Lancaster: WFAA news to return

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

WFAA-Dallas will be returning to the 9,900 area cable viewers as soon as possible, according to Jim Lancaster, vice president of Big Spring Cable TV. Lancaster made the announcement during a press conference at 9 a.m. today in his office.

The cable service was forced to drop WFAA and its ABC programming May 1 due to an FCC ruling concerning non-duplication rights. Since station KWAB in Big Spring has ABC programming, the cable service is required to carry the local signal over a distant one, according to the ruling. Lancaster's release to the press was as follows: "Effective May 6, we will start installing equipment that will allow us to carry some of the non-network programming of WFAA. Date of completion is uncertain. If we can use existing equipment, the turn-on will be in a few days. If we order equipment, the completion date will be after we receive the equipment."

Lancaster said if the switching equipment needed is not immediately available, the return to WFAA non-network programming might take two or three months. "Whenever we get the equipment, we'll put WFAA back on," he said.

Viewer interest in the news programming of WFAA was the deciding factor for returning WFAA to the cable service, Lancaster said. "The minimum of WFAA programming will be the six and ten news," Lancaster said.

Asked what prompted his decision, Lancaster replied, "I don't like being on the front page of the paper." The cable manager said his office did not get many comments about the loss of WFAA from cable subscribers. "Not one single person said anything about channel eight on Tuesday. Apparently my customers called the paper and the radio stations; the actual contact was very small," Lancaster said.

The fate of USA Network, whose programming replaced WFAA-Dallas on cable channel 8, has not been decided. Lancaster said one possibility was that WFAA would return to channel 8 and USA Network programming would fill in when regular ABC programming is blanked out.

Another possibility is that WFAA would share space with cable channel 6, the Christian Broadcasting Network. Yet another possibility is that WFAA will return to channel 8 and be blank during ABC programming, carrying only the Dallas newscasts, Lancaster said.

Also attending the press conference was Winston Wrinkle, who circulated a petition calling for the FCC to revoke its non-duplication ruling against the cable service in order to restore WFAA programming. Wrinkle said the petition with 1,486 signatures had been sent to the FCC in Washington D.C. and to Big Spring Mayor Clyde Angel.

Temple out of race

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple, who was to face Attorney General Mark White in a runoff next month for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, today pulled out of the race and gave the nomination to White.

Temple, a distant second in Saturday's primary, said he still felt he had a chance of winning the runoff. "But judging from the tone of the campaign just ended, it's clear that the runoff could degenerate into a bitter contest."

"Such a struggle would leave the party spent and possibly divided — emotionally, financially and politically," Temple said at a Capitol news conference. "Whoever prevailed, it would be a hollow victory for the Democratic Party and its entire slate."

"What I am doing may be unique, but today Texas Democrats are in a sort of rebuilding process. I want my role in the party to be constructive, not destructive," he said.

BUDDY TEMPLE
...avoids 'bitter contest'

Temple said he was disappointed in his showing in the primary, particularly in Southeast Texas.

The 40-year-old Diboll millionaire said he intended to campaign for the Democratic slate during the summer.

White will face Bill Clements, the state's first Republican governor since Reconstruction, in November. Clements easily defeated retired insurance man Lowell "Duke" Embs, 52, of San Antonio in Saturday's GOP primary. Clements won more than 92 percent of the vote.

Temple said, "I entered this race because I sincerely believed that Bill Clements must be replaced by a Democrat. It is a belief that I hold just as strongly today."

Temple becomes the second candidate to pull out of the Democratic runoff.

State Treasurer Warren G. Harding, who finished No. 2 in Saturday's primary for treasurer, announced Tuesday he was quitting the race.

White captured about 44.7 percent of the votes in Saturday's Democratic gubernatorial primary, less than the majority needed to avert a runoff but enough to give him a hefty lead over the other five candidates.

And still the rains fall ...

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

Late afternoon showers dumped anywhere from less than a tenth of an inch to nearly an inch of rain on the Permian Basin as the welcome saga of May showers continued yesterday.

Funnel clouds, tornado watches and flash flood warnings accompanied the downpour as a storm pattern rolled south of Midland through Martin and Glasscock counties between 4 p.m. and dusk.

Down in San Antonio, ducks likely were scrambling for high ground as creeks swelled from nearly six inches of rainfall last night, the Associated Press said.

And it's not over yet — the wet spell that has lasted for several days is forecast to continue today with a 20 percent chance of showers.

Gauges at the U.S. Big Spring Field Station have recorded six hundredths of an inch of rain since yesterday morning, bringing the May total to 1.73 inches, according to Nell Rogers of the farm station. The total for the month of May normally is 2.88 inches, she said.

The Colorado River Municipal Water District reported one tenth of an inch of rain fell at its pump station north of town on Snyder Highway. As much as nine tenths of an inch fell at Lake Thomas, according to Rod Lewis, acting assistant manager for the water district.

Inside the city, Red Thomas of 107 E. 13th said his gauge measured three tenths of an inch since yesterday morning.

Flash flood watches and severe thunderstorm warnings were issued for several West Texas counties late yesterday afternoon, including Mitchell and Glasscock counties. Glasscock County additionally was under a tornado watch in the evening as weather forecasters took a look at conditions favorable for a tornado in that area.

A tornado was sighted south of Midland in a storm pattern moving northeast at about 4:30 p.m., according to a spokesman for Midland Regional Airport. The Texas Department of Public Safety was said to have spotted the twister about 20 miles southwest of Midland.

DPS spokeswoman Pat Sunday, however, said the only thing Midland County troopers spotted was funnel clouds.

"They all went back up in the clouds. They didn't touch down," she said.

Dispatchers for the Martin and Glasscock county sheriff's offices said that by the time the storm pattern hit their area, the funnel activity had diminished and it was "just a lot of wind and rain."

Today's forecast calls for a 20 percent chance of showers. Whether or not more rain falls, it's expected to be overcast for another day.

Temperature-wise, the high today and tomorrow is expected in the 70s.

Water figures show

West Texas is thirsty in 1982

A dry first trimester of 1982 has led to an "unprecedented" thirst for water deliveries by the Colorado River Municipal Water District, district officials said.

Demand for water by the district's member cities is up by 20 percent this year over the first four months of last year, according to the district.

Through the end of April, deliveries to cities stood at 4.4 billion gallons, up 767 million gallons over last year, or 20 percent.

Water to oil companies also is up, gaining by 4 percent to 787 million gallons during the first trimester of 1982.

Rod Lewis, acting assistant manager for the water district, said the big demand for water is "due to the long dry spell" the area has experienced so far this year.

With the recent splash of rainfall we've been having, he added, "demand should taper off. There shouldn't be any problem handling the increase."

It's quite an increase though — officials estimate that if demand keeps up, the district will experience a 10-billion gallon first half in 1982, a level that hasn't been reached since 1974.

Lewis said, however, the current wet spell should dampen demand and "the big increase shouldn't continue through the summer."

Looking at last month, Big Spring water demand was up 15 percent over April 1981 to 227.3 million gallons; Odessa is up 39 percent over April 1981 with 654.8 gallons delivered; Snyder is up 21 percent with 92.1 million gallons, and Stanton is up 378 percent over last year with 11.4 million gallons in April 1982 (there were mechanical problems last year, accounting for the big gain this year).

NEW COMPUTER SYSTEM — Robert Buckner, training program officer at State National Bank, sits before a new computer system which allows the bank direct access and communication to the Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas. The system, entitled

RESPONSE, primarily will be used by the bank to transfer and receive funds from other institutions also tied into the computer. Buckner explained the computer's basic operations at a special demonstration yesterday.

Computer ties local bank into the Federal Reserve

The State National Bank along with the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas yesterday unveiled the installation of a RESPONSE communications network in a special demonstration for local bankers and news media.

The RESPONSE system, valued at $5,000, is a personal computer designed to connect State National directly to the Reserve Bank of Dallas, as well as give access to the nationwide communication network of the Federal Reserve system.

Initially, State National Bank will be using the computer primarily to transfer and receive funds. When not transferring funds, the versatility of the system will allow the bank to perform general accounting, manage cash, secure inventories and create software programs for other daily management activities.

John Currie, president of State National said, "This computer is a milestone for us. It allows us to compete with and offer some of the same services as the banks in New York.

"We hope to tie into the Texas Independent Bank system and interface with Dow Jones. We feel the system will benefit other small independent banks also by providing them with financial market information and other services."

State National is the first financial institution to acquire the personal computer in the Federal Reserve's 11th District, which includes all of Texas and parts of Oklahoma, Louisiana and New Mexico. The RESPONSE network is available to all financial institutions, which means the system potentially could serve more than 3,500 users.

On hand for the computer's unveiling were Bob Smith, Neil Ryan and Marcia Schneider of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas; Barry Smith of the Texas Independent Bank System; and representatives from area banks.

Friends rally for family in hard times

By BOB CARPENTER

GARDEN CITY — The people of the Garden City area are banding together with the spirit of a close-knit family to help a neighbor who has fallen on hard times.

For Lupe Medrano and his family, the troubles began last May when a son, Billy Joe, was born premature and in poor health. The baby was born in Hall-Bennett Hospital and later transferred to a Lubbock hospital, where medical bills began to mount because of the special intensive care Billy Joe required.

The Medranos, while trying to keep up with medical payments, also were trying to raise four other children. Things got much worse this January when Mr. Medrano was involved in a car accident which put him in the hospital with a severely injured leg.

Only recently has Medrano been able to return to work; however, more bad news greeted him as Billy Joe was diagnosed as having cerebral palsy. According to Mrs. Medrano this will mean more trips to Lubbock, more doctor bills and possibly an operation. She said Billy Joe is already in therapy two days a week at the Dora

Roberts Rehabilitation Center.

The people of Garden City decided to help the family solve some of its financial problems by holding a benefit pancake supper sponsored by the city's Lions Club. The benefit is scheduled for tonight at 5:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria, according to Hubert Frerich of the Lions Club.

"They are part of our community and we feel we're all in the same boat," Frerich said. "Everybody knows they are a good family and something needs to be done for them. The proceeds from the pancake supper will go toward hospital bills."

Mrs. Delmar Batla said Lupe Medrano has worked for her husband's cotton gin for 16 years and she hopes the supper will help to pay off at least part of the Medrano's bills.

Mrs. Medrano said of the benefit supper, "We are surprised that there are so many nice people willing to do this for us. All I can say is that we are very happy."

Tickets will be available at the door beginning at 5:30 p.m. today. Following the supper will be a presentation on narcotics and drugs by a representative of the Texan's War on Drugs committee.

Britain vows to continue military action

By The Associated Press
Britain today vowed to continue military activities to regain the Falkland Islands while accepting U.N. proposals as a framework for future talks. An Argentine Foreign Ministry source said the British position ruled out a diplomatic solution for the moment.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons in London that Britain accepted a U.N. plan for settling the conflict as a "framework" for future talks, but said Britain will "continue with our military activities."

Mrs. Thatcher said the U.N. proposals came with "no specific details" attached but linked a cease-fire with Argentine withdrawal from the islands, a basic British precondition for a truce.

But Mrs. Thatcher said it was "likely" that Argentina was seeking a cease-fire without withdrawal of its troops from the islands.

In Brussels, British Defense Minister John Nott said that "to agree to a cease-fire without a total withdrawal would leave the burglar with the spoils." He spoke to a news conference after meeting with NATO ministers and U.S. Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger.

He said Britain would continue to seek a peaceful solution through the United Nations, but added, "I must stress that these efforts can only be based on the precondition of Argentine withdrawal."

An Argentine Foreign Ministry source in Buenos Aires said Nott's statement "means that there is no diplomatic solution for the moment."

The source asked not to be identified.

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher met with her Cabinet, and in New York, Britain's ambassador to the United Nations, Anthony Parsons, told the British Broadcasting Corp. that the Argentine statement Wednesday night was not an "enormous breakthrough. I don't think anything has changed particularly here."

Foreign Secretary Francis Pym had told the House of Commons earlier that he and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. were working on a new peace plan.

Argentina told U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar on Wednesday night that "the Argentine government reiterates that it is willing to negotiate a peaceful settlement" regarding the islands.

The Argentine communique did not say the junta accepted the substance of the secretary-general's proposals to settle the conflict over the British island colony Argentina seized April 2. But it said it "is willing to negotiate a peaceful solution."

Perez de Cuellar refused to make public his peace plan, but informed sources said it included a cease-fire, withdrawal of Argentine and British forces from the Falklands area and appointment of a U.N. administrator for the islands while negotiations resume to determine their future. The plan reportedly takes no position on the thorny sovereignty issue.

Pym told the House of Commons Haig's peace efforts were continuing and Britain made a "constructive contribution" to them Tuesday.

"A vital ingredient of the ideas on which we are working is an early cease-fire and the prompt withdrawal of Argentine forces," Pym said. He said the plan under discussion was an amalgam of proposals from Haig, Perez de Cuellar and Peruvian President Fernando Belaunde Terry, who made peace proposals last weekend.

Meanwhile, no new military action was reported in the South Atlantic battle zone Wednesday.

Argentina drew the last blood Tuesday when one of its planes fired a missile that set fire to the British destroyer Sheffield, forcing its crew to abandon ship, and a British Harrier jet fighter was shot down and the pilot killed in an attack on one of the Falkland airstrips.

The British government said at least 30 of the Sheffield's 270 crewmen were killed, and government sources said 57 more men were missing or wounded. The shattered hull of the destroyer was reported still afloat Wednesday.

Two Argentine ships and a Chilean craft continued the search east of the tip of South America for about 350 sailors missing from Argentina's only cruiser, the General Belgrano, which a British submarine torpedoed and sank on Sunday. The Argentine government reported the rescue of 680 crewmen.

Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, said two Argentine submarines were reported operating in the 200-mile war zone both nations declared around the Falklands, but it said the rest of the Argentine fleet was sailing back toward the mainland coast.

Jurors are shown Hinckley's writings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even before the first defense witness testifies about John W. Hinckley's mind, jurors are getting to know him as a self-styled "psychopathic poet" in love with Jodie Foster and awed by Adolf Hitler.

From handwritten essays, poems and postcards, the jury learned Wednesday that the man who shot President Reagan considered himself both a Christian and a Nazi; that he thought Miss Foster misunderstood him; that he believed Hitler was misunderstood by the world.

Hinckley's writings were submitted as evidence Wednesday by prosecutors trying to prove Hinckley was sane when he shot Reagan and three others March 30, 1981.

Defense witnesses, including Hinckley's parents, were ready to begin testifying today that the defendant was insane.

Hinckley's undated papers were seized from his parents' $300,000 home in a Denver suburb and from Room 312 of the Park Central Hotel in Washington, where he made final plans to impress Miss Foster by killing a president.

"I have become what I wanted to be all along, a psychopathic poet," Hinckley wrote in "The Painful Evolution," one of 38 pages of writings seized from the hotel room.

At least two poems are addressed to Miss Foster, the movie star with whom Hinckley carried on a one-sided love affair. He telephoned her twice and left letters under her dormitory door at Yale. She told him to leave her alone.

"Jodie squirms and pretends not to care," he wrote in "This Thing Called Love." "I swear the end is very near. Right here is a good place to start. Your heart shall forget how to beat. How sweet is this thing called love!"

And in "Amen": "Jodie, please watch over me and protect me. Have me do your will in this life of mine. I repent for my sins and ask your forgiveness. And I humbly ask all of this in your mother's name. Amen."

In one of the essays submitted to the jury of 11 blacks and one white, Hinckley expressed strong prejudice against blacks and Jews and said he "officially joined the Nationalist Socialist Party of America in October, 1978."

Two convicted in murder

CONROE, Texas (AP) — Two men convicted of killing an 8-year-old girl whose father owed them money have been sentenced to life imprisonment.

A jury of six men and six women deliberated more than 10 hours over two days before assessing punishment Wednesday for Harry D. Carter, 48, and Fermin P. Hernandez, 38.

The pair was convicted Monday of capital murder in the Oct. 26 shooting death of Karen Weicht. Karen's father, Craig Weicht, also was killed in the attack at his home. Her mother, Carolyn, was shot three times but survived by pretending to be dead.

District Attorney James H. Keeshan said he was "not real disappointed" about the decision but added, "I felt like the death of a young girl warranted the death penalty."

Carter and Weicht were partners in a business that sold energy-saving devices in 1979 and Weicht owed Carter about $11,000, witnesses testified during two-week trial.

Following orders from the pair, Mrs. Weicht said she called her husband and asked him to come home.

The men then returned and shot Mrs. Weicht three times, she said.

LCC grad hails from Ackerly

LUBBOCK — Lubbock Christian College announced that Stan Blagrove, son of Mr. and Mrs. Derwood Blagrove of Ackerly, received his Bachelor of Science in Business Administration degree in May 1 commencement exercises. He is a 1978 graduate of Sand High School.

Sales tax rebate is up

State Comptroller Bob Bullock sent Big Spring $56,929.18 in April as the city's share of the one-percent sales tax — a 44 percent increase over the $33,841.35 received last April.

Big Spring's share of the sales tax was nearly three times as much as the state increase, according to Bullock. Big Spring's total for 1982 is now at $508,375.71.

Other area towns picked up the following checks: Colorado City, $9,707.27, a 28 percent increase; Lamesa, $16,539.55, a 29 percent increase and Stanton, $1,550.70, a 23 percent decrease over 1981.

Temple

The day after the primary, White was expressing delight with the results of Saturday's primary and said polls showed that Armstrong's supporters preferred the attorney general over Temple. Temple declined to talk with reporters that day, choosing instead to meet privately with advisers and rest after what his press secretary called a frustrating night.

An aide to White, Dwayne Holman, said Wednesday that the White campaign expected to budget about $800,000 for the runoff and already had pledges for about $700,000. During the primary campaign, White reported raising $1.76 million and spending $1.56 million.

Of the gubernatorial primary campaigns, Temple's was the deepest in debt, with about $1 million in loans.

School to open new addition

On Friday, there will be a ground-breaking ceremony for the new addition to Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic School at 1009 Hearn. It will begin with a "Mass of Thanksgiving" to be celebrated by Bishop Joseph Anthony Florenza, bishop of the Catholic Diocese of San Antonio.

Following the Mass, he will break ground that will begin the construction of the new Science Laboratory and Learning Resource Center.

The cost of this addition is estimated at $100,000 and is expected to be completed by the beginning of the 1982-83 school year. This expansion program is phase one in a five-phase program over the next period of years. The "constant demand and ever growing population of the school warrants such expansion to enhance its curriculum," school officials said.

The science laboratory is a facility for grade levels K-7, but especially necessary for grades 5-7. Students will have the opportunity to expand their knowledge of science through discovery

NEW LEARNING CENTER — Drawing above shows the new $100,000 Science Laboratory and Learning Resource Center to be added to the Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic School at 1009 Hearn. and experimentation in a laboratory setting. The learning resource center has a two-fold purpose, to serve as a library, large enough to accommodate the necessary book volume and audio visual for the school as well as to enrich and challenge students in a learning center.

Father Bernard Gully, pastor, Sister Lucy Keane, principal, and members of the school board, have invited all residents of the Big Spring area to come to the event.

Texas traffic deaths up 6 percent in 1981

AUSTIN — Texas traffic deaths increased by six percent last year compared to 1980, according to statistics compiled by the Department of Public Safety. The mileage death rate, however, decreased by two percent. The rate was 4.2 deaths per hundred million miles traveled in 1981 as compared to 4.3 in 1980.

"A total of 4,701 fatalities were recorded on our state streets and highways for 1981," said Col. Jim Adams, DPS director. "This was the fifth consecutive record year for motor vehicle deaths in Texas."

DPS reports 3,071 city traffic deaths in 1981, which is 44.1 percent of the total fatalities, while rural highway accidents claimed 2,630 lives or 55.9 percent of the deaths. Adams noted that DWI-related deaths last year totaled 1,082, an increase of eight percent above 1980.

One killed, one hurt in supermarket collapse

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — One woman died and another was critically injured when rainwater collapsed part of a supermarket roof during thunderstorms that flooded parts of southern Oklahoma.

"It was raining real heavy ... and the ceiling collapsed," said Bernice Sinoir, an employee of the Humpty Dumpty supermarket. "I looked up and saw the ceiling ripping off."

The roof collapsed about 6:20 p.m. Wednesday, pinning two women in the debris and slightly injuring a third. "One lady was trapped under about 5 feet of rubble," Mrs. Sinoir said.

Weather

Floods reported near San Antonio

By The Associated Press
Heavy thunderstorms moved through the San Antonio area early today, dumping from three to six inches of rain and causing flooding along two creeks and the San Antonio River.

The National Weather Service issued flood warnings for Salado Creek, Olmos Creek and the San Antonio River early today after the thunderstorms dumped heavy rainfall in the area and an approaching cold front threatened the area with more heavy rain.

Authorities warned motorists to stay away from low water crossings in the San Antonio area and said many streets and roads will be flooded by the runoff along the two creeks and the river.

Two weather systems combined to produce locally severe thunderstorms over portions of North Texas and South Texas early today.

The two systems, a surface cold front moving through Northwest Texas and an upper level trough of low pressure moving across West Texas produced golf ball size hail in the San Antonio area in addition to the drenching rainfall.

Flash flood warnings were issued during the night and early today for persons in Atascosa, Bexar, Guadalupe, Medina and Wilson Counties.

Rainfall at Churchill Square at San Antonio had been recorded at 5.50 inches by 5 a.m. today and more rain was expected. The official measurement at the San Antonio International Airport was 3.18 inches.

7 die in plane crash

CHARLOTTE, Texas (AP) — Roger Rodriguez was plowing a field with tractor and disc harrow when he heard a rumble in the sky and looked up to see if it was going to rain. What he saw was a plane crash that killed seven people.

"I heard something like thunder and when I looked at the clouds the plane was falling," he said. "There was a lot of smoke and pieces were falling along with the plane. It looked like paper falling from the sky."

The twin-engine plane exploded in flight Wednesday afternoon. Investigators said the charter flight was returning its passengers from a fishing trip near San Jose del Cobo on Mexico's Baja peninsula. All seven people aboard died.

Rodriguez said debris from the crash landed almost at his feet.

"It (the airplane) was on fire ... it continued to burn after it hit the ground," Rodriguez said. "We came over and the debris was all on fire. We couldn't see anybody."

"It was awful," said Allen Hime Jr., who owns the land where the plane went down. "I'll tell you, I was in the service and I've seen airplane crashes and car wrecks and so forth, but I never saw one burned up like this. It was burned about as totally as it could be."

The turbo-prop airplane had stopped at Laredo to clear U.S. Customs after crossing the border and departed about 2 p.m. enroute to San Antonio, said officials at Laredo International Airport.

The names of the victims were being withheld pending positive identification of the badly burned remains and notification of kin, said Atascosa County Deputy Sheriff Leonard Lozano.

Budget compromise

GOP senators behind Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of public bickering, President Reagan and Senate Republicans are suddenly united behind a budget calling for $95 billion in general tax increases over three years and $40 billion in unspecified Social Security cuts and tax hikes.

"I hope you can pass it," President Reagan told Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee by telephone late Wednesday night after the compromise was worked out swiftly in private negotiations between administration officials and Senate GOP leaders.

A short time later, the committee did give tentative approval.

The vote was 11-9 with all the "yes" votes coming from Republicans — including conservatives who cited assurances that there would be no change in the 10 percent personal income tax cut scheduled for July 1983 — and all the "no" votes coming from Democrats.

The proposal envisions deficits of $105 billion in 1983 and $42 billion in 1985.

Democrats complained about the Social Security provision and tried but failed, 10-7, to delete that $40 billion segment of the plan.

The vote was a stunning turnabout, coming only a few hours after the committee voted 20-0 to reject Reagan's original big-deficit budget. That plan was submitted in February, but was discarded almost immediately by members of both parties because of its large deficits.

PRESIDENT REAGAN
...bickering over?

Shortly after the panel dealt Reagan a highly public rejection, Domenici, Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker, White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III and budget director David A. Stockman huddled to work out details of a new proposal.

Steve Bell, staff director of the Budget Committee, gave this account of the behind-the-scenes moves that led to the compromise:

White House officials were told that Domenici had rounded up enough Republican support to get his own plan with even higher taxes through the committee and asked for an opportunity to discuss it.

Domenici, eager for White House backing, agreed to discuss the matter, subsequently agreed to the compromise and then took the new version back to the committee where all 11 Republicans joined him in supporting it.

White House officials could not be reached to give their version of how the compromise came about.

Compared to the last Reagan offer before budget compromise talks broke off last week with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., the version approved by the Budget Committee calls for smaller tax increases, bigger cuts in domestic spending and smaller cuts in the proposed defense buildup.

It also contains much larger proposed changes in Social Security.

But at the same time, it contains nearly double the tax increases proposed in Reagan's original budget, submitted last February. Moreover, that original administration budget contained no mention of Social Security cuts.

Domenici told his committee colleagues Reagan had endorsed the compromise in a telephone conversation.

"I hope you can pass it. I am for it. I will do everything I can to see that it passes and becomes law," the New Mexico Republican quoted the president as saying.

Domenici said Congress would be required to vote by the end of this year to make the cuts, which he said would be recommended by a bipartisan study commission already appointed by Reagan.

BUSTED — An 82-year-old woman was arrested for growing marijuana in her back yard, but the officer who booked her hopes the judge will give the "sweet old lady" a one-day probation and a warning not to grow it again. Laura Ethel Clark, pictured in her back yard Wednesday, said she only used the stuff to relieve the pain in her joints by boiling it into tea and rubbing it on her joints.

Grandmother busted for growing pot

HOUSTON (AP) — An 82-year-old grandmother charged with marijuana possession says an arresting officer has promised to give her "something even better" to ease the pain in her stiff joints.

Laura Ethel Clark, grandmother of five, was freed on a $1,000 bond Wednesday after narcotics officers found plants bearing nine pounds of the illegal weed in her back yard.

Police said they received a tip that Mrs. Clark was growing marijuana and reluctantly arrested "the sweet old lady," said Officer Joe Dugger.

Mrs. Clark admitted she was growing marijuana but thought it was all right since she was only using it to relieve her arthritis, Dugger said.

"She said it would make her feel good," Dugger said, adding he hopes a judge will let her off with a one-day probation and a warning.

Mrs. Clark said a doctor in Mexico gave her the seeds three years ago.

The Mall Street Journal

You would think that after an event as successful as the Flea Market that we would deserve a rest out here at the Big Spring Mall, not true. This week at the Big Spring Mall there are several excellent exhibits and specialty kiosks.

Let me start with the exhibit, the American Printing House for the Blind and World Book — Childcraft International, Inc. in collaboration with Bramalea Limited have started a project to help the blind and visually handicapped in Texas. They have undertaken the exhibition of this project as a non-profit community service, which also helps in promoting good will for the companies and their products. The official title of this exhibit is the Talking World Book, and it lives up to its name. The Talking World Book is the first encyclopedia to be recorded on tape for the blind and partially sighted. The Talking World Book consists of 19 large volumes containing the World Book index, in both Braille and large type, the reference set itself consists of 219 six hour cassettes.

The developer of the Big Spring Mall, Bramalea Ltd. and World Book have jointly donated a Talking World Book to the Texas School for the blind in Austin, Texas. Everyone be sure to come see this worthwhile exhibit.

If you gentlemen have not yet found something for mom the Big Spring Mall is the place to come look, other than the fine specials being offered by the many fine merchants of the mall there will be several special kiosks at the mall this weekend. Swails Originals have been at the mall since Monday and will be here till Saturday night. Jim Swails has brought his hanging lamps and let me tell you they are beautiful. There are several different sizes to choose from and they are already assembled.

in side of the glass bulbs, there are beautiful butterflies, and dried flowers. For that special mom there are a few large lamps that feature real preserved quail in a natural setting, all of these lamps are so expertly hand crafted that they look as if they'll fly off at any minute.

Another special kiosks will contain my friend Ruben Vargas with his Computer Portraits. Those of you that attended the Flea Market will remember Ruben and his wife, Polly. Ruben can take a picture of you or use one of yours and transfer it on to a T-shirt, calendar, or any of the other novelty items he offers.

Perhaps the most important event this Mother's Day weekend at the Big Spring Mall is the First Annual Mother's Day Plant Show and Sale. The kind folks at Johansen Landscaping and Nursery are sponsoring this year's show. Jackie Johansen tells me that she will have Hydrangeas, Azaleas, Mums of different colors, miniature Roses, Rose bushes, miniature Rose Trees, fruit and oak trees, and a plant that is new to the Big Spring area, the Bavarian Belle. To me, a gift that will keep on growing and blooming for years to come would be a perfect Mother's day gift.

I also want to remind you that May 15th the Big Spring Mall will be hosting the Health and Safety Fair. This promises to be another wonderful show not only for the viewing public but for those who wish to take advantage of the many health services that will be on hand.

Before I bring an end to this Mall Street Journal let me remind you that throughout the mall this week there are hundreds of values to be found for that special mom.

Bishops rap Solidarity

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's Roman Catholic bishops deplored the outbreak of street violence this week, criticized the Solidarity leaders who called the demonstrations that provoked the police attacks and appealed again for negotiations between the government and the independent labor movement.

"With pain and concern for the fate of our nation and state, the new disturbances shaking the country are delaying social accord, halting steps towards normalization and misguiding the youth," the bishops said in a statement after rioting Monday and Tuesday in more than a dozen cities.

The bishops said they "again expressed their deepest conviction about the necessity of an accord, as formulated by the Polish bishops, as the proper way of getting out of the depths of the national and economic catastrophe."

"Talks about accord cannot take place only among political parties," the statement continued. "The social strata — workers, farmers and intellectuals — should take part in them."

Although "A particular share in these talks should be given to trade unions. Without their voice, renewal cannot be planned and effectively put into effect."

The church, a powerful force in Poland since more than 90 percent of the 36 million people are Catholics, has repeatedly urged negotiations between the martial-law regime and Solidarity. The independent labor federation was suspended and many of its leaders interned when martial law was declared Dec. 13.

Suspect shot dead; kidnapped girl missing

MIRA, La. (AP) — A northwest Louisiana sheriff believes 9-year-old Jennifer Rebecca Barden was left behind in Missouri by a fugitive kidnapping suspect who was shot to death by a young mother here Wednesday.

Sheriff Dan Hathaway of Caddo Parish said his office would not charge Kay Clayton, 23, who killed Billy D. Wilson, 27, after he broke into in her rural home about 10 miles from the Arkansas border.

"The intruder turned on her and sort of made a noise that sounded like a growl and made a threatening move toward her," Hathaway said. "At that point, she closed her eyes and shot."

"She had that .357 Magnum and it hit him in the mouth. It was a little gruesome with his teeth scattered all over the room, and it killed him instantly."

In Missouri, authorities expressed regret that Wilson died before investigators could ask him the fate of Jennifer Barden, who was last seen getting into a truck last Saturday outside her home in Gallatin, Mo.

Her brother, the only eyewitness, said just one man was in the truck. Authorities said that apparently ruled out any participation in the kidnapping by Roy James Hill, 36.

Hill and Wilson broke out of the Washington Parish Jail in Bogalusa, La., on April 18. Hill was serving time for burglary and Wilson was awaiting transfer to the Louisiana State Penitentiary to serve a life term for raping an 8-year-old girl.

Hill was captured Tuesday in Bonham, Texas, but authorities said his companion fled on foot. They said a truck, stolen shortly after Hill's capture in Bonham, was abandoned in Sulfur Springs, Texas, and a car stolen in Sulfur Springs was found next door to the Clayton home in Mira.

"I think there is very little hope now," said Sheriff Maurice Robison of Caldwell County, Mo., after learning Wilson was killed.

The missing girl's stepfather, Ronald Nelson, said the "tragedy is nobody will get to ask him where she is. I didn't want this man dead ... until after we found our daughter."

"I'm thrilled in the sense he (Wilson) got what was coming to him," said Mayor Tom Gallagher of Gallatin. "A lot of people around her said it too bad it was so fast. They wanted to see him suffer as much as this little girl."

Hill was being held in the Grayson County Jail in Sherman, Texas, where authorities said he would be taken later to Missouri. They said they could not question Hill because he was a federal prisoner.

Sheriff Hathaway said his investigators talked with Missouri authorities and that he concurred in the belief that Jennifer probably was left behind in Missouri.

"Mrs. Clayton Clayton got up, picked up the weapon, walked through the house and confronted him in the living room," the sheriff said.

81 mm projectile found

CUERO, Texas (AP) — Military experts say they will destroy the 81 millimeter projectile that someone jettisoned in the Guadalupe River.

"We'll just get rid of it because it never could be used by the Army," Sgt. 1st Class Gary Owen of the 137th Ordnance Group, headquartered at the Corpus Christi Army Depot, said Wednesday.

Texas Highway Department workmen building a bridge over the river two miles outside Cuero on the Old San Antonio Highway scooped up the 21-inch long Army green projectile while dredging the bottom of the river on Tuesday.

One too many

There was once a legendary alcoholic who abstained, imagined he was cured, and thought that he could safely take the occasional drink. He is a figment of the hopes of more of your acquaintances than you may realize. Unfortunately for them, he is purely mythical: within a week of his "cure," there is nothing "occasional" about the drinks he consumes.

There is no known cure for alcoholism that allows for resumption of drinking in quantities, however small. The only cure is total abstinence. But to be deprived of drink can produce drastic symptoms in the alcoholic, not all conducive to continuation of the cure. These withdrawal symptoms, as they are called, may range from the familiar early morning "shakes" to delirium tremens, better known as the D.T.s and alcoholic epilepsy.

THIS IS JUST ONE of the many paradoxes associated with alcoholism. Anyone who drinks at all may be familiar with some of them. Alcohol would appear to stimulate, yet it is known to be a depressant; it provides us with a tonic of energy yet steadily destroys our bodies; the more you drink, the more capable you believe yourself to be but the more incapable you become; alcohol is widely accepted as pleasurable, yet it can be the cause of great misery and hardship; society condones drinking but condemns the unfortunate alcoholic.

The most alarming paradox is associated with the causes of alcoholism, insofar as they can be recognized. In one way or another, the alcoholic is seeking help to cope with an emotional and personal trauma. But his cry for aid too often goes unrecognized in a society which is quite accustomed to drinking continuously for purely social reasons.

ALCOHOL HAS BEEN taken for centuries in order to facilitate interpersonal relations and smooth social functioning. Once again, the paradox is apparent. In small amounts alcohol brings out in us, we like to think, all that is most genial and lively, increases our ability to relate to others and suppresses, for a while, the rigors and discomforts of ordinary life.

But in excess the process is put harshly into reverse, and greater problems are created for the alcoholic than those which originally drove him to drink.

The single life

Usually the lag-time conversations around the office touch on sports, the latest in music, movies or what's going on in the newspaper world. A new subject was added to the field earlier this week by the married types among us — recalling the life of a single.

Some had difficulty in recalling the solo life; to others it was a bright memory that hadn't yet faded. Whatever the recollection, the conclusion drawn was married life reduces the meaning of "singles" to tennis, packets of cheese and baseball.

One representative of that alternative lifestyle claimed the essence of being married was giving up responsibility. "You can always blame it on your spouse," he quipped. Sure. If the lawn isn't mowed or oil not changed in the family car, just blame it on your wife. Sounds like an easy out to me.

But how many husbands would take the blame if a ring is left around the tub or shirt collars not ironed properly?

SINGLES HAVE to take care of themselves, they said. If they want to. That's where the responsibility came in. If you wanted to live the part of a slob, that was okay. If you wanted to skip breakfast, eat lunch at three, and dinner sometime after midnight, that was all right. It was your stomach that voiced the complaints.

Speaking of meals, most singles are content with strange diets. The same married spokesman recalled the day when a peanut butter sandwich and iced tea was a bona fide meal. It filled him up and that's what counted. It was also cheap so he could spend his money on the important things in life — records, books and movie tickets. A passerby added beer to the list.

Now all his money goes for food because he has to feed two (and possibly more in the future). And for some reason, married types forget the joys of bologna sandwich dinners or a hearty helping of ravioli.

Instead of money going for those fun things like fast cars, entertaining fast women, new albums and flashy clothes, Married Monty now puts his hard-earned dollar into the family car (that always has something to fix), household furnishings and food. And when you get all these things, they have to be kept clean and in working order.

THAT'S ANOTHER point that irked him. He longed for the days when he could toss the newspaper and dirty clothes on the floor, leave crusted dishes on the end table for weeks and clean up the bathroom only when he left it dirtier than when he entered. Now everything must be in its place, ready and waiting. For what? He isn't sure but he's obeying his wife's orders.

Even though he's been married for several years now and resigned to the fact he will be for awhile, Monty says, "I don't think it would be very hard adopting the life of a single again."

This is where I stepped in. Still favoring the single persuasion, I reminded him about washing all those clothes by oneself — mulling up every once in awhile to shrink a nice shirt or turn whites a strange shade of green, blue or red.

How about gazing into that refrigerator that has three shelves too many? All you need is one and that sometimes is too many. And when you break down and buy groceries, you spend all night sitting on a chair in front of it, admiring all that good stuff you've packed in there. One week later, it's all gone and not to be filled for another few months.

Or letting a bill get lost somewhere on the premises and no one around to remind you to pay it until suddenly the lights flicker and go out or the phone goes dead in the middle of a long distance call?

Or all those empty mailboxes that gather cobwebs because you never write to anyone in the first place? Or the apartment that never gets cleaned because you don't have a vacuum cleaner (or don't care to push one around like a maid)?

Or those nights spent by yourself because you've blown all your money the day before on new tapes or one night out on the town?

I COULD have gone on but Married Monty and his pals had had enough. Reconsidering their point, they expressed a relief that they now had someone to share these miseries with. Not all the oddities of single life go away with the exchange of rings.

Now that they got this crisis off their chests, we turned to more important matters of conversation. Like sports, the latest in music, movies and what's going on in the newspaper world.

"Of course I don't want it known, but all of these business failures..."

Dinner at the White House

One of the main concerns of the White House is that President Reagan has been perceived by the media as being insensitive to the poor. The matter came to a head when CBS's Bill Moyers produced a documentary titled, "People Like Us," which showed people who purportedly were not enjoying Reaganomics.

Although the show had a very low rating, the President happened to see it and told his people something had to be done about his image.

A high-level meeting of advisers was called the following morning to discuss ways of countering the "insensitivity" issue.

"The President is sick and tired of being portrayed as a bad guy when it comes to poor people. We have to come up with an idea to turn this perception around," a top aide said.

"How about this? Why doesn't the President give a black tie dinner for the poor people at the White House?"

"That's not bad. Does anybody know any poor people we can invite? There was silence in the room."

"Let's call the Republican National Committee," someone suggested. "They must have a list."

An aide picked up the hot line to Republican Headquarters. "We need 200 poor people to invite to dinner at the White House. Never mind why. Just give us the names... You don't have any?"

The aide hung up. "They said they don't keep names of poor people because they never give to the Party."

"What about the Department of Human Resources? They must have a list of disenfranchised citizens in their computers," someone else suggested.

The same aide picked up the phone and got a Deputy Secretary at Human Resources on the phone. "We need the names of 200 poor people to invite to a dinner at the White House... Just a minute, he wants to know how poor?"

"Real poor. People who are feeling the pain of the recession and have nowhere to turn," the chief White House aide said.

The man on the phone told the Deputy Secretary, "Scrape the bottom of the barrel. Unmarried mothers on welfare, senior citizens who have lost their homes, people who have been unemployed for more than a year, and a few who went bankrupt and are now existing on food stamps. Get the names over here by three o'clock, so we can run a poverty check on them."

"Okay," someone said. "Now that we've got the guest list, let's talk about the menu. What do poor people like to eat?"

"I know they like cheddar cheese. Every time we give it away, they stand in line for hours to get a block of it."

"Good, we'll serve cheddar cheese soufflé."

"Wait a minute," someone said. "How do we get them to the White House?"

"That's their problem," an aide said.

"Hold it," a communications expert said. "These people don't have money to come to Washington. If we have a dinner for them and no one shows up, the whole thing will blow up in our faces. We'll have to pay to bring them in."

"But if we do that, they might decide to cash in their tickets and pocket the fares instead."

"Are you trying to tell me that someone would rather have the airfare, than dine at the White House?"

"Poor people have been known to do crazy things. That's why we have to keep a safety net under them."

Resurrection is explained

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why is the resurrection of Jesus Christ really important? — J.A.L.

DEAR J.A.L.: The resurrection of Jesus Christ is the most important event in human history. It is the watershed or dividing line between hope and despair.

The resurrection of Christ is important first of all because it shows that death has been defeated. Death is an intruder in this world, for God created the world perfect. Man's rebellion against God brought about death. But by his resurrection, Jesus Christ showed that the last enemy of man — death — has been defeated. And that means that you and I have the hope of eternal life. There is no reason to believe in life after death apart from the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Because he rose, he has given us assurance of life beyond the grave in Heaven for all who trust Christ. "We know that the one who raised the Lord Jesus from the dead will also raise us with Jesus and present us with you in his presence" (2 Corinthians 4:14).

The resurrection also proves that Jesus Christ is who he said he was — the Son of God. That means he can be trusted, even with our eternal salvation. That means the death of Jesus was not a tragic accident, but God's means of bringing us salvation from sin. The resurrection of Jesus Christ shows that God accepted the sacrifice of Christ for the sins of the world.

The real question however, is this: Is the resurrection of Jesus Christ important to you personally? Have you ever committed yourself to Christ, inviting him to be Lord of your life and trusting him alone for your salvation? If not, make this a time of commitment, so you can know the hope of Heaven by faith in Christ.

Haig's problems

WASHINGTON — The Falkland Islands crisis adds a new chapter to the non-stop Washington saga of Alexander Haig and his enemies. This time, events have united foes from many quarters against Haig.

The secretary of State will almost surely survive the storm. But unless he begins to make alliances with other figures in the national security establishment, he will be seriously weakened on the issues most critical to American foreign policy — arms control and the Middle East.

The most potent foes of Haig are the White House allies of Vice President George Bush. They see Haig as a possible rival to Bush for the presidency, or at least a hostile figure determined to throw stones. During the Falkland Islands crisis they have assiduously passed word about various actions by Haig — some involving use of a special plane — to push himself front and center as a mediator.

A second group at odds with Haig commands the top posts in the Pentagon. There is personal rivalry between Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, who fancies the State post, and Haig, who, as a former general, knows Defense issues intimately. That friction spills over into differences on almost all policy issues. During the Falkland Islands crisis, the Pentagon has emphasized long-standing arrangements for cooperation with Britain, thus making Haig, as a negotiator, look lukewarm in sympathy for a gallant ally.

Liberals in the Congress and the media constitute a third group hostile to Haig. They have always been concerned about his ties with former President Nixon and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. They also question the support he has expressed for right-wing regimes in Latin America, Asia and Africa. His seeming neutrality between democratic Britain and the Argentine junta gave new life to that animus. It was further fueled by an article published in the Atlantic Monthly by Seymour Hersh which argues that Haig played a leading role in both wiretaps and attempts to cover up wiretaps during the Nixon administration.

EVEN TAKEN all together, these charges are unlikely to topple Haig. The Reagan administration is so beset by difficulties in the economy that it cannot want to advertise foreign policy troubles by jettisoning Haig. Especially since the President is scheduled to go into the international big leagues when he visits Europe in June.

But while Haig's place is secure, the weakening of his position at this time has critical consequences. In the approach to the coming talks with Russia on strategic missiles, Haig is the principal fighter inside the administration for a position that would be negotiable with Moscow and plausible to serious opinion in this country and Europe. In the Middle East, Haig is the chief protagonist for trying to use the Camp David agreements as the basis for a wider accord between Israel and the Arabs.

Already there are signs that Haig is beginning to weaken on both issues. The most recent National Security Council meeting on the coming talks with Russia was dominated by Pentagon proposals the Soviets are almost certain to reject. Haig limited himself to suggesting the need for further discussion. In the Middle East, Haig is leaving the business of Egyptian-Israeli talks to a junior official, Richard Fairbanks, who has trouble seeing high State Department colleagues, much less the likes of Menachem Begin and Hosni Mubarak.

One reason Haig drifts with the tide is that turning it comes very hard. His stance on the Falkland Islands has been dictated by a dirty secret of the British, which, so far at least, he has not been able to reveal in detail — namely that Prime Minister Thatcher wanted an American emissary to Argentina who could make sure that Britain was not left to twist slowly in the winds of the South Atlantic.

Sue Ellen's refuge ranch for sale

RANCH FOR SALE — The Bar H ranch, located near Forney, Texas, about 20 miles east of Dallas, is for sale. Called the Southern Cross Ranch in the television series

"Dallas", it is on the market for $2.9 million. The 500-acre spread sports three houses with pool and gazebo.

DALLAS (AP) — Clayton Farlow's ranch, the Southern Cross, is up for sale.

Now if you are not a regular viewer of that television phenomenon known as "Dallas," none of this means anything. But if you watch it regularly you know these were crucial times for the Ewings, the fictional family whose excesses are depicted on the weekly-TV program.

The location where those scenes were filmed is, in reality, the Bar H Ranch. It is 21 miles from downtown Dallas, not near San Angelo as the program has it, and is owned by oilman Norris Harris.

If you have $2.9 million to spend on the grounds, three houses and a barn, and can afford a $50,000 monthly overhead, real estate agent Marilyn Hoffman-Hipps would be glad to talk to you.

Health Fair Beat

Blood drive to be held

A blood drive will be held by United Blood Services (UBS) during the May 15 Big Spring Health & Safety Fair at the Big Spring Mall, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., according to Debbie McCartney of UBS.

Visitors to the fair who are 17 years of age or older, and weigh a minimum of 110 pounds, may donate blood for others. That is, if they have not had hepatitis, current active disease of heart, lung, kidney, liver, stomach; internal malignancy within the past 10 years.

Even then, you may be temporarily deferred if you've had flu, colds or upper respiratory infection, close contact with hepatitis in the past 6 months, tattoos in the past 6 months; infection or disease presently requiring medication, vaccinations in the past 24 years before the fair, had major surgery or blood transfusion in the past 6 months or dental surgery in the past 3 days, a pregnancy in the past 6 weeks, or lived in a laria area in the past 6 months.

If you plan to give blood, it is best that you eat a substantial meal before donating. Persons who are presently taking digitalis, dilantin, quinidine, and anti-coagulants will be deferred.

FREE SCREENINGS for anemia, blood type, and sickle cell anemia will be offered during the day-long Health Fair by laboratory departments of the Veterans Administration Hospital, Big Spring State Hospital, and Malone-Hogan Hospital.

The term "anemia" implies a low red cell count, and a below normal hemoglobin or hematocrit level. Causes and symptoms can include paleness, susceptibility to fatigue, shortness of breath, headache, and dizziness.

Blood typing is done to establish the person's blood group, such as A, B, AB, or O, and Rh typing, either positive or negative. Each participant in this screening will be given a card for their wallet, documenting their blood type.

A third screening at this booth will be for sickle cell anemia, a type of anemia found almost entirely in black persons. It is occasionally, though rarely, found in persons of Mediterranean extraction.

Since sickle cell anemia is a genetically determined, inherited disease, those with family histories of this disease are encouraged to take advantage of this screening.

FOR THOSE persons fearful of a needle, the three screenings — anemia, blood typing, and sickle cell anemia — will require only one simple "finger stick," for all three tests.

Results of these screenings will be available in a 5 to 15 minute time period. Results will also be recorded on a card the Fair participants will carry with them from booth to booth. Should further screening be required, the results can then be shared with their family physician.

Participants of all health screenings will be encouraged to share all abnormal findings with their family physician who can then assist the person in seeking further consultation and diagnostic evaluation.

Police says hero shot by man he once saved

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Mike Cisneros is listed in critical condition at Arlington Memorial Hospital, recovering from gunshot wounds in the hip and arm. Police say the man who shot him is the same man whose life he saved last year.

Chan Quoc Tran shot Cisneros with a .38-caliber pistol, then wounded himself in the head with the same weapon, police said.

"There's no constructive reason for this happening," Detective Ruben Puente said. "There was no animosity between the men. In fact, Mr. Cisneros saved Tran's life."

Last summer Cisneros, 48, pulled Tran from a burning car in the parking lot of Atlas Match Co., where they both work. The shooting was Monday night, and nobody has offered an explanation.

"I don't think there was any basis for what happened," Cisneros said.

Tran is also at Arlington Memorial Hospital, listed in satisfactory condition but left blind by the self-inflicted wound. Cisneros has refused to press charges, Puente said.

"He (Tran) was a model employee who never caused any trouble at all," said Glen Walker, Atlas president. "We just don't feel like he knew what he was doing when he opened fire on Mike."

BUDGET CONSIDERATIONS — Members of House conservative Democratic forum, known as the Boll Weevils, meet with Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., the chairman of the House Budget Committee Wednesday on Capitol Hill.

Stenholm says conservative Demos to work on new budget

By PHILLIP SWANN
State News Service
WASHINGTON — Conservative Democrats will work with the chairman of the House Budget Committee in an effort to develop a bipartisan alternative to President Reagan's budget proposals, U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, said Tuesday.

Stenholm is head of the Conservative Democratic Forum, a group of 47 conservative Democrats known as the "boll weevils" who split ranks from their party last year and gave Reagan the margin of victory in his tax and budget fights.

But Stenholm said Tuesday the president's budget package is unacceptable because of its projected $180 billion deficit. While he would not rule out meeting with Reagan, Stenholm said, "there is an unanimous agreement in the group" to work with Budget Committee Chairman Jim Jones, D-Okla.

Tuesday the president is still willing to negotiate.

"All of the cards have not been dealt yet," Stenholm said, following a meeting of the CDF. "We're not going to get set in concrete on anything. We have to look at the budget with flexibility."

The Democratic leadership and the Reagan administration have begun to woo the boll weevils, who may feel hold the balance of power again in this year's budget fight.

Stenholm said the CDF has submitted a "shopping list" of proposals to the Democratic leadership, but he refused to elaborate.

Several congressional staffers have said the southern conservatives are still upset that Reagan had refused to meet with a group of farm state congressmen on the sagging farm economy.

It is unclear what effect the farm controversy has had on the budget picture. But an aide to Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, said "it's a two way street," suggesting the boll weevils are less likely this year to play ball with the president because he did not play ball with them.

But some observers said Tuesday that Jones does not have the boll weevils in the bag.

"I hope we can work with Jones but I'm willing to work with anyone, anywhere to come up with a responsible budget," said Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station.

A GRAMM AIDE said the congressman plans to meet with White House officials this week. But Stenholm said he had not been contacted by anyone at the White House.

Jim Overton, an aide to House Minority Deputy Whip Thomas Loeffler (R-Hunt), said the administration can still win the CDF's support.

"The (GOP) leadership believes there will be a bi-partisan budget," Overton said. "There is no definite alignment (with Jones). The situation is still very fluid."

One staffer to a conservative Democrat said the boll weevils are determined in this election year to show they are willing to work with the party.

Amish mail delivered by nickname

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer

GAP, Pa. (AP) — When mailman Levi Fisher gets a letter addressed to John Stoltzfus, it may belong to Nick's Johnny, Sadie's John, Ike's John, Big John, Little John or any one of 23 possibilities.

Sixty families named Stoltzfus dot Fisher's 49.2-mile rural mail route in the heart of Amish country. And nearly two dozen mailboxes bear the name John Stoltzfus — enough to confound even a knowledgeable mail carrier.

"You have to know them by their nicknames," says the 68-year-old Fisher, who has been delivering mail at Gap R.D. 1 in Lancaster County for 14 years.

Fisher keeps households straight by identifying box numbers to the descriptive nicknames. For example, Nick's Johnny is the son of Nick Stoltzfus, while Sadie's John lives down the road.

Fisher is acquainted with all of the 523 families on his route.

"Once you know the families, it helps you a lot," he said. "We'll find out some way who a letter belongs to. If it's on my route, we'll deliver it."

John is hardly the only popular moniker for a Stoltzfus, a common last name in the oldest Amish settlement in the United States.

There are three Amos E. and one Amos T. Stoltzfuses. At one time, Fisher had three Amos Stoltzfuses living on the same road and all three were contractors.

Three others are named Elam S., another Elam B. and yet another Elam T. And there's an Abe Stoltzfus, not to be confused with Abram Stoltzfus.

Fisher's route is also peppered with other common Amish names such as Glick, Lapp, Beiler and Peterheim.

There are also three Amos B. Zooks, two Amos Z. Zooks and two John Z. Zooks. On the other hand, there's one Tom Jones but no John Doe.

"Levi can keep them all straight."

Daughter put strychnine in family's flapjack mix

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — A young woman who said she whipped up a batch of poisoned pancake mix during a suicidal mood testified that she threw out the tainted flour, not thinking her mother would find it and use it to make flapjacks for the family.

The family thought the strychnine-laced pancakes tasted bitter, so they were fed to the dog, which died.

Kathryn K. Furu, a 23-year-old college student and champion fencer, delivered her testimony during a preliminary hearing on whether she should go on trial for the attempted murder by poisoning of her father and two sisters.

Miss Furu, on the first day of the hearing, admitted Wednesday she mixed strychnine into a box of flour.

Her mother, Virginia Furu, testified that she saw the open box of flour in the wastebasket that morning, retrieved it and made pancakes.

Mrs. Furu said her husband, Donald, and another daughter, Victoria, began eating the flapjacks but rejected them because of a bitter taste. She said the pancakes then were fed to the family dog, a 100-pound bouvier, and the dog died the same day.

Miss Furu was not present when the pancakes were served.

The assistant county prosecutor, John MacFarland, said the mother's testimony was a surprise. "This information has never been brought forward," he said, and Mrs. Furu never told that account to investigators. He did not say what bearing the account would have on the case.

The hearing was in Battle Creek District Court before District Judge Stephen Miller. It was recessed after about five hours of testimony and scheduled for resumption Friday. Police investigators are expected to testify then.

"If I'd had the slightest idea my mother would have seen the pancake box in the wastebasket, I would have burned it that night," Miss Furu testified.

The incident occurred July 28, 1981.

The family lives in Ceresco, a town southeast of Battle Creek. Victoria and Elaine Furu live in Marshall and they stop nearly every weekday morning at their parents' home, where Kathryn Furu was living at the time, according to testimony.

Kathryn Furu testified she stole the strychnine from her brother-in-law, a veterinarian, and picked that particular poison because it is used as an animal euthanasia drug.

"Euthanasia means sleep unto death," she said. "It sounded very appropriate."

She said she abandoned the suicide plan after she read an encyclopedia account of death by strychnine, which she described as "grisly." She said she voluntarily became a patient at a psychiatric hospital July 31 and stayed there "about a week."

Miss Furu said she wanted to kill herself because she had been depressed over troubles with a male friend and with her sisters.

"I felt they (the sisters) didn't want me around my parents' place," she said.

She was arraigned April 15 and freed on $60,000 personal recognizance bond.

RIGGING UP — O.I.L. workers prepare to get a Big Spring-built rig shipped down to Houston for the Offshore Technology Conference being held this week.

O.I.L. rigging up in Houston

Rigging up, as it refers to oilfield work, means putting the rig together so drilling can begin.

Usually this is done by installing inland rigs, offshore rigs or inland barge rigs, but this week Oilfield Industrial Lines (O.I.L.) is rigging up at a most unusual spot, the parking lot of the Houston Astrodome.

The process began over a month ago, as rig supervisors began to assemble the components and material needed to build the rig, and culminated this week with the loading of these materials onto 27 trucks bound for the Offshore Technology Conference (OTC) in Houston.

The OTC, which began Monday and will run through today at the Houston Astrodome, is said to be the largest exhibit of oil-related equipment in the world.

Social issues on Reagan agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — For a year, hardly a peep was heard in the White House about the social issues on which Ronald Reagan campaigned.

Now, one after another, they are surfacing.

School prayer, tuition tax credits, a balanced budget amendment: They are buzz words finding renewed places in the president's vocabulary.

But there are few signs Reagan will be successful if he tries to push any of these issues through quickly. In fact, there are few signs he is even trying to do that, in the view of both Democrats and conservative Republicans.

Last month, the president flew to Chicago and told Roman Catholic educators he would support a tax credit based on private school tuition. Soon, he said, he would make a formal recommendation to Congress.

At the time, aides said he first would consult with members of Congress and then send to Capitol Hill proposed legislation. The consultations are still pending, but one White House official, requesting anonymity, said the proposal may be introduced by the end of this month.

Congressional observers think there is little chance such a measure will be approved this year. But the White House aide, stressing the president's support for it, insisted "this is a serious proposal, not a sop to the interest groups."

Today is the day Reagan declared "National Day of Prayer" and aides prepared for him a statement in support of a constitutional amendment that would permit voluntary group prayer in public schools.

Prayer in public schools was ruled unconstitutional by the Supreme Court in 1962. Ever since then it has been a rallying issue of many conservative movements.

The balanced budget amendment, which would require a 60 percent majority in Congress to approve any budget that included deficit spending — except in wartime — has been mentioned by Reagan several times in the past week in public appearances. It barely saw the light of day in 1981.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said such issues, along with anti-abortion measures and proposed prohibition of school busing to achieve racial integration, "were put on the back burner last year."

"There was some disappointment in the conservative community that we had not moved quicker," said one White House source.

The delay allowed the House and Senate to concentrate on the president's economic recovery program.

Dear Abby

Nudist considers Abby shy

DEAR ABBY (really, her secretaries): After Abby's poor advice regarding family nudity at home (she's against it), I invited Abby to spend a weekend at Treehouse Fun Ranch, a nudist resort.

I assumed that a columnist of national reputation would be interested in learning the truth about nudist camps firsthand in order to pass that information on to her millions of readers.

Wrong! Abby is too shy to learn the truth about nudism. Abby is too shy to even send someone else to learn the truth. Abby is too shy to admit that she is ignorant about nudist camps and she's too shy to try to get over her shyness.

So, the great solver of the world's problems and the knower of all answers is shy. Pity! Will you secretaries please tell Abby that if she is too shy to spend a weekend at a nudist resort, she should retire.

MIKE MEYER, LANCASTER, PA.

DEAR MR. MEYER: Abby is not shy, but admits to being something of a conformist. As the late Bill Vaughan, columnist for the Kansas City Star, once wrote: "If there is anything the non-conformist hates worse than a conformist, it's another non-conformist who doesn't conform to the prevailing standards of non-conformity."

ABBY'S STAFF

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in strong disagreement over what to do about our son, who will be 18 soon. "Peter" (not his real name) dropped out of high school at 17 to "work in the real world," but so far he has not found a job. He has been very selective in his job hunting. He's not really qualified for anything, but no job seems good enough.

I suggested that he take a paper route until he can get the kind of job he wants, but he won't even consider it. I told Peter that his free-loading days will be over when he reaches 18, that he will be expected to pay room and board while he lives with us. My wife says I am totally unreasonable to demand such a thing from our son.

I maintain that when children turn 18, they are no longer minors and they should support themselves. Also, there is no law stating that parents have an obligation to send their children to college, either. Your opinion on both questions, please?

NEW YORKER

DEAR NEW YORKER: I vote with you on both counts. Some birds won't even attempt to fly until they're kicked out of the nest. But all 18-year-olds are not alike. Many need parental assistance and deserve it.

***
CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Please remember your mother with a bouquet of flowers next Sunday on Mother's Day. And if you're adopted, send her two bouquets!

Dr. Donohue

Emotions and diabetes don't mix

"Dear Dr. Donohue: I sincerely hope you can answer me. I am diabetic and am being regulated on insulin. I did well for four months, then I had to go into the hospital for surgery. Since then, I have had trouble keeping my blood sugar in control. Is it true that an emotional problem can cause this? I am also emotionally upset about a family member. I am spilling sugar in my urine. Please comment on this. — Mrs. C.C."

I tried to edit your letter for use here. I think I got the essential facts. Yes, Mrs. C.C., emotional problems can make it hard to control blood sugar. When we are upset we release adrenalin (epinephrine) into the blood. That is so we will be alert and ready for anything that comes along. Unfortunately, it also makes the liver release sugar into the blood.

Normally, there's nothing wrong with that, but for the diabetic it can be a control problem. A constant state of emotional tension can make diabetes quite difficult to control. I suggest you check signals again with your doctor, who can adjust your insulin dosage for you until this phase of your life is past.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What can a diabetic do to prevent ketoacidosis? — Mr. N.B.

Ketoacidosis, for the benefit of others, means that blood sugar has been quite high for some time; there is not enough insulin being delivered to burn it. The result of this is that cells without insulin turn to fat as an alternate source of fuel to go on living. When fat is burned, acid is made. Ketones are a product of fat-burning. That is the ketoacidosis background.

To avoid this, the diabetic has to watch his diet carefully, take his insulin faithfully, and keep regular doctor appointments. He must also inform the doctor whenever he doesn't feel well. A sign that a diabetic is developing ketoacidosis is when he begins passing large quantities of urine. He will also feel out of sorts and remain dry even though he may be drinking a lot of liquid.

Even with careful management, it is not always possible for the diabetic to prevent some ketoacidosis. But observing the rules of control will make his chances much better with this regard.

Dear Dr. Donohue: You answered a question about glaucoma and cataracts and said they can occur at the same time. Now my question. I have heard that it may be difficult for a person with glaucoma to have cataracts removed. True? — Mrs. R.R.

The cataracts can be removed. However, the pressure inside the eyeballs (glaucoma) if present must be first lowered with drops of oral medicine. Then the cloudy lens (cataract) can be removed the normal way. I should explain that glaucoma is increased pressure from fluid buildup within the eye, and that a cataract is a clouding of the lens of the eye to the point where no light can enter, causing loss of vision.

Once an outcast, boy now seeks citizenship

By GORDON HANSON
Associated Press Writer

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — When missionaries found Juan Ramirez in the Ecuadorian jungle, he was wracked by convulsions, near death, his paralyzed body wasted by parasites. He was unwanted, scorned by his family, an outcast because of his deformities.

Today, eight years later, Ramirez is educated, articulate and healthy and still fighting. He wants to remain in the United States, but the U.S. Immigration Service says only a special bill in Congress will allow him to stay.

The bill was approved by the Senate Oct. 27, but a House subcommittee on immigration said in February that Ramirez must first exhaust "administrative remedies" that might grant permanent residence.

When Ramirez was found by missionaries in Ecuador in 1974, they said his left foot was twisted nearly upside down, caused by polio when he was 3. His right foot protruded at a 90-degree angle.

"He was suffering from malnutrition, four or five kinds of worms and amebiasis, and a low hemoglobin count which brought on the convulsions," said Dr. Devota Nowland, an Armada, Mich., osteopath who helped bring Ramirez to America.

"He was treated as an outcast by people outside of his family and would have suffered a great deal or died had he not been brought to the United States," she said.

Ramirez is now 22 or 23 — he doesn't know when he was born. He was one of seven illegitimate children, Miss Nowland said in an interview. One of his mother's suitors "killed Juan's sister in a drunken fit," she added.

Ramirez now denies this, or that his mother sold him, "but he doesn't want to remember," Miss Nowland said. Missionaries and others told her Ramirez was sold to a woman who ran a small cafe in Chaco, she said.

Ramirez said he peeled vegetables for "one or two meals a day" and slept on a straw pallet. At age 15, he weighed 60 pounds.

If he returns to Ecuador, Ramirez believes he would still be an outcast.

"I used to have problems...they would push me down," Ramirez said softly. "They thought of me as a dog."

His brothers and sisters were "undecided if they accepted my handicap. They didn't know if they liked me or not."

Voice shaking, he said of his mother: "I was her son, and even though I couldn't help her, I think she still loved me."

He doesn't know where his family is. "They're sort of moving around. They go where my mother can find work, field work, milking cows," for perhaps 50 cents a day.

Juan had corrective surgery at 15 in a missionary hospital in Quito.

His hips and legs remain shriveled, but he gets around slowly with leg braces and crutch.

Miss Nowland, on vacation in Quito, brought Ramirez to Michigan. She tried to adopt him, but Ecuadorean law prohibits a single female from adopting a male. She sought help.

Through a Fargo, N.D., adoption agency, Ramirez found his way to a farm owned by Vic and Olga Karges near Hazen, N.D. They too tried to adopt Ramirez but he was then past 16 and too old, the Immigration Service said.

Miss Nowland had started the process of trying to extend his temporary visitor visa. The Kargeses now lead that effort.

Ramirez started school in Hazen. Three years later he went to the Anne Carlsen School for the Physically Handicapped in Jamestown, N.D.

He graduates June 6 and wants to study electronics in a vocational school.

But he can't apply for citizenship because he has no blood relatives here, no job skill, isn't a refugee and isn't "a professional of distinguished merit or ability," said Gerald Coyle, the Immigration Service's district director in St. Paul, Minn.

"The only relief is what they are doing — trying to get a private bill through Congress," Coyle said. "There will be no (deportation) action in this case until the matter is resolved by Congress."

A staff counsel for the House Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees and International Law, who asked his name not be used, said the subcommittee rejected Ramirez's special bill because he hasn't tried other administrative avenues to stay in the U.S.

WANTS TO STAY — Juan Ramirez, 22, was found by missionaries in Ecuador in 1974 suffering from partial paralysis and convulsions. Now ready to graduate from a school for the physically handicapped, Ramirez is fighting deportation to his homeland where friends say he would wither and die. A private bill to keep him in the United States is stalled in congress.

Watt halts leasing of four scenic areas in north California

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt, facing continued opposition to his oil and gas drilling plans, has decided to defer once more leasing in four scenic areas off the Northern California coast, Interior officials said Wednesday.

The decision means that the four basins off some of California's most famous coastal areas — including Big Sur, Point Reyes, Mendocino and Eureka — will not be offered for sale in September 1983.

The decision marked the second time Watt has backed away from offering the areas for leasing.

Soon after taking office last year, Watt reversed a Carter administration decision putting the four areas off limits to leasing because of the potential harm from oil spills and said he was considering leasing.

In August, however, Watt backed down from leasing the four basins after his proposal had provoked a firestorm of criticism, including warnings from California Republican leaders that Watt's actions were hurting the party.

The interior secretary gave as his reason at the time an adverse decision by a U.S. district judge concerning another lease sale he said could hurt the bidding on the Northern California tracts.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. termed that explanation a "legal cover for a political decision," saying that Watt's announcement was a "retreat and a backdown from the misguided policy of desecrating our pristine California coast."

Watt's action last year meant that the areas — known as the Eel River, Bodega Bay, Point Arena and Santa Cruz basins — could not be offered again until 1983, the next time they came up on the government's leasing schedule.

Watt's decision today was revealed as the department announced areas to be covered in the environmental analysis for the September 1983 sale — known as lease sale 73.

The department said that potential areas to be leased in the sale will be from three to 75 miles off the California coast from north of Point Conception to the Oregon coast.

In explaining why the four basins were excluded, Robert Burford, director of the Bureau of Land Management, said, "There is considerable opposition to offshore leasing in this area, especially by local residents who are concerned about potential risks to their environment. We share their concern."

Oil field equipment firm admits payoff probe

HOUSTON (AP) — An oil field equipment company has been investigated by the Justice Department since 1979 in connection with allegations that it made large payoffs to Mexico's national oil monopoly, company officials confirm.

Crawford Enterprises Inc. has been accused of violating the 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act prohibiting companies doing business in other countries from committing bribery. Vice President Ron Kinzey said Tuesday in a statement released by the company's law firm in Washington, D.C.

The Washington Post reported Tuesday that federal investigators are looking into allegations that U.S. oil field equipment companies paid officials of Pemex, Mexico's government-owned petroleum company, to obtain contracts.

The allegations against Crawford, a Houston-based firm which specializes in gas compression, oil and gas production and transmission equipment, are being considered by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C.

"Despite vigorous and repeated denials of any wrongdoing, the (Justice Department) investigation has continued now for nearly 3½ years," the statement said.

"As a result, Pemex has curtailed purchases from CEI and its American subcontractors and competitors and has begun to shift its immense purchasing power away from the United States," the statement said.

The statement also said the firm "is informed that Pemex has been completely satisfied with CEI's performance of its contract to date." It added that contracts have been the subject of "careful review within Pemex to ensure the integrity of the procurement process."

Reagan moves to stem flow of sugar imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is declaring "an emergency import quota" to stem the entry of low-priced foreign sugar into the United States in an effort to avoid huge government acquisitions of sugar under the new price support program.

Critics of the price support program, which Reagan accepted in a political trade last year, say American consumers will pay $3 billion as a result of the quota forcing domestic sugar prices above the world level.

When domestic sugar producers can't sell on the open market at a preset, minimum price, the government is obligated by law to buy their crops.

Agriculture Secretary John Block, in announcing the decision late Tuesday, said a quota was needed to "avoid a massive flow of sugar imports into the United States, which could disrupt the commercial market for domestically-produced sugar."

The United States gets about half its sugar from overseas, importing some 4.5 million tons last year.

USDA spokesman Gene Hemphill said the quota will be based on each country's average yearly imports from 1978 through 1981, excluding the highest and lowest years.

The quota will take effect as soon as Reagan signs the presidential proclamation imposing it.

Block said world sugar prices have plunged 30 percent in the past four months amid the prospect of a large world sugar crop. He said the problem has been exaggerated by European government subsidies that assure export of their sugar no matter what the world price, now about nine cents a pound.

Because of the sugar support program's potential cost to the government, Reagan had initially opposed it last year. There had been no price support program for sugar since 1979.

Polaroid plans to enter 35 millimeter market

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Polaroid Corp., stung by a steep drop in earnings from its instant camera empire, is moving into the 35 mm camera market, stockholders were told at their annual meeting at Wellesley College.

The Cambridge-based firm demonstrated several prototype color and black-and-white 35mm "transparency films," commonly referred to as slides, during the Tuesday meeting.

The "35 Autopress System" film is being designed to be used in any existing 35mm camera or instrument, company officials said.

The product will include "a specially designed lightweight low cost processor, and a simple, low cost slide mounter," said William J. McCune Jr., president and chief executive officer.

The film and accessories will be ready for marketing by the 1983 stockholders meeting, McCune said.

The film is not instant developing, but "will not require a dark room, washing or precise temperature control," McCune said.

"The processed film will be dry and can be handled and projected immediately," he said.

Historic properties sought

AUSTIN — County judges and local historical commission chairmen have been notified that the Family Land Heritage Program registration period will be opening May 15, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown has announced.

The program, sponsored by the Texas Department of Agriculture, honors farm and ranch owners whose property has been maintained in continuous agricultural production by family members for 100 years or more. It was started in 1974 and so far has registered 1,443 Texas properties.

Registration for the 1982 program will end August 15. Ceremonies will be held in the Texas capitol in the fall.

Applications for the program are available also from P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Tx. 78711.

Skill as interpreter for deaf combines with work as clown

EXPRESSIVE CLOWN — Doayne Hill, 21, of Tucson, Ariz., has the best of all worlds, combining two vocations she loves: interpreter for the deaf and professional clowning.

By PHILLIP MORAGO
Arizona Daily Star

TUCSON, Ariz. — When Doayne Hill was 8 years old, a fortune teller told her mother, Roberta Reynolds, that her daughter would one day be in the theater with people looking at her, but not in the usual way.

The medium went on to say that she saw Doayne doing something with her hands that was like music or poetry. Mother was confused, and Doayne was skeptical.

Thirteen years later, the two look back on the strange prediction and chuckle at the realization of how it all came true.

The petite, energetic Doayne is now a certified interpreter for the deaf and a professional clown. She uses her first name only as a stage name.

Doayne, 21, most recently found a way to combine her interpreting talents with her pantomime skills when she was selected as the sole performer in the Art Science Center's production of Samuel Beckett's one-act play, "Act Without Words."

The local television-production company designed the show to illustrate one possible use of a community arts and culture channel in Tucson's new cable-television system.

As a member of Famous Bonzarelli Clowns, a local entertainment troupe, Doayne has found she can combine the two vocations she loves; the active communication of interpreting with the rigorous disciplines of pantomime, magic and juggling.

"It's possible to make a living at being a clown, but most of us in the troupe have other jobs to supplement our income, she said, referring to her training to become an interpreter. "I love both of them, because they allow me to express myself."

Doayne says she has come a long way from being the reserved, shy child she was in elementary school.

Now, in her two people-oriented professions, Doayne has found her niche in the world — devoting her energy to communicating with people, and to making them laugh.

"Looking back at my earlier years, it's funny that I ended up doing this, because I never really knew what I wanted to do with my life. Now I do," Doayne said.

Don't weep for the willows; they may have own defenses

SEATTLE (AP) — Certain trees may give off a chemical that acts as an early warning system to fellow members of their species in case of an insect attack, a scientist believes.

David Rhoades, a University of Washington zoology research associate, said in an interview Tuesday that he reached that conclusion after three years of studies on willows and alders.

The results of the studies were presented recently to the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society as part of a symposium on plants' natural protective mechanisms.

Rhoades said his theory could explain periodic surges and crashes in populations of insects that prey on trees.

He said discovery of the chemicals and their workings could bring benefit forest management and pest control.

"...if plants do generally communicate, or are sensitive to neighboring plants being attacked, and if you could see an attack on Douglas fir by tussock moths, you could turn the plants 'on' prematurely" to deter the moths, Rhoades said.

Rhoades developed his theory after he and researchers from Finland and Switzerland set out to find the answer to the boom-and-bust populations of insects such as tent caterpillars. The search led to the insects' food supply — trees.

Rhoades and Lynn Erckmann, a research technician at the University of Washington, took leaves from willows and alders that were infested with tent caterpillars and fed them to tent caterpillars in a lab.

The scientists found that when trees were exposed to tent caterpillars their leaves produced chemicals that make greenery harder to digest.

The growth rate of the lab caterpillars slowed, but caterpillars fed leaves from trees not yet hit with the pests didn't show slower growth.

The researchers made an additional discovery: Lab insects had a slower growth rate if they were fed leaves from willows that were not infested but lived near infested willows.

Leaves taken off trees about a mile away from infested trees didn't have the same slowing effect as did leaves from trees closer to the infested ones, the researchers said.

Thursday Notes

The Amazing Carla Jackson Show takes to the road today for another visit to Austin and the state AAAAA girls track meet. For those opponents having to face Carla each year, they are surely overjoyed this is her last year to compete for Big Spring High.

Jackson will long jump Friday afternoon and then triple jump Saturday morning before running the 200 meters Saturday afternoon. She won all three events two weeks ago in Lubbock as Big Spring finished third in the team race. Already she has etched her name in the school's sports history books as the best female trackster ever.

Joining her in Austin from the immediate area are the foursome of Vickie Buchanan, Becky Creech, Tobie Henry and Gayla Paige of Coahoma. This will be the last state appearance for Paige, a senior, and coach Billy Gordon who is entering private business at the end of this season.

Buchanan is tossing the discus, returning to Austin for the second time, while Creech is high jumping, Henry long jumping and Paige running the low hurdles.

Big Spring's Karl Wolfe is aiming towards a state berth in the 3,200 meters when he runs at the Region I-AAAAA meet Saturday in Lubbock. Wolfe was second at the District 5-5A meet and must pass up rival Ruben Augillon of San Angelo and a host of great runners from the El Paso area to make the big trip.

Local trapshooting ace Kelly Rogers chalked up another win this week in Amarillo.

Kelly won the state Zone I Trapshooting title in the junior division by hitting 197 of 200 shots. Though he won, his major concern was not breaking the three targets he missed. He also competed in the handicap and doubles events, hitting 91 of 100 targets from 24 yards and 88 of 100 in doubles.

Kelly is in Stephenville this weekend and in Odessa next for more competition. In addition, you can read about the Big Spring junior in this month's Sports Afield.

Big Spring High tennis coach Allan Holliday has finished up plans for this summer's tennis day clinics.

June sessions are set from June 14-18 and 21-25 with July times for intermediates July 8-16 and beginners July 12-16. The clinics will be held at the Figure Seven Tennis Center at a cost of $48 (includes one month court fee at the Center).

All you need is tennis attire, a racket and can of new tennis balls. Cut off is 40 per session.

Contact Holliday at 263-2060 after 6 p.m. for more info. By the way, adults, if there is enough interest, Holliday would like to do an adult session. Let him know if you are interested.

Yankees and cocaine?

NEW YORK (AP) — One or more New York Yankees players are mentioned by name as cocaine users in wiretapped conversations between two suspected drug dealers, according to a state Supreme Court justice quoted by the New York Daily News in today's editions.

The information was disclosed by Justice Burton Roberts while questioning prospective jurors in the trial of five persons charged with operating a $1 million-a-year cocaine distribution ring.

One suspect told another in the taped conversation that a third reputed cocaine supplier alleged that one or more Yankee players used cocaine, the News said.

Roberts told the prospective jurors that a tape will be played during the trial "during which two co-conspirators mention the names of one or more New York Yankees who use this substance (cocaine)." No names were disclosed.

GOING FOR THE STEAL — Seattle Super Sonic Gus Williams, right, tries to get around Mike Bratz, (23), of the San Antonio Spurs, to grab the ball after knocking it away during their NBA playoff game in the Kingdome Wednesday night. San Antonio beat Seattle 109-103 to take the best-of-seven series 4-1.

Ineligible man costs Waco team

WACO, Texas (AP) — An ineligible player has sent three high school baseball teams down without a swing in district playoffs.

Waco Richfield of Class 5A forfeited all of its victories Tuesday after turning itself in to the District 15 committee for using Don Neumann, a shortstop and pitcher who was ruled to be residing outside the Richfield boundaries.

The forfeits enabled Waco University to claim the district championship without the originally scheduled four-team playoffs for the title.

The ineligible player meant Richfield forfeited two regular-season victories over University, giving University the second-half title outright and a tie for the first-half championship.

Without the victories, University and Temple had tied for the second-half title and would have played Tuesday night. Ellison and Richfield would have tied for the first-half title and were to have played Wednesday.

Celtics, Spurs series champions

NBA Playoffs

By The Associated Press
The Boston Celtics have learned that beating a team six straight times in the regular season doesn't mean much once the playoffs start.

"We learned that the playoffs are a totally different story," said center Robert Parish, who scored 33 points, including a three-point play in the second overtime, as the Celtics advanced to the National Basketball Association semifinals with a 131-126 victory over the Washington Bullets Wednesday night.

"We beat them fairly easily in the regular season," added Parish, "but they played like one of the best teams in the league in the playoffs."

Boston, which won the best-of-7 series 4-1, will meet the Philadelphia-Milwaukee series winner in the Eastern Conference final. The 76ers lead 3-2 despite losing 110-98 to the Bucks Wednesday.

In the West, San Antonio beat Seattle 109-103 to win their series 4-1 and send the Spurs into the conference final against the Los Angeles Lakers starting Sunday in Los Angeles.

The Bullets made a brilliant second-half comeback, erasing an 18-point deficit and scoring 16 of the last 19 points in regulation to send the game into overtime with the score tied at 106.

"They played great," said Celtics forward Kevin McHale, whose two baskets helped the Celtics overcome a 117-112 deficit with 1:06 left in the first overtime. "We played a hair better."

The 6-foot-11 McHale made a midcourt steal and breakaway layup in the final minute to cut the deficit to 117-116. Then, with Washington ahead 119-117, Larry Bird tied up Frank Johnson as the Bullets tried to run out the clock with only nine seconds to play, forcing a jump ball.

Bird, who scored 26 points along with Cedric Maxwell, won the tap. Nate Archibald missed a shot, but McHale tipped in the rebound with only one second left.

"I've got to take my hat off to Kevin McHale," said Bird. "He made the big steal and got the hoop at the end of the first overtime."

Spurs 109, Sonics 103

George Gervin scored 26 points and Mike Mitchell 24 as San Antonio closed out its series with Seattle.

The Spurs, who won only their second series in seven tries since coming into the NBA, took an 83-76 lead into the fourth quarter and never let the Sonics get closer than three points — at 91-88, 93-90 and 106-103.

"I felt that if we could stay on top of them and not let them get the lead in the fourth quarter, we could execute well enough to get some scores," said Spurs Coach Stan Albeck. "And that's what happened."

The Sonics, who were led by Gus Williams with 36 points, closed the gap to 106-103 on a three-point play by Williams with 1:23 to go. But the Spurs ran the 24-second clock down to the last tick before Mark Olberding hit a jumper for a 108-103 lead with 59 seconds left.

Bucks 110, Sixers 98

Milwaukee stayed alive in its series with Philadelphia as veteran center Bob Lanier scored 27 points and Brian Winters added 23. Lanier, a 12-year veteran playing on gimpy knees, called the game "one of the greatest victories of my career. I just went out and played as hard as I could and tried not to think about physical problems."

The Bucks scored 12 straight points in the fourth quarter to boost an 89-87 lead to 101-87 with 4:45 to go.

Astro bats rap Cincy

CINCINNATI (AP) — This isn't the way the Houston Astros are supposed to win baseball games.

The Astros, a team built on pitching, defense and speed, are supposed to squeeze out a few runs and then let their high-octane pitching staff do the rest. That's not what happened Wednesday.

The Astros got locked in a scoring duel with the Cincinnati Reds, and managed to hold on for an uncharacteristic 8-7 victory and a split in the two-game series at Riverfront Stadium.

"It's not really a lot of fun to play 'Astro baseball,'" said outfielder Terry Puhl, one of Houston's hitting stars with three runs batted in. "Everyone thinks we are going to have 2-1 and 3-2 games with everybody. ... You can't put too much pressure on your pitching staff."

The only pressure on the Astro staff Wednesday was to hold a 7-3 lead in the sixth inning. The pressure nearly was too much.

Highlighted by Puhl's two-run single, the Astros scored four times in the sixth to take the 7-3 lead. But the Reds scratched back for a pair of runs in the bottom of the inning to make the score 7-5.

Phil Garner singled home another Houston run in the seventh, but the Reds retaliated with sacrifice flies in the seventh and eighth to come within a run.

"It was one of those days when it's an offensive game," said Garner, who homered and knocked in three runs. "They pitchers made a mistake, and they got hit hard. They made a good pitch, they still got hit."

Astro starter Don Sutton, 4-1, had to leave the game during the sixth-inning rally that gave Houston just enough ammunition to hold out. The Astros loaded the bases against loser Frank Pastore, 3-2, and Garner grounded out against reliever Joe Edelen for one run.

Following an intentional walk to again load the bases, Sutton singled for a run and Puhl delivered the key two-run single off Je Price one out later.

Sutton jammed the big toe on his left foot while covering first base in the fifth inning, and was removed for a pinch-runner in the sixth.

"They key was the sixth inning," said Reds Manager John McNamara. "We had Sutton in a double-play situation and Ruhl against a left hander Price with two outs, and we didn't get the out. Our people just didn't get the job accomplished."

KNOW YOU'RE UP THERE SOMEWHERE — Cincinnati Reds base-runner Cesar Cedeno has trouble seeing out from under his helmet as he is tagged out by Houston Astros second baseman Phil Garner on a steal attempt during the fifth inning of a game, Wednesday in Cincinnati. The Astros won the game 8-7 to split a two-game series in Cincinnati.

American League

White Sox 4, Blue Jays 1

It started out as a bad night for Harold Baines. Then it turned into a good one with one swing of his bat.

The Chicago White Sox right fielder misplayed a fly ball in the third inning Wednesday night that allowed the Toronto Blue Jays to take a 1-0 lead.

But he made up for the mistake in the seventh with a game-winning, two-run homer that led the White Sox to a 4-1 victory.

His game-winning homer came off Luis Leal, 2-2.

Baines' shot was followed by successive homers by Jim Morrison and Bill Almon and marked the first time the White Sox had hit three homers in an inning since July 14, 1979.

Steve Trout, 2-2, was the winner, giving up seven hits in eight innings before needing Dennis Lamp's relief help.

Twins 3, Red Sox 2

Gary Gaetti belted a two-run homer in the fourth inning to power Minnesota over Boston and snap the Red Sox's five-game winning streak.

Roger Erickson, 4-2, checked the Red Sox on two runs before needing relief help from Doug Corbett in the seventh. Corbett worked out of a bases-loaded jam and then earned his third save while helping to hand the Red Sox only their second loss in the last 15 games.

Royals 3, Brewers 2

Onix Concepcion's bloop double with two out in the 10th inning scored Jamie Quirk from first base, leading Kansas City over Milwaukee.

Quirk, who had three singles and a double, drew a one-out walk in the 10th off loser Rollie Fingers, 2-3, who had relieved Brewers starter Moose Haas at the start of the ninth.

National League

Cardinals 7, Cubs 6

Bruce Sutter, who is setting a record pace for saves in one season, says the St. Louis Cardinals can be more successful this year if he's not the only man they depend on in the bullpen.

"I've been saying all along that you can't win with one man in the bullpen," Sutter said Wednesday after he picked up his 10th save as St. Louis beat the Chicago Cubs 7-6. "You've got to have at least two. The ideal situation would be three or four."

Sutter struck out two and gave up no hits in the ninth inning to help the Cardinals win their fourth straight victory and hand the Cubs their fourth consecutive defeat. If he keeps collecting saves as he has in St. Louis' first 27 games, Sutter would have 60 for the season, 22 more than John Hiller's major-league record set in 1973.

He saved Wednesday's victory for fellow reliever Doug Bair, who is now 3-0 with a 0.61 earned run average.

Sutter's ERA is 1.54, with the 10 saves coming in 13 appearances. He also has 18 strikeouts compared to one walk for the season.

In other National League games, Houston edged Cincinnati 8-7 and Pittsburgh defeated Atlanta 4-2.

George Hendrick hit two homers, including a solo blast in the seventh inning that broke the 6-6 tie, to lead the Cardinals' 14-hit attack.

Hendrick also hit a solo homer in the second and added an RBI single an inning later for a 3-0 Cardinal lead.

The Cubs tied the score with three runs in the fourth on run-scoring singles by Buckner and Durham and a wild pitch by St. Louis starter Andy Rincon.

The Cardinals went ahead 5-3 on RBI hits by Rincon and Smith in the bottom of the fourth before the Cubs took a 6-5 lead in the fifth on Bump Wills' RBI grounder and run-scoring singles by Kennedy and Buckner.

Dane Iorg's run-producing single for St. Louis tied the game again in the bottom of the fifth.

Pirates 4, Braves 2

Rick Rhoden drove in two runs and won his first game in four decisions this season for Pittsburgh against Atlanta.

First baseman Jason Thompson also drove in a run and rapped three singles in three at-bats for the Pirates, raising his National League-leading batting average to .376.

A prime nuclear target

Plattsburgh, N.Y. came up with top evacuation plan

By PETER COY
Associated Press Writer

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — This city of 21,000 people has a wallpaper factory, a college, bathing beaches for vacationing Canadians — and an air base with Strategic Air Command bombers carrying nuclear warheads.

Within 10 minutes of launching from a Soviet submarine, nuclear-tipped missiles could turn Plattsburgh Air Force Base and the city into a flaming, irradiated ruin.

Perhaps as compensation for the city's Category I vulnerability, the Federal Emergency Management Agency has helped Plattsburgh establish what officials say is the nation's best plan for evacuation in case of an attack warning.

But while President Reagan has proposed quadrupling the federal budget for nuclear attack civil preparedness to bring other cities up to the Plattsburgh standard, officials in this northern New York city doubt their ability to survive a nuclear war.

"It would certainly raise particular hell," James P. O'Connor, Plattsburgh's civil defense director, said recently. "Our plan is to get as far away as you can and hope for the best."

The Defense Department estimates about 30 percent of the American population would survive a nuclear attack on both military and urban-industrial targets. It says an effective crisis relocation program might increase the survival rate to about 80 percent.

Many scientists challenge those figures, saying that with long-term effects such as worldwide depletion of the ozone layer, a nuclear attack might cause the extinction of the human race.

O'Connor, a retired insurance agent, rejects any argument that civil defense planning is futile. But he says a nuclear attack would turn his city into a "crater."

"People would have to be living in tents. All industry would be destroyed. The more you think about it the worse you realize it would be."

Nevertheless, O'Connor has tried to prepare

'Our plan is to get as far away as you can and hope for the best.'

—James P. O'Connor

Civil defense director for catastrophe by publishing evacuation instructions in the Plattsburgh telephone directory. The four pages include a map of routes to reception centers, 15 to 25 miles from the city, and a list of things to bring along, such as extra socks, credit cards, a crowbar and the family will.

The Reagan administration proposes to double civil defense spending in fiscal year 1983, to $252 million. Spending on nuclear attack civil preparedness would rise at a faster rate, from $11.6 million this year to $46.2 million in 1983. Already, 150 federally paid planners are at work on civil defense plans in all 50 states.

Pentagon officials say the Soviet Union spends $12 a year per person on civil defense while the United States spends 56 cents. Seeking to redress the balance, Reagan is proposing to increase the U.S. sum to $1.10 a year per person.

Uncertainty is a critical problem for civil defense planners. Plattsburgh plans to evacuate its residents to schools and firehouses in towns outside the predicted "risk area," but if the attack's strength exceeds expectations, the shelters themselves would become tombs.

Surprise is another problem. Planners theorize that in a period of heightened international tensions, the enemy would begin to empty its cities and the United States would begin doing likewise.

Plattsburgh could be evacuated in a day and federal planners say 95 percent of the nation's population could be relocated after three days. But some people would have long trips — more than half-a-million Connecticut residents would be expected to make their way to New York's Adirondack Mountains.

It would take at least a week to evacuate cities like New York City, Los Angeles and San Francisco, planners say.

"Very clearly, no one is in a position to provide an iron-clad guarantee that this kind of time would be available," a Federal Emergency Management Agency publication admits.

Moreover, buildings across the country which are designated as fallout shelters — including those in rural Clinton County — are not built to protect against radiation. Civil defense planners envision using bulldozers to plow earth against the walls and windows. But there would be neither enough time nor enough bulldozers to accomplish the job.

"That is admittedly a weak part of the program," says Herskowitz.

Plattsburgh used to stock the shelters with crackers, phenobarbital, penicillin and aspirin, but about seven years ago it threw the stale medicine away and gave the rotting crackers to Clinton County farmers.

Other cities have done the same. Restocking the shelters with austere emergency rations would cost more than half a billion dollars and federal planners have decided it is "more cost-effective to rely on adjusting the existing food distribution system."

With no food in storage, Plattsburgh civil defense officials hope that in a crisis they can buy food from supermarkets and a local warehouse, competing with panicked members of the general public.

The county used to have the makings of a 200-bed field hospital in storage, but, O'Connor says, "like everything else, being stockpiled for years, it just deteriorated."

COMMENT ON SINKING OF HMS SHEFFIELD — The early editions of Britain's daily national newspapers headline the story of the sinking of the Royal Navy destroyer HMS Sheffield Wednesday. HMS Sheffield was attacked and sunk by an Argentinian missile off the Falkland Islands in the South Atlantic.

Exxon abandoning shale-oil pipeline

DENVER (AP) — Exxon Co. USA, which earlier this week closed its multi-billion dollar Colony Shale Oil Project in western Colorado, announced Wednesday it was abandoning plans for a $100 million La Sal shale-oil pipeline.

The line would have carried shale oil from Colony to Rangely and then to Casper, Wyo.

The Colony Project, 60 percent of which is owned by Exxon, would have been "a major shipper" in the line, said J. Conley Stone, president of La Sal Pipe Line Co., an Exxon subsidiary based in Houston.

The pipeline was announced in December 1980 and was proposed as a 16-inch line running 279 miles from Parachute Creek Canyon, site of the Colony shale project, to Casper, where it would have been linked with other pipelines.

Only about 20 people had been working on the pipeline project, Exxon officials said Wednesday. They said the project had not progressed far enough even to survey its route.

Exxon said it didn't know how many workers might have been hired to build the line.

As proposed, the line would have the capacity to carry 50,000 barrels of oil per day, the projected initial output of the Colony project. It would have been a "common carrier" pipeline available to other shale oil producers in the area, a La Sal spokesman said, although no other companies had contracted to use the pipeline.

Exxon also had envisioned a 41-mile, 12-inch spur to Rangely, where a refinery there previously has processed shale oil on an experimental basis.

A cure for the cold?

89-year-old man discovers 'inductive nasal device'

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

WILLOW STREET, Pa. (AP) — A runny nose and ruined blueprints led inventor Norman Lake on a quest for a cold cure. He says he's found it but complains federal bureaucrats are keeping it from the public.

The 89-year-old retired mining engineer says his cold-fighting weapon is a 3-inch piece of thick, nickel-plated music wire bent into a U-shape with two round white plastic nubs the size of shirt buttons on either end.

"It's a simple device, but its impact is tremendous," Lake said, his blue eyes sparkling as he talks about the invention he patented in 1977.

According to Lake, his "inductive nasal device" (IND) keeps the nose pinched shut so cold viruses cannot thrive inside and spread symptoms to the rest of the body.

However, he says, the federal Food and Drug Administration is reluctant to approve his medical claim, which means he can't market the IND as a cold cure.

Normally, a medical-cure device requires two independent studies to show that it lives up to its claims with no unnecessary harm to people,

FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said in Washington.

"We require this for all products. There are standards generally accepted by the scientific community. It's not a matter of simple observation," said Pines, adding he wasn't familiar with Lake's device.

The drawback, Lake countered, is that the required tests could cost up to $1 million, which he doesn't have.

Lake's one-man cold-cure campaign began in 1953. He was working on some blueprints at home one night when a dripping nose ruined some of his drawings.

In a flash of inspiration, he clamped an old-fashioned slotted clothespin on the end of his nose to stifle the sniffles. Not only did it save his drawings, but the anticipated cold never occurred.

"I didn't know why it worked, but I continued using the clothespin to ward off colds when I felt them coming," said Lake, who also invented two timing devices for explosives during World War II.

For years, Lake tinkered with several designs before coming up with the one he patented in 1977. When a person first starts feeling cold symptoms, he should clamp the IND over the bridge of the nose for about an hour, Lake said.

His own research, Lake added, found studies that show one-third of colds are caused by rhinoviruses, which cannot survive in temperatures around 98 F, such as is found in the mouth and throat.

But the temperature in the nose normally is around 91 F, making it an ideal breeding ground for the rhinoviruses, he said.

Lake contends this is where his idea has merit. By clamping the nose for up to an hour, the temperature inside rises to around 98 F and the cold never gets a chance to take root.

It's the same way the body works to fight a potential cold, he said, but the natural defense mechanisms take up to 48 hours to get under way and it takes another week for the other symptoms to disappear.

Lake says his documentation includes studies by Baylor Medical School, Britain's Common Cold Research Unit and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases. All these studies, he said, show the growth of the rhinoviruses is inhibited in the 98 F range.

2-year-old boy struck by train

ROCKDALE, Texas (AP) — A 2-year-old boy playing on railroad tracks near his house was killed when a train struck him as he scrambled to join some playmates.

The boy, Terry Barker, was with two neighbor children as a Missouri Pacific freight train approached, said Department of Public Safety official Don Wardlow.

He said the train engineer, J.S. Murray, sounded the whistle and hit the brakes.

Murray told investigators the three children scattered, two going one way and the Barker boy the other.

But the 2-year-old was struck when he stepped back onto the tracks, apparently trying to be with his friends, according to Murray's account of the Tuesday accident.

The boy was the son of Floyd and Sharon Barker, who live near the tracks about three miles east of Rockdale.

Notice to Telephone Customers

WE ARE PROPOSING CHANGES IN THE RATES FOR CALLING CANADA.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has filed with the Federal Communications Commission a plan, to be effective July 29, 1982, to restructure rates for long distance calls between the United States and Canada. The restructure will result in rate increases and decreases but is designed to have no overall effect on interstate earnings.

Here are the proposed changes

- Establish uniform 1-minute initial period charges for all classes of calls. The initial 1-minute rate will vary by mileage and will range from 27¢ (0-8 miles) to 93¢ (2221-4000 miles). Additional minute rates will range from 12¢ to 78¢, depending upon distance.
- Separate operator charges from basic usage rates and introduce uniform service charges for Operator Station calls ($1.25) and Person-to-Person calls ($3.00). The appropriate operator service charge will be added to the usage rate and is the same regardless of the length of call or time of day.

Bigger health care role for nurses urged

BINGHAMTON, N.Y. (AP) — Health-care costs could be dramatically reduced by bringing nurses out of the background as "handmaidens to doctors" and into a more central role as advisers on nutrition, diet, exercise, child care and pregnancy, says the dean of the School of Nursing at State University of New York at Binghamton.

Margaret Tyson, R.N., says consumers could be relieved of some of the skyrocketing costs of health care if the growing trend to permit nurses to offer services formerly performed exclusively by doctors is allowed to develop.

"Why is it necessary," she asks, "for a Europe-bound traveler to see a doctor for an inoculation, when, in fact, nurses routinely administer inoculations? The doctor collects a fee simply for making a signature. Now that is ridiculous."

Nurse-midwives, despite opposition from doctors, are already working in several areas throughout the country and nurses could be making equally important contributions in other areas, Miss Tyson says. With the new emphasis on preventive medicine, she feels nurses have much to offer, especially in the treatment of drug and alcohol abuse.

The dean agrees that the growing number of men who enter the nursing profession will improve the image and pay scale for nurses. At the same time, men often suffer discrimination when they seek careers in nursing — an ironic reversal of affirmative action, she notes.

Miss Tyson sees nurses moving to the forefront of medical care if their status improves in the near future.

"They will be better equipped and more willing to ask key questions that can lead to advances in medicine," she says. "Nurses are in the best possible position to do that because they are, and should be, in intimate contact with their patients."

Stained glass featured at medieval show

NEW YORK (AP) — A fine exhibition of medieval stained glass and sculpture, "Radiance and Reflection," has as its very appropriate setting the Cloisters Museum here, through Sept. 15. Perched on a hill overlooking the Hudson River, the Cloisters is the home of the medieval art collection of the downtown Metropolitan Museum of Art.

There are more than 120 pieces of medieval art in this exhibition, all on loan from the collection of the late Raymond Pitcairn, which is generally considered to be one of the world's finest in its special field.

About three-quarters of the exhibits are stained glass, four are wood sculptures and the remainder are stone sculptures. The great majority of the pieces are from France, from the 12th, 13th and 14th centuries, architectural fragments from a period which included a glorious surge of cathedral building and the transition from the Romanesque to the Gothic style.

The brilliant, jewel-toned glass is seen to particular advantage in this installation. It's mostly placed near or just above eye level, carefully lit from behind, so that it can be examined in detail in a way that must often have been impossible in the original settings in lofty cathedrals with uncertain lighting.

The depth of the blues, the fire of the reds, the richness in spite of their antiquity of all the colors, jolt the sense of sight with their glowing purity and freshness. Some of the pieces are ornamental fragments, with patterns of leaves and fronds undulating along them. Many more are figurative, illustrations of episodes from Bible stories or portraits of saints and kings.

The windowmakers of the time posed their figures skillfully within the limitations of their medium — exploiting the dramatic definition of the leading, painting expressive detail and large, eloquent eyes on their subjects' faces.

There are six glass panels from the abbey church of Saint Denis in northern France — which was virtually the birthplace of the Gothic style — and others from major cathedrals and abbeys of France.

Many of the pieces of sculpture are architectural details in marble and limestone — capitals, pillars, friezes and reliefs, carved with human figures, animals and decorative foliage: sometimes ageworn but still showing the touches of fantasy, the curious and lively detail worked into them by their anonymous craftsmen.

There are several free-standing larger works, sculpted figures including a handsome, 13th-century lifesize limestone statue of St. Paul; a 15th-century mourning figure, also in limestone, a figure of great simplicity and feeling, and a 12th-century column statue of a haloed queen, a delicate figure with elongated lines and graceful drapery.

The smallest sculpture is the beautiful head of a king carved in limestone by Gislebertus of Autun — this famous artist was one of the few of the period to be known by name.

The four works carved in wood are a 12th-century enthroned Virgin, a slender, gracious figure; an austere fragment of a 12th-century Corpus of the Crucified Christ; a 13th-century oak altar angel with flowing, rounded lines; and an appealing Madonna and Child in a touching and warmly human pose.

The Raymond Pitcairn collection is permanently housed in the Glencairn Museum of the Academy of the New Church, at Bryn Athyn, Pa.

The Cloisters, the temporary home of this selection from that museum, was opened in 1938. Its name comes from the four cloisters which are among the various medieval architectural elements brought over from Europe and reconstructed to form the main building. Besides the cloisters, there are two chapels, a 12th-century apse and a chapter house.

The Unicorn Tapestries are one of the most famous of the permanent installations; there are many other rich and rare treasures, paintings, ivory, ceramics, gold, silver and jewelry, religious and domestic objects, in addition to the artwork that is incorporated into the fabric of the museum building itself.

Huibregtse fund started

Howard College has announced the establishment of the Robert Huibregtse Memorial Scholarship Fund. The scholarship was created to honor the memory of former Howard College student Robert Huibregtse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Huibregtse. Mrs. Huibregtse has been a member of the Howard College faculty for 17 years.

Robert was a May 1963 candidate for graduation from the University of Houston at the time of his death. The scholarship fund is thought to be the most appropriate way to perpetuate his memory.

Persons who wish to make contributions to the scholarship fund should contact Cheri Sparks or Ann Duncan at Howard College.

Photos recall horror of concentration camp

By IKE FLORES

Associated Press Writer

LONGWOOD, Fla. (AP) — It was April 1945 and American troops had just liberated one of Hitler's Jewish prisons deep within Germany.

Seventeen-year-old Lili Jacob, starved down to 80 pounds and delirious from typhus, lay cold and shivering in a vacated German barracks.

Groggily searching for something to keep her warm, she opened the drawer of a nightstand and pulled out a pajama top. Under it was a brown-and-beige book of photographs.

Leafing through it then she realized, incredibly, that some of the pictures were of herself, her parents, brothers, rabbi and other doomed ex-residents of her hometown of Bilke, Hungary. Except for herself, all of those she recognized in the photos had been gassed to death and cremated at Auschwitz-Birkenau, the infamous Nazi death factory in Poland, some 500 miles from where the album was found.

"I realized it was a documentary of the daily life of Auschwitz," Lili Jacob says of her discovery.

Containing 185 photographs and titled "The Resettlement of the Hungarian Jews," the album was — and is — unique in that it is a record of the living, not the dead.

These pictures are of the trainloads of new arrivals, entire families going through the process of "selection" which determined who lived and died.

They are scenes of dazed men, women and children at various stages of arrival, processing, forced separation — and the long lines that led either to slave labor or the gas chamber.

These Auschwitz photos do not show overt brutality or death. But because of the fear, resignation and despair shown on the faces of those marching to an uncertain fate, they are perhaps more poignant.

Experts say the photos could only have been taken by a member of the SS. The photographer has never been identified.

Two years ago, Lili Jacobs donated the album to Yad Vashem, the museum of the Holocaust in Jerusalem.

"After all those years, it was like a parting with loved ones," she says today. "At the same time, it was as if a great burden had been lifted and I was very relieved."

A book based on the photos, "The Auschwitz Album," was published in January by Random House, bringing a surge of international interest in the photographs and the mystery surrounding them.

Between tears and long silences, Lili Jacobs recalls how her life was so radically changed — first by the Nazis and then by the discovery of the brown-and-beige album.

Her mother, father, five brothers and other relatives were killed at Auschwitz along with more than one million Jews. Miss Jacob was chosen for the camp's work details, and she survived, barely.

About a year later, the Nazis marched the prisoners to a camp called Dora about 500 miles away, deep within Germany.

On the day the Americans liberated Dora, Miss Jacob found the album.

She also found herself — grim-faced, her head shaved, staring out from the first row of a group of hundreds of women standing in front of the three-chimneyed kitchen of the Hungarian women's camp. The woman next to her is hiding her face with her arm.

After the war, Miss Jacob went back home to Hungary. The album was all she carried with her.

In Bilke, "I went to the train station every day, praying that someone (of her family) would come back," she says. "No one ever did."

The album eventually helped her and her husband, Max Zelmonovic, emigrate to America.

When the couple were granted permission to enter this country, they were so broke they were nearly forced to pass up the opportunity. But Miss Jacob remembered the album. She had often been told it was valuable.

She and her husband went to the Jewish Museum in Prague and permitted officials there to copy four of the photos on glass plates.

With the money they received, they emigrated to New York with their infant daughter, Esther. Later, they moved to Miami.

In 1964, Lili traveled to Frankfurt with the album to testify at a war crimes trial for 22 members of the SS who had served at Auschwitz-Birkenau. One photo was used to identify one of the defendants, who was pictured herding some of the Jews toward the long lines leading to the Birkenau gas chambers.

Lili's husband died in 1977 and she married Meier, a restaurateur who helped persuade her to donate the album to the museum.

SHOOTOUT AT POLICE STATION — Houston policeman J.B. Irby guards his post at the Houston Police Department where a man is being booked on criminal charges. He reportedly grabbed an officer's revolver and began firing into a crowded room injuring two officers. Other police returned fire hitting the unidentified suspect at least ten times in the abdomen, chest, arms and legs. The two injured policemen were in good condition at Hermann Hospital after the incident Wednesday.

Austinites to honor ex-U.S. House Speaker

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Former U.S. House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma will be the recipient of a 40-foot get-well banner from some Austinites who love him almost as much as they love ice cream and candy kisses.

Linda Hutson, a teacher at the Austin State School, masterminded the project for Albert, who is battling cancer. She said Wednesday she was reciprocating for Albert's past help on legislation for the handicapped.

"We had two proposals dealing with the handicapped go to the Legislature last session, and I would write Carl Albert for guidance and advice," said Ms. Hutson, who met Albert when she was a college senior.

"He would always write back. He kept my hopes up and took the time to respond to my needs," she said.

The red, white and blue banner was made by students at the state school for mentally retarded children. It reads: "The big and little people of Texas say next to power, next to riches, next to Blue Bell ice cream and candy kisses, we love Carl Albert best."

Ms. Hutson said she added a good-natured dig from Austin, the home of the University of Texas.

Defense Department sets shuttle cargo

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The space agency will charge about $46 million for launching its first cash cargo on the space shuttle Columbia's next mission, a mathematician says.

A secret Department of Defense cargo — possibly a spy satellite or a communications satellite — will be the only item carried in Columbia's 60-by-15-foot payload bay, officials said. The launch is set for Nov. 11.

Ralph Schomburg, mathematician for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said a commercial user would pay $64 million for exclusive use of the ship's cargo area. But the Defense Department will pay $18 million less because it is paying only for the hardware necessary to make the trip, he said.

Costs include the external tank on which the orbiter rides; the two solid fuel rockets on either side of the tank, and refurbishment of them after the flight; and post-flight maintenance work of the orbiter's main engines and orbiter space parts.

Schomburg based his figuring on the size and price of one of the first commercial payloads to be launched, a 9,745-pound business satellite. He said a commercial customer would pay $13.9 million to launch a 10,000-pound satellite from the orbiter.

Indicted judge draws full salary

MIAMI (AP) — Alcee Hastings is a federal judge without a caseload, an influential leader who could go to prison. Although he was once a rising star in Florida politics, his luster has been obscured by bribery charges for which there is no legal precedent.

Hastings, who became Florida's first black federal judge when President Carter appointed him to the federal bench in 1979, was indicted last December on bribery charges along with William A. Borders Jr., a close friend and a Washington lawyer.

Borders is to be sentenced Friday in Atlanta for conspiracy to commit bribery and obstruction of justice. He was convicted of soliciting case-fixing bribes on Hastings' behalf.

Hastings, 45, faces identical charges. But he won't be tried until appellate courts make a decision on his argument that a sitting federal judge is constitutionally immune from criminal trial.

There is no legal precedent, since no sitting federal judge has ever stood trial. Hastings' attorneys have said they will pursue the matter to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

If the courts side with Hastings, the House of Representatives would have to impeach him — the equivalent of an indictment — and the Senate would have to consider his case and convict him before he could be removed from the bench.

When Borders was convicted in March, before a federal judge from Maine who tried the case in Atlanta because of publicity in Miami, Hastings said he had "nothing to do whatever with what Bill Borders did."

Hastings removed himself from all cases last October when the bribery probe became public. He continues to draw his $70,000 annual judge's salary, but insists, "It's not a picnic and it's not a vacation."

TV violence linked to aggressiveness

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL, Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — There is "overwhelming" evidence that violence on television leads to aggressive behavior by children and teen-agers, a new government study says.

"Both prime time and weekend children's television are dominated by action, power and danger. There is an average of five violent acts per hour on prime time and 18 acts per hour on children's weekend programs," the National Institute of Mental Health report said.

The study, "Television and Behavior: Ten Years of Scientific Progress and Implications for the Eighties," is a follow-up to a widely publicized 1972 Surgeon General's report on television violence.

The report is based on a review of several hundred research studies.

"Violence on television seems to be cyclical, up a little one year, down a little the next, but the percentage of programs containing violence has remained essentially the same over the past decade," it said.

"In general, television, despite the concerns of congressmen and citizens' groups, remains a violent form of entertainment," the report said.

"The evidence accumulated in the 1970s seems overwhelming that televised violence and aggression are positively related in children."

Why cable firm balks at returning WFAA

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

Radio station KBST owner Winston Wrinkle presented Big Spring Cable TV vice president Jim Lancaster with petitions to bring back WFAA programming in a meeting held late yesterday afternoon.

Wrinkle said there were about 800 names on the petitions, which had been gathered by the radio station and presented to Lancaster "to make him aware that the people of the city are very concerned about the deletion of channel 8."

Lancaster declined to comment this morning on what transpired during the meeting, but according to Wrinkle, Lancaster offered several reasons why he didn't want to bring back WFAA.

Wrinkle said the petitions asked that Big Spring Cable TV offer local viewers WFAA's 5, 6 and 10 p.m. newscasts plus "PM Magazine," which also airs in the evening.

"I asked if that was possible and he said yes, it is possible," Wrinkle recounted. "Then he went into the reasons why he didn't want to do it."

One reason, according to Wrinkle, is that Lancaster has a hunch people don't fully understand that if WFAA is brought back, it can only be broadcast when it isn't showing the same material as the local ABC affiliate in Big Spring, KWAB (a recent FCC ruling says that the cable company must honor the local station's request for non-duplication of ABC programming).

Lancaster, Wrinkle said, suspects that viewer complaints will increase when WFAA is switched off immediately after the cessation of original WFAA programming during the course of each day.

Another reason Lancaster is reluctant to bring back WFAA is the "unreliability" of microwave transmission, Wrinkle said.

"They have over the years, during spring and fall thunderstorms, had some difficulty in bringing in the Dallas-Fort Worth TV stations," Wrinkle said. "We receive the Texas State Network on the same microwave system. It is true that during periods of thunderstorms and heavy heating and cooling that the signal gets lost sometimes."

He said it happens "one to five hours for two or three weeks a year" and KBST, in such a situation, picks up the TSN broadcast over telephone lines. It's unclear, Wrinkle said, whether a video signal can be picked up the same way.

Another reason Lancaster cited is the cost of bringing in WFAA, Wrinkle said. The cost of WFAA programming has gone up, according to George Batsche, president of West Texas Microwave, the company supplying Big Spring Cable TV with WFAA programming.

Lancaster indicated to Wrinkle that if the cost increase was "just four or five hundred dollars a month," then cost wouldn't be such an important factor, Wrinkle said. Batsche, however, told The Herald that the bill to Big Spring Cable TV is about $473 higher, from about $700 to the new cost of $1,173 per month.

Wrinkle said the meeting concluded without a commitment from Lancaster, and added, "He seemed reasonable about doing what could be done. But he wanted to know if people realize he can only switch in and out and not show WFAA full-time."

Howard ranks 15th in oil production

By BILL ELDER
Staff Writer

Howard County ranked 15th among Texas counties in terms of crude oil production last year, according to recently released figures from the Dallas-based Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

Gaines, Yoakum, Pecos, Ector and Gregg counties were the top five oil-producing counties in Texas, each producing in excess of 42 million barrels during 1981, the association said.

Howard County wells produced 13,759,527 barrels last year — a drop of about a million barrels from 1980, according to the association. Even so, Howard found itself one of the 21 counties producing more than 10 million barrels last year.

Gaines, the leader, produced 53,259,427 barrels, the association said.

Statewide, a "maximum efficient" drilling push created a total 1981 output of nearly 929 million barrels, the association said.

Using figures from the Texas Railroad Commission, the association reported that nearly 25,000 new holes were drilled in the Lone Star state last year, an 18.1 percent increase over 1980. Oil completions stood at 15,627, up 21.2 percent over 1980.

No value on the oil was released, but in 1980, the crude oil produced in Howard County was worth $317.5 million, according to the association's 1980 report.

The drilling production figures from last year pushed the county's all-time production amount to 582 million barrels. Oil is said to have been first discovered in Howard County in 1925. Gregg County is the all-time leader in cumulative production of crude oil, having produced 2.7 billion barrels since 1931.

Ector County is second on the cumulative list, having produced 2.3 billion barrels. Andrews is third with a little over 2 billion barrels, while Scurry County is fifth at 1.6 billion.

SWCID GRADS — These four students have the distinct honor of being the first graduates at the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf. They were honored Friday in a special reception that included

First four SWCID graduates honored

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

The Southwest Collegiate Institute family composed of students, faculty and staff honored four of its off-springs yesterday as the first four graduates of the college were lauded at a special reception.

Over one hundred people crowded into the intimate setting of the SWCID student union building to praise, laugh with and celebrate the school's history-makers.

Those having the distinct honor of being the first graduates are Randy Baker, an agriculture major from Dallas; Sherrie Kay Daniels, of Southgate, Calif., who plans to major in computer programming; Cliff Bodiford, from Lake Jackson, who is an electronic technology major; and Jennifer Neutilla Jeffers-Grant, a special education major from Bermuda.

CHERI SPARKS, vice president for student life for the Howard County Junior College District said, "The SWCID faculty and staff have realized a dream and a hope fulfilled... it's up to our graduates to let the world know SWCID has arrived."

Sam Hill, acting vice president for SWCID said all four of the students took a risk coming to SWCID because of the school's newness.

"Actually, you are honoring us today because you took that risk. You are truly pioneers being the first graduates at SWCID," Hill said.

Dr. Douglas Burke, director of transitional planning and development for SWCID, took the speaker's stand to the sound of uproarious applause. As he spoke his eyes began to glisten with the pride he was feeling.

"It's not the end for you," he told the graduates, "but the beginning. There are almost 120 students following you. The future of SWCID depends on how you do after leaving SWCID. If you fail then we fail."

"You four graduates are the proof of our success. You are the first SWCID alumni. Your success in our world today is an example for all those that follow," Burke said.

The students had also chosen in advance four speakers to give brief anecdotes and bit of insight into each of the graduate's personality.

Speakers included Linda Woodley, speaking for Jennifer Jeffers; Glen Carrigan, speaking for Randy Baker; Joe Rhodes, speaking for Cliff Bodiford; and Terry Dobson, speaking for Sherrie Daniels.

THE GRADUATES gave short talks about themselves, which consisted of advice, humor and dreams for the future.

Each of the students has definite plans after their graduation. Baker said he would be working on a ranch near Dallas utilizing his agricultural degree; Miss Daniels plans to get her B.S. degree from East Central University in Ada, Okla.; Cliff Bodiford said he plans to go to work and get married; and Miss Jeffers is looking toward a B.A. and an M.A. in special education.

The actual graduation for the students will be May 11.

Others involved in the reception were Art Dignan, as emcee; Bob Coltrane, who handled voice translation; Richard Fendrich, sound system; and the Big Spring Sign Language Club, who provided refreshments.

Downtown Lions begin lightbulb sale for charity

As they have for more than a quarter of a century, Downtown Lions will be knocking on doors starting Monday for their lightbulb sale.

"These lightbulbs help light up life for blind and for crippled children primarily, but also for a lot of other humanitarian causes," said Dr. James Cave, chairman of the sale.

Annually, the club pumps some $3,500 or more into helping with sight conservation, sometime aiding blind in being introduced to their guide dogs, helping with programs for the deaf, and always supporting the Texas Lions Camp for Crippled Children.

"WE DON'T really do these things," said Dr. Cave. "You good people who buy our packets of bulbs do. We try to be your agent of mercy."

As usual, packets of six bulbs (assorted sizes) come for $3.50; the three-way bulbs come for $2.

The Downtown Lions annually pay out around $1,500 to provide for examinations and eye glasses for youngsters (and some adults) who otherwise could not have these helps for their visual problems. Also, funds go to support the Eye Bank program, which sees to it that eyes donated at death are whisked anywhere in the country where there is a need.

AROUND $1,000 goes to the Texas Lions Camp, where this year some 1,300 physically handicapped children will have a free experience of "being like other kids" in a camping experience.

Glenn Crawford, director, said that it costs Texas Lions around $1,100,000 a year for the five sessions of two weeks for crippled children, plus another for diabetic youngsters.

In off seasons, Lions carry on a vocational training program for adult blind. Forty-three were trained in 1981 when the program operated for only part of the year.

Also, groups dealing with helping the handicapped have short camps, seminars, training sessions at the camp which has 26 permanent buildings, two swimming pools (one constant depth for laps for therapy).

A reminder... just for the record

By REBECCA TAYLOR
Reference Librarian

The approach of hot summer weather brings to mind a problem of which library patrons should be aware. One frequently hears warnings about leaving pets and small children in a hot car. Though not as deadly, a hot car is just as disastrous a place to leave library materials, especially records and audio visual materials.

Records may be warped beyond belief by sitting in a closed car with the sun on it. It does not take long for a record that was in good shape when it left home to be destroyed.

THE EFFECT on films and equipment is less immediate and visible. Exposure to heat makes film brittle and easier to break. Color and definition fade more rapidly on films when exposed to high temperatures.

Projection bulbs, when hot are more easily broken. The filament inside the bulbs can be broken by just moving the projector when the bulb is hot. Excessive heat build up is always a deteriorating factor in electrical equipment.

Books are the least susceptible to damage but even these are affected by the intense heat in a closed car in summer. Covers fade, warp and wrinkle. Glue used in binding dries and cracks. Pages yellow and become brittle.

AVOIDING PROBLEMS with the heat and library materials is simple. Always try to transport these vulnerable materials directly to and from the library. An hour at the grocery or a friend's house could have you buying a warped record. Carry library materials out of direct sun. If you have records, be sure they are carried flat or completely vertical with no weight or pressure on them.

New records are constantly being added to our collection. Your suggestions and requests are taken into consideration whenever possible.

Recent requests from teachers and parents have resulted in the purchase of several Hap Palmer Instructional Records. Designed for preschool and elementary students, these records are both entertaining and educational. The following are the new titles:

Learning Basic Skills, vol I; Learning Basic Skills, vol II; Learning Basic Skills, Health and Safety; Learning Basic Skills, Building Vocabulary; Learning Basic Skills, vol V; Learning with Circles and Sticks; Folk Song Carnival; Getting to Know Myself; Creative movement and Rhythmic Exploration; Easy does it; Math Readiness: Vocabulary and Concepts; Math Readiness: Addition and Subtraction; Singing Multiplication Tables.

Coahoma students hold rodeo

Bull riding, barrel racing, goat tying and stick horse races are three of the dozen events scheduled for the Coahoma annual rodeo to be held Wednesday at 2:30 p.m. at the Coahoma arena.

The rodeo, which is open to all Coahoma students, will feature bareback riding, team roping, break-away roping, ribbon tie-down roping, chute dogging, and a calf scramble. The stock for the show and the announcer will be provided by Charlie Thompson Productions of Lubbock.

In addition to the rodeo Wednesday, western day activities will be held at the high school Friday. A western day barbecue will be held at lunch in the high school cafeteria. Tickets for the lunch will be sold to students through Wednesday for $3. Adults or members of the community who wish to buy tickets for the barbecue may do so at the high school.

An awards assembly will be held Friday to present belt buckles and awards to the winners of the various rodeo events.

Medicare inspects

Root Memorial

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Root Memorial Hospital passed its recent Medicare inspection with flying colors, according to hospital administrator Ray Dillard.

"Some of the departments had no correction, some had one or two. Most of the 'deficiencies', as Medicare labels them, were directly related to the fact we cannot find registered nurses for complete 24-hour coverage," Dillard said.

Dillard noted the inspection cited 16 deficiencies, 13 of which had to do with the lack of RN's on the 3-11 p.m. shift. He said he is pleased with the results.

Piano auditions this week

Eighty-nine local piano pupils from Big Spring and Garden City have registered as candidates for membership in the National Fraternity of Student Musicians. The fraternity is sponsored by the National Guild of Piano Teachers, Teacher Division of American College of Musicians. The pupils' teachers are members of the Guild.

This group of piano hobbyists will play in the National Piano Playing Auditions to be held at the Howard College Music Building. They will strive for pledges, local, district, state, national or even international honors which the Mother organization will confer. The honors are conferred according to the number of standard classic, romantic and modern pieces chosen from the Masters of pianoforte literature each student can creditably perform in the presence of an imported examiner of note from another state.

Teachers of the participating pupils are Mrs. Chester Barnes, Mrs. Fred Beckham, Mrs. Brenda Bedell, Mrs. S.T. Cheatham, Mrs. Mildred Harris, Garden City, and Ann Gibson-Houser, local Guild chairman.

Rena Elliott will judge auditions. She is a graduate pupil of Guild Founder and a former public school music teacher. She has been a private piano teacher for 20 years. Mrs. Elliott has been a member of National Piano Guild Hall of Fame since 1968. She was listed in Who's Who of American Women, is an American College of Music approved teacher, and has been an adjudicator for Guild in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico for several years.

More than 100,500 piano pupils throughout the nation will participate in the annual

Children have stress signals

COLLEGE STATION — Thumbsucking and bedwetting have answers and solutions if you know how to find them, says Cindy Wilson, family life education specialist. Both are "stress signals," so first find the stress cause, and then help the child deal with it.

Mrs. Wilson is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Stress causes might be emotional or they might be physical, the specialist explains. Physical stress can happen when certain foods are upsetting to a child's system. His body is so "busy" dealing with the stress, it "forgets" and wets the bed. Any illness can have the same effect.

Patience is the key to dealing with all stresses. A lot of time and patience usually do wonders in helping a child deal with — and overcome — any kind of stress.

"Looking at thumbsucking closely, we should point out that this behavior really isn't so bad," Mrs. Wilson says.

"Most pediatricians recommend that we ignore episodes of thumbsucking, in fact." However, parents should realize that thumb-sucking is a reaction to stress and a comforting habit to a child. Stress factors that cause thumbsucking can include fatigue, boredom, depression, anxiety, or a need for attention.

When you notice thumbsucking, if you can't just ignore it, tackle the stress instead of forbidding the child to suck his thumb, Mrs. Wilson suggests.

For example, try spending more time with the child in a play or work setting — and divert his or her attention to new and exciting activities. If stress occurs because of a family crisis or any other cause for anxiety, comfort the child, so he won't need to resort to thumbsucking as a comfort measure.

Before looking more closely at bedwetting, it should be noted that some children simply are not physically ready for toilet training, although they seem to be making great progress at times.

Children whose bladders are not large enough to hold reasonable amounts of urine simply wet the bed during long periods of sleep. The same is true for children who develop muscle control more slowly than other children. In these cases, patience is all important. It is a must.

Emotional stress, on the other hand, is a different matter. A child with emotional stress may hide his or her fears in the daytime, but as sleep brings relaxation, he or she may wet the bed. To deal with this, try talking to the child who appears to be worried — to help him relax by getting his problems into the open. Also, limit fluids before bedtime.

The state University Interscholastic League literary events in Austin Saturday yielded one first place winner for Coahoma Independent School District in Tommy McDaniel. McDaniel captured first place in the editorial writing competition.

Also placing for Coahoma High School was Todd Anderson with a fifth place in shorthand. Renee Blackwell nabbed a seventh in feature writing while Jana Higgins also took seventh in poetry interpretation. According to the group's sponsor, Bill Kopf, this is the first time Coahoma students have placed in literary events in state competition.

Howard GOP favors Collins

The Republican Party of Howard County turned out 282 voters in yesterday's May GOP Primary, and the Republicans seemed to prefer those candidates with political experience.

In the race for U.S. Senate, longtime Rep. Jim Collins received 160 votes to Walter H. Mengden's 110 votes. Mengden currently serves in the Texas Senate. Don L. Richardson, also a hopeful in the race, managed to get 12 votes.

Incumbent Gov. Bill Clements won easily over Lowell Embs. Clements overcame Embs and won 254 to 21.

In the race for state Comptroller Mike Richards garnered 179 votes, while his opponent Raymond Frank received 53 votes.

Jim Reese, a well-known Republican, ran far in front of his opponent in the 28 District Senate seat race. He received 168 votes, while challengers John W. Smith and John J.C. O'Shea received 31 and 48 votes, respectively.

Garden City Lions to host pancake supper

The Garden City Lions Club will sponsor a Pancake Supper on May 6 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Garden City School cafeteria. Plates will be $2.50 or a donation.

Proceeds will go to Billy Joe Medrano, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Lupe Medrano of St. Lawrence. A bake sale, sponsored by the Glasscock County 4-H Club will also be held at this time.

Following the pancake supper at 8 p.m. the Lions will sponsor a program in the school auditorium on drug abuse. This program is being presented by the "Texans War on Drugs." It has been set up to reach every citizen in an effort to diminish the abuse of drugs in Texas. Beverly Barron, Region 2 Coordinator will present the program.

Decision nearing on new chief of police

By BILLELDER
Staff Writer

Two vacant administrative slots at Big Spring City Hall may be filled within six weeks, City Manager Don Davis said yesterday.

Davis, talking in the second of a series of weekly meetings with reporters, said decisions were imminent on hiring a new police chief and city attorney.

The city attorney's position may be filled as early as next week, he said, adding that he was reviewing "four or five" applicants for the job.

The job became vacant at the first of the year when Elliott Mitchell resigned to join a private law firm in Big Spring. Since then Mitchell has been utilized by the city on a retainer basis, and Davis said that was one reason why he had let four months pass without hiring a new city attorney.

"With Elliott on retainer, it's not as if we've been without legal counsel," Davis said. He added that he had been considering turning the job into a position which would be held strictly on a retainer basis, but nixed the idea since a salaried city attorney would have increased availability.

Filling the police chief position, vacated by Elwood Hoberz a month ago, will take a little longer. Davis said the cut-off date for applicants will be the middle of May, and a decision on the new chief might be made by 30 days after the application cut-off.

He said he probably would make the hiring decision without the benefit of a citizen's panel, which he used last time around in 1980 when Stanley Bogard left the force.

"The situation was different last time. It warranted using an outside board ... We were having union problems. There was controversy within the department and controversy outside the department. Those circumstances don't exist now," the city manager said.

He declined to name the applicants for either post, and indicated that the salary for each job probably would be near $30,000 a year.

In another matter, Davis said the city may not seek bids on the construction of the third and final hangar at the city airport, and instead will let the private Howard County Industrial Foundation build the hangar and sell it to the city.

Such a move would mean a cheaper cost to the city, since a provision of federal bidding laws covering public works projects could result in a 25 to 30 percent higher cost if the city itself seeks bids for the hangar project. The foundation built the first two hangars, privately putting them to bid among area companies. An agreement calls for the foundation to sell the hangars to the city upon completion of construction. The foundation built the first two hangars to help speed up the projects.

Also in his meeting with the news media, Davis pointed out that it's flower-picking time at city-owned Mount Olive Cemetery. Twice a year maintenance crews go through the cemetery and collect the flowers to keep the cemetery clean.

"We'll be doing that this month," he said, adding that all flowers will be removed except "those in the vases attached to the markers."

The city also will be doing some roadwork at the cemetery in the near future. The main cemetery road and possibly all the roads inside the cemetery will be sealcoated with a private donation of $40,000, Davis said. The road improvement will be carried out in conjunction with the county, which has an agreement with the city to trade road improvements for city fire protection.

In another matter, Davis announced that 11 Big Spring firemen are participating in a regional training program in San Angelo this week. Five of the firemen went down to teach in the program, while six rookie firemen are there to learn, he said.

Grant beats Gilmore

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Peace Justice precinct 2 candidate Willie Grant held off opponent Jane Gilmore in a tightly contested race in Coahoma to emerge the winner in yesterday's May 1 Democratic Primary. Ms. Grant garnered 279 votes to Ms. Gilmore's 246.

The two hopefuls actually split the two voting boxes in Coahoma with Grant winning Precinct 9 with 164 votes to Gilmore's 96 ballots, and Gilmore captured Precinct 21 with 134 votes to Grant's 95.

Grant said, "I'm surprised by the win. I appreciate those that worked for me and I'm very proud I won. Thanks a million to all those that supported me."

HC medical programs plan for health fair

Health care programs at Howard College will participate in the Community Health Fair to be held on Saturday, May 15, from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. at the Big Spring Mall, according to Barbara Holdampf, director of the Associate Degree Nursing program at HC and co-chairman of the Health Fair.

Howard College will have a recruiting booth set up at the fair handing out brochures and pamphlets on the health care areas and the programs offered at HC.

"Since 62 percent of HC students staff Big Spring hospitals, we feel our students play a big part in the health care field, and we would like to inform the public of what HC has to offer," said Miss Holdampf. "Because of our excellent show of students, we are given more and more scholarships from local professional organizations."

The programs participating in the fair will be the Associate Degree of Nursing program, a two-year program from which graduates are eligible to write the National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses.

Farmers' pleasure: 1.65 inches of rain

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Local farmers got just what they were hoping for yesterday evening as a chain of thunderstorms moving over Big Spring dumped approximately 1.65 inches on the area.

A cold front pushing into West Texas combined with an upper level disturbance to trigger the thunderstorms, weather forecasters said. The National Weather Service is calling for a 50 percent chance of precipitation through today decreasing to 30 percent by tonight. According to the U.S. Big Spring Field Station, the 1.65 inches brought Big Spring's year-to-date total to 3.68 inches. The normal for this time of year is 4.05 inches.

The rain was a welcome sight for farmers.

"It's just what we would have ordered had we been able to order rain," said Bill Fryrear of the field station. "As soon as it dries up and clears up, I think we're going ahead with our planting. I think most farmers will too."

In other sections of the city, James D. "Red" Thomas of 107 E. 13th reported rainfall totalling 1.5 inches, and Boyce Hale, southwest of Big Spring, called in 1.24.

Although Big Spring was blessed with a gentle rain, some areas of the state experienced harsh weather. Midland and Odessa reported pea-size hail fell in that area late last night. A tornado was sighted near Quitaque in the Panhandle, and a flash flood watch was issued by the NWS for eastern counties in the Panhandle.

Stanton ends sale of water

STANTON — The Stanton City Council decided last night to stop selling bulk water to some companies due to difficulty in collecting payment. City Secretary Nelda Turner said the problems were with out-of-town facilities such as oil companies and fertilizer firms. The city's inability to collect bills led the council to end offering bulk water for sale.

In other action, the council approved a six-inch water line for Ed Lawson's new construction in the city. The council did not award bids for a sewer line cleaner. Councilmen moved to postpone any decision on the cleaner for about 30 days, Mrs. Turner said.

The Mall Street Journal

You would think that after an event as successful as the Flea Market that we would deserve a rest out here at the Big Spring Mall, not true. This week at the Big Spring Mall there are several excellent exhibits and specialty kiosks.

Let me start with the exhibit, the American Printing House for the Blind and World Book — Childcraft International, Inc. in collaboration with Bramalea Limited have started a project to help the blind and visually handicapped in Texas. They have undertaken the exhibition of this project as a non-profit community service, which also helps in promoting good will for the companies and their products. The official title of this exhibit is the Talking World Book, and it lives up to its name. The Talking World Book is the first encyclopedia to be recorded on tape for the blind and partially sighted. The Talking World Book consists of 19 large volumes containing the World Book index, in both Braille and large type, the reference set itself consists of 219 six hour cassettes. The developer of the Big Spring Mall, Bramalea Ltd. and World Book have jointly donated a Talking World Book to the Texas School for the blind in Austin, Texas. Everyone be sure to come see this worthwhile exhibit.

If you gentlemen have not yet found something for mom the Big Spring Mall is the place to come look, other than the fine specials being offered by the many fine merchants of the mall there will be several special kiosks at the mall this weekend. Swails Originals have been at the mall since Monday and will be here till Saturday night. Jim Swails has brought his hanging lamps and let me tell you they are beautiful. There are several different sizes to choose from and they are already assembled.

in side of the glass bulbs, there are beautiful butterflies, and dried flowers. For that special mom there are a few large lamps that feature real preserved quail in a natural setting, all of these lamps are so expertly hand crafted that they look as if they'll fly off at any minute.

Another special kiosks will contain my friend Ruben Vargas with his Computer Portraits. Those of you that attended the Flea Market will remember Ruben and his wife, Polly. Ruben can take a picture of you or use one of yours and transfer it on to a T-shirt, calendar, or any of the other novelty item he offers.

Perhaps the most important event this Mother's Day weekend at the Big Spring Mall is the First Annual Mother's Day Plant Show and Sale. The kind folks at Johansen Landscaping and Nursery are sponsoring this year's show. Jackie Johansen tells me that she will have Hydrangeas, Azaleas, Mums of different colors, miniature Roses, Rose bushes, miniature Rose Trees, fruit and oak trees, and a plant that is new to the Big Spring area, the Bavarian Belle. To me, a gift that will keep on growing and blooming for years to come would be a perfect Mother's day gift.

I also want to remind you that May 15th the Big Spring Mall will be hosting the Health and Safety Fair. This promises to be another wonderful show not only for the viewing public but for those who wish to take advantage of the many health services that will be on hand.

Before I bring an end to this Mall Street Journal let me remind you that throughout the mall this week there are hundreds of values to be found for that special mom.
