Israel, Syria declare cease-fire

By The Associated Press
Israel and Syria declared a cease-fire in their six-day war in Lebanon at 6 a.m. EDT today, with Israel claiming its forces had completed their mission with a drive to the gates of Beirut through the heart of Lebanon's Palestinian guerrilla strongholds.
Fighting on the ground and in the air continued to within minutes of the cease-fire that came at noon in the Middle East. Israeli planes bombed Beirut's Palestinian enclaves and reportedly shot down 18 more Syrian jets over Lebanon.

Syrian President Hafez Assad said in Damascus that he ordered his troops to stop firing with the understanding that Israel would withdraw the powerful ground forces it sent into Lebanon Sunday. The Israeli anouncement made no mention of pulling back the forces it ordered to drive Palestine Liberation Organization guerrilla formations beyond artillery range of settlements in northern Israel.

An official spokesman for PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, Mahmoud Labadi, said the truce was "under consideration." His brief announcement did not elaborate.

In Tel Aviv, Israeli military sources said it was not clear yet if Palestinian guerrillas were observing the cease-fire. The sources said that although Israel would not initiate any new offensives against guerrillas, its forces would return Palestinian fire.
The Israeli military sources said the Israeli army would not enter Beirut or interfere with operations at Beirut airport. They said Israeli troops had established an outpost at Khalde, four miles south of Beirut International Airport.

The military sources said the cease-fire left Israel in control of 1,100 square miles of Lebanon, more than one-fourth of its territory.

Six new homes OK'd by city

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer
The housing supply in Big Spring may be slowly beginning to meet the demand, according to the city's May building permits report and a Plainsman Homes Corp. of Midland representative.

Plainsman Homes received five new residence building permits from Big Spring during May. The houses are VHA- and FHA-approved homes and are built pre-sold subject to the buyer's loan approval, Plainsman marketing coordinator Jay Whitt said.

Plainsman has sold seven homes in Big Spring so far in 1982 and five currently are being built, according to Whitt. He also said the company will build an additional two or three homes each month during the remainder of this year.

"We're not looking at the economics of it," Whitt said. "We see ourselves down there (in Big Spring) as filling a void."
The five houses currently under construction are in the "late $40,000 to $50,000" range, Whitt said.

Plainsman is building three of the homes in the 3000 block of Duke. The other two are in the 3000 blocks of Connally and Hamilton.

In addition to the five Plainsman permits, the city issued one other permit to build a new home in May, this one to Joe Herrera to build at 211 N.E. Sixth.

The building report also shows Howard College obtained a building permit for a $633,082 occupational education building that will be situated behind the Horace Garrett Building.

Howard County Junior College District Board of Trustees approved a construction bid from D.D. Johnson of Big Spring last month to carry out the project.

The number of permits awarded in May is close to the number awarded in May 1981, although the total construction costs this May were significantly higher than the same period last year. Thirty-one permits were given last month and 33 in May 1981. Total construction costs for May 1982 were $1,111,345, while only $196,355 were reported in May 1981.

Permit fees collected totaled $862 for May, $120 more than May of last year.

The number of new service taps for 1982 also is significantly higher than last year with a total of 28 sewer taps and 46 water taps made by the city through May 1982 and a total of 15 sewer and 26 water taps in the first five months of 1981.

Ants in hospitals a threat, study says

By JAY JORDEN
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Patients in some Texas hospitals are exposed to a risk of disease from ants that have invaded surgery rooms and intensive care units, infesting burns and open wounds, researchers say.
Texas A&M University scientists, in a study released Thursday, said about a fourth of the 57 hospitals surveyed were infested with tiny Pharaoh ants.

Coahoma adds a councilman

The Coahoma City Council gained a new member last night when Roy Lee Metcalf was administered the oath of office.

In other action, the council decided to table a motion to change the payroll schedule for outside employees.

Mayor Joe Swinney had proposed to change the payroll from monthly to hourly.

"They have been found in all parts of the hospitals," said Harry Howell, entomology research associate. "There doesn't seem to be any area immune to infestations. In some hospitals, we found them in surgery rooms. At Brooke Army Medical Center, we found the whole hospital was infested."

Entomologists in the A&M Urban Integrated Pest Management Project said staphylococcus and other pathogenic organisms posing a "significant risk" to debilitated patients have been found on the ants.

Howell said 65 percent of hospitals within a triangle formed by Dallas, Houston and San Antonio were infested. Researchers have not determined why the ants are more prevalent in that area.

Other than Brooke in San Antonio, Howell said he could not identify other infested hospitals because the Texas Hospital Association, which cooperated in the study, requested anonymity for its members.

RIOTS GREET REAGAN — Smoke billows from a car overturned and set alight by stone-throwing youths in downtown Berlin Friday. The youths were protesting President Reagan's visit to the Berlin Wall.

Reagan visits Berlin Wall

BERLIN (AP) — President Reagan, winding up his 10-day European odyssey, visited the stark Berlin Wall today, challenged the Soviet Union to a new peace initiative, and scorned communist regimes for being "scared to death" of freedom.

Wearing a heavy bulletproof vest, Reagan stood at the white-painted line separating West Berlin from the communist East at Checkpoint Charlie for about five minutes, and said: "It's as ugly as the idea behind it."

Asked if the divided city would ever be united again, he replied, "Yes," and returned to an armored limousine ringed by more than a dozen Secret Service bodyguards.

Later, as the president delivered a televised speech in the safety of a tightly guarded palace, riot police battled hundreds of leftist-led protesters with tear gas and nightsticks four miles away.

From this divided city, where he spent 3½ hours under an extraordinary security guard, the president returned to Bonn briefly to bid farewell to his West German hosts before departing on Air Force One for the eight-hour flight back to Washington.

This ended Reagan's first visit to Europe as president, a 10,689-mile

Local jobless rate dips...

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer
In contrast to rising state and national unemployment percentages, Big Spring's jobless rate fell in April to 4.8 percent — a drop of seventh tenths since March, according to Gerald Damm, manager of the local Texas Employment Commission office.

Damm said the labor force in Big Spring totaled 15,770 for April with 15,008 employed and 762 actively seeking work.

The Big Spring jobless rate ranks below the state average of 5.9 percent and the national rate of 9.3 percent for April.

Damm said he was surprised the unemployment rate had dropped, considering the slowdown in the area's oil-related activities.

"I think we're going to see (local) unemployment rise for the rest of the year until there's some kind of turnaround in the economy," Damm added.

He said most of the people coming into the TEC office to inquire about work were hopeful about finding employment, but he said people realize the job market is tighter than in the past.

Damm said most of the people looking for work in oilfield-related jobs were not expecting much of a reversal in the area's slumping oilfield activity.

As for the type for job openings in Big Spring, Damm said there seems to be a shortage of middle-income jobs.

He said the local TEC office has listings for lower paying jobs, and for jobs in the technical field requiring education and skill, but middle-range salaried jobs are not plentiful in the area.

Here are the April unemployment figures for some selected cities: Abilene, 4.4 percent; Amarillo, 4.1 percent; Lubbock, 5.3 percent; Midland, 7.4 percent; Odessa, 5.8 percent; and San Angelo, 6.4 percent.

... rises in Texas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Unemployment in Texas reached a 1982 high in April, with 428,800 people out of work, says the Texas Employment Commission.

After reaching an all-time high for total employment in March, employment in Texas fell off by more than 52,000 workers the next month, the commission said Wednesday.

Texas' labor force in April totaled 6,822,700, down from 6,875,000 in March.

Although April's unemployment total is the highest this year, the commission said it is far below the all-time high of 516,700 unemployed in June 1981.

The unemployment rate for April was 5.9 percent, the same as January but up from 5.8 percent in February and March. The unemployment rate for April 1981 was only 4.3 percent.

"The increase (in unemployment) in March had been particularly encouraging since it came when the national employment level was not far from so well," the commission said. "With outdoor activity increasing, it had been hoped that employment would climb still higher in April."

"However, a number of layoffs continued to be reported across the state, some occurring in the oil fields and the industries which support oil field production. The recent glut of foreign oil forced layoffs in what had previously been a tremendous growth industry. Other industries have suffered as manufacturing employment also declined over the month," the commission said.

The national rate of unemployment was 9.2 percent in April.

In April only Amarillo, Austin, McAllen-Pharr-Edinburg and Odessa among Texas' major labor market areas showed declines in unemployment rates.

Austin had the lowest unemployment rate in the state in April, 3.8 percent, while Laredo took McAllen's place as the area with the highest rate of unemployment, 14.0 percent.

Wholesale prices steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices held steady in May as moderate gains in food prices were offset by the fifth straight monthly decline in energy costs, the government said today.

The report means inflation for the first five months of the year was a small 0.4 percent, calculated annually, and bolstered economists' predictions that, for all of 1982, the inflation rate would be well under the 7 percent of last year and the 11.8 percent of 1980.

The improved inflation picture has been attributed largely to the stubborn recession and the worldwide oil glut. The surplus of oil, though, has been diminishing in recent months, a

Witness watches as truck driver runs into blaze

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Percy Green looked toward the freeway just in time to see a chilling scene unfold — the grinding collision, the tanker truck overturn and its driver run burning from its cab.

Green said he'll never forget what he saw next. "After the crash, he jumped out of the truck and ran. He was just on fire a little bit then — but he turned and ran back," the witness said.

The truck driver, Mark Hawkins, burned to death and two passengers in a car were injured Thursday in the fiery collision at the intersection of Loop 610 and Market Street on the city's far east side.

Green said no one knew why the trucker, who had apparently reached safety, turned back.

"When he got to the truck it exploded a second and third time and he was dead then for sure," said Green, who lives in a house near the freeway. "It's something I won't forget. He could have made it, but he ran back to the truck."

Hawkins' body, engulfed in flames, could not be removed from the wreckage for more than an hour after the collision while firemen fought to bring the raging flames under control.

Several residents evacuated homes adjacent to the freeway, fearing further explosions.

Police blocked off the freeway to keep motorists away from the heat and smoke, snarling rush-hour traffic for hours.

It was the second gasoline tanker explosion on a Houston freeway this year. On March 29, a police officer was struck and killed on the same freeway by a gravel truck slid into a gasoline tanker and caused a similar explosion.

Witnesses told police that a small car swerved in front of the truck, owned by Bay Oil Co.

Hector Luna, 31, Pasadena, driver of the car, told police he may have had a tire blow out. He said his car started swaying out of control. Two passengers in Luna's car, Isidoro Soriano and Rogelio Flores, were hospitalized with injuries.

Luna's car careened off the freeway and crashed into a chain link fence.

Green said after the crash, one passenger of the car ran back and tried to assist Hawkins.

"We had to hold him back to keep him away from the truck," Green said. "We hollered at him to stop but he kept going. The others told us to grab him because he didn't speak English."

Green said, however, it was already too late to help the truck driver.

FATAL EXPLOSION — The twisted wreckage of a gasoline tanker truck lies burning along a Houston freeway during rush hour traffic. The driver of the truck owned by the Bay Oil Company was killed trying to run away from the wreckage and was caught by the flames. It crashed and exploded as the driver swerved to avoid a car in congested traffic.

U.S. plane shot down by Mexican authorities

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Mexican authorities said a private plane suspected of carrying contraband was shot down in Mexico by rifle fire after its pilot tried desperately to elude two chase planes with evasive maneuvers.

Customs Cmdr. Genaro Guerra-Dena of Monterrey, Mexico said the twin-engine Beechcraft 18 was downed Tuesday night about 100 miles south of the border on a beach near Las Vaquitas Island.

The pilot, identified as Dewie J. Sandlin, who listed his address as Brownsville, was arrested on the beach, but a passenger — possibly armed with an automatic weapon — escaped after the crash landing, Guerra told the Corpus Christi Caller.

Guerra said Sandlin suffered only a minor cut on his lower lip.

The aircraft was carrying contraband cargo of television sets, cassette recorders and other appliances valued at more than $40,000, customs officials said.

The United States does not restrict export of electrical appliances, but Mexico taxes such imports, which are worth up to twice their U.S. cost when smuggled across the border, Guerra said.

Agents confiscated a 9mm pistol after the plane was shot down, said Guerra. It was believed the escaped passenger was carrying a machine gun, and 223-caliber ammunition clips were found in the wreckage, he said.

After being requested by a hand-held sign to make radio contact with a Mexican air patrol plane that intercepted the Beechcraft, Guerra said the plane "changed course immediately and began evasive actions," said Guerra.

The pilot was an expert and almost escaped, dropping his plane from 7,500 feet to 300 feet while customs officials chased in a single-engine Cessna and twin-engine Piper Aztec, Guerra said.

"He flew up and down and from side to side ... anything to avoid being a target," said Guerra.

Guerra said the plane was finally shot down after rifle fire damaged one engine.

Sandlin, 28, was jailed in Reynosa and charged with transporting contraband and avoiding arrest, authorities said. They said Sandlin listed a Brownsville, Texas, post office box on the aircraft registration, but a family friend told the newspaper that Sandlin lives in Seattle.

Customs agents made the arrest after landing on the beach. Guerra said the customs planes were stuck in the mud but not severely damaged.

VAMC earns accreditation

The Big Spring Veterans Administration Medical Center recently received full accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, Big Spring VA officials announced.

Accreditation was given in three major areas: general hospital, psychiatric facilities and long-term care.

Accreditation means professional recognition for efforts to provide high-quality patient care, the officials said.

The decision to seek accreditation is voluntary, officials added.

Ants Reagan

The survey, which began last April, turned up ants in intravenous tubes and glucose solutions. Howell said three ants were recovered from an opening in a patient's neck.

"The most common thing like that was where you had a large open wound like a burn," Howell said. "The ants come to feed on the burn site and on the burn ointments."
Some hospital officials mailed samples of their ants to researchers for analysis.

"I would think that from some of the things we observe from the ants, that they have potentially more of a health hazard than cockroaches," Howell said.

"We perceive them to be a problem in all health institutions," he said.

But Texas Hospital Association spokesman Dr. Karl Shanner disputed the results of the ongoing study, and contended only inconclusive evidence was produced by the limited sample of hospitals.

development likely to lead to higher energy prices in the months ahead, analysts say.

Indeed, energy prices, which fell 5.2 percent in April, were off only 3.1 percent last month. Gasoline prices were off 5.9 percent, less than the 7.2 percent in April.

So far this year, energy prices altogether have fallen at an annual rate of 27.5 percent.

May's energy price drops balanced out an overall food price increase of 0.7 percent, less than half of the 1.6 percent of April and below the predictions of several private economists.

Today's report said that for the 12 months ending in May, wholesale prices overall rose 3 percent. Some economists are predicting that, for all of 1982, the rate of inflation will be as low as 4.5 percent.

The index had risen 0.1 percent in April after declining 0.1 percent in March and 0.3 percent in February, a calculation revised today from the 0.1 percent reported earlier. The measure last fell for two months running in January and February 1976.

Police Beat

Accident leads to assault charge

Granville Tipp Miller, 55, of 1612 E. 15th, was arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated, aggravated assault and unlawfully carrying a weapon at 11:47 p.m. yesterday, police said.

Officer Ray Meek was transported to Malone-Hogan Hospital with minor injuries after Miller allegedly dragged him approximately 60 feet with his car as Meek attempted to arrest him, Meek said in his offense report.

Miller was stopped by Meek at the scene of an automobile accident when Miller narrowly missed colliding with a parked police car, Meek said. When advised he was under arrest for DWI, Miller drove off in his car, dragging Meek, according to police reports of the incident.

Police officers later stopped Miller in the 600 block of East Third and allegedly found a loaded .357-caliber Magnum laying in the front seat of his car.

Meek had been directly traffic around an accident involving Paul Eugene Mervell of 104 W. Third Apartment 5 when he stopped Miller. Mervell lost control of the Honda motorcycle he was driving in the 1600 block of Third but suffered no serious injuries, according to police.

Police arrested Raymond M. Hattenbach, 32, of 2500 Carleton on aggravated assault and resisting arrest charges at 10:10 p.m. yesterday.

Police reports said three complaints were filed against Hattenbach alleging he threatened to kill his wife, Linda Dale Hattenbach, 35, and two other people.

Hattenbach resisted arrest and three officers had to "physically subdue and handcuff" him to make the arrest, according to police reports.

Jose Gonzales of North East Third told police that at 12:30 a.m. today a man known to him broke the passenger window of his Ford pickup truck at Denny's restaurant, 1710 E. Third.

An unidentified woman stole a six-pack of Budweiser from a 7-Eleven store at 18th and Gregg at 4:27 a.m. today and left the store on foot, police said.

Debbie Rutherford of P.O. Box 885 reported to police that between 12:30 p.m. and 1:15 p.m. yesterday someone stole her billfold while she was shopping at Gibson's Discount Center, 2303 Scurry.

Someone threw beer bottles through the stained glass window on the east side of the New Life Covenant Chapel, 1355 E. Eight, between 5:30 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. yesterday, causing extensive damage to the windows and interior of the chapel, police said.

John Raymond Frazier of San Francisco, Calif., told police that four or five men robbed him of $6.50 in cash and threatened him with a broken glass jug recently.

Police arrested a 16-year-old female for assault at 11:05 a.m. yesterday and released her to her mother.

A dump truck driven by Dayle Duane Matthy of 1509 Main and a Chevrolet Monte Carlo driven by Raul Ledesma of 1311 Mobile collided at the intersection of North Lamesa Highway and North West Ninth at 11:55 a.m. yesterday, police said. No major injuries were reported.

A Pontiac Ventura II driven by Victor Lee Blackburn of 201 E. 13th and a Ford Explorer truck driven by Denver Leon Pettitt of 2312 Roemer collided in the 200 block of Johnson at 7:45 a.m. yesterday, police said. Blackburn was ticketed for failure to control speed, police said. No injuries were reported.

Two persons arrested by city police on charges of hindering apprehension have been released on $5,000 bond each. Violet Lucinda Bass, 20, of Sterling City Route and Michael Lee Horsley, 23, of 806 Johnson were charged with hindering the arrest of a New Jersey man Wednesday. Bonds were set by Justice of the Peace Bobby West.

Lloyd Thomas Cunningham, 50, of Route 3 was released from custody on $1,000 bond. Chambers was arrested by city police on a charge of injury to a child. Bond was set by Howard County Judge Bill Tune.

Sheriff's deputies arrested Billy R. Kiser, 30, on a peace bond of $1,000. Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin. Kiser's address is listed as 509 E. 18th, according to sheriff's records.

Computer class taught Monday

The ever-increasing application of microcomputers in business, industry and personal use has created a need for training in the field of microcomputers. Recognizing this need, the Continuing Education department of Howard College has scheduled a non-credit short course designed to give the layperson a basic introduction to microcomputers and what they can do.

Led by Dr. Charles McCamant and Dr. Fred Homeyer, "Introduction to Microcomputers" will meet for one session only on Monday from 6:30 to 10 p.m. in room 100 of the science building on the Howard College campus.

Interested persons may register for the course in the continuing education office in the college's Horace Garrett Building from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Monday or may register at the class site at 6:15 p.m. Fee for the course (including hand-outs) is $30, payable at registration.

HC dental program deadline is extended

The deadline in the dental hygiene program at Howard College has been extended, according to Gwenth Gordon, director of the program. Twelve students will be admitted to the program. Six students reportedly have been accepted.

Upon admission to the program, the student attends two years (four semesters and four summer sessions) of courses designed to provide the educational and clinical training necessary for the practice of dental hygiene.

The two-year curriculum leads to an Associate in Applied Science degree which is conferred by Howard College. Students who are interested in pursuing a baccalaureate degree may do so by applying their work in dental hygiene towards a Bachelor of Science degree at a four-year institution offering baccalaureate programs.

The dental hygiene program at Howard College has been granted status as a candidate for accreditation by the Council on Dental Education of the American Dental Association.

Applicants are encouraged to complete their admission packets immediately. For further information about the program, contact Gwenth Gordon at 267-6311, extension 235, or Harvey Rothell, extension 284.

State Supreme Court justice Denton dies

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — State Supreme Court Associate Justice James G. Denton, who recently won a hard-fought campaign for renomination to a third term, died of a heart attack suffered while playing golf.

Denton, 64, first elected to the state high court in 1970, died Thursday. In the May 1 primary, he defeated State District Court Judge Bill Kilgartin of Houston for the Democratic nomination, and faced no Republican opposition in the general election.

Denton died at Southeast Baptist Hospital in San Antonio, according to Chief Justice Joe R. Greenhill.

"It sounded as if it were congestive heart failure. As I understand it, they tried to put in a pacemaker to get it (the heart) steady," Greenhill said. "He was unstable and didn't get as far as the cardiac unit because they couldn't get him stabilized." (Denton both served and was elected to the state supreme court.)

Coahoma postmaster retires after 26 years of service

House passes austere budget

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has finally passed a budget but it will be months before the nation knows whether this battle royal has been much ado about nothing — or for something.

Republicans, predictably, hailed passage of their plan as the start of a new era of lower deficits and lower interest rates. But Democrats were pessimistic as to whether the savings called for by the blueprint could be implemented — and whether passage of the budget would have any impact on interest rates.

And the two sides differed over what impact passage of the GOP-sponsored plan, with a projected deficit of $99.3 billion, would have on the upcoming congressional elections in November. The Republican plan contains cuts in social programs such as welfare, Medicaid, Medicare, food stamps and nutrition — and Democrats quickly served notice that in November's elections, they were going after moderate Republicans who voted for the cuts.

"We ... will keep them under a microscope," said an aide to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

Acceptance of the Republican plan, which had President Reagan's backing, came on a 219-206 vote after the House heeded Reagan's trans-Atlantic plea to "bury" a rival Democratic proposal. The House rejected the Democratic plan on a 225-202 vote and then, in the key vote, gave tentative approval to the Republican version by a 220-207 vote.

Reagan, in Bonn, Germany, hailed the victory in a congratulatory call to House Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois.

"We pulled it off," Michel told the president. House Republican Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi told Reagan "Sorry it took us so long to get it right," a reference to the House's rejection two weeks ago of eight rival budget plans and of the earlier collapse of talks between Reagan and congressional Democrats.

The victory in some ways was a repeat of last year's budget battle between Reagan and the Democratic-controlled House. Once again, Republicans won by picking up the support of conservative Democrats.

But unlike last year, Reagan played only a bit part in this drama. This was the Michel-Lott show — and Reagan, in Germany, made only a few phone calls — no more than half a dozen, Michel said.

Members on both sides said the need to do something was far more important a consideration than whether they supported either plan.

The House-passed budget now goes to a conference with the Senate, which earlier passed a blueprint calling for a $115.9 billion deficit. It will be up to those negotiators to fashion a compromise that can gain final congressional approval.

And then the real problems start. This battle was over a blueprint that sets spending targets. House and Senate committees must make the actual cuts.

TELLING THE PRESIDENT — House Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois speaks to President Reagan in Germany via telephone after the House passed, by a vote of 219 to 206, a revised Republican budget for the 1983 fiscal year. Michel is flanked by Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi, left, the House minority whip, and Rep. Delbert Latta of Ohio, who is the ranking minority member of the banking committee.

Approval pleases Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he's "happy" that the House has passed a budget plan he endorses, but House Republicans and Democrats are disagreeing about the future impact of the spending blueprint.

Asked in Germany how he felt about the 219-206 budget vote Thursday, the president said, "You bet I'm happy. Now we're on the way back."

That echoed the sentiments expressed by Republicans, who said passage of their plan and rejection of a Democratic proposal was the start of a new era of lower budget deficits and reduced interest rates.

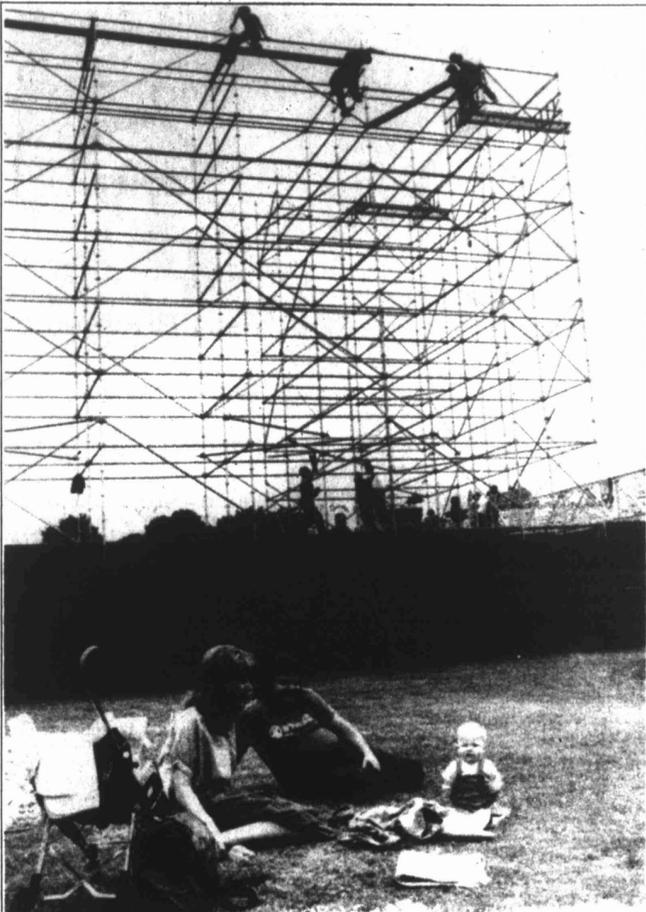

Democrats, however, were pessimistic whether the savings contained in the blueprint could be implemented and whether passage of the budget would have any effect on interest rates.

The two sides also differed about what impact the GOP-sponsored plan, with a projected deficit of $99.3 billion, would have on the upcoming congressional elections in November.

In other congressional business Thursday:

—The Senate, on an 81-4 vote, sent to Reagan's desk an administration-backed bill making it a crime for federal employees, journalists and others to disclose the names of U.S. covert agents serving abroad, even if the information is obtained from public sources.

BEATING THE RUSH — Gerrie Aizer-Keck, left, of Miami and her 7-month-old son Ariel relax on the grass of Central Park's Great Lawn as workers erect the sound and light towers for Saturday's anti-nuclear concert. The rock concert will be the culmination of a disarmament march and rally that is expected to be the largest demonstration in the city's history, attracting over half-a-million participants. The Aizer-Kecks are joined by Greg Dunn, a friend from Baltimore.

500,000 expected at New York rally

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The soul of Saturday's nuclear disarmament rally is Central Park's Great Lawn, but its heart beats nearly 70 blocks away, in a scruffy office building where organizers order portable toilets and beg for parking spaces.

The beat started faintly, in January, 21 floors above Union Square. There, key organizers circled by homemade calendars with June 12 circled in red crayon, turned their attention to details rather than issues.

On Saturday, thousands of demonstrators from every state and a dozen foreign countries will gather on the island of Manhattan. The organizers, despite their passion for the cause, won't join the protest; they'll direct it.

There are 18 paid staff members on the rally committee. A dozen others are on loan from groups supporting the rally, and dozens of others volunteered to stuff envelopes and take calls from groups planning the pilgrimage.

Some rallies are spontaneous; there are 1,000 a year in Washington, D.C., alone. But the biggest rallies — like the one planned for Saturday — don't just happen. They are orchestrated.

When you have 500,000 demonstrators, as police predict, you need certain things, among them: money, posters, promotion, security. Because rallies are people, you also need food, water and trash bags.

Chad Dobson, a child psychologist who recently ran a campaign to stop the MX missile, is in charge of keeping the $500,000 rally out of debt. "I'm not doing things we can't pay for," he says.

Leslie Cagan, full-time activist and demonstration coordinator, is in charge of logistics. "I do rallies," she says. She has walked around Central Park counting fire hydrants for drinking water and scouted parking spaces from Jersey City to the Bronx.

Deni Frand is in charge of entertainment, stages and sound systems. Last week, she was trying to decide how to build a stage in front of the United Nations without cutting down too many of the city's trees.

They have ordered 200 portable toilets and 2,500 trash bags. They arranged for Western Union to supply 500,000 telegrams addressed to President Reagan, urging him to propose an immediate bilateral nuclear weapons freeze.

They signed up the help — 5,000 parade marshals (called "peacekeepers"), 500 security guards, 300 money collectors, 275 bus greeters, 150 lawyers, 30 messengers, 30 doctors and nurses — all of them volunteers. They taught peacekeepers how to handle hecklers, purse-snatchers and impatient demonstrators.

They plotted the parade route through midtown Manhattan, secured the permits and promised the Parks Department they wouldn't hurt the grass. They discouraged earnest politicians eyeing Saturday's microphone while encouraging celebrities to make an appearance for the cause.

They're paid to worry about details. For six months, they've struggled with hundreds of questions that add up to one big question: What will happen when several hundred thousand people from all over the world get together outside the United Nations, walk through city streets to Central Park and stand around all day?

"I mean," says Miss Cagan, "what does it mean to bring 1,500 full buses to New York City?"

A few answers: 25 parking areas, lists of 24 budget hotels and volunteers with pockets full of subway tokens to meet the buses and give directions.

At June 12 Rally Committee headquarters, a map on one wall is punctured with dozens of pins to mark cities planning treks to the rally. An unopened bottle of champagne sits on the floor, waiting for a reason to celebrate.

Kirkpatrick 'won't quit' as U.S. ambassador to U.N.

By O.C. DOELLING
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick acknowledges her amateur standing as a diplomat and makes no secret of her yearning to return to the less abrasive life on a university campus.

But she insists she will not quit her post as America's U.N. representative despite her much publicized feuds with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and her opinion that the United Nations has been commandeered by Third World nations.

President Reagan, who appointed the relatively obscure Georgetown University political science professor, has let it be known through a spokesman that he retains confidence in her and has no plans to fire her despite her strong policy differences with Haig.

There have been repeated rumors in recent months that Mrs. Kirkpatrick was on her way out because of policy and personality clashes with Haig, and the frustrations of representing a superpower in a world organization where a vocal Third World bloc holds the voting majority.

The latest flurry of rumors was prompted by a recent speech before the Heritage Foundation in which she complained of "our unhappy fall from influence to impotence" at the United Nations because "we simply have behaved like a bunch of amateurs."

She hastened to explain afterwards that she was not criticizing the Reagan administration's foreign policy, but was talking about U.S. performance at the United Nations in the last two decades and "about people like me."

Charles Yost, who served under President Nixon in 1969-71, was the only foreign service officer among the 16 U.S. representatives to the United Nations.

Her public self-criticism followed a deeply embarrassing American flip-flop in a Security Council vote last week on a resolution calling for a cease-fire in the Falkland Islands.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick blamed the mixup on a communications snafu. But Haig, who was at the Versailles summit of industrialized nations with President Reagan, created the impression that he and Mrs. Kirkpatrick were not on speaking terms.

A week earlier, Mrs. Kirkpatrick reportedly had an angry 45-minute telephone exchange with Haig during which she accused him of tilting U.S. policy too much toward Britain in the Falklands conflict and of losing sight of long-term American interests in Latin America.

However, Mrs. Kirkpatrick maintains that she continues to work with Haig, to whom she reports even though both have cabinet-rank.

Man given life sentence

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — A state district court judge sentenced a 33-year-old man to life in prison following his conviction of strangling a young girl.

Jodie Mack Oliver, who had lived in the victim's home as a boarder until a few weeks before the slaying, was given the maximum sentence Thursday by state Judge Denizil Bevers.

Jurors deliberated for one hour and 45 minutes Wednesday before convicting Oliver of murder in the June 22 death of Dawn Michelle Stanley, 10, whose body was found June 24 wrapped in a quilt in a crawl space beneath her family's home.

Naked man killed in gun battle
TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — A man who was shot to death following a gun battle with police was scheduled to see a psychiatrist the day he was killed, according to his girlfriend.
Richard Cobb, 28, was killed Thursday as he ran naked in his yard, firing shots at a pickup truck. Cobb shot and wounded officer Pat McElhenny, who was listed in stable condition following surgery on a shoulder wound, officials said.
Cobb's girlfriend, Nancy Gargan, said her boyfriend had agreed to visit a local mental health clinic the day of the shooting. Though she said she was "surprised" by the shooting, Gargan told officials Cobb had been behaving irrationally the week before the incident.
Officers said the pickup truck, which belonged to the man's girlfriend, was heavily damaged by gunfire.

A FATHER'S LOVE
The storm was raging, lightning and thunder were fighting for attention. The little boy sat up in his bed and called for his Daddy. The father came to the child's room and set at the edge of the bed. As he tried to assure his son to be brave he said, "Don't be afraid, Jesus is everywhere, even here in your room", the boy replied, "Yeah, but right now I want someone with skin on." The father stated that his son's reply touched his heart in such a special way, he got on his knees and prayed that more than anything in the world that is what he wants to be to his family — God's love with skin on.

Attractive fragrance

The science writer Lowell Ponte has warned of a scientific development whose potential for harm makes it sound rather more like science fiction than science. He seems to be dead serious about it.

In a "Reader's Digest" article Ponte tells of English research on how androsterone, one of the so-called "signal scents" known as pheromones, affects human beings. In tests at the University of Birmingham, he writes, people experienced a "change in social attitudes, becoming happier and more friendly," when they inhaled vaporized androsterone.

This may sound innocuous, even quite pleasant. But as the writer points out, possible uses of the substance might not be benign; they might be manipulative, a la George Orwell's "1984". For "it now seems," he tells us, "that androsterone ... acts as a social pheromone — a follow-the-leader odor command — in humans."

At least in theory, and perhaps in practice, androsterone might be used in volatile form to influence judgement — sent through air-conditioning ducts as a political gathering, say, to make the audience feel more kindly toward a candidate. The thought leads Lowell Ponte to propose that Congress make it illegal to use such substances in marketing products, "especially where those products are politicians." It is not something to act on in haste — but a thing to consider, all the same.

Around the Rim

Pickup paranoia

It's not paranoia when they really ARE out to get you.

"They," as used above, doesn't mean people — instead, a certain 1979 Chevrolet pickup is determined to accomplish what five years of college, three newspapers, a succession of weird college roommates and even weirder relatives have failed to do.

IT'S GOING TO DRIVE ME NUTS. Growing up on a farm, you learn to live with little quirks the usually-decrepit farm vehicles have.

One truck had the nasty habit of jumping out of gear — not really such a bad happening, except that (a) it always happened at the worst possible moments (such as when you were rounding a corner, the truck loaded to the hilt, and bearing down rapidly upon a little old lady and her dog) and (b) the consequences were fearful — the seating position was such that when the truck jumped out of gear, the gearshift would crash into your thigh and cause great pain.

Then there was the truck which had no seat — you rested your posterior on a crate, which refused to stay still, resulting in frantic contortions and frequent attempts to drive from the passenger side.

Anyway, as I say, I'm used to certain little quirks, but I'm in no way prepared to deal with the volume I'm getting from this insidious vehicle.

UNLIKE THE CAR belonging to fellow Herald staffer Richard Horn (which chose to turn into a tricycle at an inopportune time — a wheel fell off), my pickup is determined to annoy me into insanity.

I can live with the compulsion it seems to feel to veer off to the right while driving down the road. After all, it keeps me awake while I'm on the road. If you don't stay alert, you'll end up in the middle of someone's cotton field.

I can live with no air conditioner. At the first sign of trouble, I took it to a mechanic, who quoted me some unholy price for the necessary repairs. Like I said, I can live with no air conditioner. The windows roll down just fine, thank you.

I can live with the little leaks that spring up (no pun intended) from time to time in the various radiator hoses. "Spring up" isn't quite accurate — lately it seems that every time I open the hood, there's a miniature Old Faithful waiting for me. However, hoses are relatively cheap and easy to fix.

I can live with the windshield wipers that have a mind of their own. Driving down the road on a beautiful, sunny day (it hasn't rained in weeks, and I haven't touched the wiper switch in weeks), the wipers decide to work of their own volition. One swipe across the windshield, and that's it until next performance. Embarrassing.

AS I SAID, I can live with these little peculiarities. Monday, however, the tape player committed an unpardonable sin. Right in the middle of Jerry Jeff Walker's rendition of "L.A. Freeway," the tape player got hungry.

"If I can just get off that L.A. freeway without ... murgle ... barfle ... snarf," and utter silence. Realizing something was definitely wrong (quick thinking, huh?), I snatched the tape from the player.

Too late. What seemed to be yards and yards of recording tape spilled out of the devious machine.

At any rate, you'll know me if you see me motoring down the street. I'll be the one in a black pickup that veers to the right, steam fogging from underneath the hood, windshield wipers wiping on a sunny day, windows open, and recording tape trailing behind.

Oh, yeah, one more thing — I'll be even easier to recognize. I'll be trying to drive while wearing a strait jacket.

Leadership in shreds

The Marx Brothers used to do a number on the complexity of legal language. They began by reading a clause pertaining to the party of the first part, deciding it was useless, and tearing it from the document. They then did the same with clauses pertaining to the parties of the second part, and the third part, and the fourth part, and so on. In the end, the contract was, literally, in shreds.

It has been like that with the 1983 budget in the House of Representatives. Only it isn't funny. On the contrary, there has been taking place, on both sides of the House, a devolution of authority that reflects a general "falling apart" of national leadership.

The party of the first part, on the Democratic side of the House, is Speaker Tip O'Neill. Normally the speaker manages the House with the support of the main committee chairmen. Usually a Democratic speaker builds a Democratic majority by unifying the liberals of the Northern cities with the moderates of the West and the Southern conservatives, or Boll Weevils.

The party of the first part, on the Republican side of the House, is Speaker Tip O'Neill. Normally the speaker manages the House with the support of the main committee chairmen. Usually a Democratic speaker builds a Democratic majority by unifying the liberals of the Northern cities with the moderates of the West and the Southern conservatives, or Boll Weevils.

But new procedures make it possible for the speaker and his friends to be upstaged by the chairman of the Budget Committee. Chairman James Jones of Oklahoma has made the most of that opportunity. He has been trying, with great persistence and skill, to organize his own Democratic coalition for the 1983 budget.

The younger members of the Budget Committee — known, after Leon Panetta of California, as Panetta's Vendetta — resent the emergence of Jones. They put together a budget that appealed to moderate Democrats, and liberal Republicans, who are known as Gypsy Moths.

AS A CHECK on Jones, O'Neill and the other committee chairmen lent support to Panetta's Vendetta.

Democratic liberals, furious at the speaker's move toward the Gypsy Moth Republicans, then blew the whistle on O'Neill. They put across an amendment, sponsored by Mary Rose Oakar of Cleveland, that cut defense spending in favor of Medicare in all versions of the budget. That disrupted possibilities for a bipartisan majority, and the liberals drove the point home further by helping to defeat three different budget proposals supported by all Democratic leaders. Thus the extreme liberals took over the Democratic Party and made it a minority in the House.

On the Republican side of the aisle, the party of the first part is Minority Leader Robert Michel. The head of the Republican minority normally tries to build a majority by luring over the conservative Boll Weevils from the Democratic side. For the budget this year, Michel had just such a combination — the Gramm-Latta version of the budget sponsored by a Texas Democrat, Phil Gramm, and an Ohio Republican, Del Latta.

But Republicans on the extreme right wing had a project which put to shame some of the social spending implicit in Gramm-Latta. It was a proposal for a constitutional amendment mandating a balanced budget, sponsored by John Rousselot, a former member of the John Birch Society from a Los Angeles suburb. The Republican Gypsy Moths scorned the amendment as, in the words of

Barber Conable of New York, "a rain dance that makes the tribe feel good without affecting the weather."

To hold his Gypsy Moths, Michel joined them in voting against the Rousselot amendment, which went down. The extreme conservatives, in revenge, formed a negative bloc of some 60 congressmen who became known as the Yellow Jackets. They joined liberal Democrats in defeating Gramm-Latta. Thus the right wing took over the Republican Party in the House.

BEHIND THIS unraveling of leadership in the Congress lies an absence of consensus in the country. Normally national opinion aligns itself around the budget represented by the president. But Ronald Reagan sent up a budget that has no chance of passage. Because of huge deficits, it was immediately rejected by both Republicans and Democrats in both houses. Since then, Reagan has tended to stay outside the process. Indeed, after the defeat of all four budget proposals, he called the budget procedure a "Mickey Mouse arrangement."

Further votes in the House are due next week. My guess is that the Democrats, rather than appear obstructionist, will let the Republicans have their way, the better to saddle them with unambiguous responsibility for the state of the economy. Even then, there will be additional fights in conference on different House and Senate versions of the budget.

So the unraveling will drag on and on and on. With no outcome certain, economic prospects decline, and the administration becomes weaker and weaker. It is already a question whether anything accomplished abroad can begin to compensate for the steady decline of prestige diminishing all national leaders, not excluding Ronald Reagan.

Down memory lane

PARIS — When someone returns to Paris after many years, he has to put up with ghosts from his past. For me these ghosts consisted of the American tourists, who at one time seemed to cover the French capital as far as the eye could see. As I walked along the streets of the city of light this week, I became misty-eyed when I thought back on the days in the '50s when I worked on the "Paris Trib" (now called the International Herald Tribune).

There was a lady tourist who was name-dropping about all the places she had been to — Australia, Tahiti, Hong Kong, India, Brazil. "My," I said to her, "you've traveled a lot."

"Yes," she said happily. "I was extremely lucky. My husband died when I was very young."

And then there was the lady at Fouquet's sidewalk cafe who said to me, "I'm going to Rome. Is the Pope worth seeing?"

On the Rue de Rivoli I recalled some 30 years ago standing next to an American who muttered to me, "Those no-good French S.O.B.'s."

"What happened?" I asked him. And he replied, "Why should I tell you?"

I saw the ghosts of American tourists everywhere.

There was one friend of mine, a Hollywood writer named Don McGuire, and we used to walk the streets of Paris together, killing time while his wife was shopping. He was bored and always looking for mischief. Once we were at the Arc de Triomphe and he saw a tourist trying to take a picture of the Arc.

He went up to the American and, in an authoritative voice, said, "May I see your passport, please." The tourist immediately handed him his passport.

McGuire inspected it and then said sternly, "Do you have permission to take a photograph of a French military installation?"

The tourist blustered, "I didn't know the Arc de Triomphe was a French military installation." McGuire handed the tourist back his passport and said, "Well, ask the next time, dummy."

Tourists who came over to Paris always wanted to know if the French disliked Americans. I discovered when I first arrived in Paris that they didn't like each other, so there was no reason why they should like us.

The worst example of the Frenchman's inhumanity to another Frenchman took place one day at the Place de la Concorde when a French driver in a large Buick tapped the bumper of a Frenchman in a tiny Renault. The Renault owner jumped out and started screaming at what had happened to his car. The Buick owner listened for several minutes to the harangue, then got back in his car, put it into gear and rammed it into the Renault, turning it into an accordion.

The Buick driver then got out and said to the Renault owner, "Now you have something to yell about."

One more trip down memory lane. In the '50s, someone presented the American Cathedral on the Avenue George V with a new set of church bells. The church was so thrilled with the bells they played them every hour. The problem was I lived across the street and got to hate the bells. So I wrote a letter to the Paris Trib mailbag which said, "Dear Sir, My husband works on the metro all night long, and he can't sleep because the American Cathedral keeps ringing its bells. What right do Americans have keeping French citizens awake?" I signed it "Disgusted Parisian Housewife."

This brought on an onslaught of anti-American mail, all sympathizing with "the sleepless French metro worker."

It happened at this time that the publisher of the Paris Trib was also on the board of the American Cathedral, and he was getting a great deal of slack from his parishioners. He called in one of the editors and said, "Don't we have any letters for the bells?"

The editor came into the city room and shouted, "We need a letter for the bells."

"You've got it," I said, and sat down at my typewriter and wrote: "Dear Sir, I don't see what all the fuss is about the American Cathedral bells. I can't hear them." And I signed it, "Giulio Ascerelli, Rome, Italy."

That was the last letter we were allowed to print on the subject, but I'm happy to report the Cathedral stopped ringing its bells on the hour.

So, if you're going to Paris, ask not for whom the bells don't toll. They don't toll because of a "Disgusted Parisian Housewife."

Billy Graham

Jesus a ghost?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: What kind of a body did Jesus have when he rose again from the dead? How was it different from his physical body? — J.S.

DEAR J.S.: The Bible does not give a full description of Jesus after the resurrection, although it clearly teaches that he was raised from the dead and continued to have a physical body. In other words, he did not just become some type of phantom or ghost or spirit, but he truly had a physical body. This is one reason he could challenge the doubting disciple, Thomas. "Put your finger here; see my hands. Reach out your hand and put it into my side" (John 20:27).

It is clear, however, that the body of Jesus after the resurrection was different in nature from the body he had before that time. It was what Paul termed a "spiritual body" (I Corinthians 15:44). He was not limited by the ordinary restrictions of time and space. He could, for instance, pass through a wall into a closed room (see John 20:19). More important, it was a body which would never again be touched by death and pain. It seems like it was different in appearance, since Jesus' disciples did not always recognize him immediately, as for example, when he walked with two of them on the road to Emmaus (see Luke 24:13-35).

For us, the resurrection of Jesus reminds us that some day all who know Christ will be given new bodies also, and we will live eternally with him in heaven. I am sure we cannot even begin to imagine the wonder of that. "Listen, I tell you a mystery: We will not all sleep, but we will all be changed — in a flash, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, the dead will be raised imperishable, and we will be changed" (I Corinthians 15:51-52).

Threat to disabled retirees

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration seems determined to save money at the expense of the poor and the afflicted. Now, the people being kicked around are the most vulnerable members of our society: the four million elderly, blind or otherwise disabled Americans who get up to $264 a month in supplemental benefits from the Social Security Administration.

In its messianic zeal to cut costs by getting rid of cheaters, Social Security is resorting to the rankiest kind of blackmail: Either let us pry into your income tax records, or we'll cut off your benefit checks.

Not only that, the agency plans to extend its Big Brother snooping to the tax returns of spouses, parents and other household members of those who receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits.

THE FIRST INKLING SSI recipients got of this outrageous invasion of their privacy came within the past few weeks. Along with their government checks, they received a form entitled "Request for Your Consent for Social Security to Get Your Tax Information."

"Please read, sign and date this form and return it ... within 10 days," the request read. The bottom half of the one-page notification was a legal authorization to the Internal Revenue Service to disclose to SSA "all tax information from any information return relating to my receipt of income other than wages for all tax years beginning Jan. 1, 1982."

The notice states disarmingly, "You have a choice about signing the form." But then it adds an ominously vague note: "If you do not sign the form, your Supplemental Security Income checks may be affected."

Actually, "stopped," not "affected," would have been the exact word to use. An internal Social Security Administration document makes this perfectly clear. Intended to instruct agency personnel in answering questions from confused SSI beneficiaries, it has this stark Q-and-A exchange:

"Q. What will happen to my benefits if I don't sign the consent form?"
"A. If you don't return the signed consent form your benefits will be stopped."

Deputy SSA Commissioner Paul Simmons confirmed to my associate Lucette Lagando that there is, indeed, little "choice" involved, no matter what the consent notification states. Either a beneficiary signs away the right to keep the tax returns confidential or the checks will stop coming.

Similar consent forms were sent out to recipients' family members — presumably entailing the same threat in case of non-compliance.

John Shattuck, Washington director of the American Civil Liberties Union, said his organization believes the Social Security Administration is on shaky legal ground, and plans to challenge the government in court. "What this amounts to is a coercion program, trying to get people to provide information under threat," he said. In addition, the Capital Legal Foundation, a Washington-based public-interest law firm, plans to seek an injunction against the agency to prevent its threatened action against anyone who refuses to sign the consent form.

On Capitol Hill, complaints have been pouring in from disabled and elderly constituents. One member of Congress, Rep. Steve Solarz, D-N.Y., has received so many complaints from his Brooklyn district that he intends to introduce legislation to block the SSA's threats.

Simmons and other Social Security officials defend the tax-return snooping on both legal and moral grounds. They say that only those with something to hide will refuse to give the agency permission to rummage through their tax records.

Acting on this theory, I asked agency officials to let me see their tax returns.

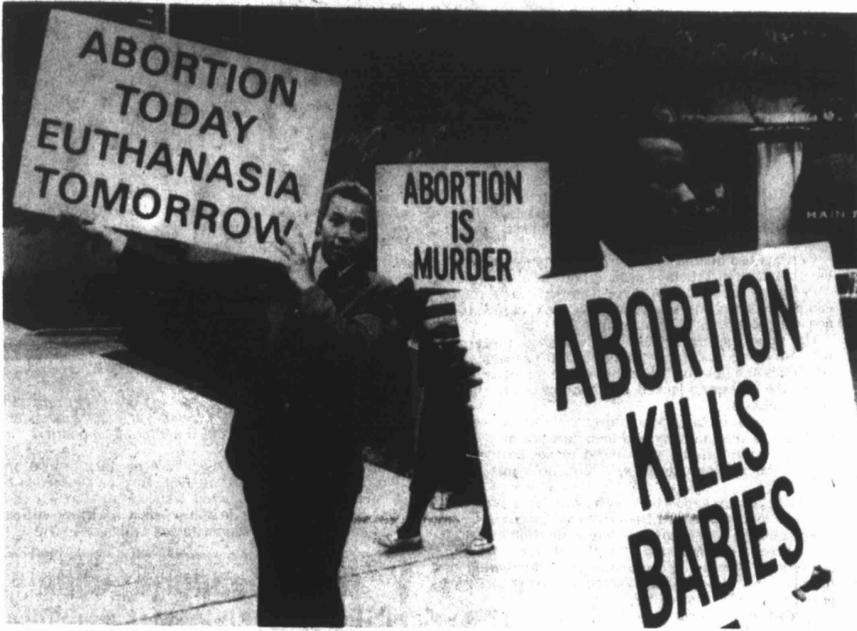

Either they have something to hide, or they feel that their tax returns are nobody else's business. Exactly.

ABORTION PROTESTORS — Anti-abortion protesters picket Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago Wednesday to protest the abortion of a five-month pregnancy of an 11-year-old Chicago girl. The girl's condition has ignited a

Physicist claims nuclear energy is best power source

By LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

RICHARDSON, Texas (AP) — The "father of the hydrogen bomb" says nuclear energy is the best source of electric power and anti-nuclear activists are "murderers."

Edward Teller, 74, a physicist at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and the Hoover Institute in Palo Alto, Calif., is an unabashed exponent of nuclear energy, both in weapons and power plants.

Speaking here Wednesday on the "The Dangers of the Radiation Scare," Teller told a symposium composed mainly of engineers and oil and utility company executives that fears of radiation are exaggerated.

"I am not going to make a peace treaty with the anti-nukes because they are murderers," Teller said. "They have brought about the radiation scare, one of the most worrisome phenomena today."

He said irrational fear of radiation keeps "hundreds of thousands if not millions" of people from necessary medical X-rays or radiation treatments.

"I think our greatest hazard is stupidity, and this stupidity is caused at least 50 percent by the news media," he said.

Teller said that nuclear energy is the best electric power source available, but that expensive licensing procedures and high interest rates keep nuclear reactors from being cost-effective.

The conference — the second Texas Symposium on Energy held at the University of Texas at Dallas — was sponsored by UT-Dallas, Texas Power & Light Co., Dallas Power & Light Co., Lone Star Gas Co., and Energy &

Man's Environment, an education group based in Utah. DP&L and TP&L are among the owners of the controversial Comanche Peak nuclear power plant under construction near Glen Rose. Licensing hearings on the plant opened in Fort Worth Monday.

Teller said that all life is exposed to radiation from elements such as uranium that occur naturally in the soil, and that even if radiation causes genetic mutations, these are not necessarily bad.

Excavating uranium for use in power plants or weapons lessens the chance that people will be exposed to it, he said.

"So if you want to save people from radiation, you better build reactors," Teller said.

Teller said it has not been conclusively proved that radiation causes cancer, adding that "it is entirely impossible to verify deaths."

Use of nuclear power might increase the amount of radiation exposure of future generations, but Teller said he has "faith" that doctors will be able to cure the disease, so people will face only "the minor risk of going to the doctor to have it taken care of."

Teller said a nuclear war would not necessarily end life on Earth.

"The dreaded fallout even in an all-out war would have negligible effect in neutral countries," Teller said. "This not does mean nobody will be hurt, but it will be easy to get away from it."

Teller said he opposes a freeze on nuclear weapons production because the bombs are "the best defense, and the best way to prevent war is a strong defense."

U.S. economy is recovering: True or false?

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today's quiz: Based on the government's economic indicators, is the national economy "just sitting in the mud" or is it "poised for recovery"?

And is that recovery "imminent" or would it still be "premature to draw any firm conclusions about the timing of a business upturn"?

The trouble is that a pretty good case can be made for any or all of those four declarations offered by President Reagan and private and government economists in the past few weeks.

The most recent government figures show unemployment at the highest level in 40 years, factories turning out even fewer goods than earlier in the recession, builders putting up and selling fewer houses and customers ordering fewer products and materials for future delivery.

True, some retailers say their sales are up a bit. But most recent reports on the economy seem to fit the sitting-in-the-mud description given by David Cross, a senior economist with Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

And the weakness in orders for the future is a big reason why Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige says recovery celebrations are still premature.

But on the other hand, only the most pessimistic analysts say things are likely to keep getting worse through the fall and summer.

The president's own statement, in Paris last week, that "we believe economic recovery is imminent," is a bit more cheerful than many economists would offer. But some say the upturn, though hard to detect, is already under way.

And few would disagree very strongly with the view of Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan that "we are not there yet but we are poised for recovery."

Tying all those statements together are two things: one more economic indicator — the unglamorous category of business inventories — coupled with the approach of the big tax-rate cut scheduled for July 1.

OSHA to test oil rig safety measures

By WILLIAM GARLAND
States News Service

WASHINGTON — The federal government will conduct a 90-day experiment on oil and gas drilling rigs in the Southwest to find out if new job safety measures could help prevent injuries on the platforms.

Twelve drilling companies, most of them in Texas, have volunteered to remove a covering designed to protect employees from drilling equipment on the platforms while the new procedures are tested.

The equipment, which helps guide drilling pipe into the ground, has caused numerous injuries on drilling platforms, according to the Federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration, which requires that the metal shield be installed.

Companies involved with oil and gas drilling have had more than twice the number of lost work days due to injuries than other industries, according to OSHA statistics.

"For years, the industry has complained of difficulties in complying with the federal regulations because of the unique nature of their equipment and operations," said Thorne G. Auchter, assistant secretary of labor for OSHA.

BECAUSE OF these complaints, OSHA is sponsoring the 90-day experiment through Sept. 7. During that time alternating safety techniques will be tested on rigs with a certain type of "Kelly bushing" — a stand of pipes that surrounds the drill's housing — that does not have projections that could snag clothing or cables.

The alternative measures will include shortening the "washdown" hoses that are used on the rigs, keeping an employee of the drilling company on the rig at all times to control the equipment, keeping all loose gear off the platform and keeping a chain used in the drilling process away from the Kelly bushing apparatus.

"Our main thing in this is the training of the employees on the rigs," said an OSHA spokesman.

He said the current experiment would be part of an overall plan to put together a comprehensive set of safety standards for the oil and gas industry.

Agency officials will compare three sets of injuries rates during the 90-day period when alternative safeguards are being used, injuries prior to the experiment when the protective metal covers were in place and injuries prior to the experiment when no protection covers were used.

Study shows lobbyists' expenses

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lobbyists spent an average of $5,500 to "entertain" each state legislator during the first eight months of 1981, according to a study by Common Cause, which backs a limit on lobbying expenditures.

John Hildreth, Texas executive director for the public interest lobbying group, said Thursday an examination of lobby finance reports filed by 80 percent of the state's registered lobbyists showed that over $1 million was spent on lawmakers from January until August 1981.

Hildreth told a subcommittee of the Public Servants Standards of Conduct Advisory Committee that 92 percent of the reported expenditures went for "entertainment."

"The 92 percent under entertainment hardly reinforces the suggestion that lobbyists are about the business of providing information," Hildreth said.

Hildreth said Common Cause wants to limit to $50 per month the amount a lobbyist can spend on any one legislator for entertainment.

Troubles of a black ex-mayor

Mississippi town's former official faces capital charge

EDDIE CARTHAN — The former mayor of Tchula, Miss., already faces six years in prison for prior conviction and now faces a capital murder charge in the death of Tchula Alderman Roosevelt Granderson. Carthan has become embroiled in a religious controversy because he has received $13,000 for his legal defense from the Global Ministries, a human rights organization of the United Methodist Church. Ministers of several predominantly white congregations in the area have protested further aid.

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer
TCHULA, Miss. (AP) — In this impoverished Mississippi Delta town, former mayor Eddie Carthan stands either as an oppressed black man who champions racial justice or a frustrated power broker with only a handful of followers.

It depends on who you ask about Carthan, the first black mayor in a community where 80 percent of the people are black and nearly one-third are unemployed.

For four years, he was embroiled in a constant battle with his city board and what he calls the white power structure. He ended up with state and federal convictions and jail terms totaling six years.

Although out of office, he's still fighting, this time in a battle that has involved the United Methodist Church and members of its local churches in this cotton-farming area of west-central Mississippi.

In the latest controversy, the 32-year-old Carthan stands accused of hiring two men to kill one of his political opponents, Roosevelt Granderson, a popular black alderman and local high school basketball coach.

Granderson was shot to death last summer during a robbery at a convenience store where he worked part time. One of the gunman pleaded guilty, the second disappeared.

Out of jail pending appeals, Carthan has traveled the country raising money for his defense and claiming racism is at the bottom of his problems.

"The fact is, we're fighting today against the same kind of trickery and tactics that were used to get blacks out of office over a hundred years ago and the same injustices that sent us out on the streets in the 1960s," Carthan says.

His local supporters brought the case to the United Methodist Church which, through its national ministries division, donated $13,000 to Carthan's defense fund.

That donation has angered local white United Methodist churches. The Mississippi Methodist Conference has called for a church investigation into the gift and has sought a halt to any future donations.

The Rev. Dudley Brown, a spokesman for seven white churches in Holmes County, said the ministries division of the national church had treated them like a "bunch of sold-out bigots."

Carthan has been a controversial figure since he was elected mayor of Tchula — pronounced chew-la — in 1977.

Problems arose after a three-member board majority composed of Granderson, another black and the board's one white alderman aligned against him.

The three charged repeatedly that Carthan tampered with town records, made unauthorized payments from city funds and ignored the wishes of the majority. At one point, the aldermen locked Carthan out of city hall for eight weeks.

"He was a dictator who thought he could veto the decisions of the majority and then do what he wanted," said one white official who asked to not be identified. "When things didn't go to suit him, he'd just scream race."

Carthan and his supporters see his problems as an effort by white landowners and businessmen in Holmes County to keep blacks dependent on white plantation owners for jobs. They contend the "white power structure" discredited Carthan to keep him from attracting new industry in a town where cotton and soybean farms provide most of the jobs.

Carthan's opponents say he abused his office and mismanaged programs that could have helped the community. Rather than bringing in promised jobs, his administration soured the federal government on offering help in the future, they claim.

But Carthan says whites opposed him because "I'm black and because I refused to become their little boy and go to them to get decisions and instructions."

There were also his troubles with the law.

In May 1981, Carthan was sentenced to three years in prison on a charge of assaulting a white policeman in a dispute over who should become police chief.

In February, Carthan drew a three-year prison term and a $5,000 fine on a federal court conviction of making false statements on a friend's loan application. Both sentences are being appealed.

In April, Carthan was charged in connection with Granderson's death. He goes on trial in October.

B.T. Taylor Sr., a white who is a member of the governing Holmes County Board of Supervisors, says Carthan's claims that he is a victim of racism and persecution is "the biggest lie that has ever been told."

Since leaving office, Carthan, a church deacon, says he has been forced to sell the several convenience stores he owns to pay his legal bills.

He said that if "the law is based on what's right, the evidence and the facts, I know beyond any shadow of a doubt I'll be vindicated. But if it's based on politics, then I'm in trouble."

Carthan resigned shortly before his term ended and didn't run for re-election in 1981. He was succeeded by former mayor Lester L. Lyon, who is white. Carthan says disgusted blacks, despite their voting majority, did not turn out at the polls to support black candidates.

Texas oilman draws fire from Senate Finance panel

By WILLIAM GARLAND
States News Service

WASHINGTON — A Texas oilman told a Senate Finance subcommittee Wednesday that the new taxes on energy should not be levied this year by Congress and that further taxation on the oil and gas industry could push it to "the edge of disaster." Robert E. Vinson, an independent oilman from Wichita Falls, came under fire from Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, D-Kansas, who accused Vinson and other independents of opposing passage of a budget package in the House since it might mean new taxes on oil and gas.

Vinson, chairman of the taxation committee for the Independent Petroleum Association of America, said the "recession has hit the oil patch with a vengeance" and that "we have not heard a whisper of recognition" the oil industry already is paying a windfall profits tax on crude oil production.

"Right at this particular moment, we're in dire straits," said Vinson, citing the drop in the price of crude oil, the 34 percent decline in active drilling rigs nationwide and a 50 percent reduction last year in the amount of venture capital available from outside investors in the oil and gas business.

Vinson denied that IPAA had taken a position opposing passage of a budget, which the House has been unable to do this year. IPAA spokesman Peter Mellish said Dole's accusations probably stemmed from comments by some independents that no budget at all would be preferable to one with increased taxes on oil and gas.

Charles Dihona, chairman of the American Petroleum Institute, which represents major oil companies, told the committee that the best alternative to new energy taxes would be "consumption excise taxes on as broad a base as possible and not on energy alone."

Lions find the future is now

Bill Haehnel picked up his phone in a demonstration before the Downtown Lions Club Wednesday, and when he punched in his numbers, a young woman in Paris, France, gave him a weather report.

That he reminded was just one of the routine functions of telecommunications via satellite. Haehnel, who was reporting on Bell Laboratories and on telecommunications, offered a glimpse of what is taking place as a product of the electronics explosion.

One event is doing business and banking by home computer; another is playing bridge with partners around the nation or world; yet another is making physician visits by home computer. For business, there was a multi-national computer which instantly translates from one into any of five other languages.

The birth of the transistor, he said, touched off what has been described as the second industrial age: "The first used machines to do work, now computers do our brain work." These are replaced by integrated circuits, and now microprocessor chips one-tenth the size of a postage stamp are doing the work of 4,500 integrated circuits.

What's around the corner? Hehnel was confident that Bell will score a breakthrough on solar energy by learning to store it, but he put no timetable on this. Already, Bell is using solar cells to operate roadside telephone booths in remote places.

Haehnel was introduced by Bell's Darlene Gifford of Fort Stockton.

The Lions Club will not meet next Wednesday, but will be the following Friday at 7 p.m. at the Brass Nail on Highway 87 for installation of officers and a ladies night.

Border patrolmen limited in authority, judge rules

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Border Patrol officers can question people about their citizenship as long as "the person stopped is free to walk away," a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton, in a ruling released Thursday, said Border Patrol officers can question a person believed to be an illegal alien about his citizenship. But he said unless there is "reasonable suspicion that the person is illegally in the country" the individual must remain free to just walk away.

The ruling is a clarification of an earlier decision on a lawsuit filed against the Border Patrol by four Mexican-Americans in El Paso.

The four filed suit in March contending Border Patrol raids on area taverns in January had violated their rights.

In a temporary injunction handed down last month, Bunton ordered the Border Patrol to halt "warrantless, dragnet" raids in search of illegal aliens and ruled the Jan. 29 raids illegal because there was not reasonable suspicion that the bar patrons had violated the law.

The injunction also said Border Patrol officers should have reasonable suspicion when they stop someone for questioning. Border Patrol officials had requested the clarification on that point because, in the language of the law, "reasonable suspicion" is a stiffer criteria than that required by immigration acts.

Federal immigration legislation allows officers to question "any alien or person believed to be an alien" about his citizenship.

Border Patrol officials could not be reached for comment Thursday, but El Paso Border Patrol chief A.E. Eliason said earlier Bunton's ruling made it tougher to check the citizenship of possible illegal aliens.

He said officers had to be careful not to detain someone who could turn out to be a legal resident. Eliason has ordered his officers to be as certain as possible that a person is an illegal alien before they stop him. The same order has been issued to Border Patrol offices throughout Texas' Western Judicial District. The government was given 14 days to respond to the latest ruling.

VIDEO MALADIES — It may not quite be tennis elbow, but a researcher from Atlanta's Emory University says video game players may risk future muscle and joint problems from their arcade activities. Dr.

Cary F. Myerson examined 134 players and found that at least 65 percent had at least one physical complaint ranging from blisters and callouses to discomfort in the joints, attributed to the electronic games.

Watch out for 'video fingers'

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of quarter-dropping, fast-fingered video game players who zap, munch and blast regularly in the nation's arcades may be risking future muscle and joint problems with vigorous play, a researcher said today.

Dr. Gary E. Myerson of Atlanta's Emory University, in one of the first studies of its kind, said he examined 134 players who punched control buttons or swiveled joysticks in the games of skill.

And he found that 65 percent had at least one physical complaint, ranging from blisters and callouses to discomfort in the joints, attributed to the games.

No particular game was implicated as being worse than others, and the researcher said the injuries were attributed to rapid, repetitive and aggressive activity on the part of the players.

While none of these problems is considered serious now, they could be a prelude to future arthritic conditions or muscle problems, Myerson told the Pan-American Congress on Rheumatology, a meeting co-sponsored by the Arthritis Foundation.

"Since an average player spends upwards of two hours per week at the controls of a video game," Myerson said, "we are likely to see chronic problems developing in the hands, wrists and perhaps even shoulders."

Myerson, who plays video games himself, said in an interview that he did not consider them inherently dangerous. But if people are of aware of potential problems, and if the controls on games are redesigned to minimize them, then future complications can be avoided, he added.

Klan march decision draws fire

SEABROOK, Texas (AP) — Another 50 police officers have been enlisted to protect the peace of this coastal community during a Ku Klux Klan march Saturday.

Police Chief Bill Kerber said Thursday the additional officers, recruited from neighboring communities, would be stationed at 25 intersections along the KKK parade route.

But Kerber said he does not anticipate any violence.

The police chief has been criticized for granting the parade permit, but Kerber insisted he had no reason to deny the request.

"There are constitutional rights involved here," Kerber said. "I didn't allow them to have this demonstration, the Constitution allowed them."

Klansmen organized the march in memory of Billy Joe Aplin, a Seadrift, Texas, shrimp, who a Vietnamese fisherman killed in self defense three years ago.

The slaying touched off a dispute between American fishermen and the refugees over shrimping rights in Galveston Bay.

The KKK and the American Fishermen's Association say the Vietnamese have been fishing at night and have patrolled the Gulf waters to try to photograph the illegal activity.

Kerber said about 40 Klansmen are expected to attend Saturday's rally.

The police chief said he also plans to have reporters covering the rally electronically searched because "weapons have been known to show up at meetings of this particular nature."

SHARED LIGHT

In what poets have called the "dark forests" there live millions of small trees, saplings, ferns and shrubs. Foresters call them the "understory."

The understory survives and ultimately flourishes on shared light. It seems to be a principle of Nature that big trees have an obligation to let through light for the little ones.

A similar principle applies to spiritual survival and moral development. Grown-ups are expected to make thoughtful provision for the religious training of youth. Parents have a responsibility to God in guiding the spiritual education of their children. The Church through its ministries of worship and teaching supports our resolve to let through light for the little ones.

Grays celebrates 50 years

Mr. and Mrs. D.O. Gray, 102 Washington Blvd., celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary at a reception at the Big Spring Country Club June 4. Hosts for the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Travis W. Hunter, niece and nephew of the couple, and Marjory M. Brown.

Gray was born in Anson and has belonged to the Masonic Lodge and 32 Degree Scottish Rite. Mrs. Gray is the former Stacye Dean of Anson. She is a member of Eastern Stars in Kermit and several civic and social clubs in Big Spring. The Grays met while at Anson High School and

Dear Abby Love doesn't belong in classroom

DEAR ABBY: After being out of work for many months, I was guaranteed a job with a small newspaper if I took a course in writing, so I enrolled at a small college in Washington state not far from where I live.

Halfway through the course, my teacher, an attractive 29-year-old woman, gave me this assignment in her own handwriting: "Write an essay on the first time you made love, using contemporary language — no euphemisms!" (This was not the first suggestive assignment she had given me.)

Well, I started the essay and showed it to my wife. She was furious! She said, "No way are you going to finish that and hand it in!"

I told my teacher I didn't care for that assignment, but she insisted that in order to pass the course I had to complete it. I want that newspaper job and I need a passing grade to get it, but things are getting extremely touchy at home.

I am 60 years old and, to tell you the truth, I can hardly remember the first time I made love, so the essay wouldn't be very good anyway.

What should I do?

ON THE SPOT IN OCEAN SHORES, WASH.

DEAR ON THE SPOT: Tell your teacher that you consider her assignment a tasteless invasion of your privacy, and unless you are offered an acceptable alternative, you'll appeal to the dean, the president, the regents and any other person with clout at the college.

DEAR ABBY: With regard to "Indigestion at Mealtimes," who wrote to express concern over miserable mealtimes caused by her husband constantly correcting the children's grammar and manners at the dinner table:

We faced a similar situation with our four children. My husband finally realized how hard it was on our children, and he declared every Wednesday as "free night" with no corrections or criticisms at the dinner table.

It is now a happy tradition at our house, and we all look forward to Wednesdays knowing we will have a stress-free dinner.

MRS. K. IN SAN RAFAEL, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. K.: One stress-free meal out of seven is better than none, but why not eliminate all miserable mealtimes by scheduling a weekly "gripe session" where all family members can air their criticisms, corrections and complaints? Mealtimes are for chewing — not for chewing out.

Dave Edmunds delivers infections rockabilly music

•Dave Edmunds, "DE 7th," Columbia records. If a shred of justice still exists in rock and roll heaven, this album will be a hit this summer. Multi-million dollar sales are not necessary — just enough so Edmunds doesn't get depressed and stop his infectious, happy-go-lucky music. "DE 7th's" exuberant rockabilly goes straight for the dancing shoes like an aural boogie drug. Edmunds has always been fascinated with re-creating the fifties sound of Elvis, Jerry Lee Lewis, Carl Perkins and even up to Chuck Berry. With a simple driving beat, guitars and an occasional horn or piano, this music is pure and simple fun.

This album latches onto your senses from the first cut as Edmunds launches into Bruce Springsteen's "From Small Things (Big Things One Day Come)." An exhilarating rocker, this tune evokes memories of every girl-guy-car song ever written — instantly familiar yet always fresh. Drums, guitar and horns merrily support Edmunds' echoed vocals.

Other foot-tapping and finger-snapping tunes include "Bail You Out," a snappy refusal of aid; "Other Guys Girls," the old high school comparison test and "Warmed over Kisses (Left over Love)," a banjo-driven rocker. An archetypical Chuck Berry song, "Dear Dad," closes out the album with a rush and a chuckle.

The only time Edmunds lets up the bouncy rocking and rolling is when he slips into the surprisingly tender and plaintive "One More Night." Accompanied only by piano, Edmunds is very effective as he pleads for one last chance with the woman he loves.

The only fault with "DE 7th," if it is a fault, is the tendency of the sound to be over-produced. A little too much echo, a little too much craftsmanship, but these are small points compared with the overall enjoyment possible with this record. This album is hard to dislike. The music won't change your life, but it will make what you have seem brighter.

Reincarnation book disappoints

•THE EVERLASTING By Leonard Bishop. Poseidon Press, 479 Pages, $16.50. Years ago Leonard Bishop published some good novels — among them the fondly remembered "Down All Your Streets" and "Days of My Love."

There there was a long silence. Now Bishop has returned to the novel and "The Everlasting" is his first offering in, according to the publisher, 20 years.

It's quite a disappointment — over-written, repetitive and, worst of all, dull, so dull that the time required to read it seems everlasting.

The story, such as it is, centers on a murder trial. Stephen Jerod, a defrocked priest, is being tried for the murder of Shara Medford, his lover.

Jerod wants to be convicted and executed. He refuses to help his attorney help him; he has in fact taken a vow of silence. This doesn't stop the attorney, however, who proceeds to do all sorts of digging and comes up with all sorts of strange stuff to defend his client.

Jerod, you see, is convinced that he has lived previously, that he has had at least two reincarnations. His first life was as a prehistoric shaman referred to as The Albino. His second was as a humpbacked physician-surgeon named Barthelamo Vecchio, during the reign of the Borgias in Italy.

In each of those previous lives he loved not wisely but too well, and his love cost him his life. Each time by the same woman, who also appears to have been reincarnated.

It follows, of course, that Jerod wants to stop being killed so he kills Shara, who seems to be the rein-arnation of the woman who caused his death in his earlier lives.

It's not as confusing as it sounds, but it certainly is dull reading.

Suspense novel lacks suspense

•HONOR BOUND. By Richard Harris. St. Martin's, 250 Pages, $12.95. Richard Harris' "Honor Bound" is supposed to be a suspense novel.

According to the dictionary, suspense is "the growing interest and excitement felt while awaiting a climax or resolution, as of a novel."

Since "Honor Bound" neither generates "growing interest" nor "excitement" it can hardly be suspenseful. What it largely is is dull.

The story concerns the death of an old lawyer named Lucius Slocum. The authorities say Slocum took his own life by shooting himself in the head. But Thomas Hasher, a protege and friend of the dead man, contends Slocum was murdered. Hasher is convinced the dead man's beautiful young wife was behind the death.

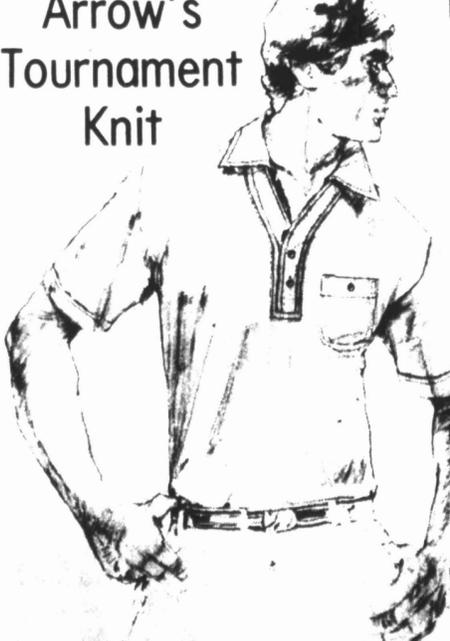

And he sets out to prove it.

Holmes, Cooney decide WBC crown tonight

FEELING STRONG NOW — World Boxing Council No. 1 heavyweight contender Gerry Cooney raises his arms as he stands on scales during Thursday weigh-in at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, where Cooney will challenge WBC champion Larry Holmes Friday for the heavyweight crown. Cooney weighed-in at 225½ lbs.; Holmes weighed 212½ lbs.

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes defends his World Boxing Council heavyweight championship tonight against a younger, taller, heavier Gerry Cooney in the richest fight in ring history, an extravaganza to be staged in the parking lot at Caesars Palace.

Holmes, 32, weighed in at 212½ pounds Thursday, 13 lighter than the 25-year-old Cooney, who was 225½. The champion, at 6-foot-3, is also four inches shorter than the challenger. But the statistical edge hardly seemed to disturb Holmes on the eve of the fight, which will earn record purses of $10 million for both men.

"I'm sticking with my prediction of seven rounds," the champion said. "But if he acts foolish, he won't go four." The two men weighed in separately, avoiding any confrontation. They have been kept apart for much of the last two weeks during training sessions because of incidents between members of their camps.

Cooney's people have harassed Holmes with taunts of "Tick ... tick ... tick," suggesting that time is running out on the 32-year-old champion. Holmes answered that at the weigh-in when he led his entourage in a chant, like a college cheerleader.

"What time is it?" he shouted at them.

"Holmes' Time!" they answered.

Both men carry impressive credentials into this fight which matches a master boxer against a powerful puncher in the classic stylist-sluggish showdown.

Holmes has ruled the WBC heavyweight division for the last four years, defending his title 11 times and ending 10 of those fights with knockouts. He is 39-0 for his career and has scored 29 knockouts.

Cooney is also undefeated with 22 knockouts in 25 fights. Eight of his fights, including the last two, have ended in the first round.

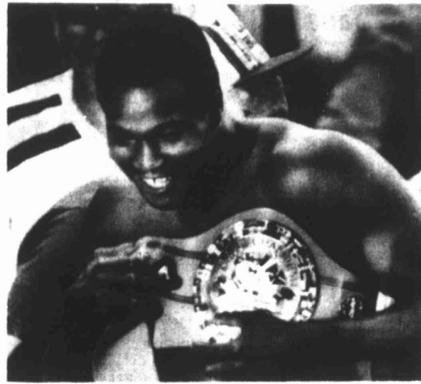

Holmes is the boxer, an expert at setting up an opponent. He is considered to have one of the best left jabs in the business. "I got here boxing and I'm gonna leave here boxing," he has said.

Cooney's left hook has devastated many opponents. He scored awesome knockouts in his last three fights, destroying Ken Norton, Ron Lyle and Jimmy Young — three men who either held or fought for the heavyweight title — in four rounds or less.

For these reasons, the fight has captured the imagination of the boxing public. The fans' appetite for the match was increased even more by a two-month postponement forced by an injury to the challenger's left shoulder.

Cooney says he is healthy now and trainer Victor Valle thinks the delay may have helped his man develop his right hand and made him more of a two-fisted threat to Holmes.

With the excitement the match has created, promoter Don King said the gross could soar past the record $50 million figure which Holmes and Muhammad Ali set in the same parking lot stadium Oct. 2, 1980.

Fight features contrasting styles

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Can a nice kid from suburban Long Island who loves children and dogs and who is always good to his mother whip a tough, street-wise school dropout who has spent most of his life battling social barriers and public indifference?

We should know some time around midnight.

That's when the curtain at gilded Caesars' Palace drops on one of the most intriguing heavyweight title fights in years.

In one corner, is the reigning WBC champion, Larry Holmes, 32, undefeated in 39 fights over 10 years but still a ho-hum "Mr. X" to the greater segment of the sports community.

Angered by the slight, he is reported snorting like a wild bull in anxiety to get at the upstart young challenger whom he calls "The White Dope."

Across the ring is the challenger, Gerry Cooney, 25, a big, powerful-shouldered young man of Irish descent who his supporters boast can fell an ox with a six-inch left hook.

Also undefeated in a five-year pro career, he has kayoed 22 of his 25 opponents, eight in the first round, 10 others in four rounds or less.

It's right out of Ancient Rome. Any minute, you expect the lions vs. the Christians.

He's always acts as if he's in a rush to keep an early date.

Surrounded by family, friends and supporters from middle class Huntington, N.Y., some 50 miles via expressway and the Long Island Railroad from Manhattan, he has been a mild-mannered, perfect gentleman all week, refusing to make waves. "I don't like the word 'killer instinct,'" he says. "To me, boxing is a clean competition. I try to win as quickly as I can. I get no pleasure in beating up people."

At press conferences, he cuddles a fluffy elephant hand puppet, mimics his opponent and concludes by praising all of his camp aides by name and saying to the audience:

"I love you!"

Holmes is the antithesis. Never as bombastic as Muhammad Ali, in whose shadow he labored for most of his career, he nevertheless has been outspoken, controversial and at times openly bitter.

He hasn't sought to hide that he thinks he has not been properly accepted and that the only reason his younger white opponent managed to gain a $10 million even-split of the purse was the color of his skin.

The fight has all the ingredients for a show business spectacular — youth against an age, white against black, supposedly soft suburban background against that of a disadvantaged black from a broken home.

The setting is bizarre — an outdoor ring surrounded by a luxurious gambling palace, beautiful women lolling in the sun with handkerchiefs for bathing suits, goddesses in brief gold and white togas wending through the crowds with drinks, the gaming tables humming from the action of the big spenders.

It's right out of Ancient Rome. Any minute, you expect the lions vs. the Christians.

We'll take Cooney in two.

COACH BILLY GORDON AND ROBBIE RITCHEY ...Coahoma basketball career leads to college scholarship

Ritchey chooses ASU Rambelles

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

COAHOMA — Coahoma High basketball standout Robbie Ritchey has signed a scholarship letter to attend Angelo State University.

The former Bulldogette started for coach Billy Gordon's varsity teams for three years, gaining all-district and District 6-AAA Most Valuable Player honors her senior year. During her three seasons on the varsity, Coahoma won 67 games and lost just 20.

Leading the team in rebounding and scoring, Ritchey led the Bulldogettes to the regional tournament this year where they lost to eventual state tournament participant Comanche. Coahoma was 24-4 this past season.

She was all-tournament at the Abilene Christian High event and named the MVP at the Crane Tournament.

As a junior, Ritchey was a second team all-district choice.

Her other athletic interests include running on the Coahoma track squad, advancing twice to regionals in the triple jump.

"I'm real excited about it," she said of gaining a scholarship to play for the Rambelles. The decision was made over offers from Hardin-Simmons and Western Texas.

"It was a hard decision to make," she said of her choices. Brother Mike attends ASU and may have played a role in influencing his sister's final decision.

"She can play inside or out, hit the perimeter shot or post-up," says coach Gordon. "She's young and still not through growing. She'll get taller. She's a good passer and a good overall team player."

Off the court, Ritchey was a member of the National Honor Society and the Coahoma High Student Council.

"She's really a smart girl," Gordon added. "Not only in the books but in basketball sense."

Padres shut out Astros

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Left-hander John Curtis, a former history major at Clemson, isn't one to quibble over semantics.

The 34-year-old journeyman pitcher for the San Diego Padres says simply that the difference between being a loser and a winner is not a good fastball or a wicked curve — it's a matter of attitude.

"I have a feeling of gradual improvement, and it's more attitude than anything physical that I am doing," Curtis said after throwing a two-hit, 5-0 shutout against the Houston Astros Thursday afternoon.

It was the first shutout for Curtis since July 19, 1979, and his first complete game since Sept. 30, 1980. The 11-year veteran faced 28 batters — one over the minimum — and allowed just two Houston batters to reach first base. Neither one got any farther.

In the only other National League game Thursday, Cincinnati edged Los Angeles 3-2.

"Today it was just a matter of discipline," Curtis said. "I kept the ball consistently at the knees and below."

The result was 16 ground-ball outs by Houston as Curtis won his third consecutive decision in lifting his season mark to 5-4.

"In the past, when I would go out to pitch I would wonder how we were going to lose the game," said Curtis, who finished 1981 with a 2-6 record and 5.10 earned run average. "But now we know the kind of weapons we have on this club spell victory."

The Padres, winners of seven of their last nine games, handed left-hander Bob Knepper his seventh loss in nine decisions.

Rookie left fielder Alan Wiggins got Curtis the only run he needed when he singled in Luis Salazar after the Padres' third baseman doubled in the third inning. Wiggins also stole his 12th consecutive base and his 21st in 29 games, and made a fine running catch in the second inning, robbing the Astros' Alan Knutson of a possible extra-base hit.

Catcher Terry Kennedy hit a two-run double — his league-leading 17th two-base hit — in the fourth, and Sixto Lezcano got the first of two RBIs with a solo homer in the sixth.

The final Padre run came in the seventh when Garry Templeton walked, stole second and scored on a single by Lezcano.

Knutson and Ray Knight had the only hits of Curtis.

Reds 3, Dodgers 2

An eight-inning single by Eddie Milner scored Ron Oester to give Cincinnati its victory over Los Angeles and hand the Dodgers' their fourth straight loss.

Reliever Jim Kinn, 1-3, earned the victory with Tom Hume getting his 11th save, while Fernando Valenzuela, 8-5, absorbed the loss after three straight victories.

Oester started the winning rally with a walk. After Dan Driessen walked, Milner delivered his game-winning hit.

Twins take Royals 8-7

By BOB GREENE AP Sports Writer

It was the fourth consecutive game in which Kent Hrbek has homered. For the Minnesota Twins rookie, it was by far the best.

"It put us in the lead," Hrbek said of his first major league grand slam. "That's what's been missing. It was what we've been needing. Getting a home run's not much if it don't help any."

Hrbek's homer Thursday night was the big blow in Minnesota's 8-7 victory over the Kansas City Royals. That snapped the Twins' five-game losing streak and Kansas City's eight-game winning string.

The rookie left-hander considers himself a streak home run hitter.

"I told Bruno (Tom Brunansky) that he would probably hit more home runs than I did because I'm a streak home run hitter," said the big rookie who is batting .335 with 15 homers, 45 runs batted and an American League-leading 127 total bases. "I always did well in doubleheaders. Sometimes I'd hit three or four."

"I don't know if it's the home-run swing or not. I don't think home runs. The ball just starts going out. I don't know what it is. It's a streaky thing."

In other AL games, Chicago nipped California 7-6, New York stopped Boston 5-3 and Milwaukee outlasted Baltimore 9-7.

Hrbek has now hit in his last 15 games. He had a 23-game streak earlier this season and has hit safely in 46 of the 49 games this season.

His big homer came in the American League

pitched the final three innings.

White Sox 7, Angels 6
 Steve Kemp slammed the first pitch in the bottom of the ninth inning into the left field stands to lift Chicago over California. It was Kemp's fourth homer of the season.

The Angels had tied the game 6-6 in the eighth on

Reggie Jackson's RBI single and Bobby Grich's run-scoring double.

Yankees 5, Red Sox 3

Left-hander Dave Righetti hurled hitless ball for 61-3 innings, then needed relief help from Goose Gosage as New York snapped a five-game losing streak by stopping Boston.

Righetti had his no-hit bid broken up with one out in the seventh when Glenn Hoffman singled to right-center.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTEER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening which you can use to best advantage by investigating whatever has been puzzling you in the past. You can then devise a plan to gain your goals more readily.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make sure you handle your regular duties in a conscientious manner at this time. Show that you are a thoughtful person.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take time to analyze where you are headed in your career. Don't lose your temper over a situation that displeases you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get busy attending to home duties early in the day. Plan time for a little entertainment in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be with your loved one as much as possible today and increase happiness. Relax at home tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Do nothing to irritate any family members and maintain harmony and happiness. Be more tolerant of others.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) It is important that you be most careful in motion today and tonight and avoid possible accident. Relax and ease tensions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be most careful in the handling of money matters today and avoid being a loser. Think along more constructive lines.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study your surroundings and make plans for improvement. Not a good day or evening for the social side of life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be objective in handling a personal problem at this time. Engage in favorite hobby with congenials.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Personal matters need your attention today, so forget friends for the time being. Sidestep a troublemaker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan time to handle personal responsibilities early in the day. Taking any risks with money would be most unwise now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) New ideas come to you but don't take any action on them now. Study them further. Establish more order around you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who will create problems just for the fun of showing how well they can be solved, so teach to search for harmony instead. Religious training is important. One who will excel in sports.

Being with young people proves to be fun

By RHONDA WOODALL

Church Page Editor
Doug Morris, associate minister at 14th and Main Church of Christ, enjoys working with teenagers.

Morris makes his Bible stories come to life for them and gets them to put the stories into perspective with their lives.

"I ask my students questions like 'Where was Jesus sitting?', 'Was he angry?' or 'Was there a lot of people there?'" Morris said.

He teaches senior high classes on Sunday morning and junior high class on Wednesday evenings, he said.

"I want the class to grow spiritually and strive here on Earth to be better," Morris said.

"I got started with the youth because I had been going to some Bible classes with a friend that were so boring. I felt if I was going to be a Christian I could do a better job than was being done there," Morris said. "My Bible class was a waste of time."

"I've known some teachers who were teaching the right things but they weren't approaching the subjects in a way the kids would listen," Morris said.

As associate minister, Morris has several activities. He organizes Vacation Bible School, speaks at funerals, preaches sermons, works at church camp, plays on the church's softball team, works with puppets in "Main Street" and speaks to various organizations.

"It makes me feel good when kids ask me to speak at group meetings. I don't ever want to embarrass the kids," Morris said. "It's nice to know that they have the confidence in me to ask me to speak.

"TEENAGERS HAVE such a poor self-image of themselves. Maybe it's because of all the beautiful people they see on television. Why don't they ever have ugly people on the commercials?" Morris said.

"I feel good anytime I see kids do more than they think they can," Morris said. "I encourage the kids in 'Main Street' to do more than they think they can."

"I can't sing but I work with the puppets in 'Main Street,'" Morris said. "We'll be going to Hollywood for two weeks and will be performing on some street corners. It's good experience for the kids to get that far away from home," Morris said. "They are on their best behavior and know I expect a lot from them. I think it makes them feel good when they help others."

"My Bible Class students are my best friends," Morris added.

"It's hard work if you don't like being with kids. If you don't love them then you can't do it. There's not enough money that can make you do it," Morris said.

"I feel like I'm here to serve. To serve the kids in anyway I can," Morris said. "Sometimes a kid needs a ride home from school. I'll take him home."

"If I get too old and too tired for volleyball and Six Flags then I'll move on and become a minister," Morris said.

What bothers him about his work?

"I worry about my kids getting jealous of my youth group kids. I'm not with my TAKING OFF — Doug Morris acts out the motions to a song at the 14th and Main Church of Christ Vacation Bible School, which he organized.

kids enough," Morris said. "I don't want them to get jealous."

Morris is married and has two sons. His wife's name is Gwen and his sons are Christopher, 4, and Brian, 7 months.

"When I put Christopher to bed we have a prayer and sing a song," Morris said. "I love being with Christopher and playing with him."

"At night," Morris said, "I kiss my children while they are asleep and tell them that I love them. Even though they are asleep I feel like they can hear me. Sometimes I can see them move like they've heard what I've said."

"I encourage kids to openly love their parents. Parents sometimes think their children don't love them because their children don't tell them they love them for weeks or months at a time. Something could happen and your parents won't always be there," Morris said. "Parents love their kids. It's like if Christopher died now I think they would have to put me away."

Morris says he is not a counselor, but he is a friend. "Everybody needs a friend they can talk to and trust. They (teenagers) need love," Morris said.

"Be honest with kids. Sometimes you have to tell them things they don't want to hear. I want to let them know I'm being honest with them. I want them to know I'm not lying to them," Morris said.

"I do get angry, especially when a kid lies to me," Morris said. "If I'm going to be honest with them, I want them to be honest with me. Kids sometimes feel that if they do something wrong, no one will ever love them again. That's wrong," Morris said. "I hate to see them (teenagers) hurt, not just physically but emotionally and mentally. I hurt with them," Morris said. "One of the kids who was supposed to be in Vacation Bible School broke his leg, so we packed all the kids in the church bus and went to his house and had a short Bible lesson there," he said.

SHORTENED TIE — Doug Morris has his tie cut in half by a Vacation Bible School student who happened to bring the most visitors that day.

Clements optimistic about prison hearing

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements is optimistic about prison-settlement talks set for later this month, but two of the parties invited to the session say they know nothing about the meeting.

Clements said Thursday his optimism is based, in part, on the U.S. Justice Department's willingness to agree with the state that inmates are not entitled to private cells in Texas' overcrowded prisons.

However, Texas Attorney General Mark White, Clements' Democratic opponent for re-election, later pulled out trial records showing Assistant U.S. Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds argued a federal appeals court in favor of single-celling.

Also Thursday, Clements said White's advice against negotiating a settlement in the case delayed a possible end to the lawsuit and cost the state over $1 million in fees for outside lawyers.

White said negotiations have been going on for months and he reminded reporters that Clements and state prison board members clamored for outside lawyers.

The Justice Department intervened in the case on behalf of the inmates. The lengthy trial ended with U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice issuing a reform order, including a requirement for individual cells. The case is on appeal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

He said negotiations could have started sooner, if not for White.

"If we had the kind of representation that I think the state deserves through our attorney general's office this probably could have been done some months ago," he said at a news conference.

Sleeping disorder can cause problems

By PETER MATTIACE
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Charles Berry could fall asleep anywhere, anytime. He could nap twice a day. He could snore over black coffee. He even could sleep standing up. But when Berry, 40, woke up to his tractor-trailer truck crashing into a steel mill, he finally opened his eyes to a serious medical condition going back 25 years.

"I just thought I required a little more sleep than others. Now I know I have a sleep disorder," he says.

Berry's condition, narcolepsy, was diagnosed at the University of Pittsburgh's Western Psychiatric Institute and Clinic, which opened one of the nation's first sleep disorder centers in July 1974. There are now 32 such centers nationwide.

Each year, about 200 patients with chronic sleep problems check into the hospital's six bedrooms where doctors and technicians monitor their slumber for two successive nights.

The bedrooms look much like a modern motel with double bed, mirror, torch-lamp, chair and even a cozy quilt bedspread. A bathroom is nearby. A nearby lounge offers television and magazines to help patients relax.

But there is little privacy in these bedrooms. Patients wear electrodes taped to their heads to monitor brain waves, eye movement and muscle tension.

A microphone above their heads records sleeping sounds and soft red lights on the ceiling allow technicians to look in by closed-circuit television.

It's not home, but the $1,500 examination usually finds the answers to their sleep problems, according to medical director Dr. Charles Reynolds.

"We can almost always pin down a cause for sleep disorders," Reynolds says. "Then we can tailor a program to help."

About half of those referred to the clinic suffer from severe insomnia.

Others, like Berry, suffer from narcolepsy, a constant sleepiness, or sleep apnea, a condition found mostly in older men who jolt awake frequently each night when they temporarily stop breathing.

A smaller number of patients suffer from "disturbed behavior" while sleeping, such as seizures, sleepwalking, bed wetting and night terrors.

Some psychiatric patients also are studied at the sleep center. Doctors can learn if a person is depressed by sleep patterns and also can quickly test the effectiveness of anti-depression medications through sleep, Reynolds says.

Berry, who lives in rural West Leechburg, says he had trouble staying awake since he was 13, but nevertheless held a job as a long-distance trucker until his steel mill accident two years ago.

There were some close calls on the road. Berry spent two nights and an afternoon at the sleep center, where Reynolds found classic symptoms of narcolepsy.

Normally, a person begins "rapid eye movements" after about 90 minutes of sleep. This is when most people dream and enjoy their deepest sleep. But narcoleptics experience rapid eye movements immediately and thus their condition can be easily diagnosed.

In Berry's case, two daily doses of a prescribed stimulant suppresses his body's inclination to slip into sleep and immediate rapid eye movements. The drug, which has no side effects for Berry, helps him stay awake when he wants.

Sleep doctors report seeing more and more youngsters in their work. Reynolds believes some young people are nipping disorders like insomnia early because "it's now more acceptable to seek out help in this situation."

Youngsters under 10 years old, particularly boys, are notorious sleepwalkers, a specific condition described as a partial arousal from a deep sleep marked by a glassy stare, a tendency to bump into walls and fall down stairways, and a later amnesia. Up to 15 percent of boys walk in their sleep, Reynolds says.

Some children also suffer from "night terrors," a kind of super-nightmare marked by screams, mumbling, sweating and disorientation.

Experts say night terrors are "normal" for children under 12 and needs no drugs. "Don't make a big deal out of it," one Pitt doctor advises.

Reynolds says too many people also worry about sleep, especially how much, or how little, they're getting.

The key, he says, is that there is no norm.

"It's pretty well established that the need for sleep varies widely from two or three hours a night to 10, 11 or 12 hours," Reynolds says.

Snoring, the nightmare of many spouses, may be an early indication of sleep apnea, a disorder confined mostly to men who seem constantly tired from waking up throughout the night. Weight loss, breathing exercises and possibly drugs are normal treatments for sleep apnea, according to Reynolds.

Reynolds and Dr. David Kupfer, director of the center, prescribe some simple rules for a good night's sleep. They say the most important is not to worry about sleeping — especially when it gets to be 2 a.m., 3 a.m. or later.

"Everyone has an occasional sleepless night," Kupfer says. "Usually it's nothing to be concerned about. If you don't sleep, you may feel irritable and sleepy the next day, but you won't go crazy or suffer a profound physical illness."

"Avoid caffeine," Reynolds advises. "Avoid alcohol in the evening, avoid filling foods in the evening, avoid overheated rooms and get into a regular sleep-wake schedule. "Some people find sex before sleep very relaxing, but some find it too stimulating," he says.

Roe named to agency

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — In an unusual appointment among United Methodist clergy this spring, the Rev. J. Benjamin Roe was named to a "Ministry in Human Sexuality."

As head of an agency of that name providing education, consultation and counseling services, he says "my ministry tries to respond to people who need to hear some good news about sexuality."

Bible Society holds survey

NEW YORK (AP) — Polster George Gallup says a "spiritual quest of fast-growing proportions" is underway in the country, but most Americans haven't integrated faith into their lives.

He told the annual meeting of the American Bible Society that survey data indicate that "the final two decades of the 20th century could be a period of profound religious renewal in our society."

A "key challenge" of religion today, he said, "is to move the populace to deeper levels of spiritual commitment."

He says the 12 percent of Americans who are "highly spiritually committed" are happier, more community-minded, their families stronger and are more tolerant of people of different races and religions.

Pope arrives in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Pope John Paul II arrived in Argentina today to pray for a "just and lasting peace" in the South Atlantic where Argentina and Britain are battling over the Falkland Islands.

Schoolchildren in Argentina were given the day off, and yellow-and-white Vatican banners bedecked Buenos Aires streets to welcome the pope on his first visit to the predominantly Roman Catholic country.

But the 10-week conflict with Britain has provided a somber backdrop to a trip that church officials have called purely pastoral. Papal Nuncio Ubaldo Calabresi ruled out any chance of the pontiff trying to mediate, saying the pope's intentions were to "pray for peace and speak for peace."

Durrell's writing changes with the times

By GREG MACARTHUR
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — It's difficult to tell if Lawrence Durrell is just joking. Writers, he says, "should be put on a reservation and gassed." Christianity "should be rubbed out," and death "will be a relief after publishers."

At 70, the author of "The Alexandria Quartet" is still trying to shock, as he did in the 1930s when some critics dismissed him as part of the "decadent" crowd gathered around Henry Miller and Anaïs Nin in Paris.

He kept writing through 20 years of limited acceptance, four marriages and a series of straight jobs that kept him from devoting his full time to literature.

Then in the late 1950s, Durrell went from self-described "respectable ascetic" to literary sensation with the "Quartet," an ambitious effort to squeeze "an investigation of modern love" through the wringer of space and time.

What came out were four commercially and critically successful novels full of exotic characters progressively revealed against the rich, bizarre backdrop of an imagined Alexandria, Egypt.

edition is being published in June by Washington Square Press to mark the 25th anniversary of "Justine," the first in the series.

"I always had a hankering to write classically," Durrell says, sipping red wine at the Dome cafe in Paris' Montparnasse district after recovering from the "nervous breakdown" of finishing his latest novel.

"Classicism means becoming a spokesman for the cosmology of your time, and what was the cosmology of our age if it wasn't Einstein and Freud," he says. "So I used the theory of relativity, the four dimensions, as a kind of point of departure to make a classical frame in four volumes."

But the cosmology has shifted, explains Durrell, a short, stocky man with pale blue eyes. Modern love has ceased to be any kind of love at all — "just rape and vulgarity" — and the Indian-born British expatriate now says four dimensions are one short. He has just finished the third in a five-novel series based loosely on the Buddhist theory of five elements of reality.

"When I was looking back the other day to what my career had been, I found I was really trying to write way back to India," Durrell says.

He spent his boyhood near the Tibetan border where his father worked as an engineer for the British colonial government.

"I think I really must have been marked by that enormous silence up in the mountains."

Durrell was born in the hot central plains on Feb. 27, 1912, but spent most of his childhood near the Himalayas in the northern Indian city of Darjeeling. His family, including younger brother Gerald, an internationally known zoologist and author, visited Tibetan monasteries "like people here go to the country for weekends."

He spent days "camping and fishing and shooting in huge forests rich in every imaginable kind of thing."

His school years in England, his early literary days in the Paris of the 1930s and his subsequent travels to Argentina, Cyprus (about which he wrote in "Bitter Lemons"), Corfu, Greece and Egypt as a writer and as a press officer in the British diplomatic corps did not lessen India's pull, he says.

"If you live in a kind of a Buddhist context, even if you are an aggressive little colonialist, you're really were, it really works on you. I'm an intellectual refugee, really. I belong in the Himalayas."

Durrell describes his latest project as a "kind of a yogic book" and says the daily discipline of yoga helped him through the book.

"You have to treat yourself like a psychiatric case when you're writing, really," he says.

"It's awful. It's a nervous breakdown, a book," he adds. "I got terribly alcoholic during the writing, but then you fight your way through."

Nancy Kissinger acquitted of assault

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A judge acquitted Nancy Kissinger of assault Thursday, declaring that the wife of the former secretary of state displayed a "somewhat human reaction to an offensive question" when she scuffled with a woman at an airport.

"I'm very proud of Nancy," said Henry Kissinger, who testified in his wife's behalf at her one-day trial. "Justice has been done."

Mrs. Kissinger was accused of grabbing pro-nuclear activist Ellen Kaplan around the neck at Newark International Airport last February as the Kissingers prepared to fly to Boston, where Kissinger later underwent open-heart surgery.

The charge of simple assault carries a maximum penalty of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Ms. Kaplan testified that Mrs. Kissinger "bent down. She stared at me, she sneered, she bared her teeth," then grabbed her by the throat during the Feb. 7 scuffle.

Mrs. Kissinger testified that she "took her by the neck and pinched her" after Ms. Kaplan confronted her husband with a question.

The question, according to Mrs. Kissinger, was, "Is it true that you sleep with young boys at the Carlyle Hotel" in New York?

Mrs. Kissinger's actions were "a spontaneous and somewhat human reaction to an offensive question," said Municipal Court Judge Julio Fuentes. Kissinger testified Ms. Kaplan did not appear to be injured.

Mrs. Kissinger told the judge Ms. Kaplan "sort of came out of nowhere" and asked the question.

Inmates plead not guilty to fraud

HOUSTON (AP) — Thirteen Texas prison inmates and two parolees will be tried Aug. 9 on charges they filed false income tax forms and accepted $7,732 in illegal returns.

The 15 men pleaded not guilty Thursday before U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling.

They were named in a 70-count indictment last month, charging they filed false returns with the Internal Revenue Service and receiving illegal refunds between April of 1981 and March of 1982.

The indictment charged Paul D. Young, 43, of Houston, with submitting false returns totaling $35,888.

Young, serving a 15-year sentence for burglary at the Texas Department of Corrections' Wynne Unit, and 12 other inmates also were accused of receiving $7,732 in refunds.

The indictment also said two parolees, Hugh Dalton and Lorenzo Hill, participated in the alleged scheme while in prison.

Eight injured in hospital fire

DALLAS (AP) — Sparks from a cutting torch ignited a basement fire at Parkland Memorial Hospital which spewed thick, black smoke through the laundry room causing 11 injuries and some $200,000 in damages, authorities said.

"It was mostly a lot of black smoke," fire department spokeswoman J.J. Howe said Thursday. "No fire or smoke went into the main hospital."

The three-alarm fire, confined to the boiler room and a laundry in the basement, was reported at 9:24 a.m. and was extinguished by 10:20 a.m., she said.

Although patients were not evacuated from their rooms, some patients and visitors from the basement, ground floor and first floor, said hospital spokesman Greg Graze said. Those floors have no patient rooms.

Carlos Ellis, a receiving dock worker, said he was leaving a restroom when he saw people running down a hallway to the emergency room.

"I saw everybody boogieing out and didn't know what the deal was," Ellis said. "Then I saw my supervisor and he said 'You need to leave the building; we've got a fire.'"

As a precaution, Parkland closed its emergency room for almost an hour and diverted incoming patients to other hospitals.

The fire knocked out the hospital's normal power supply for 50 minutes, Graze said. The hospital switched to its auxiliary power during that time.

Ambulances were diverted to other facilities because of traffic congestion.

A firefighter suffered a minor leg injury and 10 workers suffered smoke inhalation, Graze said. The workers were hospital employees in the engineering department, which is responsible for the plant, he said.

County Fire Marshal Jim Badgett said sparks from an acetylene torch, being used to sever a metal beam, flew into an air conditioning duct, igniting some lint. A loose duct inspection plate allowed the sparks into the duct, he said.

"It just lit up like gasoline," said worker Mose Mallory, who was operating the torch.

Graze said the fire reached the laundry room via air ducts.

Deputy Chief Steve Perry said 13 vehicles and 44 men responded to the report of the fire. Ms. Howe said the preliminary damage estimate was $200,000.

Graze said the laundry, which normally handles about 19,000 pounds of linen per day, was still not operational Thursday afternoon.

Attitudes behind nuclear tension studied

NEW YORK (AP) — In the nuclear war game, both sides are raising the bomb bidding. But to many Americans, only one side's buildup is justified — their own.

Tonight's NBC documentary, "Facing Up To The Bomb," explains the genesis of that position, while offering insight into what seem to be the legitimate fears of the Soviet Union.

"The idea that anybody could be afraid of the United States was something that only very slowly entered the minds of Americans," says Ernest May of Harvard, a specialist in the arms race. "We assumed that we were Galahad."

Ray Medvedev, a historian from the Soviet Union, says to gain a better understanding of the Soviet nuclear buildup requires a better understanding of Soviet attitudes toward America.

"Those phrases about American imperialism wanting to impose its will upon the entire world are not simply propaganda," he says. "Many Soviet leaders and officials believe them."

In the world of nuclear and rhetorical overkill, it's not constructive simply to say these perceptions are not based in reality, or that they are fostered by disinformation.

That message is offered tonight in NBC's analytical documentary, anchored by correspondent John Hart, on the eve of major disarmament demonstrations. "Facing Up To The Bomb" gets underneath the nuclear arms race from the historical and psychological perspective of the two superpowers.

The bottom line is that they seemingly are a major source of motivation for the Soviets, and something Americans must comprehend.

"The idea that anybody could be afraid of the United States was something that only very slowly entered the minds of Americans," says Ernest May of Harvard, a specialist in the arms race. "We assumed that we were Galahad."
