

Local cost of Bell request: $4.60 per month

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

Big Springers will pay $4.60 more on residential and $6.45 more on business monthly telephone bills if a Southwestern Bell rate hike request is approved by the Texas Public Utilities Commission.

Bell asked the state PUC yesterday to grant it a $471.5 million increase in residential and business rates. The company also wants to reduce from 10 to three the number of free directory assistance calls a customer can make.

Bell has two purposes in making the rate hike request, according to Jay Allen, a Bell spokesman in Midland.

The first purpose is to "bring the services that are underpriced (primarily local service) up to their costs" to make it possible for them to compete with independent companies such as MCI, Allen said.

"It costs (Bell) twice as much to provide local phone service as it costs the customer," he said. Allen said the subsidy for local service comes from "long distance and other revenues."

Allen said the second purpose for the rate increase is to "try to get people who use the services to pay for it."

Relatively few people use the directory assistance service "yet all the customers subsidize those people who do," Allen said. The company requested the number of free directory assistance calls be decreased from 10 to three. Information calls over the limit cost 25 cents each.

Long distance rates, which Allen said cost less than the revenues they produce, would remain unchanged.

Allen said the PUC rate hearings probably would occur in late summer and be implemented late in the year

"about the same time as last year, on Christmas Eve."

Bell put into effect a $243.7 million rate hike Dec. 24, 1981.

The Associated Press reported yesterday that Bell Vice President Paul Roth said he will decide in mid-October whether to institute the higher rates under a bond pending PUC action.

The AP said Bell had to refund $23 million to customer earlier this year because the PUC did not grant the increase Bell had begun charging before the 1981 rate hike decision.

THE PROUD FATHER — Prince Charles is mobbed by well-wishers as he leaves St. Mary's Hospital in London Monday night after the birth of his son. The

Diana gives birth to 7-pound, blue-eyed boy

LONDON (AP) — Church bells pealed, cannon roared and Union Jacks fluttered everywhere as Britain rejoiced today over the birth of a baby destined to be king.

Princess Diana and her blue-eyed 7-pound, 1 1/2-ounce son born Monday night were doing "extremely well" after a comfortable night's rest at St. Mary's Hospital in west London, Buckingham Palace said.

To the cheers and applause of well-wishers standing in a drizzling rain, a succession of royalty, including the baby's father, Prince Charles, and grandmother, Queen Elizabeth II, arrived for visits with the 20-year-old princess and her child, second in line to the British throne.

Charles, the 33-year-old heir, who attended the birth, emerged after a three-hour visit with his wife and son to say, "Everything's marvelous."

He stood in the rain for almost two minutes, telling reporters the princess was recovering her strength after the 16-hour labor and the blondish baby was in "good form ... looking a bit more human this morning."

The prince skirted questions about the baby's name. See Royal, page 2-A

Jury finds Hinckley innocent by insanity

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., the brooding loner who tried to kill the president of the United States, escaped life in prison but today begins a life of confinement in a federal mental hospital.

Hinckley cried and his sobbing parents embraced Monday night when Judge Barrington D. Parker, as tense as anyone in the courtroom, read the verdict: "Not guilty by reason of insanity."

Not guilty by reason of insanity of attempting to assassinate the president. Not guilty by reason of insanity of assault with intent to kill four men. Not even guilty, because of insanity, of carrying a pistol without a license. Thirteen times, Parker pronounced the insanity acquittal.

Through it all, Hinckley stood facing the panel, his head bowed.

The jury of seven women and five men agonized for 24 hours over four days. Their decision makes Hinckley's next stop St. Elizabeths mental hospital in Washington.

One juror told her husband they "hoped they did the right thing." Added juror Virginia Smith to a reporter, "There was not enough evidence that he was sane."

On March 30, 1981, Hinckley bent in a shooter's crouch and fired two-handed at President Ronald Reagan with exploding bullets. He was wrestled into custody and since then has spent hundreds of hours in interviews with trial psychiatrists.

Now he undergoes a different sort of evaluation.

Within 50 days, Parker must hold a hearing to determine whether Hinckley should remain institutionalized or be set free — the latter an unlikely course. The judge set July 12 for a further proceeding, but did not specify the purpose.

The law places the burden of proof on Hinckley to show, "by a preponderance of the evidence that he is not likely to injure himself or other persons due to mental illness." He See Hinckley, page 2-A

Big Springers nix verdict

A U.S. District Court jury yesterday found John W. Hinckley Jr., who was accused of shooting President Reagan and three other men 15 months ago, innocent by reason of insanity. Local reaction to the verdict follows.

PETE POINDEXTER:

It's ridiculous to turn a person out after something like that. He should be put where he won't do that again. It's (the decision) just as wrong as it can be.

O.T. BREWSTER:

He's (Hinckley) not crazy. If they set him free he'll do it again. He should be put in an institution, he shouldn't be running around in society.

ELDRED GRAY:

I think it's a shame. He should be put in prison, I don't think he was crazy. He'll be out on the street in two years or less.

VIRGIL FOWLER:

I think it will cause a lot of people to think they can get away with the same thing. It's just not right and he should be punished.

HERMAN WILKERSON:

He should be put away. He just wanted attention. He's a big, old spoiled child and he wanted to be famous.

LARRY SHEPPARD:

He knew what he was doing. The court system has gone a little too far this time.

Red Cross aids area storm victims

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

The American Red Cross usually has a low profile — until there is a disaster. Then the organization comes into prominence providing aid and relief for victims of nature's wrath.

Residents of Sand Springs, reeling from a violent hail and wind storm Friday, are being helped this week by the Big Spring Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The chapter set up temporary relief headquarters in Midway Baptist Church, with office hours from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., according to Sharon Nuckowles, executive director of the chapter. Red Cross staffers will remain in Sand Springs probably until the end of the week, depending on the flow of traffic into the office, she said.

Red Cross officials urge everyone who wants to file a claim to do so as quickly as possible because of the small amount of time allotted to serve Sand Springs. The assistance is provided to homeowners who have no insurance coverage or other assets with which to repair and rebuild their homes, Ms. Nuckowles said.

Council mulls street repair bids

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council is expected to award a bid for a project to improve several streets in the city and near the municipal airport at tonight's meeting.

Only three bids for the project were received and opened June 16. Low bidder was Price Construction Co. with $646,584.50, which compares to the $754,142.50 estimate by Parkhill, Smith and Cooper, engineers hired by the city for the project.

The council also is expected to award a bid for a half-ton pick-up truck for the Airpark. Only one bid was received and opened on June 15.

Bob Brock Ford submitted the bid for $8,540.80, less than the budgeted amount of $9,000.

In other business, the city council will:

- Consider Jon Hillman's request for renewal of a permit to keep livestock within city limits.

- Hear the final reading of an ordinance allowing a two-family to retail zone change in block 23 of the McDowell Heights addition.

- Hear the final reading of an or-inance setting minimum specifications for fixed base operators at the airport.

- Hear the final reading of a resolution authorizing an agreement with Trans Regional Air Inc. to lease airport fuel storage tanks.

- Vote on a resolution suspending a proposal fuel cost factor tariff by Texas Electric Service Co. for an additional 30 days.

- Appoint a city health officer. The council meets at 6:30 p.m. in room 205 of Big Spring City Hall, Fourth and Nolan.

would remain confined indefinitely until the court makes the decision.

The victims, referred to as "bit players" by Hinckley, were silent in the hours after verdict.

"The White House has no comment," said a spokesman for Reagan.

The Bradys are aware of the verdict and they have no comment on it," Press Secretary James S. Brady was shot in the brain and is permanently impaired. Policeman Thomas Delahanty took a bullet in the neck and was forced to take early retirement. Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy is back on the presidential protective detail after recovering from painful surgery.

Hinckley used the bit player characterization with defense psychiatrist William T. Carpenter Jr. in describing his life as a movie starring himself and actress Jodie Foster. "The movie ain't over yet, folks," Hinckley told Carpenter. Miss Foster's videotaped testimony that she had no relationship with Hinckley set him off on the first of five walk-outs from his own trial.

When his own attorney, Vincent Fuller, referred to Hinckley's

JOHN HINCKLEY JR.
...found innocent

unreturned love for Miss Foster as a delusion, Hinckley broke out in tears.

Hinckley had never met the actress, though he traveled 10 times to New Haven, Conn., where she attended Yale University, and he telephoned her dormitory room and stuffed love letters under her door and in her mailbox, according to defense testimony.

With its verdict, the jury said that Hinckley, because of "mental disease or defect, lacked substantial capacity to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law or lacked substantial capacity to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct." That is the legal test for insanity.

The jury spared Hinckley from possible life sentences on each of five major counts.

It is doubtful that Hinckley's wealthy parents, who footed the half-million-dollar defense bill, will want him released anytime soon. His mother, JoAnn, testified in early May that John was in "total despair" in the months before the shooting and the parents decided he should be hospitalized.

But Mrs. Hinckley said they were dissuaded by Dr. John Hopper, a psychiatrist in their hometown of Evergreen, Colo., who told the parents, "no, no, that will make a cripple out of him. If you think he's sick now, he's really going to be sick if you put him in a hospital."

Last March, Hinckley's father said: "John is truly ill, and we're anxious to get that point across in court."

CROWNED ALREADY — Tracy Dawn Estes of Big Spring, representing Texas in tonight's Junior Miss pageant, already seems to have garnered her crown. Senior program wins $22,968 federal grant

A spokeswoman for U.S. Sen. John Tower of Texas announced that a $22,968 grant for the Big Spring Retired Senior Volunteer Program has been approved in Washington to continue operations for the RSVP facility through June 30, 1983.

Tower's spokeswoman said the senator was "delighted this important and worthwhile project is continuing." Tower called RSVP "the best of the federal programs."

Joy L. Decker, RSVP director in Big Spring, said she felt "real good" about the grant. The program, in its fourth year under the sponsorship of the city of Big Spring, allows citizens 60 or older to share their talents and experiences with the community, Mrs. Decker said.

The program currently has 254 volunteers who work in 14 volunteer stations, Mrs. Decker said. The program has a two-fold purpose, she added, in that it allows seniors to help the community and keep themselves active.

National Digest

Consumer prices rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, spurred by sharply higher gasoline costs, rose a full 1 percent in May, the government said today. The increase was the biggest since September and amounted, on an annual basis, to a rise of 12 percent.

But economists said the new figures do not mean the nation is losing its battle against inflation. Indeed, for the first five months of the year, inflation at the retail level was a modest 3.5 percent, calculated annually.

Inflation for all of last year was 8.9 percent; for 1980, 12.4 percent. But this year, the economists predict, inflation should be from 5 percent to 7 percent.

In April, the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index rose a seasonally adjusted 0.2 percent after falling 0.3 percent in March.

This year's brightened inflation picture has been largely attributed to the sharp recession and the worldwide oil glut.

But the oil surplus is ending, a fact reflected in today's announcement. Gasoline prices rose 0.9 percent last month, reversing April's record drop of 6.7 percent. For the 12 months ending with April, gasoline prices fell almost 15 percent.

Fuel oil prices were up 0.7 percent last month, a sharp reverse from the record 3.8 percent decline in April.

Souter: Coahoma students fare well in state skills test

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

Coahoma schools are "in good shape," according to the Texas Assessment of Basic Skills tests administered recently, said superintendent Richard Souter after the regular meeting of the Coahoma school board last night.

"We've got areas we're weak in and areas we're strong," said Souter. "We'll be working with the teachers to work out those minor things."

As a sampling of scores on those tests, students at the tenth-grade level were able to master the math portion of the test 75 percent of the time, the reading portion 80 percent of the time, and the writing portion 100 percent of the time.

Of fifth graders tested, 57 percent mastered math, 81 percent reading, and 98 percent writing, Souter said. Third graders didn't fare so well in the math and writing portion of the test, with 73 percent mastering writing, 64 percent mastering math and 97 percent mastering reading.

The board also accepted a bid of $38,787 from Price Construction Co. in Big Spring for additional pavement around the high school, and moved to take bids on the old Industrial Arts Building, Souter said.

The Industrial Arts program will be relocated in the former CVAE building, said Souter, and the CVAE program (a type of shop program for students) will be moved to the old cafeteria.

The board accepted resignations from Mark Terry, librarian; Sharon Hamby, special education teacher for high school; John Gibson, high school band director and Karen Helton, kindergarten instructor.

Terry has taken a job as librarian at Jal, N.M., Hamby is going to Forsan, and Helton is moving to Bovina, Souter said. Gibson has taken a job of junior high band director at Sonora, he added.

According to Souter, the following personnel were hired: Hannah Coleman, special education instructor; Joyce Butner, home economics, instructor; Billy Dennis, girl's basketball coach; Jean Lowery, kindergarten instructor; Mavis Bryant, sixth grade instructor; and Sue Homan, librarian.

- The board also:
 - Voted to extend employees' insurance coverage until the employees receive the last checks from the school system.
 - Accepted a bid from C.R. Brune of $60,000 for this year's building trades house, a house which is constructed by students in building trades classes.
 - Selected Donnie Reid as delegate to the Texas School Board Association Convention in October.
 - Purchased additional irrigation pipe from Mesa Irrigation in Lamesa to facilitate watering grass around the new elementary school. Cost of the pipe is $1,400.
 - Purchased six lots from Clawson Lumber Co. to construct future building trades houses. Cost of these lots was $12,500.
 - Opened bids on a new pickup truck for the agriculture department and purchased a 14-foot trailer for that department from Abilene Trailer Sales at a cost of $1,766.
 - Awarded various bids for repairs to the fieldhouse. Total of these bids was $2,500.
 - Voted to purchase a new clock from Simplex Time Recorder Co. and lease a copier from Pitney-Bowles.

Stanton manager's job offered to applicant

The applicant's name was not released.

Compromise settlement in child injury suit

A Big Spring couple and their five-year-old son have been awarded $37,000 in a compromise settlement in their damage suit against Southland Corp. and Universal Carrier. Larry and Sandra Farrow had sued the two companies in 118th District Court as the result of injuries they said their then-four-year-old son Russell suffered in the Seven-11 store at 2301 Wasson.

The original petition filed Nov. 18, 1981, claimed the young Farro had his left leg fractured when a candy rack fell on him March 27, 1981. The suit asked for $63,837 in damages.

Both defendants made no admittance of liability in the final judgment, and stated the offer was made in the from of compromise and settlement. Universal Carrier, the company which manufactured the candy rack, agreed to a $5,000 settlement while Southland Corp.'s payment will equal $32,000 spread over four payments, according to court records.

Eugene W. Brees II represented Universal Carrier while Griffis and Griffis represented Southland. Robert D. Miller of Big Spring was attorney for the Farrow.

United Way picks officers

The United Way of Big Spring and Howard County board of trustees yesterday approved allocations for the upcoming United Way campaign and introduced new officers and trustees.

The board met at 5:15 p.m. Monday for the purpose of approving the fall campaign allocations.

According to board member Pat Moore, the board's allocation committee reviews various agencies' requests for funds and makes recommendations to the whole board.

The new trustees and officers will serve for three years, Mrs. Moore added.

saying he and Diana would decide on one "soon."

In the royal grounds of Hyde Park and the 900-year-old Tower of London, Royal Artillery companies fired the traditional 41-gun salutes to greet the new arrival. The red-white-and-blue Union Jack flew over all public buildings.

A broadly smiling Queen Elizabeth, wearing a lavender coat, acknowledged cheers from the crowd as she arrived at the hospital for a first look at her grandson. Charles greeted her in the doorway with a kiss on the cheek.

After a 20-minute visit, the queen stepped outside again and shook hands with Dr. George Pinker, the royal surgeon-gynecologist who delivered the baby, before leaving for Buckingham Palace.

Diana also received visits from her parents, the 8th Earl Spencer and Frances Shand-Kydd, and her 24-year-old sister, Lady Jane Fellowes, 24. Diana's parents were divorced when she was a child.

"She looks radiant, absolutely radiant, and the grandson is everything his father said he was last night — a lovely baby," said Mrs. Shand-Kydd after her half-hour visit.

Telegrams, flowers and bouquets from world leaders and ordinary people poured into the hospital. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said in a congratulatory telegram, "The whole nation will share in your happiness."

Storm dumps heavy rain on North Texas

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms, some very heavy, moved into North Central Texas and Northeast Texas early today as upper level disturbances continued to move across the state from west to east.

The thunderstorm activity dumped enough heavy rainfall over portions of the state to prompt the National Weather Service to issue a flash flood watch for a portion of North Texas. The watch covered the area along and south of a line from Comanche to Hillsboro to Palestine.

Thunderstorms formed late Monday over the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas and began moving across the state.

Elsewhere, skies were clear over southern, western and northwestern sections of the state.

Early morning temperatures were in the 60s in the Panhandle and mountains of Southwest Texas and in the 70s elsewhere. Extremes ranged from 62 at Amarillo to 79 at Galveston.

Some early morning temperatures around the state included 66 at Wichita Falls, 70 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 67 at Lufkin, 78 at Houston, 72 at Corpus Christi, 76 at San Antonio, 70 at Midland and 64 at El Paso.

Forecasts called for scattered showers and thundershowers over South Texas and widely scattered showers and thundershowers over north central sections of the state. It was to be clear in western and northwestern portions of Texas.

Highs were to be mostly in the 90s, ranging from the 80s in the mountains and along the coast to near 105 in the Big Bend valleys.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s and 70s. Highs Wednesday will again be mostly in the upper 80s and the 90s.

Angry Donovan vows to keep job

WASHINGTON (AP) — An angry, combative Raymond J. Donovan says he will not be driven from his job as labor secretary by a "wonderland school of justice" that wants to convict him on charges of having ties to organized crime before a trial.

Donovan, hoping for vindication from a pending report by a special federal prosecutor, said Monday that when the report is out, "I will have a great deal to say about the many vicious attacks that have been made."

Without identifying his accusers, Donovan said he has been victimized by unsubstantiated news leaks "by an alliance of individuals who have a total disregard for the truth."

Donovan said he expected the report of court-appointed special prosecutor Leon Silverman to be completed within a few days.

But Silverman, reached at his New York law office, said, "I don't know where he got that from."

Silverman declined to say when the report will be finished. Some of President Reagan's principal advisers reportedly favor an immediate leave of absence for Donovan.

But Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Monday that Reagan feels there is no reason for the labor secretary to resign or step aside since all the facts in the case are not known.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia has called for Donovan to take a leave until the special prosecutor's report is done. Last week, the 46 Democrats in the Senate endorsed Byrd's suggestion.

And Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who heads the Senate Labor Committee, said he did not see how Donovan could stay on in the face of that united opposition.

But Donovan said Monday, "Quite obviously, some of our elected officials are not content to allow facts to be determined in an orderly manner."

"They seem more interested in the wonderland school of justice that stands for judgment now, trial later."

The charges against Donovan include bid-rigging and mob-influenced labor contracts involving his former company, Schiavone Construction of Secaucus, N.J.

After reading his statement, Donovan strode from the stage of the Labor Department auditorium, ignoring questions from reporters.

In the latest round of allegations, Time magazine, quoting an FBI memo, said a purported "bagman" for organized crime who was found shot to death in Manhattan eight days ago allegedly "socialized on a regular basis" with Donovan years ago.

The report said Fred Furino, 52, the victim of the gangland-style slaying, disappeared after repeatedly flunking a polygraph test given by the special prosecutor's office which quizzed him about Donovan.

Syrian, Israeli troops fight in central Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets blasted Syrian artillery positions east of Beirut today to support a tank advance apparently aimed at seizing the Beirut-Damascus highway in Lebanon's central mountains, Lebanon's state and privately owned radio stations reported.

The military command in Tel Aviv confirmed the air attacks and said they came after an intense duel between Israeli and Syrian cannons.

It appeared to be the worst outbreak of Syrian-Israeli fighting since the two countries agreed to a cease fire June 11.

The Lebanon radio broadcasts said Syrian positions around the summer resorts of Hammama and Aley took the brunt of the air attacks.

The Tel Aviv communique accused the Syrians of inflicting "a heavy barrage" of artillery fire on Israeli forces from the area of Hammama, just north of the Beirut-Damascus highway in central Lebanon.

It said the Syrians opened fire in the morning, Israeli forces shot back at the Syrian guns and then came under intensified barrages.

Meanwhile, Israel's bombardment of Palestinian slums and residential neighborhoods in west Beirut tapered off today, and the Palestine Liberation Organization proposed demilitarizing the Lebanese capital to avert a feared Israeli onslaught.

Lebanon's newly-founded "National Salvation Council" prepared to reconvene to discuss the PLO offer as a way of preventing an Israeli advance into the beleaguered city to destroy the PLO's remaining military might.

Council members shuttled between PLO chairman Yasser Arafat and U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, seeking a compromise that would stop a bloody Israeli-PLO showdown in the 16th day of Israel's invasion.

As political efforts intensified, the dreaded roar of artillery and rocket barrages in and around Beirut stopped at daybreak, when Islam's holy month of dawn-to-dusk fasting began throughout the Arab world.

Argentina quarrels over president

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina's generals are still quarreling over who will be the country's next president in a dispute that threatens to shatter the ruling military junta in the wake of the nation's defeat in the Falklands war.

A sharply divided junta of army, navy and air force commanders failed Monday for the fourth straight day to reach agreement on who should succeed ex-President Leopoldo Galtieri. The three officials said they would meet again today.

Galtieri, an army general, was forced by his fellow generals to resign last week because of Argentina's humiliating loss in the undeclared 74-day South Atlantic war.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher meets with President Reagan in Washington on Wednesday and is expected to renew her request that the United States take part in an international peacekeeping force to maintain the security of the Falkland Islands.

Britain retook the Falklands on June 14, 10 weeks after Argentine troops invaded the British colony 250 miles east of Argentina's southern tip.

The air force threatened to withdraw from Argentina's six-year-old military regime if the army, traditionally the most powerful military branch here, insists on replacing Galtieri with another army general, a high military source told The Associated Press.

"The air force does not want to be part of another dictatorship," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

Inmates take over prison for 12 hours

GARDEN CITY, Ga. (AP) — Officials canceled work schedules today at the Coastal Correctional Institution following a 12-hour uprising that left one guard injured and denied charges that overcrowding contributed to the melee.

The Monday disturbance ended with authorities promising to address every issue in the inmates' list of demands for better living conditions and to "make changes immediately where it is feasible," said state prisons spokeswoman Sara Engle.

Authorities, however, refused to grant prisoners' requests for a amnesty from charges stemming from the uprising, which involved six of eight cellblocks.

Officials canceled prisoners' work schedules, but otherwise ordered a return to normal at the 1-year-old facility.

As authorities were unsure how many of the prison's 740 inmates were involved in the takeover. Each cellblock houses 100 to 124 prisoners, said Paula Putney, another department spokeswoman.

Warden John Weldon said some inmates will be transferred, some will receive disciplinary reports and others probably will end up with longer sentences as a result of the disturbance.

The only reported injury occurred when a guard was struck in the eye by a shard of glass as inmates broke into the control booth in one of the cellblocks at the start of the disturbance at about 10 a.m. Monday. The guard was not hospitalized.

Mrs. Engle estimated damages in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, but said that all cell blocks, including two that were heavily damaged, remain habitable.

The uprising began with a confrontation between an inmate and a prison guard at about 9 a.m. Monday that was joined in by several other inmates, Weldon said.

"It was a chain reaction," he said. The rioting inmates destroyed windows, lights and beds, and burned clothes and blankets, officials said.

Supreme Court refuses barrier on Fed lawsuits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a victory for citizens who claim their civil rights have been violated, is refusing to impose a barrier to filing lawsuits in federal court.

By a 7-2 vote, the justices ruled Monday that such individuals do not have to "exhaust" all possible state administrative procedures before filing their federal lawsuits.

The ruling affects the often used Civil Rights Act of 1871, which allows people to sue state and local government officials for civil rights violations.

By not having an exhaustion requirement, some critics say federal courts become clogged with lawsuits filed by prisoners and others who claim officials have acted improperly. Prisoners filed 15,639 such civil rights suits in federal courts in the 12 months ending last Oct. 31, Justice Lewis F. Powell said in dissenting from the court's decision.

During a routine congressional budget hearing last March, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor gave a sneak preview of how the court would rule.

When asked how Congress could help alleviate the court's growing workload, she said the lawmakers could impose an exhaustion requirement in the 1871 law, implying the court wasn't going to make such a requirement.

If the court followed its normal procedures, the nine justices had taken a preliminary vote on Monday's "exhaustion requirement" case just days before Mrs. O'Connor made her comments.

Thus, Mrs. O'Connor apparently was tipping the court's hand on the conclusion it reached during its secret deliberations.

In Monday's case, a secretary at Florida International University in Miami sued the Florida Board of Regents in 1979.

Georgia Patsy said she had been passed up for promotion because she was a woman and white. She asked for either a promotion or $500,000 in monetary damages.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals later ruled that Ms. Patsy had to exhaust all "adequate and appropriate" state administrative procedures before filing her federal lawsuit.

In an opinion written by Justice Thurgood Marshall, the Supreme Court reversed that ruling and reinstated Ms. Patsy's lawsuit.

The case was sent back to lower courts for further consideration of Ms. Patsy's claims.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger joined Powell in dissenting. They said such exhaustion is required.

In other action Monday, the high court:

—Agreed to decide whether states can ban new nuclear power plants. The case pits California's moratorium on nuclear plant construction against supporters of nuclear power, including the Reagan administration.

—Ruled unanimously that federal judges should stay out of most disciplinary proceedings against lawyers, as long as the state procedures are being conducted fairly.

—Agreed to decide when federal prosecutors can give secret grand jury data to the Internal Revenue Service to aid the agency's non-criminal probes of suspected tax cheaters.

Committee studying misuse of pesticides

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — A man said his son and neighbor were sickened by drifting insecticide, a rancher contended he lost six calves to the poison and a government inspector testified she saw farmworkers sprayed by a crop duster.

The three were among dozens of witnesses who testified Monday before a legislative subcommittee looking into the use and possible misuse of pesticides.

Floyd Zahn said he lost six calves on his ranch near Corpus Christi because his cows were poisoned by chemicals sprayed nearby to defoliate a cotton field.

Norma Adams, a wage inspector with the U.S. Department of Labor, says she was interviewing farmworkers in a cabbage field near Harlingen when a crop duster passed over twice and some spray drifted onto her and the workers.

Chairman Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, said the panel was not out to ban pesticides but to discover if existing safety regulations are adequate.

"I think everyone here acknowledges that farmers are dependent on pesticides to grow their crops," Oliveira said.

Much of the testimony concerned chemicals sprayed in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, a four-county area with extensive crops of cotton, grain and vegetables. "I think even the crudest estimates say that 25 to 35 percent of all pesticides used in the state are used in this area (the Valley)," said Tony Mollhagen, director of the Texas Tech University pesticide laboratory in San Benito.

Mollhagen said his lab documents perhaps a dozen acute, one-time cases of pesticide poisoning each year. These involve chemical overexposure to applicators, farm laborers and individuals living near sprayed fields.

A more difficult problem is discovering the long term effects of pesticide exposure, he added. Several witnesses complained of aerially sprayed chemicals drifting through their target fields into neighborhoods.

"Drift is a problem and we recognize this. The smaller the particle size of the chemical, the better control of insects. But the smaller particles will drift more," said Charles Allen, entomologist with Texas A&M University extension service in Weslaco.

Farmers cannot afford to wait until the prevalent southeast wind calms down to spray their field, said one Cameron County cotton farmer.

"These insect problems sometimes develop overnight," said Mark Wick. "If I wait for a day when it's going to be calm, I may lose my crop. I wish there was an easy solution to this problem. But if we're going to continue to have food and fiber in this country, we're going to have to have pesticides or something to take their place to control crop-eating insects."

The use of cottonseed oil instead of water as a spray base has cut down drift problems, said Ron King, chemical manager of the Valley Co-Op Oil Mill in Harlingen. In addition, a line of synthetic pesticides called pyrethroids is gaining use, King said. These chemicals are safer than the organophosphates now prevalent, are less expensive and generally need fewer applications, he added.

A formula for personal success

The formula for personal success was outlined recently by Ola B. Madsen in an address to some 600 4-H club members and their leaders.

Everyone has a chance to succeed in life, Madsen said. All it takes is the right attitude, enthusiasm for life, goals to work toward, and the persistence to stick to it.

MAKE YOUR ATTITUDE positive, said the president of Adventures in Total Development from Nicholasville, Ky. Believe that you were created for success and endowed with the seed of greatness.

Enthusiasm is the second ingredient in the formula for success, Madsen said. Get excited about school, work and challenges in the future.

"Goals give you a sense of direction," Madsen said. "It's easy to get excited when you know what the future holds."

Writing out goals on paper will clarify them. Figure the cost to achieve each goal. This cost may be loyalty and time instead of money, he said. Finally, put a date on each goal and work to accomplish it by that date.

"DON'T BE AFRAID to dream big," Madsen said, "but be realistic."

To make the formula work, one must have the persistence to stick with it like a postage stamp until it's finished, he said.

"No matter what happens, don't ever quit."

Around the Rim

By RICHARD HORN

Purging a wound

As a Sunday thunderstorm descended on Midland, my best friend and I sat across from each other at a Denny's Restaurant.

I call Steve my best friend because we were roommates in college for the entire four years. That means we shared the terrors and triumphs of college life together and formed a bond that's not easily broken.

But that was over two years ago. After graduating, we followed our separate ambitions. We said we would remain close, but I didn't hear anything from him until last week, when he called to say he was moving from Midland to St. Louis. I never even knew he moved to Midland.

"Why didn't you call before now?" I asked as I picked at a hamburger. Steve was wolfing down a steak sandwich.

"I tried," he said. "You were never home. I figured you'd eventually find out by calling my folks or something."

"Oh."

For some reason, I was nervous talking to this guy with whom I used to share everything. We stayed up many a night in college talking about all the things we wanted out of life, and all the things we didn't want and all the things that really bothered us. But there were a lot of blank spots in this conversation.

EVENTUALLY he told me why he was in Midland, and why he was leaving for, of all places, St. Louis. He said he had gotten a job with an accounting firm four months ago, but he had been fired last Wednesday. He didn't offer an explanation for the firing. I didn't ask.

He told me he had just broken up with a girl he was planning to marry in January. I said I was sorry and told him that I too had just broken off a relationship. We talked about that for awhile. He had been responsible for my ever meeting her.

More quiet. We finished eating and looked at the rain and lightning out the window. I searched for a topic. Any topic. Like my thumb.

"My thumb is killing me," I said, holding it up for him to see. I had somehow torn off a small part of the nail and hadn't done much to protect it. The thumb was swollen and turning an interesting color.

"My God, Rich, that looks terrible," Steve said. He really seemed concerned. "Let's go. You need to fix that up."

I was glad we had at least found something to talk about. We paid the bill and walked to the drugstore next to the restaurant. While I protested loudly, Steve picked out a bottle of hydrogen peroxide, some gauze bandages, adhesive tape and a tube of ointment. We paid for it and went out and sat on the curb in front of Denny's.

"Have you ever seen a hand without a thumb?" Steve asked with a smile.

"Uh... No," I said.

"The best way to fix this up is to make it bleed and clean it out some. Hold on."

"WHAT?" I said. Steve put the injured part of the thumb between two fingers and squeezed. It started bleeding. It hurt like fire.

"EEEEEEEEEE OOOOWWWW! You crazy fool!" I yelled in my best Richard Pryor voice.

"You gotta do this," Steve said. He squeezed harder. I screamed louder.

IT MUST have been a sight. Two men sitting on a curb in front of Denny's, one squeezing the other's thumb while the other one kicked and screamed and dripped blood on the parking lot. People walking by looked. People inside the restaurant looked. We must have started a few conversations.

Steve eventually decided I had bled enough and put the ointment and bandage on the thumb. We talked a little while longer, but not about anything of importance to either of us.

All I can remember wondering was how two people who had once been so close could now be so far apart. He seemed to be the same as always, but he acted — and I felt — like I had changed. Was I wrapped up in my own life so much that I didn't even keep up with a close friend? We used to talk about how much we hated people who forgot friends and family so they could pursue some goal that they weren't even sure they wanted. Had I become that type of person?

It was getting late and Steve said he had to go. He was leaving Tuesday for St. Louis, a town he once said he would never want to call home. He said there was a possible job opening, but he had to live there two months before he would be eligible.

I could tell he was hurting and that he needed to talk. He gave every indication that he had no firm plans for his life right now. All of his goals and dreams had come to an end in the last few weeks. He seemed angry at me. I didn't offer any advice or sympathy. Didn't feel like it was wanted.

We said goodbye. I thanked him for the first aid on the thumb. He smiled and said he hoped it didn't fall off. He got in his car and drove away.

I watched him leave, then went over to my car. I needed to get back to Big Spring. I had a lot of things to do. Everybody always has a lot of things to do.

War game of the day

"All right we're going to war game it today. Get out your pads and pencils. We are the superpower Alpha, and the enemy is the superpower Beta. Both sides have enough stuff to blow each other off the face of the Earth. What do we do?"

"We stay clear of each other as much as we can."

"Right. Now a mini-power named Omega comes to us and says it wants to be our friend. How do we show our gratitude?"

"We give the people a few weapons to defend themselves against Beta."

"Correct. Here is where it starts getting difficult. Another mini-power named Delta comes to us and says they also want to be our friends. What do we do about them?"

"We give them a few weapons, too."

"Why?"

"Because if we don't, Beta will."

"All right, let's move along. We've sold Omega weapons and we've sold Delta weapons. What do we do next?"

"We bring their military people here to teach them how to use them."

"And then what happens?"

"Each side thinks we've sold better weapons to the other, and demands more powerful stuff."

"Do we sell them the better equipment?"

"Yes, because the more equipment we can sell a mini-power, the cheaper it is to build military stuff for ourselves. Also the more Alpha equipment they have, the more dependent they become on us as a supplier."

"So politically the best way to win the hearts and minds of people is by loading them down with arms."

"Everyone knows that, Professor. I thought you said this was going to be difficult."

"The game isn't over yet. Now Alpha has supplied Omega and Delta with guns, missiles, ships, submarines and airplanes. We also have assured both Omega and Delta that an attack on them would be considered an attack on us. We, of course, had Beta in mind when we made these assurances. Have we done the right thing?"

"Of course. The more countries we can line up against Beta, the safer we will be."

"On paper it looks good. But now we get to the war game problem. What happens if Omega takes our equipment and uses it to attack Delta, because they consider Delta a bigger threat to them than Beta?"

"We tell Omega to desist."

"What if they refuse?"

"We point out that according to our military agreement, they were only supposed to use our equipment to defend themselves against Beta."

"What if they tell us to stuff the agreement?"

"They can't tell us to stuff the agreement because we're a superpower, and no one talks that way to a superpower, because if they did we could wipe them off the face of the Earth."

"But we can't wipe them off the face of the Earth, can we?"

"I guess not. But we can cut them off from future supplies."

"But if we do that, Beta, Theta and Pi will step in and fill the void, and we would have lost a friend, and also one of our best customers."

"So we have to support Omega in its war against Delta?"

"Not necessarily. We don't want to lose Delta to Beta either."

"Then we have no choice but to let the two mini-powers fight it out with our equipment until one side wins?"

"Anybody got any better ideas?"

"Couldn't we take it to the United Nations? They're paid to keep peace."

"We could but it wouldn't help."

"So what's the solution, Professor?"

"There is no solution. There is only a moral. It's no fun being a superpower if every time you ask a favor of a mini-power, it tells you to stuff it."

Fruits of the grand tour

WASHINGTON — Before his grand tour of Europe President Reagan softened appreciably his stance as an anti-Communist tough guy. But what did he get in return?

Only a breathing spell is the impression I have after chats with Francois Mitterrand and Helmut Schmidt. For, while a temporary stop has been put to the coming apart of the Atlantic alliance, the French and German leaders still differ with the President on the central matter of dealing with the Soviet Union.

On taking office, Reagan advertised an unrelenting hard line toward Russia. He stigmatized the Soviet leaders as "liars" and "cheats" who stopped at nothing to gain advantage. He stressed the need for a major military buildup, including a strengthening of nuclear weapons in this country and Western Europe. He denounced the SALT II Treaty concluded with Moscow by the Carter administration but never ratified by the Senate. He assailed Russian actions around the world and inside the Soviet Union itself. He made the mere idea of arms control negotiations with Russia seem an exercise in self-deception.

BY THE TIME he went to Europe, the President had come about smartly. He had opened negotiations with the Russians in Geneva on limiting — preferably to zero — intermediate-range missiles based in Europe. He had set a date, June 29, for opening another round of negotiations on reducing — preferably by one-third — intercontinental nuclear weapons. He had promised "not to undercut" — the SALT II Treaty. He had dropped broad hints about a future meeting at the summit with Leonid Brezhnev.

President Mitterrand, whom I saw at the Elysee Palace a couple of days after the Versailles summit, made it plain he wanted the President to move even further toward accommodation with Moscow. He said the Russian leaders "counted a lot" on moving forward with arms control, and even subordinated the possibility for "various interventions" to that end.

He believed they were especially keen to head off NATO plans for deploying Pershing and cruise missiles on the Continent.

But where President Reagan insists that Pershing and cruise deployment should go forward unless Russia reduces to zero its 200 to 300 SS-20 missiles, Mitterrand is prepared to settle for less. He said that "if the Russians removed a part of their (SS-20) arsenal, there would be no need for deployment" (of the Pershing and cruise missiles).

Harsh criticism was leveled by Mitterrand at Reagan's effort to put economic pressure on the Kremlin. The French president called "unacceptable" an American proposal for limits on the extension of government credits to Russia. He said that where France offered government credits at 11.5 percent, American private interests gave Moscow credit at 8 percent. In those conditions, he felt the effort to limit public credits was "ridiculous."

Chancellor Schmidt, whom I saw in New York after the NATO summit in Bonn, was, as Mitterrand predicted, "on the same wave length." Schmidt referred to the American preference for zero nuclear weapons in the European theater as an "opening position." The clear implication was that, in time, the West Germans would renounce deployment of Pershing and cruise missiles, if the Russians agreed to cut down the number of SS-20s in Europe to about 75. Schmidt suggested that eventually the U.S. would want to merge the negotiations on intermediate-range missiles with those on intercontinental missiles.

IF ANYTHING, Schmidt was even more critical than Mitterrand of American efforts to mount economic pressures on the Soviet Union. He said that only about 1 percent of Russia's gross national product was concentrated in foreign trade. That compares with about 10 percent for the U.S. and 28 percent for West Germany. So, except for certain clearly specified, high-technology items, a limitation on trade was bound to hurt the West more than the Soviet Union. Moreover, Schmidt thought that one area where trade restrictions might damage Russia was precisely that in which, for reasons he well understood, the U.S. wanted to do business — namely grain sales.

Both Mitterrand and Schmidt praised President Reagan personally and the accommodations he had made. Both underlined the joint commitment to the Atlantic alliance. So, for the time being, the pressure is off and the U.S. enjoys a period of ease in Atlantic relations.

But there is handwriting on the wall. The administration is still on the defensive in the matter of arms control. Merely adjusting American proposals to suit European sensibilities is not good enough. To avoid being pushed into awkward, and maybe even dangerous corners by the pressure of events, Washington has to get out front. The administration still needs to develop a comprehensive strategy for working with the Atlantic allies on a joint approach to Moscow.

Thoughts

The trouble with many of us is that we just slide along in life. If we would only give, just once, the same amount of reflection to what we want out of life that we give to the question of what to do with a two weeks' vacation, we would be startled at our false standards and the aimless procession of our busy days.

—Dorothy Canfield

A religion that is small enough for our understanding would not be large enough for our needs.

—Arthur Balfour

Most people have some sort of religion — at least they know which church they're staying away from.

—John Erskine

Religion is a great force — the only real motive force in the world; but you must get at a man through his own religion, not through yours.

—George Bernard Shaw

Nothing can so poignantly evoke the flavor of the receding past as some remembered tune, some melody that has caught up and woven into its own unconscious fabric the very color and fragrance of a day gone by.

—Alexander Woolcott

Billy Graham

Why did you go to Moscow?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I heard that you recently went to Moscow to preach. Why did you go there, when there are so many other places in the world that need the Gospel?—J.K.

DEAR J.K.: I went to Moscow for one primary reason: to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ. As you know, the Soviet Union is officially an atheistic nation, and believers have often faced many difficulties. At the same time, Christians there have prayed for years that it would be possible for me to come, and when an invitation came to visit Moscow for a few days and speak several times I felt that God was definitely opening the door.

It was an unforgettable trip, with far more opportunities to proclaim the Gospel than I had ever expected. In one meeting in a packed church, there were several hundred who raised their hands at the end of my evangelistic message to indicate their desire to accept Christ or recommit their lives to him. Perhaps most unexpected however were the many opportunities I had in private meetings, especially with high-ranking government officials, to speak openly and frankly about my faith in Christ and the meaning of his death and resurrection for our lives. I also had opportunities to speak to many of them about some of the things that concern Christians and others in the West, such as religious toleration. Although I received some criticism in the American press for not concentrating on these things publicly, it was clear to me that we had a unique opportunity to do some good by talking privately with leaders who actually make policy.

Jesus Christ commanded his disciples to "Go and make disciples of all nations" (Matthew 28:19). I was thankful for the opportunity to preach the Gospel there, and pray that God will strengthen and bless believers in that nation.

Woman seeks phone deposit return

Dear Editor,
I have recently had my telephone service disconnected and I expected a return of the one hundred dollar deposit that was required before my phone was connected. Let me tell you, I expected wrong.

I called the phone company to tell them to disconnect my phone and I found out that they showed no record of me making a deposit. I looked for the receipt but with no luck.

Since the deposit was paid in cash I have no return check. My mother called the phone company and a girl informed her that my deposit showed on one microfilm but not on another one. She said she would clear it up and send my deposit within two working weeks.

The time came but the check didn't. We called the company only to find that there is no such thing as two separate microfilms. The lady informed us that she would try to find the receipt record but she needed the date that we paid the deposit. I came up with as close a date as I could and waited a few more days. I called back only to find I need a code number off the deposit receipt.

All this makes me wonder if the same thing has happened to other people who have lost their deposit receipts.

I know of many other people who are having trouble with their phone services such as long waiting periods on repairs and connection.

If Southwestern Bell can't handle the load maybe we should all get together and ask another phone service, such as MCI, to come to the Big Spring area.

Defense lawyers challenge evidence in Judge Wood case

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Defense lawyers have challenged key government electronic surveillance evidence and the propriety of a judge to preside in the trial of five people charged in connection with the slaying of a federal judge.

Lawyers for five defendants indicted after a massive investigation into the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. delivered dozens of motions to the federal clerk's office before the 5 p.m. Monday deadline.

The bulky stack of motions — forerunners of a possible early court test of the government's case — sought the suppression of electronic surveillance evidence, the disqualification of Chief U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions and the identities of certain witnesses and judges.

Sessions has given prosecutors until July 1 to respond to the motions to be considered during a July 19 hearing. The five defendants tentatively are scheduled to go on trial Sept. 1.

Three of the defendants contended Sessions ought to recuse himself from the case because he was a "long-standing friend," colleague and former prosecutor in the court of the slain judge.

Wood was killed by a sniper on May 29, 1979. At the time of his death he was scheduled to preside over the drug-related continuing criminal enterprise trial of Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra.

Chagra later was convicted and sentenced by Sessions to 30 years in prison without chance of parole.

Federal grand jurors on April 15 indicted Chagra, 39, and convicted contract killer Charles V. Harrelson, 43, for the murder of Wood, alleging Chagra paid Harrelson about $250,000 to kill the judge.

Harrelson, Chagra, his wife, Elizabeth, 29, and his brother, Joseph, 35, were indicted for conspiracy to murder the judge and with obstruction of justice. Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann, 41, was indicted for obstruction of justice and perjury.

Mrs. Chagra's attorney, Charles Campion, said Sessions attended Wood's funeral and was instrumental in getting the federal courthouse here named in the slain judge's memory.

Joseph Chagra's lawyer, Billy Ravkind of Dallas, said Sessions should step down to "sanitize subsequent proceedings from any appearance that bias, prejudice, or personal knowledge of feelings coming from outside the record will influence" judgments on the truth of the indictments.

Interest rates defy the optimism of President Reagan

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The quickest way to get interest rates down is for Congress to prove that it will attempt to reduce government spending — in other words, to pass that budget that has already been passed out of the Senate Budget Committee."

So said President Reagan, May 13, 1982. He said it again, just two weeks ago, at the Palace of Versailles.

On March 30, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said that if Congress and the White House "can come up with a deficit of approximately $90 billion, I think interest rates will come down sharply" by September.

As Reagan and Regan saw it, congressional approval of a compromise budget would trigger a rapid drop in interest rates.

But a funny thing has happened on the way to a lower-deficit agreement. Interest rates are creeping up.

Regan's reasoning was that the smaller deficits would reduce the government's borrowing needs, thereby reducing lender fears that the government would drive up the price of loans by absorbing so much of the available credit.

The House and Senate have passed separate versions of a budget plan, and House-Senate negotiators have come up with a compromise outline of spending cuts, tax increases and number manipulations that would chop the projected deficit from $181 billion to $104 billion. A final vote by the full Congress is expected this week.

Last Thursday, as House-Senate negotiators reached agreement on a budget compromise, interest rates went up and the stock market dropped.

Rates on short-term Treasury bills have risen nearly a full percentage point since late May to about 12.5 percent, which is where they were in late February. Several banks that had lowered their prime lending rate to 16 percent in late May have since returned to the industry-wide average of 16.5 percent. Last week, average rates on a new issue of two-year Treasury notes jumped to a four-month high of 14.43 percent, up from 13.77 percent in May.

Now, Regan says a budget agreement will bring only a modest decline in interest rates by the end of the year.

Female justice didn't plan on being lawyer

HOUSTON (AP) — State District Judge Ruby Kless Sondock, who this week becomes the first full-time female justice of the Texas Supreme Court, says some "incredible strangers" helped her rise to the state's high court.

On Mrs. Sondock's list are former Gov. Preston Smith, who appointed her a domestic relations judge in 1971; former Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who made her Harris County's first female state judge in 1977; and Gov. Bill Clements, who tapped her to fill the vacancy left by the June 10 death of Justice James Denton.

"I was just around at the right time," said Mrs. Sondock. "And I was fortunate enough to have those people I have referred to through the years as incredible strangers."

"They are the reason I was appointed the first time, the second time and this time," she said.

Mrs. Sondock, 56 and a Democrat, said she once thought she'd be too busy running her household and raising two daughters to practice law.

"In law school, I took the courses that were available at the times I could go. At the time I had two children who were quite young. I never thought I'd practice," Mrs. Sondock said.

But she found enough courses and enough time to study that she graduated in 1961 from the University of Houston Law School at the head of her class.

Mrs. Sondock, now a grandmother of four, will serve on the nine-member panel until Dec. 31. She said she has does not plan to run for the seat Denton held, but instead will return to the civil district court bench.

The State Democratic Executive Committee on Saturday nominated state District Judge Bill Kilgarlin for the Texas Supreme Court seat vacated by Denton. The Republicans have no candidate on the November ballot for that office.

When Mrs. Sondock is sworn in this week, she will be the first full-time female justice to serve on the high court.

In 1925, Gov. Pat M. Neff appointed three women as a Special Supreme Court after all the male justices stepped aside for one case that involved a fraternal organization of which they were members. After issuing their decision, they were dismissed.

Although she has never considered herself a feminist and she has not actively participated in the women's movement, Mrs. Sondock said loyalty to that cause played a role in her decision to accept Clements' appointment.

"One of the considerations that went into my decision was the fact that not everybody gets a chance to make a little bit of history," Mrs. Sondock said.

"I'm not suggesting the governor necessarily wanted to appoint a woman... But since I was the woman who had that opportunity, I feel an obligation," she said.

20 ways to help hold down your electric bill.

A checklist to help you save energy and money at home.

Energy Conservation Practices

Electricity is costing more this summer mainly because the fuel to make it is costing more. The following low- or no-cost home conservation practices can help you save energy and money.

- Do not use air conditioner unless absolutely necessary.
- Keep your thermostat set no lower than 80° in the summer. Use ceiling or oscillating fans to circulate the air.
- Check your air conditioner filters each month to see if they need cleaning or changing. And make sure that the outside unit is free of grass, leaves and trash.
- When leaving home, turn off air conditioning. If away for two days or more, turn off water heater.
- If you have a dishwasher, set water heater to 140°; otherwise, set temperature to 120° or lower.
- Use scrap insulation to plug air leaks in attic, around fireplace dampers and window air conditioners.
- Repair water leaks in pipes and faucets, and seal air duct leaks.
- Use drapes, blinds, shades, awnings or plants to block sunlight.
- Try to minimize traffic through outside doors.
- Economize in the kitchen. Plan meals so several dishes can be cooked in the oven at the same time.
- Save when you do laundry. Wash and dry only full loads of clothes.

Energy Conservation Measures

These home installations and modifications require an investment, but may return their cost to you in the form of savings on utility bills.

- Caulk and weatherstrip around doors and windows to reduce air leaks.
- Add insulation to ceilings, walls and floors.
- Insulate ducts, especially in the attic.
- Insulate hot water pipes in attic.
- Install insulation blankets on water heaters, especially in garage or basement.
- Investigate cost-effectiveness of storm doors and windows.
- Add solar-reflecting materials to doors and windows on east/west exposures.
- Install a clock thermostat to automatically set air conditioner and heating unit to desired temperature. Even when you're away from home, the clock thermostat can control your air conditioner for more economical operation.
- Investigate replacing your central air conditioner, especially if unit is more than five years old, with a new unit that has a Seasonal Energy Efficiency Rating (SEER) of at least 8.5.

MISS NELL BROWN

A PART OF HOWARD COUNTY'S HERITAGE WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23

COME BY AND VISIT WITH HER BETWEEN 10 A.M. AND 4 P.M.

On Sept. 16, 1909, two significant events occurred in Big Spring: William Jennings Bryan was here and Nell Brown was born. She began then a life of service and affection for a town she would never leave.

Nell grew up to attend Baylor University and later teach here and at Crane for five years. After quitting teaching, she embarked on a variety of jobs and community programs.

Miss Brown worked until 1978 with an independent oil company after service with the comptroller's office and the local Welcome Wagon. She has worked for 25 years with the 96-county Child Evangelism Fellowship of West Texas. She chaired the Big Spring State Hospital Volunteer Council for 10 years as well as originating the Concert Association.

Despite an impressive career, Nell calls herself a "has-been who used to belong to nearly everything." She indicated, though, while she wasn't doing any volunteer work now, the possibility is still there.

"Chopping weeds is my main occupation," Nell says with a laugh. A member of the First Baptist Church from the beginning, she said she hoped to teach a Sunday School class again "when I get through with the weeds."

Nell wouldn't leave Big Spring for anything, she says. "I've paid for my cemetery lot and marker and everything," she joked. She has two brothers, George Lynn Brown of Odessa and John Wayne Brown of California.

Nell, whose mother's family the Leatherwoods came here in 1902 from Tennessee, has one piece of advice for newcomers to Big Spring: "Stay here three years and you won't want to leave."

First Federal Savings invites everyone to visit Nell on her special day on Wednesday, June 23 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Vendors hit streets to fight Recession

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years ago Faith Collins worked for Rosalynn Carter as a deputy press secretary at the White House. Today, she sells blueberry muffins from a sidewalk pushcart.

Janie Becker sold real estate in some of the posh sections of Washington for four years. When interest rates soared and sales slumped, she started a jam business. Nowadays she sets up a card table on L Street in downtown Washington and peddles cake and preserves.

Mark Scoville was an inspector for a construction company. Last fall, after business had fallen off, he quit. Today, at 19, he's hawking wicker baskets over on 19th Street.

'Everyone says that Washington doesn't feel the recession, but that's not true anymore.'

They are all entrepreneurs by necessity, Washington's new breed of street vendor, not bankers selling apples as in the Great Depression, but products nonetheless of the Recession of 1982.

"There wasn't enough work to keep me busy," Scoville said. "My hours were cut back, and I thought the company would dissolve."

Some are laid-off blue collar workers whose companies have retrenched. Some are college students who can't find full-time work. And some are college graduates who have known the luxury of fat checkbooks and steady jobs, who have shopped at fancy markets and vacationed by the sea, folks who know the difference between government giveaway cheese and French brie.

"Everyone says that Washington doesn't feel the recession, but that's not true anymore," said Miss Collins, 34, who worked for then-first lady Rosalynn Carter. Now, on a prosperous day, she sells 200 muffins at 40 cents each and says: "It's not a good time to be looking for a job."

Joseph Richards, chief of the District of Columbia's Business License Branch, said there are 4,200 licensed street vendors in Washington this spring, an increase of 400 to 500 over last year.

"It's a result of unemployment and inflation," Richards said. "We get 15 or 20 more a week than at this time last year. There are more young people, suburbanites, middle-aged women, husbands and wives who have never done this before. And we've noticed more college graduates."

Ms. Becker, 54, started Homespun, her streetcorner gourmet preserves business, in the fall of 1980. She said one of the hardest aspects of street vending is being ignored by passers-by. "At first, it was difficult. The world sees vendors as nothing people. In other jobs, I was used to being treated with courtesy."

Richards said prospective vendors must pay $25 for a license. They also pay a predetermined sales tax — $100 for city residents, $500 for non-residents. Many vendors sell their wares from tables, and carts can cost up to $1,000.

In a touristy city like Washington, vending can be a lucrative business, Richards said. "I've heard of full-time vendors with lots of carts who make $50,000 a year. But we have some who cry they can't make any money."

The unemployment rate for Washington jumped from 8.2 percent in April 1981 to 10.6 percent in April 1982, the highest since the city began keeping records 12 years ago.

Government workers have also been affected as President Reagan has sought to cut the federal work force. Reagan's proposed budget for 1983 calls for cutting 75,000 government jobs by 1984 and another 75,000 by 1987.

The cutbacks not only affect those actually losing their jobs, but also those entering the job market.

FROM WHITE HOUSE TO ROLLING VENDOR — Faith Collins, who was formerly a deputy White House press secretary working for first lady Rosalynn Carter, stands next to her muffin cart on a recent Washington morning. Miss Collins, 34, says that now on a good day she sells 200 muffins at 40 cents each, and commented, "Everyone says that Washington doesn't feel the recession, but that's not true anymore." However, she is expanding her stand to a fleet of three.

a career-oriented job, she makes about $160 a week selling chocolate chip cookies outside Brooks Brothers at the corner of 19th and L streets.

"I've been discouraged by my friends who can't find promising jobs," said Miss Walker, 23, who is one of four students working for a young business school graduate starting a new bakery business. "Here, at least, I'm secure. One college credit costs $192. That's a lot of 70-cent cookies."

Some turn to street vending as a way of getting off unemployment lines.

Meat industry disputes report on cancer link

By DON KENDALL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The meat industry says there are reasons to be skeptical about the latest report which says Americans may be able to reduce the risk of cancer by paying closer attention to what they eat.

At issue is a report last week by the National Academy of Sciences' National Research Council which said many cancers appear to be food related, although researchers still don't know precisely why.

Dr. Clifford Grobstein, chairman of the study, said that in general some types of diets and foods "tend to increase the risk of cancer," while others tend to decrease it.

The study report recommended less food high in any kind of fats which are primarily eaten by Americans in the form of meat and poultry, whole-milk dairy products and cooking oils.

Very little salt-cured or pickled and smoked foods such as sausages, ham, bacon, hot dogs or bologna should be eaten, it said. Go easy on alcohol, particularly combined with cigarettes.

Diets should include more fruits, vegetables and whole-grain cereals.

The meat industry, in views shared by many farm organizations and commodity groups, said there has been much conflicting evidence presented over the years about food-related health problems, including cancer and heart disease.

"Only two years ago, the National Research Council's Food and Nutrition Board — that too made up of eminent scientists from around the nation — issued a conflicting opinion, and advised against recommending changes in the basic diet," said the National Meat Association, an organization of meat packers and processors.

The association pointed to other authorities who have said "it is clearly premature to recommend anything" to the general public with regard to diet and cancer.

"Those who oppose meat in the diet often attribute the Seventh Day Adventists' low incidence of colon cancer to not eating meat," the association said. "Rarely, however, is it pointed out that Mormons eat a diet that includes meat and their rate of colon cancer rivals that of the Seventh Day Adventists."

"Obviously, the cancer rate in these instances at least must be affected by more than just diet, or more specifically, consuming meat."

Another trade organization, the American Meat Institute, also criticized the panel's report for its "insufficient evidence and in conflict with other recent reports" issued by the academy or some of its branches.

In a letter to Dr. Frank Press, chairman of the academy, the institute and eight other organizations representing livestock and poultry interests asked that "a special task force within the academy be immediately named to clarify the grossly divergent views" which have come out of its various branches.

Representative introduces bill for congressional flag

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress enjoy free parking, a $75-a-day special tax deduction, opportunities to take government-paid trips around the world and all sorts of other fringe benefits. But there's one thing they don't have: a flag.

That will change if Rep. Austin J. Murphy, D-Pa., has his way. He introduced a bill last week to "provide for the designations of a congressional flag."

Under Murphy's bill, the flag would display the Great Seal of United States on a background of blue.

Around the seal would be "a circle of 50 gold stars which represent the 50 states and the members of Congress who represent or have represented those states in Congress."

Big white letters across the top and bottom of the flag would state: "The Congress of the United States in the Service of a Free Nation."

"Congress shall by concurrent resolution prescribe the manner in which the congressional flag shall be displayed," according to Murphy's bill.

In a "Dear Colleague" letter seeking support, Murphy said it was the idea of a constituent — Norman Monack of Charleroi, Pa.

"While the president, the vice president and most Cabinet officers, departments, states and major cities have their own flags, the Congress does not," Murphy told colleagues.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., says the problem with congressional kids is that you often can't spend enough time with them.

Domenici, who has eight children, said that when he first came to the Senate 10 years ago, he worked such long hours he seldom saw his children.

Mount Hood avalanche kills one, hurts 2

GOVERNMENT CAMP, Ore. (AP) — An avalanche on Mount Hood that felt "like somebody throwing rocks" killed one climber and hurtled two others down a 500-foot slope.

The slide Sunday on the mountain 40 miles east of Portland took the life of Hugh Hake, 45, of Olympia, Wash.

Dean Teehee, 26, of Portland and Charles Hysmith, 31, of Vancouver, Wash., were listed in good condition Sunday evening at Portland Adventist Medical Center, said hospital spokesman Duane Hallock.

The two had been on the lead rope with Hake at 7:30 a.m. when the slide occurred, said fellow climber David Fielder, 34, of Vancouver.

Fielder said he was among the four climbers on the second rope who stopped for a break when the avalanche struck those on the lead rope and tossed them down the snow-covered peak.

Interviewed at the hospital, Teehee said he,

Hake and Hysmith were roped together as the climbing party's forward unit when "about a 40-foot wall came a tumbling down, right at me. It was an ice wall."

Fielder and Ken McMahon, 34, of Gresham, Ore., stayed on the mountain with the injured climbers while Rhonda Rundquist, 29, of Vancouver and Tom Kredlo, 30, of Hillsboro, Ore., skied down to call for help, authorities said.

Shipwreck artifacts found

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Nautical archaeologists say they hope that centuries-old relics excavated from a sunken ship will prove whether the vessel is the Pinta, one of three ships on Columbus' 1492 voyage.

Researchers at Texas A&M University and the Institute of Nautical Archaeology, a non-profit group headquartered at the school, have been cataloging the relics and setting up special vats to preserve the objects while tests are conducted during the next two years.

Among the five tons of artifacts are a 1,000-pound anchor, several cannons, a dozen swivel guns, cannon balls and small shot.

Some history buffs contend the sunken ship where the relics were recovered might be the Pinta. Archaeologists studying the artifacts say the vessel's identity remains a mystery but agree it could be one of the oldest shipwrecks in the world.

This week, crews from the institute plan to return to the British West Indies to excavate the ship's timber hull. Scientists hope to try coral dating — a technique similar to counting tree rings — to pinpoint the vessel's age.

The Pinta was one of three ships owned by the Pinzons, a wealthy Spanish ship-building family, and used by Columbus.

The wrecksite believed to be the Pinta rests in a reef near a group of islands known as the Turks and Caicos, about 600 miles south of Miami.

"It is an early wreck," said Don Keith, a scientist who works for the institute. "But the question to me is not 'why isn't this the Pinta?'"

Couple celebrates 50th anniversary at reunion

V.L. and Lora E. (Phillips) Cunningham, Odessa, celebrated their 50th anniversary June 12 during the 1982 Cauble School Reunion. Mrs. Cunningham is an ex-teacher of Cauble School. The couple was married in Big Spring and resided south of town after their marriage June 12, 1932.

On June 11, more than 30 persons met for fellowship, in the Elbow School cafeteria as a prelude to the dinner meeting June 12, which was attended by 48 persons including three other ex-teachers.

Mrs. George Franklin, researched county records for history of Cauble School. She collaborated with Mrs. Thetus Dunagan who showed films and presented the history of the school.

The county treasurer's records showed the location of the original school was on land donated by George Cauble who served on the first trustee board with S.A. Harman and R.L. Wilcox. The first teacher, Clara Jones, served a short term and was followed by Elinor E. Pancoast. Miss Pancoast was paid $45 per month from December 17 to April 28, 1911. Other school teachers were Angie Loyd, 1913-16; Arah Phillips, 1921-22; and Morris Merrick, 1923; Merrick was paid $135 per month. Jessie Smith followed Merrick.

In 1924, James T. Frazier conveyed land to the school for a new school house to be built. Bonds for $2,400 were issued and sold at 5 percent interest for the new building. The building was occupied until the school was consolidated with Elbow School on April 4, 1953. At that time Cecil Leatherwood, D.H. Yates and Roy Bates served as trustees with Mrs. Thetus Dunagan and Mrs. Faye Daughterity as teachers. The old two-room school was sold and later demolished.

Out-of-town guests at the reunion were from such places as Odessa, Amarillo, Stanton, Lubbock, Hamlin, Arlington, Houston, Denver City, San Angelo, Fort Worth, Owasso, Okla., Duncan, Okla., and Albuquerque, N.M.

Mrs. Jennie Cauble, 97, was the oldest person present and a friend of the community.

Incoming officers Ray Russell, president, and James Findley, vice-president, were welcomed and invitations were extended for the 1983 reunion. The 1983 reunion will be held the second weekend in June. Gratitude was expressed for work done by the committees and by Ross Callihan and Hershel Johnson, outgoing officers.

Dr. Donohue Plague: a rare illness

Dear Dr. Donohue: I was bitten by a flea a few days ago. Just yesterday I read in the paper where a person had died from bubonic plague from a fleabite. I'm wondering if I have cause to worry.—N.N.

Put your fears to rest. Not every fleabite means bubonic plague. If it did, we'd be in as much danger as from a nuclear war.

In 1981, there were only 18 cases of bubonic plague reported. It is an illness that is passed on from small animal to small animal by bites from fleas. The animals include rats, rabbits, mice and others. This fact that small animals seem to be the victims of choice of the fleas gives humans a hedge against massive plague episodes. Only when the animal population dies from plague do the fleas turn to humans for the blood meals, if you'll pardon that phrase.

If a plague-carrying flea bites a human, it injects the plague germs into the skin. That person gets quite ill in from two days to a week. But, this is a very, very rare illness. Not unheard of, to be sure, but quite unusual.

First of all, the animals in your geographic area have to be infected. And usually, when that is the case, the public health officials are the first to know and the first to let the fact be known so that doctors can be on the alert for possible victims. When plague cases are found in this country, they almost always come from wilderness areas. So while fleas certainly abound, plague-carrying fleas are so rare that it is one worry you can put aside.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have never had an answer to this question. Do vitamins have calories? I was told that you cannot lose weight if you take vitamins. Is this true?—H.L.K.

Vitamins do not have calories. They have no stored energy, and that's what calories are — stored energy, or rather a measure of that stored energy. Vitamins can be thought of as foremen responsible for telling the body's cells to keep their machinery humming. Without foremen, the machinery grinds to a halt. They just cannot work without direction.

The only calories associated with vitamins, then would be those in whatever liquid you choose to take them with or whatever small amount might be included in the material with which they are mixed in the capsules themselves. You will find your other questions discussed in the booklet "Vitamins: Facts You Need to Know." Other readers may order a copy by writing me care of The Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents for printing and handling.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am on high blood pressure medicine. I want to know which foods are high in potassium.—E.H.

This is one of my most often asked questions. Lots of people must be on water pills, the kind that take some potassium out of the body. Here's a partial list of potassium-rich foods — avocados, bananas, cantaloupes, nectarines, raisins, grapefruit, baked and boiled potatoes, mushrooms, beans, oranges.

To find out what causes high blood pressure and what can be done to treat it, send for a copy of "Controlling Your Blood Pressure (Hypertension)." Write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Reader's questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Abby

Couple finds jewelry

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, I found a very expensive-looking piece of jewelry in a public place. It had been trampled on by many feet — mine included.

I have been watching the lost-and-found ads in the newspaper every day but have never seen any mention of this article.

My wife and I are retired and on disability, and I can't afford to pay for an ad to advertise that I have found it. Besides, if I were to do so, there would probably be a lot of dishonest people claiming it was theirs, so how would I know who the real owner is?

I need to know how to get this piece of jewelry appraised, and after that how to sell it to be sure I am getting the proper worth. The way things are today, this would surely be a godsend to my wife and me.

FINDERS

DEAR FINDERS: You do not give me a clue as to where you live, where you found this "expensive-looking piece of jewelry" or even what the item was, but you are to be commended for searching the lost-and-found ads in an effort to locate the person who lost it.

To be assured of an accurate appraisal, take the article to a first-class jeweler. Then take it to another reputable jeweler (or professional appraiser) and get a second opinion. When you know the value, either advertise it for sale, or make a deal with a fine jeweler to help you sell it at a reasonable profit for both of you.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I will celebrate our 50th wedding anniversary in three months, God willing.

Our children are planning a celebration for us, and they have asked for a list of people we want invited to share this wonderful day with us. On this list are two couples who have not spoken to each other for several years. Both couples are good friends of ours, and we don't want to exclude them.

My husband thinks we should invite both couples and let each couple know the other has been invited. If either couple wants to decline the invitation, it's up to them. If neither couple declines, knowing their bitter enemies will be there too, they can just ignore each other.

I think we should invite both couples and say nothing, unless we are asked who is on the guest list. My daughter says if we don't invite either couple, we won't have to worry about how they'll react when they see each other there.

What is your opinion?

SILENCE IS GOLDEN
DEAR SILENCE: I agree with you. Invite both couples, and if they ask who is on the guest list, inform them. I THINK ON JOYOUS OCCASIONS, GOOD FRIENDS SHOULD PUT ASIDE THEIR PERSONAL VENDETTAS. Let it be their choice.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

LONDON — Vitas Gerulaitis, USA, in play against Brent Pirow, South Africa, in the Men's Singles Championship at Wimbledon today. He beat Pirow 6-4, 6-1, 6-1.

McEnroe one up; women play today

Wimbledon 82

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — In the formal manner of the All England Lawn Tennis Club, the schedule for the day listed Mrs. J.M. Lloyd of the United States among those who would play on its hallowed courts.

To the rest of the world, Chris Evert Lloyd took Center Court to begin the defense of her Wimbledon title against fellow American Barbara Sue Gerken.

It was the day for the women to make their 1982 debut at this prestigious tournament, along with five ranked men who did not get on the courts during the rain-shortened opening day program.

Defending men's champion John McEnroe was among those who did play and breezed through opening day unscathed.

"I hit the ball pretty well today," John McEnroe said as he blasted through fellow American Van Winitzky, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1 Monday. "Winitzky's serve is not too strong and he tends to stay back. He is the kind of player I can get in (to net) on."

Both because of the speed of the grass courts and their unpredictability, the 22-year-old left-hander made charge after charge into the net, forcing Winitzky to pass him or suffer the consequences.

McEnroe provided his own covering fire with six aces and followed a consistently strong service into net, from where he made quick work of short returns with sharply angled volleys.

There was very little of the antics that last year resulted in $10,000 in fines that were quashed on appeal.

His behavior was — for him — exemplary as a packed Center Court crowd looked on. McEnroe several times had words with the officials, but always in quiet tones, and often punctuated the conversations with a smile, even in those instances when he received questionable calls.

"There were no problems today," he said. "I hope it continues."

Advancing to the second round with McEnroe were all of the seeded players who saw action Monday, with the exception of No.9 Andres Gomez, the reigning Italian Open champion, who was ousted by former Wimbledon titleholder Stan Smith.

Connors, the No.2 seed, overpowered South African Mike Myburg, 6-0, 6-2, 6-2; third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis handily dispatched Brent Pirow of South Africa, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1; No.4 seed Sandy Mayer downed Haroon Ismail of Zimbabwe, 7-5, 6-2, 6-3; fifth-seeded Johan Kriek of South Africa outlasted a tiebreaker loss and American Craig Wittus, 6-7, 6-3, 6-1, 6-0; and No.7 Mats Wilander, the 17-year-old French Open winner who has become the teen idol in the absence of fellow Swede Bjorn Borg, defeated Heinz Gunhardt of Switzerland, 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

Thirteenth-seeded Brian Gottfried of the U.S. outlasted France's Giles Moreton, 7-6, 7-6, 6-2; hard-serving Roscoe Tanner, seeded No.14, traded bullets with France's Henri Leconte before winning a 6-4, 7-5, 6-4 shootout, and No.16 Steve Denton won a marathon outing against fellow American John Sadri, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Tennis great doing OK

Helen Wills Roark misses Wimbledon trip

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — The start of the Wimbledon tennis championships stirs fond memories for Helen Wills Roark, the all-time queen of American tennis.

"I had planned to return to England this year but I injured my hip when a door shut on me in a supermarket," said the woman who gained international fame as Helen Wills Moody.

"I haven't been back since before World War II — 1938. I think it was. That is too long. I love the place."

"I hope to make the trip next year." This is exciting news not only for the ancient Wimbledon Croquet and Tennis Club, grandmother of the game, but also for everyone who treasures its rich traditions.

Since winning eight Wimbledon and seven U.S. ladies' singles titles in a career that stretched from 1924 through 1935, Queen Helen has lived a reclusive life.

Since the breakup of two marriages, she has lived alone in beautiful

Carmel Valley in a cottage on an acre of stately pines and cypress trees, reading avidly, painting and following world events on a black and white TV set that can get only one channel.

She does her own house and yard work, rarely goes into the village and more recently, because of her hip injury, has had to forsake her periodic matches with an old friend and tennis partner, Clarissa Mitchell. She takes a two-mile hike daily.

"I've mislaid most of my medals and trophies," she said. "I can't even find the Olympic gold medal I won in Paris in 1924."

She has declined repeated offers to revisit the Hall of Fame in Newport, R.I., where she has been enshrined as a member, and New York, scene of some of her greatest triumphs.

In March, 1981, she was persuaded to go to San Francisco to be inducted in the Bay Area Sports Hall of Fame. Although she shared the honor with Lefty Gomez, Frankie Albert and Bob Mathias, she was the hit of the show.

"It was a marvelous experience," the 76-year-old court legend said over luncheon last weekend during the U.S. Open Golf Championship at Pebble Beach.

"Everyone was so nice to me. Unfortunately I had to speak after Mr. Gomez — he's a baseball player. I think — and he was so funny he had the audience in stitches."

"I spoke only a few words. But you could hear a pin drop."

Only child of a California country doctor, a Phi Beta Kappa and the first female to receive an athletic letter at the University of California, Roark remains a rugged individualist, just as she was on the tennis court.

A backcourt precisionist in her familiar pleated skirt and white visor, she played the game with a grim determination that would make Chris Evert Lloyd look like an extrovert.

They called her "Miss Poker Face." "No, I never resented the reference," she said. "I thought it was rather cute."

Oakland fighting for Raiders

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The city of Oakland may be able to use a California Supreme Court decision to keep the Raiders professional football franchise from moving to Los Angeles.

On Monday, the high court voted 6-1 to overturn a Monterey Superior Court decision dismissing a city lawsuit to acquire the National Football League team under the city's power of eminent domain.

"The city and Raiders should be afforded a full opportunity to present the facts and circumstances of their respective sides during a trial on the merits," said the decision written by Justice Frank Richardson.

The Supreme Court's decision means that the city of Oakland has the authority to pursue acquisition of the Raiders through the same municipal authority it has to acquire other properties necessary for the public benefit.

"The acquisition and, indeed, the operation of a sports franchise may well be an appropriate municipal function. That being so, the statutes discussed herein afford the city the power to acquire by eminent domain any property necessary to carry out that function," the decision said.

Chief Justice Rose Bird, in a concurring and dissenting opinion, said she was troubled because the "potential for abuse of such great power is boundless."

She said she was forced by the law to agree with the result reached by the majority, but she did not sign the opinion because it endorses unprecedented application of the eminent domain law "without even pausing to consider the ultimate consequences of their expansive decision."

Oakland's eminent domain lawsuit is separate from one involving antitrust allegations against the NFL, which had attempted to block plans to move the team to Los Angeles. In that case, a federal jury ruled in May that Managing General Partner Al Davis could move the team to Southern California.

Davis was traveling Monday and team officials said he would not be available for comment.

David Self, who represented Oakland in the case, said the decision would not prevent the Raiders from moving to Los Angeles. However, if the lower court decided for the city, the team would have to move back, he said.

The power of eminent domain permits a local government to acquire, possibly for transfer to other private parties, all the rights associated with or related to a property — in this case the NFL franchise held by a partnership, which includes Davis.

Bird, Dr. J all league selections

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Moses Malone, the Most Valuable Player in the National Basketball Association last season, was only the third-leading vote-getter in balloting for the all-league team.

Larry Bird, who led the Boston Celtics to a 63-19 record in the regular season, best in the NBA, was a unanimous choice on the team that was announced Monday at the NBA meetings here.

Bird collected 138 points in the balloting, which meant that all 69 media members on the voting panel, three from each franchise city, selected the Celtics forward for the first team. A player got two points for being on a voter's first team and one point for being on the second team.

Malone, the Houston Rockets center, got 130 points, one less than forward Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers. The all-NBA guards were leading scorer George Gervin of San Antonio and Gus Williams of Seattle.

The second team consists of forwards Alex English of Denver and Bernard King of Golden State, center Robert Parish of Boston and guards Earvin "Magic" Johnson of Los Angeles and Sidney Moncrief of Milwaukee.

Gervin had 114 points, Williams 94, Johnson 80, Moncrief 79, Parish 42, English 37 and King 34.

Bird, an all-NBA performer in each of his three NBA seasons, was 10th in the league in scoring with a 22.9 average and seventh in rebounding at 10.9.

NOT THIS TIME — Former Abilene Christian University track star Billy Olson hits the bar during an attempt at a new world record Sunday evening during the pole vault competition at the 1982 USA/Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championship in Knoxville. Olson tied fellow Pacific Coast Club member Don Ripley for the meet championship with a vault of 18 feet, 9 1/4 inches, which was also good enough for a new American record in the event.

NBA focusing on Clippers request

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — It's a scenario that's been played out before: a sports franchise owner wants to move his team to the happier financial hunting grounds of Los Angeles.

First, it was Al Davis trying to move the Oakland Raiders of the National Football League.

Now, Donald T. Sterling of the San Diego Clippers wants to shift his national Basketball Association team. Those who favor and oppose the move are drawing most of the attention at the NBA meetings here this week.

Sterling and representatives of the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission presented their cases to the Advisory-Financial Committee of the NBA Monday.

"The Los Angeles Coliseum Commission and the San Diego Clippers presented an overwhelmingly powerful case as to why the Clippers should move to Los Angeles and why they could not be successful in San Diego," commission lawyer Howard Daniels said after the 40-minute session with the committee.

Sterling, who has come under fire for his management of the team in San Diego, left the Hotel del Coronado hurriedly and would not comment.

Asked for the committee's response to the presentation, Daniels said, "I couldn't discern an attitude other than intense interest."

After the pro-move faction saw the committee, a delegation from the Greater San Diego Sports Association presented its case to the committee.

"We asked the committee to make a commitment to keep a team in San Diego," said Leon Parma, president of the association.

He also announced that the group "has a potential buyer for the team that would keep it in San Diego."

The committee, which is made up of nine NBA team owners, including Jerry Buss of the Los Angeles Lakers, could make a recommendation concerning the proposed move to the NBA Board of Governors today or Wednesday.

Angels attack Rangers

ANAHEIM (AP)—California manager Gene Mauch knows about the pitfalls of trying to write off a major league pitcher because of his age.

"When Warren Spahn was 40, they said he was through," said Mauch. "He kept winning and when Spahn was 41, they said he was through. And so on."

"When Spahn turned 44, they were finally right."

Mauch does isn't the least bit surprised by the new ace of his Angel staff, 37-year-old Steve Renko.

Renko hurled his fourth complete game of the season Monday night, a seven-hit 10-2 win over Texas which gave the Angels a 1 1/2-game American League West lead over Kansas City.

"Am I surprised by his performance?" Mauch echoed a question. "No. He's won eight or nine in a row for me before."

Mauch referred to the early '70s, when the two were united in Montreal. When Renko was, yes, younger.

Orlones 7, Indians 0
Baltimore right-hander Dennis Martinez pitched his second shutout of the season, blanking Cleveland on three hits. Martinez struck out five, walked none and received big support

American League

Brewers 6, Yankees 2
Ben Oglivie, who had three home runs Sunday, continued his hot hitting with a home run, and Paul Molitor added a homer to pace Milwaukee over the Yankees. Cecil Cooper's RBI double off Dave Righetti snapped a 1-1 tie in the fifth inning.

Molitor also scored three runs and went 4-for-4.

Red Sox 5, Tigers 1
Carl Yastrzemski reached another career milestone with his 3,253rd major league hit, helping Boston extend Detroit's losing streak to eight games. Yaz's hit moved him past Nap Lajoie into ninth place on the all-time hit list.

White Sox 5, Twins 4
Tom Paciorek tripled and scored the winning run in the eighth inning on a double by Harold Baines as the White Sox edged Minnesota. After Baines' hit, the game was delayed 53 minutes by rain at Chicago.

Reliever Salome Barojas yielded a two-run homer to Tom Brunasky in the seventh, tying the score 4-4, then settled down for his fifth victory in six decisions.

A's 4, Royals 3
Mike Heath's unusual fielder's choice drove in the winning run in the eighth inning as Oakland snapped a six-game losing streak. With the bases loaded, Heath hit a blooper that dropped in front of Royals center fielder Amos Otis. Dwayne Murphy, who had homered earlier, scored from third on the play, but Otis got the force at third.

Vida Blue, 4-5, was the loser in his first appearance at the Oakland Coliseum since 1977, when he played with the A's.

Seattle 5, Blue Jays 4
Dave Henderson slugged a three-run homer, and the Mariners scored all five of their runs on homers, then held on to beat Toronto, whose three-game winning streak came to an end.

Henderson also threw out two runners from center field to help rookie Mike Moore, 3-6, to his first victory since May 29. Bruce Bochte and Al Cowens also homered for Seattle.

Padres pound Astros

HOUSTON (AP)—The Houston Astros have lost their bullpen, but the San Diego Padres may have found theirs.

A trio of rookie right-handers limited the Astros to an unaired run in the last six innings, while the Padres pounded out six runs in the eighth to whip the Astros 7-4 Monday night.

The performance left Astros Manager Bill Virdon lamenting the demise of the Astro bullpen, which had been one of Houston's strengths over the last few seasons.

"We've gone from three capable relievers to none," said Virdon.

Meanwhile, the performance of Floyd Chaffer, Luis DeLeon and Eric Show left San Diego Manager Dick Williams beaming about his new corps of relievers.

"We hoped to get just one good one out of those three," said Williams. "I was a little greedy. I was figuring on two. You couldn't ask for more than we've gotten from them."

"They're throwing the ball real good," said catcher Terry Kennedy, whose two-run double in the eighth helped give the win to Show, 4-2.

Pittsburgh catcher Tony Pena was his career and tie him with Hank Aaron. Ty Cobb is the leader with 4,191 career hits.

Reds 10, Dodgers 2
Eddie Milner hit a three-run homer and drove in four runs while scoring three to help Cincinnati's Mario Soto win his fourth straight game for Cincinnati. The victory snapped the Dodgers' six-game winning streak.

Milner's third homer of the season, off Bob Welch, 7-6, put the Reds ahead to stay in the second inning. Soto, 7-4, handcuffed the Dodgers on five hits and struck out 10, raising his National League-leading strikeout total to 125.

Braves 7, Giants 6
Chris Chambliss singled with the bases loaded and two out in the ninth inning to cap a three-run rally and lead Atlanta over San Francisco.

The victory went to Rick Camp, 5-3, and Minton, 3-4, was the loser.

Expos 5, Mets 1
Gary Carter blasted two home runs and knocked in three runs to lead Montreal over New York. The Expos scored four runs in the fourth inning with the help of two doubles and a two-run homer by Carter en route to their fourth straight victory.

NOTHING UNNATURAL EVER GOES INTO COORS.

Most beers start with chemically altered tap water. And then go on to use additives and preservatives.

Not Coors. Coors knows that pure water is one of the most important ingredients in providing fresh beer taste, beer after beer. That's why only Coors beer starts naturally pure, naturally fresh with pure Rocky Mountain spring water.

And only Coors stays pure. Naturally brewed from beginning to end with no additives or preservatives. Brewed more slowly, and naturally aged longer for a clean, fresh taste, beer after beer.

So when just one beer won't do, your last Coors tastes as fresh as your first.

That's why Coors is the beer made for the way you really like to drink beer.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTEY INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This could be an advise day unless you follow the promptings of your best judgment and avoid trouble. Take no chances with a risky venture at this time. Be more discreet.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You and family members can join efforts in home improvements by replacing the old with the new. Take the initiative.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use extreme care in motion today and avoid possible accident. Consult a financial expert for the advice you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good friend comes to your rescue today at a time of real need. Plan to have more security in the future.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Look on the bright side of situations and make your life happier. A higher-up can be of great help to you now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your situation in an objective manner and improve it instead of fretting about it. A new contact can be helpful now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Your friends are not helpful today but this is because of pressures they have. Strive for increased happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A higher-up could vent ire on you if you don't steer clear of this person today. Ally yourself with a good associate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have new ideas that need expression but settling a matter with a co-worker takes precedence right now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to keep promises you have made. Take time to engage in favorite hobby. Your hunches are accurate now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take a more positive stand where an important matter is concerned. Sidestep a troublemaker. Use common sense.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have much work to do and should get someone to help you with it for best results. Take needed health treatments.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you stay within your budget, you can have the amusement you crave at this time. Follow the advice of an expert.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will know whom to go to in time of stress but teach not to exaggerate troubles. Ideal chart for the field of manufacturing, selling in particular. Give good ethical upbringing and teach the power of honesty in all things.

Michael Landon hosts Junior Miss

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In commercials, he calls Kodak "America's Storyteller." Actually, the label fits him. Michael Landon is the modern Walt Disney, spinning tales of Americana for the entire family.

Everything Landon touches, it seems, turns to apple pie.

For nearly 25 years, Landon has been starring in the kinds of shows they're not supposed to make any more. He was Little Joe Cartwright in "Bonanza" and then Pa Ingalls in the continuing "Little House on the Prairie," NBC's second-rated show this past season.

And tonight, you can see that famous Kodak smile in America's Junior Miss Pageant on CBS. Once again, Landon is host for the live competition, another program in keeping with his outlook on life and TV.

The Junior Miss Pageant, which was won by "CBS Morning News" anchor Diane Sawyer in 1963, has the girls next door competing for $2.5 million in college scholarships. It's a pin-up contest without any posters. Without swimsuits or gowns, contestants actually are judged on brains, physical fitness and talent.

Landon's programs ooze wholesomeness. When NBC once asked for heavier action in "Little House," Landon didn't turn the other cheek. "It was obvious I wasn't going to do that kind of show," he says. "Our characters are warm, feeling and non-violent toward each other."

Landon is executive producer of both "Little House" and its spin-off "Father Murphy." These shows are designed to bring families together. "Families just don't talk to each other enough any more," Landon says.

Landon, 44, who is separated from his wife, has seven children, and he's vigilant about their TV viewing. "Unless there's something very worthwhile, I won't let them watch during the week. But they do have to watch 'Little House.'"

He doesn't recommend "Dallas," today's in show. "I don't watch it enough to know why people watch it. All I know is that they're making a hero out of an evil guy."

ERA supporters still fighting despite vote

Associated Press
Florida's rejection of the Equal Rights Amendment has all but sunk chances for national ratification by the June 30 deadline, but ERA supporters say they won't abandon their goal and will seek revenge at the polls in November.

"It looks like we're just going to have to start all over again," said Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., one of the original cosponsors of the ERA a decade ago. "We'll reintroduce the amendment, and next time I predict the ERA will be ratified."

Pro-ERA voters say they'll seek try to beat lawmakers who blocked ratification. After the Florida Senate vote, crowds of angry women, some in tears, chanted "Vote them out!" and "We'll remember in November."

The Florida Senate voted 22-16 against the proposed constitutional change on Monday, keeping the state aligned with 14 others whose lawmakers have blocked adoption of the amendment that would prohibit discrimination based on sex.

Thirty-five states have approved the amendment. National ratification requires approval by three more states this month.

Eight days before the deadline, the ERA's prospects were dim in the states where supporters have lobbied most actively this year.

—The North Carolina Senate tabled the ERA June

8, despite a Lou Harris poll showing most voters there favored the amendment. The parliamentary move was a serious setback, ERA strategists said, because victory in North Carolina would have sparked momentum in other non-ratification states.

If want to apply for credit, you have to know the score

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Applying for credit is like taking a test: It's the score that counts.

Many lenders use a computer-based scoring system to decide who will — and will not — get credit in today's market. Knowing how the system works can improve your chance of success.

Credit-scoring systems are based on points; the lender assigns a fixed number of points to each of a variety of consumer characteristics and decides on a cut-off score. Applicants with a passing grade — a point total higher than the cut-off score — get credit. Those with a failing grade — below the cut-off — are turned down.

The point assignments and the cut-off score are not chosen at random. They are based on computer profiles of good and bad borrowers. Here's how it works:

A lender selects, at random, a sample of past accounts — good and bad. All the available information on these accounts is fed into the computer. Using a process called "discriminant analysis," the computer determines which characteristics are shared by the good borrowers and which are shared by the bad ones. Each characteristic is given a point value.

The lender then can analyze the information to find out what combination of characteristics and what total score are likely to produce a borrower who will repay the debt on time, with little chance of default.

It is important to remember that the total score is the key. Under most credit-scoring systems, there are many ways to achieve a passing score. A low score on a single characteristic is unlikely to result in a credit rejection.

Different lenders rely on different characteristics and score them differently. In general, however, the following things are important:

—Stability. Creditors look for things like home ownership and length of time on the job as a guide to whether you are a stable, responsible person. You probably will get fewer points if you rent your home rather than own it, but a long-term tenancy can help your score.

—Occupation. Lenders often assign points to specific jobs.

—Disposable income. Earnings alone are relatively unimportant.

Search is on for economic recovery

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The search is underway for an economic recovery, and nothing is overlooked, not the slightest fraction of 1 percent that in other times might be viewed as insignificant.

You might not have noticed any meaningful change, but then you may not be observing things as closely as they are in the White House and on Wall Street, where even a piece of economic dust is examined. Evidence uncovered so far includes a 0.7 percent rise in personal income and a 1.3 percent rise in consumer spending during May, higher retail sales and a slowing of the decline in industrial production.

All this, suggests Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige might result in a rise in gross national product of 0.5 percent to as much as a full percentage point in the current quarter, which ends next week.

So why haven't you noticed it? Because, suggests William Dunkelberg, a Purdue University economist, you are bit in the aggregate. The upcoming tax cut, for example, might not provide you enough money for a cab ride, but it aggregates to billions of dollars.

But Dunkelberg and other economists say overall economic numbers can improve without the mass of Americans improving their lot.

Sindlinger and Company, a market and economic research company, points out that while most Americans can be struggling a smaller percentage at the top probably never had it so good. It may all average out in terms of numbers, but certainly not in individuals.

There is the employment-unemployment situation. Can an economy be considered to be moving ahead when more than 10 million Americans are without jobs? Statistically, yes, but only because statistics, if not handled properly, can hide the underlying problem of unemployment.

"Unemployment is fundamentally an issue of income distribution," says Dunkelberg. What it means, he says, is that in the aggregate you have the same labor costs by reducing everyone's wages 10 percent or by employing 10 percent of the work force.

He suggests there still appears to be a sizable wage adjustment ahead for the American economy if it is to approach that old goal of full employment, which used to be measured as low as 3 percent.

Another worrisome aspect to recovery, as measured by statistics on retail sales, is that it is totally consumer-based. The goal of the existing economic program was to spur industrial investment rather than consumer spending. But capital investments are almost dormant. Instead of raising spending plans, business is cutting.

That raises two questions: How long can a consumer-led recovery proceed with an impoverished industrial base that is unable to produce products efficiently, i.e., without more inflation ensuing?

Typical of comments is that inflation is down not because of economic improvements but because industry has been starved of its ability to produce, expand and employ. Bankruptcies are at rates unseen since the Depression, and statistics show that much of what industry borrows is not for improvement but to pay current bills.
