Alien employment -- the view from Big Spring

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

Shadowed faces warily slip across the night-time river, furtively seeking an opportunity for a better life.

As long as there has been a border, there have been border-crossers, mojos and wetbacks.

By any name, the story is the same. The opportunists in a disadvantaged country come to a land they see as one of great promise — where chances for employment are better and wages are higher than in the homeland they leave behind. The temptations are enough to make a poor man leave home and family temporarily behind when he can't make a decent living in his country and only a river or a barbed wire fence separate him from a chance at more money.

The biggest lure has always been that of jobs.

Often, even the most menial jobs "across" — passed over by the alien's land of milk and honey as "demeaning" or paying an unlivable wage — still offer the border-crosser far more in cash than he could make in his home country.

And the jobs have historically been easy to come by.

Bills before the United States Congress could make a major change in the age-old way of things, however.

Senate Bill 2222 and House Resolution 5872, identical bills, have proposed sanctions against an employer found guilty of knowingly hiring an illegal alien. Fines of $1,000 to $2,000 could be imposed for each offense.

Hiring job applicants without following procedures to determine citizenship status would be subject to a fine of $500 per employee and failing to maintain proper records for at least five years following the hiring of the employee could result in a fine of $500 per employee.

THE BIG SPRING Chamber of Commerce and the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, in separate board meetings, recently voted not to endorse the bills.

"I think it's unfair to both the employer and the illegal alien," said Sid Clark, president of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce. "If he (the alien) wants to come to the United States and work, let him come. I personally don't think the illegal aliens make that much difference in our work force."

An area farmer-rancher, who asked to remain anonymous, agreed, saying, "They (aliens) haven't been used but very little in competitive jobs. Most of the help we get from Old Mexico is very under-educated, even illiterate ... most of them are not educated enough to go on to higher jobs. The higher-skilled jobs, like tractor driving, the American raised people — both the whites and the Spanish — get the better jobs."

The chambers of commerce seem to feel that enforcing the bills would be difficult for the employers.

"If I remember correctly," said Clark, "it requires you to have a fraud-proof social security card — one that can't be duplicated or use another name."

FROM STARE TO STEAK — This animal and his companions in the Cattlemen's Feedyard in Pecos are part of the 4 million head of fed cattle in Texas. The feed

Where the costs come from; a trip through cattle country

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

The steaks a family eats for supper travel a long and distinctive route. And while the cattlemen is not making any profits, the blame for rising beef costs cannot be placed solely on the middleman.

This was one lesson for the media as the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and the West Texas Livestock producers sponsored a beef tour last Tuesday so that media representatives could trace the steps of beef from hoof to household.

The beef tour began Tuesday morning as members

...the cowman is not making any money.

Dr. Gary Condra

of the print and electronic medium boarded small planes in Midland for a quick flight to Pecos.

The first link in the beef chain is the production of animals for sale, a step represented by the Howard Collier Ranch in Reeves County. The 450 Brahma Crossbred mother cows on the 32,000-acre ranch require care, ranch manager Charles Stanford said. "We have to work with our cattle every month and every year," he said.

The choice of the Brahma cross was dictated by the environment, Stanford said. "The Brahma was chosen because it had the best qualities. It is one that will raise a calf every year and can get by with a minimum of rain — we're lucky for green grass here," the ranch manager said.

DESPITE THE production care shown the cattle which raised dust about the press, the Collier Ranch, and other cattlemen, stand to lose more than $130 per cow. Projections prepared by the Reeves County Extension Livestock Committee indicate total receipts for one cow at $226, but total costs of production equal $359.65. The net return to the cattlemen is then minus $133.65.

As Dr. Gary Condra, an agricultural economist with Texas A & M University, explained the projections to the press, he noted "the cowman is not making any money." Condra could not say if the "middleman" had a mark-up on beef prices, but there is "lots of difference between the supermarket and here."

Economist Dr. W.E. Black says farm costs have gone up 153 percent in 10 years while net income per farm family has dropped 20 percent. Rising production costs and dropping prices are problems cattlemen like Howard Collier must face to survive. The Collier Ranch was founded in the 1880's by Howard senior, acto Collier. His father came from Kentucky after the Civil War," he added.

Another link in the beef chain covered by the tour was the feedlot. Gerald Franks, owner and manager of Cattlemen's Feedyard, Inc. in Pecos, told the group a heifer would spend 120 to 140 days "fattening up for market." An animal would come into the lot at around 500 pounds and depart for the slaughterhouse at 700 pounds, the feedlot manager said.

"We fatten 'em up to make good marbling steaks, good quality steaks," Franks said. "We market to Houston, San Antonio, Dallas, even some to San Angelo." Most of the beef comes from central and east Texas with some from Florida," Franks added.

The small feedlot would hold 8,000 head of cattle, Franks said. The feedlot could make profits on beef as exhibited by a performance summary for 129 head. Despite sales of the 129 head for $51,425.66, the total costs of $46,525.29 yielded a profit of only $37.98 per head. "You have to stay on top of lots of things," Franks said.

A STEP in the beef chain for live cattle which usually precedes the feedlot is the auction where animals are bought and sold. Following a flight back to Midland, the media toured Southwest Livestock Sales with co-owner Bill Evans. The weekly auction handles about 1,000 to 1,200 head of cattle, Evans said, but things were slower due to the weather this week.

Inside the auction barn, away from the pens and the flies, bidders from major slaughter companies and feedlots wrangle for the best animals. The clang of a metal gate issues a few head into the arena even as the rattle of another pen resounds behind departing beasts. Over the clatter of metal and the bellowing animals, the auctioneer continues his call snatching the slight motions of the bidders to raise the bid yet another notch.

Evans noted some animals which are sold are sent to feedlots to fatten them up before slaughter. The media tour did not visit a slaughter plant or packing plant as none exists in the immediate area of Midland. Packing plants operate on an extremely high investment and low profit margin. Without a high volume flow, many packers can go, and have gone out of business.

Slaughtered beef is then bought for processing by a plant like Clark's Wholesale Meats in Midland, the next link in the chain. Larry Clark, who has been in the beef processing business for 30 years, said he operates on a margin.

"Everything is done on volume because a profit or loss varies with the product. It is a challenge to take a cut of beef and cut a profit from it," Clark said.

The whole process of preparing the beef for the consumer adds up the costs for the consumer, Clark said.

Runoff roundup

Candidates for county offices square off

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Spotlighted in this Saturday's runoff elections are local races in Howard County for county judge and county commissioner in precinct 2.

Incumbent Bill Tune and challenger Milton Kirby face off in a closely contested county judge race that saw Kirby nab 1,683 votes to Tune's 1,607 in the May 1 Democratic primary. Challenger John Stanley also ran strong on May 1, totaling 1,197 votes.

Both Tune and Kirby are hoping to swing some of Stanley's votes, as well as keep voter interest simmering for the runoff. Only 4,623 of Howard County's 14,315 registered voters cast ballots in the May 1 Democratic primary.

Statewide, only 19 percent of the state's registered voters turned out and political observers are predicting only a five percent turnout for the June runoffs.

In the county commissioner precinct 2 race, incumbent Paul Allen, who came out on top of a four-way race in the Democratic primary with 45 percent of the vote, will square off against Bob Cowley, who tallied 25 percent of the vote.

Allen said he was pleased with his campaign, but he expressed concern about voter apathy.

"The only thing that bothers me is now that school is out people might be going on vacation and they won't be around to vote. I think a low voter turnout could hurt me," Allen said.

Allen said he felt confident because of his past record as county commissioner.

"The main thing is that I've operated the office efficiently and it's in financially good shape and we've been under budget," he said.

Bob Cowley said his strategy was to meet as many voters as possible.

"I'm trying to see everybody. I've used the newspaper to try to reach those that I couldn't see," Cowley said.

As for the outcome of the election Cowley said, "I don't know ... I had a lot to make up."

IN AREA races there are Democratic runoffs in Glasscock, Mitchell and Dawson counties.

In Glasscock County the county judge's race is contested with Wilburn Bednar and John Robinson vying for the spot. Bednar edged Robinson by a slim margin of six votes in a three-way May 1 Democratic Primary race.

Mitchell County has one runoff race which pits incumbent Billy H. Preston against challenger Royce Mahan for the county commissioner precinct 4 office.

In Dawson County there are two contested races. In the county judge race Curtis Pruitt and Glenn "Bottles" White, both of whom came out dead even with 888 votes in the May 1 primary, are squaring off. In the county commissioner precinct 2 race incumbent Kenneth Pearson takes on A.B. Furlow.

There are no Republican runoffs in Howard County or in the statewide election.

Statewide, voters will choose four Democratic candidates to face Republican opposition in November.

Jim Mattox and John Hannah are candidates for attorney general. Pete Snelson and Garry Mauro are contending for the land commissioner's office. John E. Humphreys and Charles F. "Chuck" Campbell are vying for the Court of Criminal Appeals, place 1 spot. And Bill Black and Chuck Miller face off in the Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 2 race. Following are the Democratic polling places for the 21 Howard County precincts.

Precinct 1, Northside Fire Station; precinct 2, Washington Place School; precinct 3, 18th and Main Fire Station; precinct 4, Fourth and Nolan Fire Station; precinct 5, Vincent Baptist Church; precinct 6, Luther Gin Office; precinct 7, Salem Baptist Church; precinct 8, Airport School; precinct 9, Coahoma City Hall; precinct 10, Forsan School; precinct 11, Centerpoint Community Building; precinct 12, Prairie View Baptist Church; precinct 13, Knott Community Center; precinct 15, Wesley Methodist Church; precinct 16, Wasson Road Fire Station; precinct 17, Wesley Yater residence; precinct 18, Kentwood Older Adult Center; precinct 19, Elbow School; precinct 20, Jonesboro Road Fire Station; precinct 21, Sand Springs Fire Station; precinct 22, 11th and Birdwell Fire Station.

British report capture of 900 Argentine soldiers

By The Associated Press
British paratroopers captured 900 Argentine soldiers when they overran Goose Green, but their commander was killed in the assault, the British Defense Ministry announced Saturday.

British commandos fought to within 25 miles of the Falkland Islands capital of Stanley on Saturday after taking Darwin and Goose Green

Friday, British press reports said. Argentina said it was still fighting at Goose Green, but claimed U.S. support for Britain had turned the fighting into an "unequal battle."

The Defense Ministry said in its statement: "We understand that when the Argentines surrendered, about 900 prisoners were taken by the battalion. We do not have information yet about the extent of British or Argentine casualties. ... We very much regret to announce that the commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion, the Parachute Regiment, Lt. Col. H. Jones, was killed in the action to take Goose Green."

The British press reports said it was believed 2,100 British marines had taken key Argentine positions at Douglas and Teal Inlet — about 25 See Falklands, page 2-A

Alien employment

A recent news release, said it "feels that the reform proposals would place the burden of policing the (Federal Immigration and Nationalization) Act squarely on the shoulders of the employer while failing to sufficiently clarify acceptable methods of verifying legal status in a manner that could provide the employer with a definite means of determining an applicant's legality at the time the application for employment is received."

While a national identification card would solve the problem of an employer determining whether or not an applicant was a legal citizen, the card itself would present some problems, said Frank Chavez, a member of 17th Congressional District Representative Charles Stenholm's staff in Washington.

"That's going to be hotly contested," said Chavez. "If you're going to have a fine, you've got to have some kind of national identification card. But then people start to think, 'Oh, no, here comes Big Brother.'"

Clark agreed, saying, "it's bordering on a police state."

However, in the absence of some kind of identification system, "you'll have free-for-all discrimination," said Chavez.

"People who look like they might be Mexican nationals, people who look oriental — the employer's going to say 'I can't hire you — I don't want to get fined.'"

Even with a card, asking prospective employees to show their place of birth would "get kind of hairy," said Jack Letts, plant manager for Walls Industries, Inc. in Big Spring.

And, Letts added, "In the kind of work we're in, I just don't feel we could get all the people we need if the Spanish people weren't able to work here." Letts added that he was speaking of Mexican-Americans, not illegals.

MOST LOCAL businesses require a social security card, even though a fake one is fairly easy to obtain.

"We normally try to screen all the people who come to us for social security to make sure they're citizens," said Carl Blanchard, manager of Fiberglass Systems, Inc. in Big Spring.

"Of course," he said, "there are ways they can falsify that. But we don't knowingly hire any illegals."

"We do the best we can to make sure (workers are American citizens)," continued Blanchard. "They have to have social security, a birth certificate or naturalization papers. That should stand up in anybody's court."

"We require a social security card," said Letts. "We've even called down to the social security office a couple of times to verify numbers. We feel like once we've done that, we've done our part. How far do you have to go to be sure? Once you get all you can..."

"We never knowingly hire (illegal aliens)," Letts said, "But at times they get by us."

Stenholm's stance on the bills is a mixed one, Chavez said.

"We agree with the efforts to amend the Immigration Acts," Chavez said. "It's got to be done — the immigration program is a shambles. There are people coming into the country and getting jobs who legally can't. The act should be enforced — it's illegal for them to be in the country. We realize that that's going to create a real difficulty for the Texas farmers, but we feel there should be a guest worker program. They shouldn't be illegal."

Under a guest worker program, aliens who wish to work in the U.S. would be registered and issued some type of identification.

"We support the efforts to amend the act," said Chavez, but he added that Stenholm had differences on the "details" of how to amend the acts.

Past efforts to amend have not proved successful in stopping the flow of illegal aliens into the U.S., and many do not feel that Senate Bill 2222 and House Resolution 5872 will meet with any more success.

"A huge fine won't solve it," said the farmer-rancher. "They'll still come over. They've got a real poverty-stricken situation down there — their peso has really been devalued — and as long as they can find decent work at decent pay, they'll still come."

Hinckley notes birthday

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr. observed his 27th birthday Saturday in a prison cell, presumably at Fort Meade, Md.

Because of the tight security surrounding the man accused of attempting to assassinate President Reagan and shooting him and three others, no details were available on whether Hinckley's parents were permitted a birthday visit or whether there was any kind of observance for him.

"I'm sorry, we're not telling anybody where he is," said John Russell, Justice Department spokesman. Russell refused to say if any special arrangements had been made for Hinckley.

Hinckley's parents, who live in Evergreen, Colo., have been in Washington since his trial began on April 27 and have been in the courtroom every day since each of them testified in his defense.

Infant's body found

FOLSOM, Pa. (AP) — Workers replacing part of a roof on a home found a mummified body of an infant wrapped in a 44-year-old newspaper, police say.

Ridley Township police said Friday that neither the identity of the baby nor the cause of death had been determined. Lt. Richard Herron said the body was found May 13 in an attic crawl space, wrapped in a newspaper dated May 24, 1938.

Dr. Dimitri Contostavlos, the Delaware County medical examiner, said an autopsy showed the child could have been born prematurely or dead. He did not rule out the possibility that the infant had been killed.

The current owners bought the house in 1965 and are not involved in the case, Herron said. He said there had been a foreclosure on the house in 1936 and that it was not known if the house was occupied before it was sold in 1939.

Flags to fly Monday at V.A. hospital

Memorial Day services at the Veteran's Administration Hospital will feature keynote speaker Clayton Hicks, the V.A. chaplain, and a display of the Avenue of Flags, according to Chief of Voluntary Service Mrs. Lupe Dominguez.

The service will begin at 10 a.m. Monday by the main flag pole in front of the hospital and will last approximately 45 minutes, Mrs. Dominguez said.

The public is invited to attend the service and for refreshments will be served at 9 a.m. in the hospital's main lobby, Mrs. Dominguez said. Also, a display of posters done by students at the Immaculate Heart of Mary school may be viewed in the main lobby Monday, she added.

201 absentee votes cast

Absentee voting for the June 5 Democratic run-off election in the Howard County clerk's office had reached 201 votes cast by closing time Saturday, according to county clerk Margaret Ray.

Fifty-six votes were cast Saturday.

Thirty-four ballots have been mailed out and 28 of those have been returned, according to Mrs. Ray.

Tuesday will be the last day for absentee ballots to be cast, and the office will be closed Monday for Memorial Day.

Locally, voters will be deciding races between Bill Tane or Milton L. Kirby for county judge and Bob Cowley or Paul H. Allen for county commissioner, precinct two.

Statewide, voters will have two appeals court judge races, attorney general and land commissioner, run-offs to decide.

Two transferred to county jail

Miguel Munoz Franco of 309 Northeast 8th Street and Tony Vega of 1502A Virginia were transferred to county jail Saturday from the city jail, where they were charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon and possession of under two ounces of marijuana.

Bail was set at $1,500 for each man on each count by Peace Justice Bobby West, and by Saturday afternoon both men had made bail and were released.

David Norvelle of Fort Worth was transferred to Dallas by Howard County Sheriff's Deputies Saturday morning on a bench warrant from Dallas. Norvelle was under charges in Howard County of theft by check.

Child dies in Levelland explosion

LEVELLAND, Texas

(AP) — A gas explosion that roared through a home in this Panhandle city Saturday morning killed a child and injured 11 members of three families gathered for the Memorial Day weekend, officials said.

The force of the 9 a.m. blast hurled some of the victims — some severely burned — out of the blazing house and shook homes in a three block radius, said Assistant Fire Chief Jeff Scott.

"We were still in bed... We just heard a loud boom. At first I thought it was a bolt of lightning right outside the window, it was so loud. It blew glass all over us," said Baltazar Padilla, 24, who lives next door to the house that exploded.

"We ran outside and the saw the brick home completely blown all out. The walls were all down and people were laying outside," he said.

Authorities identified the dead child as Martin Zamora Jr., but an age was not immediately available. Hospital officials said three of the victims were in critical condition.

Scott said leaking natural gas ignited by an electrical spark may have touched off the blast.

"You've seen pictures of tornadoes, that's what it looked like. The house was literally torn apart and the back was in flames. I've been a fireman for four years and it's the worst thing I have ever seen," said firefighter Bill Ferris.

Dr. Dennis Stiffler, an extension meats specialist, added that the processor works at a breakeven point and takes what he can get on the market. "Since he has a perishable product, it's a 'sell it or smell it' proposition," Stiffler said.

Fat is the main culprit in the $18 to $40 carcasses a processing plant would buy, Stiffler said. "Producers work to reduce marbling — the fat without the muscle," he said. "Only 62 percent of the carcass is recovered by the plant; the rest is byproducts or drop — fats, hide and inedible items."

Clark, whose staff was busily cutting away on a hind-quarter of beef during the tour, sells mainly to restaurants and other institutions. He explained the difference between a butcher and a meat cutter as she showed his blast freezer: "A butcher works on the killing floor while a meat cutter only processes the beef."

THE FINAL link in the chain is, of course, the marketplace where the consumer purchases the finished steak, hamburger or roast. In this case, it is Safeway. Safeway manager Jack Robbins said the meat market used only 30 percent of a carcass, but that various cuts of meat were just broken down from larger cuts. "Many people think certain cuts come from the animal that way," he said.

Beef makes up 65 percent of the total volume of the meat market with T-bones, sirloins and briskets the most popular cuts, Robbins said. Safeway meats are purchased according to standards dictated by consumers, he said, with a minimum and maximum amount of fat on the meat. Enough to not detract from the meat but enough to add flavor to the taste, he added.

Economist Black pointed out that the rising retail costs of food in stores like Safeway result from the marketing margin increasing. The margin includes processing, marketing, transportation, packaging and retailing. A point many consumers miss is that buying convenience foods that are precooked, prepackaged and ready to eat increases the food cost, plus sending more money to the middleman, Black said.

The West Texas Media Beef Tour was organized by Dr. Allan McGinty.

There was no official confirmation, but British sources, who declined to be identified, said the marines probably would next try to seize the high ground

Edwards saw the men's car make a left turn through a red light in the 200 block of W. 1st Street, according to his report. When he stopped the car, he found a substance believed to be marijuana and a baseball bat cut down to club size, the report said. Edwards said he arrested Miguel Munoz Franco of 309 Northeast 8th Street and Tony Vega of 1502A Virginia.

At least 12 killed in Illinois twisters

MARION, Ill. (AP) — Up to a dozen people were killed Saturday and more than 100 were reported injured when tornadoes smashed through three southern Illinois counties, authorities said.

"So far there are 10 to 12 bodies in a temporary morgue set up in Marion High School," said Williamson County Deputy Sheriff Joanne Schmid.

She said there were reports of many injuries and extensive property damage in Marion, which has a population of 13,000. The city is the home of a federal prison, but there were no reports of damage there.

A spokeswoman in the emergency room of Marion Memorial Hospital said as many as 100 people were being treated.

"There are people all over the place," said the spokeswoman, who would not give her name. "We've got people being treated in every part of the hospital. There are loads, loads."

The tornado plowed a 1½-mile-long path through Marion, police said.

Police said numerous people were trapped in the rubble of homes and businesses. A spokesman at Carbondale Memorial Hospital said a helicopter with medical personnel had been sent to Marion to aid those who were trapped.

Witnesses said the twister struck Marion about 3:40 p.m. Police said a truck plaza near Interstate 57 was demolished, a racquetball court was flattened and a shopping center was heavily damaged. An apartment unit with more than 40 units was also demolished, police said. The twister knocked out power to most of the town, and authorities were trying to set up a generator at the Williamson County courthouse. State troopers said twisters also ripped through Cartersville and Crainville in Williamson County and Perry and Conant in neighboring Perry County.

Stolen children Nightmare plagues thousands of families

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

"It's a tragedy of our unique society that we have no effective mechanism of law enforcement to hunt, track or find missing children," David Armstrong, the district attorney in Louisville, Ky., said. He is head of the National Association of District Attorneys, which has joined the American Bar Association and other lawyers and child-advocacy groups in endorsing the proposed act.

"A child abduction is one of the most difficult cases you can take on," said private detective Craig Miller of St. Louis. "A child can just get lost in society, whereas an adult has left footprints in society."

Miller, who has handled several cases referred to him by Child Find, said rape often is a motive for abductions by strangers.

"You can disappear with a child very quickly," he said. "This is a large, large country. Where do you start looking?"

Child Find helped locate 110 missing children last year, Kristin Cole Brown, the group's information director, said. Nearly all were "snatches" by divorced parents who had lost legal custody.

Ms. Brown said figures compiled from a number of studies — there are no solid national statistics because police are not required to report missing children to federal authorities — show that about 150,000 children 17 and younger are abducted each year, and about 100,000 are parental custody snatches; she said. Of the 50,000 stranger abductions, 5,000 children are returned unharmed; 5,000 are found dead.

The remaining 40,000, like Ryan Burton, simply disappeared. Many are surely dead, their bodies never to be found. But just as surely, some are alive, perhaps enslaved for child pornography or prostitution or may be sold into an illegal adoption ring.

Or maybe, as the Burtons and other parents hope and pray, emotionally troubled but well-meaning and harmless people stole their children to have sons or daughters of their own, to care for and to raise as their own in healthy and loving homes.

"Obviously, that's every parent's hope," Ms. Brown said. "But the truth, as horrifying as it is, is that in most cases the children are probably dead."

When Helen and Clarence Burton pulled out their quiet, residential street in Breckenridge, Texas, one day last September, police were at their house. Someone had stolen their baby.

They rushed in. The babysitter was all right. Their 11-year-old son was all right. But Ryan, their cherub-cheeked, blonde 3-year-old daughter, was missing, stolen from her bed as she slept.

It was only the beginning of the Burtons' nightmare, one shared by parents of tens of thousands of children who disappear each year.

Many are teen-agers, ostensibly old enough to take care of themselves, who run away. Many are abducted by estranged parents who take the law — and their children — into their own hands after losing custody battles in court.

But many also are like Ryan Burton, too young to run away and too young to take care of herself. Obviously, someone abducted her. But nothing else is obvious. Who took her? Why? Where?

And, of course, the ultimate, nagging question: Is Ryan still alive?

"We haven't had a shred of evidence since she disappeared," Mrs. Burton, a bookkeeper at a nursing home, said. There was a report of a little girl who looked like Ryan with a man in a car in Oklahoma before Mother's Day this spring, she said, but nothing came of it.

"Over time, you learn not to get too excited," Mrs. Burton said of that disappointment. "You never want to lose hope, but I don't want to let myself get too excited, either."

Mrs. Burton and her husband, Clarence, a driller in the oilfields, are among dozens of parents of stolen children who have translated their emotional strain and frustration and feelings of rage and impotence, into political action.

At their urging, Congress declared last Tuesday the first National Missing Children Day, to bring public attention to Ryan Burton and her parents, and to gather public support for new programs and law enforcement procedures to reunite them if Ryan is alive or to find and identify her body if not.

One new private program, Child Find of New Paltz, N.Y., distributes directories — including pictures and descriptions of 475 missing children — to schools, hospitals, day care centers and libraries across the country. It also places public service announcements about missing children on radio and TV, refers parents to private investigators and provides lesson plans for teachers to teach children what to do when someone tries to abduct them.

The Missing Children Act pending in Congress would require police officers to report missing children to the federal government for listing on the national crime information computer.

Other proposals would require the government to send descriptions of all missing children to schools and would allow parents access to the computer printouts so they can try to find their kids themselves.

Boy putting his hope on surgery

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Brian Maxey traveled 3,000 miles from Dallas to undergo his 14th operation, hoping this is the one that will allow him to walk like other boys.

"I can't walk good now," the 11-year-old said through sign language. "But next year when I'm 12, I'll be running."

Brian, who has cerebral palsy and is deaf and legally blind, was "doing fine" Saturday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Doctors at Blodgett Memorial Medical Center spent 2½ hours Friday making incisions in the boy's legs, lengthening tendons and muscles at his hips, knees and right ankle to let his joints straighten.

"I expect it to be a success," said Dr. Brian Hotchkiss, the Grand Rapids pediatric orthopedic surgeon who performed the surgery.

The boy's parents hope that after surgery and several weeks in a hip-to-ankle cast, their son will be able to walk flat on his feet instead of on his toes. The ball of his right foot, where most of his weight is balanced, is covered with blisters, Mrs. Maxey said Saturday.

His mother said she contracted rubella, or German measles, when she was six weeks pregnant and attributed Brian's handicaps, which also include a congenital heart condition, to her illness.

Brian is speech-impaired because he is deaf and communicates with sign language.

Legislature funds prisons, colleges

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Legislators anxious to get out of town before the holiday weekend patted themselves on the back for leaving $4 million in the state kitty after doling out $151.5 million for college buildings and $55.5 million for prisons.

Gov. Bill Clements called the special session, which started last Monday and wound up Friday night, to repeal the state property tax — which legislators quickly did — and give colleges "catch-up" construction money.

But the agenda was expanded to include emergency funding for overcrowded prisons and miscellaneous constitutional amendments.

The two big-money items see-sawed between the House and Senate all day Friday, with senators in general agreement on both college and prison funding.

But the House approved the money only after rejecting a challenge against giving colleges money they could wait for the January regular session to give them, while short-changing a prison system bulging at the seams with too many inmates right now.

Prisons and colleges were vying for the $194 million the state has on hand. Legislators stayed under the spending limit because the $151.5 million includes $17 million already appropriated, and with the $55.5 million adds up to about $190 million out of the state's pocket.

The state property tax that legislators repealed early in the session had funded construction at 17 colleges that don't share in the Permanent University Fund.

The PUF comes from revenues from public lands and funds construction at most University of Texas and Texas A&M system colleges.

The property tax was still on the books as part of the state Constitution, but it had not been collected since 1979 when the Legislature reduced it drastically to effectively kill it.

But, Midwestern State University sued the state, arguing the legislative move did not legally do away with the constitutional tax.

300 workers laid off at Texas Instruments

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc. has laid off about 300 employees — including 250 from Texas — in the latest of a series of worker cutbacks, company officials say.

Some of the employees were dismissed and given severance pay, but most were "furloughed" for up to six months and will continue to receive a portion of their normal salaries as well as some company benefits, officials said.

About 125 workers from Dallas and 125 in Houston were affected by the latest cutbacks.

Company spokesman Norman Neureiter said he "couldn't comment on the prospects" of the furloughed employees being recalled to work.

The Dallas-based company has had several personnel reductions in recent months, and the latest cutbacks bring the number of employees dismissed or furloughed in the past year to almost 7,000.

The latest round of layoffs, announced by company officials Friday, were in the semiconductor division where profits have lagged because of a worldwide glut of the tiny electronic circuits.

Most of the TI cutbacks in the last year have been in the semiconductor division.

Neureiter said the furloughs and dismissals were "primarily directed at reducing overhead expenses in the semiconductor area."

WHAT THE BANKER NEEDS

All commercial loan requests have certain basic requirements.

Your banker needs to have:

- 1 — A written request for a specific amount of money.
- 2 — a detailed explanation of the use of the funds.
- 3 — a projection of how and when you will repay the loan.
- 4 — A list of the collateral you are offering as security for the loan.

In addition to these essentials, the banker will want to know what will happen in the event of your disability or death: do you carry disability, life and general liability insurance?

The banker also wants to know:

- 1 — The financial history of your company in the form of company balance sheets and profit and loss statements for at least the past three years.
- 2 — A realistic projection of profits and a twelve month (month by month) cash flow projection. This spread sheet should show the specific month that cash will be received from various sources and the month that specific disbursements need to be made.
- 3 — Your personal business experience in narrative form.
- 4 — The company "game plan" telling where the company will be several years hence in terms of size, types of products or services, number of employees, locations, etc. to give the banker some insight into your long-range planning.

Put yourself in the banker's shoes and see what questions you'd want answered if someone asked you to risk your capital.

If you have not previously assembled a loan request in this manner, engage professional assistance.

Editorial

Why can't we remain neutral?

Was it really necessary for the United States to jump in and declare itself in support of the British in that obscure war in the South Atlantic?

Could not the U.S. have remained a neutral observer, without having to rally to one side or the other?

By picking sides, the United States has lost its value as a mediator. If we had remained neutral, we would have had more clout in pressuring Argentina and Britain into settling the dispute.

HAVING TILTED toward the British, the U.S. has made arrangements to supply the British with ammunition, spare parts and anything else they need. So far Britain has only requested fuel. British ships have enough supplies for a 90-day siege. But if the conflict is not over within 90 days, the British will have to rely increasingly on U.S. support — support that has already been pledged.

After supplying Britain with fuel, and with things like pictures from U.S. spy satellites, how long will it be before we send troops, pilots or advisers into the battle area? How long before the U.S.S.R. sends troops to Argentina? How long before the British warships use their nuclear weapons? How long before another world war?

WAR IS AN ODDIOUS thing, and not something we should rush headlong to get embroiled in, especially when it's not even our dispute. A dispute over some silly barren islands at that.

But having committed ourselves to one side, it's too late to remain neutral now. All we can do is hope that the conflict is settled quickly, and that we will learn by this experience not to jump the gun in the future.

Organ recital

Say "organ" out loud. Now, what is the first thing that comes to mind?

I used to react that way, too. The word once conjured pleasant visions of a wooden instrument that sits in the living room and makes noises when the keys are pressed down.

But that's all changed now. Last week I was bombarded from all sides with books, articles and newscasts — I even wrote an article myself — on the need for organ transplants.

You know the kind of organs I'm talking about. The ones that make your body function and generally make life pleasant. Hearts, kidneys, eyes, beaks.

BEAKS?

Yes, beaks. The Associated Press carried a story Thursday about a six-year-old goose in California that received a transplanted beak from a goose that died.

Frankly, I'm beginning to get a little paranoid.

It started two weeks ago. My sister, worried about how I would fare in the big city of Big Spring, thrust a copy of the thriller novel "Coma" in my hands.

"Here," she said. "Maybe this will keep you occupied and out of trouble, for a while anyway."

"Coma" is not the most appropriate type book to give your little sister on the eve of her entrance into the big, bad world of Living On Your Own.

It concerns another fledgling, the beautiful Dr. Susan Wheeler, who discovers a black market organ conspiracy in the respected Memorial Hospital.

Stumbling over pasty white cadavers and chased by would-be assassins, Susan loses trust in everyone, except the revered Chief of Surgery, who, of course, is the mastermind of the plot.

The book is not one that normally would keep me up nights, but the implications are just probable enough to make it spine-tingling.

Newspapers regularly carry advertisements of people willing to "sell any portion of body for financial remuneration." There are precedents for the market economy in medicine. Blood — considered as an organ — is routinely bought and sold.

The author of the book also wrote of "Holiday Syndrome," where a kidney dialysis patient's spirits rise as they anticipate the holiday rush of auto accidents and the victims who may supply the desperately needed organs.

The next morning, after reading the book, the radio announcer greeted me with news of a rising need for organ donors.

That afternoon, Paul Harvey demanded that I sacrifice my dead body to the surgeon's knife for the public welfare.

The next day a mortician described in detail the how-to's of plucking eyes out of corpses to be used for cornea transplants.

I UNDERSTAND the need. I'm just a little concerned that someone is not going to wait for me to kick off naturally. There was a guy in Maryland who advertised his supply of hearts from still-living people.

At night I have dreams that should be made into movie scripts. They could be called "Attack of the Giant Gall Bladder" or "The Curse of the Spine Snatcher."

My neck has a permanent crick from constantly turning to look for crazed cadaver cutters, knives poised for that valuable liver. I would visit a chiropractor, but I choked at the thought of him breaking my delicate neck and distributing organs to patients in the waiting room.

The solution, of course, is within the grasp of medical technology. Approximately seven percent of all cadaver kidneys are suitable for transplants if they are taken from the donor body within an hour of death. The figure is much higher for corneas.

Instead of being put to use, the organs are regularly buried eight feet deep or dehydrated in a crematorium.

Maybe, like the goose in California, the feathered citizens of our land will have better judgment. After last week's successful transplants, and if they don't fowl up, beak donors may just start flocking in.

Editor's Column

Why some letters aren't printed

There is nothing I like better than to get letters to the editor. But there are many I can't print for the following reasons:

(1) I can't verify that the signature at the bottom of the letter is an actual person. For example, I received one letter a couple of weeks ago from a writer who said he actually enjoyed TV better now that WFAA was off the air. The name was unusual, so I looked it up in the phone book. Not listed. I looked it up in the city directory. Not there. I looked in nearby area phone books. Not there. I had no proof that this person existed, and there was the possibility the letter might be a fake. So I didn't run it.

I learned a long time ago to look for suspicious signatures on letters to the editor. Once when I worked at the Abilene paper, we ran a letter from a woman complaining about the woefully inadequate restrooms at the public park. The letter was signed "INETA JOHN."

We didn't catch the fake signature until the press had already started rolling, so we had to stop the press and kill the letter. That's one of the rare occasions when I have actually run into the press room and hollered, "Stop the press!"

(2) Some letters can't be run because they are too long. I have three letters on my desk right now about the "born again" controversy that are just too long to print. One is a five-page, single-spaced handwritten letter. The other two are each two pages long, single-spaced typewritten. These letters are sitting on my desk, waiting for me to prune them down to an acceptable length without destroying the essence of the person's thoughts. This is a tedious process and delays publication of the letter, sometimes indefinitely.

The shorter the letter the better. The longest a letter should be is about 300 words, although there are exceptions to every rule.

(3) Some letters are personal attacks on individuals, calling so-and-so a snotty-nosed scoundrel who beats his wife and ought to be horse-whipped and tarred and feathered before being run out of town. Obviously we can't print a letter which might not be true and which might cause us to be sued for libel by the person being attacked. We have to stick with facts, and with opinions on issues. But of course, letter writers can attack political candidates and other public figures all they want to (within reason). Those people fall in to a different category.

(4) Some letters can't be printed simply because I can't read the handwriting.

So if your letter hasn't been printed lately, now you know why. But please, keep those cards and letters coming in, and don't forget to include your address.

A little something to live on

If Congress is looking for new constitutional amendments, I wish they would push for one which would allow a member of the House of Representatives to serve for four years instead of two. One of the biggest financial drains on the country is the money spent on the two-year congressional elections.

You think you have just helped someone get elected when they are back again making a pitch for funds.

"I need your help," said Congressman Diablo to a party.

"I already gave you a check a few months ago," I told him.

"That was for my last election. I'm talking about the one coming up. I've got a very tough race."

"You told me that the last time."

"It's even tougher this year. I have 14 percent unemployment in my district and my opponent is trying to make an issue of it."

"Wouldn't it be cheaper to tell him if he doesn't knock it off you'll hit him in the mouth?"

"It's not a he, it's a she. It's harder to beat a she than a he because they don't fight fair. That's why I need more money."

"I cannot keep financing your election every two years," I told him. "Why don't you raise the money in your own district?"

"No congressman these days can raise money in his own district. He has to raise it in places where they don't know him."

"Why don't you get it from lobbyists who are interested in special legislation?"

"I've already tapped them. I've sold my soul to big business, the environmentalists, the moral majority and the labor union political action committees. Now I'm hitting up my friends who know where I really stand."

"I'd like to help you, Diablo, but you can't seem to hold a job."

"It's not my fault," he said. "The way the Constitution is written there just isn't any security in being a congressman. As soon as you get elected, you have to start raising money for your next campaign. And no matter how you vote, you immediately wind up on somebody's hit list."

"I thought your party had funds to disburse for congressional contests."

"They won't give you any for the primaries. They only throw a few bones your way for the election."

"You mean to say the money you're asking for now is for the primaries? That means you'll be coming back to me again for the election."

"Well, you wouldn't just give me money for the primaries and leave me adrift for the election, would you? Look, if I become the candidate, my friends have promised to give me a $500-a-plate dinner, and I'll fix it so you can meet Tip O'Neill, and have your picture taken with him."

"You promised me the last time if I came to your fund-raiser, my wife could touch Paul Newman. He never showed up."

"She got to touch Robert Strauss."

"My wife doesn't consider touching Strauss the same as touching Paul Newman."

"People don't come to a $500-fund-raiser to touch Paul Newman. They come because they believe in the candidate who will do the best job for the country. The only thing that is going to preserve the American political system is money — lots of money. The more money I can raise, the better congressman I can be. How can I serve the people if I can't buy TV time to tell everyone what a lying stumblebum my opponent really is?"

"What happens if you lose in the primaries?"

"I'm setting aside half of the primary funds to have something to live on until I get a job."

Easing doubts

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I thought I had really repented of my sins and accepted Christ, but now I find I still have problems with sin in my life. Do you think possibly I am not saved after all? — S.S.

DEAR S.S.: If you have, to the best of your knowledge and ability, given your life to Christ and asked him by faith to come into your life, then he has made you his child and you are saved. You can trust by faith the promise of God in his Word: "Everyone who believes that Jesus Christ is born of God... God has given us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He who has the Son has life; he who does not have the Son of God does not have life" (1 John 5:11, 11-12).

What you are experiencing is not uncommon to young believers. What you are discovering is that there is still sin within you, and you still yield to the temptations around you. Does that mean you are not saved? No. God has promised that you are already his child if you have accepted Christ, and God cannot go back on his Word. The problem is that at one time you were dominated by self, and by the power of sin in your life. The old self is still there, but now God the Holy Spirit has come to dwell within you as well. There is now a battle going on in your life between the power of God and the power of sin. This is a lifelong battle. Satan will try to tempt you and keep you defeated.

But God has given you his Spirit so you do not need to follow your old, sinful nature any longer. That does not mean the Christian life is easy, but you need to know that God has given you weapons to fight the Christian life and defeat sin and temptation.

I urge you to get your Bible and read carefully Ephesians 6:10-18, which tells us about the spiritual armor God has provided for us. As we learn to trust God every day, turn to him for the strength we need, and follow the teachings of his Word, we will find sin no longer will have its sway over us.

Becoming a Christian is a definite, single step. Being a Christian is a walk — step by step each day. Learn to commit each day and each decision to God, and he will keep you close to him.

my positions on methods of funding our educational system. Mauro has assured me that as a member of the State's T.E.N.R.A.C. Commission he will actively promote sources of alternate energy.

These are the reasons why I have decided to support Garry Mauro for Land Commissioner. I am genuinely afraid that if Snelson were elected Land Commissioner he would use his influence to give the states hard minerals to his friends. We can't let that happen to the educational system of Texas.

A response to a conservative

Dear Editor,

I would like to make a few remarks in answer to the letter by Mr. Gilstrap in the Monday, May 24th issue of your paper. First I would like to remind him that the last balanced budget we had was handed to Richard Nixon by that most liberal of all liberals, Lyndon Johnson, and this is at a time when he had a half million men in Vietnam and was supplying a million-man army of Vietnamese soldiers.

Now as to Mr. Carter. He did spend a lot of money but much less than his successor, Mr. Reagan has spent. I would agree that both the Departments of Energy and Education were mistakes, but these were not the things that defeated him.

Mr. Carter's downfall was caused by two things that were approved by almost every Conservative in the country. He invited the Shah of Iran into the country and he appointed John Volker as Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. The first caused our people to be taken hostage in Iran, and John Volker instituted his tight money policy, thus bringing on a recession from which we still have not recovered.

Now about food stamps and aid to families with dependent children. These are the programs that seem to bother the conservatives most. The total cost of these programs is 18 billion dollars. The total budget is presently projected to be 783 billion dollars, so Food Stamps and A.F.D. would be only 2.3-10 percent of our total budget. If we begrudge that to our poor people, maybe we should take another look at ourselves.

I suppose Mr. Gilstrap is a business man and as such he is a member of a group that is a little hard to understand. They wax fat under Democratic administrations and go broke under Republicans, but they still cuss the Democrats all the way to the bank and praise the Republicans all the way to the bankruptcy courts.

Kubiak gives Mauro support

Dear Editor,

The May 1st primary is over and the dust has settled. As you know, I ran for the office of Texas Land Commissioner. It was a close race, too close to call for several days, with Kubiak, Snelson and Mauro running neck and neck. But when all the votes were in I came out in 3rd place by one percent.

I announced for the office late and campaigned for only 90 days and spent $100,000. Both Garry Mauro and Pete Snelson spent 1/2 million each. I am very proud of what my campaign accomplished in such a short time with so little money. We had a lot of help from a lot of people. In our next state-wide campaign we will start early and we will win.

On May 4th it became clear that I would be 10,000 votes short of getting in the runoff. So I began to examine the other candidates to see if I should make an endorsement. I was quickly convinced that I could not feel comfortable with Snelson because of his position on hard minerals now owned by the state.

Last year Snelson sponsored and pushed for the passage of a bill, SB 1197 that if passed would give away 7 million acres of state minerals to 100 already wealthy land owners, a giveaway of $1 billion. The minerals from state lands funds our schools and universities and if Snelson had been successful it would have caused havoc in our educational system in future years. Because of this system, we don't have a state income tax in Texas. If we give away state owned mineral rights, a state income tax is unavoidable. In addition, the cost of sending our children to college will increase significantly.

Did you know that Pete Snelson introduced legislation during the last session that would double college tuition? He even voted against my gasohol legislation. On the other hand Garry Mauro shares my opposition to giving away hard minerals and shares

Local races are key in land office fight

By GINA SPADA

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — In a campaign swing through South Texas, land commissioner candidate Sen. M.E. "Pete" Snelson chatted with two supporters in Victoria.

The middle of the conversation he asked, "Do y'all have any local runoff?"

The supporters said no, Snelson responded with a disappointed sounding "Oh."

In the land commissioner's Democratic runoff race, local races have become as important to the candidates as their own.

In the absence of a governor's race runoff, Democratic voter turnout on June 5 is expected to be even lower than it was for the May 1 primary. With this in mind, Snelson and his opponent, Austin attorney Garry Nauro, are placing a heavy emphasis on campaigning in areas where local races will help bring out the voters.

"My major thrust in the campaign will be to go to where the voters are going to vote in local runoffs," Nauro said. "A lot of runoffs are happening in South Texas, where I did well, so we'll be spending more time where there are runoffs."

Snelson targeted visits in areas with local runoffs in his six-day, 30-city campaign swing in the week before the special legislative session began, May 24.

"There's simply not enough time in a runoff situation where you only have about four weeks to take care of the entire state," the Midland senator said. "So if there are local runoffs, that's an area you become interested in as opposed to areas with no runoffs."

SNELSON WAS particularly pressed for time, since he had to return to Austin for the special session, where he sponsored legislation proposing to repeal the state property tax.

The land commissioner's race began in May 1981 when Mauro announced his candidacy. He was joined by five others, but only three of them appeared on the ballot — Snelson, Rockdale state Rep. Dan Kubiak and Paducah rancher George Fore.

When the votes were counted, only the two remained, with Snelson holding a 4,000 vote lead over Mauro. Neither expected the race to be that close.

"Based on our polls and projections, we thought we would be in first place," Snelson said. "It'd say the factor in the primary was the number of votes received by George Fore."

Ford, an unknown who ran a low-budget campaign, received 12 percent of the vote. "It's hard for polls to have that calculation," Snelson said.

The winner of the runoff will meet Republican candidate, former Hondo mayor Glasscock, in the November general election for the $61,000-a-year job being vacated by Bob Armstrong, who ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

The land commission has the responsibility of administering the state's 22.5 million acres of public lands overseeing the Veterans Land Program and chairing the Board for Lease of University Lands.

Mauro, 34, coordinated Bob Krueger's successful congressional campaign in an unsuccessful U.S. Senate campaign in 1978, and was administrator for Krueger's congressional office.

He also served as deputy comptroller for tax administration and as executive director of the Texas Democratic Party.

He said his administrative experience makes him right for the job. However, he hasn't talked much about the administration of the office because, "it's pretty dry stuff."

"Dan Kubiak used to say it best," Mauro said, "anybody that's competent can probably handle that part of the job, but what you want is somebody that will provide leadership and innovative ideas in other areas." One of his ideas is to change the Veterans Land Program. Under the program, a qualified veteran can borrow the money for a down payment on a house.

He also would like some of the money earned by the state lands that presently goes into the general revenue fund set aside for colleges and universities outside of the Permanent University Fund.

These schools had received their construction funds from the state property tax, but the 1979 Legislature lowered the assessment ratio for the tax, making it virtually uncollectible.

BECAUSE INITIATING such new ideas requires legislative approval, Snelson believes his experience as a legislator qualifies him to be land commissioner. He has served on and off in the Legislature since 1980, and steadily since 1968 when he won the Senate seat he lost in 1966.

During his tenure, Snelson, 58, has served as a member of the Senate Finance Committee, the Legislative Budget Board and as chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

"Since most of my legislative involvement has been in the field of education," he said, "it was natural for me to look very closely to the Texas Land Commissioner's office for the simple reason that its purpose of existence is to manage the public lands in behalf of public education."

As land commissioner, one idea Snelson would propose is that the Legislature permit the Permanent School Fund to be used by school district as a base for school bonds.

This, he said, would allow the bonds to qualify for low-interest rates.

"It's virtually a risk-free plan which will not cost the state nor the Permanent School Fund one penny," he said.

Snelson is also for creating a dedicated fund to provide construction money for most state universities.

In the special session, he sponsored Senate Resolution 1, which calls for the abolishing the property tax.

William Garland

Will budget crash?

WASHINGTON — Rep. Phil Gramm, D-College Station, likened the grinding House budget process last week to a "jenny."

That's a World War I flying machine, for those unfamiliar with the military intricacies of aviation history.

"My daddy used to fly a jenny after World War I," said Gramm, who could afford during the middle of the week to be optimistic about chances for passage of the Republican budget plan, which he helped draft and supported wholeheartedly.

What may be known as the House "Midnight Massacre" on the budget had not yet occurred. All three major budget proposals, including the Republican and Democratic versions, had not yet failed late Thursday in what seemed a particularly inglorious fashion by contrast to the rousing budget victories for Reagan last year.

At midweek, it still was unclear that after all the debate, rhetoric and give and take, the budget would go back to the bargaining table in the House Budget Committee.

And Gramm said he felt like his father in the jenny. "You used one hand to fly the plane and the other hand to hold it together. And that's exactly where we are on the budget," he said Wednesday.

FOR GRAMM, however, and other conservative Democratic "Boll Weevils" who supported the Republican plan and who tried to hold together the coalition that gave Reagan a victory with their help last year, the jenny sort of crashed.

It became impossible even to hold in line all the Boll Weevils, 26 of whom would go against the Republican proposal, even though all eight Texas Boll Weevils except for Rep. Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, stuck together.

Hance stayed with his announced intention of voting for none of the budgets because of their high deficits, a problem cited by many congressmen.

The weapons that would bring them down, Gramm was predicting by late Thursday afternoon, would be the seemingly incessant fire from amendments that would damage the Republican budget and make it unacceptable to conservatives.

He singled out an amendment attached to both the Democratic and Republican versions that restored Medicare benefits to their current levels. The Republican version would have held Medicare increases to 11 percent rather than the current 20 percent per year.

Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, head of the formal Boll Weevil coalition, agreed: "When the Republicans sailed out on us on the Medicare issue, it was pretty cut and dried that it (the Republican budget) wasn't going to pass," he said.

THE MEDICARE amendment went through on a 227-103 vote, but Gramm noted that only nine Boll Weevils, the 47 members of the Conservative Democratic Forum, voted to replace the current benefits and raise spending.

And he noted that the conservative Republican budget got more votes than any other (there were seven all together), and that an even more conservative budget, calling for no deficit at all by next year, came in second.

'We're not going to fool Wall Street, Main Street or Mulberry Street by passing a bad budget.'

After the crash late Thursday, Gramm was wearily surveying the budgetary wreckage Friday morning.

He had already met with other conservatives and put together some ideas while the votes and the rhetoric were still fresh memories and predicted that the votes would be found only with some more conservative adjustments on spending and the deficit.

"We're not going to fool Wall Street, Main Street or Mulberry Street by passing a bad budget," he said.

He would not predict whether that would mean going again against the Democratic House Budget Committee with an alternative on the House floor. But Stenholm on Friday appeared convinced that the Democratic leadership had learned its lesson and that it would put together after Memorial Day a budget the House could approve.

"We now go back to the drawing board to come up with a budget that we can in fact pass," he said.

Clements critical of alien roundup

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mexican officials rightfully were upset by the U.S. government's recent roundup of illegal aliens, says Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

"The intelligence I get from Mexico ... the federal and state officials didn't like Project Jobs one bit. And I don't blame them. It was totally ill-advised," Clements said at a news conference Friday.

The news conference was preceded by a speech to the American Immigration Lawyers Association in which Clements said the nationwide raid "was not beneficial at all and does not demonstrate a willingness to work with the Mexican government to solve our mutual immigration problems."

The Immigration and Naturalization Service arrested thousands of Mexicans for deportation earlier this month in an effort to free jobs for American workers.

Clements predicted the state's "ranching and agricultural economy will come apart at the seams if we are denied this source of labor."

"Undocumented workers from Mexico make a significant contribution to the Texas and U.S. economy, but they don't take a significant number of jobs away from Americans," Clements said. "They take jobs that go unfilled through lack of interest by American workers."

PLANE CRASH KILLS FIVE — A twin-engine Beechcraft is shown after it crashed into a house in a residential section of Columbia, Md. Friday morning. The crash killed the pilot and the four passengers aboard. The airplane was attempting to land at Baltimore-Washington International Airport when it crashed. The cause of the tragedy is being investigated.

Goose loses transplanted beak

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Beep, the 6-year-old pet goose who received a beak transplant last week, has lost the new beak after doctors found the tissue had died from lack of blood.

Dr. Susan Mary Klages molded the beak from a dead goose onto Beep and the glue bond held successfully. But on Thursday night Ms. Klages noticed the tissue of the new beak had degenerated and no blood was circulating, she said Friday.

Ms. Klages said Beep will be force-fed while the goose regains strength. An attempt probably will be made next week to mold a synthetic beak onto the goose, Ms. Klages said.

Beep, the pet of Larry Day, administrator of the Grand Avenue Pet Hospital, lost its beak up to the nostrils, apparently when it was bitten off by a coyote or neighborhood dog.

Doctors originally had decided to mold a new acrylic beak onto Beep, but, just before the operation was to begin last Tuesday, a client brought to the hospital another goose that was dying from a paralyzing neurological disease.

Day said he remained optimistic.

"It breaks our heart because she was eating and drinking and for a while everything was wonderful," he said. "But Dr. Klages assures me that there is not a great chance of losing Beep as long as we can get her in good shape again."

California primary is full of stars

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — It is vintage California politics, a primary including a Reagan (Maureen), a Goldwater (Jr.), and a Nixon (this niece). As if that wasn't enough, a Fonda (Jane) is cast in a supporting role.

Consider what voters will decide when they go to the polls June 8:

A GOP Senate primary in which the leading candidates include the president's daughter, the son of the elder statesman of the conservative movement, a congressional maverick and a mayor.

A Democratic senatorial primary which analysts will watch for signs of whether two-term Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. is recovering from a political slide that has left him running behind three likely GOP challengers in opinion polls.

dragon Tom Metzger, among others.

— A Democratic gubernatorial primary in which Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles is heavily favored to move within a step of becoming the first black elected governor of a state.

— The close battle for the GOP nomination for governor pits the state attorney general, George Deukmejian, against Mike Curb, the lieutenant governor, who as a recording executive produced some of the biggest hits of Sammy Davis Jr. and Donny and Marie Osmond.

It's the GOP Senate primary that offers the longest list of famous names. Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. is the frontrunner, hoping to join his father, the Arizona senator and 1964 GOP nominee for president, to create the first father-son team in the Senate since 1855.

San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson trailed Goldwater by just 1 percentage point in Mervin Field's latest poll, with Rep. Pete McCloskey third another 7 points back and President Reagan's daughter, actress-businesswoman Maureen Reagan, in fourth.

Other candidates include Nobel Prize-winning physicist William Shockley, who is running to promote his theory of the genetic superiority of whites over blacks.

Leaders in the field of 18 GOP candidates in the 43rd state senate district of San Diego and Orange counties include former President Richard Nixon's niece, Lawrence Nixon Anfinson.

Tapping the Hollywood connections of his wife, actress Jane Fonda, Tom Hayden has a big lead in fundraising and is rated the favorite for the Democratic nomination for the 44th district Senate seat.

Defense materials seized on way to Soviet bloc

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has seized from American companies more than $23 million in defense-related strategic materials and technology, much of it bound for Soviet bloc countries, the Customs Service said Saturday.

Customs Commissioner William Von Paab said more than 350 shipments of aircraft parts, communications equipment, laser systems, computers, military equipment, semiconductors and electronic navigation systems have been seized under a program code-named "Operation Exodus."

The operation began six months ago after the Reagan administration began reevaluating U.S. trade policies in the wake of intelligence information indicating that the Soviet Union has used Western technology to upgrade its military.

Special teams of customs inspectors, FBI agents, intelligence officials and Border Patrol officers were set up at air and seaports to review documents and search outgoing shipments.

The first prosecution resulting from the operation came in February when a grand jury in Massachusetts returned a 30-count indictment charging a British citizen, Brian A. Molter-Butchers, and Paul C. Carlson of Bridgewater, Mass., with falsifying customs documents.

Autos recalled

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has announced the recall of more than 141,800 cars because of fire hazards, while Chrysler Corp. says it is recalling 4,000 cars and trucks for a defective suspension bolt.

The approximately 125,000 1982 Ford Escorts and EXPs and Mercury Lynx and LN7s with factory-installed air conditioning can catch fire if the air conditioner blower is on medium-low and the blower motor jams, Ford said Friday.

Spring planting—doing it again

TOKEN TEDDY BEAR—Astronaut Kathy Sullivan studies the teddy bear she will present to Thomas Mattingly II and Henry Hartsfield, pilots of the fourth shuttle flight. Mrs. Sullivan says she hopes the astronauts will have a trouble-free launch and will be able to take it easy. She is not on the shuttle schedule yet, but will be on one of the future missions. The Columbia, on launch pad 39-A, can be seen behind her.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas farmers are continuing to plant spring crops, and in many cases they are having to do the job again due to weather losses.

Hail the past week destroyed some young cotton in the Panhandle and South Plains as well as wheat. Cotton in parts of North Central and Northeast Texas was lost due to heavy rains and flooding, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Heavy rains and some hail in the Rolling Plains damaged some wheat, and the continued wet weather is starting to cause some lodging problems. Leaf rust remained a major problem in many areas, particularly Central Texas.

Wheat harvesting is active in southern and central areas as weather conditions permit. Early yields are varying widely, with prospects greatly improved in some western areas due to recent rains, noted Pfannstiel.

Rains have delayed cotton planting in the South Plains as well as in the grolling Plains and West Central Texas where farmers had planned to plant the past week as part of a coordinated effort to control boll weevils.

Farmers have started planting peanuts in central and eastern areas, and planting is in full swing in Southwest Texas, noted Pfannstiel.

Hay making is under way in eastern, coastal and southern areas as weather conditions permit. Grass growth has been good due to recent rains, so hay volume should be good. First cuttings of alfalfa have produced good yields in western areas.

Early peaches are being harvested in southern, central and eastern areas, with growers getting good prices. The crop ranges from light to heavy over the state, said Pfannstiel.

This year's pecan crop appears to be light, with many growers now spraying to control pecan nut casebearers.

Pasture and range conditions continued to improve with good moisture conditions, and livestock are in good shape over the state, said Pfannstiel.

Reports from district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Much of the young cotton crop was destroyed by heavy rains and hail and will have to be replanted. Grain sorghum is being planted where field conditions permit. Irrigated wheat continues to look good along with corn, sugar beets and vegetables. The first cutting of alfalfa is about ready.

SOUTH PLAINS: A sizeable acreage of young cotton was destroyed by hail and will be replanted as soon as weather conditions permit. Wet fields are delaying both cotton and grain sorghum planting. Corn, vegetables and sugar beets continue to make good growth. Wheat looks good and ranges are improving rapidly.

ROLLING PLAINS: Flooding and some hail have damaged wheat, and some lodging (stalks falling over) has started due to extensive rains. Wheat harvesting will start soon, prospects are excellent. Cotton planting will start as soon as fields dry. Grazing conditions are good; grasshoppers are building up in some locations.

NORTH CENTRAL: Wheat and oats are maturing, with rust damage widespread. Some cotton will have to be replanted due to damage from heavy rains. Most corn and grain sorghum look good. The peach crop looks excellent, and peanuts will be planted soon. Pastures are providing good grazing for livestock.

Subsidies to cotton farmers may increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government subsidies paid to cotton farmers will rise sharply — perhaps to more than $800 million — if demand and market prices do not improve dramatically in the near future, according to new figures by the Agriculture Department.

Called "deficiency payments," the subsidies make up the difference between a weighted average farm price of cotton — or the government's loan rate, whichever is higher — and a target price set by law.

As with grain farmers, cotton producers are being required this year to reduce acreages in order to qualify for federal price supports and related benefits, which include the deficiency payments.

Even so, the department's Economic Research Service said Thursday that 1982 cotton production could be about 12.5 million bales, give or take 1.5 million. That would compare with 15.6 million bales in 1981, which was the biggest crop since 1953.

The target price last year was 70.87 cents a pound, but the average weighted market price was 63.2 cents, meaning that cotton producers got a deficiency payment of 7.67 cents a pound for their 1981 crop, a total of about $480 million.

For 1982, the target price is 71 cents a pound, just slightly more than last year.

During the first four months of this year, the report said, the farm price of cotton averaged about 50 cents a pound.

Economists: Interest rates must fall

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Signs pointing to an economic recovery continued to surface this past week, but economists warned that until interest rates retreat any rebound from recession will run out of gas.

The Commerce Department said its index of leading indicators, a barometer of future economic activity, rose 0.8 percent in April, its first increase in a year.

U.S. automakers reported a daily sales rate of 23,909 in mid-May, the highest for the period in three years. Auto sales have now increased for two straight 10-day reporting periods, the first back-to-back gains since last summer.

Jay N. Woodworth, an economist at Bankers Trust Co., said the leading indicators provided confirmation "that the recession is virtually over."

Economist Maury Harris at Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis Inc. said additional stimulus to the economy will come in July, when a 10 percent cut in federal income taxes takes effect and when Social Security payments will be increased 7.4 percent to reflect cost-of-living adjustments.

But neither Woodworth nor Harris held out hopes for a sharp economic rebound.

And a University of Michigan poll of about 400 private economists said that while a recovery from recession is expected this summer, economic growth would trail the pace of previous rebounds and unemployment would remain high through at least the end of 1983.

Woodworth warned of "a tentative, fragile economic recovery" because "hemorrhaging continues to take place in corporate profits." And Harris said the recovery will level off "unless we get interest rates down."

On Tuesday, Citibank, the nation's second largest bank, cut its prime lending rate to 16 percent from the 16.5 percent level that has prevailed in the industry since mid-March.

But no other major bank followed the move to reduce the base upon which bankers compute interest rates on short-term business loans to their most creditworthy customers.

Corporate profits fell 17.5 percent in the first quarter of this year from the final quarter of 1981, and Woodworth said that "we've yet to find a bottom."

"It will be doggone difficult to have a broad-based expansion unless we get stability in corporate earnings," he said.

U. We've made an offer to buy a home, contingent on getting a new mortgage. We have the 20% cash downpayment, but have been told we probably won't be able to obtain the mortgage because monthly payments will be 39% of our income. Where can we turn?
A. True, lending institutions are not bending the rules much, and 39% income more than lenders like to see go toward a mortgage payment. However, an alternative is to limit your search for a new home to those being offered by sellers willing to take back a second mortgage, or to finance themselves. Where do you find these arrangements? Your real estate agent has numerous listings willing to do just that.

Paralyzed man charged with assault

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A 23-year-old quadriplegic has been charged with assault after he allegedly shot another man by holding a pistol in his mouth and pulling the trigger with his tongue, police say.

Terry McGinnis of Huntersville, who is paralyzed from the neck down, was released Friday from Mecklenburg County Jail on a $2,000 unsecured bond, county authorities said. He was charged with assault with a deadly weapon. John Alexander Robinson, 24, of Derita, was hit in the chest by a bullet and was in satisfactory condition.

Mecklenburg County police officer Mary Diaz said McGinnis and Robinson spoke briefly Thursday night as Robinson stood beside a car in which McGinnis was a passenger. She said when Robinson walked away, he turned to look back and was shot.

TENSE MOMENT ON TV — A man identified as Joe Gwin, 28, of Phoenix, Ariz. holds a pistol to the head of KOOL-TV cameraman Lous Villa Friday night. The gunman forced his way into the studio and took four hostages who were released only after the station allowed his statement to be read on the air. This picture was taken from a TV monitor.

TV station gunman charged

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A 28-year-old man was charged Saturday with kidnaping, assault and burglary after he took four people hostage at a television station and forced the anchorman at gunpoint to read a statement on the air, police said.

Police said Joseph Billie Gwin, of Phoenix, surrendered quietly Friday night after his 20-minute statement, which included a prediction that Phoenix would be invaded by ants, was broadcast by KOOL-TV, the local CBS affiliate.

Anchorman Bill Close, one of the hostages, read the statement as Gwin sat next to him holding a gun at his stomach under the table, police spokesman Mike Jahn said. Viewers couldn't see the gun.

Gwin said his message needed to be broadcast "to prevent World War III," officials said. It included a rambling set of predictions, including that Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., would become president and that five cities in Pennsylvania, Arkansas, Nebraska, Idaho and New Mexico would be flattened by atomic bombs on July 4, 1994.

Gwin burst into the studios about 5 p.m. Friday, firing one shot and taking four hostages, Jahn said. He surrendered five hours later.

Two of the hostages, floor manager Jack Webb and cameraman Bob Cimino, 31, were released about 8 p.m., Jahn said.

Gwin held a third hostage, photographer Louis Villa, 52, at gunpoint for nearly the entire five-hour period, keeping him in a "chokehold" much of the time, Jahn said.

Villa was struck in the back of the head with the gun butt, Jahn said. When he was released about 9:30 p.m., the back of his shirt was soaked with blood. He was treated at a Phoenix hospital and released.

The other hostages were not hurt.

Georgia town's anti-crime law effective Tuesday

By SCOTT SHEPARD
 Associated Press Writer

KENNESAW, Ga. (AP) — "Law enforcement — everybody's business" is more than a police slogan in this town. An anti-crime ordinance requiring all heads of households to maintain a firearm and ammunition takes effect Tuesday.

Crime has never been a major problem in this sleepy tourist town near the site of the Battle of Kennesaw Mountain, where Union Gen. William Sherman suffered a temporary setback in his drive to Atlanta.

But the publicity generated by the ordinance has meant big business for souvenir dealers who have made room for T-shirts and bumper stickers next to the Civil War memorabilia.

A local recording artist, Jimmy Moore, is selling a record entitled "Kennesaw Get Your Guns," urging residents to "keep the outlaws out of town." One man has splattered Kennesaw with posters offering $350 courses in arms training "geared toward the businessman and woman... and housewife."

Beyond the commercialism spawned by the ordinance, unanimously adopted March 15 by the five-member City Council, is a deep-rooted belief in the constitutional right to bear arms and the obligation of the citizen to protect his family and household.

"It's been portrayed as fascist or racist, but it's neither," Dent "Wildman" Myers said of the ordinance. Myers supports the ordinance in more than principle. He sells $2 certificates of "Honorary Citizenship" of Kennesaw, donating the proceeds to a gun safety school set up by the city.

Most of his orders are by mail, some from as far away as England, where, he noted with disdain, police do not regularly carry firearms.

Myers, who sells Civil War relics and antiques in his shop on Main Street, has never been burglarized, robbed or assaulted.

Next to his rifle is a rifle loaded with 60-round ammunition clip. On his left hip is .357-caliber Magnum; on his right hip, a .44-caliber weapon he calls his "Son of Sam Special."

"Are they loaded?" asked one customer. He laughed and pointed to a sign near the cash register: "All shoplifters will be shot regardless of race, creed, religion or national origin."

"We aren't prejudiced," Myers grinned, stroking his beard.

It was the June 1961 passage of an ordinance in Morton Grove, Ill., outlawing all handguns except by law officers or licensed collectors which prompted the ordinance here.

Colorado family killed in crash

BOERNE, Texas (AP) — Federal officials Saturday were examining the wreckage of a light plane that crashed shortly after midnight, killing all four people aboard.

Four members of a Colorado family died when the single-engine plane plummeted into a brushy area near this central Texas town about 12:20 a.m., said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

Witnesses said the plane's motor died shortly before the crash.

Dead at the scene were accountant Lloyd R. Meyers, 46, his wife Wilma E. Meyers, 44, both of Westminister, Colo., their 19-year-old son Dana, a University of Colorado student, and their 24-year-old daughter Deborah, of Denver.

HEADING FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR — Senior Girl Scout Dana Kohl, left, Cadettes Joanna Hamilton (not shown), Della Ortiz and alternate Barbara Smallwood have been selected to travel with 24 other girls on an eight-day trip to the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn. The Program Services Committee of the West Texas Girl Scout Council is sponsoring the charter-bus-tour which will leave Abilene June 12 to visit Little Rock, Ark., Opryland in Nashville, Tenn. and the World's Fair.

Footnotes from the County Library 'Space Capers' is theme of this summer's program

By DONNA JACKSON
Howard County Children's Librarian
 Blast off with the summer reading program at the Howard County Library. The theme is this summer is "Space Capers" and many new space-related books have arrived with more to come. Children who join may read any kind of book they like ... not only those related to space. We are encouraging children who join to read at least 10 books during the program. We would like them to tell us just a little, a sentence or two, orally or in written form, about the books they read. Children who read books over 100 pages will be given credit for reading two books, over 200 pages, three books. These points or credits will be counted toward prizes and coupons. The 50 children who earn the most points will be awarded paperback and game books. Those 50 top readers will also earn tickets to the Ritz Theater's Summer Kids' Show which features movies for children Wednesday mornings at 10. McDonald's is supporting the summer reading program by providing for those who read 5 books, 10 books and so on. Those children who enjoy McDonald's (and what children don't?) will enjoy good eating as well as good reading this summer. The activity day programs held each Thursday at 10 a.m. will feature special people this summer. The speakers include "Tumbleweed Smith," who will talk about unidentified flying objects in Texas on June 17. Mr. Joe Reed, BSHS Biology teacher will talk about stars on July 8. Mr. Jack Wilson will present a magic show on June 24. At the closing party, July 15, Kelly Draper will put on a puppet show. Refreshments will be provided and certificates and awards will be given. Space related movies, crafts and games will also be featured during the activity hour held each Thursday from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. The first project will be drawing space creatures so children can use their imaginations and see the results displayed in the library. A child may register for the summer reading program June 1 through July 10. Children registering for library cards must be accompanied by a parent. There is no charge for a card or library privileges in Howard County as long as books are cared for and turned in on time. The support of the Friends of the Library, McDonald's, the Ritz Theater and the speakers is appreciated. We hope to encourage children (and their parents) to use and enjoy the library this summer. We are proud of our library and hope the summer reading program will acquire more residents with its resources.

Historical marker to be unveiled

COLORADO CITY (SC) — A Texas historical marker for Valley View School will be unveiled at 2 p.m. Saturday at the Valley View Community. The site is located five miles east of the Buford Gin off the Snyder Highway and one mile north on the black-topped road. In 1906, a decision was made to build a school by T.J. Coffee, A.J. Compton, 1930. The school is located in Lone Wolf Valley, which derives its name from Chief Lone Wolf. Even though only the foundation of the school remains, the creek continues to flow from an upstream spring south of the old site.

Husband claims golfer Jan Stephenson threatened

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The husband of golfer Jan Stephenson has filed court documents that claim his wife was forced against her will into trying to annul their marriage.

Larry Kolb obtained a temporary restraining order Friday that freezes his wife's assets except for "reasonable and necessary sums for the ordinary course of living and the ordinary course of business."

She was ordered to appear in Tarrant County District Court June 4 to show why the order should not become an injunction. Attorneys said a jury trial could begin as early as August. Stephenson left Kolb April 3 and petitioned April 19 to declare her marriage void because she still was married to Fort Worth businessman Eddie Vossler. She said that when she married Kolb in Phoenix March 5, she didn't know she still was married to Vossler.

Her petition said her marriage to Vossler was "on or about October 1979 and has not been dissolved."

But in documents filed late Friday, Kolb said his wife never was married to anyone else and denied all of her allegations, including those that he used fraud and duress to induce Stephenson into marriage.

Kolb also asked the court to appoint an independent third party as guardian of Stephenson's estate, an action he says is necessary to protect her.

Kolb, the golfer's manager who was a partner of Vossler's until January, said Stephenson's actions "are directly controlled by Mr. Vossler against the will and best interest" of his wife.

But Stephenson, reached by telephone in Corning, N.Y., where she is playing in a tournament, denied the charges, saying Vossler never had done anything to hurt her.

Can speedy Mears outrun Indy field?

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Mears, leading the fastest field of all time at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, will be at the front of the pack Sunday when the green flag falls for the 66th and possibly most dangerous Indianapolis 500.

Mears' teammate, Kevin Cogan, and A.J. Foyt, the only four-time winner and taking part in his silver-anniversary 500, will share the front row. It is the first race here in nine years to be run under the shadow of a driver death, the first in 24 years minus the defending champion and perhaps the first to feature laps at 200 mph.

The 33 cars, in 11 rows of three, get the flag during a flying start scheduled for noon EDT. A crowd of more than 300,000 is expected.

Gordon Smiley, 33, a two-year veteran at Indy, was killed in an explosive crash during warmups on the first weekend of time trials.

The start has produced some of the worst accidents, with the 700-horsepower, open-wheel cars bunched in rows of three and heading for the narrow first turn of the 2 1/4-mile oval at more than 190 mph.

And this year there is the possibility of lethal combinations: a field that averaged 197.740 mph, nine Indy rookies and 18 drivers who have driven in no more than two previous races here. Three starters have just a half-lap's experience among them in Indy-type racing.

"It's said over and over again every year, but everybody out there just has to keep in mind that this is a 500-mile race," Foyt said. "Nobody wins it in the first turn or the first lap. You got to impress that on the guys with less experience."

Three-time winner Johnny Rutherford, starting on the outside of the fourth row in the yellow Chaparral he drove to victory in 1980, said: "If a guy sticks his neck out and takes chances, then there will be safety problems. I don't think it's going to happen that way because I think everybody out there is well aware of the situation and will take care of each other."

This year's rookies, at the request of several veterans, will display a "rookie stripe" on their cars, showing everyone on the track where the drivers with less experience are running. Mears, in an arrow-nosed Penske PC-10 considered the state-of-the-art Indy car, broke the 4-year-old qualification records with a fast lap of 207.612 mph and a four-lap average of 207.004.

But the boyish-faced 30-year-old, the 1979 Indy winner, was just one of eight drivers to qualify at more than 200 mph. Cogan, driving an identical Ford-powered PCV-10, averaged 204.082, and Foyt, in one of the 17 March-Cosworth racers on the grid, got in at 203.332, both better than Tom Sneva's 1978 mark of 202.156.

Mario Andretti, one of the principals in last year's ruling that nearly cost Bobby Unser his third Indy victory, will be on the inside of the second row, qualifying at 203.172 in a Wildcat-Cosworth.

Next, at 201.884, will be teammate Gordon Johncock, the winner of the 1973 race, in which Swede Savage was killed. That was the last driver death before Smiley.

Bill Whittington, the middle member of the first brother trio ever to start the same Indy race, qualified for the outside of the second row at 201.658 in a March. He crashed during practice last Sunday, but a frantic crew effort got the car rebuilt.

Sneva and Don Whittington, the eldest brother, took the inside and middle spots on

Sixers try again

NBA Championship

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers, burned by the trapping defense and fastbreak offense of Los Angeles in the opener of the National Basketball Association championship series, hope to beat the Lakers at their own game Sunday.

"Running is our game, too," said 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham. "It could have been us with a 41-point third quarter Thursday if we had gone to the boards."

The Lakers' aggressive defense in Game 1 Thursday night triggered a fast break that turned a 15-point deficit into a 16-point lead in a span of 10 1/2 minutes of the second half as Los Angeles took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series with a 124-117 victory.

"The results of what they were succeeding with made us less aggressive offensively," said 76ers forward Julius Erving. "We got entirely into a defensive posture. Instead of playing like front-runners, which we were, we played like we were trying to hold them off."

The Lakers, who turned over the ball 15 times in the first half when they fell behind 61-50 at intermission, forced 12 Philadelphia turnovers in the second half with their half-court trapping defense.

"Hopefully, we'll be a little bit smarter against their press next time," said 76ers forward Bobby Jones.

Los Angeles has dominated the playoffs this season as no NBA team ever has, winning nine straight games, including sweeps of Phoenix and San Antonio besides the victory over Philadelphia.

The only other team in NBA history to win nine consecutive postseason games was the Minneapolis Lakers. But Minneapolis did it over two seasons, 1949 and 1950.

A victory in Game 2, which will be nationally televised by CBS starting at 1 p.m. EDT Sunday, also would be the Lakers' eighth straight road playoff victory, dating to the final game of the 1980 championship series won by Los Angeles in six games.

"It's starting to get planted in the players' minds that they have accomplished something significant," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "But the important thing is just to win the series."

"The impact of a loss on Philly Sunday would be tremendous in a negative way. They have to play like it's a seventh game," he said.

CLOSE BUT NO SOFTBALL — Harding Well Service third baseman Adrian Garcia (13) puts the tag on Westwind Express baserunner Jesse Carrillo (14) Saturday afternoon at the First Annual Chicano Softball Tournament held at Johnny Stone Memorial Park. The only problem for Garcia is the ball just isn't in the glove and Carrillo is safe on the play. The HWS Indios won the game by the 10-win rule and went to defeat the Diablos 7-6 and Busters 11-8. Championship game is scheduled at 12 noon today.

Morgan ties up Maltbie at Memorial

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Gil Morgan holed out his 167-yard approach shot for an eagle 2 on the closing hole Saturday to join faltering Roger Maltbie in the third-round lead of the weather-plagued $380,000 Memorial Golf Tournament.

Morgan's sensational finish, coming well after national television had ended its coverage, gave him a 5-under-par 67. His 4-iron shot took one bounce on the 18th green 6 inches from the cup and jumped in the hole.

Maltbie, displaying a Memorial record performance with a 36-hole total of 10-under-par 134, cooled off Saturday. He had a double bogey and two bogeys in his first 12 holes. But he knocked in a 20-foot birdie putt on the 16th hole and had the sole lead momentarily before Morgan's eagle.

Morgan and Maltbie matched 7-under-par totals of 209, equalling the Memorial 54-hole record established by Bob Gilder a year ago. Maltbie settled for a 75 Saturday.

Ray Floyd, former PGA and Masters champion, played his best round ever on Jack Nicklaus' Muirfield Village layout, a 67 that he maintained could have been much lower.

Floyd was alone in third place at 210. Gilder bogeyed two of the last three holes and slipped back into a fourth-place tie after his 69-211. He had the sole lead for a few moments after a birdie at 15.

Gilder was tied with Hale Irwin, Scott Simpson, Peter Jacobsen and Tom Purtzer. Jacobsen and Purtzer shot 68s, Irwin 70 and Simpson 71.

A double bogey 7 on the 11th hole cost Maltbie a 2-shot lead on Floyd and Gilder. Maltbie overshot the green on the 538-yard hole, left his chip shot in heavy rough and then two-putted from 10 feet.

Meanwhile, up ahead of him, Floyd birdied the 14th hole and Gilder did the same at No. 12.

Baseball not Texas' bag this summer

Fans sporting designer paper sacks over their craniums in Arlington Stadium.

Fans booing last year's pennant contenders in the Astrodome.

It's only the end of May but forecasters are calling for a summer day spell for baseball fans around the Lone Star State. For the hapless Texas Rangers and for the punchless Houston Astros, the storm clouds are gathering on the horizon and all hail could break loose if the sun doesn't shine through soon.

Looking back at spring training, things looked promising for both teams. Texas had an exciting outfielder in rookie George Wright, discontented Bump Wills had been shipped off to Chicago and the pitching staff boasted the return of household names Tanana and Matlack. The Rangers had been one of the few teams to knock off Atlanta more than once in Grapefruit League play.

The Astros didn't have the good record but with Ryan, Sutton, Knepper and maybe J.R. on the mound under the Dome, few folks were really worried.

After two months of baseball, however, the win well is turning up bone dry. The Rangers have the poorest winning percentage in the league next to the Twins and the Astros are involved in a heated battle for last place in the NFL West.

Although the Astros have caused many heads to shake, the Rangers have just been plain tragic. Believer or not, Texas won its opener (8-3 over Cleveland) and was 6-4 on April 22 after a 4-2 win over the Injuns. A 4-3 loss the next night began a skid that is still in progress.

Since April 22, the Rangers have won seven of 31 games. A 1-0 win over Boston snapped the heart of the dog-days, a 12-game losing streak. Perhaps the Rangers spent too much time in the off-season in Reunion Arena. At the present rate, Texas is bound to match the Mavericks' 28-54 record in their second NBA season.

Just because Houston has won more games than the Rangers, they can't be let off the hook. After taking 2 of 3 from St. Louis, Houston contributed heavily to the rise of the Atlanta Empire. Six of the record 13 Braves wins came at the expense of the Astros. Manger Joe Torre just finished mailing off his thank you notes.

The methods of losing haven't even been exciting. The Rangers have folded in the ninth, made win-killing errors or have watched their pitchers do a Charlie Brown on the mound. The Astros have also made Little League plays in the field and must substituted whiffle bats for their Louisville sluggers at the plate.

All this boredom is surely taking its toll at the ticket windows. When families plan summer trips to Six Flags or Astroworld, a night at the ballpark is a must if the teams are in town. Now, mom, pop and the kids are heading to a nearby mall to catch the re-release of Bambi.

What's wrong with the Rangers?

Eddie Chiles called his troops together Monday and Tuesday and tried to find out. It seems that no matter what kind of talent Texas sends out on the diamond each season, the results are far below the expectations. Al Oliver — sick of the Ranger's lackluster ways — is off in Montreal, Toby Harrah is batting up a storm in Cleveland and a host of pitchers have settled into respectable careers around the league. They come and they go and still the Rangers muddle along.

Chiles held his temper this time and no heads rolled from the guillotine. George Steinbrenner should be so patient. But everyone concerned knows the Rangers — though not a great team — should be doing much better with what they have shown. Mad Eddie told his charges simply to play up to their capabilities and quit imitating the Bad News Bears.

Texas has had a problem getting anything to go right. Not one pitcher on the staff is a consistent winner, the bullpen is far from effective and Tanana, once good enough to be on a Sports Illustrated poster with California, is 1-7. Rick Honeycutt is 0-6, too. When good pitching does come along, the bats go dead or the gloves field like hula hoops.

There's a lot of work to be done and manager Don Zimmer will just have to regroup his men and start from scratch. After all, Texas is already 14 1/2 games behind in the division and an encouraging finish this summer could help next year. That's a sad thing to say when June hasn't even arrived yet.

For Houston, the talent is there. Why the Astros are playing like robots is unknown.

The pitching is still around. Sure Nolan Ryan is off to a bad start but he's won three of five decisions recently. Don Sutton is having a great year and Bob Knepper has a lot of tough luck. The pitching isn't the problem. The sticks are...

Houston isn't a hitting team by any means. Still, there were enough singles and doubles mixed in with aggressive baserunning to score the runs needed to win. The offensive silence from Cruz, Ashby, Howe and company is almost deafening. This week, Montreal made the Astros look even worse, completing a three-game sweep with a shutout in extra s. Not even Sutton could help in a game when Houston struck out on three different scoring opportunities.

Both Zimmer and Houston's Bill Virdon remain calm. Sure the management wants to see some action in the win column but no one's loading bullets for the firing squad, yet. Some managers try to shake things up with fines, hollering and doctoring the lineup. Not these guys. That would only add to the confusion, if they changed their styles now.

The Astros are capable of returning to the planet Earth to play ball at any time. With Atlanta and San Diego keeping the division pace, Houston by all means is still in the chase. The Rangers, sad to say, look hopeless for this summer.

Thus, it could be booming times for the grocery sack people.

Royals roast Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Paul Splittorff pitched a four-hitter and Hal McRae had five hits and drove in three runs as the Kansas City Royals routed the Texas Rangers 14-1 Saturday night.

Splittorff, 3-4, hurried eight innings, walking one and striking out three, before Hood pitched the ninth for the Royals.

With McRae leading the way, the Royals pounded four Texas pitchers for 19 hits, putting the game away early.

Kansas City exploded for six runs on seven hits in the third, batting around and chasing Texas starter Rick Honeycutt, 0-6.

Willie Wilson singled and took third when John Wathan's grounder was misplayed by third baseman Buddy Bell. Wilson scored on a single by George Brett and Wathan scored on a single by Amos Otis. Hal McRae then singled Brett home, Jerry Martin brought in two runs with a triple and Willie Aikens hit a sacrifice fly.

The Rangers scored in their half of the third. Larry Parrish doubled, moved to third on a groundout by Mike Richardt and scored on another by Doug Flynn.

The Royals boosted the lead to 9-1 with a three-run sixth. Onix Concepcion singled, advanced to third on pair of infield outs and scored on a single by Brett. After a walk to Otis, McRae scored Brett with a single, then reliever John Butcher walked Martin and Aikens to force in a run.

The Royals struck for three more in the eighth. McRae and Martin singled, and McRae scored and Martin took second as first baseman Dave Hostetler misplayed Aikens' infield grounder for a two-base error. Martin came home on U.L. Washington's infield out, and Aikens scored on a single by Concepcion.

Yankees 6, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Ken Griffey hit a run-scoring double and came home on Oscar Gamble's single in the ninth inning to give the New York Yankees a 6-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

With two out, Willie Randolph singled and came home when Griffey punched his double off reliever Brad Havens, 1-4. Gamble followed with a single to right, scoring Griffey.

The victory went to Shane Rawley, 3-1, the third Yankees pitcher.

A second-inning triple play by the Twins was the first this season.

The triple play began after Bobby Murcer and Nettles singled to put runners at first and second. The runners broke as Smalley struck out, and Murcer was trapped off third. When Murcer retreated safely to second, the Twins trapped Nettles for the second out, and Murcer was out trying to go to third for a second time.

American League

Angels 5, Brewers 4

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Reggie Jackson slugged a home run with one out in the 10th inning to give the California Angels a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

The homer, Jackson's seventh this season, came off of reliever Jamie Easterly, 0-1. Luis Sanchez, 3-0, pitched one inning of relief for the victory.

The Angels came up with a run in the ninth to tie the game 4-4. Rod Carew led off with a walk, and one out later took third on a single by Bob Boone. After another out, Bobby Grich's RBI single off Rollie Fingers sent Carew home.

Tigers 7, A's 4

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Lance Parrish hit a two-run homer and scored two runs as the Detroit Tigers beat the Oakland A's 7-4 Saturday behind the combined five-hit pitching of Milt Wilcox and Elias Sosa.

Wilcox, 4-2, left the game in the seventh inning when his left leg stiffened after walking two batters and giving up an RBI single to Davey Lopes. Sosa gave up two hits, including a two-run homer to Dan Meyer in the eighth, and earned his fourth save.

Mike Norris, 2-5, started for the A's and pitched no-hit ball until the fifth. With one out in the fifth, Larry Herndon walked and Parrish slugged his seventh homer of the season for a 2-1 lead.

The Tigers chased Norris and scored four times against three A's pitchers in the seventh when they batted around. Mike Ivie drove in a run in the Detroit ninth with a sacrifice fly.

Indians 5, White Sox 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chicago right-hander LaMarr Hoyt's winning streak ended at 14 games as the Cleveland Indians pounded out 13 hits to beat the White Sox 5-2 Saturday. Miguel Dilone led the Indians' attack with a single, a double and his first homer in three years.

Hoyt, 9-1, yielded four earned runs in going the distance. Cleveland starter Rick Sutcliffe, 3-1, gave up nine hits in 6 1-3 innings, and Dan Spillner pitched hitless relief for his fourth save.

Dilone made it 5-0 with a solo homer with two out in the fourth.

RANGER FANS? — These five Texas Rangers fans wore combination bumper sticker-masks, reading "Texas Strangers" to discuss their identity Saturday night at Arlington Stadium where the Rangers played the Kansas City Royals. Texas is off to its worst start ever with a 13-27 record.

Viridon puzzled but not down

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros Manager Bill Viridon is still comfortable with the following comment although others try to hang it around his neck like an albatross.

"This is the best Astros team we've had in Houston," Viridon said repeatedly in spring training.

Viridon was echoing the enthusiasm of Astros Chairman John McMullen and General Manager Al Rosen, and even now, with the Astros struggling from one disaster to another and with criticism mounting, Viridon has not changed his posture.

"I knew coming out of spring training that we had to have some things come together, but potentially it is the best club we've had here," Viridon said recently. "I felt early in the season that we would do something like this (start slowly) but I thought we'd be closer to 500."

"I still feel we are a better team but coming out of spring training I knew things weren't totally ready," he said.

Apparently, they still aren't.

Houston's hitting, never called explosive, at least was opportunistic when the Astros battled Philadelphia to a near stand-off in the thrilling 1980 National League championship series. Their style was to lean on good pitching and then scratch and claw for the key hits.

No more. In a game last week against Montreal, Houston was shut out despite loading the bases in the third inning, and putting runners in scoring position in the eighth and ninth.

The Astros' ninth inning demise was typical of what's been happening to them much of the season.

With the tying runs on first and second base and no outs, pinch hitter Scott Loucks popped up a bunt to pitcher Woodie Fryman, who turned and doubled a surprised Joe Pittman off second base. Even the normally stoic Viridon muttered, "You don't get picked off second base in a situation like that."

The Astros have survived the past two seasons on a superb pitching staff that has led the National League in earned run average both seasons. This year, Don Sutton is the only survivor — and he wants to be traded.

Nolan Ryan, who pitched a record fifth career no-hitter last September, is off to the worst start of his career.

Strong defense, so necessary for a team that relies on its pitchers, has been spotty.

Second baseman Phil Garner was booed when he committed two errors in one inning last week and then was greeted with derisive cheers when he finally completed an errorless chance.

"They had a right to boo. We stunk," Garner said. "We're playing under Murphy's Law: Anything that can go wrong, we'll see that it happens."

Other criticism has centered around the outwardly passive personality of the team and the quiet approach of Viridon, who shuns theatrics.

"Believe me, screaming and throwing hair driers around the clubhouse is not going to change our luck," Viridon said. "We are not outrageously bad. We're just a little bit away."

And like Gen. Douglas MacArthur vowing "I shall return," Viridon is standing by his statement that the 1982 Astros are the best ever.

"If we haven't gotten it done by the end of the season then you can say I made a mistake," Viridon said. "Otherwise, Viridon may be the one who doesn't return."

Astros master Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Niekro's five-hit pitching and homers by Danny Heep and Ray Knight carried the Houston Astros to a 5-2 victory over the New York Mets Saturday night.

Niekro, 4-4, struck out nine and had no walks in pitching his first complete game in 11 starts this season.

Heep's second homer of the season, off loser Pat Zachry, 4-2 gave the Astros a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning.

The Astros chased Zachry in the fifth when they scored three runs. Terry Puhl led off with a walk and went to third on a single by Craig Reynolds and a throwing error by Mets third baseman Hubie Brooks, his second of the game. Knight's single scored Puhl. Then, with one out, Heep walked and Phil Garner's single scored Reynolds and Knight.

The Mets scored in the sixth with the aid of two wild pitches. Tom Verzer led off with a single, took third as Niekro uncorked wild pitches to two successive batters, and scored on Mookie Wilson's infield out.

Houston made it 5-1 in the seventh on Knight's third homer of the year. Dave Kingman's 14th homer gave the Mets a run in the ninth.

Phillies 1, Braves 0

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Right-hander Dick Ruthven pitched a five-hitter for his fourth straight victory as the Philadelphia Phillies snapped a two-game losing streak, edging the Atlanta Braves 1-0 Saturday.

The only run came in the sixth when, with one out, Pete Rose, Mike Schmidt and Gary Matthews singled successively to load the bases. Bo Diaz then lined a sacrifice fly to center.

Ruthven, 4-3, who lost his first three starts of the season, didn't allow a runner past second and struck out eight, his high for the season.

Phil Niekro worked eight innings for the Braves and allowed only six hits while losing for the second time in four decisions.

Cubs 3, Dodgers 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg stroked a two-out single to right field in the 13th inning to drive in Gary Woods with the winning run Saturday as the Chicago Cubs downed the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.

Larry Bowa walked to open the inning and was sacrificed to second by Jody Davis. Bowa took third on Woods' infield single, but the Cubs shortstop was cut down at the plate by Dodgers shortstop Bill Russell as he tried to score on a grounder by Hector Cruz.

Woods advanced to third on the play, however, and scored on Sandberg's hit.

Lee Smith, 1-0, got the win for the Cubs, who squandered a chance to win the game by stranding eight runners in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings. He pitched the final two innings and allowed no hits.

Alejandro Pena, 0-1, was tagged with the loss.

Expos 4, Reds 1

MONTREAL (AP) — Gary Carter blasted a three-run homer with one out in the eighth inning, and Steve Rogers scattered eight hits as the Montreal Expos extended their winning streak to eight games by defeating the Cincinnati Reds 4-1 Saturday.

Terry Francona walked to open the eighth off reliever Joe Price, 1-2, who then hit Andre Dawson with a pitch. Al Oliver singled to left, but left fielder Larry Blittner threw out Francona at the plate.

Jim Kern came on to face Carter, who unloaded his 10th homer of the season into the left field bleachers on the first pitch.

Rogers, 7-3, struck out six and walked none in pitching his fifth complete game of the year.

The Reds tied the game at 1-1 in the top of the eighth on a solo home run by Eddie Milner.

National League

Giants 9, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jack Clark drove in six runs with two home runs, including his fourth career grand slam, to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 9-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday night.

It was the second straight two-homer game for Clark, who drove in five runs Friday night in San Francisco's 10-5 win over Pittsburgh.

Both homers Saturday came off Pirate starter Don Robinson, 5-1, who was charged with all nine runs.

The victory went to Jim Barr, 1-0, who relieved starter Mike Chris in the fourth. Barr pitched 4 1-3 scoreless innings, giving up three hits, before needing relief help from Greg Minton.

Padres 4, Cardinals 2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tim Lincecum's two-out, RBI double snapped a 2-2 tie in the ninth inning and lifted the San Diego Padres to a 4-2 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday night.

Lincecum's bloop hit, off loser Joaquin Andujar, 4-4, went over the head of Cardinal third baseman Ken Oberkfell. John Curtis, 3-3, picked up the victory with a ninth-inning save from Eric Show.

Sixto Lezcano triggered the Padres' winning rally with a one-out walk, followed by Terry Kennedy's single.

American Business and Agriculture

The foundation of our nation

"American made" may not mean much to some. You might even think foreign products will save you money. The question is: Are you saving your American dollars or are you feeding the cancer which drains our great country each day?

Whether it is cotton or cars, America's economy is a rare entity in the free world—it always has been. Wheeler Motor Company believes in America and hopes you do too.

Sure, the Wheelers have had their opportunities to join the scores of auto dealers who have been approached by foreign manufacturers seeking a foothold in our American economy, but since 1948 Wheeler Motor Company has held, and holds today, to the philosophy of buying, selling and servicing only American made autos and trucks. Maybe if all Americans felt this way about supporting American free enterprise, we wouldn't be in the fix we're in today. The next time you spend your American money, put the product, turn it over and see where it was made. If it isn't from America, you can be assured that the major profit from the sale won't go back into the American economy.

For example, the Wheeler's don't mind paying a fair price for a bale of Martin County cotton, cotton produced in America by Americans, and proudly displaying their belief in this country on a sign designed and painted by students in a free education system.

American Free Enterprise creates the base for growth and freedom. Won't you join the Wheelers and set your sights toward supporting and maintaining the country that is only a dream to most human beings? Help America work for you.

GENTLEMAN JACK — nearly 25 years ago young Jack Nicklaus went with his father to see the U.S. Open Golf Championship played in Toledo where the best pro and amateur golfers of the day showed their stuff. Now Nicklaus is himself a living legend of the game with a host of championships under his belt and his own tournament, The Memorial. Nicklaus is shown during ceremonies Wednesday opening this year's tournament.

Golden Bear has come long way since start

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — It was 25 years ago almost to the day that the U.S. Open golf championship was played in Toledo, Ohio, and a big, friendly Columbus pharmacist named Charlie Nicklaus brought his 17-year-old son to watch the stars.

The kid was a skinny tow-head whose voice was changing and who hadn't begun to shave. He was bug-eyed at the sight of Ben Hogan, Sam Snead, Cary Middlecott and others.

"He'll be playing in this tournament some day," Ohioans said proudly, introducing the kid around. "He won the state tournament, you know."

"Oh, sure," said cynical members of the press, who are accustomed to hometown pride. They then walked over to watch Hogan on the practice tee.

Well, the kid made it, as his pop and friends predicted, and this is the week that golf pays homage to Jack Nicklaus, the non pariel.

This is Jack's personal week. It's his party. A former President, Gerald Ford, dropped in. So did Bob Hope and Mrs. Hope. The game's high echelon — former commissioner Joe Dey, Masters chairman Hord Hardin, faded legends such as Gene Sarazen, Byron Nelson, Glenna Collett Vare and Patty Berg — all are around.

Jack has had many glorious weeks over the past two decades while carving out a collection of 19 major championships — a record that seems beyond anyone else's reach.

But this one's special.

It's his own tournament — the annual Memorial. It's on a course he personally designed and almost fashioned with his bare hands, the Muirfield Village Golf Club. It's in his own backyard, the suburbs of Columbus where he grew up, went to college and took his first lessons.

There is a strong similarity between the Masters and the Memorial just as there is a parallel in the careers of Nicklaus and the great Bob Jones, father of the Masters, America's two greatest golfers.

The best words to describe them are "gentleman" and "class" — both from moderately well-to-do backgrounds, both with strong ties to the game's tradition, both emerging as kings of their respective eras.

Jones died without ever winning his Masters. His best was a tie for 13th the first time the tournament was played. Nicklaus won the second Memorial in 1977.

He had subdued his own brash child, just as he finally brought the Colonial to its knees two weeks ago after 10 frustrating failures.

At 42, Nicklaus has found that expanding business enterprises have not — as some doom-sayers have predicted — in any way dulled his desire or game.

He recently bought 75 per cent of the MacGregor Company, which manufactures his clubs, projecting him into every facet of the game.

He builds golf courses (47 at last count) with broad real estate investments. He has his own tournament. The Golden Bear trademark is on all his clothes and equipment.

"I love golf," Jack says. "I love to win. I can't tell you what a thrill I got in winning at Colonial."

Indy brothers abound

the third row at 201.172 and 200.725, respectively, in two more Marches. On the outside of that row will be Danny Ongais, still wearing a leg brace as a reminder of his horrifying crash in last year's race. Ongais qualified a March at 199.148.

Chip Ganassi, the fastest of the rookies at 197.704 in a Wildcat, took the middle spot on the fourth. The only other former winner in the field, three-time champ, Al Unser — Bobby's younger brother — put a Longhorn-Cosworth on the inside of the sixth row at 195.567.

Al Unser in 1970-71 was the last driver to win consecutive races, and that will remain the same for at least a year. Brother Bobby passed, the first time a defending champ has sat out since 1958, when Sam Hanks retired. Bobby Unser said he will concentrate on his new job as team manager for 1981 Indy rookie of the year Josele Garza, who starts this year in the 33rd and last position.

Bobby Unser beat Andretti across the finish line by 5.2 seconds a year ago but was stripped of his victory when the official finish was posted the next morning. Stewards penalized Unser a lap for illegally passing cars while returning to the track after a pit stop under a caution flag. Andretti was declared the winner.

A special U.S. Auto Club panel, months later, reversed that decision, saying Unser broke the rule but the penalty was improper because of the long delay in assessing it. It fined Unser $40,000 but gave back the victory, making him at 47 the oldest Indy winner.

Chief Steward Tom Binford admitted the situation could occur again Sunday and the yellow-light passing rule remains unchanged. But he said there will be three observers watching for violations. The penalty, which had been "one or more laps," now is set at two laps.

In the race are five sets of brothers: Rick and Roger Mears, the slowest qualifier at 194.154; Don, Bill and 22-year-old Dale Whittington, the youngest in the field; Tom and Jerry Sneva; Gary and Tony Bettenhausen, and half-brothers Duane "Pancho" Carter and Johnny Parsons, whose mother was married to 1950 winner Johnnie Parsons and veteran Indy racer Duane Carter.

Most drivers expect the early pace to be extremely fast, and the record average of 162.962 mph, set by the late Mark Donohue in 1972, could be broken. The fastest lap ever recorded during the race was 196.937 by Gordon Johncock last year.

"It'll be very quick to the first pit stop," Rutherford said. "I wouldn't be surprised to see 195-196 (mph average) through the first 30 laps."

Mears agreed, noting, "If we get off to a good start and the first couple of rows get away from the pack a bit, I'd expect a few 200 (mph) laps early on. But I'm not going to push it. I can lead the race comfortably, without pushing it too much, I'll do that."

"If not, I'll just try to keep the leaders in sight. It's a long race."

Houston wins NCAA golf

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Freshman Billy Ray Brown kept his game steady and his teammates followed Saturday as Houston swept the team and individual titles in the NCAA Division I golf championships.

Brown, who earned his way onto the Cougar golf team this winter, fired a final round 70, 2-under par on the 6,934-yard, par-72 Pinehurst No. 2 course. He finished at 8-under par 280, two shots better than Andy Dillard of Oklahoma State.

For coach Dave Williams, it was his 14th championship in 31 years of coaching, all at Houston.

Connors, Lloyd in quarters

PARIS (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert Lloyd posted victories Saturday to continue their march toward the finals of the $917,000 French Open tennis tournament, which has been hit with an outbreak of flu among the players.

Connors breezed past his third-round opponent, Guy Forget, a 17-year-old Frenchman who is ranked 630rd in the world, with a 6-2, 6-3, 6-7, 6-1 victory.

Connors, who has never made it to the finals of the French Open, next meets fellow American Chip Hooper, the No. 16 seed, on Monday in the race for the $66,000 men's title prize. Hooper downed Jimmy Arias, a 17-year-old from Grand Island, N.Y., 6-3, 6-4, 6-7, 7-6, in their third-round match Saturday.

Lloyd, favored to win a fifth title in Paris, eliminated fellow American Pam Casale 6-2, 6-0. The 27-year-old American star has not lost a set in her advancement to the $51,000 prize for the women's singles crown.

Lloyd's quarterfinal opponent Monday will be Lucia Romanov, a 23-year-old Romanian ranked 71st whose last two opponents have withdrawn from the tournament because of illness.

Romanov advanced Saturday with a fourth-round triumph over No. 8 seed Anne Smith of the United States, who withdrew because of a stomach flu that has forced at least seven players to abandon the two-week clay court tournament.

Lloyd staged her victory shortly before her husband, John Lloyd of Britain, was toppled by No. 8 seed Yannick Noah of France 7-5, 6-0, 6-3. In other third-round matches Saturday, No. 6 seed Eliot Teltscher of the United States scored a 6-4, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3 victory over Peter Elter, a West German ranked 67th.

Teltscher, a 23-year-old ranked seventh, will play his fourth-round match against No. 14 seed Jose Higueras of Spain.

Higueras, a 29-year-old ranked 17th, needed five sets to oust Yugoslavia's Damir Keretic 6-2, 7-5, 6-7, 2-6, 6-2.

No. 3 seed Guillermo Vilas of Argentina continued his straight-set advancement by downing Juan Avendano of Spain 6-0, 6-1, 6-0.

Vilas, the 1977 French Open champion, will meet Andreas Maurer of West Germany in a fourth-round match.

In other women's fourth-round matches Saturday, No. 4 seed Andrea Jaeger posted a 6-1, 6-1 victory over fellow American Dana Gilbert.

The 17-year-old Jaeger now meets 1978 French Open champion Virginia Ruzici of Romania in the quarterfinals. Ruzici, 27, on Saturday posted a 6-4, 6-2 triumph over Ivanna Madruga Osses.

Sunday's lineup for other fourth-round matches pits No. 2 seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia against Mats Wilander, a 17-year-old Swedish wonder.

Among the women Sunday, No. 2 seed Martina Navratilova meets fellow American Kathy Rinaldi, a 15-year-old who is the No. 15 seed.

'Road Warrior' meets punk thugs in bloody battle

• "Road Warrior" — Directed by George Miller, written by Miller, Terry Hayes and Brian Hannant; starring George Miller and Vernon Wells. Now showing at the Ritz Twin. Rated R.

For Max, being a road warrior is no Sunday drive in the country.

Part of the invasion of better-than-usual summer adventure movies, "The Road Warrior" (showing at the Ritz Twin downtown) is several steps above the "B" ratings generally given to pictures of its category.

The idea stems from the 1979 release "Mad Max" which told the story of a man out for revenge when a gang of post nuclear war survivors kills his wife and kids. Max is back again but this time in a toned down role. Although Max is not totally mad this time around, the action he encounters on the highway is enough to drive even Mario Andretti insane.

Set in Australia after nuclear warfare has decimated the human race into slightly more than animals, the movie details the struggle of survival through the possession of oil.

The characters in the film remind the audience of desert nomads — the only difference being instead of galloping about on camels, these people have collected a varied assortment of vehicles to zip around the wasteland in. Anything from police cars to dragsters are employed as transportation.

The story in capsule form has Max bringing a dying man to an encampment of survivors in the desert. The man and the woman with him were attacked and left for dead by the gang of punk rock-looking thugs. Max, not one of the compassionate types, rescues him only in return for as much gas as his hot rod can hold.

The victim dies and as the leader of the people tells, Max his contract died with him. Max strikes up another bargain. In exchange for his gas, he will retrieve an abandoned rig to which they can attach a tanker of gas. These people, you see, have tired of their wasteland existence and want to journey to the coast. To do that, they need a way to haul their prized resource with them.

THE REASON they need Max is simple. The gang of oil bandits are holding them hostage in their desert "fort." Bold Max sneaks off in the night, relocates the rig and heads back to the desert. It's hard to sneak a rig across the wide open wasteland without being seen and the Max attracts plenty of attention. He outraces the gang into the fort and his job is completed. He thinks.

He takes off on his own, declining a request to drive the rig to the coast. Unfortunately he runs into the gang again and a wild chase wrecks his car and almost takes care of Max.

He is rescued though, by the Gyro Captain, a "friend" he has met along the way. Getting mad again after losing his car and pet (Dog), Max offers to drive the rig.

The plan is devised. Max will take off in the tanker rig and divert the gang's attention from the fort, allowing the rest of the group to head out the back door. The completion of the movie is one great chase scene as Max fights off a fleet of vehicles trying to get his cargo. The film ends with an unexpected twist, not to be revealed here.

The film is violent, but not as much as director George Miller could have incorporated. There are several humorous moments, most involving Max's friend, Dog. Max's only emotion in the film is shown towards his comrad.

Max is played again by Mel Gibson and although he's not as macho as a Conan, he's pretty indestructible. The film is kept clean of interfering forces such as sex and language. The idea here was an adventure film set in the future, showing that highly civilized man might turn to more primitive ways when disaster forces him to begin a different lifestyle.

"Mad Max" was one of the first Australian film successes on the world market. The "Road Warrior" is sure to top its predecessor's achievements.

ANOTHER "2001"? — Ron Perlman, Everett McGill and Nameer El-Kadi, left to right, star as three warriors who venture into the vast, uncharted world of the ice-age in search of the life-sustaining element — fire. The movie is "Quest for Fire," now showing in Big Spring. It is rated R.

Movie's quest falls short

• "Quest for Fire" — Directed by Gerard Brach; starring Ron Perlman and Rae Dawn Chong. Now showing at the R-70 Theater. Rated R.

The idea was ambitious but can the average movie-going audience take this version of man's beginnings seriously?

Press packets for "Quest For Fire" boast that the 20th Century-Fox film could be this generation's "2001: A

Movie Review

Space Odyssey." Where "2001" told where man might be headed, "Quest" backtracks and tries to relate how our two-legged species may have first arrived.

"Quest," however, does not live up to its billing. Perhaps the greatest notoriety the film has achieved to this date is having "leading lady" Rae Dawn Chong pose nude in Playboy magazine earlier this spring.

The problem comes from trying to incorporate too much into the movie. Just when things are focused on a serious line and represent a possible study into primitive man, the people that put the project together toss in some humor as slapstick as that found in Ringo Starr's "Caveman." The abrupt changes in tone leave the audience chuckling when things are back to being serious again.

Anthony Burgess was employed to develop special language and Desmond Morris worked on body language and gestures to bring the film some authenticity. It's hard for 20th century viewers to recall how real cavemen may have acted — so we have to take the word of the experts.

It's also hard not to hide a smile because early man wasn't the most socially fundamental creature that has ever come along. Following the principles of evolution, this man would be just a few million years past the ape stage and his movement is not quite up to the Metropolitan Ballet.

Speech hasn't arrived yet. In fact, the movie presents an explanation of how smiles came about. Ika (played by Chong) laughs when objects fall on her friends' heads. They catch on and laugh too, even when their heads are busted open from the hard landings they endure.

The story concerns a group of tribesmen that possess fire in a special lantern-like device. When chased off by some attacking enemies, they cross a body of water and an accident puts out the fire. Three of the tribesmen — Noah, Aoukar and Gaw — take off on a quest for more fire. Along the way, they run into Ika and her people. Along with learning more about the world they live in, the three musketeers watch Ika's people make fire through friction. Then it's off to take the fire back to their own tribe.

Of course, there's some action thrown in as several varieties of animals and other tribes attack in attempts to steal the fire. One good scene involves the three heroes trapped between charging enemies and a herd of mammoths. They befriend the mammoths by offering food and the huge predators to the elephant chase off the attackers.

Once the men return, the fire is lost again. They try rubbing sticks together to create the flame again but fail. Luckily, Ika is around to save the day and perhaps mankind.

The movie has its interesting moments and humorous ones also. But as far as being a legitimate study into the origin of man, it's hard to take seriously. If you're into grunts, partially animal-covered men and women and savage environment, you might be interested. Otherwise, check out a book at the library on primitive man and do some serious study.

Paul McCartney returns to Penny Lane

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Paul McCartney came home Saturday to Penny Lane — which inspired one of the Beatles' biggest hits — to be best man at his brother's wedding.

A crowd of about 500 were waiting for Paul and his wife, Linda, outside St. Barnabas Church, but they slipped in a side entrance before the start of the Church of England service.

It was the second marriage for 38-year-old Michael McCartney, and all three of his daughters by a previous marriage were bridesmaids. He was wed to 21-year-old dress designer Rowena Horne, who lives just around the corner from the church.

During his sermon, the Rev. William Harrington reminded guests that Paul, 39, used to sing at the church for 10 shillings, then $1.40, a session. The Beatles later immortalized Penny Lane, its bus shelter, banks and barber shop in a song on the album "Abbey Road."

Neither of the other two surviving Beatles, George Harrison and Ringo Starr, attended. John Lennon was shot to death outside his New York City apartment in December 1980.

But Irene made a big mistake. She underestimated the shrewdness of Don Corrado and tried to don out money he considered his after she had carried out a hit.

Texas court to consider water rights appeal

By JIM DAVIS

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court agreed Wednesday to consider a Waco appeals court ruling that could knock out the state's power to assign water rights on Texas rivers.

The court agreed to hear arguments in the case, which originated in Llano County, on June 16. At the same time, justices will hear arguments in a Bexar County case that conflicts with the Waco ruling.

A Supreme Court decision in favor of the Waco ruling effectively could cancel the Water Rights Adjudication Act of 1967, which set up the hearings process by which water rights are assigned to individuals and businesses.

"This would be a disaster for conservation of state waters," Tim Brown, assistant attorney general who represents the Texas Department of Water Resources, said in an interview. "Planning and allocating water resources just would be impossible."

The Waco ruling came in an appeal by Joe E. Schero of a Llano District Court's ruling in his dispute with the Water Resources Department.

Schero is contesting the water rights assignments on the Llano River made in an adjudication hearing that began in 1976. The Water Rights Commission, which now is under the Texas Water Commission, granted Schero limited rights on eight sections of land and none on two others.

The landowner took the case to the district court in Llano County, where Judge D.V. Hammond agreed with the commission's ruling.

On appeal to the Waco Court of Appeals, however, Schero won a ruling that reversed the district court decision regarding the limitations on the eight sections.

The appeals court agreed with Schero's contention that his historical water use constituted a vested property right that could not be taken by the state without compensation.

Brown said the 4th Court of Appeals at San Antonio had ruled just the opposite in a Bexar County case involving water rights along the Guadalupe River Basin. That case had been appealed to the Supreme Court earlier but handled on a routine finding of no reversible error.

Now that two lower courts have conflicting opinions, he said, the high court has agreed to hear arguments in the cases and issue an opinion to settle the dispute.

Woman gains new outlook with weight loss

Before

165 POUNDS BEFORE — Sandy Hildebrand, shown above with her daughter Brandy, was depressed about herself because of her obesity. Even though she joked about it, her true feelings were hidden inside and tormenting her.

'Being dissatisfied with myself, I'd eat to try to make myself feel better'

DETERMINATION — Sandy's brother would always greet her with a pinch on her cheek and a "hello fatty" when he saw her. Once after he did it, she was so angry that she decided she would not return home again until she was under 200 pounds. She weighed 245 pounds before beginning her diet.

By TINA M. STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

During Sandy Hildebrand's childhood, the main emphasis in her home was eating. With a family of seven, eating was a first-come first-serve situation. Sandy fought to keep her weight down in high school. After her first child was born, she gained weight and tipped the scales at 245 pounds. Today Sandy weighs between 140 to 145 pounds. She is five feet eleven inches tall, 29 years old, and a hairstylist at Regis Hairstyles.

"Being dissatisfied with myself, I'd eat to try to make myself feel better. Now I try to do something constructive or work to make myself feel better," she said.

This is her story.
"I really didn't like myself very much. I couldn't go out and have fun. I was self-conscious of how I looked. I always tried to look decent and nice looking the best I could, but when you know you're fat ...

"I didn't like to meet people. I really didn't have any confidence in myself. I hated to buy clothes. Right before I started my diet, I was depressed about myself and when you are overweight you are tired all the time."

She always was the jolly one at a party ... joking about herself and her problem. But in reality, she was hiding her true feelings. "That is the only way you could live with yourself," she said.

"I knew I was a good hairstylist, but I would never have had the courage to walk into Regis and ask for a job before just because of the way I looked. A fat person just can't look as professional as a slim person."

Sandy tried several methods including Weight Watchers, Overeaters Anonymous, acupuncture, starving, and any diet that came along. "I never felt I had enough food to keep from starving to death, and that is about what they put you on," she said.

The turning point came during Labor Day weekend in 1978 when she visited her family in San Antonio. While there, she decided she had suffered enough humiliation about her weight. "My brother always pinched me on the cheek and say 'Hello fatty' and I hated it. That's when I decided I wasn't going back until I had gotten under 200 pounds.

"Before, my dad had told me about the diet and the book," she said speaking about "Brand Name Low Carbohydrate with 10,000 food listings." "He gave me the book to go on the diet. He was concerned mostly about my health." Between being overweight, smoking and a touch of asthma, she said her heart would have to work twice as hard.

On this diet, she could eat all she wanted so long as she cut out starches and sweets — the carbohydrates. She also took a high multi-vitamin supplement. Depending on how many carbohydrates she limited herself to each day, she could eat a few vegetables.

"When I first went on it, I cut them all out so I could see some quick results. And boy I did!"

"I didn't tell anybody I went on a diet right at first," she said. "You

LOOK AT HER NOW! — After losing 105 pounds, Sandy Hildebrand leads a new life as a happier, more self-satisfied person. "Now I like myself," she know how friends are. They try to stuff you with food or make comments like they say 'Another diet. Oh boy, here we go again.'"

After losing 100 pounds in eight or nine months, she was still dissatisfied with her weight and desired to lose more. However about the same time, she became pregnant with her second child. After her son was born, she continued her diet until she reached her desired weight of 140 to 145 pounds.

She didn't set a goal to lose 105 pounds. She set a goal to lose weight until she was satisfied with herself ... two or three pounds at a time. "In my mind I said I am going to lose weight. I am losing weight. I've just got to lose two or three more pounds. I took it day by day."

"There were times I fudged, but I went right back and kept count of carbohydrates." She weighed herself every morning and still does in order to keep her weight down. "If I get over 145, I will be careful what I eat that day until I get back to normal."

Sandy plans her carbohydrate intake before she eats. If she plans to go out for Mexican food tomorrow, she cuts down on carbohydrates today. "I have to watch myself because I like them sweets," she said.

Mexican food and Reeces Peanut Butter Cups are the two things that tempt her most. She also likes strawberry preserves. To satisfy a craving, she takes a small spoon of peanut butter, adds a tiny amount of strawberry preserves and eats it. When she was hungry of wanted something to eat out of a nervous habit, she would fix a hamburger without bread and or a ham and cheese omelet with bacon. "When I wanted to eat, I would eat, but I changed the things I was eating. I'm still like that."

Her hardest times of temptation were at functions where much emphasis was placed on food, or at night when she reads. "I found that I could hardly sit down and read without eating something. I quit reading for awhile when I first started dieting so I wouldn't eat." Occasionally, she will eat when she reads but not as often or as much and she eats different foods than she did before. It is easier now for her to refrain from food.

"I didn't go back home until I lost it. I weighed 199 pounds when I went said. "I've enjoyed shocking my friends." Sandy is a wife, mother and professional hairstylist.

back the first time that following Christmas. It was a blast. My family was there. They thought it was great and I really finally believed that they believed I was going to do it and that I was doing it. They were real proud of me."

Her younger brother was not at home when she went home for the first time. The second time she went home he was there. He didn't recognize her at first. "He was flabbergasted," Sandy said. "I've enjoyed shocking my friends in San Antonio."

"Now I like myself and it is easier because you know what's going to happen and it's easy to keep it that way. The hard part was getting down there."

Sandy used to wear a size 22 in pants and 42 in blouses. Today she wears a size 9-10 to 11-12 in pants, medium in junior blouses, and 12 in dresses. In 1979, she bought and wore a swimsuit for the first time since she was in high school.

Sandy had a few problems adjusting to her new identity, but is much happier than she was before. "I'm still real critical of myself on how I look. It's hard for me not to see myself as fat when I look in a mirror, even though I'm not." She always tried to be "extra sure" she looks good.

She received much attention from others, such as flirting, and likes it but says it is hard on a marriage. "I'm still me. I've always been kind of outspoken and friendly," she said. "Now if you're that way, men take it wrong and that is a problem. It's been easy for me to make friends pretty much all my life." Before, she said, she knew men didn't have any desire to date or flirt with her. Now she has to be careful to keep from giving them the wrong impression.

Sandy and her husband have been married for three and a half years. They met while she was on her diet. She said he was pleased with her and her success and he hopes she will never allow herself to become overweight again.

Brad reminds her to abstain from eating when she doesn't need to and is a constant support of her. Once he told her she was getting chunky. That upset Sandy so much that she immediately lost a few pounds. "I just love it that he can pick me up."

Jackie is and has been the top seller of Girl Scout Cookies in the West Texas Girl Scout Council for three consecutive years. This year she sold 912 boxes of cookies totaling $1824. Last year Jackie sold 780 boxes and 600 boxes the year before.

Jackie is the daughter of Larry and Deborah Steen, Gail 'Rt., owners of Larry's Cafe. She is a third grader at Washington Elementary and a member of Brownie Girl Scout Troop No. 102.

"I was going to sell 80 cases," she said, "but I changed my mind because I thought that was too many." While most of the girls take orders from their customers, she orders the cases of cookies before she sells them. She ordered 70 cases this year and then sold an additional six more.

"One guy came back every night for six nights at Safeway and bought a box every night," she said. One night he told her "he's going to have to save some until next year and that he couldn't buy anymore." He bought a case of cookies from her one of the nights. "Everyday he'd come and buy some off of me."

Does she enjoy selling cookies? "Sometimes. But sometimes I get tired. It is something to do when you don't have nothing." She likes to eat cookies just as much as selling them and says mint cookies are her favorite.

Jackie will be a Junior Girl Scout next year and has been a Girl Scout for three years. She particularly enjoys going on Girl Scout field trips. Last year she got to see the Ice Capades and visited Gill's Fried Chicken.

On Saturdays, Jackie can be found at her parents' cafe. She cleans tables, takes out drinks and sometimes waits on customers. She works during the lunchtime rush and has started her own savings account.

TOP SALES GIRL — Dorrie Cook, left, field executive for Girl Scouts, presents Jackie Steen with a plaque signifying her achievement as top cookie seller in the West Texas Girl Scout Council. Miss Steen also received a Girl Scout watch.

UP TO HER NECK — Jackie Steen was up to her neck in Girl Scout Cookies this year during the annual Girl Scout Cookie Sale. She sold 76 cases and was the West Texas Girl Scout Council's top seller. She has held this same position for the past three years.

Ways to manage credit card use

By NINA MAHON
County Extension Agent
Cut credit-card costs and maximize spending power by managing credit-card use in three specific ways.
Efficient credit-card use depends on payment methods, date of purchases and number of different cards used.
When possible, always pay the full amount due rather than the minimum — this will mean no finance charges added to the bill.

Also, extend credit by waiting to pay a bill until just before the due date — but be sure to allow enough time for the post office to deliver the payment and for the company to process it.
Generally, consumers have 20-30 days after the closing date to pay a bill.
Plan purchases according to the closing date on an account.
Make purchases just after the closing date to extend the time between purchases and payment.

Also, if it will be a "must" to pay a finance charge computed under the average-daily-balance method, try to plan purchases to lessen the number of days any purchase is on account.
Lumping purchases onto one card can save money on postage and make record keeping easier.

Also, if a card holder has a higher credit limit on one account — for example, $800, it is more economical to charge all purchases on that account.
Since most credit cards have a breakpoint of $500 at which interest become lower, any amount over the $500 would be charged a lower rate of interest than if a total $800 worth of purchases were spread among several cards.

Time spent alone can be useful to teens

"Moments of solitude can be a previous developmental aid for young people," a research team from the University of Chicago reveals.
Studies of the life-style patterns of teens in Chicago's suburbs, done by Dr. Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi and Dr. Reed Larson, show that time spent alone can be a great help — particularly if it's used well. Solitude helped the majority of teens studied in three important ways:

- Teens' concentration is keener when they are alone. School studies, work on hobbies, and scores on intelligence tests are higher among those who spend the greatest amount of time alone.
- Many teens report they feel more cheerful and alert after spending time alone. They also find they're friendlier than usual and better able to maintain good relationships with others.
- Periods of solitude give teens a needed opportunity for reflection and introspection, helping them solve some of their problems and think things through.

Even though solitude is obviously good for the soul, our culture places a strong emphasis on togetherness.
Many teens feel bad when they're by themselves, particularly on traditionally social nights like Friday and Saturday, and confuse aloneness with loneliness. "It's important to realize that as long as you're enjoying yourself, there's no need to be doing exactly what everyone else is doing — when they're doing it," Dr. Csikszentmihalyi points out.

These suggestions are given for teens to determine when, where, and how to maximize the benefits of time off from the daily hubbub while minimizing any possible feelings of loneliness:

- If you have your own room at home, make it an enjoyable environment, conducive to entertaining yourself. Books, posters, pillows — plus a few favorite things unique to your tastes — make a room a haven from the outside world.
- Take a few private moments every day to check in with yourself. Try to schedule this time for a quiet period, when you can benefit most from solitude. And let your family and friends know that this is your time and that you'd appreciate their cooperation.
- Try to discipline yourself to spend some time working on constructive projects. If you are active when you're alone, you'll find that you are less likely to slip into the trap of loneliness. So close the door on the world for a while, and spend time reading, exercising, or planning for coming activities. If you have a special interest — art, sewing, ballet — work on it while alone.

Dr. Donohue

Need score card for Aerobic Game

Dear Dr. Donohue: I do so want to get into a good, structured aerobic exercise program, but am a bit confused. I do know my pulse rate, but how do I get going to improve it? How can I tell how I am improving? — H.H.

Everybody likes to keep score. In any exercise program your pulse is your scoreboard. You have heard me mention in the past how the chief objective of any fitness program is to increase your aerobic activity. All that means, so far as scorekeeping is concerned, is your pulse rate. How many times it beats every 60 seconds. As with golf, the lower pulse score, the better your condition.

So how do you keep the score? What's your landmark pulse rate? To find out you have to set your score clock. Doing the stepup test is a good way to score your aerobic progress. If you can walk up a flight of steps with relative ease, you can do it.

You do it at a time when you have not been running or exercising. You need a sturdy platform about eight inches high. The test involves stepping up and then down, completely, a precise number of times in a precise number of seconds. A complete step up involves four parts — two to get up on the platform, two to get down again. Have a friend nearby to time.

You may have to practice first. You want to step completely up and down twice every five seconds, 24 steps a minute. Do it for three full minutes. At the three-minute mark, your friend gives you the signal to stop. You then stand at rest for a full 30 seconds. At the 30-second mark, your friend counts your pulse rate (at the wrist, for example).

If you are well-trained the count in that 30-second might be around 60. That means a beat-per-minute rate of 120. If you are only moderately trained, it might be 70 (or 140 per minute); if you are really in bad shape it might register in the 80s, an indication you are not in such good shape. As you continue your exercising program, running or whatever, you can go back to the step test. If your program is working you should be paring points from your pulse score until you get to your personal par.

Remember, its 24 complete stepups a minute for three minutes, 30 seconds rest, then the 30-second pulse count. Dear Dr. Donohue: So many sports injuries involve the spine. I wonder if you could explain how one can train athletes to avoid back pain? I believe that it is the muscle structure that causes pain, not the spine itself. Is this a correct view? — K.H.

You are 100 percent correct.

A spine resembles a bamboo pole. The little bugles are like those you see in bamboo. Most sports backaches are not the fault of the spine, but of muscles. They have to support a heavy load and are vulnerable to twists, bumps and bruises of athletics. When they're hurt, they can develop a spasm — a giant charley horse. To avoid this, start a program of back-muscle strengthening.

Practice this exercise on the floor, but keep in mind that you eventually want to do it in the upright position.

The United States Achievement Academy has named Jackie Halfmann as a 1982 United States National Award winner in science.

The Academy recognizes less than 5 percent of all American junior high and high school students.

Miss Halfmann, who attends Garden City School, was nominated for this national award by Glenda Greenwood, a science teacher at the school. Ms. Halfmann will appear in the United States Achievement Official Yearbook, published nationally.

Ms. Halfmann, is the daughter of Wayne and Barbara Halfmann of Garden City. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. C.J. Lange, of Rowena and Mr. and Mrs. Mack Halfmann of Wall.

Too much sun causes many aging signs

The most dangerous part of the year for sun damage to your skin is not necessarily the hottest part of the year, according to a leading authority on the dangers of excessive sun exposure.

Dr. Myra Barker, vice president of research and development for Mary Kay Cosmetics, Inc., explains that sun exposure reaches a danger peak for ultraviolet B radiation (the type generally blamed for most skin damage) on June 21 in the Northern Hemisphere, "but that can be very misleading," she says.

"The dangers begin building up in April and May. You may think more about it in August when the temperatures top 100 degrees, but the danger of skin damage actually peaked two months earlier," according to Dr. Barker.

The dangers of excessive exposure to the sun are many. Some signs we generally consider part of the normal aging process are not really from aging as much as from being in the sun, whether the exposure was planned or not.

"Wrinkling is one form of skin damage," Dr. Barker says. "It is caused by permanent changes in the dermis, the underlying layer of skin."

"There's nothing that can be done to reverse it other than plastic surgery once it happens. Sun damage is largely cumulative and irreversible," she says.

The most serious consequence of sun damage, however, is skin cancer. Dr. Barker says an estimated 300,000 persons this year will be treated for skin cancer, and that about 5,000 of these persons will die. "Skin cancer is one of the most common forms of the disease in this country," she says, "and the sad part is that most of these cases are unnecessary."

"It is strictly a question of our personal habits and of the choices we make for ourselves in terms of sun exposure," she says.

Dr. Barker also cautions against thinking a tan is "healthy." "A tan only looks healthy," she says. "One of the most misunderstood conceptions about sunlight is that a tan is protective and once you've tanned, you no longer need a sunscreen."

"This is not true. Tanning will help prevent a sunburn, but tanning increases your risk of skin aging and skin cancer. It is not protective against skin aging. It is not protective against skin cancer."

Dr. Barker also offers these thoughts on related subjects:

—Sunburning: "A sunburn is not a simple phenomenon that is temporary, hurts a while and goes away. It is a permanent form of skin damage and there is evidence that severe sunburning early in life tends to increase the chance of skin cancer later."

—Freckling: "People who freckle are more likely to develop skin cancer than other people because freckling is a sign the skin cannot adequately pigment itself evenly. If you have children who freckle, please, please teach them to wear a sunscreen."

—Acne: "Many people believe acne is lessened by sun exposure. Sometimes this is so, but there are many people whose acne doesn't improve, it gets worse. No one knows exactly why this is so and it's difficult to predict what will happen to any one person."

—Spotting: "Those brown spots you see on the back of the hands or face that we used to call 'liver spots,' don't have anything at all to do with your liver. It has to do with sun exposure."

Fortunately, there are two things the average person can do to limit damage from the sun.

First, don't expose yourself to direct sunlight for extended periods of time. Once the damage is done, Dr. Barker says, there is no way to undo it.

Second, if you are going to be in the sun, even for short periods of time, use a sunscreen with a high SPF (Sun Protection Factor). The higher the SPF number, the greater the amount of ultraviolet radiation it will absorb before your skin is damaged. Use of a high SPF sunscreen is particularly important for persons who sunburn easily.

"And," Dr. Barker adds, "apply the sunscreen very liberally seven to 15 minutes before you go out, and reapply it often. Don't wait until you start to redden before putting it on. The protection you will receive takes awhile to begin working."

Pregnancy, smoking don't mix

A pregnant woman who smokes cigarettes not only endangers her health but that of her unborn baby as well. And the damage smoking may cause the child can be long-lasting, if not deadly, according to an article in the May Families magazine.

Potential complications facing a mother-to-be who smokes include:

- A greater likelihood of a miscarriage because of the premature separation of the placenta from the wall of the uterus;
- Spontaneous abortion;
- Bleeding during pregnancy;
- Severe hemorrhaging

during labor.

In addition, a study by the federal government of the smoking habits of 50,000 pregnant women revealed that:

- The prenatal mortality rate from birth defects is 43 percent higher in smokers than non-smokers.
- The prenatal death rate from Rh blood incompatibility between mother and child is 81 percent higher in women who smoke.

In studies of full-term babies of mothers who smoked during pregnancy, a common finding was that these children weighed about a half-pound less at birth than children of non-smoking mothers. The Families article reports other studies have found that smokers' babies remained smaller during their formative years.

Smoking also has been fingered as a potential factor in Sudden Infant Death Syndrome or "crib death." The danger apparently comes from the "sidestream" smoke — the smoke that wafts off the tip of the parents' cigarettes between puffs. A Welsh study found the risk of crib death for babies of mothers who smoke more than a pack a day to be five times greater than for babies of non-smokers.

Twins may not develop individually

Family and friends frequently exclaim over "the cute little twins in their identical frocks." But, says Donald Keith, "They can't be the 'cute little twins' forever. They should be prepared for this." Keith, co-founder and a director of the Center for the Study of Multiple Birth in Chicago, recognizes the intimate bond that twins share but stresses that unless twins are raised as individuals, they may become psychological cripples.

Because parents' attitudes tend to mold children's personalities to a great extent, twins who are thought of as a unit may think of themselves as halves of a whole and act like it. According to the May issue of Families magazine, this can lead to a lack of motivation on the child's part. Twin psychologists Judy Hagedorn and Janet Kiziar note that many twins "feel little incentive to work for what they attain. They are likely to form an expectation of high esteem merely by making themselves noticeable."

Other twins fail to develop any self-esteem when individuality is not stressed. Andrea Gray, a projects organizer for The Arts in New York City and a twin, recalls the struggle for separation: "I now feel that I am a distinct individual from my sister, but it took me to age 35 to finally arrive at that point."

To foster individuality, parents can refrain from comparing one child to another. Let your child follow his own inclination and encourage an interest that differs from the twin's. Try giving each child his own special time with you even if it's only in the car on the way to piano lessons. The special bond between twins won't be hurt by this. In fact, adds one twin, "You can enjoy being twins once you know how to be your own person."

Quick tip for instant coffee drinkers

Are you a morning "jet-setter," complete with instant everything — and bitter coffee?

Here's a prevent-bitter-coffee idea — for instant-coffee, microwave users only.

Add the hot water to the coffee granules, instead of adding coffee to the hot water, suggests Dr. Cass Ryan-Crowe, a food and nutrition specialist.

When you add coffee granules to boiling water, the rapid flavor release from the granules can cause bitter coffee, she explains.

Ryan-Crowe is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Why doesn't bitter coffee result from adding the hot water to the coffee?

We didn't ask her that.

Club wins awards

The Rosebud Garden Club meeting was held recently at the Dora Roberts Community Center. Edna Womack presided and reported Johnny Hatch, the speech contestant the club sponsored, had won second place in state competition.

The Modern Gardeners of Odessa will sponsor Flower Show School No. 2 to be held Nov. 23 in Odessa Senior Citizens Building.

The Rosebud Club received several awards during the District 1 meeting. Some of the awards were for yearbook, president's report, sponsoring speech and essay contestants, recruiting seven new members and sponsoring horticulture scholarship.

During the meeting, Mrs. Womack installed new officers. They are: Suncha Christensen, president; Jane Thomas, vice president; Leola Edwards, second vice president; Elnora Hart, secretary; Alpha Morrison, treasurer; and Edna Womack, parliamentarian.

Jane Thomas outlined programs for the year and reported that a tea will be held Sept. 15 in her home. Every member is urged to bring a prospective member at that time.

Suncha Christensen outlined her plans for the new club year beginning in September.

LOOKING HIGH AND LOW — Desk and Derrick Club officers and members are looking for new members and have a membership drive going in full force. Officers are (left to right) Venita Blessingame, president; Ann Drake, vice president; Annette Kestermeier, secretary; Sue Warren, treasurer; and Pat Highley immediate past president.

Club holds membership drive

Officers and members of the Desk and Derrick Club say they are looking high and low for new members to share in their fun and excitement in acquiring more knowledge about the oil and gas industry. The Desk and Derrick Club is an organization designed to educate its members in the field of gas and oil. The club holds meetings on the third Monday of every month either at noon or in the evening depending on the speaker or program being presented.

A Membership Drive Dinner will be held June 21 at 7 p.m. in the Cactus Room of Howard College. All prospective new members are urged to attend and learn what the club is about. Mary Anna Brimberry, Region V director, will be the featured speaker. She is employed by Perry Gas in Midland.

Until June 10th, the Big Spring club members will contact Big Spring's oil and gas related companies to invite their women employees to attend the dinner. Dear Abby

Hatred, bigotry mock fallen heroes

DEAR ABBY: May 31 is Memorial Day — the day for Americans to officially honor those heroes who have given their lives in defense of their country.

I would like to quote an excerpt from a sermon delivered by Roland B. Gittlesohn, the Jewish chaplain of the 5th Marine Division, when he dedicated a cemetery on the bloody, windswept island of Iwo Jima:

"Somewhere in this plot of ground, there may lie that man who could have discovered a cure for cancer. Under one of these Christian crosses, or beneath a Jewish Star of David, there may rest now, a man who was destined to be a great prophet. Now they lie here silently in this sacred soil, and we gather to consecrate this earth in their memory ...

"Here lie officers and men, black and white, rich and poor. ... Here are Protestants, Catholics and Jews. ... Here no man prefers another because of his faith, or despises him because of his color. Here there are no quotas of how many from each group are admitted or allowed. There is the highest and purest democracy.

"Any man among us, the living, who ... lifts his hand in hate against a brother, or thinks himself superior to those who happen to be in minority, makes of this ceremony and of the bloody sacrifice it commemorates, an empty, hollow mockery."

Abby, it's regrettable that Chaplain Gittlesohn's powerful words will probably go completely unheeded when — and if — they are read by those who need most to learn this lesson.

MARTIN M. SEGALL, HALLANDALE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Last night I got the most terrible insult from the man I love — my husband. While we were making love, I started to say something and he said, "Please don't talk to me now."

I tried to tell him that I wasn't going to start a conversation with him, I just felt like saying something sweet and loving pertaining to the situation, like, "Darling, you are wonderful and I love you very much." Then he said, "Just don't say anything. You are interfering with my fantasies."

Fantasies? Abby, why does he have to have fantasies when he has me right there?

DEAR HURT: Since a "fantasy" is "an imagined

Dads go camping with Brownies

Seventy Brownie Girl Scouts treated 69 dads to a Special Cookie Overnight, May 21-22, at Camp Boothe Oaks near Sweetwater. The Girl Scouts earned the privilege of attending the overnight by selling seven or more cases of cookies in the 1982 Cookie Sale of the West Texas Girl Scout Council.

Activities for the campout were weiner roasts, volleyball games, nature hikes, canoeing expeditions to Lake Trammel and archery for the dads while the Brownies laced coin purses. Two other Brownie/Dad specials are scheduled for June 4-5 and June 25-26.

Attending from Big Spring were 16 brownies and 16 dads. The Brownies were Brooke Arrick, Amy Beck, Kerri Cotton, Margo Glickman, Tarie Henson, Christy Miller, Jana Moss, Amber Richardson, Heidi Richardson, Leah Sedinger, Kristen Sevey, Mary Kathrum Terrazas, Jennifer Tillery, Callie Warren, Misty Wilson and Courtney Logan.

Sewing club makes cancer bandages

The Sew and Chatter Club made seven dozens cancer bandages at a meeting in the home of Mrs. Norma Murdock, May 26.

Ruth Appleton presided over the business meeting in the absence of the president. Members voted to bring supplies for the West Side Center to the next meeting and to finish a quilt.

A salad plate was served by the hostess, assisted by Verma McIlvain. The next meeting will be in the home of Della Nobles, June 9.

fulfillment of desire," your husband may be "hallucinating" about making love to Cleopatra, Mona Lisa or Betsy Ross. Don't feel insulted. Exercise your right to fantasize, too, if it will help.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to John J. Jones for nearly three years, and I am still being confused with John's ex-wife because she insists on using the name that now belongs to me. I am the one and only "Mrs. John J. Jones." To further complicate matters, my first name is Joanne and so is hers. And to make matters worse, we live in the same apartment building!

When I married John, his ex-wife became "Joanne Cohen (her maiden name) Jones." Or "Mrs. Joanne Jones" — not "Mrs. John J. Jones."

Our personal mail, bills and magazines are constantly being misdirected to each other. It's a mess!

I can't believe she doesn't know better, so please print this so I can mail it to her. Or do you think she knows better, but enjoys giving me a headache?

THE ONLY MRS. JOHN J. JONES

DEAR MRS. JONES: Since you are both inconvenienced by the confusion, it's highly unlikely that she "knows better." Here's your letter. Mail it to her. And I hope it doesn't wind up in your mailbox.

BEAUTY KNOW HOW FROM JOYCE

Question: What can I do to protect my skin from the sun this summer?

Answer: SUN FINISH is a water based foundation makeup which contains PABA as a sunscreen. This light liquid gives very sheer, but excellent coverage and is available in eight shades. The sunscreen agent, PABA, protects skin from the drying effects of the sun which can cause premature aging.

COLOR MIST WITH SUNSCREEN is a very light textured color enhancer which contains PABA. It can also be worn alone as the perfect alternative to make-up.

Moments from the Reception

Someone once said that weddings are for looking back on! Here at the Accent Shoppe, we think it's nice to plan on including something in your reception which will give you a memento to treasure in later years. Most girls keep the ornament that decorates the top of their wedding cake. You might also want a wedding candle to relight and enjoy on future anniversaries. You might buy — or someone may give you — engraved silver champagne glasses or an engraved cake knife. Can't you just imagine the gala celebration on your fiftieth anniversary?
