Mandate: keep kids out of jail

Will Big Spring comply?

By BILLELDER
Staff Writer

By 1985, one characteristic of juvenile justice in this country may be substantially changed: the practice of locking up juveniles in adult jails. Federal legislation passed in 1980 called for a five-year schedule in implementing a policy of keeping juveniles out of adult jails. The change is meant to be a sweeping one: the removal of juveniles from adult jails is something Congress apparently would like to see in just about every jail in America.

The catch, however, is this: cities and counties don't have to comply with the mandate if they don't want to receive any of the grant money which Uncle Sam hands out under the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act.

Big Spring and Howard County don't receive any funds under this act, so neither government faces a funding loss if it decides not to comply with the mandate. Local governments would, however, be unable to apply for any of the funds after 1985 if juveniles are still detained in the city and county jails.

This fiscal year, Texas is getting $4 million under the act, of which about $60,000 is earmarked for juvenile justice programs in Permian Basin communities, according to Jim Kester, a juvenile specialist in the governor's office. The amount of funds disbursed under the JJDP act has been dwindling, Kester noted, a victim of the budget-slashing under Ronald Reagan.

"We've got a mandate to get the job done — but not the funds to do it with," Kester said. Even so, the money remains available for communities such as Big Spring, who would receive the funds after a determination as to whether the community's proposed juvenile programs are high-priority projects, Kester said.

If Big Spring and Howard County pursue the funding, the two governments may first want to explore two questions: Why are separate detention facilities for juveniles and adults desirable? And where are the county's alleged delinquents to be held, if not in the police station and courthouse jails?

JAILING JUVENILES with adults is an undesirable practice, according to a 1980 report issued by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention inside the U.S. Department of Justice, for four reasons:

- It tends to place a stigma of criminality on youthful offenders, who may have done nothing worse than skip school too often or run away from home.
- It fosters a harmful self-image in the child's mind and "may be a contributing factor to continued delinquent activity," according to the OJJDP report.
- It is contrary to several decades of creating a separate system of justice for juveniles in the United States.
- The occurrence of physical harm and sexual abuse of juveniles by adults "is well documented and greatly increased" within the confines of adult jails, the report claimed.

TEXAS, ALONG WITH other states, years ago took steps which philosophically paved the way for what Congress is seeking now, when state lawmakers allowed juveniles to be held in adult jails but only if there is no contact between adults and juveniles. Inspecting the jails and certifying them for compliance with the no-contact provision of the law became, in Texas, the responsibility of local authorities (the juvenile boards or juvenile courts).

Establishing separate cells for juveniles, though, doesn't go far enough under the new federal mandate; "total removal of juveniles from adult jails" is called for, Kester pointed out. What, then, can a community such as Big Spring do as an alternative, if it chooses to comply?

"The quickest way to do that," Kester said, "would be

SCENE OF THE PAST? — Someday the jailing of most juveniles may become a thing of the past, as federal mandates and alternatives to incarceration take effect.

The decision, however, will remain a local one, as each community's leaders explore the alternatives and the means of funding available.

British troops reinforce control of S. Georgia Island

By The Associated Press

Britain said its forces extended their control of remote, barren South Georgia Island today but indicated some of the Argentine garrison escaped the initial battle and were still fighting.

The British Defense Ministry said following the capture Sunday of Grytviken, South Georgia's chief harbor, "British forces are now in control of Leith. There are no reports of any casualties at Leith."

A spokesman for the ministry declined to elaborate, but the reference to casualties indicated there may have been fighting.

Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, said a government source described the action at Leith, another harbor about 15 miles north of Grytviken, as a "mopping-up operation." The agency said, "It is believed fighting took place."

The earlier British announcement of the recapture of Grytviken Sunday said the small Argentine garrison surrendered, and British helicopter-gunships badly damaged one of Argentina's four submarines.

The Argentine government disputed that British claim, reporting late Sunday night that its forces had "fallen back" and "continue to fight in interior zones" of the icy, 120-mile-long South Atlantic island 1,140 miles to the east of Cape Horn. But it said communications with the garrison had been cut "for tactical reasons."

Argentine military sources, who asked not to be identified, said there were about 130 troops on the island and they destroyed the principal port installations before splitting into three groups and retreating.

The British Defense Ministry said the Argentines put up "only limited resistance" to the assault Sunday and there was only one serious casualty, an Argentine seaman who suffered leg injuries in the attack on the sub.

It said the sub, the Santa Fe, was "smoking, listing heavily, leaking oil and possibly aground."

The initial military success cheered the British public and gave Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher a political boost. It also gave the British war fleet nearing the Falkland Islands, 800 miles to the west, a harbor out of range of the Argentine air force.

The attack on South Georgia, which Argentine forces seized from a 22-man British garrison the day after they invaded the Falklands, was intended as a demonstration of British determination that Mrs. Thatcher's government hoped would impel the Argentines to compromise.

Instead Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez called off a meeting with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in Washington and said negotiations with Britain were suspended "for the time being."

Argentine sovereignty over the Falklands and South Georgia "will not be negotiated nor will national dignity be violated under any concept," Argentina's ruling military junta said in its communique Sunday night.

Costa Mendez prepared to ask the Organization of American States for support at a meeting today. But it was not clear early today whether Argentina would ask for hemispheric sanctions against Britain under the 1947 Rio Treaty.

Two influential members of the U.S. Senate, Armed Services Committee Chairman John Tower, R-Texas, and Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said they believed the United States would have to support Britain in a showdown.

The next British move was expected to be an attempt to enforce an air blockade on the Falklands to cut off the aerial supply and reinforcement of the 9,000-man Argentine garrison there. At least four British submarines have been enforcing a sea blockade around the islands since April 12, and the 31-ship Argentine navy has not challenged it.

There have also been predictions the British would put commando teams ashore in the Falklands for sabotage missions. But military experts in London said a troop landing in force was not likely until the 1,500 Royal Marines with the fleet are reinforced in the next week or so by some 2,500 marines and paratroopers aboard a backup task force.

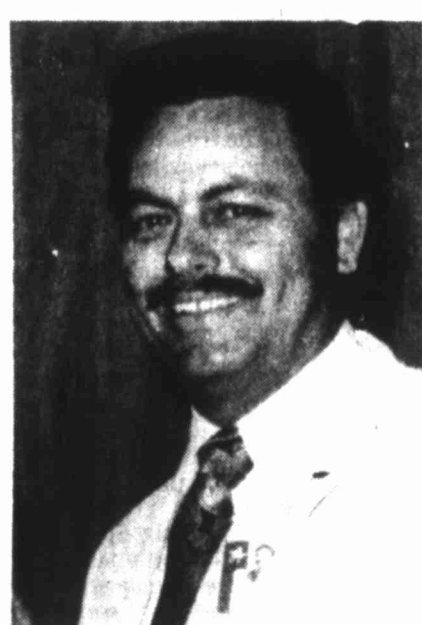

South Georgia, inhabited only by seals and a few scientists of the British Antarctic Survey, is a Falklands dependency that was under British colonial administration until Argentina seized it April 3.

The Herald has given questionnaires to each of the three candidates seeking the justice of the peace, precinct one, place two, position. The purpose of the questionnaire is to give voters more information with which to compare candidates.

The candidates are Linda Arsiaga, Bob C. Smith and the incumbent, Lewis Heflin.

This race will be on ballots in voter precincts 1, 2, 3, 4, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 22.

The candidates were asked to limit their answers to 50 words or less. The answers are being printed exactly as received, including grammatical errors.

The Herald also asked for biographical information from the candidates, which can be found at the end of each person's answers.

Lewis Heflin

See Heflin, page 2-A

Linda Arsiaga

1. Why would you be the best person for this position?
I feel that I am able to do a good job for the people in Howard County. Bob C. Smith

1. Why would you be the best person for this position?
My overall background, education, military service, law enforcement experience, success in business and community leadership, makes me the best person for the office of peace justice.

2. Where should the majority of a peace justice's time be devoted?
The majority of the J.P.'s time should be spent as a public servant on a full time basis. No one part of the duties should take precedent over the other as all the duties are laid-out and should be completed as necessity requires. Hot checks are a problem in Howard County.

3. Do you think a person should be able to post bond before charges are filed? Explain.

If a legal arrest is made, any person is entitled to make bond. Upon arraignment before the magistrate, bond should be allowed whether or not former charges have been filed. In setting bonds the only purpose is to assure one's appearance in court, not as a punishment.

4. What do you see as the major issue facing a peace justice in Howard County?

Consistency in dealing out fair and equitable justice, be it a bond, fine, or issuing warrants. The peace justice should listen carefully to both sides of a case, weighing all evidence before making any decision. The dignity of the court should always be above reproach.

to take the juveniles over to Midland and Odessa, and contract with their juvenile detention centers to hold Howard County juveniles." Big Spring and Howard County possibly would be reimbursed for the contracts with the two detention centers by receiving federal Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act funds, according to Kester, who added that such a program might be construed as a high-priority project and therefore would have a good chance of getting the funds.

This may sound good on paper but, as officials in Midland and Odessa point out, any offering of their juvenile detention services probably can't be made on anything other than a space-available basis, since Ector County and Midland County juveniles will be their first priorities. And right now, space doesn't appear to be greatly available.

"We're overflowing. We don't have the room," said Danny Vandenberg, director of the 20-bed Ector County Youth Center. Detention of juveniles is "up drastically" in boom-town Odessa, with 1,158 juveniles detained by the center in 1981, Vandenberg said.

Next door in Midland County, space is equally tight at the county's 10-bed juvenile facility, according to Lorraine Miles, the Midland County juvenile probation officer.

but, as Martin noted, school counselors tend to be geared toward helping the child advance to the next grade rather than toward helping the child overcome his social adjustment problems.

Even so, school counselors offer an ear to the child and, if they can, try to steer the child toward professional help.

"We check with the parents," Martin said. "If we find that the child's needs aren't being satisfied, we ask if they want us to help. First, though, we suggest that they act. But if they say, 'Why should we? It's the kid's fault,' then we ask if they would object to our helping the child. If they do object, we stop."

If they don't object, Martin tries to find somebody equipped to help — often a family counselor with the state hospital's outreach service. There's not, he suggested, a wide range of help available locally.

"I think a real effective program centered on the county juvenile probation office would be the best thing we can offer, using the schools as a cooperative arm," Martin said.

Another person who tries to help at the formative stages of delinquency is the police juvenile officer, currently Pat Dunham. She's the one who makes the initial decisions that determine a troubled child's fate. She can talk with the child and his parents and suggest that they pursue certain steps to work out their problem, or she can refer the case to the county juvenile probation officer. The juvenile probation officer, like the police juvenile officer, has the same choice: counsel the family and suggest voluntary action, or refer the case to a juvenile judge. The options for handling an arrested juvenile dwindle as they approach the bench; by the time a case is in the judge's hands, unless he dismisses the case, he can only put the child on probation or commit him to the state correctional system for juveniles.

A few years ago, the Big Spring police force had a separate juvenile section within its detective division; today, just one detective is responsible for juveniles, and even that isn't a full-time responsibility, since Ms. Dunham also is responsible for investigating sex crimes as well as other types of crime.

Three or four officers made up the former juvenile section, which got reduced to one person after funding ran out, according to Capt. Sherrill Farmer.

"We're still gonna work the crime no matter what," Farmer explained, "but the part that suffers is the counseling and the prevention programs."

If she could devote her full time to juveniles, Ms. Dunham said, she would beef up two areas of juvenile work: spending more time on the streets checking up on possible truanties, and making more visits to the schools for talks. Last year, she said, she made a total of two visits to local elementary schools, handing out anti-crime coloring books and letting the children play with handcuffs and romp inside a patrol car. The value of such visits consists of demystifying the police as well as dispensing crucial tips on everything from today's bicycle safety problem to tomorrow's possible drug abuse problem.

She doesn't even hit the high school, since the "reception hasn't been that great. When they get to that age, they often don't want to sit and listen."

IF THEY WOULD just sit and listen more, said one person concerned with juvenile delinquency, then there wouldn't be such a teen crime problem. According to David Barr, a Vincent cotton farmer and member of the county juvenile board, "We have all these man-made laws and they just don't work." The root of the problem, Barr said, is a lack of moral education — the kids just don't have any respect for authority anymore, don't have any decent, traditional values. And that's because the parents don't care to instill those qualities.

"If the parents would just take their children to Sunday school and make them learn God's laws rather than Man's laws, then we wouldn't even need a juvenile officer," Barr proclaimed. "My mother and daddy made me go. I didn't want to, but I did."

Barr has only one child, a son, but the younger Barr won't be the sort of kid found busting into soda-pop machines at the tender age of 13, his father said.

"He's only ten years old — but he'll know right from wrong," Barr vowed.

Barr concluded an interview by sounding an ominous note, a note perhaps familiar to authorities around the country who are coming to grips with today's juvenile delinquent — with that kid down on the corner drinking beer at the arcade and feeding quarters to Pac-man all day long, who may be planning to go out and raise hell tonight and knows nobody will stop him.

"It's gonna get worse, if people don't wake up and see what they've got to do," Barr warned. "They've got to teach children right from wrong. If all the kids obeyed the Ten Commandments, we wouldn't have all the troubles we have. And when you get right down to it, what are we gonna do when THIS generation has kids? I don't know. I wish somebody did."

No tricks up their sleeves

FORT CARSON, Colo. (AP) — When the day comes for Fort Carson's 20,500 troops to roll up their sleeves, they'll be ready.

Maj. Gen. John W. Hudachek, the base commander, is leaving nothing to chance on that front. He has approved a "sleeves up" posture for camouflaged combat fatigues, beginning May 3.

He outlined how to do that in a recent edition of the base's weekly newspaper:

"Step one — Pull the cuff of the sleeve all the way up to the armpit so that the sleeve is folded on itself with the inside showing.

"Step two — Make two folds up toward the armpit.

"Step three — Fold the cuff down over the folds you just made. The buttons and cuff flap should be showing."

This official method will ensure that sleeves can be unrolled quickly and keep the camouflage pattern exposed at all times.

What has four legs, sings?

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — More than 4,500 college students proved that breaking a world record — not once but twice — can be child's play.

The 4,514 players Sunday in the World's Largest Musical Chairs Game broke the previous mark recorded in the Guinness Book of World Records.

The standing record also was set on the campus oval of Ohio State University. That record was with 4,378 participants April 27, 1980.

Scott Ritter, 18, a business major, was the last person to keep a seat Sunday. He won a 6-foot trophy with a chair on top and a pizza a week for a year.

Student players turned out with Frisbees and beach towels to warm up for the event under sunny skies and temperatures in the 70s. Soundspeakers played taped rock music.

Spree of tire slashings

The slasher was out this weekend, with at least five incidents of tire slashing reported to police Saturday and Sunday.

The worst hit was Dan Larimer of 1601 Lark, while his vehicle was parked in the parking lot of Cactus Jacks in the industrial park.

Larimer told police that while he was inside the club Sunday someone cut all four tires on his vehicle. He attempted to drive home, but stopped and parked in the parking lot at the nearby Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf. He estimated damage of $270.

Harold Bentley of 3200 Cornell and John Ferguson of 904 Baylor complained to police that unknown persons damaged a total of four tires on their vehicles Saturday night. L.E. Burks, 3201 Auburn, also reported to police one tire on his vehicle had been damaged with a sharp object Saturday night.

J.W. Heidelberg of Stanton told police the cushion on a forklift had been damaged with a sharp object while the machine was parked west of Bowl-A-Rama on Interstate 20 Saturday. The air in the left tires was also let out, Heidelberg said. He estimated damage at $75.

David Wood of 3207 Auburn complained to police that two tires, valued at $160, had been damaged on a van while parked at his residence. He reported seeing two males running from the van and then discovered the damage.

A male juvenile was apprehended at Gibson's Discount Store in the 2300 block of Scurry when a store employee saw him allegedly place a $4.99 toy into his pants without paying for it Saturday.

Kenneth Matthew of 1305 Mobile told police that between Tuesday and Saturday someone took a lawn mower valued at $150 from his residence.

Kenneth Geer of 1006 W. Sixth reported to police that unknown persons took his four-month-old male puppy from his front yard. Geer told police the chain had been undone and the dog taken.

A wallet and other personal items valued at $150 were stolen from Randy Teague while he was at the Wyoming Hotel, according to police reports. Teague told police someone he knows entered his room and took the items. Other tenants observed the alleged theft and pursued the suspect, who was captured by a Howard County sheriff's deputy.

$25,000-income family faces taxes of $7,000

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A hypothetical family of four with an income of $25,000 faces a federal tax bill of almost $7,000 for the current fiscal year, a new study shows.

The figures come from the Tax Foundation Inc., a non-profit research group in Washington, D.C., which keeps track of the taxes Americans pay.

Foundation economists regularly look at the federal budget and calculate how the government spends an individual taxpayer's dollars, using a hypothetical family with one working spouse, two children and an annual income near the median for all U.S. families.

There are lots of numbers involved, but it's worthwhile to learn where your money goes.

For the latest study, the economists used a family with an annual income of $25,000. They found that such a family would have a federal tax bill of $6,916 for fiscal 1982 — the year that began last Oct. 1. Federal income taxes would account for $2,771 of the tax bill, Social Security would account for $1,675 and indirect taxes like excise levies and corporate income taxes would add up to $2,470.

Five years ago, the economists used a family with an income of $15,000 and found that such a family had a federal tax bill of $3,975. Federal income taxes accounted for $1,459; Social Security taxes for $878; and indirect taxes for $1,635.

In 1977, the federal tax bill equaled 26½ percent of the family's income; by 1982, the federal bite had risen to about 28 percent.

Rep. Martin's cousin talks about shooting

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — The shooting of former State Rep. Mike Martin was a hit and miss proposition with more amiss than not, says the man who claims to have fired the shot.

Charles Goff says he shot his cousin as part of a cut-rate plot to draw the sympathy vote for the Longview Republican's anticipated state senate race.

But Goff told The Dallas Morning News that the bungled cover-up soon brought investigators to his door.

In a plea bargain, Martin pleaded guilty last week to misdemeanor perjury, paid a $2,000 fine, resigned his legislative seat and agreed to give up the chance to return to it next session.

He had been charged with aggravated perjury for allegedly lying to a Travis County grand jury when he said he did not stage the July shooting that left him with a slight arm wound. However, the felony charge was dropped as part of the agreement.

Martin still denies orchestrating the shooting, and he calls his cousin "a vagabond and a liar."

But Goff says he agreed to shoot Martin because the freshman legislator had promised him a $30,000-a-year state job as his bodyguard.

"I figured if he was dumb enough to want himself shot, I was dumb enough to do it," Goff said.

Goff said Martin first told him a senator had put out a contract on him because the legislator "had been investigating some kind of bid and he had uncovered that the state had paid out a larger sum than was bid."

The "controlled hit" was designed to make the senator forget about the contract and to gain Martin "a lot of sympathy when he decided to run for senator," Goff said.

Martin gave him $400 to buy a 12-gauge shotgun and .00 buckshot in Marshall, Goff said.

He said he practiced firing the gun at his brother's home, but neglected to pick up all the used shells, which investigators later discovered.

Goff said the day before the shooting he picked up a rental car Martin had arranged to have left at a Longview church parking lot.

Lying to the grand jury about the car was what Martin pleaded guilty to last week. Martin still maintains he misunderstood the question the grand jurors were asking him.

Goff said he used his own name when he checked into an Austin motel, and police later found the name on the register.

The cousins met in a supermarket parking lot, he said, where they signified their readiness by shaking hands through the car windows. Two street sweeper operators, however, witnessed the meeting and later described it to authorities.

Goff said he arrived at the mobile home shortly before Martin, "drew up and got ready. Mike pulled in. I stuck the gun out the window." But twice they saw vehicles approaching and were forced to drive away and circle back, he said.

"Mike pulled in again. It seemed like hours before he got out of the car. He smiled and nodded his head. He then knelt down at the rear of the car and held his arm up. I checked to make sure there wasn't any lights. I then aimed at him and began firing," Goff said.

Although Goff said he had test-fired the gun to make sure the shells would stay inside the car, he leaned too far out the window and the shells flew into the road, where police found them.

Goff said he later made threatening phone calls to Martin's friends to support the legislator's story that he had been the victim of an attack by a satanist cult.

One of the calls was tape-recorded by police, however, and Goff's voice was recognized.

He was picked up and questioned, but on instructions from Martin, he said, he lied to investigators. But when he was questioned again four days later, he said he confessed

Nuclear device tested

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The United States tested a nuclear device 1,890 feet below Pahute Mesa for the British government, the Department of Energy said.

David Miller, a spokesman for the department, said the device was tested Sunday as part of an agreement between the United States and Britain, and had a yield of between 20 and 150 kilotons. A kiloton is the equivalent of 1,000 tons of dynamite.

It was the 14th joint test between the two nations since 1962, Miller said.

Congressman shot

CENTREVILLE, Va. (AP) — A congressman was hospitalized for minor injuries suffered at a shooting range when both his wife and son accidentally shot him, police said.

Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., was wounded in the right hand and abdomen Sunday when the shotgun of his son Michael accidentally discharged while he was loading it on a skeet range, police said.

After the first blast, Derwinski's wife, Patricia, dropped her shotgun, causing it to discharge and hit the congressman in his left hand and left side, said Sgt. Steve Craven.

Police said the wound to Derwinski, 51, was not life threatening. His son received powder burns to the face and was treated and released at a local hospital.

Plane crash kills 4

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Civil Air Patrol searchers have found four bodies in the wreckage of a light plane missing since Friday on a flight from Riverside, Calif., to Nacogdoches, Texas.

The Mooney 231 was spotted Sunday in the Guadalupe Mountains of southeast New Mexico, said 2nd Lt. Emily Buch, information officer for the New Mexico Civil Air Patrol.

The dead were identified as Kenneth Zimmerman, his wife, Glynne, and Bob Stretter, all of Riverside; and Aubrey Kinzer of Loma Linda, Calif., she said.

Party ends in arrests

BOSTON (AP) — A sound man for a rock band was charged with inciting a riot and 51 people were arrested when police trying to break up an unruly block party near Boston University were greeted with a shower of rocks and bottles.

The band, the Stompers, was playing Saturday for a crowd of 700 at the block party in Brookline when police were called in to reduce the noise, police said.

Kevin Marshall, 25, of Dover, N.H., the sound man, was released on $1,000 bail. Police said officers were assaulted with bottles, cans and rocks when they tried to arrest him.

Bodies recovered

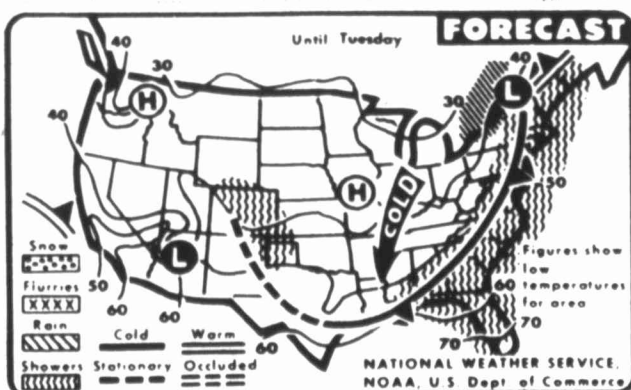

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — After five days of firefighting and digging, authorities have recovered the last three bodies from a huge mound of corn and concrete left by an explosion at a grain elevator.

The bodies of two men killed in the Tuesday explosion were recovered Thursday and Friday and the last three were found Sunday.

The powerful blast at the AGRI Industries elevator threw chunks of concrete a mile and buried the men under tons of corn.

Let's help our juveniles

Today's children are the hope for tomorrow's world, and not only the good kids but the wayward ones, too.

It's too easy to take a chronically troubled teenager and say, "Why help? After all, he was found guilty. Pack him off to a state institution somewhere. Forget about him."

We believe that most of these troubled kids are still young enough that they can be reached, related to, reformed. But as staff writer Bill Elder revealed in his eight-part series which concludes today, just packing the kid off for a brief life in a large, monotonous institution is believed by some authorities to be a practically worthless response to juvenile delinquency. The best which the head of the state's correctional system for juveniles could tell our reporter was this: the most we can do, he said, is just keep the kid off the street and out of trouble for a few months.

THANKS, BUT NO thanks. Something needs to be done about juvenile delinquency and it has to be done in the problem's formative stages. There's no question that this is the time to begin to root around for the problem, find it and get rid of it. We're not sure what the complete answer is, but probably at the least the police force should have an officer who can devote no less than 40 hours a week to kids getting into scrapes with the law.

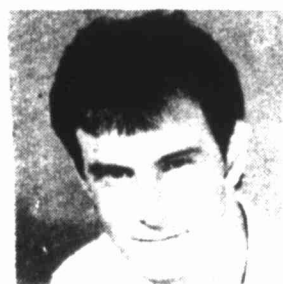

Is there anything else we can do? Yes. We need a source of inexpensive family counseling to weld kids and parents back into some sort of seamless whole like we used to have in this country. The state hospital offers such counseling, but the problem is that many times families won't seek help there — you know, the old stigma of, "But that's for crazy people."

Another thing we can do: stop jailing juveniles anywhere near the vicinity of the drunks and thieves and brawlers which make up the bulk of the prisoners in our jails. There's no reason in the world for a 13-year-old, one-time burglar to be sitting and listening to some 33-year-old burglar talk about his life. That's just dangling a carrot in front of this confused child's nose.

SOMETHING ELSE we can do: as a community, put our heads together and devise a community plan for helping juvenile delinquency. If we say that we don't want our kids in jailhouses, then find somewhere else to put them. In a sense, one person's troubled child is everybody's problem; maybe you could offer your home as a place to temporarily keep a kid who's experiencing his first misdemeanor arrests. Give him a feeling, for a day or two, of the harmonious family surroundings he might be missing out on. That might give him something to work forward when the probation officer comes by and takes him home.

Those are a few of the possibilities worth exploring. By no means have we exhausted the alternatives. Probably the most important thing to do is take that first big step: form an organization. If we can unite to celebrate 100 years as a city, then we can unite to find good solid working ways of rehabilitating the bad kids who aren't so bad yet that they won't listen to us.

After all, if we don't help these kids, what are the next 100 years going to be like? We sometimes shudder to imagine it.

Political picks

Recently, I conducted my own poll scientifically based on prejudice and irrationality to gauge the results of the upcoming primaries. Now you might think that a poll based on those two stances is unreliable, but I don't think it's too far removed from most people's voting strategy.

All right, here we go.

In the race for governor there is no question incumbent Bill Clements will defeat his opponent Duke Embs. Unbelievably, Embs recently was arrested for biting a law enforcement officer in Bexar County. He is also a fugitive from the law in that county. Embs has stated he favors letting transients sleep in the governor's mansion. I think that's enough said about that race.

In the Democratic Primary six candidates are vying for the gubernatorial nomination, but the only three that count are Mark White, Buddy Temple and Bob Armstrong.

There probably will be a run-off here, but I think Armstrong is the clear choice. He strikes me as hard-working and honest. He has turned the land commission office into a model of efficiency. Texas Monthly called him "too decent" to be governor. If TM called him that then he must be all right. Armstrong also grabbed the endorsement of the Texas Observer, which, in my opinion, is the best publication on politics in the state.

IN THE RACE for lieutenant governor, Bill Hobby will have no trouble with contender Troy Skates. Buddy Strake is unopposed in the same race in the GOP Primary.

In the U.S. Senatorial race incumbent Lloyd Bentsen will get the Democratic nod. It's going to take more than an unknown like Joe Sullivan, a psychology professor from San Antonio, to unseat Bentsen.

In the GOP competition I hope State Sen. Walter Mengden defeats U.S. Rep. Jim Collins. I tired of Collins not taking Mengden seriously and I'm weary of Collins continually calling Bentsen a liberal. In a recent poll conducted concerning the voting trends of senators and representatives Bentsen supported Reagan 71 percent of the time and Collins supported the President 74 percent of the time. It's amazing how a mere three percentage points makes Bentsen a liberal.

In the attorney general race there are four Democrats and one Republican entered. I think I can safely say Bill Meier will win the GOP spot.

I pick Max Sherman over John Hannah, Jim Mattox and Jack Ogg. Sherman was an excellent state senator for eight years and he has the necessary administrative skills sharpened from his years as president of West Texas State University.

In the race for the Democratic nomination for land commissioner there are four candidates: Pete Snelson, Garry Mauro, Dan Kubiak and George Fore. Snelson and Mauro have been campaigning steadily and it has paid off in name recognition. Because of his past political background as state senator I think Snelson will edge out Mauro. However, Mauro shows promise and it won't be the last we hear of him.

IN THE GOP land commissioner race there are three hopefuls: Woody Glasscock, Al Gutierrez and Andrew Jackson — that's right — Andrew Jackson. Given the public's inclination to vote for famous names, Jackson might have a chance. However, Glasscock has out-campaigned them all and should win.

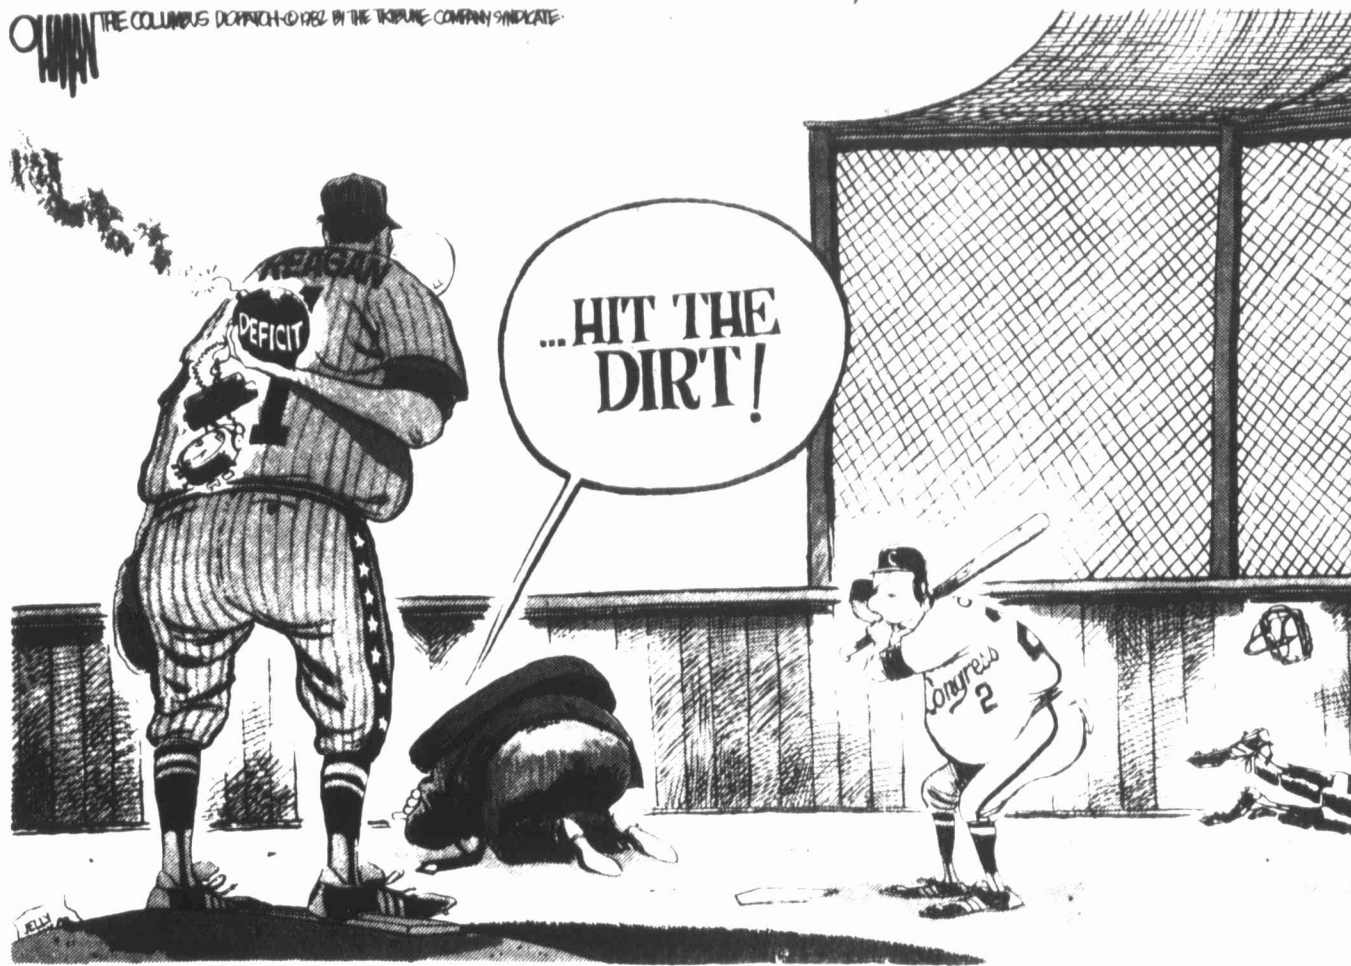

The commissioner of agriculture race is a tough one to call. Incumbent Reagan Brown has the background to nab the Democratic nomination, but I don't know if he has campaigned hard enough to keep his job. Jim Hightower is much more colorful and outspoken. I think he's made more of an impression on the voters and I give him the nod. Republican Don Herbert is running all by himself.

If incumbent State Treasurer Warren G. Harding hadn't been indicted on two minor offenses involving campaign practices he would be the clear choice for the Democratic nomination. His opponents, Ann Richards, Lane Denton and John Cutright, maintain the indictments discredit him as a public official.

I look for Richards to end up in a run-off with Harding. If a grand jury investigation finds the charges aren't valid I think Harding will win the nomination. Millard Neptune is the sole candidate in the GOP Primary.

In races that are more clear cut Bob Bullock and Mike Richards should win the Democratic and Republican primaries, respectively in the State Comptroller race.

In the race for a spot on the Railroad Commission Democrat Jim Nugent will win easily, and John Henderson is the only Republican running.

Appeal from Warsaw jail

WASHINGTON — In an appeal remarkable for its realism, the intellectual leader of the movement that gave birth to Solidarity has smuggled a political document out of his Warsaw jail cell proposing "the farthest-reaching concessions" to Poland's military government to reach a compromise for ending martial law.

Jack Kuron has been in Warsaw's Bialoleka jail since December. He predicted that the Catholic Church's own mood of compromise would persuade "a decisive majority of the Solidarity leadership, men of science and culture, in a word... all those whose voice counts in Poland."

Kuron founded the Workers' Defense Committee, the intellectual forerunner of Solidarity, in 1976. Castigated ever since by the Soviet Union as an enemy of socialism — one of Moscow's harshest epithets — Kuron posed this warning to Marshal Wojciech Jaruzelski and the Kremlin in his late-February appeal: If there is no compromise ending martial law "within a dozen or so weeks," all chance to "stem the tide of terrorism" will vanish.

The warning was linked to rewards. A Polish "national agreement," ending martial law and guaranteeing "at least some fundamental goals and values" espoused by Solidarity, would not damage Soviet Warsaw Pact interests "and would be extremely favorable to its economic" interests.

BUT WITHOUT such a national agreement it will be only a matter of months before local incidents take on a national scope, building pressure against martial law that would produce an explosion and bring in Soviet troops. That prescription for the immediate future of the Soviet-inspired counterrevolution in Poland is under close study here. Kuron's reference to Moscow's economic interests matched an appraisal by the Reagan administration of grave economic problems ahead for the Soviet Union.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig sent emissaries to Europe three weeks ago to argue in favor of a Western credit clampdown against the Russians who, with their European satellites, owe nearly $100 billion to the West. Although Haig's agents did not get it, he remains convinced that the immense costs to Moscow of Poland's bankrupt economy could have a "profound" effect on the solvency of the Soviet bloc.

The eight-page document that Kuron spirited out of jail recorded the dismal performance of the Polish economy since the Dec. 13 martial-law takeover. January factory production, in the first full month under martial law, down nearly 15 percent from a year earlier (which had been strike-wrecked); February production lower than January's.

"If one is to believe the authors of the military coup when they claim they acted to save the economy," Kuron wrote, "one may say the operation was successful but the patient died." With military commissars now directing every aspect of the economy, even "if a miracle happened and Western credits were to reach the level of (an earlier) era," the economy could not recover under martial law.

A "MIRACLE" is still possible from Europe, but unlikely from here. Indeed, the Reagan administration is bargaining for the opposite of a miracle — a calamity for the Polish economy, which could infect other Eastern European states and the Soviet Union itself, if Jaruzelski and Moscow do not drastically moderate their conduct in Poland.

Kuron stressed Jaruzelski's and Moscow's economic burden. Without Western assistance, he said, "the economies of the bloc cannot function normally."

Speaking as a leader who supplied much of the intellectual backbone of Solidarity, Kuron called for massive resistance, strictly non-violent, as the only means to pressure Jaruzelski and the Kremlin into ending martial law and accepting a national agreement. That means organization built around absolute discipline and an "efficient system of information." Most important, it means advertising exactly what is demanded as the "concrete goals of the movement" — with a general strike across all of Poland — the ultimate means of exerting pressure, the last chance for a compromise.

From behind the walls of his cell, Kuron has sent his message. It is aimed at Moscow, at Jaruzelski, at the Solidarity movement he was so important a part of — and at Western nations who, had they the purpose and the will, could do much that might answer his appeal.

Cheers for North Succotash

While South Succotash has been having a bad time of it, with high unemployment and suffering caused by the recession, the picture in North Succotash is entirely different.

This is what angered President Reagan recently, when he felt the TV networks were just dramatizing the worst aspects of his economic program. No one bothered to take a camera crew up the hill to North Succotash. If they had they would have found that Reaganomics IS working.

North Succotash, with its beautiful homes, manicured lawns, sumptuous country club and thriving shopping mall, is what the American dream is all about. And while the citizens there have to take their lumps with everybody else, they are not crying and blaming Reagan for all their problems.

The reason I know all this is that my cousin Walter lives in North Succotash, on Peach Tree Lane. This year, he sold his family's umbrella factory in South Succotash to United Discount Industries, a conglomerate out of Houston, who bought it, not to make umbrellas, but because Cousin Walter had a $5 million tax loss carryover.

Once the deal was made, United closed down the factory, putting 500 people in South Succotash out of work. It was one of these unemployed men that the TV networks interviewed, which gave the country the impression everyone in Succotash County was hurting. Had they interviewed Cousin Walter they would have realized that things were not half as bad as the TV news show make them out to be.

Over lunch, by the swimming pool, Cousin Walter said he had just met with his accountant, and he wouldn't have to pay any taxes this year.

"That's wonderful," I said. "How did you manage to do it?"

"First I traded my stock in the umbrella factory for stock in United Discount so I didn't have to pay any capital gains. Then I took my salary from United and went into a real estate tax shelter in Columbus, Ohio, with several guys from the club. Since the first five years was all interest, we could deduct the profits from our oil well investments."

"You must have a good accountant."

"Everyone in North Succotash does. That's what makes it such a nice place to live."

Cousin Walter introduced me to his next door neighbor, Charley Deegan. Charley had stopped by to ask Walter for a campaign contribution for Congressman Floggle of their district.

"We got to help Floggle," Deegan said, "because he's on the House Ways and Means Committee and he's fighting the do-gooders in Congress who want to withhold taxes on stock dividends and interest at the source. I've never declared a dividend in my life and I'm not about to start now."

Cousin Walter wrote out a check and gave it to him.

"That's how we are in North Succotash," he told me after Deegan left. "When someone is in trouble we don't ask any questions."

The phone rang and Walter answered it. I could only hear his part of the conversation. "You say if we buy the building we can depreciate it over 10 years and then sell it at a profit to

Billy Graham

Thanks for your advice

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Thank you for your television appearances which have helped me so much. Please tell me what I can do in the future to keep up this Christian life I have begun? — T.W.T.

DEAR T.W.T.: Making a decision for Christ is not the end, but the beginning of a whole new life in Christ. It is therefore important for you to grow in your new-found faith. This is what God wants you to do, and he has provided the means for you to grow. Paul's prayer for the early Christians was that they might be "growing in the knowledge of God" (Colossians 1:10).

One way we grow as Christians is through the Word of God, the Bible. In it we find God's will for us, as well as his promises to us. We find out how he wants us to live, and how he wants us to trust him. Take a passage of Scripture each day. Read it carefully and prayerfully, asking God to show you how it relates to your life right now. I often suggest to people that they begin reading through the Gospel of John, taking perhaps a few paragraphs a day. God has given the Bible to us, and it "is useful for teaching, rebuking, correcting and training in righteousness, so that the man of God may be thoroughly equipped for every good work" (2 Timothy 3:16, 17).

Then we grow as well through our fellowship with other believers. They have learned many spiritual truths, and they can be of great help to you. Pray right now that God will help you find Christian friends. Perhaps he would lead you to a group Bible study, or a Bible class where you would learn from the Bible and have a fellowship as well with other Christians. Become active in a Christ-centered church, asking God not only to teach you through it, but also to use you in it as he opens opportunities.

Don't neglect the importance of prayer also. Through prayer we grow closer to the presence of God. As we see him answer our prayers, it encourages us to step out in greater faith and trust. In all these — Bible study, fellowship, and prayer — we "fix our eyes on Jesus, the author and perfecter of our faith" (Hebrews 12:2).

Dr. Donohue Blood-sugar testing

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a diabetic. I take insulin each morning. The doctor I go to only tests my urine and if it shows no sugar he doesn't have a blood-sugar test taken. I have not had a blood test for a year, so I really don't know what it is, or if I am keeping it normal. Please comment. — Mrs. G.L.

It's a little hazardous for me to try to read your doctor's mind, but I suppose he feels that so long as you're not spilling any sugar into your urine your blood sugar is not high and does not need testing. I am taking it for granted that you are faithfully checking your own urine sugars, too, not just having it done during the visit to the doctor's office.

Personally, I'd feel a little more secure by having the blood sugar checked from time to time. I can't fault your doctor, though. If you are not having any symptoms from too high or too low blood sugar, and if your daily urine checks are free of sugar, he has reason to feel that blood testing for you is redundant. I'm never that sure, is what I am saying.

You give me an opportunity to answer a question from another reader about a newer way to find how well blood sugar is being controlled — measurement of glycosylated hemoglobin. That is a very impressive way of saying that you measure how much sugar is attached to the hemoglobin in the red blood cells.

If the readings from this blood test are high, it means blood sugar has been high for a few weeks prior. With this bit of information, the doctor cannot be tricked by one blood sugar reading. Sometimes a reading may give a false assessment of how good control is, for example, if the person has been watching his diet very closely prior to a visit. With this test, you get a picture of what has been going on for several weeks in the past.

This is strictly an aside for Mrs. H.K., who asked: You don't have to have this test done every time you see the doctor. You may never have to have it done.

Dear Dr. Donohue: You blew it by your sexism in the response to S.S. In reference to a certain test done by a doctor you said "it tells him." I was amazed to read this because you have been tops in my books. However I shall rest content to call this to your attention and eternally hope for increased recognition that women are here to stay! I still think you are sensitive to people, competent in your information, and gentle. I shall try hard to overlook this terrible slip that you allowed to get through for all the world to see. — P.K.

I shall correct this blunder in the future when I find a third person singular pronoun that designates neither gender. I've looked in my Strunk & White, my Follet's, my Do's and Don'ts of the English Language, and I'm still lost. You don't want me to use the horrible alternative, he/she or she/he, do you? Will someone please help me purge myself of this unintentional sexism?

Dear Dr. Donohue: Our mother contracted malaria at the age of 20. She later had eight children. What has plagued me for years is the thought that we may have malaria in our bloodstream. Can you settle this for me? — V.J.

The passage of malaria from mother to developing baby is very, very rare, even in countries where malaria infections are plentiful. Also, two years after having had her malaria, your mother would not have been able to transmit the illness, except under the most unusual of circumstances. So really, your chances of having it are practically nil.

Your hair may talk behind your back

Your hair may be your crowning glory, but it can also be a tattletale, revealing to others what you may be thinking or feeling — even while you're unaware of it.

"Hair language," the unconscious way your fingers fiddle with a strand, and even your hairstyle itself, can reveal a lot more than you realize. "When you twist your hair around a finger, you probably want to be comforted," says Dr. Judith Waters, a social psychologist at Fairleigh Dickinson University, in New Jersey.

Just like young children who wrap their hair around their fingers while they suck their thumb or hold a blanket. Running your fingers through your hair, she added, may mean you're puzzled or frustrated. It can also signal that you're proud of your hair or want it caressed. Such actions are an unspoken way of saying, "Hey, look, my hair is silky and soft. See? It's touchable."

If you keep tossing your hair back, it may just be getting in your eyes — or it could be a cover you're hiding behind. Some people also interpret it as a self-confident, sexy move!

"Letting your hair down" has traditionally been considered an uninhibited gesture, especially popular with heroines in books and movies. But, if actions really speak louder than words, you should realize that this action is probably sending out the message that, "I'm more free-wheeling than my 'uptight' hair looks."

"Brushing hair out of your eyes is usually a delaying gesture," she notes, "especially in confrontations like a job interview or one-to-one discussion. We may brush hair out of our eyes — or back over our ears — instead of saying "Um." The gesture can also be a subconscious attempt to change the subject. However, if it's done too often, it may just mean you're self-conscious.

On the other hand, letting others play with your hair shows affection. This is probably why young women like to style or brush one another's hair. Dr. Waters suggests. It communicates caring and intimacy.

Even the way you wear your hair conveys a message. While a sleek chignon conveys an image that is elegant but reserved, a full, wavy spill of hair suggests someone who is glamorous and alluring.

Dear Abby

Keeping faith can stunt spirit

DEAR ABBY: I was amazed at your response to the 15-year-old girl who felt guilty for dating out of her faith against her parents' wishes. She said she was proud of her heritage and had no intentions of marrying out of her faith, but at 15 she wasn't considering marriage.

You replied: "You will avoid a lot of possible heartache by dating only boys you may one day marry. The heart doesn't care what the head is thinking."

I deplore your bigoted point of view. If we limit our dating only to people who share the same religion, philosophy and political views, we will not grow or learn. We need to associate with people who make us think and question our own beliefs.

Children should be taught to choose their friends for their character, worthiness, intelligence and caring rather than for their religion, color of skin, social status, style of dress or any other basis for prejudice.

There are many reasons why people date a member of the opposite sex, Abby. It isn't always a prelude to romance and marriage.

DISAPPOINTED IN YOU Move over. Many others were also disappointed. Read on for a letter from someone who agreed with my "bigoted" point of view:

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you advised that 15-year-old girl against dating boys of a different religion if she had no intentions of marrying out of her faith.

I was raised in a strict Baptist home, but dated boys I knew I could not marry.

Organ Donation Week is sponsored by TMS

"You can be the one to give life to others," members of the Permian Basin Medical Society Auxiliary say.

The local group of physicians' wives is helping publicize the First Annual Organ Donation Awareness Week which begins today and continues through Saturday. The week is a special project of the Texas Medical Association Auxiliary and other state medical auxiliaries across the nation.

"Texas is the home of the only organ donor referral facility in the country: The Living Bank in Houston," Gov. Bill Clements Jr. said in a recent memorandum.

The Living Bank, founded in Houston in 1968, is a non-profit service organization which coordinates the anatomical donations of donors throughout the United States. Currently, approximately 100,000 persons are registered with The Living Bank.

There is a limited time following death of a donor in which organs can be retrieved. According to the Living Bank, that time amounts to minutes after death for vital organs like kidneys, hearts, lungs, livers; four to six hours for eyes; eight hours for bones and 18 hours for skin.

Figures from 1981 indicate that approximately 62,000 Americans are on kidney dialysis with 10,000 to 12,000 waiting for transplants. Last year 25,000 cornea transplant operations were performed, but some 50,000 persons were still waiting for available corneas.

The Living Bank maintains a 24-hour telephone service to refer donations to medical schools, eye banks, kidney transplant facilities and other organ banks wherever the donor is throughout the United States. The number is (713) 528-2971.

Donor registration forms and donor cards are available from The Living Bank. The Permian Basin Medical Society Auxiliary urges persons to contact The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas 77005 for information on becoming a donor.

Keep track of where you are in recipes

"Oh, no, where was I?" Should you be interrupted in the middle of mixing up a recipe, you'll always know how far you've gone if you use this tip. When mixing, put all the ingredients you need to the left of the mixing bowl. As you add each ingredient, set it to the right of the bowl. And ... you'll never lose track.

DEAR ABBY: My mother always used to ripen tomatoes quickly by setting them on the windowsill with the "belly-button side" up, so that's the way I've always done it.

DEAR SANDRA: It makes no difference which side is up. To ripen tomatoes quickly place them in a brown paper bag, with the top closed.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Honest Amy," who gives her telephone number to men just to avoid hurting their feelings, then ducks them when they call, that it's cruel and dishonest to give a man hope when none exists.

There's nothing worse than having your hopes built up at the first meeting, then getting the runaround when you phone the lady for a date.

When I ask a girl for her phone number, a polite but honest, "Thanks for asking, but the chemistry is just not right for me," would be perfectly acceptable.

Disappointed? Of course, but I have nothing but respect for women who are honest enough to let me know immediately what my chances are.

DEAR APPRECIATE: I'll bet you do. Especially when the nights are six months long.

Egyptians celebrate as Sinai is returned

RAFAH, Egypt (AP) — With trumpet blasts and shouts of praise to Allah, Egyptians celebrated the return of the final third of the Sinai peninsula after nearly 15 years of Israeli occupation.

On the other side of the new frontier, Israeli troops fired tear gas and shots in the air Sunday to repel rock-throwing Palestinians protesting the erection of a barbed wire barrier dividing this town along the new border.

Israeli television also reported scattered violence on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River. Troops clashed with Palestinian nationalists opposed to the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty that brought the Sinai back under Egyptian rule.

A policeman was reported injured, and two Palestinian stone-throwers were wounded by Israeli gunfire.

On the whole it was a day of joy for Egyptians who regained control of "the great and terrible wilderness" lost to Israel in the 1967 war, and a time of sadness for Israelis who grew to love its towering blood-red peaks and white sand beaches lapped by a coral-studded sea.

A crowd of 2,000 Arabs chanted "Allah Akbar," "God is Great," as a giant red, white and black Egyptian flag was unfurled in a ceremony at the Rafah border checkpoint.

The new governor of Rafah, Yusef Sabri Abu Taleb, used a torch carried by runners from Cairo to kindle a memorial flame as Bedouin women voiced their joy with traditional tongue-wrangling ululation.

In Cairo, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak placed a wreath at the tomb of his predecessor, Anwar Sadat, who started the peace process with his trip to Jerusalem in November 1977 and signed the Camp David treaty providing for the return of the Sinai and the formal end to 30 years of Israeli-Egyptian hostilities.

The White House said President Reagan talked by telephone with Mubarak and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, praising them for the "risks they have taken" in the pursuit of peace.

Begin said he sent a letter to Sadat's widow, Jihan, saying: "To prove that his (Sadat's) memory did not die...we all have to work for the sacred cause: no more war, no more bloodshed. Peace. Shalom. Salaam between our nations."

Saudi Arabia and the other conservative Arab nations of the Persian Gulf hailed the transfer and urged Mubarak to rejoin the Arab struggle for return of all territory occupied by Israeli occupied territory.

Cody probe uncertain

CHICAGO (AP) — As church officials prepared for the funeral of Cardinal John P. Cody, uncertainty clouded the future of a probe into allegations he misused church funds — charges a lifelong friend believes were "the direct cause" of his death.

The spiritual leader of the nation's largest Roman Catholic archdiocese died early Sunday of an apparent heart attack at the age of 74.

The controversial, strong-willed churchman was under federal scrutiny following allegations he illegally diverted up to $1 million in church funds to his step-cousin, Helen Dolan Wilson.

Siamese twins may have surgery

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The father of siamese twins born as part of a set of triplets says surgeons may try to surgically separate the infants.

The twins, who were born late Saturday night joined at the abdomen and the chest, were in critical condition early today in the neonatal intensive care unit at Lubbock General Hospital. Hospital officials said the third child was in satisfactory condition.

Hospital officials declined to release any medical information about the twins.

Their father, The Rev. Timothy Fitzhugh, said Sunday that doctors told him they may try to separate the twins as early as Tuesday.

The twins weigh approximately four pounds a piece. The third child weighs five pounds nine ounces.

The mother 28-year-old Gladys Fitzhugh, was in satisfactory condition Sunday night.

Steinbrenner sours on Yankees' Lemon

NEW YORK (AP) — George Steinbrenner is doing the "Yankee Shuffle" again — this time with familiar dance partners Bob Lemon and Gene Michael — and morale on his defending American League champions has hit rock bottom.

The New York Yankees owner announced Sunday, only a few hours after the club broke a three-game losing streak by beating Detroit, that Lemon, his manager, was fired. He was bringing back Michael, the former Yankees general manager-turned manager.

At baseball's winter meetings last December in Dallas, Steinbrenner had announced that Michael would return as Yankee skipper for 1983, when Lemon would retire as manager. Michael's return came only 148 games early.

Steinbrenner, infuriated that the team had lost a six-game World Series to the Los Angeles Dodgers, reportedly was ready to fire Michael winter. A plea by Lemon that he be given another chance is said to have convinced Steinbrenner to delay his plan.

Since Steinbrenner, acting as the head of a consortium, purchased the Yankees on Jan. 3, 1973, he has presided over eight managerial changes, beginning with the resignation of Ralph Houk on Sept. 30, 1973.

Michael also becomes the third man in the past four years to get a second shot at managing the Yankees. The others were Lemon and Billy Martin. Only once in six years have the Yankees had one manager (Dick Howser in 1980) for an entire season.

"I've only been here two weeks, and it seems like there's one controversy after another," said shortstop Roy Smalley, acquired by the Yankees in a trade that sent reliever Ron Davis to Minnesota. "I guess everybody else is used to this by now, but I'm not."

Steinbrenner announced the firing of Lemon in a lengthy statement distributed by Irv Kaze, the club's media director, at the Stadium at about 8 p.m. EDT. Kaze said there would be no other comment. In the statement, Steinbrenner said, "No one is more appreciative of Lem's great loyalty to the organization than I am. He has always been loyal to the Yankees and to me in whatever role he has been asked to assume."

"It is just that I feel that it is in the best interests of the club that this change be made now," Steinbrenner said. "I have discussed it with Lem. He understands my feelings even though I had promised him the entire season."

The victory over the Tigers Sunday was New York's first at home this season, and the Yankees still were two games under .500 at 6-8.

"When we lose, it gets so much more complicated here," relief ace Rich Gossage said before the announcement, although rumors of the firing were widespread. "It has become very depressing around here."

Michael is no newcomer to the Yankees, many of whom are familiar with his managing style from last season. Michael, then general manager of the club, was reassigned to the field by Steinbrenner on Nov. 21, 1980, replacing Howser.

Reds' comeback beats Astros

National League

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia Manager Pat Corrales says reports that Steve Carlton's fastball is dead are greatly exaggerated.

"Steve has been throwing the ball as good as I've ever seen him, but has not been winning," Corrales said after Carlton picked up his first victory as the Phillies beat St. Louis 8-4 Sunday. "Today he had a real good fastball. He had real good stuff and excellent velocity."

Carlton, a three-time Cy Young Award winner who doesn't talk to reporters, lost his first four decisions with a 6.85 earned run average. The worst start in his career started whispers that the 37-year-old left-hander, the National League's all-time strikeout leader, had lost something.

But on Sunday, Carlton held the Cardinals, who had won their previous 12 games, to one run and three hits through eight innings while striking out eight. He tired in the ninth, allowing five more hits and three runs.

"He's pitched the same way all year. He's got the same fastball and the same slider that he's had since spring training," said catcher Bo Diaz, who was acquired by the Phillies in the off-season. "I can't compare him to last year because I wasn't here."

The difference Sunday, Diaz said, "was that we gave him some support and that's what he's been needing."

The Phillies made efficient use of nine hits, scoring three runs in the fifth and four in the eighth.

In other NL games, Montreal tripped New York 5-2, Chicago topped Pittsburgh 5-3, Cincinnati outlasted Houston 4-3 in 10 innings and San Francisco defeated Los Angeles 6-3. San Diego was rained out at Atlanta.

It's been a season of winning streaks in the NL, with Atlanta capturing a record 13 in a row to start the season and San Diego still working on a 10-game spree in addition to St. Louis' 12 straight.

"We knew it had to end one of these days," said Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog. "We were facing Carlton today, and then we play Houston with all of those good arms waiting for us."

Sunday's victory was only the fourth in 15 games for the Phillies, who also had lost their last three.

Orioles squeeze by White Sox

By The Associated Press

The Chicago White Sox were standing on the hot corner, watching a lot of golden opportunities go by.

The White Sox left six runners in scoring position Sunday — including four at third base — and the frustration added up to a 2-1 loss to the Baltimore Orioles.

"The ninth inning was a little hard to believe," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa. "All the things we did, and we couldn't get a run in."

Precisely. The White Sox managed a single, a stolen base, a double, a wild pitch and a walk but came up empty-handed in the futile final inning and the Orioles went on to win their second straight game after nine consecutive losses.

Rudy Law opened the Chicago ninth with a single off Dennis Martinez and stole second, but was thrown out at third on a grounder to second baseballer Rich Dauer by Jerry Hairston. Ron LeFlore then doubled but Hairston was out at the plate on relay throws from left fielder Gary Roenicke and shortstop Bob Bonner.

A wild pitch enabled LeFlore to reach third base for the third time in the game. But after Tony Bernazard walked, LeFlore was stranded there for the third time when Tippy Martinez came out of the bullpen to strike out Steve Kemp for the final out.

"Those are the kind of games I'm used to," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "I'd been looking forward to one for the last 11 days or so. I missed the thrill and the excitement."

Rick Dempsey hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning for the Orioles' winning runs and Dennis Martinez won for the 11th straight time at Memorial Stadium with last-out relief help from Tippy Martinez.

Chicago stranded nine runners before scoring in the eighth on a double by Harold Baines and a two-out single by Mike Squires, his third hit of the game.

Elsewhere in the American League, New York whipped Detroit 3-1, Boston edged Toronto 5-4 in 12 innings, California turned back Oakland 5-1, Milwaukee outscored Texas 11-6, Kansas City trimmed Cleveland 6-3 and Seattle nipped Minnesota 5-4 in 11 innings.

Moses, Rockets run out of fuel

By The Associated Press

There will be no miracles from Moses Malone this year. Jack Sikma and the Seattle SuperSonics made certain of that.

The Sonics, paced by Sikma's 30 points, eliminated Malone and the Houston Rockets from the National Basketball Association playoffs Sunday with a 104-83 victory. That ended — quickly — Houston's hopes of riding the burly shoulders of Malone to the NBA finals, as the DOUBLE TEAMED — Houston Rockets player Elvin Hayes pulls in the ball as Seattle SuperSonic Wally Walker, right, uses both hands to try and knock it away. Sonic Lonnie Shelton, with hands raised, guards Hayes from behind. Seattle beat Houston in their NBA playoff game Sunday afternoon 104-83.

Rockets did last year despite a losing record in the regular season.

Seattle grabbed a 46-30 lead at the half and coasted to win the best-of-three miniseries. Malone wound up with 24 points but had only four points and two rebounds in the second quarter, when Seattle put together a 12-4 spurt to take charge.

Now Houston will be missing from the Western Conference semifinals, which begin Tuesday with Seattle hosting San Antonio and Phoenix at Los Angeles. The Suns defeated Denver in three games in the opening round.

In the Eastern Conference semifinals, Boston and Philadelphia each got the jump Sunday. The Celtics downed Washington 109-91 and the 76ers edged Milwaukee 125-122.

Those series continue Wednesday night.

Celtics 109, Bullets 91
The Celtics, trying to become the first team in 13 years to repeat as NBA champions — they did it in 1968 and '69 — got off to a poor start. They trailed Washington by two points at the half, but then blew out the Bullets, who had eliminated New Jersey in the miniseries while the Atlantic Division champion Celtics had a bye.

Boston outscored Washington 24-15 in the third period, paced by eight apiece from Nate Archibald and M.L. Carr, who led the Celtics with 21 points.

Washington, which lost all six regular season games with Boston, was led by Spencer Haywood with 17 points.

76ers 125, Bucks 122
Julius Erving's 34 points and 26 by Andrew Toney sparked Philadelphia, which rallied late in the final quarter. The Bucks were ahead 111-110 when 76ers center Darryl Dawkins fouled out with 5:18 to go. But Philadelphia scored the next eight points and, although Milwaukee twice got within two, the Sixers held on.

Mickey Johnson had 28 points and Marques Johnson scored 27 for the Bucks.

Philadelphia played without guard Lionel Hollins, sidelined with a broken knuckle on his shooting hand. Toney made up for Hollins' absence.

Derby contenders out of action

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Injury and illness have cost the 108th Kentucky Derby some of its top prospects, but a one-eyed colt with claustrophobia has survived to become a center of attention during Derby week.

"I wouldn't trade his chances now with anyone," Tom Gentry, one of Cassalera's owners, said Sunday after the colt galloped on the Churchill Downs track in preparation for Saturday's Derby.

Cassalera is easy to spot in the stable area because he stays in a specially-built stall in front of barn 43. He can look through the iron bars on all four sides of the stall.

"He had to have one," said Gentry in between handing out yellow Cassalera T-shirts to friends and media. "He has an open pen in California. But when he arrived at Keeneland last week, he was put in the normal stall and he really cut a number.

"He's a stall walker and has to have that freedom. We called Churchill Downs and told them the problem, so they built this one." Reportedly the open stall cost $1,800.

While Cassalera is missing his left eye as a result of a foaling mishap, he still has the legs and heart which could stamp him as a Derby winner in this year's wide-open affair which figures to draw 15 or more 3-year-olds.

"The accident occurred within 24 hours after he was born," Gentry said. "He was getting up to be nursed when he scraped his eye against the board in the barn. They tried to save it, but it had to come out a few days later."

Cassalera, a dark brown Kentucky-bred son of Pretense-Special Charm, has registered three victories in 12 career starts and has been out of the money only once.

When asked about his temperament, groom Jose Mercado said, "No problem, very nice horse."

Cassalera, however, does present a problem on the race track. He has been involved in several bumping incidents related to his vision problem.

In three of his four starts this year, he has bumped other horses or been bumped, likely costing him better position.

The 20-20 Stable colt, who also is owned by McAnally, breeder James Brady, Jim Mamakes and Mrs. Jack Robbins, raced eight times as a 2-year-old, posting two wins, two seconds and four thirds.

Kenneth Sims tabbed first choice by scouts in Tuesday's NFL draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Coaches, general managers, personnel directors and scouts claim to be unimpressed by the quality of players available in this year's National Football League draft. No one, however, is questioning the ability of Kenneth Sims.

Sims will be the first pick in the draft Tuesday morning, with the New England Patriots grabbing the defensive lineman from the University of Texas. The 6-foot-5, 265-pound Sims broke his leg late in the season against Texas Christian but the Patriots aren't worried about Sims' health.

"His rehabilitation has been perfect," said Dick Steinberg, the Patriots' personnel director. "We decided months ago to select him."

That sits well with new Patriots Coach Ron Meyer, who had the misfortune of facing Sims and Longhorns while he was the head man at Southern Methodist. Meyer was hired to replace the fired Ron Erhardt last January.

"I'm just delighted to know he is going to be on our team up here," said Meyer. "He's an impact-type player who doesn't have any weaknesses. He is effervescent, enthusiastic, positive and he will be a leader. I think he can do for us what Lawrence Taylor did for the Giants' defense last year."

That's saying a great deal since Taylor helped turn the Giants' defense into a monster unit and New York made the playoffs for the first time since 1963.

According to Steinberg — and his opinion is echoed by many NFL team executives — Sims probably is the only Lawrence Taylor in the draft.

"The draft is not as deep as usual," he said, "nor does it have the quality of most drafts because of the redshirt rule."

Because universities were allowed to redshirt freshmen four years ago, several top quality players have another season of eligibility in college.

"There are no linebackers like Lawrence Taylor, E.J. Junior or High Green of last year. There are not very many competitive big men in this draft and we don't have any defensive backs rated in the first two rounds."

Still, the 28 NFL clubs won't have any trouble filling out their preseason rosters. Running back and linebacker would appear to be the strongest positions among the graduating players.

Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen of Southern California, Gerald Riggs and Robert Weathers of Arizona State, Walter Abercrombie of Baylor, Gerald Willhite of San Jose State, Barry Redden of Richmond, Darrin Nelson of Stanford and Butch Woolfolk of Michigan are highly rated running backs.

LSD making a comeback

DALLAS (AP) — A powerful hallucinogen that hit the height of its popularity a decade ago is making a comeback in a more potent form sold in colorful cartoon stamps attractive to young children, narcotics agents said.

The drug is LSD — lysergic acid diethylamide — and agents told the Dallas Morning News the 1980s version has been confiscated in significant amounts recently in several Texas cities, including Austin, Houston, Odessa and Pasadena.

The drug is being sold for $2 and $10 a "hit" in the colorful tattoo stamps printed with Walt Disney characters. Agents told the newspaper that children who think they are playing with a harmless toy and apply the stamps to their skin can absorb the hallucinogen into their skin.

"The Blue Star LSD is one of the most alarming things I've come across in a long time," said an Austin narcotics agent.

"Our lab reports show that this stuff is more powerful than what we saw in the '60s. It's called Blue Star, but the stars are white and placed on dark blue perforated paper — similar to a sheet of stamps," he said.

In February, Texas Department of Public Safety agents seized 13,500 dosage units of Blue Star LSD from two Austin traffickers in one of the region's largest busts. The drug was traced to California.

And in Houston during the past year, the Harris County Sheriff's Department has confiscated about 35,000 stamps printed with a cartoon character Goofy juggling pills. A dosage of about 24,000 hits seized last summer "was the strongest ever tested," said Lt. M.D. Smith.

"I think it's coming back because we now have a whole generation that is not familiar with the dangers of 'acid,'" Smith said.

"The children of the '60s now have teen-age sons and daughters that haven't been exposed to it and so they are trying it."

In Arkansas, LSD pills, as well as stamps, have surfaced. "Our informants keep us posted and they advise us there is a large increase in LSD on the streets," said state police narcotics supervisor Tommy Pope in Jonesboro.

Officers in Tulsa, Okla., and Albuquerque, N.M., say they also have noted rising LSD use.

FREE AND WELL — Connie Patterson and her one-year-old daughter Jana leave an Olympia hospital where they were checked and pronounced in good condition after a 24-hour ordeal during which they were handcuffed to a tree in a desolate area. They were abducted by a man who demanded money from Mrs. Patterson's husband, Douglas, manager of a rural bank. Mrs. Patterson and her daughter were rescued by a motorist who heard her cries for help.

Sirhan hearings to get underway

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Parole board members, attorneys, witnesses and a large press corps converged on Soledad state prison today for hearings to consider reversing the planned parole of Sirhan B. Sirhan, convicted assassin of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

The unique "rescission hearings," spurred by a prosecutor's campaign to stop Sirhan's scheduled release in 1984, were scheduled to begin late in the day and continue for at least two weeks.

The prosecutor, Los Angeles District Attorney John Van de Kamp, contends Kennedy's assassination was political, and deserves harsher punishment.

Sirhan's attorney said his client does not have high hopes for keeping his parole date.

"He's very pessimistic at this point," said attorney Luke McKissack. "He knows he's unpopular and it's an election year, and he feels the board has made up its mind."

The unusually high public interest and length of the hearings have required complex logistical planning by prison officials, who installed a closed-circuit TV system to broadcast the proceedings to 21 members of the news media in a nearby building. Only two reporters and a sketch artist were cleared for admittance to the hearing room.

Thirty-five witnesses will appear, including many inmates who have spent time behind bars with Sirhan. Some will say Sirhan spoke of future violence, but McKissack says "other witnesses will refute this."

Before the hearings end, Sirhan, a Palestinian immigrant, will testify on his own behalf. He shot Kennedy in Los Angeles on June 5, 1968, after Kennedy's victory in the Democratic presidential primary in California.

At 38, Sirhan is a model prisoner who has scored high grades on college courses he has taken in prison.

Hinckley could go free if found to be insane

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prosecutors say presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr. could go free if found innocent by reason of insanity, and they want jurors at his trial to know that before deciding his fate.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker still must decide what jurors at the upcoming trial should know about the consequences of their verdict and about the workings of Hinckley's troubled mind.

Those questions were to be discussed today at a pre-trial hearing, the last proceeding before 90 prospective jurors arrive Tuesday at the federal courthouse for the start of the actual trial.

They will enter a gray, stone building — site of the Watergate trials — that has been turned into an armed camp to protect Hinckley.

The trial is expected to last at least a month, with perhaps the first week being devoted to selecting the jury that ultimately will decide whether Hinckley is guilty, innocent or innocent by reason of insanity.

Hinckley, 26, is charged in a 13-count indictment in the March 30, 1981, shooting of President Reagan, White House press secretary James Brady, a Secret Service agent and a Washington policeman.

Hinckley has admitted the shootings, but contends he is innocent by reason of insanity and not legally responsible for his actions.

Until March 5, a successful insanity defense automatically would have landed Hinckley in a mental institution — possibly St. Elizabeths, a federal facility in Washington.

But prosecutors filed a motion Friday pointing out that a March 5 ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals here could enable Hinckley to avoid automatic commitment.

The government, which still contends automatic commitment is legal, says Parker must now decide that question. If the judge rules out automatic commitment, prosecutors want him to give this instruction to the jury at the end of the trial:

"If the defendant is found not guilty by reason of insanity on any of the counts charging violations of federal law, he will not be automatically committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington or any other institution."

"He will be released from custody and will no longer be under the jurisdiction of the court."

To have Hinckley committed, the government would have to show he is presently mentally ill and, because of this, is likely to injure himself or others if not detained.
