Local oilman still unhappy with city peddlers' ordinance

By BILLELDER
Staff Writer

Once again, oilman and area resident Cecil Gilstrap has gone before the Big Spring City Council and pleaded with councilmen to throw out the city's peddling ordinance.

And once again, councilmen have listened to Gilstrap's plea, explained why they can't agree to it — and kept the ordinance firmly planted in the city code.

Gilstrap, who has gained attention by filing suits against bilingual education and the windfall profits tax, was at the city council meeting last night urging rejection of a recently revised ordinance covering peddlers, solicitors and itinerant merchants.

It was the third time the matter has been on the council's agenda in recent months. The first time it cropped up, Feb. 23, it was there because Gilstrap requested space on the council agenda to explain why he thought the ordinance was unconstitutional and violated the principles of free enterprise.

The council took the matter under advisement, directed legal advisor Elliott Mitchell to draft a new ordinance, then took a look at the revised ordinance at the March 23 council meeting.

Again Gilstrap strolled up to the microphone and blasted the ordinance as an infringement of rights guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

"Throw it out," he urged the council, its members shaking their heads and indicating they couldn't.

LAST NIGHT, a streamlined version of the ordinance went before the council for a vote. One of the highlights of the new version was a change in fees charged for getting a license. Peddlers and solicitors would be charged $25 for a three-month license instead of $50; itinerant merchants would be charged $25 for a three-month license instead of one dollar per day as proposed under the previous revision of the ordinance.

Gilstrap still didn't like it. "I've told you repeatedly that the law is wrong. I've researched it and it's unconstitutional," he said.

That prompted Mayor Clyde Angel to say: "You've been before us three times on this subject, but you've never offered us a remedy."

"Why not make it twenty-five dollars (as a one-time fee) and forget about it?" Gilstrap responded. "Let's say I've got some chickens and I want to sell some eggs, Clyde," he said to the mayor. "Why can't I get one permit and get it over with?"

City Manager Don Davis told the GILSTRAP AT THE PODIUM — Oilman and area resident Cecil Gilstrap went before the Big Spring City Council last night to attack the city's peddling ordinance as unconstitutional. The council was asked to wipe the law off the books; councilmembers stood firm and adopted a revised ordinance covering peddlers, solicitors and itinerant merchants.

council that a one-year permit could cause administrative problems as well as problems if a permit was to be canceled. The council unanimously approved the new ordinance on preliminary vote and Gilstrap walked away from the podium shaking his head.

"You're all trying to keep traffic out," he said.

"No," Councilman Russ McEwen said emphatically. Basically what the council is trying to do, McEwen said, is set up a system whereby if people are harmed by a product sold by an out-of-town merchant, they have a way of tracing that merchant so they can remedy the problem.

The matter will go before the council one more time for a final vote.

IN OTHER BUSINESS last night, the council approved a 30-lot subdivision to be built in Coronado Hills. The project is being developed by Cunningham Oil Co. and had been okayed by the city's Planning and Zoning Board. Concern about the size of the project's homes was registered by a woman in the audience, who was told by City Manager Don Davis that the city can control things like lot sizes and easements but not house specifications, which are left up to the developer.

Also last night, the council approved a change in the city's zoning law to allow for the sale of building materials in areas zoned for light commercial business, with the provision that if a company wants to sell such materials in a light commercial zone, it must first get a specific use permit from the council.

The action capped several weeks of head-scratching by city planners on how to allow lumber sales in certain areas of the city without at the same time paving the way for a big lumber yard to set up shop some place where it wouldn't be harmonious with its surroundings.

Don Davis explained to the council that by having the companies come to the council for a specific use permit, the city can then control access, parking and other matters normally left to the developer's wishes.

THE REVISED ORDINANCE got applied swiftly, since the next item on the agenda was a request by developer Frank Kimmel for a permit to build an outlet for Cashway Home Improvement Center on a three-acre tract on F.M. 700 across from Big Spring Mall.

The council approved Kimmel's plan and granted him the permit to build the project, but not without Councilman Russ McEwen raising the question of whether the council was "putting an extra law on the books that may never be used again."

"The chances are that it will never be used again," answered Don Davis, "but the probability is that it will be."

In other business, the council: • Passed on final vote a resolution to hire a private firm to help the city find an alternative to participation in Social Security. The move is being made, according to Davis, in order to improve benefits for retiring city employees. Councilman Larry Miller voted against the resolution without explaining why, at an earlier meeting he had questioned the withdrawal by saying: "If all the municipalities start withdrawing from Social Security — and it's already in trouble — then what's going to happen to it?"

• Agreed to sign a contract with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department to jointly build a boat ramp at Moss Creek Lake. According to the contract with the state, the city's portion of the cost can't exceed $6,900 while the state's share can't be more than $16,100.

• Agreed to seek bids for five cycles or scooters for the city's meter readers. On Finance Director Tom Ferguson's advice, the council was going to seek bids for vehicles with four-stroke engines only, since such engines hold up better, Ferguson said. Russ McEwen questioned why the city didn't seek bids on vehicles with two-stroke engines as well. "There's been some criticism that our specifications are so narrow they exclude bidders," he said. The council then decided to give bidders the option of putting in a bid to sell the city vehicles with two-stroke or four-stroke engines.

• Put to bid among local banks the right to hold the city's money.

• Awarded the sale of some small parcels of city property.

• Approved a lease with the Howard

Abilene families await word on downed plane

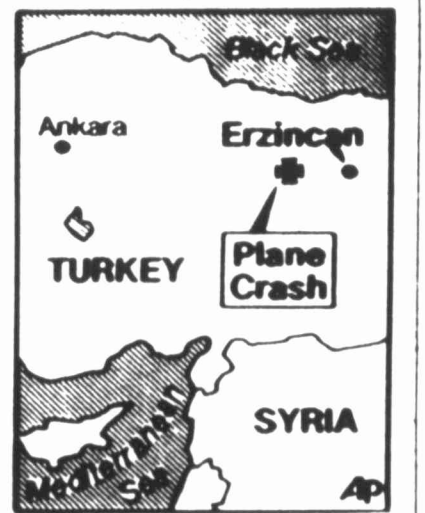

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — American officials today are scheduled to begin examining the remains of a transport plane that crashed in Turkey, the wing commander of a Dyess Air Force Base unit says.

Col. Alexander "Kent" Davidson, commander of the 463rd Tactical Airlift Wing, said Tuesday he could not confirm how many of the 10 crewmen on the plane were from the Texas base.

Davidson said that only when American personnel arrive at the crash scene today would the base release information on the Dyess personnel.

Twenty-seven Americans were killed Tuesday in the crash some 250 miles west of the Soviet border. The plane exploded in the air, burst into flames and crashed in mountainous eastern Turkey, a Turkish military spokesman said. But he declined to release the crewman's names.

"As far as we're concerned," he said, "the aircraft is down and their whereabouts are unknown at this time."

"We believe the aircraft commander was one of our most experienced pilots," he said.

An American military spokesman at the NATO airbase at Incirlik in southern Turkey said there were 10 crew members and 17 passengers aboard the plane. He said the plane was on a supply run to U.S. military personnel based in eastern Turkey.

Lamesa pilot escapes serious injury when plane crashes

LAMESA (SC) — A Lamesa man escaped severe injuries last night when the single engine plane he was piloting crashed in a field 3.5 miles southeast of the city.

According to police and the Dawson County Sheriff's Department, J.H. Walker of 112 Chicago Drive, was traveling northwest from Big Spring to Lamesa when the plane's engine began to fail.

Law enforcement officials said Walker crash landed the plane in a plowed field and slid for a few yards before the craft overturned. Walker escaped with a few minor facial lacerations, but the plane was destroyed, according to reports.

Mrs. J.H. Walker said the reason for the crash was that the plane's carburetor apparently became clogged. "I feel my husband was very fortunate to come out with only minor injuries. It could have been much worse if the plane had burst into flames," Mrs. Walker said.

Walker was back at his job at Texas Electric Service Co. this morning.

Article says Kissinger withheld cables

Nixon often drunk as president?

BOSTON (AP) — A magazine article describing Richard Nixon as often being drunk in the White House and Henry Kissinger refusing to pass along cables to an inebriated president has prompted no direct public response from the two men.

Nixon "only comments on his own books," Nicholas Ruwe, an aide to the former president, said in New York on Tuesday when asked about The Atlantic Monthly's article on the Nixon White House.

"Dr. Kissinger has not yet seen the article," his personal assistant, Christine Vick, said at Kissinger's Washington office Tuesday. "He cannot comment on what he has not seen. After he has seen it, he will have nothing to add to what he has written in his memoirs."

The 25,000-word article by Seymour M. Hersh, who won a Pulitzer prize for reporting on the My Lai massacre in Vietnam, quoted Roger Morris, a member of the National Security Council staff under Nixon, as saying he often listened in on conversations between Kissinger and "an obviously drunk Nixon."

Hersh wrote: "There were many times when a cable would come in late and Henry would say, 'There's no sense waking him up — he'd be incoherent,' Morris recalls. The young aide was frightened by the idea of a president who was not fully competent after sundown. He often wondered what would happen if the Soviet Union attacked at night."

The article, appearing in the May issue of the Atlantic, said Kissinger

ARTICLE CLAIMS DRINKING PROBLEM — Richard M. Nixon, left, was often so drunk in the White House that when late-night cables arrived Henry Kissinger, center, would tell aides. "There's no use waking him up — he'd be incoherent," says an article written by Seymour M. Hersh used Alexander M. Haig Jr., then his chief aide and now secretary of state, to monitor secret wiretapping of National Security Council aides so that Kissinger could claim he had no direct role in the bugging.

"Wiretapping NSC aides was a dirty business, and everybody in the White House and the FBI knew it," Hersh wrote. "Kissinger's method of handling it was simple: he put Haig in charge."

Haig returned to Washington from London on Tuesday night. At Andrews Air Force Base he briefly spoke to reporters about his Falklands Island peace mission; nothing about the Atlantic article.

State Department spokesman Rush Taylor said early today, "I have nothing on that." The Washington Post reported that a State Department spokesman said Haig had no initial comment because he hadn't read the article.

"The drinking was pretty widely known and commented on," Morris said today by telephone from Santa Fe, N.M.

A meeting had been called by board member

Carol Hunter for Tuesday, but the meeting was not officially posted at the county courthouse according to the Texas Open Meetings law. The Thursday 4 p.m. meeting was called by County Judge Bill Tune, a one-time candidate for the probation officer position.

The official notice of the Thursday meeting was posted at approximately 3:30 p.m. Monday on the public bulletin board at the courthouse.

The full board is expected to interview the two remaining candidates for the juvenile probation officer position.

British, Argentines studying 'new ideas'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., back here briefly to tell President Reagan about his peace efforts, says the British and the Argentines are considering "new ideas" to ease tensions over the Falkland Islands. But Haig, returning to nearby Andrews Air Force Base from London Tuesday night, refused to say whether the "new ideas" are a hopeful sign. "I don't want to describe my judgments at all," he said. Haig was to give Reagan an interim report today on the outcome of six days of discussions in London and Buenos Aires before returning to the Argentine capital and the "continuation of our efforts." He said he would go back to Buenos Aires "very soon," but declined to be more specific. So far, Haig's 22,000-mile shuttle since last Friday has taken him twice to London and once to Buenos Aires. In their public comments Tuesday, British and Argentine officials offered little hint of a breakthrough. Haig would only say, "The parties have received some new ideas today (Tuesday) which they are considering." Haig indicated a peaceful settlement is being hampered by domestic political pressures on both the British and Argentine governments. "As you know, we're trying to assist the parties, who have difficult problems," he said. Before leaving London, Haig said, "The whole situation ... is dangerous and increasingly so. Therefore, there is great urgency to finding a political solution." Haig had planned to fly to Buenos Aires Monday night from London but chose instead to return to Washington. He said "difficulties developed to change those plans." The officials, who asked to remain anonymous, said the Soviets are providing the Argentines with data from satellites and intercepts of British radio communications.

Soviets aiding Argentina?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is providing Argentina with data from satellites and intercepts of radio communications on the movements of the British fleet that is headed toward the Falkland Islands, U.S. officials say. "They (the Argentines) are getting intelligence from the Soviets," said an official, who did not want to be identified. Officials also said there were five Soviet ships in the South Atlantic within reach of the Falklands, but there were contradictory accounts from U.S. officials on the kinds of vessels and their location. None of the officials wanted to be identified. A State Department official said the ships included two Soviet submarines, although another official said he didn't know of any intelligence information that pointed to the presence of Soviet subs. The official who said there were Soviet submarines did not know their purpose, but thought they were in the area to add to the general "anxiety level." This official said the other three vessels were trawlers outfitted with sophisticated intelligence gear.

Arabs strike in protest against Israel

Much of the Arab world went on strike today in protest against an Israeli soldier's bloody attack in Jerusalem on one of Islam's most sacred shrines, and the Israeli army braced for a fourth day of Palestinian rioting. Government offices, schools and business houses were closed, some communications were cut and business sections in many cities were deserted in response to the call for a one-day strike by King Khaled of Saudi Arabia, the custodian of the Islamic holy places. There was no shutdown in the Saudi oil industry, however.

Widespread strikes were reported in the Moslem sectors of Lebanon and the sheikdoms along the Persian Gulf. The Saudi radio said Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait, Jordan, Morocco, Syria, Sudan, Djibouti, Pakistan, Qatar and non-Arab but Islamic Iran were joining the strike. Saudi Arabia, Syria, Kuwait, the U.A.E. and Qatar banned air traffic for 12 hours, and Kuwait, the U.A.E. and Qatar cut telecommunications. The holdouts included Iraq, doing badly in its war with Iran, and Tunisia. They proclaimed the day one of "solidarity" with the Palestinian people. And Algeria said its strike would only last 15 minutes. Palestinians in the Arab quarter of Jerusalem and in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip have been on strike ever since the soldier identified as Alan Harry Goodman emptied his M-16 automatic rifle in the Mosque of Omar on Jerusalem's Temple Mount Sunday, killing two Arabs and wounding nine. The shooting touched off rioting in Arab East Jerusalem and the occupied territories in which one Arab — an 8-year-old boy — had been killed and about 185 injured by Tuesday night. The injured included 34 Arabs wounded by Israeli gunfire. Goodman, a 38-year-old American immigrant, was brought before a Jerusalem magistrate Tuesday and ordered held for two weeks for investigation on suspicion of murder and other offenses. Police said he told them he wanted to "liberate" the Temple Mount, revered by both Jews and Moslems because it is the site of Judaism's most hallowed shrine, the Wailing Wall, and is the spot from which Moslem tradition says the prophet Mohammed ascended to heaven.

Open for business

Not many lawyers have an opportunity to take a case before the Supreme Court of the United States. That's why it was exciting to hear that a Big Spring native would be doing just that next Monday, April 19. Sarah Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bennett of 705 Clanton, has been practicing law since 1975. Sarah graduated from Big Spring High School in 1967, and from UT Austin in 1971. She went on to the UT Law School where she graduated and passed the bar in 1974. She began working in New Mexico as a public defender before making a move to the New Mexico Department of Taxation and Revenue. On January 1, 1982, she terminated employment with the State and entered private practice with her husband and another law partner in the firm of Rothstein, Bailey, and Bennett. Her husband is Robert Rothstein. Her parents will be on hand Monday to watch the proceedings. John is a semi-retired insurance agent. He and his partner, Ray Weir, have the Bennett-Weir Insurance Agency. Sarah will represent the State of New Mexico against F.W. Woolworth. At issue are questions of constricting limits imposed upon states imposing income tax upon multi-state corporations deriving income from the taxing state. *** Kid stuff is the latest thing in fringe benefits. With half of all mothers of children under six working, Business Week predicts employees will soon "come to expect" child-care benefits as routinely as health insurance. And many companies find the benefits work both ways. One Freeport, Texas, firm notes that since its child-care service began, its turnover has dropped by more than 20%. *** DON FISHER, manager of the bright, new J.C. PENNEY store in the Big Spring Mall, will be hosting the meeting of area Penney's store managers this week. Ken Acker, District Manager, chose to bring in managers from 16 area Penney's stores to Big Spring. They will be coming from as far north as Borger and Pampa and as far west as Carlsbad, New Mexico, to plan purchasing of back-to-school and fall selections. Fisher said it was a break with tradition not to meet in Lubbock where there is access to air service. He feels that it speaks highly of Big Spring and the new store that Acker decided to bring the meeting to Big Spring. To have approximately 20 people in town for several days means a healthy boost to our economy through dollars spent in hotels, restaurants, service stations, etc., and they have each new dollar into our community turn over at least 7 times. *** Did you notice the whopping increase we had in our city sales tax revenues — it was up 41.77%! *** DALE THOMPSON, manager of the local Holiday Inn, has been working with the Memphis corporate offices to set up the details for the installation of a closed circuit television that will be hooked up to a system so that conferences, business meetings, and even demonstrations can be viewed between two or more cities. At present, Big Spring is the only West Texas area Holiday Inn chosen as a part of the 175 system but the corporate offices expect to almost double that figure within the next year. What this means is that a company like General Motors, for example, could have its dealers go to the closest Holiday Inn with a closed circuit television and each of these district Holiday Inns could then hook up to the Detroit Holiday Inn for demonstrations, conferences or sales strategy meetings. This saves time and money by not bringing the whole group into the home office.

Dale already has three meetings scheduled and two others had to be turned away because of size limitations. All scheduling is coordinated through the Memphis offices. *** Multi Media Advertising held their open house this morning in their offices at 603 Permian Building. # Tougher drunk driving law encouraged AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas needs a new tough drunken driving law that will scare tipsy drivers into pleading guilty, says Sen. Bill Sarpalus. "This is a stern but a reasonable bill," Sarpalus said. D-Herford, told a news conference Tuesday. "I'm sure there will be many drunk driving bills introduced in the next session but we hope this will be a compromise. That's why I am in-roducing it now to gain public support." Shortly after the news conference, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby issued a statement saying he would support Sarpalus' efforts to strengthen the DWI law. A first offender could be fined $300 to $2,000 and given from 72 hours to one year in jail. A judge could probate the sentence. A second offender could be fined $500 to $2,000 and given 72 hours to two years in jail. There could be no probation of sentence, meaning that a second offender would have to serve at least 72 hours in jail. An arrested motorist would have to take a sobriety test. Any driver refusing to take the test would have his drivers license automatically suspended for at least 90 days. Results of any sobriety tests and videotapes would be admissible in court.

$20,000 bail not posted

Carlos Marquez, 21, of 610 N.W. 8th, is in Howard County jail on a charge of burglary in lieu of $20,000 bond. Bond was set by Peace Justice Lewis Heflin. Marquez is currently being considered for indictment by the grand jury today for two separate cases. Also in county jail is Buddy Mulvihill, 43, of 2512 Langley. Mulvihill was arrested by sheriff's deputies Monday on a warrant of revocation of probation. Released on bond was Roy Lee Thompson, 34, of 3203 E. 11th. He is charged with felony driving while intoxicated and felony failure to appear.

Housing needs balanced budget

President Reagan, in a talk to the National Association of Realtors, appealed for support and hinted he might consider a program to provide mortgage aid to homebuyers. The aid program, proposed by Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., would cost $1 billion a year for five years.

That is like applying a Bandaid to a man whose jugular vein has been severed.

What housing and other segments of the economy that rely on long-term financing need is not another federal aid program but a balanced budget, something the President has abandoned in his pursuit of supply-side economics.

OVERSIMPLIFIED, homebuyers are crowded out of the financial markets. The federal government itself borrows, by some measures, up to 40 percent of the total amount of private sector funds available.

Deficits of $100 billion or more for the next few years, added to an accumulated debt already more than $1 trillion, coupled with restrictive Federal Reserve Board policies, guarantee the worst depression in housing history will continue.

If the President listened to the Realtors and homebuilders he would defer overly generous tax cuts to balance the budget quicker and take the pressure off the Federal Reserve so money supplies can be gradually increased.

THAT WOULD LET homebuyers back into the long-term market by easing interest rates.

The President's overall goal of cutting the growth of federal spending and reducing taxes is proper and commendable. It must be done. But he has not been able to achieve spending cuts equal to his tax cuts; common sense dictates a slowdown in the tax cuts to balance the budget.

That's what housing needs; and that's what the economy needs.

"When the going gets weird, the weird turn pro" — Roald Duke

Well, yes, and here we go again. The continuing saga of Dr. Hunter S. Thompson perhaps should have come to its demented and twisted end on Monday, the last gasps of its borderline craziness whipped into a psychotic frenzy by the straight-crazy lashings of fellow gonzo Bob Carpenter. Ah, but the strangeness continues if only to communicate another concept of the attractiveness of Dr. Thompson, the outlaw journalist.

First and foremost, Thompson is an excellent writer with a gift for descriptive adjectives and crafted phrases which are astounding in their daring and clarity. Thompson, at his best, is not unlike the exhilarating thrill one gets while roller-skating down a steep hill, knowing a pebble could leave you a bloodied mass of crumpled clothes, but looking forward to the hill emptying into the LA freeway dring rush hour traffic.

THE BIZARRE image is Thompson. Check out these two characterizations of the President (Nixon of course): "At the stroke of midnight in Washington, a drooling red-eyed beast with the legs of a man and a head of a giant hyena crawls out of its bedroom window in the South Wing of the White House ... pauses briefly to strangle the Chow watchdog, then races off into the darkness, snarling with lust ... But I was only kidding. The President of the United States would never act that weird. At least not during football season."

This made perfect sense in an article about Watergate. What about "It was like showing up at the White House for your monthly chat with the President on some normal afternoon and finding the Oval Office full of drunken Hell's Angels ... and the President so stoned on reds that he can't even recognize you, babbling distractedly and shoveling big mounds of white powder around on his desk with the butt of a sawed-off

A nuclear time bomb

WASHINGTON — Former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara and McGeorge Bundy, President Kennedy's national security aide, slipped into the White House last week to warn William P. Clark, Ronald Reagan's national security assistant, that they were about to drop a political bombshell on the president.

The bombshell exploded April 8 with their controversial proposal that the U.S. rule out "first use" of nuclear weapons. "First use" is the policy they themselves ratified 20 years ago as essential to prevent an attack against Western Europe by Warsaw Pact forces indefinitely superior to NATO's conversational force.

The two top geopoliticians in the Kennedy administration told Clark their proposal, to be published one week later in the magazine Foreign Affairs, was not intended an affront to Reagan or as an effort to polarize the West on the nuclear issue. In fact, however, that is precisely what the proposal may do: embarrass embattled West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, a "first use" advocate despite the peace movement sweeping Europe; and the fuel nuclear-freeze movement now starting in the U.S.

GOOD NEWS — BAD NEWS
A secret poll by Robert Teeter for the House Republican Campaign Committee, headed by Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, shows the Republican Party declining to a point just above its post-Watergate nadir.

Party leaders and White House political aides downgrade the significance of that decline from a high point following Ronald Reagan's inaugural. Both parties are on the decline, these politicians believe, as voters more and more get their political input not from the two major parties but from television, direct mail and other mechanics of the new politics.

The good news in the Teeter poll, which was tabulated in late March, is a finding that among voters who have an opinion, two out of every three

Another sick Communist leader

WASHINGTON — While the world's leaders are anxiously watching Soviet boss Leonid Brezhnev's latest bout of ill health and awaiting the power struggle that will develop, Western intelligence experts are also keeping a close eye on another ailing communist leader, North Korean President Kim Il-sung.

Kim will be an ailing 70 years old tomorrow. But any tendency to cheer the dictator's demise is dampened by the prospect of a sequel to his reign that could be titled "Son of Kim."

Since about 1973, Kim has been grooming his son, Kim Chong-il, to be his successor, and the younger Kim may be even more militarily ambitious than his father.

"Advancing age and a growing awareness of his mortality, rather than any acute worsening of health, probably prompted Kim to begin to seriously address the question of transition," a top-secret CIA report concluded. It then details what is known about Kim Chong-il and what can be expected of him if he does indeed take over on his father's death.

The younger Kim was born in 1942, while his father was leading anti-Japanese guerrillas. A child prodigy, according to current propaganda in blame the recession on the Carter administration. Countering that, however, was the startling finding that most voters still are not aware that inflation has come way down in the Reagan administration — a knowledge gap that raises disturbing new questions about the administration's inefficient public relations operation, starting in the White House itself.

A CRANSTON FAILURE
In what looked like a blatant effort to replace Sen. Robert Byrd as the Senate Democratic leader next January, Sen. Alan Cranston, the assistant leader, called a hush-hush session of top-drawer Democratic senators March 31 in a move to compromise their differing approaches to the nuclear-freeze issue.

The session backfired when Sen. Henry Jackson, author of a hard-line freeze proposal and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, author of a soft-line proposal, started attacking each other's handiwork. That left Cranston with egg on his face, unable to carry out his mission of producing a unified party freeze-plan.

Unknown to the senators in Cranston's office, who also included John Glenn, Fritz Hollings and Gary Hart, Cranston had quietly alerted the press to wait outside his Senate office where, he believed, they would receive the good news of party unity from Cranston when the session wound up. Emerging into klieg lights, Jackson and Kennedy were stunned. Having just been at each other's throats, they had trouble keeping a seemingly countenance in telling reporters they had nothing to say.

AREAGAN BLINK?
White House senior aides passed confidential word on April 8 that "the White House" had agreed to a cut of just over $6 billion in fiscal year 1983 defense spending and about $21 billion in contract authority, extending into future years.

But does "the White House" include the resident of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue? Ronald Reagan has been misrepresented by his aides before, most recently on excise taxes in January, only to repudiate them. His position on his huge five-year defense spending program has been adamant up to now: no reductions that cut into weapons programs.

Pressure for a revised budget, however, is growing. At lunch with Reagan last Monday (April 5), the president's closest Senate friend, Paul Laxalt, quietly pressed for defense cuts. White House Chief of Staff James Baker III, empowered to negotiate for the president on a revised budget, is known to be pushing for three-year cuts totaling between $40 and $50 billion. If an overall deal is cut by Baker, no matter how the president really feels about it, it would be extremely difficult for him to reject it.

COELHO'S ODD REQUEST
A letter from a rising star in the House, Democratic Rep. Tony Coelho of California, to the probation officer of a convicted first-degree murderer in which the congressman unsuccessfully asked for a lenient sentence, has become the showcase in Republican efforts to unseat Coelho.

Remove the matter of the letter and Coelho, the energetic chairman of the House Democratic Campaign Committee, would be home free in his Nov. 2 reelection effort. He is far ahead even with the letter, but it has become a political issue that could damage him in the campaign.

What is damaging is the close political and personal relationship between Coelho and the father of the 19-year-old convicted murderer. John Weidert, the father, is executive director of the California Westside Farmers, a politically powerful group that contributed $1,500 to Coelho in his 1980 campaign and has already dropped another $1,000 into the Coelho coffer for the 1982 campaign. Coelho told us one reason he asked for leniency was his close friendship with the father. He said his letter was immediately made public and that he had no regrets.

Billy Graham

Will praying do any good?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have always believed in God, but whenever I have prayed it didn't seem to do any good. I want to pray now, because I am in a lot of trouble, but will it really do any good? — Mrs. W.D.

DEAR MRS. W.D.: I suspect there are many people like you, who have never thought about God very much until troubles come and you find you need his help. Let me assure you that God wants you to turn to him and he wants to help you, because he loves you.

Why is prayer possible? It is possible first of all because God is personal, and he is deeply concerned about us and our lives. God is not just a vague, impersonal force — he is real! But there is also a problem with prayer. The problem is that we are sinful, and we have no right to come into the presence of God, who is completely holy and pure. We are unworthy of him, and we have no claim on his blessings. Why should we expect God to hear our prayers, when we know from the Bible that sin cuts us off from God? The Bible says, "But your iniquities have separated you from your God; your sins have hidden his face from you, so that he will not hear" (Isaiah 59:2).

That is one reason Christ came — to open the way to God for you and me. On the cross, Christ died to take away our sin. We have neglected God, but God forgives us because of what Christ has done for us. We can be reconciled to God by putting our faith and trust in Christ. When we place our trust in him, "we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have gained access by faith into this grace in which we now stand" (Romans 5:1-2).

Reader outraged

Dear Editor:
I am outraged at the injustices I see around me which are cloaked under the name "humane." Thus, in reference to your article on the animal shelter which appeared in the Sunday, April 11th edition, I feel I must respond.

It has always been of great interest to me that people, in general, are so willing and quick to point out the injustices which they themselves undergo, yet, when animals become involved, those same people are equally reluctant to denounce the injustices rendered others. Animals have no voice — no rights — unless we, their keepers, provide them with such. In a society such as ours, where technology has advanced to bounds previously viewed impossible, it amazes me that citizens allow inhumane, antiquated conditions such as animal shelters to continue in existence. There are alternatives to killing innocent creatures!

One such organization, North Shore Animal League, not only has the intelligence and foresight to see the alternatives, but it has also seized the opportunity to utilize them. The premise of their organization is quite simple: adoption and sterilization. This agency does not destroy any unwanted or unloved animal. It simply houses them until they are adopted or until they die a natural death.

In conjunction with this agency, various organizations across the globe are working to preserve not only animal rights — but the animals themselves. In my opinion, Greenpeace and the American Horse Protection Association are among the foremost! These agencies, along with numerous others, are trying to save such animals as harp seals, horses, burros, whales, and dolphins from the blind stupidity which says they must be annihilated at any cost.

Songwriter David Mallet summarized my feelings in his song "You Say That The Battle Is Over." He writes:

And you say that the battle is over
And you say that the war is all done

Go tell it to those
With the wind in their nose
Who run from the sound of the gun

...From young seals to great whales
From waters to wood
They will fall just like weeds in the wind

With fur coats and perfumes and trophies on walls
What a hell of a race to call men
The creatures around us are gifts which some of us wish to preserve.
And, in spite of Man's inhumanity,
"some will still weep when the gifts
we were given are gone."

Thank you for allowing me to express my feelings.

Sincerely,
KATHY DOWNEY

Many to ride in Bike-A-Thon

Bill Musser, chairman of the American Diabetes Association Bike-A-Thon in the Big Spring area, announced today that a record number of people are expected to be riding in the event to be held April 25.

"We have been very pleased with the response to this year's Bike-A-Thon," Musser said. "And we expect to have many people riding to raise dollars for the Diabetes Association's programs of research, education and service. The day should be a lot of fun for everyone and some people who ride may win some terrific prizes. We urge families to participate and make this a family day.

"There is also a serious reason for conducting the Bike-A-Thon," he said. "It is one of the few ways that we, in the American Diabetes Association, have of focusing public attention on a disease that has long been overlooked and misunderstood in the past.

"Few people realize that diabetes is the third leading cause of death in America, or that one out of four families is affected by diabetes. More than half the people in America with the disease don't realize they have the disease," he said. "Insulin doesn't cure the disease, it just allows people to survive at a cost of $1,000 a year, while in some cases, the damage continues.

"The American Diabetes Association intends to change the problem with the help and understanding of the community."

For more information on the Bike-A-Thon, call 263-7316, or 394-4374.

Dear Abby

'Sporting life' not for her

DEAR ABBY: This is for the lady who cries because she feels sorry for the fish her husband catches. I know how she feels. When I was 8 years old, my daddy took me dove hunting. It was my job to pick up the doves that had been shot down and put them in the hunting bag.

The first (and only) dove I picked up was warm and soft and limp in my hand. I screamed and flung myself to the ground sobbing. My daddy angrily declared, "This is your last hunting trip, young lady!"

"You are so right," I thought silently. And it was.

After I married my husband took me fishing. He showed me how to bait the hook with live worms, but I just couldn't do it. I felt sorry for the worms.

I guess some of us aren't cut out for the so-called "sporting life."

SOFTIE FROM SOUTH CAROLINA
DEAR SOFTIE: My mail is running 20-to-1 against saving the fish.

DEAR ABBY: Ricky and I have been separated for nearly a year. I'm in no big hurry to get a divorce because we have two young children and I'm still hoping we can work things out and be a family again.

Ricky has been living with his parents since we separated, and that's part of the problem because his mother never liked me and she's pushing for the divorce. She fixed Ricky up with the daughter of a friend of hers. This girl is a young widow who will soon come into a lot of money because her husband was killed in an industrial accident, and the company he worked for is giving her an enormous settlement.

I heard that Ricky and this young widow have brazenly been sleeping together under his parents' roof with their blessings!

Abby, I still love Ricky, and I think we could iron out our differences if his mother would leave him alone. Should I get a divorce and maybe regret it later? Or should I hang in there and hope that Ricky comes to his senses? I think deep down he loves me, too.

HOPING FOR THE BEST
DEAR HOPING: If you love him, hang in there as long as you think there's hope. Don't blame his mother for his actions. He's a free agent and is responsible for his own actions.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Dr. Donohue

Protein in urine calls for tests

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have albumin of the kidneys, and have had it for a long time now. I would like to know what is causing this? I take tests about twice a year for it. My doctor never gives me any medicine for it. I just took another test a few weeks ago and got a call from the doctor's office telling me it is getting worse. Now, I have to take a 24-hour test of my urine. I would appreciate your explaining all of this for me. — J.J.G.

Practically speaking, albumin is another word for protein. What your doctor found was protein in your urine, something everyone has to some degree. Normally, the amount is small — 100 to 150 milligrams daily. When tests suggest the amount is larger than that, there is reason to suspect something wrong with the kidney. It is just letting too much protein leak into the urine.

Your doctor's first step is to find out just how much protein you are losing this way over a 24-hour period, and that is the reason for the 24-hour test. A single, small specimen test, taken in the doctor's office, can give a false idea of that. For example, some people pass protein in the urine just from being in the standing position. That is called orthostatic proteinuria, and it is not a serious condition. The doctor wants to find out if the extra protein reflects an actual kidney problem.

If he determines that the kidney is at fault, blood tests can be done for confirmation. The blood is checked for levels of certain substances. This can tell how well the kidney is doing its filtering work generally.

Finally, when all these pieces of evidence are put together, and some problem is indicated, a small sample of kidney tissue can be obtained using a needle. This helps determine the exact nature of the problem so treatment can begin.

In summary, then, protein in the urine can be innocent or indicate a kidney that needs attention. Please go ahead with all the tests your doctor wants. They are part of his detective work. Kidney disease can be silent in its early phases. It can progress, unsuspected, to the point where treatment will not be as effective as it could have been if detected early.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Will you please explain what causes Eaton Lambert syndrome? I have been told by a neurosurgeon that I have this. As you can tell from my writing, it affects my right hand a little. It also affects my foot, hip and shoulders. What causes this? I am 49 years old. — Mrs. B.P.

Eaton Lambert syndrome is an illness that is similar to one that may be more familiar to you — myasthenia gravis. Mind you, I said "similar." As with myasthenia, muscle weakness is the chief symptom in Eaton Lambert syndrome. The muscles are often aching and stiff.

That's where the similarity ends. For unlike myasthenia, the cause of Eaton Lambert is a mystery. It is often in conjunction with certain lung tumors and with the illness sarcoidosis. But let me point out that you do not have to have either a lung tumor or sarcoidosis to have Eaton Lambert.

The drug used in treatment of Eaton Lambert is quinine. I have never treated a patient with it, and am really not familiar with it.

FOR MRS. D.B. — The so-called "crick in the neck" comes from a spasm of neck muscles. And actually, a warm bath is a little better than the warm shower you speak of. If you soak 15 or 20 minutes in the tub that helps relax all your muscles, including those of the neck. If you do use a shower, you should not make the mistake of getting the water as hot as you can stand it. If you get it too hot, the heat will stimulate pain fibers of nerves and that will cause more neck muscle contractions. So just

Bride-elect is honored with a wine and cheese party

Diana Owens, bride-elect of Bill Schrom, was honored with a wine and cheese party Thursday. The event took place in the home of Mrs. Don Grantham.

Hostesses were Mrs. Grantham, Mrs. Ricky Patterson, Mrs. Del Shirey, Denise Johnson, Mrs. Jack Alexander and Mrs. John Key. Silver and crystal appointments were used at the serving table. The centerpiece, a basket of wine, cheese, bread and silk flowers, was presented to the honoree.

The couple was married Sunday in the Chapel of First Baptist Church.

Mrs. Tonn sings at Mary Jane Club meeting

Mona Lou Tonn presented a gospel music concert during the Mary Jane Club meeting Thursday in the home of Mrs. Rufus Parks of Coahoma.

Mrs. Tonn and her husband Arnold are active members of Baptist Temple Church. They conduct an Extension Sunday School department for the United Care Nursing Home. She sings for patients at Veteran's Administration Medical Center and conducts concerts for various churches and groups.

Officers for the 1982-1983 club year were elected. New officers are: Mrs. Rodney Brooks, president; Mrs. Carroll Choate, vice-president; Mrs. Dwayne Clawson, secretary; Mrs. Kirby Brown, treasurer; and Mrs. James Coates, reporter.

Club members will furnish cookies for Big Spring State Hospital in May. Mrs. B.L. Mason won the door prize.

The next meeting will be held May 13. A luncheon will be served and older friends will be guests of the group. Mrs. Clovis Phinney Jr. will host the meeting.

Inflation leads to simpler lifestyle

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There are some things in life an American just can't do without, they were saying back there a decade ago. Like a car with 8 cyls., 350 hp., and a house with family room, 3 bds., 2 bths.

But Americans have done without them. Forced by necessity, especially by high prices and interest rates, they have shown they can indeed do without the things the marketing people had said were essential.

They have accepted downsizing, and even have made small-is-beautiful a symbol of smartness. Conservation is in, waste is out. A little wear and tear on the automobile is a merit badge and a sign of good sense.

Only those whose peculiar talents help them ride the crest of inflation still buy up a storm. They drive hand-rubbed cars. They build big, empty vacation houses for the sheer joy of owning.

Some economists have an explanation for this. There is, they say, an element that has been almost immune to inflation, made up of doctors, lawyers, technology entrepreneurs, entertainers, and athletes.

But even these may be showing signs of hurting. "Apparently the recession is forcing the big-ticket consumer to retrench," says Edward Yardeni, chief economist at E.F. Hutton & Co., the securities firm.

Yardeni's observation followed an announcement from General Motors in March that it would suspend production for a week at a Cadillac plant.

"Even the rich can't afford Caddies, notwithstanding a $2,000 rebate on the Seville," he comments, suggesting that one reason might be that some of the entrepreneurs who generally buy Caddies are going broke.

Whatever may be happening to the rich, the middle and lower classes know all about it. They have resisted rebates and gone for years with the old jalopy, and they have lived without the house of their dreams.

They have cut lifestyles, in some cases drastically.

The number of households actually diminished last year as singles doubled up and parents and children reunited under one roof, the luxury of separate apartments being too much for their pocketbooks.

Some families have learned to exist with 50 percent of take-home pay going for rent, utilities and insurance on the furniture, or if they own a house, for mortgage, tax, utility, insurance and heating bills.

Recalling the aspirations of a decade ago, the change seems remarkable, challenging the assumptions of marketing people that they could motivate almost at will. Inflation took care of that notion.

Americans are adaptable. While the size of houses rose during the 1960s to include extra baths and bedrooms, and a family room too, the trend is now the other way. Homebuyers want less; the affordable home rather than the elaborate home is now the dream and the goal. Remember what used to be called the mobile home? Metal framed and boxy, it was scorned by those who aspired to a "real" house.

But now, the same people who used to scan the classifieds for the magic 3 bds., 2 bths. are reading catalogues which tout the economy of "manufactured homes," successor to the old-style mobile units.

A decade ago it was smart to spend. Now it's smart to save. How long people will put up with it is debatable, and there are even some who speak about impending social disorder should the austerity continue.

Meanwhile, statistics show Americans are more reluctant to use credit and more highly motivated toward reducing their debts.

Marketing people might argue that it is not nearly so fulfilling as spending, but those who have adapted to the new style of rebuilding the bank account say it is smart in a way such people wouldn't understand.

SHE PRAYED AND LIFTED CAR — Angela Cavallo, a grandmother of two, poses with her son, Tony, right, and a visitor from the neighborhood, Johnny Edwards at her home in Lawrenceville, Ga. Tony was knocked unconscious when the jack dropped the car he was repairing and it fell. She says prayer helped her lift the car as Johnny ran for help. Neighbors replaced the jack and pulled Tony out.

Man arrested in shooting of professor

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 27-year-old psychiatric patient has been arrested in connection with the killing of his former professor, who was shot in front of stunned students at a junior college here.

Jose Luis Partida, 27, was arrested Tuesday night in a restaurant on the city's Mission District and held on $250,000 bail in connection with the death of Dudley Yasuda, a psychology professor at San Francisco City College.

Partida's arraignment was set for today. "We have what we believe to be the weapon, but it hasn't been tested yet," said homicide inspector Marvin Dean.

Yasuda, who was popular with students at the school, was shot to death Monday morning in his office as several students looked on. A .38-caliber snubnose pistol was found Tuesday during a search of Partida's home, which also turned up a jacket like the one worn by the gunman, Dean said.

"We have positive identifications," said Dean. "We showed his picture to witnesses and they were able to identify him with no trouble at all."

Police also have obtained Partida's psychiatric records at the Mission Crisis Unit, the psychiatric division of the Mission Emergency Hospital.

"He was brought there by his father several months ago," Dean said, adding he didn't know what Partida, a laborer, was treated for.

As eight students looked on Monday morning, a gunman walked into Yasuda's office, braced the pistol with both hands and fired four shots, hitting Yasuda twice. The gunman glanced at the students and then left, still holding the pistol. Yasuda died 50 minutes later.

Oilmen hire law enforcer to stop oilfield thieves

ORATORICAL WINNERS — Kim Beckham and Clark Johnson of Big Spring High School display their awards for winning the Optimists Oratorical Contest recently in Midland. The students were sponsored by the Morning Optimists of Big Spring. Kim and Clark will advance to North Texas District competition in Mount Pleasant on May 6, 7, and 8.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A man who claims a near-perfect record against welfare cheaters and other lawbreakers has been hired by oil men to stop thieves that are costing the Texas oil industry more than $100 million a year.

Ed Richards, who has worked in law enforcement for 21 years, was introduced at a news conference Tuesday as the first executive director of Petroleum Industry Security Council, Inc.

"We have lofty plans for this organization. Ultimately, we feel it will curb much of what has been taking place," said Harrold "Gene" Wright of Gilmer, an independent oil operator who is acting chairman of the council.

Wright said the industry had thought that "the theft of oil and the theft of equipment had been a somewhat equal problem, but the theft of oil may be a larger problem than we anticipated."

Richards said he thought the use of an information network, telephone hotline and field investigators would "severely curtail thefts in the oil industry."

The council also plans to offer rewards for tips that lead to arrests.

Wright said the 1983 Legislature probably would be asked to give law officers more authority to stop trucks carrying oil so officers could "make an investigation on the spot."

From 1960 to 1974, Richards was with the Department of Public Safety, holding such jobs as highway patrolman and criminal intelligence agent. His work included undercover operations, protecting high-level state and federal officials and investigating people "whose stated goals were to overthrow the government of the United States."

In 13½ years, he said, only one defendant among hundreds that he helped arrest was found not guilty.

Richards joined the Texas Department of Human Resources in 1974 as director of the Office of the Investigator General, which investigates child abusers and murderers, welfare recipients and food stamp black marketeers.

Additional homestead exemption rejected

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Swearing in ceremonies were held for new member, Joe Kirschbaum and re-elected Dr. Billy Bruce Bridgford when the school board met for a four hour meeting Monday night.

Officers re-elected were Mac Morris, president; Eddie Piland, vice president; and Edward Roach, secretary.

In further action, the board said "no" to an additional homestead exemption.

According to Superintendent Charlie Uselton, "If this additional exemption were granted it would be difficult to budget in addition to other problem areas. We believe the tax base should be as broad as possible."

Additionally, the board gave tentative approval to the 1982-83 athletic budget presented by Athletic Director Tom Ramsey, which calls for an expenditure of $138,055, which is an increase of $5,000 over last year's budget.

Concluding the meeting Uselton presented ideas to the board for possible capital outlays for next year including leveling the playground and adding fences on the south and east side of Hutchinson Elementary; securing new air conditioners for the Middle School cafeteria and library. Also the purchase of a band bus to transport instruments, uniforms and in some cases commodities; a new vehicle for the athletic department which also would be used by other school personnel for out of town trips; new heaters in Wolf gym; aluminum bleachers and replacements in Wolf Stadium; bleachers at the high school tennis courts and a computer program system at the high school.

No action was taken on any of the suggestions, but at the request of Mac Morris, board president, Uselton was instructed to obtain costs on the projects so that priorities might be established.

Three more El Paso jailers face charges in homosexual case

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Official misconduct charges have been filed against three more El Paso County jailers for allegedly soliciting sexual favors from homosexual inmates, authorities said.

The new charges brought to nine the number of detention officers who have been accused of official misconduct as a result of an internal investigation.

Jail administrator Charles Newman said Tuesday he did not expect any more officers to be charged in the investigation, which began more than a week ago after homosexual inmates complained they were being harassed.

"These are all the same series of episodes," Newman said. "It's all part of the same general package. The degree of involvement may be different, but I'm not prepared to talk about that."

The most recent charges were filed late Monday against detention officers Luis Lopez, Louis Calanche and Arturo Rodriguez. Lopez and Calanche were arrested Monday and Rodriguez was arrested Tuesday afternoon.

County officials announced last week that charges of official misconduct had been leveled against detention officers Guillermo Caballero, Charles Williams, Tomas Cisneros, Juan Reyes, Mario Garcia and Roberto Blanco. Blanco also was charged with two counts of terroristic threatening.

All of the officers, including the three most recently arrested, have been freed on $1,000 bail each, a jail official said.

Landing gear is fine, shuttle astronauts say

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — It may have taken away the breath of spectators on the ground, but when the landing gear of the space shuttle Columbia unfolded just seven seconds before touchdown, it was all according to plan, says astronaut Jack R. Lousma.

Lousma said Tuesday the landing gear was lowered at an air speed of 275 knots — "right on the money" — although he admitted he felt he was higher off the runway because a computer — not a pilot — had taken the shuttle in for the landing.

"The automatic system flies just a little bit lower than the manual pilot does, and previous landings have been done manually, so I think your concern was because you saw a slightly lower profile — I believe it made you hold your breath. We landed a little faster than we wanted to, also," said Lousma.

He and fellow space traveler C. Gordon Fullerton held the first news conference and discussed in detail their eight-day mission that ended successfully March 30 on the gypsum runway at the White Sands Missile Range, N.M.

It was the third round trip into space for the Columbia. After one more test flight, now set for late June, the shuttle will be considered operational, ready for Defense Department or commercial use.

Lousma also explained why Columbia's nose rose sharply on the runway during landing. The sudden rise and fall of the nose prompted speculation at the time that a gust of wind had caught it or that Lousma purposely had raised the nose to slow the craft after it touched down.

But Lousma said it was caused by a heavy hand on the controls when he was trying to correct the nose descent.

"I noticed the nose wheel was going down a little more quickly than I wanted it to, and I had to hold it off some, and in doing so, I over-rotated a little bit and kind of popped a 'wheeie,' but no harm was done," said the Marine colonel, who served as commander of the mission.

"Whether a wind gust was the factor, I don't know, but it was not an attempt at aerodynamic braking, and I don't think Columbia would respond to a gust in that manner, so I'll take the hit for that one," Lousma said.

The astronauts said the eight-day flight was more fun than they had expected.

Police say rooftop murders may be work of professional killer

NEW YORK (AP) — The murders of a federal witness in a diamond company fraud case and three men who tried to help her were linked to the disappearance of another woman and seem to be the work of a professional killer, police say.

The body of Margaret Barbera, 38, was found Tuesday in an alley in Lower Manhattan, police said. Authorities believe she was the same woman who was abducted on a rooftop parking lot on the city's West Side by a man in his 30s who wore a ski mask and drove a white van.

Three CBS technicians who were walking to their cars in the parking lot apparently witnessed the abduction Monday night, then were chased down and shot in the head at close range, police said.

Another CBS employee hid from the killer and saw the shootings.

Chief of Detectives James Sullivan said there was no evidence of organized crime involvement in the case, but said "it's not unknown for organized crime hit men to use 22-caliber guns similar to the gun used in this case."

Miss Barbera, of the New York borough of Queens, and the missing woman, Jenny Sue Chin, 46, of Teaneck, N.J., both worked at Candor Diamond Corp. The business was forced into bankruptcy last year by a creditor who charged its owner, Irwin Margolies, with fraud.

Mrs. Chin, who was a friend of Miss Barbera, disappeared Jan. 5. Her abandoned, blood-stained car was discovered six days later, and a .22-caliber shell casing was found inside.

Ballistics tests conducted Tuesday proved the casing was from the same pistol with which Miss Barbera and the three CBS technicians were slain, Sullivan said. Mrs. Chin disappeared near Mrs. Barbera's apartment after spending the night with her, authorities said. She was seen being pushed into her car by a man wearing a ski mask.

"She was afraid because of the investigation and now five people are dead," Coley was quoted as saying.

Growth, diversified economy foreseen

Texas is facing changes

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas AP — State officials and legislators are beginning to get some idea of the challenges and problems of the 1980s and 1990s as Texas grows toward the year 2000.

Three different recent reports indicate considerable changes in the state's economy, government and even way of life.

"Texas is on the eve of a great transformation," said Thomas R. Plaut of the University of Texas' Bureau of Business Research in a special report on the state's future.

"The state's economy which today is relatively underindustrialized and strongly oriented toward energy producing, consuming and servicing activities will become highly industrialized and diversified."

A report by the Texas 2000 commission, a blue-ribbon study group appointed by the governor, says "growth during the next two decades and beyond will be achieved through innovation, efficient use of our resources, investment to maintain and improve permanent structures and success in applying new technologies."

A report by the Texas State Government Effectiveness Program, another study group by Clements, said the Texas 2000 results "demand careful long-range planning and immediate management initiatives to maintain essential state services in the most efficient, effective manner possible. With greater responsibility at the state and local level, as provided by block grants, the opportunity exists to undertake programs to meet these challenges."

The Bureau of Business Research report predicts that by 2000 the state's industrial output will more than double to $216 billion and increase the state's population 40 percent to 19.9 million.

On the other hand, the Texas 2000 report estimated the population in 2000 as approximately 22 million.

Plaut said that Texas will continue to draw new residents and businesses from other parts of the country "because it offers better wages, more jobs, superior living conditions, better access to markets and lower costs of doing business."

However, by the 1990 the disadvantages of growth will begin to appear. "Pollution, congestion and overburdened public and private facilities will begin to slow population and business migration into the state," he said.

"Even Texas 2000 recommendations sees the major challenges of the 1980s and 1990s as present and foreseeable water shortages and a declining trend in Texas oil and gas production. Water use in 2000 is projected to be 2.5 million acre feet short of dependable supplies, even with expected cutbacks in irrigation.

If the oil and gas production decline continues it means legislators will have to seek state revenue elsewhere, probably from new taxes.

Vehicle traffic is expected to more than double in Texas between now and 2000. Inadequacies in transportation in both urban and rural areas are expected.

The Texas 2000 report says that agricultural productivity is heavily dependent on water and energy supplies, as well as transportation facilities.

The commission thinks that Texas must spend more time and money on research and development to solve these problems. Most research funds spent in Texas now come from the federal government and to industries and public universities.

"If Texas is to maintain a competitive position in the nation and sustain its own economy, it must expand research and development efforts and focus them on areas most important to the state," the report said.

New MX missile plan considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another proposed method of deploying the land-based MX missile force — a deceptive basing system known as "Dense Pack" — is under serious consideration by the Pentagon, according to senior defense officials.

The new proposal, as were earlier ones, is aimed at minimizing the chances of an enemy being able to pinpoint and destroy the multiwarhead missiles, which are to be a major element in the nation's strategic defense system.

The "Dense Pack" plan, the officials said

Monday, involves groups of 10 vertical capsules spaced 2,000 feet apart, nine of them empty and the other containing one MX missile.

Besides presenting Soviet defense experts the problem of not knowing which capsule contains the missile, Pentagon planners say the "Dense Pack" system could cause the Soviets concern over the chance that missiles they fired to destroy the MX force might blow themselves up.

In military jargon, the destruction by one incoming warhead of its "brother" missiles is called "fratricide."

Army toughens standards for its soldiers

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army, faced with an unexpected increase in re-enlistments, says it has toughened its standards so commanders will now be able to keep only the best soldiers.

"Successes in Army recruiting and retention, to include a significant increase in the number of soldiers who have re-enlisted, make such a quality move possible," the Army told members of Congress in a recent memorandum.

The new rules bar re-enlistment to any soldier who fails to gain promotion at least to corporal or its equivalent, specialist fourth class, during his or her first three- or four-year hitch.

Commanders also have been given broader authority to weed out those soldiers with less than six years of service who are deemed to be "marginal performers or unsuitable," according to the Army.

Although much public attention has been focused on the Army's performance in recruiting new volunteers, officials long have been concerned about problems in retaining quality soldiers beyond their first enlistments.

But the latest available figures suggest to Army officials that their re-enlistment problems are fading, at least for the time being.

Officials credit major pay boosts and bonuses for their claimed successes in re-enlistment, recruiting and upgrading the quality of Army troops. Grudgingly, they also acknowledge that widespread unemployment in the civilian economy is helping the Army.

According to preliminary figures, a total of 45,660 men and women re-enlisted during the first six months of fiscal year 1982, which began last October.

This was 2,724 more than had been anticipated when goals were set last year.

Significantly, re-enlistments were at a higher level than expected in the combat arms — infantry, armor, and artillery — where the Army has experienced chronic difficulties since the end of the draft nearly a decade ago.

Preliminary figures for the six months ending March 31 showed 12,894 reenlistments in the combat branches, compared with an objective of 11,654.

Major James D. Weiskopf, a Pentagon spokesman, said the Army had a re-enlistment rate of about 15 percent during the late 1970s.

Last year, 66.7 percent of the eligible personnel re-enlisted, Weiskopf told the Worcester (Mass.) Evening Gazette in a story published Monday.

Largely because of the better-than-expected performance in re-enlistments, the Army has lowered its goal for signing up new recruits this year by about 7,000 to a total of 125,400.

Meanwhile, Army officials reported improvement in their ability to attract male high school graduates into uniform.

'Stars and Stripes' staff used 'wit and wile'

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — They call it Stripes and it has followed the American fighting man through the loneliness and terror that is war. It has proudly shouted "Victory" and solemnly described defeat. It has made him laugh amid the ruins by seeing his own ironic image, a hometown kid caked in mud. It has been his unbiased window on the world, his touch with reality. The Stars and Stripes turns 40

Sunday, April 18, and celebrates the fact that 114,000 American servicemen and women buy its European edition daily — the latest in news and commentary, self-supporting and independent of military opinion. It's probably read by three times that number.
There was a Stripes in the Civil War, more correctly several limited editions — one of them a single edition published in Bloomfield, Mo., on a captured press by four Union soldiers. There was an earlier edition in Richmond Factory, Va., and others from Boston to New Orleans. There was a Stripes in World War I, a weekly with a staff that included New Yorker editor Harold Ross, Alexander Woolcott, Grantland Rice and Franklin P. Adams.

That Stripes died with the Armistice after 71 weeks of publication.
The present-day Stripes, a 28-page morning tabloid, was born in bombed-out London and it chased the American soldier from battlefield to battlefield across North Africa and Europe. The first weekly issue, turned out April 18, 1942, by a half dozen soldiers from the 34th Infantry Division, a Marine corporal and a sailor, featured an interview with Gen. George C. Marshall who proclaimed that Stripes would be the soldier's paper independent of official control. Stripes became a daily on Nov. 2, 1942.

Marshall was reaffirming a policy set by Gen. John J. Pershing in World War I, and the staff has doggedly defended Stripes' independence since that time.

Not without challenge. The late Bob L. Moora, the wartime managing editor, said the staff had to resort to "wit and wile, conspiracy and conniving, to provide a clean, honest, accurate paper, free from propaganda and headquarters pressure."
They had as ally Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, but that did not dissuade some officers who wanted to use the paper for personal publicity, propaganda purposes or a vehicle for directives.

The staff would have to fence with the most persistent of these, and the ultimate brushoff was simple, polite and direct.
"Where can I reach someone who can authorize publication of this story?" the caller might ask.
"You might call REgent 8484, sir," the editor would respond.
"And ask for whom?"
"General Eisenhower, sir."

Computer can catalog the wisdom of Moses

CHICAGO (AP) — The divine wisdom that Moses brought down from Mount Sinai on stone tablets is now encoded on the silicon chips of a computer — along with 3,000 years of sacred words on subjects ranging from adultery and abortion to uses of garlic and the right-to-strike.

They are the teachings of Jewish law, recorded hundreds of years ago by rabbis who pondered legal and moral dilemmas and penned their responses on scrolls everywhere from the sands of the Sahara to synagogues in Spain.

Now, this tapestry of ancient Jewish rules has been woven into the memory of a modern computer. It is a religious repository of some 40 million words, including almost 40,000 formal rabbinic "responsa," or authoritative replies on questions of Jewish tradition.

"The great authorities on Jewish laws wrote these decisions," said Rabbi Irving J. Rosenbaum, a coordinator of the computer system, the Responsa project.

"It's like the Supreme Court decisions."

And like a set of legal decisions, the 1,500 rabbinic authors have written about topics ranging from the mundane — insurance policies — to the mystic — the use of garlic as a medicinal aid.

Thessuses, too, such as abortion, homosexuality, the right-to-strike and life-support systems.

Within a matter of minutes, the computer can deliver a list explaining how a rabbi in Algiers in the 15th century and another in Poland 400 years later responded to whether a man can be kicked out of his home for beating his wife.

These decisions may not seem contemporary, Rosenbaum said, but "There are no new questions. There are only new people asking them."

The Responsa project, recently completed after 15 years of research, was compiled by Chicago's Institute For Computers In Jewish Life in conjunction with Bar-Ilan University, in Israel, which has its own computer.

The Chicago computer houses 200 volumes of work — most of them in Hebrew — which represent the ultimate source of social codes and values practiced by Jews since Moses walked down the windswept mountain with the Ten Commandments.

"Jews have lived in all parts of the world since their exile in 70 A.D.," said Rosenbaum. Often, he said, they have lived in autonomous communities, where they dressed, ate and married in accordance with Jewish laws.

"When questions came up, they were directed to local rabbinical authorities," Rosenbaum said. "The rabbi was the religious, ethical and legal authority."

As Jews migrated through Europe and the Mideast, this tradition followed.

"In the course of centuries, certain responsa became the authority," Rosenbaum said. "Even today, a rabbi or judge determining a question will still consult the responsa."

Though replies date back 1200 years, Rosenbaum said, "Everything in the responsa is traced back to the Bible or an interpretation of the Bible."

For example, Rosenbaum said, one commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother" could be applied to decide whether Jewish law says it is proper to send an aged parent to a nursing home.

On many issues, the responsa give divergent opinions, but in some issues there's unanimity, particularly in inter-faith marriages and adultery — both of which are generally considered taboo. Even there, exceptions are made.

A rabbi in the 18th century in Germany wrote of a dim-witted woman who bedded down with a male lodger while her husband was away because he convinced her they could become the parents of the Messiah.

The woman, Rosenbaum said, told her husband the news. The woman was given a reprieve — because the adultery was committed unwittingly.

Japanese want to check Medfly program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Japanese apparently want more time to evaluate the success of the Mediterranean fruit fly eradication program in California before relaxing their restrictions on fruit imports, Agriculture department officials say.

"They have indicated to us that they feel we are making very good progress," Harvey Ford of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said, but they prefer to see some more warm weather before they pull back."

Ford said meetings with Japanese officials last week failed to convince them to drop the USDA's restrictions on marketing of California fruit, which require fumigation or cold temperature treatment on shipments from the seven counties of Santa Clara, San Mateo, Alameda, Santa Cruz, San Benito, Stanislaus and Los Angeles. The Japanese have been requiring such treatment on fruit from anywhere in the state.

Ford said, however, that the Japanese did agree to continue the unrestricted shipment of lemons from all but those seven counties. That arrangement would have otherwise expired April 30. About half the California lemons are sold to Japan.

"We would have liked to have gotten more," Ford told reporters, but the talks accomplished the fact that the lemons continue to move. Given the fact that Japan is a major market for lemons, that is a major accomplishment.

Deadline for enrollment in ADN plan

The deadline for August enrollment in the Associate Degree Nursing Program at Howard College is April 20. Students completing applications by April 20, will be reviewed by the Admission's Committee on May 13 and receive their letter of acceptance in May. Students who enroll after that date will be accepted if vacancies exist.

Students admitted in August of 1982 will graduate in May, 1984. Upon graduation from the nursing program, graduates are eligible to write the National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses.

Prospective students must complete 14 semester hours of prerequisite courses prior to entering the nursing program. All prerequisite courses will be offered during the 1st and 2nd summer sessions for those seeking August admission. Applications are also being accepted for the extended campus of the Associate Degree Nursing Program in Del Rio.

Applications packets may be obtained from the director's office located in the Horace Garrett Building. These applications should be completed and returned by April 20, 1982, for those seeking August admission. Additional information may be obtained by contacting Barbara Holdampf, director, at 267-6311, ext. 206, Howard College.

Learning disabled can use video games

FREMONT, Calif (AP) — A teacher of children with learning disabilities here has found home video games to be one of his best educational tools.

Regarded by most as entertainment, some of the games are an integral part of a Mission Valley Elementary School clinical program to develop children's hand-eye coordination, says its director, Michael Schoop.

Video games selected for the clinic must be non-threatening to children with a learning handicap, must have a system of measuring player improvement and should be colorful and entertaining, Schoop says.

After favorable response to a skiing game by his students, Schoop contacted the company that developed it, asking to purchase additional game cartridges. The company, Activision, has since donated each of its games to the clinic, and has also asked for feedback on the children's progress, reactions to the games, and suggestions for their improvement.

Army helicopter team saves traffic victims

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Scores of accident victims lay dying on South Carolina roads last year while the people who might have saved them sat waiting on an airport runway for a call that never came.

Many more were luckier. The life-saving call was made, and the men of what is believed the nation's busiest Army MAST helicopter unit sped them at 120 miles per hour into the skillful hands of the trauma surgeons — MAST stands for Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic.

But Dr. James I. Raymond of Richland Memorial Hospital, who doubles as state Emergency Medical Services director, still isn't satisfied with a program he believes is ahead of 90 percent of the rest of the country.

"It's good, but we've got to make it better," he says. Raymond says studies have shown that anywhere from 30 to 80 percent of accident victims who die could have lived if they'd been treated in time. South Carolina had nearly 850 traffic deaths last year.

"We're doing our own study," he says, "and we're coming up with figures which show that 30 to 40 percent of multiple-injured patients who die should not die. They die because they're not taken quickly enough to the right facility."

Since the early 1970s, South Carolina and about a dozen other states have had a powerful tool for cutting big chunks from that frustrating percentage, when they manage to get it to the right place at the right time.

Army helicopter teams, using techniques developed in Vietnam, have been collaborating with state and local governments, law-enforcement agencies and hospitals to put their skills to work for civilian casualties.

For the governments it means the cost-free services of half-million-dollar "Huey" choppers, complete with highly trained pilots and fuel consumed at the rate of a gallon per mile.

For the Army, it means a chance to boost the military's image in surrounding communities with a service which sharpens medical evacuation skills far better than any mock exercises could.

"This is real-world stuff for us," says 1st Lt. Michael Barrington, a MAST coordinator with the Columbia-based unit.

For accident victims, of course, it means precious minutes that can prevent death or permanent disability.

MAST was first tested in Texas 12 years ago. South Carolina's unit was chartered two years later and began operating in 1974. The 34 pilots, medics and crew chiefs with their 12 helicopters at Columbia Metropolitan Airport are the 4th Platoon of the 498th Medical Company Air Ambulance, with headquarters at Fort Benning, Ga.

In South Carolina, a MAST Civilian Coordinating Committee, with members drawn from government and law-enforcement agencies and hospital officials, supervises the program through civilian coordinator Tony Wynn.

While the headlong flights to accident scenes are the most dramatic MAST service, the unit's aircraft, emblazoned with big red crosses, also transfer premature infants and other patients between hospitals and carry blood and organs for transplant operations.

Barrington says the unit averages two life-or-death scrambles daily, which makes it "the busiest MAST unit in the country." Most flights come to Richland Memorial.

Economic crystal balls a little cloudy

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Perhaps it's time for economists to get themselves a new crystal ball. Their old one keeps clouding up.

Never, it seems, have so many been so wrong about where they think this fickle economy is going to be just a few months into the future.

It is no wonder President Reagan's chief economist, Murray L. Weidenbaum, instilled little confidence in the official administration forecast of a strong economic recovery by summer when he said the forecast is in line with that of most private economists.

And it is little surprise that fears of a coming depression persist in some quarters despite assertions by economists that the chances of that happening are remote.

For a decade since the late 1960s, when computers were harnessed to analyze and spew out millions of statistics about the nation's business, economists emerged as modern-day oracles commanding great attention and demand for their services.

The 1980s, however, brought a new set of government policymakers and economic rules that have changed dramatically the forecasting game. Today, interest rate trends are unpredictable. So are government responses to recessions and huge budget deficits.

Allen Sinai, a senior economist at one of the leading forecasting houses, Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., says his profession must perate in "a totally new" political environment. As a result, "we're flying by the seats of our pants," he confesses.

"Very frankly, there's a lot of soul-searching and hair-tearing going on here," says Sandra Shaber, an economist at one of Data Resources' chief competitors, Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "We missed the depth of this recession and its duration ... mainly because of the perverse behavior of interest rates."

"Once you get behavior like that, you're no longer in the realm of economics, you're in the realm of politics," she contends.

Hardly any of the mainstream economists saw the current recession coming until it was nearly upon the country last year. After the slump was acknowledged, none of the major forecasters expected it to be as severe and prolonged as it has turned out to be. The Reagan administration's economists have been off the mark the most, having opted for an optimistic outlook for political reasons.

Today's predominant outlook is so cautious that it comes across more as a hunch than a forecast: something less than a robust recovery sometime later this year, but perhaps no recovery at all unless interest rates come down.

Evans said the consensus three-month forecast had the economy going in the wrong direction in eight of the last nine quarters.

Reagan to seek tuition tax credits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has decided to ask Congress to approve a package of tuition tax credits that could provide up to $500 to parents of children in private and parochial elementary and secondary schools, sources say.

The program would be phased in over three years, probably beginning in 1983, administration sources said Monday. It was not immediately clear how large the initial credit would be, but sources said it would climb to a maximum of $500 when the program is in full force.

The sources, who insisted on anonymity, said the program would be structured to focus its benefits on lower- and middle-income families. The size of a taxpayer's credit would depend on his income.

Reagan is to outline the proposal in an address Thursday at the National Catholic Education Association's annual convention in Chicago, the nation's largest Catholic-school district. Thousands of Roman Catholic educators are meeting there this week in a convention that opened Monday.

About 5 million children attend private schools, 3 1/2 million of them in Roman Catholic schools.

As a presidential candidate, Reagan endorsed the concept of tuition tax credits, but sometimes added the caveat that adoption of any program would have to wait until it is fiscally prudent.

Ironically, announcement of Reagan's plan comes in the midst of negotiations between the White House and Congress on how to curb federal budget deficits, now expected to exceed $100 billion for fiscal 1983.

No estimate was available on how much Reagan's proposal would cost the Treasury.

Tuition tax credits have been proposed in the past, but have run into obstacles in Congress from those who fear they conflict with the Constitution's requirement for separation of church and state or from those concerned that such aid would come only at the expense of public schools.

Reagan's tuition tax credit would be limited to elementary and secondary school pupils. It would not cover students in private and parochial colleges.

An income cap would bar parents who earn over a certain amount — perhaps $50,000 — from eligibility. Unlike a tax deduction which reduces a person's taxable income, a tax credit is subtracted directly from a person's tax bill.

"It won't apply to schools that practice discrimination," said one source.

Mayor will turn near-famous applicants into celebrities

KINGSTON, Ga. (AP) — The beauty queens and professional Santa Clauses offering to lend their special glitter to the annual town festival may not be the celebrities the mayor was looking for, but they'll be famous by the time they leave here.

The mayor will attest to it. So many near-famous people responded to Mayor C. Vernon Ayers' plea last month for any "famous person" to attend the two-day Kingston Historic Festival that the mayor says he'll sign certificates declaring them famous whether they are or not.

The certificates will state that "when you leave here, you will have achieved celebrity status," Ayers said Monday.

Residents of Kingston, located in northwest Georgia, have printed T-shirts and buttons reading "I'm Famous" and "I'm Not Famous" so the 729 townspeople can tell celebrities and spectators apart at the festival, which begins Saturday with a parade, Ayers said.

He sent out his plea this year because senators, actors and governors have declined invitations since the festival began in 1980.

Former President Jimmy Carter, former U.S. Sen. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, Massachusetts Sen. Edward Kennedy, Georgia Sens. Sam Nunn and Mack Mattingly, Georgia Gov. George Busbee and actor Burt Reynolds all have declined to attend, the mayor said.

Firefighting grandmother calls it quits

CREOLA, Ala. (AP) — Fire Chief Virginia Lawshe says she's tired of her beeper going off during church prayers on Sunday.

She also wants to "go out West" on vacation, take sewing lessons, and enjoy her 11 grandchildren.

For these and other reasons, Mrs. Lawshe, 53, who pioneered the volunteer fire department in this oil-rich Mobile suburb of 1,600, is hanging up her chief's hat. "I enjoyed it. I was the only woman who could stay up all night with a dozen men and not get talked about," she said, looking back on her four-year career as chief.

She and Carol Sherman took on the firefighting job, she said, because none of the men in the community wanted to be seen riding the "white elephant."

That was the fire truck the town inherited from the state Forestry Commission. "We ran it in a parade and the engine got too hot and it burned out," she said with a hint of amusement.

The demise of the "white elephant" allowed the town to search for another fire truck, which they found in Brent, Fla.

It's a 750-gallon pumper that still operates.

But the pride and joy of the community is the spanking new 1,000-gallon truck purchased in November for $20,000.

"We worked and we worked and we worked to get these fire trucks," said Mrs. Lawshe.

With Mrs. Lawshe's resignation, the chief's duty fell to Police Chief Frank Hammond.

An accident with the new truck led five men and five women volunteer firefighters to resign recently.

The new truck's underbody caught fire during a sage-patch fire. Now the 750-gallon pumper is back in service, until the insured pride and joy is repaired.

Use of the new truck had been restricted to paved and dirt roads. The City Council got upset because it had been driven into the blazing field.

That led to some resignations, but Chief Lawshe said she had planned to leave for all that, and she'd stay on standby if needed.

After the resignations, Hammond said, 23 volunteers were still on call for fire duty.

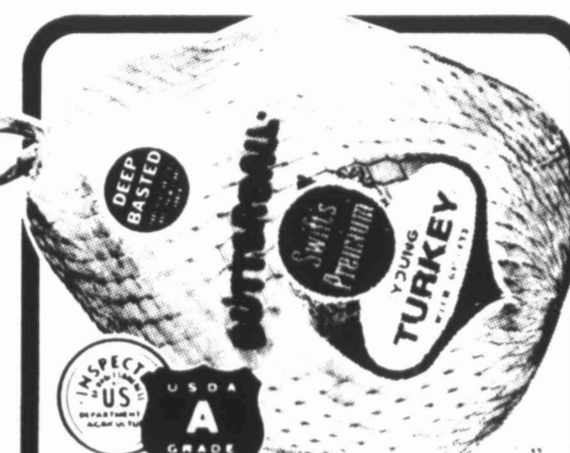

During her firefighting career, Mrs. Lawshe takes pride in having saved a "100,000 house" from a roaring blaze.

Among her biggest jobs were a Getty Oil fuel storage tank blaze ("We went over on standby"), and a railroad engine that caught fire after hitting a dump truck.

"I'm hoping the men will be able to handle it now," she said.

Cotton picture clouded by large stocks, weak demand

COLLEGE STATION — Cotton farmers face a tough year ahead as huge cotton supplies will likely keep the lid on market prices.

The large supplies of cotton stem from last year's bumper crop in the U.S. and abroad coupled with a sharp drop in American consumption, says Dr. Carl Anderson, economist in cotton marketing with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"GLOBAL COTTON production last year is estimated at a record 71 million bales, about 5 million more than the 1980 season," he points out. "The U.S. crop totaled 15.7 million bales, up from 11.1 million the previous year.

"It will take a big drop in '82 production and an economic recovery in the second half of this year for the cotton market to turn around," believes Anderson. "Foreign demand and the state of the economy will be important factors in determining domestic mill use in 1982."

World carryover stocks are expected to increase about 4 million bales when the 1981 marketing season ends on July 31, notes the economist. Total offtake of about 12.5 million bales in the U.S. will fall some 3 million bales short of the estimated 15.7 million bale crop in 1982, resulting in a doubling of domestic carryover stocks at some 6 million bales.

Low prices will probably encourage less production in the U.S. this year, with cotton acreage expected to fall substantially below last year's 14.3 million mark, estimates Anderson. The recently announced 15 percent acreage reduction program should result in a significant cutback in the 1982 cotton crop.

ANDERSON SEES few opportunities for producers to contract their '82 crop at prices above production costs during the first half of the year. Any type of price recovery in the second half will depend on the weather, economic activity and size of the new crop.

"The overall long-run demand for fiber appears strong," says Anderson. "But for cotton to maintain its fair share of total fiber consumption, the cotton industry will need strong market development programs."

He says the industry also needs to continue to improve cotton quality, provide textile manufacturers with more precise information about spinning properties of each cotton bale, and somehow develop a pricing system that reduces extreme price fluctuations.

Weak Soviet grain harvest predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1981 Soviet grain harvest could be the second smallest in the past decade, the Agriculture Department says.

USDA analysts are refusing to change their end-of-season estimate of 175 million metric tons until the Kremlin makes an official announcement about the size of the 1981 crop.

But in its monthly Soviet grain report issued Monday, they said, "Unofficial statements concerning last year's crop have indicated production may have been 10 million to 15 million tons below the USDA end-of-season estimate."

That would drop the 1981 Soviet harvest to between 160 million and 165 million metric tons, at least 71 million metric tons below the government's 236 million ton production target. The Soviet's smallest crop in recent years was 140.1 million metric tons in 1975, followed by a 168.2 million metric ton harvest in 1972. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

U.S. Wheat Associates, a major grain export organization, said earlier this month that if the Soviet harvest falls to — or below — the 160 million metric ton level, the USSR would probably not be able to meet its food needs through exports.

"Assuming that Soviet ports can handle 45 million metric tons of grain imports this season, a grain shortfall of 30 million metric tons still exists and would be largely reflected in meat production," the organization said in its newsletter.

The newsletter also noted that new dietary and nutrition standards issued by the Soviet government reduce the consumption norms of meat, vegetables and fruit to a level lower than any published during the 1970's. Those same revised standards called for increases in higher calorie, low-quality foods.

The USDA report also indicated the Soviets had made a significant effort to harvest as much grain as possible last year.

It said the USSR put its 1981 crop at 310.2 million acres, 2 percent larger than USDA's estimate and less than 2 million acres below the preliminary Soviet estimate of last fall. In each of the previous five years the actual acreage has been at least 3 million acres less than the fall estimate.

The report said the 1982 winter grain crop is in average to good condition with winter kill below average because of generally mild temperatures and adequate snowcover during cold snaps.

"But normal rainfall will be needed as the vegetative period resumes," the analysts said.

The USDA estimate on world grain production remained unchanged at a record 1.6 billion metric tons, about 4.5 percent above the previous year's harvest.

But it dropped its world oilseed production estimate by nearly 1 percent to 171.2 million metric tons, mainly because of damage to the Brazil soybean crop.

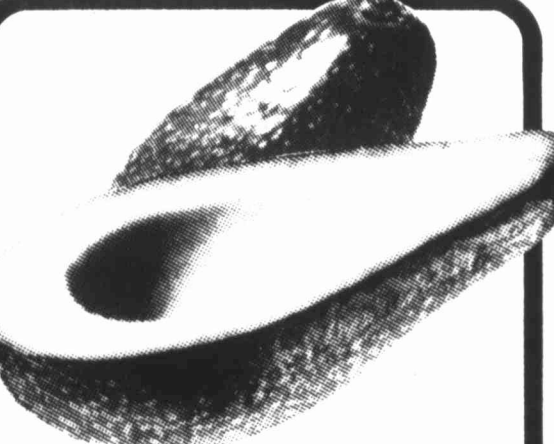

The report reduced Brazil's expected harvest by 700,000 metric tons because of "dry spells in January and from late February to mid-March, which affected both early and late maturing varieties."
