TRUE TEXAN — Even though he has been in the U.S. for just two weeks, Polish refugee Stanley Damszel counts himself among the "true Texans" and will be celebrating his personal independence Sunday.

Polish refugee makes Big Spring his home

By BILL ELDER
City Editor

When the Fourth of July dawns Sunday, your next-door neighbor with the big American flag draped in pure patriotic fervor over his front porch won't be the only person visibly celebrating his freedom.

Chances are, 42-year-old Stanislaw Damszel will be out waving Old Glory around, too. It makes sense: a year ago, "Stanley" was a truck driver in southwestern Poland, and the Communist lifestyle in that country was like a hand on Stanley's throat, seemingly choking him.

There were long lines and shortages of critical foods in those days. There were suspicions because Stanley belonged to Solidarity, the activist labor union. The disapproving eye of the government seemed to be everywhere, and if he wanted to travel from one city to the next, Stanley needed official permission.

One day he obtained a passport and planned a trip to Austria. Although he was separated from his wife, and had two sons (now 13 and 17), and Polish authorities just might have figured the children were enough insurance to keep Stanley from defecting.

If they did think he was coming back, they were wrong. Stanley took a train to Vienna, the Austrian capital, and asked for political asylum in the United States. He was placed in a refugee camp and seven months later, with 300 other Poles, he was given a visa and flown to New York.

Two weeks ago, he stepped off a plane at Midland Regional Airport. As he did so, he probably squinted mightily at the West Texas sun, just as he does today, being unaccustomed to such stark, flat, hot geography. That night, hall larger than Stanley ever imagined pummeled the roof of his new home — but the violence of West Texas weather hardly seemed to diminish his elation over being in the U.S.

A week after stepping onto Texas soil to begin a new life, Stanley was given a small American flag. He kissed it, literally tasting his freedom.

Every day became Independence Day for the Polish refugee.

STANLEY DAMSZEL is in Big Spring through the efforts of the East Fourth Street Baptist Church, which is sponsoring Stanley and helping him get started. He has been living in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Slate, members of the church who live on the side of Scenic Mountain. When a cabin is built for Stanley at the Circle 6 Baptist Ranch a few miles north of Stanton, he will move there and work for pay as a ranch maintenance man, Ed Slate says.

In the meantime, Stanley is spending 16 hours a week learning English at Howard College and speaking through an interpreter of the recent changes in his life. He's not afraid to be blunt about what he left behind.

"It was like being behind bars," he says of life under a Soviet-backed government in Poland. "It was terrible." He left the country right about the time See Refugee, page 2-A

4TH OF JULY

Offices shut down Monday

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

Most of Big Spring will light the fuse on a three-day Fourth of July weekend at closing time today, when many businesses will close their doors until Tuesday.

Since July 4 falls on Sunday this year, most offices will schedule a holiday for their employees on Monday, July 5.

Most state offices will be an exception to the rule, however. The Texas Department of Public Safety license offices, at 2000 Birdwell, for instance, will be open for business as usual Monday, a spokesman for that office said.

Big Spring City Hall offices will be closed Monday, but scaled-down crews will be at work in the water office, police station and fire station in order to deal with emergencies.

No trash pickups are slated for Monday, but an extra run will be made Saturday to keep discards from piling up, a sanitation department official said.

Big Spring Director of Public Works Tom Decell said the city park would operate on its regular schedule Monday. The city pool and the Figure Seven Tennis Center normally are closed Monday.

All offices in the Howard County Courthouse will be closed Monday, while a skeleton crew will operate the sheriff's office.

All offices in the federal building, including the post office, will be closed Monday. A spokesperson for the postal service said the office lobby would be open, however.

Texas Electric Service Co. offices will be closed Monday also, but emergency crews will be available by calling the main TESCO number.

Local Southwestern Bell and Ennergas offices will be closed Monday, but emergency numbers listed in the phone book will be taking calls.

Warning issued on fireworks

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

Fireworks can be fun — and fatal — to children if not properly supervised by parents, Big Spring city and health officials agree.

Officials encourage parents to supervise children with their Fourth of July fireworks to avoid possible burns, eye and ear injuries as well as fires often caused by careless handling.

"I don't want to say that kids should not have fun, but the loss of an eye or getting killed in a fire ... well, no celebration is worth it," said Acting Fire Marshall Rodney Phillips (Fire Marshall Carl Dorton is on medical leave).

Phillips said a $70,000 bridge fire near the Big Spring cotton compress earlier this year was caused by a fireworks-sparked grass fire and "a couple of house fires were directly caused" by fireworks also.

"Supervision is the best safeguard, if (youths) have to have them," said Malone-Hogan Hospital social services director Dan Wise.

"We've been real lucky in the past year or two because we've received no fireworks injuries, but we get a lot of calls for information," he added.

Shooting fireworks within the city limits is in violation of city ordinances and "keeps (the police department) tied up with phone calls," Capt. Sherrill Farmer said. "Bottles exploding and cutting people" is one of the main problems on July 4, he added.

Fines up to $200 can be charged for violation of city ordinances and parents are liable for actions up to $15,000 for their children's violations, Phillips said.

Also, violations of state fireworks law can result in a fine of not more than $1,000 and imprisonment for not more than one year or both, according to County Attorney Bob Miller.

"As far as people being hurt, we've been real lucky, but that doesn't mean it won't happen," Phillips added.

Procter & Gamble files suit to stop Satan rumor

CINCINNATI (AP) — Procter & Gamble Co., trying to halt rumors that the company and its executives are involved in devil worship, has filed libel suits against three people, accusing them of spreading "false and malicious" stories.

The giant Cincinnati-based cleaning and food products company also said Thursday it was considering additional lawsuits and "will follow up aggressively on leads of organizations or individuals spreading the rumors."

P&G said the rumors typically report that the company's "moon and stars" trademark — used since 1851 to represent the man in the moon and the 13 original states — is a symbol of satanism.

"We want people to know we are darned serious about stopping this rumor," said spokesman Stuart Kunkler.

He said other false rumors claim that a P&G executive discussed satanism on television talk shows, including the nationally televised Phil Donahue program.

The legal action followed last week's announcement that the company would take aggressive action to stop the persistent rumors, which have hurt sales. The company has been receiving more than 12,000 monthly calls from people asking about the rumors.

The company filed suit Thursday against Mike Campbell of Doraville, Ga., an Atlanta suburb, and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Moore Jr. of Pensacola, Fla.

Mild reaction to BSISD desegregation proposal

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Independent School District's proposed settlement of a desegregation lawsuit filed against the district in 1980 by the U.S. Department of Justice appears to have caused only mild reaction so far among residents.

The proposed order, which contains three major provisions, will be considered by the trustees at a public meeting July 8 at 5:15 p.m. in the high school boardroom. Attorney Guil Jones III, whose firm is representing the district in the suit, announced the district's proposal at a press conference yesterday.

Jones said there is a possibility the proposal could be changed depending on input from residents of the district.

The proposals are as follows:

- All northern rural elementary students (approximately 50 in grades one through five) would be assigned to attend Bauer Elementary School rather than Washington Elementary School, and northern rural bus routes will be rerouted accordingly.
- The fourth and fifth grade gifted and talented student program currently housed at Runnels Junior High would be moved to Bauer.

Minority students attending Bauer would be permitted to transfer to any other elementary school of their choice, subject to available capacity, with transportation provided by the district. Anglo students will also have the right to transfer into Bauer, subject to space.

Barbara Claxton, Big Spring PTA president, said today that so far she has not received any calls on the matter. She declined to comment further on the situation, saying she was waiting to see what the school board decides next Thursday in the public meeting.

Duana Chester, president of the Washington PTA, said yesterday she had received no comments on the matter. However, both PTA presidents expect to attend the meeting with concerned parents.

Pat Deanda, a teacher at Bauer Elementary, said she will be heading a group from the north side that will attend the meeting. Mrs. Deanda said at the present time her group has not drawn up any sort of counterproposal, and she added that she was skeptical about the success of the board's provisions.

The Rev. J.B. Hardeman, who resides on the north side near Bauer, said he thought the plan is essentially a good one.

"Down through the years most of the complaints have been about the Anglo kids being bused right by Bauer to Washington," Hardeman said. He said the provision for northern rural students to be bused to Bauer should take care of the problem.

In another matter concerning the proposals, the question was put to attorney Jones about the cost of the desegregation plan.

Jones said busing the students to Bauer instead of Washington would cut transportation costs in the district; however, he said, no one could really estimate the cost of transporting students transferring out of Bauer to the district's other elementary schools.

He added that the cost of the gifted and talented program transfer to Bauer would be minor.

Texas jobless rate hits high

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas unemployment rate for June was 7 percent, the highest since the state began keeping records in 1970 and probably the highest since the Great Depression, a department official said today.

A record 614,000 employable Texans were out of work in June, according to Diane Dobie, Texas Employment Commission supervising labor market analyst.

Ms. Dobie said it's a miserable summer for recent graduates and students looking for summer work.

"It's not very promising," she said. "It's probably the most discouraging (summer) in the last few years."

The national unemployment rate for June, announced today in Washington, was 9.5 percent.

The Texas rate for June 1981 was 6.5

percent. The rate for last month was 6.4 percent, according to Ms. Dobie.

The June rate was pumped up by the students and recent graduates entering the job market and workers laid off from jobs in the manufacturing field.

"Layoffs have continued to increase over the last few months," she said. TEC officials predict the unemployment rate will drop this month.

Court: States can ban most 'kiddie porn'

WASHINGTON (AP) — States may ban virtually all "kiddie pornography," the Supreme Court ruled today.

The justices thus carved out a new exception to the constitutional guarantees of free speech and free expression. By a 9-0 vote on the last day of its 1981-82 term, the court reinstated a New York law that makes it a crime to "promote" sexual performances by children.

The state's highest court had struck down the law as unconstitutional, but today the Supreme Court, led by Justice Byron White, reversed the state court's ruling.

"Here the nature of the harm to be combated requires that the state offense be limited to works that visually depict sexual conduct by children below a specified age," White wrote for the court.

The category of sexual conduct proscribed also must be suitably limited and described.

The Constitution's First Amendment guarantees that government will not interfere with anyone's freedom of speech. But that protection is not absolute.

Past Supreme Court decisions have created exceptions for obscene or defamatory expression and for expressions deemed to be "fighting

Rain falls in traces, inches

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Yesterday's rainfall was spotty throughout the area, with accumulations ranging from a trace to 1.2 inches reported.

Area lakes continue to grow with the increased rain, and Lake Spence has climbed to 1,885.73 feet which is just below the 1,886 record mark, according to Joe Pickle of the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Pickle reported Lake J. B. Thomas and Lake Colorado City also have shown increases. Champion Creek Lake is down somewhat after running over its spillway for the first time last week, Pickle said.

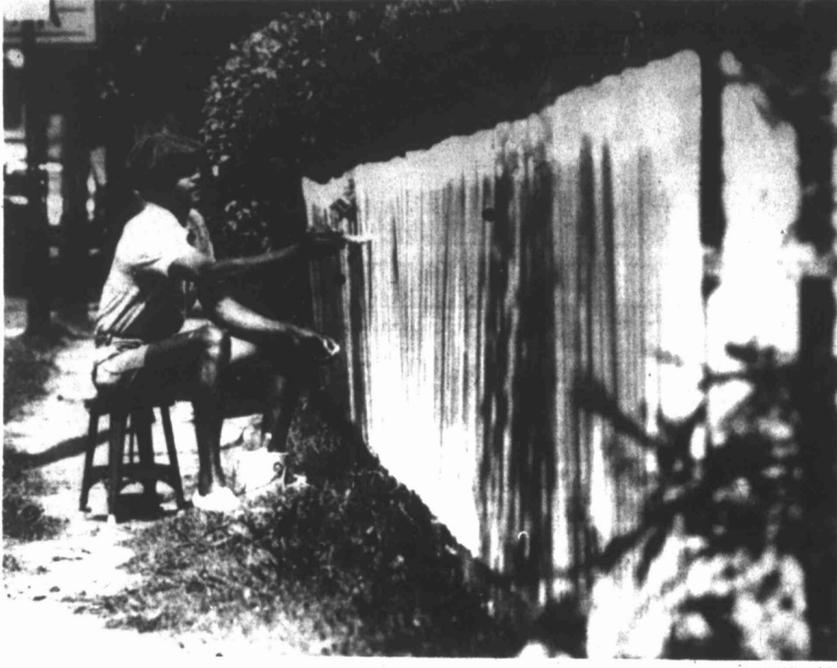

In the city, Chuck Benz of Apache recorded four tenths of an inch while Red Thomas on East 13th measured an even inch of rain. Boyce Hale, who lives south of the city, garnered 1.28 inches to bring his yearly total to 12.15 inches, an above-average total, he said.

Rod Lewis of CRMWD reported 1.15 inches at the water district office on East 24th. The district's Snyder Highway facility received five tenths of an inch, Lewis said, while the Lake Thomas dam caught just two tenths of an inch. The Big Spring-Odesa dam, northwest of Lake Thomas, had one tenth of an inch, he noted.

The U.S. Big Spring Field Station on the northside of the city recorded only eighteen hundredths of an inch.

Outside of town, Larry Shaw, north of Knott, picked up only one tenth while the Lomax Planter's Gin received just two tenths of an inch.

The Forsan Independent School District reported heavy rains, but no official totals. The Coahoma ISD received just a trace of rainfall, according to a spokesman.

Trustees view $12.8 million BSISD budget

The Big Spring Independent School District Board of Trustees this week completed its workshop sessions in tandem to familiarize board members with the tentative 1982-83 budget for the district.

The budget figure shown to the trustees for the coming year is $12,834,715, according to Assistant Superintendent Don Crockett.

No action will be taken on the matter until July 15, when the board will meet to consider adopting the tentative budget.

Final adoption of a 1982-83 budget probably will come some time in August, according to the trustee's regular meeting schedule.

Gail youth leads in C-City rodeo

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Ralynn Key of Gail, entered in the 12-and-under age group, had a time of 17.43 in barrel racing and a time of 20.11 in pole bending to earn two firsts in last night's AJRA rodeo competition here.

Contestants had their hands full with "no time" posters in several categories; however, in addition to the Gail entrant, Lane Frost of Alta, Okla., scored a 66 to take the lead in bull riding.

Seven young ladies are competing for the rodeo queen title, with one to be named the winner tomorrow night. The winner will take home some $1,100 in prizes, according to Adell Morgan, contest sponsor.

Candidates are Diane Gregory, Holly Hicklin, Andri Carpenter, Lynda Walker, Jana Northcutt, Naomi Mizzi and Tina Tammen.

Hot check collections increase during June

Hot check collections in Howard County have increased to $17,076.84 for June, according to Melba Soles of the county attorney's Hot Check Department.

Monthly collection of hot checks and fees had been averaging about $13,000 a month prior to June, she said.

Hot checks are gathered in conjunction with the justice of the peace offices and the sheriff's office.

Thirty-seven investigations into bad-check cases were launched in June, Mrs. Soles added.

Nearly-rescued infant dies

The infant girl that Big Spring police, ambulance and hospital personnel worked together to save last Tuesday died at 3:08 p.m. yesterday in the Malone-Hogan intensive care unit.

Rosalinda Alvarez II was the two-day-old infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Alvarez of Coahoma. Graveside services were set for 1 p.m. today in Coahoma Cemetery under the direction of Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home with the Rev. Robert Vreuteau, pastor of Saint Joseph Catholic Church of Coahoma, officiating.

Born Tuesday in Big Spring, she is survived by her parents; her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Martiniano Alvarez of Coahoma and her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Morales of Villa Acuna, Mexico.

Court rules against state's water ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — States do not have unfettered power to ban the shipment of water to other states, the Supreme Court ruled today.

In a decision with potentially enormous impact for western and midwestern states which are trying to manage scarce water resources, the justices, by a 7-2 vote, struck down a key portion of a Nebraska law that imposes such a ban.

"Although (federal law and other actions by Congress) demonstrate Congress' deference to state water law, they do not indicate that Congress wished to remove federal constitutional constraints on such state laws," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote.

"Neither the fact that Congress has chosen not to create a federal water law to govern water rights involved in federal projects, nor the fact that Congress has been willing to let the states settle their differences over water rights through mutual agreement constitutes persuasive evidence that Congress consented to the unilateral imposition of unreasonable burdens on commerce," he said.

The court thus struck down the part of the Nebraska law that bans the shipment of ground water from within the state to any other state that does not allow shipment of its water into Nebraska.

Folk tales featured at Texas Tech museum

Attractions at the museum will include free 20-minute planetarium shows at 1:30, 2:30, 3:30 and 4:05 p.m. both days.

Home, tank burn in Lamesa

LAMESA (SC) — Lightning is suspected as the cause of two separate fires in Lamesa yesterday.

A fire outside of the Midway Gin did considerable damage to the home of Wayland Holiday. Although there were no injuries reported, the damage to the house is estimated by fire officials at $12,000.

Officials say the cause of the fire could have been lightning.

City and volunteer firefighters responded to the call at approximately 5:15 p.m. yesterday and were on the scene for approximately two hours.

Lightning also is suspected as the cause of a Thursday evening fire at an oil tank just west of Lamesa.

A witness to the incident, Wes Norman of Lamesa, said he saw lightning strike the tank. Norman was driving on a nearby highway at the time, he said.

No injuries resulted from the blaze and fire officials had not been able to identify the owners of the tank battery at press time.

Injury suit filed after fall

Mildred B. Brown of Big Spring has filed a $21,000 damage suit against the Dunlap Co. for injuries she claims she suffered in Dunlap's Big Spring establishment.

The suit claims the company was negligent in the fall and subsequent injuries she suffered July 25, 1980.

Mrs. Brown is represented by the Midland firm of Torres and Shackelford.

Bank sues for $8,428 note

First National Bank in Big Spring has filed suit against John Huckabee in 118th District Court. 3 in jail following shooting complaint

Three of eight persons arrested by city police in connection with a shooting complaint are in Howard County jail today following arraignment before Justice of the Peace Bobby West.

Daniel Martinez, 25, is charged with three counts of aggravated assault and one count of unlawfully carrying a weapon, according to sheriff's records. Bonds of $25,000 for the weapons charge and $30,000 total for the assault charges were set by West.

The other two charged in connection with a complaint that a woman's house was fired upon are being held without bond.

Juan Marquez, 19, is charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon and aggravated assault, deputies said. His bond was denied due to a revocation of probation charge, according to sheriff's office records.

words" or an incitement to immediate lawless action. Expression found to create a "clear and present danger" to some important governmental interest also is not constitutionally protected.

Today's decision adds a new exception to those previously created. Under a landmark 1973 Supreme Court decision, called Miller vs.

California, materials are legally obscene when the average person applying community standards would find them to "appeal to the prurient interest in sex, which portray sexual conduct in a patently offensive way, and which, when taken as a whole, do not have serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value."

But today's Supreme Court decision allows states to ban even non-obscene materials when they portray sexual conduct by children.

"The Miller standard, like all general definitions of what may be banned as obscene, does not reflect the state's particular and more compelling interest in prosecuting those who promote the sexual exploitation of children," White said.

authorities cracked down and installed military rule — in December 1981. Life under such a system "made you feel like you were choking," he says through Mike Skalicky, his Big Spring interpreter.

As his hands jabbed and waved in front of him, accenting his somber speech, he told of the supply shortages and long lines for essential food such as meat and bread.

"People would get in line at ten at night to wait for the (butcher) store to open in the morning," he recalls. Two pounds of meat per month was all he was allowed to purchase — if it was still available by the time it became his turn to buy.

He talks about the jailing and beating he says he suffered — because he was a photographer by hobby and officials apparently were wary of what the Solidarity member was doing with a camera. One day they came and put Stanley in jail for 48 hours. He was beaten, he says, with steel-and-ribbed truncheons.

"They don't need much reason to beat up," he says. "Out of 36 million people in Poland, 30 million don't want Communism and would prefer some other form of government, Stanley claims. Yet, he says, he can't imagine a free Poland.

"If all the Communists drop dead, there might be a free Poland," he says wryly.

BUT IF the Communist way of life behind the Iron Curtain is firmly entrenched, so is the desire to live freely in the hearts and minds of people like Stanley.

"I would like to work, be a free person and live long," the expatriate declares.

It's the job of the East Fourth Street Baptist Church to see to it Stanley gets a good start in achieving his ideals.

"Our outlay," explains Guy White, pastor of the church, "is to make sure he has a proper place to live and to help him get a job. Just as soon as possible, he's on his own."

White said the church became aware of Stanley after efforts failed to sponsor Haitian refugees who were detained in Big Spring. Through the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, the church became aware that Stanley needed sponsoring.

White brought the idea of sponsoring Stanley to his church's brotherhood and "they jumped on it." White relayed word back to the board and was told it would be "a long process" before the refugee actually arrived in Big Spring.

Then, just a few weeks ago, White was informed Stanley would be arriving soon. Since the cabin at the Martin County ranch wasn't ready, Stanley moved in with the Slaters.

"We're using a (Polish-American) dictionary and sign language. We're doing very well," Ed Slate says of communicating with the new household member. "If we're going to have lunch, we hold up a sandwich and say, 'lunch.' But as far as casual conversations, we haven't been able to have too many."

When they really need to talk, the Slaters call on the services of Mike Skalicky, a neighbor and native Czech, who fled Communist oppression in his homeland in 1949.

Stanley isn't sure what he wants to do for a living, but expresses a clear desire for a job. Perhaps as he masters English, his visions will crystallize and his talents will become more visible.

"We want to help him find the fulfillment of his life's dream," says White.

Right now, decked out in boots and a cowboy hat, having experienced his first rodeo and soon to be a hired hand on a ranch, Stanley seems to want to be nothing but a cowboy.

"I was born in Poland," he says with a grin, "but I'm a true Texan now."

Jobless rate steady; many quit looking

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate held steady at 9.5 percent in June, but the number of Americans who gave up looking for work because of the tight job market set a record, the Labor Department said today.

Although the jobless rate was unchanged from May, the number of people out of work actually fell — from 10.5 million to 10.4 million.

But 1.5 million people fell into the "discouraged worker" category — a statistic reported by the government every three months. The number of discouraged workers rose by 160,000 from the first quarter.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics attributed the steady unemployment rate to the process of seasonal adjustment, by which it adjusts raw unemployment data to account for such routine, predictable variations as school closings and the weather.

The jobless rate normally rises in June with the influx of school-age job-seekers, but because far fewer youths entered the labor force than expected the overall adjusted rate held steady.

The labor force actually shrank by 475,000 last month. The number of people working declined 353,000 and the number of people thrown out of work fell by 122,000, more than offsetting any tightness in the labor market that would have otherwise driven the rate up further.

In advance of today's report, several private analysts said unemployment is certain to remain at post-war record levels through the summer. The economists said they doubted the 10 percent cut in income tax rates or the 7.4 percent boost in Social Security benefits that took effect Thursday would produce enough of a spur in consumer spending to cut into the unemployment toll.

The nation's unemployment rate was 9.5 percent in May, a fractional rise from the previous month. Nonetheless, 10.5 million Americans were out of work and new records were set for joblessness among blacks and adult males.

Before this year, the previous post-World War II record was 9.0 percent, which was recorded in May 1975 as the nation emerged from a recession brought on by the Arab oil embargo.

The bureau reported Thursday that initial claims for unemployment compensation benefits totaled 550,000 in the week ending June 19, a decrease of 45,000 from the prior week's total on a seasonally adjusted basis.

That would not take into account, however, any futile search for jobs by out-of-school teen-agers who do not qualify for jobless benefits.

At his nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night, President Reagan acknowledged that unemployment "may remain stubbornly high for a time...."

Several private economists agreed in interviews Thursday, saying national joblessness will likely remain above 9.5 percent for the next several months. These same economists said it was most unlikely that the latest tax cut, effective Thursday, would produce any new hiring. Nor, they said, would the 7.4 percent cost-of-living increase going to millions of elderly Social Security beneficiaries this month.

"Businesses will have to see an increase in orders and sales for several months before they go back into a hiring mode," said Allen Sinal, vice president and senior economist of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

Sandra Shaber of Chase Econometrics in Bala Cynwyd, Pa., said: "All in all, that (the tax cuts) adds up to a very modest stimulus. What it will lead to is a modest rebound and an anemic recovery."

Meanwhile, nationwide construction spending rose 1.3 percent in May, its third straight monthly gain.

Israel jets buzz Beirut in warning to Palestinians

By The Associated Press
Screaming Israeli jets dropped flares and smoke canisters on west Beirut for a second day today and troops blared warnings for the population to flee.

But civilians streamed back to the guerrilla enclave and the PLO warned a new underground would "strike mercilessly" at Israel and its U.S. backers.

Guerrillas feverishly dug in for street battles throughout west Beirut. Scores of red earth barricades rose along the west Beirut beaches with truck-mounted, anti-aircraft guns stationed behind them.

Sandbagged positions manned by anti-tank gunners filled the main streets.

Israel radio said Israel's invasion army was "tightening its encirclement" of Beirut to show impatience with diplomatic efforts to get the guerrillas out. It did not elaborate and Israeli military sources said there was no change in the disposition of Israeli forces around Beirut.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib resumed talks with President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan at the presidential palace outside Beirut on ways to get the Palestine Liberation Organization out of Lebanon's capital and prevent Israel from storming in.

Also participating in the talks was Christian militia leader Bashir Gemayel, just returned from a conference in Taif, Saudi Arabia, aimed at helping resolve the crisis. But the conferees apparently failed to score a breakthrough and said they would adopt a firmer position after contacts were made with the permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir told two French envoys in Jerusalem that negotiations for the removal of Yasser Arafat and his PLO from west Beirut were at a "decisive phase" and the best thing France could do was to stay out of the diplomatic efforts.

The PLO's top security chief, Salah Khalaf, also known as Abu Iyad, told the Palestinian news agency Wafa that the guerrillas' humiliation at Israeli hands would breed a new generation of guerrillas who would "mercilessly strike" at pro-Western Arab regimes, American interests and Israel.

DEMONSTRATES ARM CONTROL — Columbia Pilot Henry W. Hartsfield demonstrates the remote manipulator system controls aboard the Earth-

Columbia passes Soviet booster

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia's astronauts had a close encounter today, passing just 7.7 miles below the orbiting remains of a junked Soviet rocket booster. The old casing is part of a whirling and growing space graveyard which may be a hazard to future spaceships.

If there had been any threat of collision, Columbia would have taken evasive action. It wasn't necessary. Mission Control alerted astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield to look for the booster as they passed 186 miles above the eastern coast of Australia. They were out of contact at the time of encounter and when they next talked with the ground they gave no indication they had spotted anything.

Controllers said it would have appeared over their front window, passed over the shuttle and disappeared behind its tail.

With both Columbia and stage traveling more than 17,000 miles an hour, the rendezvous was short and chance of sighting slim. Their paths crossed at an estimated closing speed of 6,100 miles an hour.

Mattingly and Hartsfield were in good spirits as they awakened this morning on the shuttle's fourth and last test mission — which is to end Sunday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., with a personal welcome from President Reagan.

"Chariots of Fire" was the wakeup music beamed up by Mission Control.

Reagan, says arms buildup brought Soviets to talks

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan says the enormous military buildup he is embarking upon is the factor that "brought the Soviet Union to the negotiating table as quickly as they came."

Before flying to his ranch 20 miles from here for a vacation, Reagan told broadcasters and editors meeting Thursday in Los Angeles that his increase in defense spending also will keep the Soviets at the bargaining table.

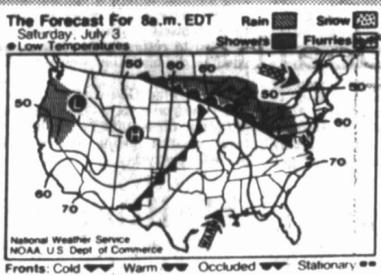

But he said a Soviet-endorsed freeze on nuclear weapons "would make this country dangerously vulnerable to nuclear blackmail."

The Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START) between the United States and the Soviet Union began Tuesday and could take months or even years before they are completed.

Reagan also told the broadcasters and editors from Western states that he was "terribly disturbed" to learn that Egyptians believe the United States knew in advance and sanctioned the Israeli invasion of Lebanon early last month.

And he hinted he believes that the insanity defense in criminal trials should be modified to place the burden of proof on the defense, saying it's hard enough to prove one's own friends sane.

Ethics committee launches own congressional sex probe

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ethics Committee is launching its own probe on the heels of a Justice Department investigation into allegations that some members of Congress may have sexually preyed upon the youthful pages they employ.

A top Senate source said the allegations center on a few, no more than two or three House members. But other sources said as many as 10 representatives could be under investigation. None have been identified.

The accusations surfaced when a 16-year-old male page, who said he did not participate in the activities, relayed to a staffer in the office of Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., details of parties involving cocaine and sodomy. The page also reported incidents of homosexual "preying on pages," as one source put it.

The Denver Post said in today's editions that Roy Opp of Denver identified his son, Jeff, as the page who went to Schroeder's office. The elder Opp acquiesced as saying he was certain his son, who was not available for comment, wasn't involved in any wrongdoing.

"I'm certain and comfortable that he did nothing," the father told the newspaper. "He was not involved sexually and didn't take drugs."

The Denver Post said the father flew to Washington on June 13 and a day later was with his son when the boy spent more than 90 minutes telling his story to Justice Department officials.

Since then, the Justice probe reportedly has been expanded to include allegations of congressmen soliciting female pages for sex.

In a separate investigation, a federal grand jury has been looking into allegations that a cocaine ring has been operating on Capitol Hill. The New York Daily News reported today that the grand jury has heard testimony that at least two congressmen from California, neither identified, have been regular customers of the ring.

The newspaper quoted unidentified "House staffers" as saying that at least one of the lawmakers did little to conceal his use of cocaine and inhaled the drug regularly in the presence of young women he invited to his home.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Ethics Committee, said Thursday he has instructed the committee staff to immediately begin a thorough investigation.

"Any charges that may be proved will be reported to the House promptly for appropriate disciplinary action," Stokes said.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said he was "deeply disturbed" by the allegations.

More crop assessors in South Plains

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Agriculture John Block is sending 20 additional crop loss assessors to the South Plains, hit heavy by hail and rain this spring.

U.S. Sen. John Tower's office said the 20 will join 47 assessors already in the fields. Part of the Federal Crop Insurance Corp., the assessors will also visit eastern New Mexico and western Oklahoma.

N-weapon's component found

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — FBI agents are trying to trace a secret electronic nuclear weapon component that was discovered missing during an inventory check at the Pantex nuclear weapons assembly plant, an official said.

Gerald Johnson, chief of operations at the Department of Energy plant, declined to describe the function of the classified part, but said it does not contain radioactive material.

"A thorough check is being made of both the Pantex plant and other DOE facilities that were involved with the component," Johnson said Thursday.

The Pantex plant is the final assembly point for U.S. nuclear weapons.

"The FBI has been asked to assist in the investigation, which is routine whenever there is an inventory discrepancy involving classified material," he said. "We are not even completely sure that it is missing," Johnson said.

A suit over smoking

This is not the first time that Melvin Belli has sued tobacco companies for damages in a cancer case. The San Francisco attorney tried it once before — and lost to a successful defense argument that his client's cancer might have been caused by something other than cigarette smoking.

There is no doubt that the tobacco people will pull out all the stops in advancing similar arguments this time around. They are certain to play variations on the theme that, no matter how much statistical evidence has been piled up linking cigarette smoking and disease, proof that smoking caused a given case of cancer is elusive.

Elusive is the word. Belli may not find it easy to convince a jury that his 71-year-old client's terminal lung cancer is attributable to smoking — this though he allegedly smoked three packs a day for 50 years.

Still, the mountain of damning evidence is there, and has brought about a medical profession consensus that smoking is decidedly hazardous. Knowing this, the tobacco industry is sure to deploy its legal big guns in this case. For a successful lawsuit that pinpoints smoking as the cause of a fatal disease would bring the industry more headaches than any number of namby-pamby "dangerous to your health" warnings on cigarette packages.

Telephone nightmare

Ma Bell may be the only phone company in Big Spring — I certainly wish they weren't.

It's now three and one-half months since I first checked into the "Crossroads of West Texas," and only now do I have a (semi-) working phone.

The sad story goes something like this:

We checked in with the phone company within a week of moving here — after all, it's sometimes vital that a reporter be reached by phone.

Ma Bell's representative asked us to pick up a phone at a certain office. Naturally, on the appointed day, the phone wasn't in, but a call by the company resulted in our receiving the instrument.

The company said it would be cheaper if we picked up the phone at the office. I'd hate to see what the price would have been if I'd subjected the installer to the indignity of having to tote a two-pound phone to my home. They estimated the price would be $40 if we picked up the phone — the final total was something like $60.

Then, I was informed that I would be on a two-party line. I hate two-party lines, but what can you do — go to another phone company? No way. Bell's the only one in town.

Okay, well, since I have no choice, I'll take a two-party line.

It'll be a week before the installation man can get to me? What am I supposed to do during that time? Well, there's a pay phone down the road — just because it eats quarters like candy is no reason to be upset.

BY THIS TIME, I'm beginning to get a little annoyed.

I'm in a new town, my editor can't contact me, my wife (then 200 miles away, finishing out a school term at Tarleton State University) can't call, my parents and in-laws (also 200 miles away) can't reach me and this blasted pay phone keeps eating my quarters.

After two or three broken appointments (when I stayed home to be sure the installer could get in the house), the man finally arrives to connect the phone. He wires the instrument and leaves.

One small problem — he didn't wire it right.

When the phone does ring, it will ring once — maybe. If you're on the other end, all you hear is silence, if your phone doesn't switch off and back to a dial tone. If the caller keeps trying, dialing his finger to the bone, I'll eventually get synchronized and snatch the phone off the hook right after it rings, shout "Hello," and get an answer.

The answers are sometimes surprising, though. It seems my number and that of a local radio station are separated by one digit, resulting in late-night calls requesting songs I've never heard of and certainly don't intend to play at 2:30 a.m. If the call's not for the radio station, it's usually for someone I've never heard of and who has a totally different number — I've even gotten calls from operators asking if so-and-so can bill a call to his

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have had a very confused life, but I have always resisted turning to religion because I have felt I wanted to work things out on my own. But now I see that I need God. Will he help me? — V.A.

DEAR V.A.: Yes, he will, and I have seen him do it in the lives of countless people just like you. Jesus Christ wants to forgive you for all you have done that is wrong, but more than that, he wants to come into your life and change it. He wants to help you become the person he created you to be.

You have put your finger on the greatest problem many people have with Christ. It is not that they have great intellectual doubts, or that they are atheists who don't believe that God exists. The biggest problem, I have discovered, with most people is that they are unwilling to admit that they need God. They believe that they can run their own lives, and they are even afraid of what God might do with them if they ever did turn their lives over to him. I am thankful that you have faced your own need — that is the first step in coming to know Christ personally.

You need to turn your life over to Christ — and the wonderful truth is that God will receive you right now, just as you are! God loves you, and all that he asks of you is a willingness to turn from your sins and open your heart to Christ. Take that step of faith right now — there is no reason to delay. Perhaps you know one of Jesus' most famous parables, the story of the prodigal son. (You can read it in Luke 15: 11-32). In that parable Jesus tells about a young man who left his home and decided to live it up. But things did not go the way he expected, and he found himself in great difficulty. He decided to return to his father, and when he did his father welcomed him back as his son.

That is what God wants to do with you — welcome you as his child. Turn in faith to Christ, and he will help you learn what it means to live in his presence every day.

American is disillusioned

Dear Editor,

I work at two jobs to be able to pay utility bills and rent and buy a few groceries. I have to buy used clothing. I cannot afford to travel.

I stay exhausted, who has time to rest? I pay a staggering amount of my income in taxes. What for?

I cannot afford proper medical and dental care. I do without. Family life? What is that? Who has time?

Social security? That is a joke. After all I am an American. America the Free. What is freedom?

Justice Dept. thwarts probe

WASHINGTON — In a display of arrogance worthy of Nixon administration apparatchiks, Justice Department officials have stonewalled a Senate investigation of Pentagon wrongdoing.

The investigation by a Judiciary subcommittee, headed by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has been going on for two years now, and members of Hatch's staff are infuriated at the Justice Department's efforts to stall and derail the probe.

"Thumbing your nose at a United States Senator is an action one should be made to regret," an exasperated aide wrote in a confidential report to Hatch. My associates Indy Badhwar and Jack Mitchell have seen a copy of the report.

It gives eloquent expression to the frustration of congressional investigators who try to "dislodge nuggets of truth from the rock of bureaucratic obstruction and obfuscation."

"We have been involved in congressional investigations since 1968, but never saw anything like this one," the confidential report complains. "The indecent manner with which the Justice Department handled this is symbolic of its handling of our requests, and indicates that the department does not view our investigations as serious matters."

What is the subject of this investigation that seems to worry the Justice Department so? Believe it or not, it is the case of A. Ernest Fitzgerald, the Air Force civilian cost analyst who blew the whistle on $2 billion in overruns on the C-5A transport plane.

What makes the Justice Department cover up absolutely mind-boggling, is that Fitzgerald's disclosures were made 14 years ago. He was harassed and hounded for telling the truth under oath to a congressional committee. Eventually he was fired.

Under pressure, the Pentagon rehired him, but put him in a dead-end, do-nothing job where he couldn't cause the spendthrift brass hats further embarrassment. It was only two weeks ago that Fitzgerald was reinstated in the watchdog job that would serve the taxpayers properly.

Yet still the bureaucrats persist in covering up the persecution of the man who has earned the reputation as the federal government's No. 1 whistleblower. Administrations come and go: Republicans and Democrats follow each other in and out of the presidency. Still the Pentagon bureaucrats cover their brass, with help from the Justice Department.

Here are some of the petty ways Justice officials have thwarted the Senate investigators:

—Acting on personal assurances of cooperation from senior department officials, two Senate investigators showed up for a scheduled 9 a.m. appointment to look at pertinent documents. They waited an hour. No documents. An official, tracked down by a secretary, relayed the message that he had been "ordered not to give out any documents." The bureaucrats then said there was only one Senate staffer they would deal with, like it or lump it.

—Two FBI agents were not permitted to be interviewed separately — a fundamental investigative technique. Instead, they had to be interviewed in the presence of "four individuals from the FBI and Justice Department, who monitored what they said, corrected them and inhibited their statements."

—One FBI agent, asked about suppression of evidence, "started to answer and was cut off" by his superiors. "We were not able to pursue this vital avenue of questioning," the Senate aides wrote.

—Justice withheld crucial documents and even went so far as to doctor one key document, according to the Senate staff report. "The document we received was just plain phony — a clear attempt to obstruct the work of a congressional committee," the report states.

Hatch's staff recommended that the senator get subpoena power and hold hearings on the "document outrages." The staff report urged: "If the Justice Department plays tough, we play tougher. They have thrown down the gauntlet. Now let us pick it up."

Footnote: An FBI spokesman said that the Hatch aide's report contained "biased information."

VENGEFUL WATT: In a display of petty vindictiveness, Interior Secretary James Watt has tried to make one of his critics unemployable in his chosen field. But Watt's temper tantrum may not be so petty after all: The victim of his wrath has sued the secretary for $4 million in damages and the Department of Interior for another $1 million.

Watt's antagonist is Timothy Donohoe, a 36-year-old self-proclaimed "liberal and American" who worked as a lobbyist for a Texas energy company before he ran afoul of Watt. It has been reported how he wrote the secretary for "clarification" of a snide jape to the effect that Watt doesn't categorize people as Republicans or Democrats, but as liberals or Americans.

Watt had Donohoe fired, and an aide, Stanley Hulett, sent a letter to his boss, who fired him rather than risk offending the Interior Department, from which the company regularly leases land for oil and gas exploration.

What didn't come out, though, was that Watt — through Hulett — then pursued Donohoe with a vengeance. Copies of the Hulett and Donohoe letters were sent to the American Petroleum Institute, the oil industry association in Washington that presumably might be a source of job leads for the still-unemployed Donohoe.

To his credit, API head Charles DiBona "considered the matter to be none of his concern and took no action whatever," according to an aide.

Donohoe's damage suit is based largely on what he considers to be Watt's violation of his freedom of speech rights and of the Privacy Act by sending Donohoe's private letter to his boss and the API.

Footnote: In answer to the damage suit, Hulett said he had given the Donohoe letter to DiBona as part of his routine efforts to keep DiBona apprised of the activities of oil lobbyists. Watt said he did not recall ever seeing Donohoe's letter.

We didn't wallow

As many of you may have noticed, last week the country celebrated the 10th Anniversary of the Watergate break-in. Unlike many people, my wife and I did not wallow in it. We decided to have a quiet dinner at home and watch TV, rather than go out to an expensive nightclub and put on funny hats and throw confetti in the air, as many of our friends were doing.

We wanted to be with each other as we were on that fateful morning when five men were arrested for illegally entering the Democratic National Headquarters offices on the sixth floor of the Watergate office-apartment complex.

Like so many Americans, I remember the exact moment when I heard the news. It was seven o'clock on Saturday morning, and as I turned on the radio the announcer at the end of his news broadcast, made mention of the break-in.

"My God, I said, sitting up in bed. 'They broke into the Watergate.' My wife opened her eyes, startled by my reaction. 'Why are you getting so excited about a victimless crime?' she asked. 'There is more to this news item than meets the eye. This thing could lead to the Oval Office of the White House.'"

"How do you know?" she asked me as I started doing my daily 50 pushups.

"I don't know for certain. But something smells about this whole thing. Why would five men risk everything to break into Democratic National Headquarters unless they were part of a much larger conspiracy that could involve the highest officials in this land?"

"But why the Watergate?" she asked.

"Why not the Watergate?" I replied, jogging in place for three miles. "This looks like something that nut, Gordon Liddy, would think up as part of a Plumbers' plan in the White House."

"What are plumbers doing in the White House?"

"I lifted two 100-pound barbells. 'I can't get a direct answer from anyone, but I think they're involved in wiretapping, break-ins and dirty tricks. Somehow they're connected with the Committee to Re-elect the President and John Mitchell.'"

"But," she said, "how will this involve Nixon?"

"It doesn't involve him at this moment. But if I know the President, as soon as he hears about it, he will call in his legal counsel, John Dean, and try to cover the whole thing up."

Thoughts

When I'm getting ready to reason with a man, I spend one third of my time thinking about myself and what I am going to say — and two thirds thinking about him and what he is going to say.

Lebanon's dwindling Jewish community awaits war's end

By EARLEEN F. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — On a narrow street choked with smoke from piles of burning garbage, the Magen Abraham Synagogue stands behind gateposts emblazoned with the name and slogans of a local Moslem militia.

The cream- and ocher-colored building, the glass Stars of David in its two round windows shattered by a recent car-bombing a quarter-mile away, is perhaps the last tangible sign of the Lebanese Jewish community that numbered 9,000 four decades ago and has now dwindled to 30 or 40 men, women and children, possibly fewer.

In a small printing shop at the end of a narrow passageway opposite the synagogue, three Lebanese Jews talked about the exodus of their fellow Jews and about Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

"Like the Moslems and Christians of Lebanon, we Jews are afraid of this new war," said the shop owner, a 50-year-old man who did not want his name published.

The synagogue windows were broken by the June 23 car-bombing that destroyed a Palestinian ammunition dump and killed more than 50 people, the three Jews said. The powerful explosion, which the Palestine Liberation Organization blamed on "Israeli saboteurs," shattered windows up to a mile away. "We thought it was the Israelis bombing us," said one of the Jewish men, an electrician in his late 30s.

The electrician estimated the number of Jews left in Lebanon at 20 to 30. The printer and his sister-in-law said, "maybe 30 to 40."

"We don't know each other the way we used to," the printer said. "Before the Lebanese civil war started in 1975, most of the Jews were living together in this area, but now some have gone to other countries or to other parts of the city, and we don't sit together so much."

GOIN' TO THE GARDEN, AND WE'RE GONNA GET MARRIED — Couples march in mass wedding procession in New York's Madison Square Garden Thursday as the Unification Church leader, Reverend Sun Myung Moon, presides over the ceremony which included more than 2,000 couples. Moon served as matchmaker for the couple. About a third include men and women of different races or nationalities, in with the church's belief that interracial marriage can help end racism.

Rev. Moon marries 2,075 in largest mass wedding

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — More than 2,000 couples — some newly met, others with no common language, and all matched by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon — exchanged vows in a mass wedding. But some unhappy relatives tossed epithets instead of rice.

The 2,075 brides at the 1½-hour ceremony Thursday at Madison Square Garden wore identical dresses of white satin and lace. The 2,075 grooms wore blue suits, red ties and white gloves for the event, which broke Moon's own record for a mass wedding.

The couples, who now must remain celibate for 40 days according to Unification Church law, smiled broadly as they posed for photographs, but not all the parents were joyful.

"I know what I'd do with Moon. I'd hang him," said Peter DiCenso, of Montreal, who had not seen his daughter since she joined the controversial church six years ago.

"I'm here to see my daughter. Period," said DiCenso. As for his new son-in-law, he said, "I don't even know his last name."

Another member of the audience, Mary Anne Chance of Memphis, threw out her hand in a fascist salute as Moon spoke.

Thousands of relatives watched the wedding after passing through metal detectors, and many defended their children's beliefs, even though they didn't share them.

Church

Minister worries about apathy

By RHONDA WOODALL
Church Editor

"I didn't decide to become a minister, the Lord decided it for me. He called me in 1972, but I didn't answer until 1976," said Phil Thurmond, pastor of the Christ's Fellowship Center.

"I think people should be able to have personal relationships with the Lord. It's just not enough to go to church," Thurmond said. People, especially young people, are tired of seeing God as a form of Godliness (falsification of God). They want to see God as a reality.

PHIL THURMOND
...minister of Christ's Fellowship Center

"The times we are living in are important times. People need to wake up," Thurmond said. "Young people see their parents and themselves go through the motions. They see a false Christianity. Young people want to see their parents take a stand. They want to take a stand themselves. Instead, they take different channels to try to find something to fill the void. They take drugs. They take alcohol. They have sex. These don't fill that void. Only the reality of the Lord can fill that void."

Christian or even in a Christian home. I didn't attend church regularly or become involved in church until I was born again at the age of 21 in 1968.

"I want to gather and gain as much knowledge of God's word as I can, so I can use it effectively in teaching the Lord's word. I want to be able to use my own personal experiences as an example. What God says is true," Thurmond said.

"Our community, spiritually, is in need of a deep move back to the Lord. We need to be dedicated and committed to the Lord instead of other things. The city is in need of a revival, and it must begin in the pulpit. Once the pastors are revived then the people can be revived. In this way we can reach out to the lost," Thurmond said.

Thurmond was born in Paris and raised in Fort Worth and Amarillo. He and his wife Diane have three children, Paul, 13, Tiffany, 11, and Crystal, 1. Prior to coming to Big Spring he held managerial positions in Houston and Lubbock and was a traveling missionary in Amarillo and Conroe.

Church news briefs

Church group is in Hollywood

Members of the 14th and Main Church of Christ youth group, Main Street, left for Hollywood, Calif., for approximately two weeks, June 23.

Teenagers on the trip are John Paul Anderson, Pam Burt, Eric Henry, James Hodges, Leslye Overman, Jamie Phillips, Sandra and Tammy Smith, Lisa Swinney and Kim West. Mr. and Mrs. Larson Lloyd, Jr. are adult sponsors. The trip is under the direction of Doug Morris, youth minister of the 14th and Main Church of Christ.

"Main Street," a singing group and puppet team, will be teaching Vacation Bible School at the Hollywood Church of Christ. Prior to the V.B.S. they will be inviting citizens to the Bible school through a door-to-door campaign. They also will perform for the V.B.S. daily and on street corners where many TV commercials have been made.

"Our main objective is to give our teenagers an opportunity to put their Christianity into action," Doug Morris said.

Many famous people have been members of the Hollywood church including Pat Boone and country singer Hank James. The church building is two blocks from the Hollywood and Vine intersection.

This is the second time the group has gone to Hollywood. Although most of the time will be spent working with the Hollywood church, there will be time for sight-seeing. Among the attractions the group will visit is Universal Studios, N.B.C. Studios, Knotts Berry Farm and Disneyland.

"We try to combine fun with work to show our youth that Christianity can be both fun and rewarding. Christianity isn't boring. Jesus wasn't a boring person," Doug Morris said.

"Our teenagers have worked hard for 12 weeks to qualify for this trip. I'm really proud of them," Doug Morris said.

JESSE D. RUSSELL
...volunteer evangelist for Emmanuel Baptist Church

Russell helps church

Jesse D. Russell is doing door-to-door evangelism for the Emmanuel Baptist Church for two months. He was sent to the church by the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board's Mission Service Corps. Mission Corps is a volunteer outreach ministry of the home mission board to small Southern Baptist churches, camps and missions which cannot afford additional staff members. Volunteers serve without pay for periods ranging from one week to two years.

"I think the reception has been good," Russell said, referring to his door-to-door evangelism. "Most people have been very friendly."

Russell is from Winfield, Alabama. He was born and raised there and has taught school there for the last three years. He has a bachelor of science degree from Livingston University in Alabama in history and a master of education degree in social science. He has spent ten years teaching and coached several sports and directed the school glue club.

Russell served as youth director and interim educational director at Northside Baptist Church in Panama City, Fla. for six months. He has been a counselor for Crusader Boys at Alabama Baptist Boys Camp. Russell is active as a Royal Ambassador (Boys Missionary Organization) director at Winfield First Baptist Church in Winfield, Ala. and Association. He also has directed a youth Lay Revival Team.

Does he plan to continue volunteering? "I plan to take another volunteer assignment next summer if the opportunity presents itself," Russell said.

After he is through with his work here, Russell plans to seek employment in this area as a teacher.

Texans win Western writing honors

SANTA FE (AP) — A 92-year-old Ruidoso, N.M., woman who has spent the past 33 years chronicling the life of the Apache Indians has been presented the Western Writers of America Saddleman Award.

Golden Spur Awards, called "the Oscar of Western writing" by the writers' association, were presented Thursday to 10 people.

Ruidoso's Eve Ball is a former winner of a Golden Spur and has been nominated three times for the Saddleman Award, presented by the international Western writers association for "outstanding contributions to the history and legend of the West."

Born in Kentucky, Ms. Ball grew up on a cattle ranch in Kansas and traveled through Texas and New Mexico in later years. She settled in New Mexico, five miles from the Mescalero Apache Reservation.

Ms. Ball's dedication to learn from and write about the Apaches earned her friendship and confidence, and to her they revealed their stories.

She has talked at length with Amelia Naiche, granddaughter of Cochise; Ace Daklugie, nephew of Geronimo and James Kaywaykla, nephew of Victorio.

But Ms. Ball said her early efforts to publish stories about the Apaches were unsuccessful because her research was done orally.

"If it wasn't in print, it didn't happen," she said publishers told her.

Ms. Ball's works include "In The Days of Victorio," "My Girlhood Among Outlaws," "Ma'am Jones of the Pecos," and "Ideh, An Apache Odyssey."

She currently is writing another book.

Asked Thursday about winning the Saddleman Award, Ms. Ball said, "I'm afraid I'll wake up and find out it's a dream."

The winner of the Saddleman, sponsored by Levi Strauss and Co., is determined by association members who vote from a list of nominees.

Winners of the Golden Spur Awards are determined by panels of judges made up of active association members.

Golden Spurs for best Western novel went to Elmer Kelton of San Angelo, Texas, and Lee Head of Santa Fe in a tie vote.

Kelton won the prize for his book "Eyes of the Hound," while Ms. Head was presented the award for "Honky Tonk Man."

Loren Estleman, author of "Aces and Eights," won the award for best Western historical novel. Estleman is from Whitman Lake, Mich.

Winner of the award for best Western non-fiction work was University of Kansas at Lawrence professor David Dary. He wrote "Cowboy Culture."

Alice J. Hall, a National Geographic magazine staff writer, won the Golden Spur for best Western short non-fiction article. Her article, "Buffalo Bill and the Enduring West," appeared in the July 1981 issue of National Geographic.

The prize for best Western short fiction went to Carla Kelly of Ogden, Utah, for her work "Kathleen Flaherty's Long Winter." The article appeared in Far West magazine.

Paul Cooper of Los Angeles won the Golden Spur for best Western film script. Cooper wrote "Establish Thou The Work of Our Hands," for the television show "Father Murphy."

Mark Johathan Harris, author of "The Last Run," was presented the award for best Western juvenile fiction. Harris lives in Los Angeles.

The prize for best Western cover art went to Wayne Baize of Amarillo, Texas, for his work "Touch of Winter," which appeared in Quarter Horse Journal.

A new award, the Medicine Pipe Bearers Award given for best first novel in the field of Western writing, went to Wayne Barton for his work "Ride Down the Wind."

Readers Digest defames Hispanics, LULAC alleges

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The president of the nation's largest Hispanic organization has complained to editors of Readers Digest that the magazine presents a "distorted, negative image of Hispanics."

League of United Latin American Citizens President Tony Bonilla said at the group's national convention Thursday that only nine of the 3,300 Reader's Digest articles published since 1970 dealt directly with Mexican-Americans.

And he said seven of the nine articles "alleged that Mexican-Americans are deeply involved in crime or imply they are illegal aliens."

"Only two articles in the last 13 years mentioned positive accomplishments of the Hispanic community or individuals, including last month's profile of golfer Chi Chi Rodriguez," Bonilla said.

Bonilla also said the complaint sent to the publication's editors that of the 148 editorial and staff positions listed by the magazine, none appear to be held by a Hispanic.

He said only one of the non-fiction articles published since 1970 appears to have been written by a Hispanic author or from a Hispanic perspective. And he said that one concerned sightseeing in Mexico City.

"Because of the pervasive impact Reader's Digest has on American public opinion, we believe its editors have a responsibility to stop ignoring or libeling 20 million Hispanics," Bonilla said.

Reader's Digest spokesman Charles Pintchman, reached at his suburban New York City home, denied the magazine discriminated against Hispanics. He said the magazine's Latin American editions and Spanish language U.S. edition are evidence that Reader's Digest is committed to Hispanics.

Stricter shipping traffic rules urged

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Stiffer traffic rules should be established near three busy Gulf Coast ports where there were 14 ship collisions and one oil rig rammed in a 15-month period, a Coast Guard board of inquiry said.

The board's recommendation is subject to approval by the International Maritime Organization.

But Capt. Robert F. Ingraham, commander of the Port of Galveston, said U.S. and foreign shipping concerns have favored stricter traffic regulations in and near Galveston Bay.

The proposed change, which would affect ports at Galveston, Texas City and Houston, was recommended Wednesday after the board examined the string of accidents during 1979 and 1980.

A Nov. 3, 1979, collision between the Liberian-registered vessels Mimosa and Burmah Agate was one of the 14 such wrecks in the 15 months before March 1980. The crash killed 32 crew members.

Dallas company buys Alaska firm

ANCHORAGE (AP) — A Dallas energy company has concluded the purchase of Alaska's largest construction company for an undisclosed price.

On May 19, Enserch Corp. signed a letter of intent to purchase Alaska International Constructors, a wholly owned subsidiary of Alaska International Industries.

Local girls participate in Miss Texas T.E.E.N. Pageant

By TINA M. STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

Felicia Ford's time has come to relinquish her Miss Texas T.E.E.N. crown to another deserving young woman. Who will it be?

Felicia and two local pageant contestants left Thursday morning to participate in the 1982 Miss Texas T.E.E.N. pageant in Dallas. Competing in this year's pageant from Big Spring are Kelli Bearden, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Smith of 3306 Cornell.

"It's pretty sad for me," Felicia said as she thinks of giving up her crown. "But I'm glad somebody can take my place and have as great a year as I've had. It's really meant a lot to me. When you have something good, you have to give it away, but someone else needs to experience it. There's nothing more thrilling than being crowned and you are not expecting it."

During her reign as Miss Texas T.E.E.N., Felicia has had pictures made with the governor, spoke at the Texas House of Representatives, sang at gospel concerts and the Baptist Evangelical Conference in Fort Worth, participated in local ribbon cuttings, competed in the National Miss T.E.E.N. Pageant in Albuquerque, N.M. where she placed in the top ten finalists and the top eight finalists in talent, and made appearances in five major Texas cities T.E.E.N. pageants. She also sang during the Johnny High Country Western Review held in Fort Worth where she performed with the director of Miss Texas America.

Felicia's advice to all girls participating in the pageant is to be yourself and have fun. Don't worry about how you look or what judges will think. Have fun knowing that when you leave you will still have all those friends and memories.

During the pageant, she will assist with registration, interviews and the judges' luncheon. She will get acquainted with all 108 girls, help them feel comfortable and train them for musical numbers they will perform together. During the actual pageant performance, she will sing a solo and assist in presenting all five preliminary awards, present her final speech and walk and crown the new Miss Texas T.E.E.N.

Felicia met with the two

local girls competing in this year's pageant several times this week. She gave them tips about what they will need to take, what the interviews will be like, how stage makeup should be applied, overall grooming and to remind them to just be themselves.

Felicia was sponsored by Bob Brock Ford Inc., Aubrey Weaver Real Estate, Dr. Neil Sanders and Helen's Shoe Stop. Her sponsors paid her entrance fee into the pageant last year and were always there when she needed them for financial and moral support, she said.

Kelli Bearden is a graduate of Big Spring High School and is a freshman at Howard College. "I'm real excited about the pageant," she said. "At first I didn't want to go. I'm just now getting my music finished. But having problems with that made it all seem worth it and made me want to try harder."

Kelli will perform a combination of acting and dance before the judges as her speech and talent selection for the pageant. Her routine is accompanied by a number from the musical "Chicago."

Kelli's sponsors are Jean Junction, Morrison Super Save, Neal's Pharmacy, Restler's Photography and Rita's Flowers.

Kelli believes that both participating in and winning the pageant could help her develop her planned future career. "I plan to major in fashion merchandising and public relations. Both of those areas you have to deal with people a lot and I would meet quite a lot of people if I won."

Kelli plans to continue her studies at Howard College for the next two years and then transfer to Texas Tech University in Lubbock to complete her degree.

Susan Smith is a senior at Big Spring High School and plans to attend Howard College following graduation.

She plans to study for a career in dental hygiene. "I'm real excited, a little bit scared, and I'm getting a little bit nervous about it," Susan said about participating in the pageant. "I think that this whole thing will be a good experience and I will get to meet a lot of people. It will be a lot of fun."

She believes the pageant experience will teach her about people and how to get along with them. Susan works with people in her job with Dr. Johnny R. Stanley, DDS and in her volunteer work.

Susan will perform a jazz tap dance routine to a number from the Broadway play and movie "All That Jazz." She is sponsored by Partee Drilling Co., Young and Alive Beauty Salon and Faye's Flowers.

Dear Abby

Alum wants to avoid reunions

DEAR ABBY: About high school reunions: They may be great for some people, but I have no desire to go to one. My best day in high school was the day before graduation cause I knew I'd never have to go there again.

Why should I go back to Moline, Ill., to see my old classmates? I don't give a hoot about what happened to the snobs I went to school with because none of them ever gave a hoot about me. All through high school I was miserable and lonely. I want to forget those days.

NO REGRETS, NO REMORSE AND NO REUNIONS
DEAR NO REUNIONS: Your letter tugged at my heart because I know you are speaking for many. It's worth space in this column if it inspires just one happy and popular high school student to be less "snobbish" and more sensitive to the shy kids who are lonely and hurting.

DEAR ABBY: I am still very much upset by the letter regarding the tiny poodle that was forced to go on a "death diet" because she was four pounds over the weight limit stipulated by the condo group. (No dog over 17 pounds allowed.)

What a cruel rule! A dog living with a family is a member of that family and should be treated as such.

The dog's owner blames herself for allowing the vet to put her pet on a crash diet in order to keep the dog at the condo. I think the blame should be placed squarely on the shoulders of that condo landlord who allowed such a stupid rule to be on the books in the first place. What's four pounds?

The rule should read: "Small dogs only." I hope that landlord has a lot of sleepless nights.

VIVIAN GROW IN PALM SPRINGS

DEAR VIVIAN: You rate an "A" in compassion, but you flunk law. Unless a "rule" is clearly spelled out, it can be stretched in any direction so far that it becomes useless.

What exactly is a "small" dog? Compared to a St. Bernard, a standard poodle can be considered "small."

Dr. Donohue

Infection leaves calling card

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Could you please give me some information on histoplasmosis? I have it in my eyes. It is very hard to find information on this. I have a lesion in my right eye. I've been told by my doctor that I've had this for years. He has me on cortisone. Please add to my sparse store of information on this problem. — Mrs. S.M.

Histoplasmosis is a fungus infection. Fungi are very simple plants, among the simplest in nature. They have seeds, something like the plant seeds with which you are familiar. These seeds can become airborne, just as can seeds from any plant. This is the background.

The fungus, histoplasma, lives in the soil, and especially in soil enriched with bird droppings. The seeds from such soil can become airborne and we may breathe them into our lungs. For most people, this is no problem. They may technically be called infected, but the infection causes no distress. It is not even noticed.

For others, there may be only a mild flu-like episode, and that's all. For a very few, a serious pulmonary problem develops. And for an even smaller minority, there is spread of infection to other parts of the body. Now to your situation.

Your eye illness is not actually an infection. It is merely the consequence of your body's fighting off an infection. For some reason, antibodies made against the infecting fungus attack a portion of the eye. It becomes inflamed. It is not infected with the fungus, and in fact the reaction can occur from a fungal infection that happened years before.

It is the inflammation with which your doctor now has concern. And that is why cortisone is used. It is given to quiet the inflammation. If your eye were infected you would have to use a medicine that fights the fungus directly. But your problem is really one of an allergy to an infection. Therefore, you have no need to worry about spread of infection.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have fungus infection of my big toenails only. What is the medicine one takes by mouth for this if the applied medicine doesn't help? How long is it to be taken? — Mrs. R.P.

Griseofulvin is the name. It is taken by mouth and for a long time — six months or a year.

If afflicted with problem fingernails or toenails, learn about the practical, medically correct form of treatment. Write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "Solving Your Nail Problems," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Bill for Texas' prison battle over $1 million

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A high-priced Houston law firm has submitted a $1 million bill for the state's legal fees during the past eight months of its appeal of a federal judge's prison reform order.

Fulbright & Jaworski, which was retained by state officials last year, sent a bill to the state that was higher than the tab for eight years of legal work for the prison inmates who brought the initial suit.

Bill Pakakia of the Houston law firm defended the fee, pointing out that 43 lawyers have worked on the case which involved 159 days of trials and thousands of exhibits.

He noted that one reason the fee for legal work for the prisoners was not as much as the fee charged the state was that the U.S. Justice Department intervened and did most of the work free.

The $1,081,740 price tag has become a hot potato for the state's two gubernatorial candidates.

Attorney General Mark White claims Gov. Bill Clements pushed him into retaining Fulbright & Jaworski, and now Clements claims that White's initial fears of the cost turned into a self-fulfilling prophecy because the attorney general gave the law firm carte blanche with little supervision.

White said Clements was trying to embarrass the attorney general's office for the governor's political gain. White claimed retaining legal council outside state government would be "an extravagant waste of taxpayers' dollars."

Last March, Clements called the Fulbright & Jaworski charges "excessive and exorbitant."

Clements recently said White has "run off all the good attorneys in his office."

The chairman of the prison board estimated last summer that retaining outside counsel would cost no more than $200,000.

"I was wrong," said T. Louis Austin of Dallas. "I really didn't think it was that much money. Are you sure?" Austin asked a reporter Wednesday.

"In this case, I think we needed outside counsel, not because Mark White is not a good attorney general, but there just had to be more people put on. If I had it to do over again, I'd do the same thing," Austin added.

He said he believes it was money well spent since a recent appeals court ruling said the state does not have to provide individual cells for each prisoner in the extensive state prison system.

He noted that Turner had testified that $250 an hour would be reasonable by Houston standards for so complex a case.

Policeman kills murder suspect

HOUSTON (AP) — A man evicted 10 days earlier for making threats killed his former roommate, knifed his former landlord and a neighbor and attacked a police officer who then shot him to death, authorities say.

Jose Nava, 25, died early Wednesday with a blast from a 12-gauge shotgun fired by Officer H.G. Pirtel, said homicide detective Doug Bostock.

Pirtel fired after Nava attacked the officer with a butcher knife and cut his arm, said Bostock.

The detective said Nava already had shot to death his former roommate, 22-year-old Roberto Calderon, stabbed his former landlord, Valentine Rios, in the lower abdomen and cut a neighbor, Eleta Flores.

Rios, 48, who evicted Nava from his upstairs apartment for making threats, was in stable condition at a local hospital, said detective D.D. Frazier.

Police said Pirtel and Ms. Flores, Calderon's next-door neighbor, were not seriously hurt.

Frazier said Nava broke into Ms. Flores house, cut her with a knife and then went to Calderon's apartment. He said Ms. Flores called police and then followed Nava with a .22-caliber pistol.

Rios, who was stabbed when he appeared at Calderon's apartment during the melee, fled and barricaded himself inside a bedroom with his wife and three children, police said.

Police said Nava shot Calderon with the gun he apparently took away from Ms. Flores.

Nava emerged from the house after police arrived and charged Pirtel, detectives said.

The officer backed away, stumbled, fell and shot Nava in the left side of the chest, said Bostock.

Nava continued to struggle with Pirtel on the ground, said Bostock. He said Pirtel was trying to free his service revolver when Nava stood up, fell back and died.

A&M chancellor is named

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Purdue University President Dr. Arthur G. Hansen Thursday became the sixth chancellor of The Texas A&M University System.

Hansen, 57, will oversee teaching, research and public service functions at the statewide network that includes Texas A&M University and ten other institutions.

Texas A&M University also announced that two of its vice presidents resigned Tuesday in a move that A&M President Frank Vandiver says will bring a "sleekness" to his staff.

Charles Samson, vice president for planning, and T.R. Greathouse, vice president for international affairs, stepped down Tuesday.

Hansen, president at Purdue for 11 years, succeeds retiring Chancellor Dr. Frank W.R. Hubert. Previously, Hansen was president of Georgia Institute of Technology for two years.

The TAMU institutions and agencies reporting to Hansen have combined annual operating budgets this fall of more than one-half billion dollars.

New shuttle to land at Houston

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A brand new space shuttle, called Challenger, and the astronauts from the current flight of the first space shuttle, Columbia, will all arrive at Ellington Air Force Base near Houston on Sunday.

The Challenger, perched atop a 747 carrier aircraft, will be flown Sunday from Edwards Air Force Base in California to Ellington. The craft is stopping at Ellington en route to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

The new spacecraft is expected to arrive at Ellington at 4:45 p.m., about an hour before welcome home ceremonies planned for Columbia astronauts Tom Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield.

The astronauts are scheduled to end a seven-day mission Sunday when they land Columbia at Edwards at about 10:45 a.m. They are expected to be greeted there by President Reagan.

Challenger was formally turned over to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Wednesday by the prime contractor, Rockwell International.

Why Western Europe wants Soviet pipeline

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

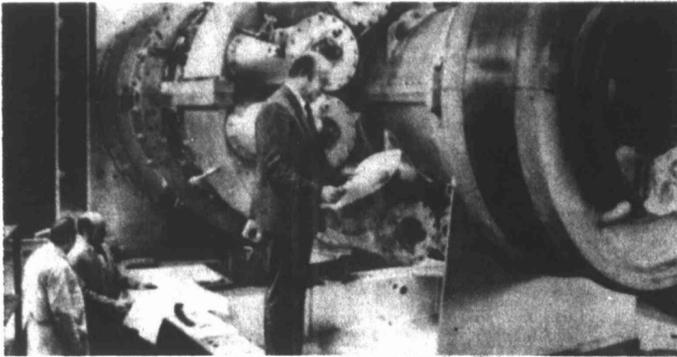

BONN, West Germany (AP) — For more than a week, Western Europe has criticized the United States for still trying to delay construction of a Soviet pipeline that offers three things Europeans want — more jobs, more trade with the Soviet Union and more natural gas.

The way Europeans see it, American efforts to delay the pipeline to Western Europe won't hurt the Soviets but could throw thousands of people in Italy, West Germany and Great Britain out of work.

European officials say that if they respect the American equipment and technology embargo, they could wreck future trade relationships with the Soviets.

"What there should not be and what there will not be... is a trade war with the Soviet Union with which a new epoch of the Cold War could be introduced," Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said last week in reiterating that Europe will proceed with the project.

Schmidt spoke after President Reagan announced he was extending a ban on U.S. technology for the planned pipeline, which is expected to deliver some 21 billion cubic meters of gas to Western Europe when it begins operation in 1984. The American embargo was originally imposed to protest

DELIVERY OF SOVIET PIPELINE DELAYED
...employee of West German firm looks over one of 42 gas turbines

the Soviet-backed declaration of martial law in Poland last December.

The 3,400-mile pipeline will start in western Siberia, go through the Ukraine and Czechoslovakia and end at the West German-Czech border where it will feed into an existing pipeline network.

West Germany, France, Austria and Switzerland have contracted to buy the gas, and the Dutch and Italians are negotiating.

The Reagan administration has criticized the pipeline deal on the grounds that it would make Western Europe too dependent on Soviet energy resources and give the Russians more hard currency to purchase western technology.

The Soviets say that despite Reagan's embargo, the pipeline will be built. What western Europeans may lose, however, are other benefits that go with delivering pipeline parts to the Russians — jobs and good trade relations.

Reagan defended the ban at his press conference Wednesday, saying "we did what we thought should have been done to release the oppression of the people of Poland." He added, "We think there is a risk that they (western Europeans) become dependent on the Soviet Union for energy."

In Italy alone, 6,000 to 7,000 jobs are affected. The Italian firm of Nuovo Pignone, a unit of the state energy conglomerate Nazionale Idrocarburi, has the largest contract in Europe for construction on the pipeline.

The company, which gets its parts from the American giant General Electric, will lose a $470 million contract to assemble 59 gas turbines if it goes along with the U.S. embargo. A decision has not yet been made.

"The company has other contracts. But without a doubt, this one is a very big one and there's some concern," a company spokesman said.

In West Germany, Reagan's decision has hurt AEG Telefunken, which has been asking the government for help to ward off bankruptcy.

The firm's turbine-making subsidiary, AEG-Kanis, had a $270 million contract to supply 47 turbines to the Soviets, but the company's chief executive, Heiny Duerr, said last week that the deal would not go ahead because of Reagan's embargo.

Duerr said the existence of AEG-Kanis and its 1,200 employees were threatened by the embargo because the turbines contract had been about half of the company's current orders.

British companies hold contracts worth about $344 million for the pipeline. A spokesman for John Brown Engineering Ltd. in London said the company has a $178 million order to provide 21 gas turbines and other parts for the pipeline.

"The contract was providing 'life blood' for the firm and hundreds of jobs would be at risk if it was canceled, he said.

Like the Italian company, AEG-Kanis and John Brown contracted to supply turbines that are made with parts supplied by General Electric.

In the current issue of the West German magazine Stern, U.S. Assistant Secretary of Defense Fred C. Ikle said Europeans should be looking to buy gas from partners in the NATO alliance, not the Soviet Union.

Israel hopes to reform guesswork language

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — In reviving the ancient Hebrew script, Israelis have had to make do without one of the major linguistic innovations of post-biblical times: the vowel.

"We don't have a language, we have a stenography," complains Haim Baltzan, founder of Israel's Itim national news agency and an advocate of language reform.

Baltzan, along with other Israelis, is exasperated by a language that requires readers to use instinct, guesswork and context to make sense of a simple newspaper or book.

Language has always been a heated issue in Israel, with reformers urging that changes be needed to make Hebrew easier for the immigrants who make up almost half the population of the Jewish state.

But attempts at reform have been thwarted repeatedly by traditionalists who say preserving the ancient Hebrew script intact is part of the Jewish nation's heritage. Religious Jews also oppose reform, saying any tampering with the holy tongue is sacrilegious.

To English-speakers "H LVS N CND" looks like gibberish. Israelis must guess at the missing vowels to decide whether the phrase is "he lives in Canada" or "he loves no candy."

Like other Semitic languages, Hebrew is based on a system of root words of three or four consonants with prefixes and suffixes. Slight differences in pronunciation can alter the entire meaning of the word.

Depending on its invisible vowels, "the average Hebrew word has four meanings and many common words have as many as seven," says Yaacov Choueka, a professor specializing in computer linguistics at Bar Ilan University near Tel Aviv.

Several centuries after the ancient Israelites were dispersed by the Roman destruction in 70 A.D. of the second temple in Jerusalem, scholars decided to preserve Hebrew pronunciation by introducing nikud, or dotting, a system of dots and dashes above, below and alongside the consonants to indicate vowel sounds.

Without the correct placement of one dot, a recent newspaper headline could have been read as "Egypt worried about Jerusalem's Arab women" rather than the intended "Egypt worried about Jerusalem's Arabness."

Hebrew is a terse language that can sometimes express whole phrases in a single word, and one vowel can reverse the meaning of a sentence. The daily Maariv recently told its readers in banner headlines that "Begin demands instant decision or else he will call early elections."

Only the presence of a hyphen-shaped symbol under the "or" prevented it from reading: "Begin demands instant decision and will call early elections."

But most newspapers, books and street signs are written without nikud, because the system is outdated and does not always reflect current pronunciation. Some of the symbols indicate a letter dropped from the word centuries ago, serving as a reminder to the pedant but useless to a reader trying to figure out its pronunciation.

The only texts commonly printed with dashes and dots are children's books, newspapers for immigrants, religious writings and modern poetry, which is marked with nikud to reduce ambiguity.

Mexico borrows $2.5 billion

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An international syndicate of 75 banks is lending the government $2.5 billion, saying the agreement signals confidence in Mexico's recovery from a severe economic crisis. But the interest will be triple what Mexico was paying for syndicated loans a year ago.

Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog said the seven-year loan he signed Wednesday night was the biggest single borrowing transaction in Mexican history. Mexico already has one of the world's heaviest foreign debts, $65 billion owed by the government and $20 billion by private industry.

Mont McMillen, vice president of the Bank of America, who signed for the banking syndicate, defended Mexico's heavy borrowing, saying it had helped the country turn oil wealth into new jobs.

"We are confident that Mexico's vast natural resources, its industrial labor force, its dynamic private initiative as well as its efficient public administration will pull Mexico out of its current troubles," McMillen said.

Mexico's oil-fueled economy had grown 7 percent to 8 percent annually over the past four years. The boom ended in February, when declining oil revenue and soaring interest rates abroad forced Mexico to devalue the peso from 26.5 to the dollar to the current rate of 46 to 1.

Hawks win unbelievable game, 6-2

CLEAN-UP — Hawks catcher Kevin Pirkle, left, watches the riding lawn mowers prepare the International ballpark for Thursday's city title game.

Play—splish, splash—ball!

Neither rain, lightning, change in ballparks, nor the gleam of night could stop the Big Spring Little League City Tournament from completing its appointed games Thursday night.

It was quite an evening at the International League ballpark, located in the Industrial Park. The folks out there were least expecting a game or games to be played last night but are now proud to have hosted perhaps the best tournament title game in the city's history.

After late afternoon thunderstorms deluged the city, it looked as if the third place and championship games would have to wait again. Both contests had been rained-out last Saturday and the loss of time was hampering all-star practices for all four leagues in town.

Then word came that it had not rained at International. Players, managers, coaches and parents gathered up their belongings from the mud at National Little League ballpark and headed west.

Sure enough, the field was dry as a pile of bones but the grass had grown almost knee-high with the recent rains. No problem. Just get out the ole lawn mowers.

Picture the scene. Here it is. The night of the city championship. Little Leaguers taking batting practices in the outfield. Sounds normal, but a few feet away, a half-dozen men are scampering around the infield with rakes, wheelbarrows and one — Billy Hinkle — pushing a mower between first and third. Umpire J.R. Piper, without the benefit of a chalk spreader, was drawing the baselines by sprinkling the white stuff out of a cup.

The view was more reminiscent of neighborhood cleanup project than the biggest night of summer baseball in Big Spring.

All this time, more thunderheads gathered on the southern horizon and lightning flashed almost too close for comfort. Still, the bleachers were filled and autos crammed in around the outfield fence, the ballpark into a modest used car lot.

Just in the nick of time came announcer Jackie Tomason who started his broadcast without any lineups, his PA system cutting in and out and no one to run the scoreboard.

The fun wasn't over yet. After the third place game, two riding lawn mowers appeared and cleared way the jungle in the outfield. Now the scorers could see who was in left, center and right.

All the trouble was rewarded later in the evening when the Hawks and Ponys collided in a super-charged championship game. The contest began at 9:27, almost an hour and a half past its scheduled starting time. Of all things, it went into extra innings and the clock struck midnight before the Hawks finally settled matters with a 6-2 victory, and city title.

For Hinkle, Piper, Tomason, Festus McElreath, Tom Ashley, Wayne Barber, Billy Hester and Doug Nichols, their last-minute heroics of securing a dry field, making it playable and conducting a doubleheader were all worthwhile.

To them, it might have been just another night at the ballpark.

With baseball fans gazing at the fierce lightning show to the south, American pitcher Joe Louis Paradez and Texas hurler Sam Rodriguez decided to return their attention to the ballpark. In doing so, the two Little League pitchers made Thursday night's city championship game perhaps the most memorable ever played in the Big Spring tournament's history.

The two 12-year-olds fired scoreless ball for seven innings before the Hawks exploded for six runs in the top of the eighth inning to claim a 6-2 victory over the Ponys and take the 1982 city crown.

In the third place game, the Devils, champs of National League during the regular season, blasted their league rivals — the Rangers — 18-6 in a game marred by errors and ineffective pitching.

As tiresome as the consolation game was, the championship game was the best performance watchers of this tournament could recall for sometime. Outstanding pitching, flawless defense and a gloveful of crucial plays at the plate sent this encounter into extra innings before the Hawks could pull it out.

The victory by the American League champions capped a perfect 18-0 season and duplicated the unbeaten feat of the Rangers, winners of the 1981 tourney. The loss was only the second of the year for the Ponys, winners of the Texas League, as they slipped to a final mark of 16-2.

The scoreboard was about to run out of zeroes to hang when the bottom fell out from under the Ponys in the eighth inning.

The fatal inning began even after Johnny Carson had gone to bed for the night. Appropriately enough, it was Paradez who got things going for the Hawks by drawing a lead-off walk from Rodriguez. And that's when the floor gave way.

Paradez trotted to first and instead of pulling up on the bag, he increased his pace and dashed to second. Rodriguez wheeled around and threw in that direction but his peg to second baseman Jay Fryar was wide and bounced into right field. Paradez kept going and when Bill Grigg's throw from right sailed towards the Ponys dugout, the Hawk pitcher streaked home with the game's first run after two hours of play.

Ponys manager Joe Grigg lifted his tired pitcher in favor of shortstop Damian Zarate and the Hawks wasted little time jumping on him.

After he fanned Robert Guzman for the first out, he walked Stephen Gonzales, gave up an RBI double to Leslie Robinson, hit Terry Ward with a pitch and walked Chris Crowover to load the bases with the score now 2-0 against him.

A walk to Burr Settles forced in another run and a throwing error by Rodriguez on David Kilgore's grounder let two more runners in to make it 5-0. Kilgore then stole home and it was 6-0 before Paradez struck out to end the inning.

After committing just one questionable error in seven innings, the Ponys tallied four miscues in the disastrous eighth.

Paradez set down the first two men he faced in the bottom of the frame, but couldn't finish the game with a shutout. The "Comeback Kids," as the Ponys have been labeled in the tournament, struck for two runs as Jay Fryar doubled off the center field fence and Rodriguez knocked him in with a single. Paul Martin drove the pitcher across with another besehit to bring the count to 6-2.

The second run got Rodriguez off the hook, tagging Zarate with the loss.

When the scorebooks were tabulated, Paradez had turned in an incredible performance on the mound. In eight innings he gave up just six hits — three of them in eighth, struck out 17 batters and walked only two. Now this is Little League, folks.

His opponent did almost as well. Rodriguez tossed seven, official innings and gave up the one unearned run. He was tagged for only four hits, struck out eight and walked six.

Although the game was scoreless battle for seven innings, it was far from being a yawner. Both teams turned in remarkable plays at the plate to keep their teams in the game when one run could have made a big difference.

For example:

- In the second inning, Paradez struck out Fryar, the top Pony slugger, with the bases loaded on a curveball.
- In the fourth inning, Grigg was nailed at the plate by Paradez trying to score on a passed ball by catcher Kevin Pirkle.

- In the sixth inning, Robinson tried to score on a double by Ward. Grigg retrieved the ball in right field and fired a strike to catcher Albert Gomez who tagged Robinson out three feet in front of the plate.

Those plays were achieved without so much as a blink by the teams and proved why all-star teams from American and Texas will be full of Hawk and Pony representatives.

The championship game was pleasant change from the third place game.

The Devils scored seven runs in the third inning to take an 8-0 lead and after the Rangers cut that deficit to 8-5, the Devils sent across nine more runs in the fourth to turn the game into a blow-out.

In the Devils third, Juan Samora knocked in two runs with a double and Byron McElreath blasted a two-run homer to right-center.

In the fourth, Tom Ashley, McElreath and Matt Garrett knocked in runs.

Mike Averitte started for the Devils and teamed with reliever Chad Wash for a two-hitter. Both hits were rapped by Ranger Doug Mariott.

Texas wins all-sports honors

High finishes in swimming, football, baseball help

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Strong showings in football and swimming propelled Texas to The Knoxville Journal's 1982 National Collegiate All-Sports championship, based on the newspaper's annual survey of the nation's top sports programs.

The Longhorns ranked among the nation's top 10 in five sports, including second-place finishes in football and swimming, according to the newspaper's copyright 12th-annual survey published today.

Results are based on the National Collegiate Athletic Association's 10 leading sports: cross country, football, soccer, basketball, wrestling, swimming, track, tennis, golf and baseball.

UCLA, which was ranked No. 1 in the survey last year, was runner-up this year despite finishing first in swimming and tennis.

Tops in baseball was Miami of Florida, ranked third, followed by football champion Clemson in fourth and North Carolina and Southern Methodist tied for fifth place. Rounding out the top 10 in the Journal's standings are Oklahoma State, Arizona State, golf champion Houston and Southern California.

The newspaper ranks each college's finish in each sport on a scale of 1 to 20, with first place earning 20 points, second place worth 19 points, etc.

Points are awarded according to official NCAA tournament results in cross country, wrestling, swimming, track and golf. The Associated Press final football poll is used in football and the AP's final basketball poll is used after ranking the Final Four finishers.

Similar rankings are used in baseball, where the final eight teams in the College World Series are followed by the next dozen best teams in Collegiate Baseball News' final poll.

Tennis' top four finishers are followed by next best 16 from the International Tennis Coaches Association's final poll.

When the results were tallied, the Longhorns became the first team to take the title besides UCLA or Southern California.

"This is great news," said Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds. "In my first year here, I've been impressed with the quality and balance of the athletics program. A lot of times an institution will have great football but will not adequately support the non-revenue sports."

In the second rung of 10 teams, according to the survey, Alabama finished 11th, followed by Arkansas, and Penn State, with Stanford, California and Texas-El Paso tied, followed by Georgia, Brigham Young and a tie between Iowa and Pepperdine.

In the third 10, Iowa State was followed by a tie among Indiana, Nebraska and Oklahoma, followed by another tie among Minnesota, San Jose State and West Virginia, then Tennessee and 30th, Missouri.

Jackson takes fourth at TAC meet

LOS ANGELES — Former Big Spring High School long jumper Carla Jackson leaped 18-10 1/4 in the long jump competition for fourth place at The Athletic Congress National Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships Thursday.

She tied for third place but was moved to fourth on second best jump.

The winning effort was 19-7 1/2 by White of the Sunshine Striders while Bates of the Berkley East Bay Track

Club went 19-6 1/2 for second.

Jackson's best effort entering the meet was a 20-3 at the Texas UIL Class AAAAA state meet this past spring in Austin. The leap was a state record.

Wimbledon finals at breakfast

By The Associated Press
It's a breakfast-lover's dream on NBC this weekend, with Wimbledon highlighting the early morning menu both days.

Dick Enberg and Bud Collins will be the primary announcers as the network provides live coverage of the women's singles championship on Saturday and the men's singles title match on Sunday. Each start at 9 a.m. EDT.

This is the 14th year for the All-England Tennis Championships on NBC, which has promoted the "Breakfast at Wimbledon" theme in connection with the men's championship matches on the final Saturday of the two-week-long tournament for the past several years. The catchphrase, by the way, was the brainchild of Bob Basche, director of creative services for NBC Sports.

But double the order for tea and crumpets this summer.

For the first time, there will be tennis on Sunday at the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club. TV money convinced the club's upper crust that a Saturday championship for the women and a Fourth of July finale for the men wasn't such a bad idea.

That doesn't mean, however, that NBC is getting special treatment when it comes to covering the matches, according to Enberg.

"We have the same access to the players as the BBC and everybody else," Enberg said in a telephone interview from Wimbledon. "After the match, you have 10-15 minutes to talk with the players in the interview area. It's well patrolled by the club, and the players hide very well."

Tracking down players for interviews has been a major concern of Enberg and producer-director Ted Nathanson at Wimbledon this year.

The rain which drenched London for much of the first week of the tournament played havoc with both the matches and NBC's telecast schedule.

While the network won't go live from Wimbledon until Saturday, it has been programming heavily from the tournament, including a total of 4 1/2 hours last weekend.

"We have had less to choose from for our highlight shows," Nathanson said by phone during one rain delay early this week. "Thankfully, we had Billie Jean King winning an exciting match one day, and the next day the weather cleared a bit and we were able to get in some good matches. But we don't have the backup we're used to."

If the rain had kept up, one of the contingency plans called for the tournament to roll back a day.

Americans fight for top honors

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd stripped the magic from Billie Jean King and Martina Navratilova powered her way past Bettina Bunge to reach the women's finals of the All-England Tennis Championships today.

Lloyd, the second seed, outlasted the 38-year-old King 7-6, 2-6, 6-3. Navratilova crushed Bunge, who was seeded 11th, 6-2, 6-2.

Wimbledon 82

King, playing in her 104th match at the famed grass court tournament and seeking her seventh Wimbledon singles crown, fought gallantly. She won five straight games to grab the second set, then fended off four match points before finally falling.

Thrilling the Center Court audience, King pulled off another of her two-week string of surprises, fending off the first match point just before a sudden rain shower interrupted play.

The women, who had met 23 times previously with Lloyd holding 16 victories, returned to the court after a 40-minute delay. Lloyd immediately gained her second match point with a forehand passing shot, but gave it right back by drilling a backhand wide of the mark.

King, who came to the All-England Club as the No. 12 seed, staved off a third match point, seized the advantage with a beautifully executed drop volley and served out the game to pull to within 3-5.

King then set the Center Court crowd abuzz by taking the first two points from Lloyd in the next service game. But her younger opponent calmly retaliated by winning the next three points, angling a drop shot winner off of King's drop volley to gain her fourth match point.

King pulled to deuce with a

SMASHING CHRIS EVERT LLOYD ... wins three-setter in semis against Billie Jean King

forehand volley, but Lloyd hit another sparkling passing shot for the ad point and topped the 20-time Wimbledon champ with the last of a handful of well-disguised lobs from the backhand side.

The two-hour victory marked the fifth consecutive year that Lloyd, a three-time Wimbledon champion, has gained the finale.

King yielded just two points on her first two service games in the opening set, but was broken in the fifth game. However, she broke right back and the two exchanged service to go to the tiebreaker.

From 2-2, Lloyd tore off three straight points and maintained that cushion to set point, which came when

King netted a smash.

The Czechoslovakian-born Navratilova, who became a U.S. citizen last year, is going after her third Wimbledon singles crown. She also captured the title in 1978 and 1979.

After never getting beyond the third round of play at the All-England Club, Australian Mark Edmondson is a semifinalist, thanks to an efficient 7-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3 triumph over third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis.

It was the first time in eight meetings with the flamboyant New Yorker that the Australian left the court victorious. One would think Edmondson would have plenty of gracious things to say.

"Court No.2 is terrible," said the 6-foot-1, 190-pounder. "It was a disgrace to put the match on there. It is just about the worst court on the place and that's why a lot of seeds get beat there."

"There's no voodoo on it," continued Edmondson, who now faces No.2 seed Jimmy Connors. "The ball just bounces all over the place."

And there's American Brian Teacher, a four-time All-American at UCLA who won the 1980 Australian Open.

"Since winning the Open, I was out of action with torn ligaments (left ankle)," Teacher said upon his rediscovery Thursday, prompted largely by a 6-4, 6-4, 6-3 win over seventh-seeded Mats Wilander, the teenage Swede.

2 JULY 2

Tanana, 'Hoss' lead Texas, 7-2

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers have been mired near the bottom of the American League West since the season began. The California Angels, on the other hand, are leading the division and have one of the best records in the majors.

American League

California did not plan to lose twice during a three-game visit to Texas, but that is exactly what happened and all parties agree the reason was pitching.

"We come down here and get seven runs in three games — that's not typical of our ball club," said Angels manager Gene Mauch, whose team remains 2½ games ahead of Kansas City despite Thursday's 7-2 loss.

"We had some awfully good pitching against that team three nights in a row," said Texas Manager Don Zimmer.

"This is the first series we haven't won in ... Mauch paused, then resumed, "Well, I can't remember the last time we lost a three-game series. Historically, I'm told, the Angels have never done well down here."

Victimizing the Angels Thursday was Frank Tanana, 4-9, who struck out six, scattered six hits and walked one en route to his second complete game.

"I used every pitch I have and every speed I have and every ounce of control I have," Tanana said. "That's the new 'F.T.' — that's the way I have to pitch now."

Tanana enjoyed a big early cushion after the Rangers batted around for a five-run inning.

"If I could get a five-run fourth every time out it would be a lot easier," said Tanana. "Getting ahead of the other team early takes the starch out of their shorts and lets me be more aggressive."

Rookie Dave Hostetler stroked four singles and Billy Sample extended his hitting streak to 13 games Thursday night.

In all, Texas battered three California pitchers for 13 hits while the Angels touched Tanana for only six hits and one walk while striking out six times.

"We finally got Tanana some runs and he knew what to do with them," Zimmer said.

The big Ranger fourth began with consecutive singles from Buddy Bell, Hostetler and John Grubb. Bell scoring on Grubb's hit, Jim Sundberg sacrifice, then Lamar Johnson chased Hostetler home with a single.

Mike Richard singled Grubb in, Doug Flynn scored Johnson with a suicide squeeze bunt and Richard scored when Sample doubled, chasing Mike Witt, 4-2.

California had scored in the first inning when Brian Downing singled, went to second as center fielder Lee Mazzilli booted the ball, was bunted to third and scored on Doug DeCinces' grounder.

The Rangers added a run in the fifth, again on consecutive singles by Bell, Hostetler, and Grubb.

The Angels got another run in the sixth when DeCinces doubled and Don Baylor singled. Texas retaliated in the seventh when Hostetler singled for his fourth hit of the night, stole second and scored on Johnson's single.

Yankees 5, Brewers 3

Unlike Tanana, Morgan still has heat and the Yankees' early burst allowed him to burn the Brewers.

"You get some quick runs in the first inning and you can pitch differently. You can go right at them with a fastball and that makes it easier to pitch," he said following his seven-hitter. It was Morgan's first complete game in 11 starts this season with the Yankees and his first since September 1979, when he was with Oakland.

"I was getting stronger as I went along. I didn't lose any velocity. The last few starts I've been trying to finesse the other team. I'm basically a power pitcher," he said.

Ken Griffey had three hits, two of them triples including one that started the Yankees' scoring in the decisive first inning.

Tigers 5, Red Sox 4

Unlike Texas and New York, Detroit (namely Kirk Gibson) saved the best for last. Gibson, who had singled for a run in the third inning, pulled an inside pitch from Boston relief ace Mark Clear down the right field line — barely fair — for a game-winning, bases-loaded, two-run double in the bottom of the ninth.

"I think he wanted to come in on me a little more, to jam me," Gibson said. "I'm still struggling to find my stroke a little bit. I find it sometimes, then I lose it. I just wanted something to hit hard and I got it."

"I was pretty excited out there. If the umpire had called that a foul ball, I don't know what we would have done."

Indians 9, Orioles 2

Von Hayes had a three-run homer — his second consecutive three-RBI game — and a double to lead Cleveland to its fourth successive victory. Hayes has 18 RBIs in the past 14 games.

"My average isn't nearly as good as it was my first couple of years (in the minors)," he said. "But at least I'm delighted that I'm driving in runs."

"He's something, isn't he?" Indians Manager Dave Garcia said of his converted third baseman. "He used to scare me in the outfield, but not anymore. He covers a lot of ground and has a good arm."

Twins 9, White Sox 2

Not since the second, third and fourth games of the season had the Twins won three in a row. Rookie Kent Hrbek chipped in with two RBIs but, for a change, his wasn't the only big bat for Minnesota.

"It's about time we picked up Herbie," Manager Billy Gardner said. "Now everybody is chipping in."

Gary Ward opened the scoring for Minnesota in the second with an RBI triple, then he homered in the fourth. And Ron Washington hit a bases-loaded triple in the sixth.

Mariners 4, Blue Jays 3

Bruce Bochte's seventh-inning double broke a tie and gave Seattle's 43-year-old Gaylor Perry his 303rd lifetime victory, but the ancient Mariner needed additional help. Four relievers followed him to the mound, Bill Caudill picking up his 14th save.

"Everybody who came in wanted the ball," said Perry. "The bullpen has done the job for us all season and they believe in themselves."

Expos miss shot

By The Associated Press

Montreal pitcher Scott Sanderson probably felt as frustrated as the frightened squirrel that had scurried around the Olympic Stadium turf in the fifth inning during the game against the New York Mets.

The Expos right-hander held the Mets to only six hits in a complete-game performance, but a pair of unearned runs in the third inning led to a 2-1 defeat.

The loss prevented the Expos from tying the St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Phillies for first place in the National League East. Instead, they trail by one game entering a five-game, three-day series starting tonight against the Pirates in Pittsburgh.

"I've felt good my last 10 starts in a row," said Sanderson. "I think I've done the job that's been asked of me. The only thing you can do is continue to go out there and do your best."

Sanderson contributed to his downfall by yielding a two-out double to rival pitcher Mike Scott in the third. Scott also had another double in the eighth.

Speedy Mookie Wilson then hit a grounder to third baseman Tim Wallach, whose throw sailed over the head of first baseman Al Oliver allowing Scott to tie the score 1-1. Wilson, who took second on the errant throw, scored the winning run when Bob Bailor, the next batter, singled to center.

"I was trying to get the ball there as quickly as I could," said Wallach. "I guess I had a little more time than I thought I had."

"But I hurried the throw. I didn't set myself properly. I knew the ball was going into the dugout the minute it left my hand."

The Expos, who have lost six of their last eight games, managed only six hits against Scott, 6-5, in 7-3 innings. Even the squirrel, which Expos utility infielder Brad Mills said appeared to come from the runway near the Montreal dugout, failed to provide inspiration.

After running around the field for about five minutes, the squirrel was escorted by field attendants out a door down the left-field line.

"We needed this game by Mike badly," said New York Manager George Bamberger of Scott's effort. "Runs have been hard to come by for us lately."

The only run Scott allowed was in the first inning when Tim Wallach drew a two-out walk, Al Oliver singled and Gary Carter stroked an RBI single.

It was Scott's first victory as a starter since April. He had spent much of the last month in the bullpen trying to correct his problems.

Jesse Orosco bailed Scott out of an eighth-inning jam, getting Warren Cromartie to ground out with runners at first and third.

When Orosco walked Dan Norman leading off the Expos ninth, Neil Allen relieved. Chris Speier sacrificed Norman to second before Allen retired the next two batters for his 16th save.

Pirates 5, Cubs 2

Catcher Tony Pena knocked in two runs with a single and a triple to lead Pittsburgh over Chicago.

Enrique Romo, 5-2, took over from starter Ross Baumgarten in the sixth and won the game with a brilliant relief stint. Romo did not allow a baserunner over the final four innings, retiring 12 consecutive Cubs.

The victory was the third straight and ninth in the last 12 games for the Pirates.

Gilder's hot shots continue at Western Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Bob Gilder, who ignores the practice tee, says what he did to the tough Butler National golf course "was just a happening."

Then 31-year-old pro is in the midst of a hot streak. It began last week at the Westchester Classic, where he led all the way to win with a 19-under-par 261. It continued Thursday in the first round of the Western Open when Gilder shattered the course record at the 7,097-yard layout with an 8-under-par 64.

That gave him a two-stroke lead over Larry Nelson and Jim Booros entering today's second round.

Gilder's 31-33 showing eclipsed the record at Butler, home of the Western Open since 1974. David Graham and John Lister had set the mark with 65 during the 1975 tournament.

Ed Fiori's 11-under-par 277 last year established the 72-hole record which could be shaved if the weather holds.

Gilder's round was remarkable in that he had only four pars. It was built around a double bogey when he hit into the water, two bogeys, 10 birdies, and an eagle 3 carved with a 12-foot putt after a nifty five-iron approach.

"I came here because it is a difficult course and I certainly didn't expect to shoot it like I did with two bogeys and a double," said

BAD GAMBLE — California Angels short stop, Tim Foli (10), is tagged out at second base by Texas Rangers second baseman, Mike Richardt, in Thursday night's third inning action at Arlington Stadium. Foli tried to stretch a hit to deep left field into a double, but Rangers left fielder, Billy Sample, fired the ball to second base in time for Richardt to make the tag.

Americans, Soviets amiable

World powers meet on Indiana track tonight

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The mood appeared light and amiable as the United States and the Soviet Union prepared to begin their 17th dual track and field meet tonight at Indiana University's new $6 million stadium.

"We would like to have our walkers start 1,000 meters ahead (in the 20-kilometer walk)," Sam Adams, head coach of the American men's team, joked Thursday at the technical committee meeting, in which the officials and coaches of both teams discussed the ground rules and lane assignments for the two-day event.

Adams was looking for a handicap for his walkers because of the Russians' superiority in the event.

During a discussion about starting blocks for the sprinters, the Soviet translator quipped, "Our head coach says they're more of a problem for the Americans because they're running faster."

That's true. Carl Lewis, ranked No. 1 in the world in the 100-meter dash, has the fastest time (10.00 seconds) in the world this year, while Calvin Smith, the Americans' other entrant in the 100, beat Lewis by .02 of a second last week with a wind-aided 10.03 in a triangular meet against West Germany and Africa at Durham, N.C.

In addition, in the 17 meets between the United States and the Soviet Union, American men have placed first each time in the 200-meter and 400-meter dashes.

The Soviet women have beaten their American counterparts 16 of 17 times since the series began in 1958, while the U.S. men have a 12-5 advantage. In combined scoring the Soviets hold a 13-3 lead, with one tie.

Nikolay Politiko, head coach of the Russians' men's and women's teams, called this meeting "a match of the giants."

"The world is watching what we do," echoed Ollan Cassell, executive director of The Athletics Congress, the governing body for track and field in the United States.

He was referring to television coverage of the meet, which will be shown in the Soviet Union, Western Europe and Japan, along with the United States (Saturday on ABC).

The series has not been totally free of global politics. From 1966-68, there was no competition because of the international tensions that arose from the Vietnam conflict.

In addition, there was no meet in 1980, when the United States led a boycott of the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow.

The series resumed last year at Leningrad, with the American men defeating the Soviets 118-105 and the Soviet women trouncing the U.S. team 99-60, giving the Soviet Union a combined 204-178 victory.

U.S. women's head coach Bert Lyle hopes to upset the Soviet women this time with a team led by sprinter Evelyn Ashford, the American record holder in the 100 and 200.

Besides Lewis and Smith, the men's team has Dave Volz, the American record holder in the pole vault, Henry Marsh, top-ranked in the world in the 3,000-meter steeplechase, and Sydney Marree in the 1,500.

Connors-McEnroe tilt looms larger

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors' eyes lit up like a Christmas tree when someone suggested that his long and bitterly waged tennis rivalry with John McEnroe might be compared with the great ring battles between Muhammad Ali and Smokin' Joe Frazier.

"That's the greatest compliment I could have," he said. "Ali and Frazier — what a series! It was the best."

"Well, we don't beat up on each other but I think there is some similarity. I play like Frazier fights. I put my head out and dare somebody to hit it. John does, too, but he's more like Ali — chip and slice, the fancy stuff."

The 29-year-old Connors stuck his chin out again Thursday, let Gene Mayer take some cracks at it and then pounded his way to a 6-1, 6-2, 7-6 victory that sent him into the Wimbledon semifinals against Australia's tough Mark Edmondson.

It is the final obstacle barring a potential title rendezvous on Center Court Sunday against his foremost court rival, Wimbledon and U.S. Champion McEnroe, faced with not one but two obstacles.

Nevertheless, a Connors-McEnroe showdown has been an accepted conclusion since this old tournament started its rain-splattered course 12 days ago, and tennis buffs would be surprised and deeply disappointed if it didn't come to pass.

It is, to use the ring vernacular, the heavyweight tennis championship of America, matching the five-time No. 1, Connors, against his upstart 23-year-old successor, who has held the American title and No. 1 ranking for the last three years.

We have to thank a proud and stubborn Bjorn Borg, five-time Wimbledon king, and Ivan Lendl, the relentless Czech with the best record in the world this year, for boycotting Wimbledon and making this backyard brawl possible.

As Connors suggests, such a matchup presents two contrasting styles and personalities although both have built up records as court mavericks and volatile rebels against the establishment.

Connors is a feisty bantam cock, his trampoline-strung steel racket a gaff as sharp as a sword. From the time he first strikes the ball until the point is won or lost, he is grunting and lunging and flying through the air, making every shot a bullet meant to destroy.

By contrast, McEnroe is the subtle court killer. Gifted with rare reflexes and instincts, plus perhaps the best mind in the game, he brings his foe to his knees with a mixture of raw power, touch and mesmerizing variety.

"The outcome of the match," reasoned Gene Mayer, "is how well McEnroe serves and how well Jimmy returns. If Jimmy returns better than John serves, he will break John's rhythm."

These imperfections have been on the line ever since Connors won their first head-to-head duel in the Wimbledon semifinals in 1977 when McEnroe was still a brash 18-year-old.

"In our series, it's John's attitude against mine, his force, his inner drive against my force and inner drive," said Connors. "Simple as that."

USSR, Poland battle on World Cup field

MADRID, Spain (AP) — The Soviet Union has ousted Belgium from the World Cup soccer championships and now faces the possibility of being sent packing by Poland in a match that is bound to have political overtones.

When the Soviets beat Belgium 1-0 in their Group A match Thursday, they fell at least two goals short of what they needed for breathing room against the Poles. A victory over France Sunday would put the Irish into the Final Four.

The rugged Poles, who trounced Belgium 3-0 in a second-round match earlier this week, need only a tie, against the Soviets to advance to the semifinals.

THE LIGHT TOUCH

By Sherry Wegner

The Texas Cowboy who was going to the Electric Chair, called his lawyer for some last minute advice. The lawyer replied, "Don't sit down."

They say crime doesn't pay ... neither does farming.

One insured farmer keeps delaying turning in a claim trying to let it bloom first, in order to collect a higher payment ... but every time a bloom appears it hails & knocks it off.

An old farmer was asked about how he had lived so long. "Good judgement," he said. "And how do you get good judgement?" "From using bad judgement," he replied.

Use good judgement by shopping at BIG SPRING SEED & CHEMICAL, 802 N.E. 2nd. We have a chemical to kill anything from the ground up! A Special note to 4-H'ers & F.F.A. Lamb growers ... we have a brand new blend of feed especially formulated for show lambs. Call or come by today.

The statue lady stands looking down at New York Harbor at America! She is looking over a nation which has still not cast off dependence... a nation of soul-searching, of division of all things that marked its revolutionary beginnings.

True, we are living in troubled times. But haven't times always been troubled? And since men and women are not saints, won't there always be problems and soul-searching and division?

But the important thing is that ultimately our unity has always transcended our differences... just as the unity of the Church has triumphed over even more difficult differences and division.

Our nation is over 200 years old. But it is merely a child compared to the age of the Church. In celebrating our nation's independence, isn't it a good time to turn to the Church and to everything for which it stands?

Judge throws out mental patient's confession

TERRELL, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has ruled that a former mental patient's confession about the slaying of a teen-age boy was invalid and ordered the man freed.

District Court Judge Richard Davis ruled Thursday that a confession given 3 1/2 years ago by Chris Nalley, 20, was invalid because Nalley was not mentally competent to consent to the interview during which Nalley confessed to Terrell police.

Nalley had been accused in the Nov. 4, 1978 strangulation death of Gary Wayne Adams, 13, of Grand Prairie, while both were in an un-supervised ward at the Terrell State Hospital.

Adams, described as a chronic runaway, was strangled with a bicycle chain. In his confession, Nalley told authorities he strangled Adams after the younger boy made homosexual advances.

Nalley had been committed to the state hospital after being accused of sexually assaulting a six-year-old Dallas girl in a church elevator. He also had been implicated in the strangulation of a seven-year-old Oak Cliff girl, according to court records.

No trial was ever held for Nalley, who was a juvenile at the time of both incidents because two court-appointed psychiatrists ruled he was mentally incompetent.

After Judge Davis ruled that the confession was invalid, Kaufman County Dist. Atty. Bill Conrad filed a motion to dismiss the murder charge.

"The only thing the state had that tied the defendant to the body of Gary Adams was the confession," Conrad said in asking that the charge be dismissed.

Dallas lawyer Tom McCorkle filed a motion in May asking that the confession be thrown out.

Echols testified Thursday that he did not know of Nalley's mental problems when he interviewed him. He said Dr. James A. Hunter gave him permission to interview Nalley.

In ordering the confession thrown out, the judge also ruled that it was not voluntarily given.

McCorkle was critical of state mental health officials for their handling of the case.

"If there has been a crime committed," McCorkle said following the judge's ruling, "one state agency, through its bungling, has tied the arms of another state agency — the prosecution arm."

"They blew it," the lawyer said.

McCorkle said Nalley would live in Dallas with his sister.

Fort Worth man aided Chinese dancer's defection

DALLAS (AP) — Lin Jianwei wants to be free to practice his ballet, and William Martin-Viscount needs a top-notch dancer to fulfill his dream of founding a ballet company in Fort Worth.

So this week, Lin defected from the People's Republic of China with help from Martin-Viscount, his friend and one-time teacher, officials said.

Lin, 24, slipped away from an international competition in Mississippi Monday and has asked federal officials here for permission to stay.

"He said he wanted to be able to reach his full potential as a ballet dancer," said William Chambers, Dallas-based director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"He said he could do that only in the United States," Chambers said.

Chambers said Lin is staying with Martin-Viscount, 40, who has offered the dancer a job with his Southwest Ballet Company in Fort Worth. A job is a criterion for establishing residence, he said.

Chambers said the young dancer applied Wednesday for a "green card" — per-
