TYC: Can it reform troubled juveniles?

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

Once upon a time in the state of Texas, the goal of the state's reform system for juveniles was to release offenders back into society instilled with nothing less than "self-control, moral habits and industrial efficiency."

Dispatched from reform school in a brand-new suit with five dollars tucked in his pocket, yesterday's reformed juvenile typically was seen as someone who had been a little more than mischievous but much less than criminal.

He had been to reform school, had been rehabilitated, and nobody charged with preserving and protecting the peace ever expected to see many of the delinquent kids again.

But that was decades ago. Today, things are different. Those who deal with juvenile crime see a new breed of teenage offender loose in society — a kid harder to control, less responsive to traditional forms of treatment. Texas is among the states coming to grips with this new delinquent.

Juvenile justice in Howard County

Fifth in a series

The goal — doing what's best for the child rather than what's best for the society he committed wrong within — continues to be the same. But even so, the system is changing, coming down harder on kids — on kids who are coming down harder on society, on innocent victims and on their parents, than they have in the past.

"Under the law, our responsibility is to rehabilitate them," said Ron Jackson, executive director of the Texas Youth Council, the state's correctional system for juveniles. But at the same time, Jackson noted, there is an emerging trend within the correctional system to punish the child — to drill into him a sense that someone is trying to help him, yes, but at the same time he still has to suffer for what he did, too.

WHEN THE COURT sentences a child to the custody of the Texas Youth Council, the amount of time the child spends at TYC is something the judge has no control over. The release of the child is determined by TYC officials, who review the child's case and make a decision that he has reformed or hasn't — usually after spending about eight months under TYC control.

But with violent offenders, who two years ago could have expected to walk out of TYC after spending a few months in state custody, the case is different. Two years ago, Jackson said, TYC began a policy of placing all violent offenders in an institution for at least one year. The offender is placed in an institution at Giddings, where he is given the same kind of vocational, educational and recreational programs given children at other TYC institutions — but where he also must live with the restriction of being behind a 14-foot-high fence each day.

The Giddings institution is well-populated, reflecting the incidence rate of serious crimes pulled off by juveniles (about 12 percent of the kids committed to TYC are committed because they were found guilty of violent offenses). Giddings had an average daily population of 264 inmates in fiscal 1979-1980 — the second-highest population of the five TYC institutions.

Incarceration of violent offenders, however, is not the only new direction TYC is pursuing these days. At the other end of the spectrum, less-violent offenders are finding themselves allowed a chance to avoid the stigma and rigors of institutionalization by being placed in community programs.

Jackson said TYC planners began pursuing the idea of keeping the less-serious offenders out from behind bars about eight years ago.

"It's a common feeling in the juvenile justice system that not every child committed by the courts to the correctional system needs to be placed in a large institution — that some children have different types of needs," Jackson said. "They're not violent offenders; they're simply children who've been in trouble for some period of time and they have problems and need to be isolated and treated for those problems."

TYC developed two programs to deal with these children: halfway houses and residential contract programs. Nearly half the non-violent offenders committed to TYC in 1979-80 were placed either in TYC's seven halfway houses or in its 95 privately-operated residential contract programs. The average length of placement in the halfway houses was the minimum time required to stay there, four months, while the average length of placement in the residential contract programs was about eight months — the same as for children placed in the institutions.

How does TYC decide where to place a child? Jackson explained: "What we do is, when a child is assigned to us, he comes to our Brownwood reception center. At that point, we go through a diagnostic process. We not only give them psychological testing, but we also look at their educational needs (and) do a medical assessment. We try to look at the whole kid."

"Based on the information we get from that, and on the social history we get from the county, we make a decision," Jackson continued. "If they are what we consider to be an easy-to-place child, in other words, if they don't need a real structured setting such as a fenced or large institution, then we'll make a decision to put them in a halfway house or the residential contract programs."

In the residential contract programs, a private facility such as the West Texas Boys Ranch in San Angelo or the Palmer Drug Abuse Program in Austin signs a contract with TYC to care for the child, 24 hours a day, Jackson explained.

What determines the date of release from TYC? "Mostly the behavior of the child while he's within the facility," Jackson said. "We look at his adjustment, we look at any gains he's made as far as education is concerned, we look at any changes in the patterns of his family's relationships. But the bottom line, when you get right down to it, is pretty much his behavior while he's here. We'll tell you about all these things we're doing to rehabilitate him, but I don't think that's the real, major factor — that we think we've rehabilitated him. I think the factor is that over a period of six months they pretty much adjusted and stayed out of trouble and we feel comfortable they can go home."

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN a child returns home is not always what TYC hopes will happen. Sometimes the child gets picked up by police again. The complaint of TYC's critics is that the agency doesn't do enough to prevent re-arrest, that TYC is merely a conveyor belt, lifting troubled children off the streets for a few months, then putting them back unchanged.

"My response," Jackson said, "is that it takes fifteen years to develop the kind of behavior that they've developed and it isn't gonna change in a year or two. The real issue there is: What's causing problems in his community? We're not going to know it in the prison system. We're not going to be able to change it, either, whether it's his family or the behavior that it's taken him 15 years to develop."

"It's easy to be critical of agencies such as ours," Jackson added, "but the simple fact is, the conditions are there in the community and if there's going to be any major change that occurs in the future as far as rehabilitating the child, it's going to have to happen before we ever get to the child. It's usually too late by the time we get him."

Former Big Spring Chief of Police Elwood Hoherz echoed a different concern about the post-TYC reality for juveniles.

"I think we need some way to prepare these juveniles to return to a different place in society, rather than back into their homes where all the problems started," Hoherz commented. "Sometimes we wait too long to remove the juvenile from his home. He gets involved with too much crime and it becomes a way of life with him before we act."

The key to the whole rehabilitative process is figuring out how the parent and child relate to each other, then improving that relationship, Hoherz said.

"That's the key: How are the parents cooperating with law enforcement and cooperating with the juvenile justice system in getting a hold of the problem? If you feel that the parents don't have a good attitude about it, that they

Brito draws probation term, fined $3,500

By MIKE DOWNEY

A Howard County jury assessed Jose Brito 10 years probation and a $3,500 fine after finding him guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of Octavio Olivares today in 118th District Court. The jury deliberated 40 minutes before setting the punishment.

During arguments for the punishment, defense attorney Wayne Basden told the jury that Brito had the capacity to do good and that probation was the proper sentence. "If he slips and falls on probation, he serves the full term of his sentence," Basden said. Brito's actions on the night of the shooting were not that of a guilty man, Basden said.

Prosecuting Attorney Rick Hamby told the jury he felt they had already made up their minds about probation, but to remember "Octavio Olivares is no more." The district attorney asked the seven-man, five-woman jury. See Brito, page 2A

Lions from District 2A-1 open convention here Friday

Lions from District 2A-1, which sprawls from Kingsland to Junction, and from Sweetwater to Midland, converge here Friday for their annual convention. They will be representing an aggregate of some 3,500 members.

A highlight of the gathering will be an address at the Saturday 7 p.m. dinner honoring Russell McMeans, Stanton, district governor, will be an address by Dr. James A. Fowler, Little Rock, Ark. who in two years is due to become president of Lions International with its million and a quarter members. Local and visiting Lions will meet him at the Municipal Airport Terminal Building when he arrives in his private plane 4 p.m. Friday.

Also at the banquet, the winner of the district queen contest, in which 24 young ladies are entered, will be announced by Dub Martin, Big Spring, chairman. She will receive the traditional bouquet of red roses, plus a

Rain puts damper on dust storms

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

After weeks and weeks of experiencing dust storms and arid-like weather West Texas had its dry, parched throat wetted with gentle showers last night.

According to the National Weather Service the rains were triggered by a high pressure system passing over the state. The NWS is calling for a 70 percent chance of rain today decreasing to 50 percent by tonight.

The U.S. Big Spring Field Station reported 42 inch as of 8 a.m. today. A spokesman for the station said Big Spring had received 1.33 inches so far in 1982. Normal for the year is 3 inches.

O.A. Ivie of the CRMWD said several of the district's pump stations reported rainfall. Stations recording precipitation were: northeast of Big Spring, 30; Lake Spence, 20; Lake Thomas, 60; and the Martin County pump station 15 miles northeast of Midland, 1 inch.

James D. "Red" Thomas of 107 East 13th, said he recorded .35 inch. Chuck Benz of 2807 Apache, said last night's showers dumped .40 inch on his yard.

Larry Shaw, a farmer at Knott, reported in with .92 inch. "It was a pretty good rain," Shaw said. "Probably with another inch we could plant."

The rain disrupted phone service in some parts of town, according to a Southwestern Bell spokesman.

He said rain sometimes gets into main carrier lines causing the line to lose some of its capability to handle heavy loads. He said the company would be sending out repair units to cure the situation and he expected them to have repairs made by mid-morning.

Long range forecasts call for widely scattered showers today through Saturday with skies clearing Sunday and Monday.

Kids & crime

 don't want to help — then you better get the kid removed fairly quick."

As an officer in the juvenile section of the Waco police force for nearly six years, Hoherz had frequent contact with parents of troubled teenagers — he knew how to fathom what sort of relationship the parent and child had. "You could sense it during your first consultation with the parents," he recalled. "I could always sense when the parents left an interview if there was a potential problem in the future. The parent that would come in and was quick to defend the child, very defensive-minded ... you would probably see that parent come back with a child that's a repeat offender. But if the parent took a tough stand and let the kid know the parent didn't approve — there was a good chance that a child might not repeat an offense. It seemed like the main repeaters were the ones where the parents didn't give a darn, or where they were too defensive and thought everybody was wrong about the becoming involved in education or employment, abstaining from alcohol and drugs.

To see if the child is sticking to the agreement, Martinez tries to make two contacts with the child each month. He doesn't depend on the child's word, however, and also checks in with the parents, school officials and police.

The parole agreement is individualized and states clearly what the child's goals are. Those goals get reviewed every six months.

"Basically, I'm interested in whether they follow the parole rules," Martinez explained. "We talk about any problems the child may have: at home, in the school or on the job. My main concern is whether they are having problems. If they are, I try to help. Because if they can follow the rules, more than likely they'll make a successful adjustment."

There have been a dozen times since 1975 when a Howard County parolee didn't make it, according to Ms. Puckett. Six times the child has his parole revoked, while the other six times the child wound up back in juvenile court and was recommitted to TYC by a judge.

The decision to revoke parole, Martinez said, usually is based on information that the child committed a felony offense. But just because the kid was picked up by police on suspicion of pulling off a crime, it doesn't automatically mean the child will get a parole revocation hearing, Martinez pointed out. Two other things can happen: the parole officer can intervene, counsel the kid and put him back on the parole program with a warning — or, local authorities can bring the child back into juvenile court, where the judge may decide to recommit the child to TYC.

The parole revocation hearing for Howard County parolees is held in a "semi-formal" courtroom setting inside the county courthouse, with a TYC hearings examiner from Austin making the decision on whether to revoke parole, Martinez said.

If the child is found not to have participated in the alleged offense to the degree where revocation would be necessary, then he goes back on parole. If the examiner decides the child did commit a serious offense and parole gets revoked, then the child will return to the TYC institution he was released from. If he was in a residential contract program, he goes back to the Brownwood reception center for re-evaluation, according to Martinez.

THE AVERAGE CHILD committed to the Texas Youth Council resembles the following, according to Jackson: he is 15 years old, his IQ is low, the family's income is at the poverty level or close to it, the chances are two to one that the child is a member of a racial minority, and he probably doesn't have much more than a fifth-grade education.

It's hard to chart the success of the Texas Youth Council in aiding such a child, Jackson said.

"What we're looking at is discharge under the age of 18. You simply don't know in that period of time whether they're gonna recidivate or not. After their seventeenth birthday, they're gonna be treated as an adult in most cases. If you were tracking the child for the next, say, six years, then you might be able to get a pretty fair idea of what your actual recidivism rate would be. But we can't track them past their eighteenth birthday," he said.

The key to the post-TYC success with a child actually consists of taking steps to see that the child doesn't get sent to TYC in the first place, according to one person.

Said former police chief Hoherz: "There's several things you could do to make them regret pulling minor crimes, such as having them go to the county pound and wash garbage trucks, instead of just getting free and going home. Or having them go down and mow the lawn at the courthouse. Or going to their schools and helping wash windows. I think that in itself would be a therapy. And the parents have to be there, too. I really believe the parent has to go through some embarrassment, too. Then I think you'll see that those kids won't be a bother no more."

Tomorrow: The Howard County Juvenile Probation Board — does it know what it is supposed to do?

CONCERNED CHIEF — Former Big Spring Chief of Police Elwood Hoherz was particularly concerned about juvenile crime, and suggested a measure of parental embarrassment would help reduce the amount of juvenile crime.

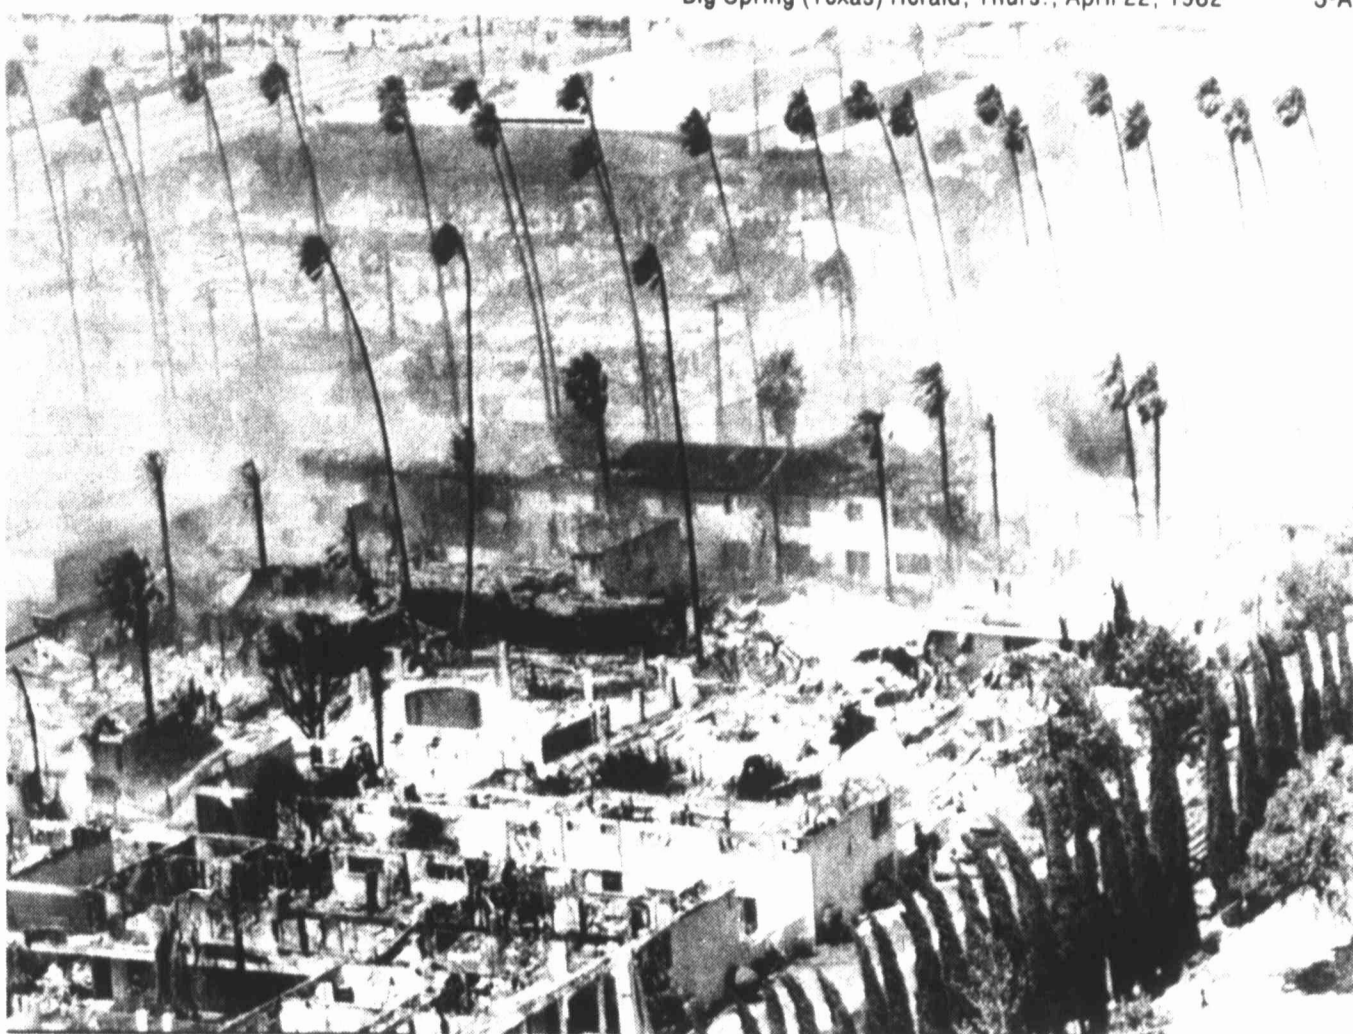

UNLIKE THE ADULT correctional system, in which only convicts who exhibit good behavior are paroled, everybody gets paroled from TYC. As with adults, parole for juveniles is conditioned upon behavior, but there's no chance of doing life or even 10 years behind bars if the child's too incorrigible to be considered as a person with model behavior. That's because there are only eight years, the ages 10 through 17, in which TYC can exert control over a young person's life.

Once released from TYC, the child stays on parole until his eighteenth birthday. If he is re-arrested, he faces the possibility of having his parole revoked.

Thirteen percent of the children committed to TYC in 1979-80 had been to TYC before, according to the 1980 annual TYC report. Each year for the past 10 years, according to Jackson, the recidivism rate has fluctuated between 11 and 15 percent.

Benny Martinez is the man Howard County parolees establish contact with after they are released from TYC. The local caseload for Martinez, who works out of a one-man office in Midland, is not staggering: since the summer of 1975, 30 Howard County children have been committed to TYC by juvenile court, according to TYC spokeswoman Joan Puckett. At the same time, however, Martinez is responsible for some 40 to 50 parolees a year in a 16-county area.

Martinez' job is to make sure the child follows a nine-point set of rules agreed to by the child and his parents or guardians at the time of release from TYC. The rules are prohibitions and promises such as not leaving Howard County for more than 24 hours without notifying Martinez, SMOKY DESTRUCTION — Smoke rises from the charred remains of apartment complexes and homes in Anaheim, Calif. Wednesday. The early morning fire destroyed dozens of buildings and forced the evacuation of up to 1,500 persons.

Hundreds left homeless by raging California fires

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A state of emergency has been declared in the wake of a firestorm that started with an electric spark and leaped from roof to roof in 60 mph Santa Ana winds, burning up to 1,500 people out of their homes and causing $50 million in damage.

The notorious dry winds and the wood-shingle roofs of many of the 50 buildings destroyed by the fire Wednesday helped make the inferno the worst in the history of Orange County, home of Disneyland, officials said. At least eight people were injured.

As the evacuees whose houses and apartments were burned sought shelter with friends or relatives, or in hotels that opened their doors to help, Anaheim Fire Chief Bob Simpson said it was "God's own miracle" no one died.

The winds, which gusted up to 100 mph in Fontana, 30 miles away, died down by noon and the fire was put out.

"It looks like some kind of war-ravaged area. It's a terrible thing to see," Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. said after flying over the mile-square fire area in a helicopter.

Brown declared a state of emergency in Anaheim, the first step toward making fire victims eligible for up to $55,000 in federal loans. He said he would decide today whether to seek a federal disaster area designation, which would make displaced residents eligible for $5,000 grants and temporary housing for up to a year.

The firestorm was touched off shortly before 6 a.m. Wednesday when winds downed a power line which set the fronds of a palm tree ablaze. The buildings it destroyed included 534 apartment units.

Police spokesman Werner Raes said two residents suffered heart attacks in the fire. A third civilian, one police officer and three firefighters suffered minor injuries.

Flames formed what resident Simon Berkowitz described as "a wall of fire about three or four blocks wide" and sent clouds of smoke billowing skyward.

The fire left an eerie landscape of charred ruins, an occasional standing wall and a backdrop of towering palm trees that had escaped the flames.

"It was early in the morning and people were up anyway, getting ready to go to school or whatever," said Anaheim Fire Inspector Nadine Roberts. "If it had been in the night I think we would have had some horrible problems."

Most residents fled with little more than the clothes on their back, their children and pets.

"At the height of the fire we evacuated more than 2,000 people," Simpson said. "We now estimate that between 1,200 and 1,500 are displaced."

Prisons phase out inmate guards

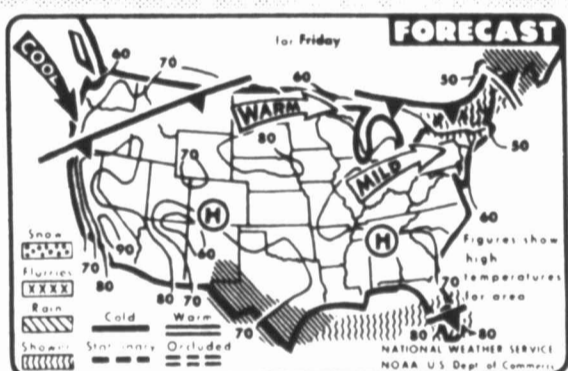

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas prison officials have agreed to phase out the use of inmate guards, or "building tenders," by Jan. 1, 1985, and hire more guards to do the work.

The agreement among state and federal authorities and lawyers representing inmates was released to the press Wednesday and won tentative approval later in the day from U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler.

PLO promises revenge

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization vowed to avenge Israel's massive air attack on its forces in southern Lebanon, but PLO sources predicted the retaliation would be delayed to avoid giving Israel the pretext for an invasion.

"The Palestinian revolution knows how and when to retaliate," said a PLO statement issued after the Israeli raids Wednesday that the Lebanese government said killed at least 20 Palestinians and wounded more than 40 others.

Palestinian sources said radical factions in the organization were demanding an immediate attack on Israeli targets. Shafik al-Hout, a member of the Palestine National Council and of the PLO executive committee, told the U.N. General Assembly in New York that the PLO was "maintaining self-restraint" so far, "but I can't guarantee what's coming up in the coming hours."

PLO chief Yasser Arafat met with his military commanders and the leaders of the eight PLO factions until early this morning, but no decisions were announced.

After rumors of illness

Brezhnev makes appearance

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev reappeared today at a gala celebration marking the 112th anniversary of the birth of Vladimir I. Lenin, ending a 27-day absence from public view that sparked reports he was seriously ill.

The 75-year-old Brezhnev, who reportedly was hospitalized late last month after a grueling trip to Soviet Central Asia, walked to his seat in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses. He looked pale under the strong lights of the hall and applauded as the audience of 5,000 clapped in greeting.

Wearing a dark suit with medals on his chest, Brezhnev remained standing for the playing of the Soviet national anthem and then took his seat on the stage with other Soviet officials.

A live television broadcast showed Brezhnev only as he approached his seat. At past official occasions, the camera usually showed him walking from the stage wings to his seat.

Brezhnev's face looked considerably slimmer than when he was last seen in public. He showed little emotion but applauded with the audience during the speech.

Yuri Andropov, 67, chief of the KGB security police, delivered the speech honoring Lenin, founder of the Soviet state, from a rostrum on the huge stage. Brezhnev followed the speech with a hearing aid in his right ear.

Last year's speech was given by Brezhnev's aide, Konstantin Chernenko, 70, who assumed a more prominent position in the Soviet hierarchy following the death in January of the Kremlin's top ideologist, Mikhail Suslov.

Brezhnev, seated almost directly behind Andropov, was flanked by Chernenko and another member of the ruling party Politburo, Viktor Grishin.

Airline dirty tricks investigated

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Braniff President Howard D. Putnam has been subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury convened here to investigate allegations American Airlines used underhanded tactics in an attempt to knock Braniff International out of the Dallas-Fort Worth market.

Putnam planned to appear before the panel today, and was subpoenaed Tuesday, said Braniff Vice President Sam Coats.

It is "our understanding that the investigation will center on the alleged illegal activities of American Airlines to monopolize the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport in order to force up fares," Coats said Wednesday.

American Airlines spokesman Paul Haney flatly denied the allegations.

"It is now clear that the baseless rumors and accusations about American can be laid squarely at Braniff's doorstep," Haney said.

Repeat offenders facing harsher sentences in court

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Jackson Monroe Martin slumped in his chair and stared at the floor. He couldn't believe he had been sentenced to 99 years in jail for indecent exposure.

"I don't think it's right for me to get that much time for that kind of crime," said Martin, whose 11 prior convictions for burglary enabled the prosecutor to ask for the long sentence.

"Maybe a fine and 30 days, or even a year in the county jail. But not 99 years!" the 42-year-old man complained at his sentencing hearing.

"People are just tired of crime," said Ron Stubblefield, the district attorney in Bryan County, Okla., where Martin received his long sentence. "And they want the repeat offenders off the streets."

Throughout the country, prosecutors are increasingly using habitual criminal codes to seek longer terms.

The stiffer punishment depends on the crime, but can range from the sentence for the next higher class offense — in South Dakota — to life without parole — in Louisiana and Arkansas.

Maine and Pennsylvania are the only states without laws or pending legislation for habitual or repeat offenders, according to a recent Justice Department study done at American University in Washington.

In Ohio, a measure by state Rep. Edward J. Orlett of Dayton calling for mandatory sentencing for some felonies unanimously cleared the state House earlier this month.

The proposed law would require judges to impose an "actual incarceration" period ranging from three to nine years on career criminals.

"Society has a right to protect itself against criminals for a specified period of time," said Orlett, who noted the bill is "the first major change in a decade in the state's criminal sentencing law."

Some law enforcement officials contend early releases by parole boards take the muscle out of prison sentences.

"One reason for the increase in the use of the habitual criminal statute is that there was a realization that a 20-year sentence didn't mean 20 years," said Pete Adams, president of the Louisiana District Attorneys Association.

"It's a better bet to put them away, these people who are constantly costing the taxpayers money. People are realizing rehabilitation is not working. The answer is long sentences."

In 29 states, the habitual criminal charge can be considered on the second felony, according to a study by the Rand Corp. Nineteen states consider the charge upon a third offense, two states consider it on the fourth and three states have increased penalties for the fifth conviction.

Another study by the National Council on Crime and Delinquency indicates that at least 17 states have enacted or have introduced within the past five years legislation directed toward getting career criminals off the streets.

U.S. Sen. Arlen Specter, who was a district attorney in Philadelphia for eight years, has sponsored a bill that would make a third armed robbery or armed burglary conviction a federal offense punishable by at least 15 years in prison.

A study by the senator's staff revealed that robbers serve an average of three years behind bars, and a robber with prior convictions serves an average of only 3½ years.

Research based on interviews after arrest revealed professional lawbreakers individually commit 50-100 robberies or 200-400 burglaries a year.

Deputy CIA director resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Bobby R. Inman surprised many members of the U.S. intelligence community with his resignation as deputy CIA director and set them scrambling for explanations.

Widely respected by intelligence colleagues and on Capitol Hill, Inman shocked many officials when the White House announced Wednesday his intention to leave a 30-year career in the military and intelligence to enter the private sector. "I really want to do fresh things," Inman told the Baltimore Sun.

Inman's decision opened new uncertainty at the top of the CIA, which only lately emerged from controversy over its director, William J. Casey, and the administration's relaxation of prohibitions against CIA domestic spying.

Three sources said Inman had objected to President Reagan's recent decision to order a secret study of counterintelligence. A conservative congressional source claimed this dispute prompted Inman's departure. But a top-level administration source, who knows the 51-year-old admiral, discounted that theory.

Another administration source said the dispute over the study, which was conceived by Inman's ultra-conservative opponents, was too small in itself to convince him to leave but might have been "the last straw."

Inman told the Sun that policy disputes were not behind his departure. "Somebody's trying to make a good story that's not really there...I've had my share of bureaucratic battles...I've won more than my share — I'm not stomping off angry," he said.

In an exchange of letters released by the White House, Inman asked to leave as soon as a successor could be confirmed. Reagan accepted the resignation "with deep regret."

The White House announcement said Inman, who had headed the National Security Agency in the Carter administration, had wanted to retire in 1980 but had been persuaded to take the CIA post. Some congressional sources said Inman had been uncomfortable in the No. 2 position at the CIA.

BOMB AFTERMATH — French policemen search for clues the center of Paris off the Champs Elysees. One person was Thursday around the remains of a car which exploded in killed, 63 were hurt.

One killed, 63 hurt in bomb blast

PARIS (AP) — A bomb planted under a car exploded in the midst of morning rush-hour crowds in central Paris near the Champs Elysees today, killing a young pregnant Frenchwoman and injuring 63 other people, police said.

The blast coincided with the opening of a trial of two extremists whose freedom has been demanded by the international terrorist Carlos, now said to be working for the Syrian secret service.

No group claimed responsibility, but Interior Minister Gaston Defferre said the government immediately ordered the Syrian military and cultural attaches to France expelled from the country.

Investigators said the bomb was planted under an orange Opel rented in Vienna and parked across from the offices of the Paris-based Lebanese news weekly, Al Watan Al Arabi. The magazine is openly pro-Iraqi. Iraq is Syria's arch-enemy in the Arab world.

Police said an 18-year-old youth, whose leg was partially blown off in the blast, was in critical condition, and 10 of the other injured were in serious condition.

It was not known if any foreign tourists were among the injured.

Police said the car under which the bomb was planted was destroyed, and about 15 other vehicles around it seriously damaged.

Investigators noted that the bomb exploded within two minutes of the scheduled opening of the trial of two accused terrorists, whose freedom has been demanded by the international terrorist known as Carlos.

The trial of Bruno Breguet of Switzerland and Magdalena Kopp of West Germany on charges of possession of explosives had been scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. The bomb went off at 9:02 a.m. The trial in the heavily-guarded central courts actually began about 90 minutes later.

Carlos, a 33-year-old Venezuelan whose real name is Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, last month sent a letter containing his two thumb prints to French diplomats at the Hague, Netherlands, threatening to "attack France directly" unless the pair was released within 30 days. The deadline passed early this month.

Farmers embracing Block's acreage reduction proposal

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers have signed up to reduce 1982 crop plantings on about twice as much acreage as Agriculture Secretary John R. Block predicted when he announced the program last winter.

According to preliminary final figures, farmers have enrolled 179.4 million acres in the acreage-reduction program, which is 79.3 percent of the nation's base acreage of feed grain, rice, upland cotton and rice, he said Tuesday.

That compared with 130 million acres enrolled in the program last week. The latest figures were as of April 16, the final day of the sign-up.

However, Block said many farmers waited until the last minute to sign up, making it impossible to process all forms by the deadline.

Block said those late-signers will officially sign up this week and next, which will affect the final enrollment figures.

"I'm very pleased with these sign-up figures," Block said. "This voluntary action by our nation's farmers should illustrate that they are not willing to remain victims of our current economic situation. Instead, they are moving forward on their own to turn the situation around."

Although Block referred to the "voluntary action" by farmers in signing up in the programs, in effect they were required to do so in order to be eligible for price supports and related benefits on 1982 crops of feed grain, rice, upland cotton and wheat.

Block's announcement also skirted what he meant by "the current economic situation" for farmers, namely the third year in row that net farm income has declined, according to current USDA assessments.

Final sign-up figures will be announced in about two weeks.

Farmers who enroll in the acreage program agree to reduce plantings of feed grains — corn, barley, oats and sorghum — by 10 percent and the other crops by 15 percent.

However, signing up does not bind farmers to the acreage-reduction program. They still have some time — depending on the crop and the region — before certifying compliance.

The compliance in the acreage program, when available, will be a more accurate indicator of how many acres farmers will have for the 1982 harvest.

Later, in a meeting with reporters, Block said final compliance in the program will be dictated by weather and market prices in the next month or so.

"If prices are not wildly bullish, I look for strong compliance," Block said.

Last winter, when the acreage program was announced, Block predicted farmers would sign up around 40 percent of their base acreage. As it turned out, they signed up about 80 percent of the national base.

Asked to predict a final compliance figure, Block said that could be "in excess of 50 percent" of the total base acreage for the 1982 crops, with compliance higher for rice and cotton than for wheat and feed grains.

Several months ago, Block said he thought a 40 percent sign-up would mean farmers' grain prices might be 10 to 20 cents a bushel higher than they otherwise would be. He declined to make a new prediction until final compliance figures are ready.

Man faces perjury rap in Wood case

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The younger brother of reputed New Orleans crime boss Carlos Marcello has been accused of twice lying to grand jurors who investigated the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Joseph Paul Marcello Jr. was accused in the indictment unsealed Wednesday of lying to the grand jury on June 30, 1980, when asked about a conversation between him and Carlos Marcello in which Wood's slaying allegedly was mentioned.

Joseph Marcello surrendered to federal marshals in New Orleans Wednesday and posted a $50,000 bond. U.S. Magistrate Ingard O. Johannesen scheduled an April 30 hearing in New Orleans to determine if Marcello would have to come to San Antonio to answer the perjury charges.

The indictment alleges Joseph Marcello lied when he said he did not remember a Jan. 23, 1980, conversation with his brother which the FBI taped as part of the Louisiana Briab investigation.

Portions of the tape were played for Joseph Marcello during the grand jury appearance here, according to New Orleans attorney Russell Schonekas, who accompanied the witness to San Antonio.

Schonekas said Joseph Marcello had been contacted by someone in Las Vegas, Nev., to possibly post bond for two or three of 17 men charged at Hammond, La. Federal narcotics agents had seized a private airplane carrying 8,000 pounds of marijuana and 200,000 Quaaludes worth a total of $4 million at Hammond as part of a narcotics crackdown known as "Operation Stingwing."

"These are the people that (are) connected with the killing of the judge in El Paso. The judge is dead. This was their three people," one of the voices on the tape said, according to the perjury indictment. Wood actually was killed in San Antonio.

The first count charges that Joseph Marcello lied when he told the grand jury that he did not recognize the voices or remember the conversation on the FBI tape recording. The second count alleges when he lied when he was asked by a prosecutor: "Who told you that these people were connected with the killing of the judge?"

"I don't remember anybody," Joseph Marcello replied.

Schonekas told reporters that the two Marcellos decided not to arrange bond for the narcotics suspects in Louisiana and that the two then forgot about the conversation. The lawyer said at the time of Marcello's appearance that the grand jurors were satisfied that the witness did not know anything about Wood's death.

After a nearly three-year investigation, a federal grand jury last week indicted Jimmy Chagra, Joseph Chagra and Elizabeth Chagra, all of El Paso, and convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson and his wife Jo Ann, of Dallas, in connection with Wood's murder on May 29, 1979.

Jimmy Chagra was charged with paying Harrelson $250,000 to kill Wood to prevent the judge from presiding at Chagra's narcotics trial.

The Chagras and Harrelson were charged with conspiracy to murder a federal judge and all five were charged with obstructing justice.

Dealer indicted for possessing whale teeth

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a local arts and antiques dealer on charges he received and offered to sell the teeth of sperm whales, an endangered species.

Charged with nine separate counts in the indictment returned Tuesday was L. Robert Gordon, 58, who was freed on a personal recognizance bond after appearing before U.S. Magistrate Robert O'Connor.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Joseph Casseb said federal agents seized 90 sperm whale teeth and four whale bones worth an estimated $50,000 from Gordon's house last February.

Casseb said it was the first whale teeth case in San Antonio and one of the few ever filed in the United States.

"Many of the teeth are more than 100 years old," Casseb said, exhibiting some dated 1863 and 1859. Most of the teeth were adorned with scrimshaw or carved decorations of whaling vessels, whales and verses.

"Most of the artwork was probably done in New England by whalers," the prosecutor said, although Gordon allegedly obtained the teeth from California.

Each tooth was priced at from $75 to $2,000, Casseb said.

The National Marine Fisheries Service said the investigation began in California and is continuing.

Sun's energy output dips; effect on weather studied

By ROBERT FLOCKE
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Nature's icy fury had America shivering through a winter of severe cold snaps and vicious blizzards that scientists had foreseen and couldn't explain. Now a physicist says the sun may be to blame.

And, said Richard C. Willson of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, more cold weather may be ahead.

The flow of energy the sun, the ultimate source of warmth, sends earthward was slightly reduced, and although the reduction was small, it lasted for 18 months, Willson said Tuesday.

He said a solar satellite's measurements found the sun's energy output was down one-tenth of 1 percent from February 1980 to August 1981. By the time the most recent readings were obtained at the end of last year, he said, output was rising but was still short of normal.

The slight solar cooling could represent nothing more than a temporary change or a previously unnoticed part of the normal solar cycle. Or, Willson said, it may be the beginning of a long-term trend that could end with a new ice age in several thousand years.

The small change, "has great potential significance" and is likely to have contributed heavily to the winter's bitter weather, he said.

If so, it would be "the first direct observation of the cause-and-effect relationship between variability in the sun's energy output and changes in Earth's weather and climate," he said.

Willson said the sun "is the real driving force" behind the climate and scientists are "abysmally ignorant" about its behavior.

Scientists believe a 1 percent dip in solar output could drop the average global temperature by more than 2 degrees, Willson said.

Colorado City sewer plant

COLORADO CITY (SC) — The Colorado City Council met Tuesday night and began what is expected to be a long and costly process to bring the local sewage treatment plant up to state standards by giving its authorization for several recommendations by the Water Resource Board of Austin.

Interim measures to be taken include preparing specification for chlorination, reconstruction work, cleaning the digester and the purchasing of some tanks.

City Manager Rick Crowley pointed out, "The board looks at the population growth and history of the area to determine specifications for each plant. Due to some fluctuation our situation is difficult to determine; however, by the year 2006 our population is estimated to be 5,813, so our plans will be based on that figure.

In other business Robert Hoback was appointed to the Mitchell County ambulance committee and appointed to serve on the Housing Standards Commission were Virgil Sonté, Joe Weaver, Henry Bilberry and B.B. Hardee and Councilman Julian Mendoza.

Hunt files $14,744 suit

A Big Spring man is suing Paragon Energy Inc. for not paying him for services he allegedly performed for the company in March of 1982. Charlie Hunt is seeking $14,744.76 from the company in the suit filed in 118th District Court.

The suit, filed by Hunt's attorney Robert D. Miller of Big Spring, also requests a lien be placed against the company's property in order to ensure he receives his money.

A personal injury suit filed by Kent Walker is seeking loss of earnings and other damages from James William Hoard and Jo William. The suit states that, on July 24, 1981, Hoard was in collision with a vehicle driven by Walker on Texas Highway 350. The suit alleges Hoard, who was working for William, was negligent in his operation of his vehicle, causing serious injuries to Walker.

The suit, filed by Midland Attorney Allen R. McFall, asks for a trial by jury to recover appropriate damages from the Forsan residents.

Farm bureaus support depressed income plan

WACO — Farm Bureaus across the nation are supporting a comprehensive 12-point program designed to improve depressed farm income, according to Carrol Chaloupka, Dalhart, president of the Texas Farm Bureau.

Chaloupka, a grain and beef cattle producer, is a member of the American Farm Bureau Federation board of directors which has adopted the plan calling for action on the immediate, short-term, and long-term fronts.

"Our main problem is that we have over-expanded our agricultural production plant compared to demand," Chaloupka said. "This came about partly because of federal farm and credit programs which have stimulated too much production. In addition, federal budget cuts are hurting at a time when farm prices and income are down."

Immediate actions needed, Chaloupka said, include the following:

- Implementation of the Economic Recovery Program. Farmers and ranchers are already feeling some of the benefits of reduced inflationary pressures, Chaloupka said.
- The farm leader said that the projected federal deficit of $92 billion "cannot be accepted." He called for reducing this deficit to $50 billion through cuts in entitlement programs and a moratorium on all cost of living adjustments in federal spending programs.
- Passage of legislation which guarantees that grain purchased by foreign buyers scheduled for delivery within 120 days will not be embargoed for any reason short of war. Chaloupka said this would strengthen foreign confidence in the U.S. as a reliable supplier of grain.
- Immediate funding of the Commodity Credit Corp. export revolving fund. This fund has been authorized, but no money earmarked. Chaloupka said this would help U.S. grain compete in world markets.
- Allocate a "fair share" of Export-Import Bank financing for agricultural exports.

- Farmers should be encouraged to properly use storage as an essential tool for profitable marketing. However, because of the current glut, additional production and long-term storage should not be encouraged, Chaloupka said.
- Inform farmers and ranchers of severe economic adjustments which will be needed if production continues to expand beyond demand.
- Control costs at the farm level.
- The Farm Bureau program contains two short-term actions, Chaloupka said:
- Encourage the secretary of agriculture to change the wheat and feed grain set aside program to include a cash incentive to participate. The objective is to encourage enough producer participation to reduce production and stocks, Chaloupka said.
- The farmer-held reserve must be an orderly marketing tool, as originally intended, and not a quasi-government storage program to limit market price opportunities for farmers, the farm leader said.

THE GOVERNOR'S Conference and Opportunity Fair for Minority and Women-Owned Businesses in Texas is scheduled in Austin for May 20-21. It is called Alliance '82. The Opportunity Fair is an opportunity for business people to meet buyers from Texas' largest corporations. It provides the setting for qualified minority and women vendors to make personal marketing calls at booths manned by corporate purchasing representatives.

For the vendor with limited corporate contacts, limited time or little or no sales force, the Opportunity Fair is the unique one-to-one format that helps establish buyer-seller relationships. Participants will also be able to reach a better understanding of how minority and women vendors can meet the needs of prospective corporate purchasers and what products or services are in demand.

The Conference has the following workshop session topics: Financial Planning, Marketing Strategies, Tax and Legal Aspects, How to Raise High-Risk Venture Capital, Creativity and the Entrepreneur, and Surviving Success by Management of Your Growth.

This is an opportunity minority and women business owners can't afford to miss. The cost of the conference and fair is $95. Those who fly to Austin for the conference on Southwest Airlines will receive a free return ticket home. Call me if you would like more information and registration forms for Alliance '82.

Spotlight has recently focused on the Texas Refinery Corporation in Fort Worth because of its unique sales force. One of the top salesmen is Mack McGuire, who is 70 years old. Al Cornelius, who averages $60,000 a year, is 74. "Rookie of the Year for 1981" was earned by 74-year-old Robert Stacey. TRC is so happy with its program of hiring retirees that people in their late 60s, 70s, and 80s make up 20 percent of its 4000 member sales force. The program was not designed to aid the elderly. It was designed to help the company assemble a cadre of highly experienced, dedicated workers.

BECAUSE OUR AREA is so dependent on the agricultural economy, we should be interested in what will be happening on the farm before the end of this decade. Harvard biologist, Dr. Frederick Ausubel, says we can expect a revolution in which the plants — not the farming methods — will be different. The farmers will grow plants without fertilizer or pesticides because chemical protections will be built into the new plants so they will be self-protective, building their own pesticides and fertilizers.

The much touted agricultural advances of the 60s failed because they were based on chemical engineering. In the new revolution, it will be based on genetic engineering.

One salesgirl in a candy store always had customers lined up waiting while other salespeople stood around with nothing to do. The owner of the store noted her popularity and asked for her secret. "It's easy," she said. "The other clerks scoop up more than a pound of candy and then start taking away. I always scoop up less than a pound and then add to it."

To all secretaries: THANK YOU!

AN ESTIMATED 230 million people are now living in the United States. This is based on 3.6 million births, 2 million deaths and a migration of 504,000 people during 1981. It does not include members of the armed forces or federal employees stationed abroad.

Chicken Tetrizzini was named for a singer

In the 1900s, Luisa Tetrizzini was considered the greatest soprano of her time. No wonder then that the chief of San Francisco's Palace Hotel — according to culinary legend — created a dish in her honor. Since that time Chicken Tetrizzini, as the dish was called, has become part of American's cuisine and there are many versions of it.

A successful version can be made ahead in part, then the whole dish quickly put together just before serving. This way the chicken and pasta that are the base of the dish have plenty of sauce.

Enjoy the Chicken A La Tetrizzini and the pourrri of recipes below.

CHICKEN A LA TETRAZZINI
4 tablespoons butter
1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced
4 tablespoons all-purpose flour
Two 1-pint containers half-and-half (4 cups)
1/4 cup medium sherry
3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 1/2 cups cut-up (about 1 inch long and 1/2 inch wide) cooked chicken
Salt and white pepper to taste
8-ounce package thin

spaghetti
In a medium-size non-corrosive saucepan melt the butter; add the mushrooms and cook briskly, stirring often, until wilted — about 5 minutes; some liquid may exude. Stir in the flour. Off heat, gradually stir in the half-and-half, keeping smooth. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and bubbling — sauce will be on the thin side. Off heat, stir in the sherry, 1/4 cup of the Parmesan, the chicken and the salt and pepper. If using at once, keep hot over low heat. If making ahead, cool, stirring occasionally; cover and refrigerate for 6 to 12 hours.

At serving time, in a large saucepot cook the spaghetti according to package directions. Turn into a colander to drain well; spread in a shallow 3-quart broiler-proof dish or pan. If the chicken sauce has been refrigerated, have it very hot; at once pour over the hot drained spaghetti and mix with a kitchen fork; sprinkle with the remaining Parmesan.
Broil about 6 to 8 inches from high heat until Parmesan browns — a matter of minutes.

Makes 6 servings.
SWEET POTATO PUFFS
2 lb. sweet potatoes or yams
1/4 cup hot milk, orange juice or pineapple juice
2 Tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
Dash of pepper
1 can (20 oz.) pineapple slices, drained
Cook potatoes in salted boiling water until tender; peel and mash. Add milk, butter, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg and pepper; beat until creamy and well blended. Place pineapple slices in single layer in shallow baking pan. Spoon, or pipe (use pastry bag with a large star tip) potato mixture into mounds on top of each pineapple slice; brush potato mixture and pineapple with additional melted butter. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 25 minutes or until lightly browned.

Makes 10 servings.
VARIATION: Substitute 1 can (40 oz.) sweet potatoes in syrup, drained, for fresh sweet potatoes. Do not cook; mash and proceed as recipe directs.

RED VELVET CAKE
1/2 cup shortening
1 1/2 cups sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon butter flavoring
1 ounce red food coloring coloring
3 Tablespoons (level) cocoa
2 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
1 cup buttermilk
1 Tablespoon vinegar
Cream shortening, add sugar gradually and cream until light and fluffy. Add eggs one at a time, beating vigorously after each addition. Add flavors. Make a paste of cocoa and food coloring and blend in. Sift dry ingredients together and add alternately with buttermilk. Add vinegar with last half of buttermilk. Beat only until smooth. Bake in 3 greased and floured 8-inch or 9-inch pans for 20-25 minutes at 350 degrees, or until cake tester comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes, remove from pans and cool completely.

NO COOK ICING
1 pound confectioners sugar (sifted)
1/2 cup shortening
1 Tablespoon vanilla
1/4 teaspoon butter flavoring
1/2 teaspoon salt
5 Tablespoons milk (approximately)
Sift confectioner sugar. Blend well about 1/2 the sugar with shortening, flavors and salt. Alternately add rest of sugar and enough milk to get a smooth spreading icing.
NEW TOMATO ASPIC
Be forewarned — this has peppery flavor.
3/4 cup tomato juice
1/4 cup water
Two 6-ounce cans (each 3/4 cup) spicy-hot cocktail vegetable juice
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
Lettuce and mayonnaise
Into a medium bowl pour the tomato juice, then the water; sprinkle with the gelatin and let soften — a matter of minutes. Heat the vegetable juice until it begins to boil; add to the gelatin mixture and stir until the gelatin dissolves. Pour into six 1/2-cup molds or 6-ounce custard cups. Chill to set. cover. At serving time, unmold and garnish with the lettuce and mayonnaise.
Makes 6 servings.
