at Hobbs High School.

The Hobbs School Board Wednesday selected the 41-year-old Clearman to succeed Doug James, who resigned earlier this year to accept the head coaching job at Amarillo Palo Duro High School.

Clearman was an assistant coach at Hobbs under Doug Ethridge from 1968 to 1972, then joined Ethridge's staff when the latter became the head coach at Port Arthur Jefferson High School at Port Arthur, Texas.

Clearman, an assistant to Ethridge for 14 years, went to Port Neches-Groves when Ethridge was named head coach at that school.

While Clearman was an assistant at Port Neches-Groves, the football team compiled an overall record of 79-28-1 from 1973 to 1981.

Reagan MX plan criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's plan to temporarily base the first contingent of the new MX missiles in existing Minuteman silos may be shot down by Senate Republicans who fear it might increase the chances of nuclear war erupting.

GOP members of the Senate defense appropriations subcommittee — which screens military spending requests — raised questions Wednesday about the feasibility of the temporary basing plan.

"This committee may not make the funds available for the MX until a decision on a (permanent) basing mode is made and approved by Congress," said Alaska Republican Ted Stevens, chairman of the panel.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.D., noted that the administration concedes the missiles would be vulnerable to Soviet attack during the interim period while they are in the Minuteman silos.

That, it was suggested, might make it more likely that the United States would fire first if it was determined the Soviets planned to attack the MX sites.

The administration proposes to put 40 MX missiles into Minuteman missile silos in the Midwest, at an estimated cost of $3.6 billion. It is supposed to develop a permanent basing system for the multiwarhead MX missiles by the middle of 1983. The goal of that permanent basing plan would be to make the MX missiles — a major element in Reagan's strategic arms program — safe from Soviet attack.

Another Republican member of the subcommittee, Mark Andrews of North Dakota, said the administration appears to be heading toward a "hair trigger" situation in which the United States might be compelled to launch a first strike against the Soviet Union.

In economic matters Wednesday, the Senate narrowly averted a shutdown of seven major government agencies by approving a stopgap spending bill to keep them operating through Sept. 30, the end of fiscal 1982. The move came after a 51-48 vote to remove an amendment to force a simultaneous decision on a tax break Congress voted its members last year.

In other congressional business: —General Accounting Office Comptroller Charles A. Bowsher told a House Government Operations subcommittee that financial controls within the Energy Department are so lax that the department doesn't know what it owns and has sometimes bought property twice.

—Agriculture Department Deputy Under Secretary Thomas Hammer told the House Agriculture sugar subcommittee that world sugar prices are only pennies above the level at which government takeover of large domestic sugar supplies will occur under the new price support program.

Libertarians reveal petition drive for November ballot

By DANA PALMER
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — An effort to gain spots on the state's November general election ballot for more than 125 Libertarian Party candidates begins May 2 with a statewide petition drive.

The party's list of political hopefuls includes a Houston stockbroker, an Austin nurse, a Dallas accountant and a ranch foreman from Merton in West Texas.

Plans for the petition drive were announced this week during a Capitol news conference called by state and national party officials.

Laurel Kay Freeman, the party's candidate for lieutenant governor, said Libertarians, who believe less government means better government and more freedom, must collect 23,696 signatures between May 2 and July 12.

The 29-year-old Austin nurse and University of Texas student said, "We'll probably have to collect about twice that number in order to have enough valid signatures."

Alicia Garcia Clark, national chair of the Libertarian Party, said the petition drive in Texas won't be easy because "Texas' ballot law is one of the most difficult in the nation."

The only people who can sign the petition, she noted, are registered voters who do not vote in either the Republican or Democratic primary on May 1.

Mrs. Clark, a Los Angeles businesswoman who was born in Mexico, said that nationwide the party plans to field nearly 1,000 candidates, making it the "first time a real third party has been (20) alive in a non-presidential election year."

She estimated that the party is about 2.5 million strong nationwide, with about 80,000 members in Texas.

In the 1980 general election, Libertarian David Hutzelman, a 41-year-old Houston telecommunications manager, garnered 86,654 votes in the Railroad Commission race against Democrat James Nugent and Republican H.J. "Doc" Blanchard.

However, Blanchard received 1.6 million votes and Nugent 2.3 million. This year Hutzelman is running for governor.

Other statewide candidates include:

John E. Ford, a 38-year-old Houston stockbroker, who is running for the U.S. Senate.

—Katherine S. Youngblood, a 28-year-old Houston attorney, running for attorney general.

—Janet Tlapen, a 27-year-old Houston certified public accountant, running for comptroller.

—Alma Kucymbala, a 44-year-old Dallas accountant, running for state treasurer.

—Charles S. Fuller, a 41-year-old professor at Texas Southern University in Houston, running for land commissioner.

—Stanley Keen, a ranch foreman from Merton in Irion County, running for agriculture commissioner.

—Dick Bjornseth, a 34-year-old urban planner from Houston, running for the Railroad Commission.

Oil spill victims may sue Mexican firm, judge rules

HOUSTON (AP) — American citizens hurt by a Mexican oil spill may not sue that country's oil monopoly, but they can seek damages from the private company that did the drilling, a federal judge has ruled.

Tuesday's decision by U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor Jr. addressed the sensitive issue of jurisdiction in a tangle of lawsuits stemming from the massive 1979 Ixtoc I oil spill.

O'Connor dismissed all claims against Pemex, the Mexican government-owned oil monopoly, ruling Pemex was protected "on the basis of foreign sovereign immunity" which generally prevents U.S. citizens from suing foreign nations.

But the judge said U.S. citizens can sue Permargo, the private Mexican company that did the drilling for Pemex.

The ruling paves the way for a trial on the many damage suits consolidated in O'Connor's court.

No trial date has been set and some attorneys, who asked not to be identified, predicted the ruling would likely lead to out-of-court settlements.

Oil, grease and tar from the runaway Ixtoc I offshore well was swept northward by winds and currents and stained Texas and Louisiana beaches about two months after the well blew out on June 3, 1979.

It took 10 months to cap the well that triggered what is considered the worst oil spill in history by spewing more than 100 million gallons of crude into the Bay of Campeche.

Ansel Adams photos on display in April

An exhibition of photography by distinguished American landscape photographer Ansel Adams goes on display in the Midland College McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building, starting today. The exhibit will remain on display through April 30.

Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday, and 1-4 p.m. Sunday for the duration of the show.

The traveling exhibition of Ansel Adams' representative works was organized by the Center for Creative Photography at the University of Arizona, Tucson.

"This will be a major exhibition for residents of the area who enjoy fine photography," noted Joe Melanie Calverley, Midland College photo instructor. "Adams is truly a giant in the field and to see 40 of his works at one time truly is a unique opportunity."

Ansel Adams' style, marked by a combination of fine craft and magnificent subject matter, caused

Alfred Stieglitz to refer to Adams' work as "some of the finest photographs I've ever seen."

Recognized as one of America's greatest photographers, Adams' international reputation results from a career spanning over half a century highlighted by major exhibitions in virtually every prominent museum, a distinguished teaching and writing career, and an active concern for the preservation of our natural environment.

In recognition of Mr. Adams' activities, the University of Arizona's Center for Creative Photography is sponsoring an exhibition, Ansel Adams: A Survey. The exhibit consists of forty of Adams' photographs which Mr. Adams personally selected, feeling that it represents his long and distinguished career in photography.

He was born in pre-earthquake San Francisco in 1902. As a young boy, he visited Yosemite Valley often, taking his first photograph there at the age of 14 and serving as custodian at the Sierra Club headquarters for several seasons. He began a career as a concert pianist at the age of 18. It was not until the late 1920's that Adams turned from music to photography as a profession, when he began making photographs of the wilderness which reflected his deep respect for the natural beauty in unexplored areas. Adams' series of photographs of the Sierra Nevada's taken in 1927 launched his career in photography with the publication of a portfolio and a one-man show in San Francisco in 1932.

Since then, Adams has photographed extensively in the national parks throughout the country. To his credit are seven portfolios, more than 15 books (including his most recent, "Photographs of the Southwest," published by New York Graphic Society) and numerous awards including three Guggenheim fellowships. As a member of the Sierra Club's Board of Directors for 37 years, Adams was instrumental in bringing about many conservation measures aimed at preserving natural resources.

Adams' photographs reflect craftsmanship, utilizing an exposure method, the Zone System, which he devised to accurately duplicate nature's subtle tones. He notes: "I guess I got that from the discipline of the piano; I might have been quite a sloppy joe in photograph if it hadn't been for the piano."

Soprano Elly Ameling prefers singing art songs

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

When people ask Elly Ameling how many recordings she has made, she answers, "Three and a half feet."

She adds, "I have them all on a shelf, one of every piece."

And just now the highly acclaimed soprano has some to add. In February, Columbia Records issued two — Mendelssohn songs, and Debussy and Faure songs.

In January, Philips Records issued a three-record set in which Miss Ameling sings all 52 songs that Haydn wrote including one that he wrote for an English sailor "who rolls his Rs as if he were an Irishman. We all had great fun about that song."

In April, Philips will release Miss Ameling singing Bach cantatas with the English Chamber Orchestra. Last fall she sang Ravel's "Scheherazade" with the San Francisco Symphony conducted by Edo de Waart, and then they recorded it for Philips. She says, "I've been singing with Edo since he was still in the Netherlands Wind Ensemble." In April, Nonesuch will issue a record of Miss Ameling and baritone Tom Krause singing Hugo Wolf lieder. In December, back home in Holland, she will record an album of songs by Gershwin, Porter, etc. She specializes closer to popular songs than they are to opera.

Miss Ameling has preferred singing art songs to opera from childhood. "It's probably because I love languages and real poetry. Very few librettos are really beautiful," she says.

"Playing the piano I discovered how beautiful the piano parts are for these songs. I fell in love with them."

"When you're singing opera you build your role by using different vocal timbres and colors. If you use 20 degrees of color in an operatic role, you may use even more in an art song, finer-toned colors, closer together. When you sing opera, you make a painting with a big brush. In a concert you make many paintings with a small, finer brush."

Miss Ameling was born in Rotterdam. She says, "My mother used to sing to me and with me as a child. I got music with the porridge spoon. My mother put me on the piano when I was 6."

"I'm very grateful. I can learn all my own scores. It goes much quicker."

Miss Ameling was married in 1964. "We knew each other since I was 4," she says.

Convicted forger flees prison camp

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

Big Spring Federal Prison Camp officials continued their search today for a man who escaped from the minimum security prison camp Saturday night.

Missing is Kerry Perkins, who is serving a three-year sentence for forgery, according to John Allman, superintendent of the prison camp.

Allman said Perkins was discovered missing just after midnight Saturday.

"We had a midnight count and he was found missing. He was officially declared missing at twelve-thirty," Allman said.

Local, state and federal law enforcement authorities have been notified of the escape — and a $200 reward has been offered as well, Allman said.

"The reward is standard procedure," Allman explained. "Anytime anybody escapes from a federal institution, there's a $200 reward for information leading to the apprehension of the person who escaped."

It's possible that Perkins, who was convicted in Deming, N.M., may have been headed back to New Mexico, Allman said.

Perkins began his sentence in June 1981.

"If he's apprehended, he'll be arraigned before a federal magistrate and tried for escape," Allman said. If convicted, Perkins will be placed in a federal prison with heightened security.

"He's blown his chance at staying in a Level One institution," Allman said.

Level One institutions have the least amount of security within the federal prison system and are designed to hold inmates who are judged to be of no damage to the community, the superintendent said.

Typical criminals held at the Big Spring facility are those convicted of so-called white-collar crimes such as forgery and mail fraud.

"This is the first (escape) we've had in a long time," Allman added.

Man is arrested on weapons charge

Police arrested a Stanton man on a charge of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon at 12:38 p.m. yesterday, according to police reports.

Charles Clark of 907 W. Carpenter in Stanton is charged with threatening 16-year-old Sandra Bernal of 1610 Nolan at her home Saturday night, police said.

According to police reports, Clark pointed a gun at the girl and threatened her. He was arrested later that night on a charge of driving while intoxicated, for which he posted bail on a $1,000 bond, according to reports.

Clark had returned to the police station just past noon yesterday for completion of booking on the DWI charge when he was served with an arrest warrant on the aggravated assault charge, according to detective Lt. John Wolf.

Bond of $15,000 was set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Hefflin on the aggravated assault charge. Clark posted bail and was released from county jail shortly before 5 p.m. yesterday, according to sheriff's office records.

Jana Wagner of Gail Route told police someone broke into her automobile and stole $200 while the car was parked in the lot of the 18th and Gregg 7-Eleven at 1:30 a.m. today.

Kim Hillman of Hillman's Saddlery told police $100 in cash was stolen from the saddlery shop on F.M. 700 over the weekend.

WORKING TO FREE TRAPPED WOMAN — A car-truck collision Tuesday at 10:25 a.m. on Texas 350 and Farm Market Road 700 trapped Brenda W. Powers, 23, of 605 Bell for nearly an hour. Firemen and other personnel used the "jaws of life" and an Ace Wrecker to free the injured woman. She received fractures and multiple lacerations. Following surgery yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Powers was in stable condition at Malone-Hogan Hospital while her four-year-old daughter, Rebekah, was treated and released. The Lamesa truck driver, Antonio Ruiz, was taken to a private physician by private auto. Ruiz was ticketed for failure to yield the right of way. A Shaffer ambulance crew, Malone-Hogan nurses, city police, and sheriff's deputies were called to the scene to assist. Department of Safety Trooper Glen Redmon investigated the wreck.

Executive director of local YMCA quits

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

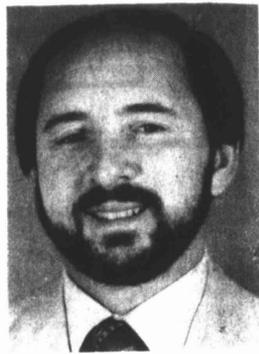

Bob Cappel, the executive director of the YMCA since 1980, is resigning effective April 9. Cappel made the announcement Tuesday in Big Spring Postmaster Frank Hardesty's office. Hardesty is president of the YMCA board of directors.

Hardesty said a replacement for Cappel has already been named. He is Wallace Gill, presently executive director of the Palestine YMCA and formerly director of the Wichita, Kansas and Victoria YMCAs.

Cappel said he was leaving in order to try something new. "I've been in the YMCA business for 14 years and I felt it was time for a change away from the Y to see if I'd like it. I like Big Spring, but I'll be moving to East Texas at Longview."

The resigning YMCA director said the Big Spring YMCA had been a "good learning experience, but the good shape it was in now was due to people's believing in it and their involvement." Cappel credited the board of directors for their support and confidence in his abilities.

Board President Hardesty praised Cappel for his efforts at the YMCA. "He is responsible for the best start we've had in 20 years. He's leaving the Y in good shape for his successor. Bob's done a good job," Hardesty said.

The new director will not take the position until May 15, Hardesty said. The interim period between directors would be filled by the board of directors, he added. The officers include City Manager Don Davis, vice-president; James Welch, treasurer; and Sherry Bordofsky, secretary.

Three church break-ins perplex Big Spring pastors

By BILLELDER
Staff Writer

Big Spring pastors are scratching their heads and wondering what motivated an apparent lone burglar to break into three churches and a lodge Monday night or Tuesday morning.

According to police reports, the following churches were the scenes of break-ins between Monday evening and noon Tuesday: the St. Paul Lutheran Church at 810 Scurry, Emmanuel Baptist Church at 2107 Emmanuel, and the 14th and Main Church of Christ. Additionally, the Masonic Lodge at 2101 Lancaster was reported to be the scene of a break-in.

The curious thing is, nothing was taken in any of the break-ins except a pair of calculators from the 14th and Main Church of Christ.

"It doesn't make any sense why they would go through the trouble to break in and then walk off," said

Carroll Kohl, pastor of St. Paul Lutheran Church. Kohl told police a window and a door handle and lock were broken at the church between 10 p.m. Monday and 8:30 a.m. Tuesday. There was no indication anything was taken, Kohl said.

David Womack, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church, told police a door knob and lock were broken at his church between 6:30 p.m. Monday and 8:30 a.m. Tuesday. Again, nothing was taken.

"I don't have any idea (why it happened)," Womack told The Herald this morning. "I've thought about it—but came to no conclusions, when somebody breaks in, you'd expect them to take something."

Royce Clay, pastor of the 14th and Main Church of Christ, told police the burglar of his church did take something: two calculators worth a total of $70. Clay told police the burglar broke out a ground-level window, forced open a door to his office, stole the calculators and then left through the broken window.

Also broken into was the Masonic Lodge at 2101 Lancaster, according to police reports. The lodge, which is located near the Emmanuel Baptist Church, had a window shattered and some filing cabinets tampered with—but nothing was taken.

Police investigators theorize the four break-ins are related.

"The method of getting in was the same," said detective Lt. John Wolf. Investigators don't have a suspect yet but think the four break-ins were the work of a single person, Wolf said.

Kohl speculates that the reason nothing was stolen from his church is that the burglar may have been scared off.

"If I was going to break down a door, I'd sure go and take something for my time and effort," he said.

SAMPLING — Among those enjoying Thursday's Wine and Cheese Party to benefit the American Cancer Society were (left to right) Charles and Joan Bell and Rosie Shaffer. More than $7,800 was raised as a result of the party, which was held at Big Spring Country Club. Most of the funds raised will go to research, public education and service and rehabilitation.

The Mall

Street Journal

It is at this time that I take great pleasure in announcing the arrival of the Easter Bunny to the Big Spring Mall. The Easter Bunny can be seen from four to eight o'clock during the week and from eleven to seven o'clock on Saturdays. The Easter Bunny will be at the Big Spring Mall today thru the tenth of April you can find the fuzzy fellow on the stage which is in front of Gordon's, Regis, and Radio Shack. The Easter Bunny will have free gifts for all the good girls and boys so make a point of stopping by the mall. A little later on in the month on the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth the Big Spring Art Association will present a showing to the general public.

Last week in this column I started the spotlight series, this is where each week one store in particular is spotlighted. This week the spotlight falls on Radio Shack. The manager is Gage Mims who is one of our local boys, this week Gage is having his grand opening sale and here are some of the fine values you can find. There is a group of 40 channel CB's for $59.95, Alarm Clocks for $11.95, a Compact Cassette Recorder for $41.88 and 3 way Hi Fi Car Speakers for $39.95. Radio Shack also has AM-FM Portable Radios at $13.88, 80 Watt Speakers at $69.95, 50 Watt 2 Way Speakers at $29.95, and to go with those speakers an 80 Watt Receiver at $349.95, or a 30 Watt Receiver at $199.95. Some of the other fine values to be found at Radio Shack are AM-FM-TV Radios for the low price of $11.88, 43 range Multitesters for $24.88, Tape Decks for $99.95, Intercoms for $39.95, and Realistic Supertapes a box of twelve for $26.88. These are just a few of the items that Gage has on sale this week.

Now let's see what the other merchants have to offer. At Zale's, Rick Miller is offering free ear piercing with the purchase of any pair of Inverness Pierced Earrings. Across from Zale's at Emphasis Bobbie Holmes the manager has just started a Pre-

Easter sale with large store wide mark downs. At Gordon's, there is a sale on Diamond Pendants and Earrings, also 14K gold necklaces are 50% off. At J.C. Penney's the 80th anniversary sale is still in progress and manager Don Fisher would like for me to remind you to look in your local TV listings on the 25th of April for Merle Haggard at the White House, this special is sponsored by the J.C. Penney Company. Helen Vaughn at Helen's would like to remind all the Easter shoppers that she carries shoes by Connie, Poly, Preston, Beverly-Hills, L.A. Lady, Jazz, Kis, Danelle, Capezio, and Stuff. This Saturday at the Kopper Kettle Roxann Rich will be making sugar cookies from 2:00-4:00, also Roxann has just received some Wind Chimes and a load of Kitchen Witches. At Bealls there is a big Pre-Easter Sale going on, OK guys now is the time to buy some Levis at 25% off. Let me take this time to remind you moms and dads to bring your kids out to the Big Spring Mall to see the Easter Bunny and when they're done take them by Jennys Old Time Treats or Peanut Shack for some refreshments. At Jennys they can pick up an Eastern Rabbit of their own, made of chocolate.

Now I get to announce the coming of a new member of the Mall family Dirk Rambo a local businessman will soon start construction on "Jacob's." Jacob's is a dining establishment for the whole family they will feature Hamburgers, Steak Sandwiches, Ham and Cheese Sandwiches, Chili, and a Salad Bar. I have seen the plans for Jacob's and they are beautiful, all of us here at the Mall welcome Dirk and his fine establishment to the Big Spring Mall.

Before I bring to an end another Mail Street Journal, I would like to thank all of you that donated to the Easter Seals by putting your spare change in the fountain. In April all proceeds will go to the Downtown Lions Club White Cain Day. Come see the Easter Bunny.

Dear Abby Affair has age old ending

DEAR ABBY: When I see letters in your column from young girls who fall in love with older men, I ache for them because I know what they're feeling.

When I was 16, I baby-sat for a divorced man who had two young children. I fell in love with him the first time I saw him. I was thrilled that an older man would even look at me. (He was 30). I lost my heart (and my virginity) to him. Our affair went on for a year and a half. I never realized that all he saw in me was a bed partner when he felt the need. Meanwhile he was on my mind night and day.

My love for him took me out of circulation at school. Boys my own age seemed like infants. I missed the school proms and all the activities and fun high school girls have.

And worst of all, it made a liar and a sneak out of me. My parents never knew, thank God.

What did I get instead? The constant fear of pregnancy. (I was just plain lucky; he was selfish and inconsiderate and refused to use protection).

He said he was "thinking" of marriage. He was. But not to me. In the middle of our big love affair he married a woman he had said was "just a friend." My heart broke into a million pieces.

YOUNG AND FOOLISH ONCE

DEAR YOUNG: Thanks for the testimonial. Girls, if the shoe fits, wear it, and run as though your life depended upon it, because it does.

Beans provide good nutrition at low cost

Occasionally, among all the junk mail, we at The Herald receive something truly interesting. Take for instance, "The Michigan Bean Cookbook."

The 48-page booklet is filled with imaginative recipes for both dry and canned beans. Dry beans are a good source of plant protein, and when combined with other plant protein foods or small amounts of meat or cheese, the dish is still low cost but nutritious.

In addition to recipes, the book also contains tips on cooking beans - conventionally, in the crock pot and the microwave. The book may be purchased by sending 50-cents to: "Michigan Bean Cookbook," Michigan Bean Commission, P.O. Box 22037-C, Lansing, Mich. 48909. Include your zip code and allow two to three weeks for delivery.

MARINATED VEGETABLE SALAD
 1 lb. dry kidney beans
 1/2 lb. dry navy beans
 2 cans (1 lb. each) green and yellow beans, drained
 12 ounces marinated artichoke hearts
 3 to 4 ounces pitted ripe olives
 1 small red onion, thinly sliced
 4 to 6 ounces pickled mushrooms
 2 ounces pimentos, chopped
 1 Tbsp. capers
 1/4 cup chopped parsley
 1 Tbsp. chopped chives or green onion

dressing:
 1/4 tsp. chervil, crushed
 Pinch red pepper
 Salt and pepper
 1 clove garlic, minced
 1/2 cup oil
 1/4 cup vinegar
 1/4 tsp. tarragon, crushed
 Wash and sort dry beans. Combine kidney beans with 6 cups water and navy beans with 3 cups water in separate saucepans. Bring to a boil, and cook 2 minutes. Remove from heat, cover and let stand 1 hour. Simmer another 2 hours, adding water if necessary. Drain. Combine vegetables in large bowl. Place all dressing ingredients in blender and whirl on low speed until well mixed. Pour dressing over vegetables and toss lightly but thoroughly. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Makes about 12 servings.

FOUR BEAN SALAD
 3/4 cup dry navy beans
 3 cups water
 1 can (1 lb.) french-cut green beans

 1/2 cup chopped onion
 1/2 cup salad oil
 1/2 cup vinegar
 3/4 cup sugar
 1 tsp. salt
 1/2 tsp. pepper

Wash and sort navy beans. Combine beans and water in saucepan. Bring to a boil and cook 2 minutes. Remove from heat, cover and let stand one hour. Cook until beans are tender, about 2 hours. Add more water if needed. Drain and chill. Drain canned beans; combine with navy beans in large bowl. Add green pepper and onion. Mix oil and vinegar with sugar, salt, pepper. Pour over bean mixture; toss. Refrigerate covered, until ready to serve. Makes about 10 servings.

 1 can (10 1/2 ounces) bean with bacon soup
 1 cup finely chopped green onion
 1/2 tsp. hot pepper sauce
 1 cup sour cream

 1/4 lb. salt pork, cubed
 Place beans in boiling water (enough to cover) and simmer 10 minutes. Combine beans, water and salt in crock. Cover and cook on low about 12 hours. Drain Beans, shallow 9x9 baking dish. Cover with one-third of the tomato sauce, then one-third of the cheeses. Repeat layers twice more, ending with Parmesan cheese. Bake at 375 degrees about 20 minutes. Cut into squares to serve. Makes about 8 servings.

Johnnie Lou Avery

Open for business

When Vince Lombardi came to coach the Green Bay Packers, he faced a defeated, dispirited professional football team. He stood before them, looked them over silently for a long time, and then in a quiet but intense way said, "Gentlemen, we are going to have a great football team, and we are going to win games. Get that! You are going to learn to block. You are going to learn to run. You are going to learn to tackle. You are going to outplay the teams that come against you. Get that!"

"And how is this to be done?" he continued. "You are to have confidence in me and enthusiasm for my system. The secret of the whole matter will be what goes on up here." (He tapped his temple.) "Hereafter, I want you to think of only three things: your home, your religion and the Green Bay Packers, in that order! Let enthusiasm take hold of you!"

THE MEN SAT up straight in their chairs. "I walked out of that meeting feeling ten feet tall!" said the quarterback. That year they won seven games — with the same players who had lost ten games the year before. The next year they won a division title and the third year the World Championship. Why? Because, added to hard work and skill and love of the sport, enthusiasm made the difference.

What happened to the Green Bay Packers can happen to a church, to a business, to a country, to an individual. What goes on in the mind is what determines the outcome. When an individual really gets enthusiasm you can see it in the flash of his eyes, in his alert and vibrant personality. You observe it in the spring of his step. You can see it in the verve of his whole being. Enthusiasm makes the difference in one's attitude toward other people, toward his job, toward the world. It makes a great big difference in the zest and delight of human existence.

Permian Consort musicians to appear at HC April 6

Permian Consort, a group of University of Texas of the Permian Basin faculty, students and West Texas professional musicians devoted to the performances of Baroque music, will appear in concert at 1 p.m. April 6 at the Howard College student union building.

The concert is part of Permian Consort's second annual tour. Other concerts are slated at The University of Texas at Dallas, Midland and Odessa colleges.

Dr. Craig Lister, coordinator of music at UTPB, noted the overall theme for the concerts will be solo works from the first half of the 18th century. The three most popular instruments of the day — violin, trumpet and recorder — will be featured with soloists Brian Gum on violin, Katie Landis on recorder and Britt Theurer on trumpet.

Works by English, Italian and German composers will be included in the concerts including such notables as Crote, Telemann, Barsanti and Humphries.

'Project Abled and Disable' is club meeting topic

Mrs. Allen Hull presented the program, "Project Abled and Disabled" at the recent meeting of GFWC Modern Woman's Forum. The meeting took place at K-Bob's Restaurant with Mrs.

C.R. Moad presiding. Mrs. W.E. Singleton was hostess. Mrs. Hull outlined the Special Olympics competition for the mentally retarded and disabled. Federated clubs are urged to sponsor an athlete in the competition.

Mrs. Hull said the term "learning disability" does not imply inferior intelligence because those handicapped in certain skills often possess above average creativity in other areas. Clubwomen can be very effective, she said, in areas of recreation and education for these persons.

Physical barriers for the disabled have become fewer in the last 10 years, Mrs. Hull said. Ramps replace stairs, doorways have been widened and sign language is gaining acceptance. Employers have discovered that the disabled are qualified for many jobs, therefore work opportunities are also expanding. Equal rights and full participation should be the goal strived for.

A committee consisting of Mrs. Fred Whitaker, Mrs. B.F. Yandell and Mrs. S.R. Nobles was appointed to nominate officers for the next club year.

The next meeting will be held April 9 in the home of Mrs. Yandell.

Nurses attend annual convention

Registered nurses from District 24 of the Texas Nurses Association attended TNA's 70th State Convention in San Antonio last week.

Those attending were Diane Austin, Barbara Holdampf, Mary McClenon, Linda Miller and Ruth Sexton all from Howard College, and Mary Butler, Annette Gary, Sharon Harbuck and Micki Potter, all from Big Spring State Hospital.

The 75th anniversary of organized nursing in Texas was celebrated using the theme "Horizon 82 - The State of the Art." Keynote addresses were directed toward exploring the development of nursing as a profession, where it is now and what direction it's taking for the future.

Issues were discussed and proposals to be brought before the state legislature were written and adopted. The organization's bylaws were amended, the topic of dues and budget was addressed and a 67-booth health-related exhibit was displayed.

Convention participants were challenged to examine "The State of the Art" and form networks for aid in delivering improved health care. They also were challenged to support their profession and make themselves aware of and active in the many areas directly affecting nursing - education and politics in particular.

Local RNs who attended the convention will present the material they learned to various Big Spring groups. Convention news will be shared at the next meeting of District 24 nurses to be held April 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the
