Will taxes rise as property values go up?

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

The postman may be delivering a surprising piece of mail this week to numerous Howard County taxpayers. The surprise, even shock, will come from the figures on the "Notice of Change in Appraisal Records," indicating an increase in the valuation of a particular piece of property.

First in a series

The bottom line is, of course, that more value always translates, in most people's minds, to more taxes. Or does it?

Why are people getting these notices? The process can be traced back to something called Senate Bill 621, passed narrowly by the Texas Legislature in 1978. In a simplified fashion, the bill created a new state Property Tax Code, the state Property Tax Board and the requirement for consolidated tax appraisal districts throughout the state. The main idea was to bring all property valuations to an equal status for use by taxing entities.

According to Article VIII, Section 1 of the Texas Property Tax Code, "taxation shall be equal and uniform." In order for taxation to be equal, values on real and personal property must be equal. Enter the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal District.

"Equalize (values) is the name of the game," chief appraiser Gene Pereira says.

The district's chief appraiser and his appraisal crews have completed the work of reappraising the county's

More bombs pummel Beirut

Israeli jet downed by Syrians

By The Associated Press

Israeli jets bombed the Palestine Liberation Organization's west Beirut stronghold for the third day Saturday and one warplane was downed by Syrian missile fire over eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Syria said the two Israeli pilots bailed out of the F-4 Phantom fighter-bomber when it was hit and one was captured but the other was found dead.

In Cairo, U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib continued his search for an Arab country willing to take the estimated 8,000 PLO guerrillas trapped in the Lebanese capital. Habib met with Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly for 70 minutes, and neither side commented afterward.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency quoted an official source as saying speculation that Habib was trying to persuade Egypt to provide asylum for large numbers of PLO guerrillas "is absolutely of no basis."

The agency reported Aly "affirmed the necessity of Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon and the need for an immediate halt to the bloodshed and guaranteeing the safety of all Palestine Liberation Organization members."

It said the Egyptians "stressed the right of self-determination for the Palestinians and said there could be no just peace in the region without a just solution to the Palestinian problem."

Habib is to meet Sunday with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and then fly to Israel.

Israel confirmed the loss of the F-4 and said other warplanes destroyed Syrian SAM-8 anti-aircraft missile batteries.

The Israel command said that the Syrians moved the sophisticated ground-to-air missiles — the most modern in the Soviet arsenal — into the Bekaa Valley from Syria late Friday night for the first time. It added: "The state of Israel is resolute in its decision not to allow Syria to bring land-to-air missiles into Lebanon."

A Syrian missile of the older SAM-6 type fired from the Syrian-Lebanese border brought down the Israeli Phantom jet about 5 p.m. (11 a.m. EDT), three hours after three SAM-8 missile batteries were destroyed, the command said.

But Israel Radio quoted political sources as saying the missile was fired from just inside Syria and that Israel considered this especially serious since its planes have avoided Syrian territory and have not destroyed missile batteries in Syria.

The Phantom was on patrol near the Syrian border when it was shot down over the village of Barr Elias, six miles from the frontier, the Israeli command said. It was the second Israeli jet downed over Lebanon since Israel invaded June 6.

Other Israeli jets teamed up with artillery to bomb and shell the Fakhani neighborhood in west Beirut, which houses the PLO's administrative offices and the command bunker of PLO chairman Yasser Arafat.

Guerrillas fired surface-to-air missiles at the attacking Israelis, but the divebombing warplanes released clusters of red balloons that lured away the rockets. Puffs of smoke rose over the attacked area.

Cobb wins Coahoma ISD board election

By BILLELDER
City Editor

Two court battles and nearly 15 months of waiting paid off for Ken Cobb yesterday. He won a seat on the Coahoma Independent School District board — after having lost out to Clovis Phinney Jr. by one vote in April 1981.

After state district and appellate judges called for a new election to be held, balloting was held yesterday in the Coahoma school district. At day's end, Cobb was the winner by about three to one over Phinney.

Cobb took 363 votes to Phinney's 132, according to Richard Souter, superintendent of Coahoma schools.

Balloting closed at 7 p.m. and a quorum of school board members convened in Souter's office shortly afterward to canvass the returns.

"I feel relieved," Cobb said from his home. "After a year and a half, I'm glad it's over with. I'm perfectly satisfied with the verdict."

Cobb said he had spent "a large amount of money" contesting the April 1981 election, and "it was worth every penny."

He will be sworn in at the next school board meeting and serve a little under two years of a three-year term, Souter said.

Phinney, an incumbent, served the first year of the term while the election went from District Judge Jim Gregg's court to the appeals court in Eastland.

Phinney indicated he might run again for the board some day, saying: "I wouldn't mind taking issue down the road somewhere, if I saw the need."

"I feel good about what we accomplished. I appreciate the support of the people who voted for me."

Phinney was elected president of the school board shortly after the April 1981 election and served in that capacity until Donnie Reid replaced him in April of this year.

After losing by one vote, Cobb challenged the canvassing of the election in state court in Big Spring. Judge Gregg agreed with his complaint and ordered a new election. Phinney appealed Gregg's decision but the 11th Supreme Court of Appeals upheld Gregg's decision.

COMING OUT OF CHUTE NUMBER ONE — Ray Brown is fighting to hold on to his ride even as his hat begins to fly off during Friday night competition at the Howard County 4-H Club American Junior Rodeo Association Rodeo. Despite a valiant beginning, Brown did not finish in the top three for the bareback competition. The junior rodeo completed its three-night stand at the rodeo bowl in Big Spring last night as junior entrants from New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas finished competition.

Chamber 'holds up' a family again

By BILLELDER
City Editor

The conversation went something like this:

Dan Sanders of Prentiss, Miss., had just been pulled over on Interstate 20 by Department of Public Safety trooper Glenn Redmon, and Redmon asked: "How would you like to spend the night in Big Spring?"

Sanders gulped. "In jail?" he asked.

Not at all, Redmon and a grinning chamber of commerce official replied. You're here as our guest.

Sanders, his three children and father-in-law were the "victims" of the second chamber of commerce "hold up" this summer.

As their "sentence," they went to the junior rodeo at the county rodeo bowl and got treated to lots of other nice freebies representative of Big Spring hospitality.

There was dinner at K-Bob's, a stay at the Holiday Inn, flowers from Rita's and a certificate of honorary citizenship in Big Spring from Bill Forshee, manager of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce convention bureau.

Forshee, who accompanied Redmon on the Friday afternoon hold up, said the group enjoyed the stay — particularly Shannon Sanders, Daniel Sanders and Ephrum Hodges (the kids).

Forshee said they had told their father as soon as they got into Texas on their way to New Mexico that they wanted to see a rodeo.

Sure enough, they got their rodeo — thanks to the chamber and the merchants who participated in the hold up, which will continue throughout the summer, Forshee said.

Along with Mr. Sanders' father-in-law William Long, the party was on its way to Ruidoso when they passed through Big Spring.

Odessa officials in arson investigation

EL PASO (AP) — Federal authorities are investigating the Odessa mayor and a city councilman from that West Texas city in connection with an arson fire in a building partly owned by the officials, according to the El Paso Times.

A federal grand jury at El Paso subpoenaed all Odessa Fire Department records and "all records pertaining to former fires involving (Councilman) Keith Weddel and (Mayor) Bob Bryant," the newspaper reported.

Councilman Weddel could not be reached for comment Friday night, but Bryant, contacted at his home, told The Associated Press he is "aware that some allegations have been made."

"I don't go around burning buildings," the mayor said.

Charges were filed in April against two Odessa brothers in connection with a fire on the second floor of the building.

Wayne Coggins, Odessa fire marshal, said Bryant and Weddel were part-owners of the building at the time of the fire, but sold the structure

Big Spring girl is expert rodeo roper

Sissy Doss of Big Spring topped the field Friday night at the Howard County 4-H Club American Junior Rodeo in the 16-19 Girls Breakaway Roping. Sissy, the 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Doss, had a time of 4.1 seconds.

Another Big Springer, Lex Christie, captured the best time Friday in the Boys Barrel Race in the 12 and under competition. He had a time of 21.9 seconds.

Competition in the Howard County rodeo completed action Saturday night, but results were not available at press time. Friday night results follow.

Action reaction: Dump ground

Q. Why doesn't the city have a decent road into the sanitary landfill?
A. Public works director Tom Decell said the city is trying to maintain the current dirt road to the landfill by grading and other methods. He said it is not uncommon to have dirt roads to landfills since the dump sites change so often.

Federal board urges states to raise drinking age to 21

WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling the number of deaths of young people in traffic accidents a "national disgrace," federal safety investigators are urging all states to establish a minimum 21-year drinking age.

The National Transportation Safety Board sent letters Friday to the governors and legislatures of 35 states urging them to increase their minimum drinking age to 21.

Fifteen states already prohibit anyone under 21 from purchasing alcoholic beverages.

Of 25,000 people who died in alcohol-related traffic accidents last year, more than one-third were between the ages of 16 and 24, the government says.

"This is a national tragedy and a national scandal," declared James Burnett, the NTSB's chairman and a former municipal judge who favored mandatory jail sentences for drunken driving when he was on the bench.

The safety panel said its recommendation was prompted by a number of recent alcohol-related auto crashes in which there were a large number of young people killed, including one crash on Long Island, N.Y., that claimed nine lives.

A number of states recently have increased their minimum drinking age from 18 to 21, in sharp contrast to the early 1970s when 24 states lowered their laws to 18 and another six to 19.

"The board realizes this recommendation will not be popular," Burnett acknowledged, citing the "great debate" that erupted recently when New York state increased its drinking age one year — from 18 to 19.

But Burnett said, "The evidence is overwhelming and irrefutable" that the higher age requirement would save the lives of young people.

Burnett discounted, however, attempts by the federal government to impose a national law prohibiting the purchase of alcoholic beverages by young people, noting the problems with Prohibition a half century ago.

The government said of the 25,000 deaths involving alcohol-related accidents last year, 3,750 of the victims were between 16 years and 19 years of age and another 4,760 were between 20 and 24.

The safety board said a number of studies have demonstrated "a direct correlation" between state drinking laws and the number of auto fatalities involving young people.

Haitians gain their freedom

MIAMI (AP) — Resettlement workers went from door to door in Miami's Little Haiti on Saturday trying to find relatives to sponsor the release of 390 Haitians still held at a federal camp on the edge of the Everglades.

Seventeen people singing hymns of thanks were freed Friday in the first release of the Caribbean refugees under a federal judge's June 29 order affecting some 1,900 Haitians in federal compounds in five states and Puerto Rico. Some of the Haitians have been held as long as 15 months.

Gerry Wynne, head of the U.S. Catholic Conference in Washington, and four other church agency representatives tramped Little Haiti in North Miami hoping to track down relatives who could act as sponsors for the Haitians still detained at the Krome Avenue camp.

"We're shooting for Monday to renew our release efforts. Until then, we'll be walking the streets hoping to find more sponsors," Wynne said.

Government officials say they are ready to release all Haitians having sponsors.

"They've been interviewed and are ready to go, so all we need are signatures (of the sponsor's agreement)," said Beverly McFarland, spokeswoman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Miami.

'We'll be walking the streets until we find more sponsors.'

Some 40 Haitians — including pregnant women — have been quietly released "for humanitarian reasons" during the past month, Wynne said.

Those remaining in the Krome camp will be freed first, with efforts intensified to release some 30 Haitian women still held in the barbed-wire fringed compound, he said.

Church agencies will also redouble attempts to place Haitians in the Fort Allen, Puerto Rico, camp with sponsors, he said. The remaining Haitians are being held in camps in Texas, New York, Kentucky and West Virginia.

U.S. District Judge Eugene Spellman ruled against the federal policy of detaining Haitians last month, citing an error in procedure.

On June 22, Spellman ordered the U.S. government to release "forthwith" some 1,800 Haitians to sponsors.

A week ago, Haitian attorney Ira Kurzbahn accused the government of "dragging its heels" in readying the refugees for processing to be released from the Krome camp.

U.S. Justice Department attorney Robert Bombaugh denied the claim, saying the government was "doing all it could" to release the Haitians to approved sponsors.

As part of an agreement between immigration officials, attorneys for the Haitians and resettlement agencies, sponsors must sign for the refugees and guarantee weekly appearances before federal authorities considering the Haitians' asylum claims.

There are about 25,000 Haitians in South Florida. Those released will be allowed to work pending the government's review of their asylum claims, U.S. officials said.

But despite having nearly four weeks to prepare for the Haitians' release, sponsoring agencies said they were caught unawares by the sudden loosening of government reins on the Haitians.

"We only heard Friday morning we could get some Haitians with sponsors out," said Wynne. "But we won't let another day pass (after the weekend) when we won't bring some out."

The Rev. Tom Wenski, a Creole-speaking pastor who has worked with the Haitians, drove out a busload of 15 refugees Friday. Each Haitian, including two released earlier Friday, had a relative living in Miami sponsor the release.

FREE AT LAST — Haitian refugee Raoul Felix whoops for joy upon leaving a detention camp in Miami.

He and other Haitian refugees were released to sponsors after a judge ruled against their detention.

Watt attacked for comments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt, embroiled in domestic controversies since taking office, on Saturday found himself in a foreign policy flap over a letter he sent to the Israeli ambassador.

Watt told Ambassador Moshe Arens that U.S. support for Israel could be jeopardized if Jewish liberals oppose the Reagan administration's energy initiatives.

The letter provoked outcries from American Jewish leaders and resulted in calls for Watt's resignation from two congressmen, one of whom lambasted the secretary's act of "bare-knuckled bigotry." At the White House, officials called Watt's statements "unfortunate" and said they did not reflect President Reagan's views or American foreign policy.

JAMES WATT
Comments on Israel's

Watt said the letter was not meant as a threat, as some American Jewish groups charged, and that he told White House officials he could defend his position "ably with or without their help."

"If we do not reduce America's dependency upon foreign crude energy, there is great risk that in future years America will be prevented from being the strong protector and friend of Israel that we are and want to be," Watt said in the one-page letter.

"If the liberals of the Jewish community join with the other liberals of this nation to oppose these efforts (at energy independence), they will weaken our ability to be a good friend of Israel," Watt said. "Your supporters in America need to know these facts."

American Jewish leaders said Saturday that they found "a veiled threat" in Watt's letter and found it offensive that he would appeal for Jewish support through a foreign ambassador.

In a statement issued in New York, the American Jewish Committee said, "Secretary Watt should go back to school for a refresher course on the American political system for he seems to question the right of Americans to hold opinions that differ from his."

Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the 1.5 million-member Union of American Hebrew Congregations, said, "I don't like being appealed to as a Jew on an issue that is essentially of concern to all Americans."

Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Watt should either resign or be fired "for this act of bare-knuckled bigotry."

Morrow knew the peril of filming war stories

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Vic Morrow, killed along with two children in a freak accident while filming a fiery battle scene, was accustomed to the perils of filming war stories and once said he and co-workers had been lucky to escape them.

But the thundering detonations, balls of flame and fake machine-gun fire were new to Renee Shinn Chenn and My-Ca Dihn Le, the young actors who died with Morrow during filming of Steven Spielberg's "Twilight Zone" movie.

The three were decapitated by the whirling rotor of a helicopter that had been bombarded by explosives detonated to resemble a bomb attack. Morrow was running with the youngsters across a shallow river when the chopper, carrying a camera crew, struck them Friday morning.

The Los Angeles County coroner's office scheduled autopsies for the three victims Saturday. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Morrow, 53, best known for his role as a grizzled Army sergeant in the television series "Combat," spent much of his 27-year career filming war scenes.

"There's always something going off — a grenade, submachine guns," Morrow once said of the popular World War II series that ran from 1962-66. "We blow off a lot of stuff in a day. But do you know we've had no serious injuries since we've been at this. That's pretty lucky."

Renee's mother and My-Ca's father were on the set at Indian Dunes Park near Castaic and saw their children die.

Seeing his son killed in a Hollywood version of a Vietnam battle was a bitter irony for My-Ca's father, Daniel.

While living in Vietnam — where their son was born shortly before the end of the war — the Les had helped their countrymen emigrate to the United States.

"We are in shock as you might imagine," said Le, a psychologist who is director of Indochinese Mental Health Services for the Los Angeles County Department of Mental Health. "We never thought something like this could happen."

The "Twilight Zone" sequence was the first acting experience for Renee, a 7-year-old girl from Pasadena who moved with her family from Taiwan about five years ago.

"She was not an actress, this was a first-time thing," said a family friend at the Chen household, where Renee's parents were secluded in their grief Saturday.

"All she kept saying was she was going to be in a movie," said 7-year-old Joey Schumpert, Renee's neighbor and friend. "She was very happy."

The families of both children declined to comment further or to say how the youngsters were chosen for their roles in the movie, a big-screen version of Rod Serling's old television series. It is being produced by Spielberg, with various directors working on different segments.

Drunk juror stalls trial

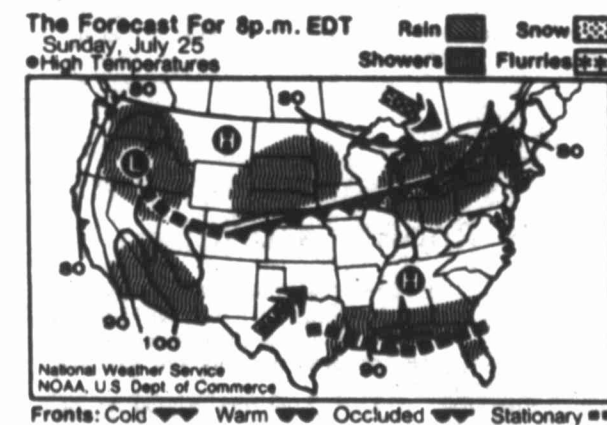

SEATTLE (AP) — A lawyer for two men charged with stealing a stereo has refused to proceed with his case since one of the jurors delayed the trial for a day with a drinking problem. A mistrial was declared.

Steven Eric Lewis and Kevin Kenard were on trial before King County Superior Court Judge Liem Tuai when the juror did not show up Thursday morning. Court officials eventually went to her home, found her incoherent and got help from a medical emergency crew.

Tuai dismissed her from the panel and declared a mistrial.

Weather

Thunderstorms hit central part of Texas

By The Associated Press

Heavy thunderstorms rumbled through Central Texas on Saturday as partly cloudy skies and temperatures averaging in the 90s were recorded across the state.

Thunderstorms dotted the southwestern portion of the state and North and East Texas reported scattered showers.

The afternoon temperature extremes were 78 at Marfa in West Texas and 102 at McAllen in the Rio Grande Valley. Some 70s and 80s were reported in the mountains.

Forecasters predicted widely scattered thunderstorms Sunday in Southwest Texas, with afternoon and evening thundershowers in the southeastern section of the state.

Skies should be mostly fair with the high temperatures in the 90s and some low 100s in the Big Bend valleys.

West Texas: Widely scattered thunderstorms south. Mostly fair Sunday night. Sunny and continued warm through Monday. Lows mid 60s to mid 70s; near 60 in the mountains. Highs mid 90s; near 100 in the Big Bend valleys.

Editorial Television and your child

National studies show that too much television has an overwhelming effect on children's reading abilities and ultimately their test scores.

- Is TV really harmful for children? Examine these facts:
- The average child sees 11,000 television murders by age 14. Violent behavior on TV may cause aggression in children, and horror movies can be damaging.
- Children "ape" what they see or hear. They don't know real vs. unreal, violent vs. non-violent, or bad vs. good behavior. They become confused and some have been hospitalized after trying to imitate TV characters.
- Children eat too much junk food while watching television and don't get enough exercise.
- Television takes time from other activities that are very important to a child's development, such as homework, physical activity, creative expression, and learning individual skills.
- Children who watch TV late at night often don't do their homework, are sleepy in school the next day and have a shorter attention span.
- Reading skills do not develop when the child watches TV excessively instead of reading.
- Children who don't play with friends haven't learned the social skills necessary for classroom interaction.
- Two or more TV sets split families. Family life is sacrificed.

BUT TELEVISION isn't all good or all bad. It can help or hurt your child, depending on how you choose to use it.

The Texas State Teachers Association has offered some tips to ensure that television is helping, not harming, your children.

- Watch television with your children. Help them select the right programs by checking TV listings in advance. Look for programs that are fair in their treatment of people, or programs that are not violent or too sophisticated in content.
- Plan with children what shows they can watch — whether you are home or away. Be aware that public television has special programming and that commercial TV produces many excellent shows especially geared to children.
- Insist on a limit to TV time. Discuss what's "real" and what's "unreal" on TV and in life. Talk about how violence can be harmful — real people hurt when injured.
- DO NOT let the television be a babysitter. Make certain your children watch TV for information and entertainment, after you have carefully selected a good program.
- Keep plenty of children's books, toys and things like empty boxes around so your child will learn to play creatively.
- Provide adequate light in the television area and watch for tiredness, listlessness, glassy eyes, trance-like states — signs of poor health or too much television.
- Turn off the assaults, attacks and uproars when they appear on your television set. Youngsters need a friendly atmosphere at home without a lot of unnecessary noise or violence.

- Correct any language errors your child may hear on television. Unfortunately, there are mistakes on TV. Why not have fun finding them together?
- Makes meals a family event — don't sit in front of the TV set. Select food carefully — not what a TV character urges kids to eat. Don't let TV turn your child into the family shopper. Parents should take final responsibility for selecting foods, clothing, toys, etc. When children see things on TV, they may enter a "gimme-get-me" stage. Don't give in to demands for junk foods just because children ask for them after they've seen them on TV.
- Don't let television dominate your life. Remember, when there is nothing constructive for your child to watch on television, there's always an alternative: turn the set off.

Around the Rim Spelunkers' delight

By Carol Daniel

Last weekend I traded my reporter's rags for cave clothes and went spelunking.

Well, maybe not exactly. The cave — Carlsbad Caverns — was rather commercialized and I may be a little green — one trip through Longhorn Caverns constitutes my cave experience. Yet I know I have at least one claim to the ranks of spelunkers — that irresistible urge to know what lies in the darkness beyond.

From the moment that cavern mouth first gaped at me, I was hooked. Fellow tourists must have thought my ancestors were fish... my mouth always opened to gasp at every natural wonder.

That's probably the best part — all the wonders are natural. It's been a long time since I've been truly amazed. Somehow "That's Incredible" doesn't come close. Having fallen victim to a certain amount of apathy, I didn't expect the neck and eyestrain I suffered from trying to look in all directions at once.

My companions and I scampered about like children. We pretended to be the first cavern explorers, moonmen and citizens of the Twilight Zone. It was great.

But I had to laugh at one six-year-old's consensus of the adventure. "Too bad they're not any better," she said. "You know, with lights and music."

She's not old enough to imagine how grand it would have been to be Jim White, a turn-of-the-century cowboy. He was the first to extensively explore the caverns.

Intrigued by the mystery of the unknown reaches of the cavern, he began to explore it with only lanterns for illumination. There were no artificial lights or gently sloping paved trails to guide his path.

He faced difficult terrain, pitch darkness, pervasive dust and grit, mud and water and high humidity. After several years he succeeded in penetrating most of the 23 miles of caves.

The endless mystery of their labyrinthine extent and the knowledge he was the first to shed light on that vastness, must have kept him awake nights with a burning unrest.

He was the first to gaze at the stalactites that festoon the ceilings, hanging in huge, threatening masses or dripping like molten wax in long, slender rods.

He discovered ribbons of stone forming massive draperies and gravity-defying stalagmites thrusting ceilingward.

When his descriptions of the underground wonderland met with skepticism, White constructed crude trails and guided all who wished to come, through the portions he had explored.

Now vacationers take a side jaunt on their way to California to spend a few hours walking the three-mile trail or riding an elevator down 750 feet to explore the 12-acre Big Room and other formations. Some munch on box lunches sold in the underground luncheonroom. It's almost sacrilegious.

But I think it's all for the best. Ultimately, White's patient sleuthing has caused thousands of people to, at least momentarily, shed layers of insensitivity and stand wide-mouthed in awe to dream of the life of spelunking.

The wedding

"What do you mean you don't have a justice of the peace here?" Sanders demanded.

The district clerk of Waurika, Okla., spoke precisely. "We do not have a justice of the peace in this courthouse," she said.

"Don't you have any kind of a judge here?" "Oh yes, we have a district judge," she said, pointing across the hall where a thin black-haired man was sitting at his desk. "Only he don't marry people," she added.

Sanders rolled his eyes. The judge didn't look like the type who would change his mind.

"I give up," he said. "How are we supposed to get married in beautiful Waurika, Oklahoma?"

The clerk raised her chin and leveled her eyes with his. "You'll have to find a preacher," she said.

"I knew it! I knew it! Okay, ma'am, where's a church?" "I really couldn't tell you," she said, turning her back with finality.

WE DROVE CRISSCROSS through the streets of Waurika until we saw a white, two-story Baptist church. We climbed the stairs and found a woman sitting at the pastor's desk.

"Where's the preacher? We want to get married," Sanders said.

The secretary smiled. "We're fresh out," she said. "Our pastor left us last month."

"God! Well, ma'am, could you direct us to the Methodist Church?"

It was around the corner. The pastor was eager to earn his money. We sat in his study while he lectured us. "Remember, the most important thing in marriage is communication," he said.

"LOOK, PREACH," Sanders interrupted, "she and I already discussed this numerous times, okay?"

The church janitor and a local druggist were called in to witness the ceremony.

"How much do I owe ya, Preach?" Sanders said, after the ceremony was over.

"Well, you tell me," the preacher replied, his eyes intent on a $20 bill in Sanders' fist. "How much do you think she's worth?"

"Oh! Well! In that case I'll send you a check in six months, after I find out," Sanders said, grabbing my arm and shoving me toward the door. I resisted. Sanders flung the $20 at the preacher.

We drove back to Texas in silence.

Mah modest defense of accents

Breathes there a man with a soul so dead, who has never said, "This is my own, my native accent?" Apparently so. Every day, it seems, I hear more and more people who talk as though they learned English from a computer.

As someone who is frequently mistaken by strangers (and sometimes by friends) for a straw-chewing bumpkin, I'm disturbed by the decline of regional variations in spoken English. Ten years spent in Northern climes have not eradicated my Texas accent, and even if my fate is to spend another 50 years away from my native state, my dying words undoubtedly will end in "y'all."

To a Texan, there is no sweeter sound in the world than the musical syllables that fill the air south of the Red River and north of the Rio Grande. One of the theme songs from the movie "The Alamo" comes close. A monophthongized "i" (as the experts call it) is to Sam Houston's descendants what "Aida" is to opera-goers. (Of course, to non-Texans, I'm told, a Texas accent is more akin to "Gottedammerung.") The real reason Lyndon Johnson carried his home state in 1964 was that Texans wanted a president who didn't talk funny.

NOT THAT I bear any prejudice against other American accents. In fact, I love them all — anything from Maine to Savannah to Omaha. One of my dearest friends is a woman whose South Boston accent could be used to split granite. I sometimes call her just to remind myself how English would sound if the letter r had never been invented.

Only accentless English leaves me cold. Like a cinder-block high-rise, it is clean, efficient and totally lacking in charm. Give me the Gothic intonations of Chicago or southern Virginia any day. Better to hear a native of the Bronx read from the telephone book than a typical radio announcer reciting the Gettysburg Address.

It wasn't always so clear to me. When exiled from my home to afflict an Eastern college, I was so traumatized to learn I had an accent that for a week I tried in vain to suppress it. (It was nearly as surprising as my discovery that other Americans weren't required to take high school courses in Texas history.) But I soon realized that accents are by language as spices are to food.

Ever since, I have made it a point to protect my speech from the erosions of alien dialects. This has its disadvantages, like frequently being misunderstood. To most Americans, a Texan who says "I know my rights" is suggesting a curious intimacy with rodents. I once got involved with a woman from St. Louis who, after several weeks, confessed that on our first date she hadn't understood a word I said. Probably that's why we got along so well.

BE THAT AS it may, the future doesn't look terribly bright for accents. There are threats everywhere. One is the increasing mobility of the population, which leads many Americans to abandon their birthplaces and their natural manner of speaking. It's rare to meet a Texan in Chicago, but rarer still to meet one who actually sounds like a Texan. And the great distances that used to insulate dialects have been reduced by the transportation revolution.

But the worst danger is the rise of national television and radio networks. Anxious to avoid offending anyone, they generally insist on hiring only people who sound as if they come from nowhere. CBS News, for instance, used to be overrun with Texans — Walter Cronkite, Hughes Rudd and Dan Rather, to name a few. No draws there.

These days, even local newscasters speak the same homogenized brand of English as their national counterparts. If the anchor men and women in Austin were switched with those in Chicago, no one would ever hear the difference.

The usual blame for this development is placed on technology. But the airwaves carry accented English just as well as the sterilized version. It is people, not machines, who are guilty.

But Raven McDavid Jr., a professor emeritus of linguistics at the University of Chicago and unmistakably a South Carolinian, isn't worried: "How often do you converse with Walter Cronkite?" Most Americans aren't newscasters, thank heaven, and can speak however they please. So far there is no national academy, as there used to be in many European countries, dedicated to imposing uniformity to the national tongue.

BUT I FEAR that, over time, an accent (any accent) will become a faintly embarrassing anachronism, like an outsize in the backyard. What comes out of your mouth is affected by what goes into your ears. Exposed to a national norm for hours every day by the broadcast media, Americans are bound to change the way they speak, in subtle but inexorable ways.

But in Dixieland I'll take my stand. Until it is outlawed, and probably after, I intend to continue speaking English as I learned it, and I hope you'll do the same. Meanwhile, I ask the indulgence of any non-Texans who have the misfortune of having to listen to me. Ah! my shore yew kin understand!

Minority knows score

Dear Editor, I have read, with deep concern and personal interest, the many articles and letters published relating to the School Board's action concerning the desegregation plan. These articles range from the ridiculous to the sublime.

We, who represent the minority on this issue, know what the score is. We have been on the wrong end of this problem for years, and although, according to one writer we "are missing the point and fully misunderstanding," we will continue to voice our disapproval every time this ugly problem comes to the surface.

The "courageous four" on our school board succumbed to the pressures of the majority voicing an opinion on this issue and "struck their blow for freedom." Their decision has been editorialized as "democracy in action. The people spoke; their elective representatives listened. The majority prevailed." Further, this action was supported by several writers who justified the turn of events under various guises and questionable rationalizing. A rose by any other name is still a rose.

As stated by one writer, most of us have never lived in a country under dictatorship and perhaps we are oblivious to the value that our liberties and freedoms represent. We are cognizant of the fact that Mr. Al Valdes has experienced this misfortune, we are sympathetic to the suffering and frustrations he has undergone as a result thereof.

But why doesn't God destroy the devil right now? Why does he permit there to be so much evil in the world? Let me give you one reason (although there may be some other reasons that God has not chosen to tell us in the Bible). Think of it this way: if God were to destroy everything that is evil in the world, how many people would be left? You see, we all have done things that are wrong in the eyes of God, and yet God does not wish to destroy us — he wants to save us.

So God is giving every one of us as much time as possible to repent of our sins and turn to Christ for forgiveness. He is withholding his judgment until the last possible minute, so as many people as possible will come to him. And that is true of you also. God loves you, and he wants you to love him also.

How can you love God? And how can you be sure you will always be on his side instead of the devil's? You can give your life to Jesus Christ, who died on the cross to take away your sins. I hope you will pray to God right now, asking him to forgive you for Christ's sake, and vowing to follow Christ for the rest of your life.

However, whenever these liberties and freedoms have been in jeopardy and safeguarding them was essential we answered the call and paid our dues.

When I read the School Board Defense Counsel's proposal I sincerely considered the plan as being prudent, feasible, and economically sound. A workable solution to the existing problem. I also anticipated opposition to the plan by a large number of our citizens in that the basic issue involved has always been fostered and proliferated by this dictating group. A problem that will continue to exist, like a malignant cancer, in our society as long as we fear to face reality.

However, the die has been cast, a decision has been rendered and only time will tell whether their ruling was a prudent one, in the best interest of all concerned, or simply yielding to the pressures of this group.

Regardless of the outcome the problem will continue to exist. Yet it is a basic issue that is well within our grasp to solve. Although great strides have been made in the past towards its solution and the situation greatly improved, we have failed to completely eradicate it. Perhaps some day in the future we will realize that we are all God's children entitled to our individual dignity and each others' mutual respect.

Respectfully,

Clements' new campaign style

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Texas Republicans haven't had much practice the past century in running incumbency-based political campaigns, but Gov. Bill Clements is trying to make up for lost time.

Clements, the 1978 out-of-nowhere big spender who became the state's first GOP governor in 104 years, has reversed political roles the past four years.

Where he once campaigned on a promise to straighten things out, he now promises to keep doing a good job.

Where he once stressed the problems of the state and the nation, he now cites the good things about Texas and tries to ignore what's happening in the nation.

Changing circumstances create changed views, of course, and the circumstances definitely have changed since 1978.

Then, Clements ran against President Carter almost as much as he did against democratic gubernatorial nominee John Hill.

Carter was in trouble because the people perceived him as indecisive and ineffective, and Clements took advantage of that perception.

In one of the more-famous incidents of the campaign, he threw down a rubber chicken at a banquet to symbolize how he was going to tie Carter around Hill's neck "like a dead chicken."

The incident is famous because the rubber chicken accidentally landed in the plate of the Amarillo mayor's wife, creating some embarrassment for the candidate but also much publicity that helped his name-identification.

We probably won't see such stunts this year, either from Clements or his name Democratic opponent, Attorney General Mark White. The governor has top ID and wants to portray himself as a mature and experienced statesman, and stunts just aren't the style of the lawyerly White.

We also won't hear Clements talking much about national issues, particularly the problems with the economy. The governor is talking about the economy, but only the Texas economy.

"While we do have some soft spots ... overall our Texas economy is very, very strong ... we are a bright spot (in the nation)," the governor said in a news conference last week.

He had come to the meeting with reporters loaded with statistics showing that:

- The state will end the current fiscal year Aug. 31 with a surplus of more than $1 billion.
- Total employment is at an all-time high within our borders.
- Our unemployment level is the lowest of the 10 largest industrial states.
- Housing starts are up over last year.
- State tax revenues will be up a minimum of 25 percent next year.

With his friend and fellow Republican, Ronald Reagan, in the White House, Clements has toned down his anti-Washington rhetoric quite a bit. Clements' goal is to associate himself with the personal popularity of Reagan without being tied to "Reaganomics" and the current national economic mess.

White, of course, is determined not to allow that to happen. At the same time that Clements was presenting his rosy future last week, White was blaming him as personally responsible for the worsening Texas economy.

While the governor talks about how many more people have been employed, White talks about the "disgrace" of a 7.7 percent statewide unemployment rate.

Somewhat it all sounds familiar. It's the same kind of "dead chicken" blame that Clements hung around Hill's neck and Reagan hung around Carter's.

Whether Texas voters will again see a chicken-feather link between a candidate and the nation's woes, is anyone's guess. But White is trying to convince them to do so, and he has a good example to follow.

All he has to do is learn from the Clements campaign of 1978.

Footnotes from Howard County Library

Like Paul Gallico? The library has his books in stock

By RON VON HASSELL
Library Cataloguer

If you enjoy Paul Gallico you are in for a treat, because the Howard County Library has just received a number of large-print books, and four of them are by him.

In "Mrs. Harris Goes to Moscow," one of her clients is in love with a Russian girl. Unfortunately they cannot be together, since she can't get out of Russia because of the red tape. Guess who just happens to win two tickets, and an all-expense five-day trip to Russia? None other than Mrs. Harris. After a very shaky start at the airport, she and her friend Mrs. Butterfield got to Russia. While there she becomes entangled in the insoluble love affair, with the KGB, a royal personage, and the problem of a world shortage. Mrs. Harris manages to resolve all these matters with just her common sense.

"Mrs. Harris, M.P." finds Ada Harris running for Parliament. After watching a politician on the telly, Mrs. Harris thinks she can do a better job than him. She is persuaded to run for Parliament and her election call is "Live and Let Live." To her amazement she is elected by a large majority, despite the unscrupulous efforts of her opponents. Once elected, though, Mrs. Harris doesn't know what her duties are, and has trouble getting her seat in the Parliament. Things do not run very smoothly for Mrs. Harris and she has second thoughts about her being elected, and what she should do about the whole situation.

Another book by Paul Gallico entitled "Coronation" takes place June 2, 1953, the day Queen Elizabeth II was crowned. He has reported the pageantry and emotion of that event and combined it with the tenderest love story of the millions of Englishmen for their queen. The story is told through the medium of the Claggs, a simple North Country family which made many sacrifices to get to London to see their queen on Coronation Day. Each member of the family has different adventures and memories of this glorious day, and each feels it is the greatest day of their lives.

Some of the other large print books are "Beyond the Poseidon Adventure," also by Paul Gallico, which tells the story of the six survivors of the SS Poseidon after they are rescued by helicopter; "The Dandelion Clock" by Ursula Bloom; "Death in the Round" by Anne Morris; "Green Fire" by Anne Maybury; and "Ride the Man down" by Luke Short.

Come down to the Howard County Library and see what other books we have that might be of interest to you.

Herald starts new columnist today

Stephen Chapman, whose twice-weekly column of commentary begins today in The Herald, is an editorial writer and columnist for the Chicago Tribune.

Jim Squires, editor of the Tribune, says of him, "Steve Chapman has something different and interesting to say everytime he sits down to write. And among columnists writing commentary for newspapers today, that makes him a rare find."

And colleague Jack Fuller, deputy editor of the Tribune's editorial page, calls him "the most engaging young voice in newspaper commentary. He is clever, irreverent, sophisticated and sometimes slightly irritable. The only thing predictable about his columns is the pleasure of reading them."

He joined the staff of the Tribune in January 1981, after two and a half years as associate editor of New Republic magazine. He has contributed articles to several national magazines, including Harper's, the Atlantic Monthly, Fortune and the Public Interest.

Chapman also contributes frequent radio commentaries to Byline, a public affairs program syndicated to 160 stations throughout the United States.

Born in Brady, Texas, in 1954, Chapman attended Harvard College, where he was a member of the editorial board of the Harvard Crimson. He graduated cum laude in 1976 with a degree in general studies.

Chapman lives in Evanston, Ill., a suburb of Chicago. His twice-weekly column is distributed by The Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

Six Westerners missing in Africa

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Guerrilla followers of opposition leader Joshua Nkomo kidnapped two Americans and four other Westerners from an African safari and reportedly have threatened to kill them unless two jailed comrades are freed.

Justin Nyoka, a spokesman for Zimbabwe's Information Department, identified the kidnapped Americans as Brett Baldwin and Kevin Ellis. Their hometowns were not immediately available.

The other hostages were James Greenwell and Martyn Hodgson of Britain and Tony Bajzelj and William Butler of Australia, Nyoka said.

U.S., British and Australian consular officials were conferring with Foreign Ministry officials about the kidnapping.

The six tourists were abducted Friday night while making the 240-mile journey from Victoria Falls to the southwest city of Bulawayo, diplomatic sources said.

They were part of a group of 10 Westerners on a motoring safari who stopped at a roadblock of fallen trees on a main highway 40 miles north of Bulawayo.

The group's leader, a New Zealander, and three young women from Australia, the Netherlands and Austria also were abducted but were freed after 30 minutes with a ransom message to the government.

The message demanded the release from detention of two former military commanders of opposition leader Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union.

The commanders were identified as Lookout Masuku, and Dumiso "Black Russian" Dabengwa, held without formal charge since March 10. They were detained on suspicion of participating in a plot to overthrow the government of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe.

Nyoka would not comment on a South African press report that the gunmen had threatened to kill the hostages if the prisoners were not freed.

"It is a report fast gaining credibility," a Western diplomat here told The Associated Press, "but we have very little information on this."

The diplomat asked not to be identified, explaining: "This is an extremely delicate situation and it is the responsibility of the (Zimbabwe) government."

Nyoka said security forces were combing the southwest Zimbabwe area for the "dissidents" — the government's term for guerrillas loyal to Nkomo.

Nkomo and Mugabe headed the two largest guerrilla armies that fought for black majority rule before the April 18, 1981 independence of Zimbabwe, formerly the white-ruled self-governing British colony of Rhodesia.

Mugabe appointed Nkomo as a Cabinet minister in March 1981, but ideological and personal differences between both leaders led to Nkomo's dismissal in February 1982 and increasingly strained relations between their followers.

U.S., Russia talking about Afghanistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has held talks with the Soviet Union in Moscow in a new attempt to convince the Soviets to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan, a State Department official said Saturday.

Rush Taylor, a State Department spokesman, said he could "confirm that there have been discussions."

He said the administration believes "it is essential to make clear to the Soviets that the Afghanistan issue will not go away and that it remains a major impediment to improvement of U.S.-Soviet relations."

But he indicated the talks may have proved fruitless. "There is no evidence to indicate that the Soviets have changed their position on Afghanistan," he said.

Taylor said the administration is seeking "to press the Soviets to withdraw their forces from Afghanistan in the context of a settlement acceptable to the Afghans and the international community."

He indicated the latest talks were part of a series of "diplomatic dialogues with the Soviets" on Afghanistan. "We want to hear Soviet views," he said.

Taylor said the administration is consulting closely with Pakistan on efforts to arrange a settlement in Afghanistan.

Another State Department official, who did not want to be identified, said the Reagan administration would continue to press the Soviets to end their intervention.

"The effort to convince the Soviets to withdraw their troops is ongoing and takes a number of shapes and forms," he said. "We are not going to quit." Soviet troops entered Afghanistan in December 1979.

Red Chinese official wants reunification

PEKING (AP) — A senior Chinese official asked Taiwan President Chiang Ching-kuo Saturday to invite him for a visit to talk about peaceful reunification.

A letter by Liao Chengzhi, 76, son of a former leader of Chiang's Nationalist Party, addressed the Nationalist president as "dear brother Ching-kuo," and referred to "our childhood friendship" and "our chats in the Soviet capital," where Chiang was educated.

In September 1981, China proposed reunification of the countries, saying Taiwan could keep its own army and run its own affairs without having to adopt communism.

Peking radio and the official Xinhua news agency distributed the text, saying it already had been sent to Taipei by cable.

But Taiwan has rejected all of Peking's overtures as efforts to subjugate the Chinese on Taiwan to the mainland Communists.

Napalm will be used to fight fires

HAPPY CAMP, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service called for help from a napalm-dropping helicopter Saturday after a fire jumped its lines and spread into wilderness so rugged that bulldozers could not be used.

Elsewhere, forest fires were reported under control after rains came to the aid of firefighters.

In the Klamath National Forest near the California-Oregon state line, spokesman Jack Darnell said the special helicopter, called a helitorch, would start a backfire that would expand the blaze to 2,300 acres from 1,500 but consume its fuel supply.

"The only (other) way we can fight that fire is with crews with handtools — shovels, axes, chainsaws," said Darnell.

"We can get some support from aerial tankers, but we don't have bulldozers, we don't have firetrucks, we don't have the big, heavy tools we normally use on fires."

The blaze started from a smoldering campfire.

In Colorado, Utah and Nevada, fires were contained or controlled by Saturday afternoon.

A blaze on Bureau of Land Management property near Meeker, Colo., was contained Friday night after burning 510 acres.

A fire that burned 10,000 acres of sagebrush and grass on Antelope Island in Utah's Great Salt Lake was declared under control Friday after it began to rain.

Heavy rains west of Las Vegas, Nev., doused a fire Saturday that burned 6,100 acres of Bureau of Land Management property.

Whaling ban shocks Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Japan, the world's biggest consumer of whale meat, expressed shock and concern Saturday over an international regulatory commission's decision to ban all commercial whaling beginning in 1986.

Japan, the Soviet Union and Norway took about 90 percent last year's catch of 14,000 whales. Of that total, the Japanese caught almost 5,000 and imported about the equivalent in tonnage from other countries.

Championed by the United States, conservationists scored their biggest triumph of a 10-year fight to save whales Friday when the International Whaling Commission banned commercial hunting worldwide for an indefinite period beginning in 1986.

Before the IWC approved the ban at a meeting in Brighton, England, representatives from Japan and Norway vowed to continue to hunt whales. Both countries said they would lodge protests. In addition, the commission still will permit subsistence whaling by Eskimos and other native hunters.

Akita Matsuura, director general of the Fishery Agency, said Saturday the commercial ban "isn't based on scientific findings and violates the whaling treaty," which calls for the development of the whaling industry while preserving whale stocks. Japan signed the treaty in 1951.

Matsuura said the ban would take jobs from 15,000 Japanese engaged in whaling and about 50,000 workers employed in related industries including processing and distribution of whale meat and oil.

The Japanese whaling industry has annual sales of $44 million, another agency official said.

"We can't accept the IWC decision. We will study what action to take after the Japanese delegation returns home from the Brighton meeting," said a spokesman for the Nippon Kogei K.K. whaling company, which handles more than 70 percent of Japan's whale catch.

According to the Fishery Agency, Japan caught 4,887 whales last year, or 20,000 tons. Japan also imported 18,000 tons from the Soviet Union and South Korea in 1981.

An agency official, who asked not to be identified, said the government might discuss the problem with the American government.

He said the Japanese are seriously concerned that if Japan does not honor the ban, Japanese fishermen may be banned from U.S. waters.

Hundreds die in Japanese landslides

TOKYO (AP) — Thousands of rescue workers dug frantically for survivors Saturday, combing through landslides caused by torrential rains that left at least 335 dead or missing in southern Japan.

The rain, described as falling "like endless barrels of water," caused flash floods and slides that killed at least 120 people, injured 63, left 215 missing and thousands homeless by official count.

Police said more than 6,000 policemen, soldiers and civilian volunteers were digging through the mud, crushed houses, and buried cars, trying to find those still trapped.

The rains, coming at the end of a long drought, dumped 16-22 inches of water in a 24-hour period on the southernmost main Japanese island of Kyushu and on some sections of Honshu.

The city hardest hit was Nagasaki, the port where an atomic bomb fell in 1945 and where floods killed 992 people in 1957. A total of 104 deaths were recorded there Saturday.

Police said 687 landslides were reported in Nagasaki and its neighboring areas while more than 32,000 houses were flooded, roads were cut at 417 places and 61 bridges were washed away.

RIVERFRONT PROPERTY — Three persons in Deerfield, Ill., found that the best way to get around town recently was by boat rather than car. Heavy rains had flooded this Chicago suburb.

Ceramic used in bone replacement

PITTSBURGH (AP) — In a new procedure, surgeons at the University of Pittsburgh are replacing broken or missing bones with a ceramic substitute that eventually decomposes to help real bones grow back.

"We've done dog experiments, using it to replace segments of limbs. And now we've used it with children," said Dr. Dana Mears, associate professor of orthopedic surgery at the University Health Center of Pittsburgh.

It appears to work very well," he said Friday.

Mears first used the bone substitute, a ceramic-like material made of tricalcium phosphate, to help lengthen the legs of two 9-year-old girls with birth defects.

He performed the surgery about two months ago at Presbyterian University Hospital, marking the first use of the substitute to replace major segments of human bone, he said.

The substitute has been used for facial oral surgery in other parts of the country, Mears said. "But it had never been used in the limbs or pelvis. That's an area we have just started, and we plan to enlarge on it during the next weeks," he said.

Mears expects the bone substitutes, which can be shaped to an exact fit at the operating table, to be used nationwide within a few years.

The only drawback to the substitute is its initial fragility — more breakable than bone — when first implanted, Mears said. So he inserts a piece of metal in the limb to connect the bone fragments and protect the substitute. After several months, the substitute generally is strong enough so the metal can be removed.

In time, blood vessels invade the substitute and the body's enzymes degrade the material, which is replaced with natural bone.

"That's one of its great attractions to us," Mears said. "When it's broken down, the breakdown products are suitable for reconstitution as bone."

"In the long run, you're left with the patient's own bone and no foreign substance. And that's the best you can hope for."

Ceramics are also being used for other bone-related problems. On June 7, 28-year-old Gary Bumgarner became the first U.S. patient to receive permanent, ceramic hip socket replacements developed in Germany. Dr. Edward H. Miller, who conducted the surgery in Cincinnati, said the ceramic implant should outlive the patient, because it does not require cement to attach the sockets.

Before the bone substitute became available, Mears used bone grafts for more than 50 accident victims who lost large segments of bone.

But grafts and donated bones are subject to rejection by the patient's body, said Mears, and neither procedure is as sterile — or convenient — as the substitute.

Ohio man guilty of 2 murders

Acquitted of 9 slayings by reason of insanity

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) — A man who gunned down 11 relatives in a "volcano of rage" at an Easter dinner seven years ago has been convicted of two murders in a retrial, but acquitted of the other nine slayings by reason of insanity.

James U. Ruppert, 47, was found guilty Friday of aggravated murder in the slayings of his mother, Charity, and his brother, Leonard, whom he claimed were conspiring to harm him.

But he was found innocent by reason of insanity — the plea he entered to all the charges — in the shooting deaths of his sister-in-law, Alma, and eight nieces and nephews ranging in age from 4 to 17. It was believed to be the largest mass slaying of a family in U.S. history.

The defense admitted that Ruppert, a former draftsman and a skilled marksman, killed the victims.

Prosecutor John Holcomb said Ruppert committed the slayings because he hoped to inherit his brother's estate, worth more than $260,000.

"I never thought he was legally insane; I don't now and I never will," said Holcomb, who also prosecuted the original trial.

Presiding Ashland County Judge A. Ross Siverling sentenced Ruppert to life in prison on the two murder charges and ordered a hearing in seven days to determine where he will be incarcerated.

Ruppert's first conviction, in August 1975, was overturned on appeal because he had been misinformed about the consequences of waiving a jury trial.

The shootings took place on March 30, 1975, where relatives had gathered at the Hamilton home of Ruppert's mother for an Easter dinner.

When police arrived on that cold, gray Sunday, they were led inside by Ruppert, who had called officers to the scene. They found bodies scattered from end to end of the house.

Police said Ruppert used two guns — a .357-caliber Magnum and a .22-caliber revolver — and reloaded at least twice while pumping 40 bullets into his victims.

Testimony indicated Ruppert had refused to eat with his family because he was upset that his mother and brother had raised the issue of $3,500 he owed them.

When the brother asked about Ruppert's car, which the defendant believed his brother had sabotaged, the remark set off "a volcano of rage," a psychiatrist testified.

Ruppert's mother was shot in the chest and the brother was repeatedly shot in the head.

After each victim fell and lay "moaning and groaning, he finished them off," said Holcomb. After the trial, he said he was satisfied with the verdict "to the extent that (Ruppert) ... will spend his life in prison."

Defense attorney Hugh Holbrook said he would recommend an appeal because the judge refused to admit tapes of interviews with Ruppert, which Holbrook said would have proved his insanity on all charges.

The prosecution hammered at the insanity plea, bringing in witnesses who had met Ruppert in a bar, a stock brokerage office and a restaurant. All said he was a shy, pleasant, highly intelligent man who appeared sane to them.

Holbrook said he considered having Ruppert testify on his own defense, but decided against it. "I felt a moral responsibility not to put a mentally ill person on the stand," he said.

Plot to rule county called 'book research'

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — Papers outlining a secret plan to use a laser gun in a takeover of Marin County were only research for a science fiction book, says a defense lawyer. But a newspaper report links the plot to the real-life killing of a 37-year-old man.

Two men have been charged with the murder of Robert A. Baldwin, 37, whose body, anchored by an outboard motor, was pulled from San Pablo Bay last week, said Marin County District Attorney Jerry Herman.

Documents seized when the men were arrested outline the bizarre plot to place a laser gun atop Mount Tamalpais, seal roads into and out of the 523-square-mile county — located across the Golden Gate Bridge from San Francisco — and establish armed forts, the San Rafael Independent-Journal reported in a copyright story.

Herman wouldn't discuss the secret plot. But defense attorney Carl Shapiro said any thought the plot was real is "absurd." The seized documents were nothing more than his client's research for a science fiction book, he said.

Shapiro represents Mark Richards, 29, of San Anselmo, who is charged with Baldwin's murder along with Crossan D. Hoover, 18, of Novato. An unnamed juvenile is charged with being an accessory after the fact, Herman said Friday.

The newspaper quoted investigators as saying that confiscated papers indicated that a group plotting the takeover of Marin County — population 222,500 — called itself "Pendragon," a medieval English word meaning supreme chief or leader.

SHARPSTOWN

A Texas scandal revisited 10 years later

EDITOR'S NOTE: Like Watergate, the "Sharpstown Scandal" began a decade ago as hardly more than high-grade chicanery. In time, it wrecked political careers, destroyed reputations and, some say, substantially altered the course of Texas history. It was a modest bank-stock scandal laced with political intrigue and corruption. This article traces Sharpstown from its curious beginning and provides a fresh new look at the men, motives and legacy of a complex and bizarre Texas drama.

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — It was a time for good whiskey and bad jokes, black ties and splendid gowns. Back slapping, back sliding and back stabbing.

In short, the revelry of the politically triumphant. The date was Jan. 18, 1971, and for Texas Democrats it was the best of times. It soon would be the worst.

Rejoicing over the smashing victories of November, the party faithful, led by Gov. Preston Smith, poured into the capital city to celebrate.

The gala included a victory dinner that Monday night with inaugural ceremonies for Smith and Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes to follow the next day.

But the festive mood of wintertime 1971 was illusory. Unknown to all but a few, the Securities and Exchange Commission was investigating the financial activities of a Houston wheeler-dealer named Frank Sharp.

Worse still, SEC investigators were uncovering curious links between Sharp and several of the state's Democratic leaders.

As the politics dressed for dinner that fateful Monday evening, the SEC filed its civil bombshell — the timing of which raised a few eyebrows.

Word of the suit filtered through the dinner party, mostly in whispers, but the full impact escaped all but the most perceptive for days or weeks or even months.

Nonetheless, that was the beginning of the "Sharpstown Scandal," or simply "Sharpstown" as the bank and stock fraud case was called.

The toll from "Sharpstown" would be monstrous in terms of shattered political careers, not to mention its impact on state government. Roughly half of the incumbent legislators were defeated or chose not to seek reelection in 1972.

ON THE EVENING of Jan. 18, 1971, Waggoner Carr, a former Texas attorney general, was meeting with friends and political supporters in his Austin law office.

Once speaker of the Texas House, Carr, then 54, had lost bids for the U.S. Senate and governor but was considering a 1972 campaign for lieutenant governor.

A telephone call ended that prospect.

An SEC attorney, Carr recalled, "cutly" informed him he stood accused of conspiring to manipulate the stock of several corporations, notably Sharp's National Bankers Life Insurance Co.

He canceled plans to attend the victory dinner but did not learn until the next day the enormity of the complaint against him.

"It charged that 15 persons, including myself, and 13 companies had schemed to sell unregistered stocks, drain companies of their assets, issue bad checks, misrepresent financial conditions, bribe legislators and generally conduct a giant shell game that beggared the mind."

Thus began a three-year nightmare.

"It destroyed me politically — and financially," he said recently. "I had nothing left, businesswise. My law practice dried up, and I had to dissolve my law firm."

At that, Carr, was luckier than some. He was exonerated after several expensive and widely publicized trials in which he served in part as his own attorney.

In a book he entitled "Not Guilty," Carr made a persuasive but largely circumstantial case of governmental abuse aimed mostly at Watergate figures.

Politics was played so viciously under the Nixon regime that it became part of the criminal justice system, he said. What rankled Carr and others was the Justice Department's decision to allow Frank Sharp to plea bargain in exchange for his testimony.

The deal permitted Sharp to plead guilty to making false entries in his Sharpstown State Bank and selling unregistered insurance stock.

Safe from further prosecution, he could then blow the whistle on Carr, Preston Smith, Ben Barnes, House Speaker Gus Mutscher, several state legislators and others.

Or so it seemed. At the time, rumors persisted that Sharp bribed key Texas Democrats to influence passage of questionable banking legislation.

On June 14, 1971, U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton placed Sharp on three years probation and fined him $5,000. For Sharp, then 64, it was hardly more than a tongue lashing.

"I don't have to explain sentences to anybody," Singleton told the Associated Press last month.

To this day, no one seems quite certain how Sharp escaped prison. And that issue, some say, is the real key to the Sharpstown scandal.

It was Sharp's lawyer, Morton Susman, who negotiated the deal with U.S. Attorney Anthony J.P. Farris.

"Susman tricked Farris into immunity," insists Carr, the only big-name politician mentioned in the original SEC lawsuit. "Susman did a magnificent job."

In defense of the plea bargain arrangement, Farris, a state district judge in Houston, says today:

"After all, Frank Sharp was not elected by anybody. He had not taken an oath to defend the Constitution of the United States.

"If I had it to do over again, I would again seek immunity for a snitch who would sing about public officials who are supposed to be in a state of trust."

But it's not all that simple. With the hindsight of 10 years, the plea bargain issue may be the single most intriguing aspect of the entire Sharpstown escapade.

Certainly a former Texas attorney general named Will Wilson thinks so. As a Democrat in the 1950s, Wilson launched a widely publicized crackdown on gambling and prostitution in Galveston. He later ran unsuccessfully for governor and the U.S. Senate.

By 1971, Wilson was a Republican, a friend and professional associate of Frank Sharp and hardly a stranger to the inner circle of Richard Nixon's White House.

In fact, he headed the criminal division of Nixon's Justice Department — what Waggoner Carr called the "Department of Prosecution."

AS THE SHARPSTOWN scandal widened, most everyone involved was crying "politics" and pointing an accusing finger at Wilson.

"I felt that Wilson had held a grudge against me since I ran against him for attorney general in 1960, a race he won," Carr wrote in his book.

Though never formally accused, much less convicted, of any wrongdoing, Ben Barnes would look back in 1982 and recall that "the man who was in bed with Sharp ... was Will Wilson."

Said Barnes: "I can't prove it, but there's a web there and it cost Wilson his job."

Indeed, Wilson surrendered his Justice Department post during the furor of Sharpstown, and it was due in large part to his association with Sharp.

"It got to be too embarrassing to the Nixon administration," Wilson, now retired, told a recent visitor to his Austin office.

"The charges against me were false and distorted, but I was forced to resign over something I didn't do and had no control over ... It was a great smear."

The irony is inescapable. Wilson was going down the drain even as Texas Democrats accused him of conducting a political vendetta against them.

Few principals knew Sharp as well as Wilson, and fewer still better understood the connection between Washington and the bank-stock scandal.

For the first time, he recently discussed both.

"I knew Sharp well," Wilson said. "It was a close relationship, but professional. I liked Frank. He was a philanthropist and he was generous."

Wilson regarded Sharp as "kind of a little man's capitalist."

At the same time, he recognized Sharp as a "prime promoter" who was "always way ahead of his resources."

It was Wilson who, as a private attorney, handled the legalities of Sharp's purchase of National Bankers Life Insurance Co. from former Texas Governor Allan Shivers.

"I advised him very strongly not to buy it," Wilson said. "I thought the price was too high ... He did it anyway."

It was the NBL stock and Sharp's bank that would one day because the cornerstone of the Sharpstown scandal.

Tainted by scandal

Wilson recalled that Sharp borrowed the money to pay Shivers cash for the bank stock. Then the economy soured and money got tight. Sharp was in a bind.

"What he did was, he turned and borrowed from his own bank, using stock from the insurance company as collateral," Wilson said.

"That was 'probably illegal and certainly questionable,' he added.

"Then the bank examiners put pressure on him to put the money back in the bank. And to do that, he took money out of his insurance company ...

"The more he twisted and turned trying to handle the big debt, the more difficulty he got into ... So the end result was that he bought the insurance company with its own money."

According to Wilson, such financial juggling is not uncommon, nor is it "desirable or legal."

With the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. breathing down his neck, the SEC charged, Sharp conceived the banking legislation that could free him from federal regulation.

The actual merits of the proposed legislation remain debatable, but the scandal soon focused on the bank bills and the loans Sharp made to purportedly gain their passage.

In essence, Sharp arranged for certain politicians to obtain unsecured bank loans to purchase NBL stock, which was quickly sold back for remarkably similar and substantial profits.

Among those benefiting from Sharp's largesse were Gov. Smith and Dr. Elmer Baum, an Austin osteopath and state chairman of the Texas Democratic Party.

The long-time investment partners split a $125,000 profit.

Cynics pointed out that Smith appointed Baum to the state Banking Board at the height of the bank-stock maneuver, a potentially cozy arrangement.

Others buying NBL stock with Sharpstown loans were House Speaker Mutscher; Mutscher's father; Rush McGinty, Mutscher's top political staff man; Rep. Tommy Shannon of Fort Worth, Mutscher's top aide in the House; and Sonny Schulte of Brenham, a Mutscher confidante and adviser.

In all, they reaped a quarter-million dollars in profits in what the authors of "Texas Under a Cloud" described as "rigged, quick-profit, bank loan-stock purchases."

Wilson, too, acknowledged that while in Washington he made and repaid unsecured loans from Sharp's bank. But they were not linked to the bank-stock bonanzas.

"When the trouble developed in Texas, I simply disqualified myself," Wilson said later.

Whether involved or not, Wilson was in a unique position to observe the Sharp immunity saga. Without qualification, he contends the Justice Department, namely Deputy Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, botched the entire deal.

More importantly, he tends to confirm what many believed but none could prove: Much of what is considered "Sharpstown" was politically motivated. And it was orchestrated largely in Washington, if not the White House.

When the request for immunity came through, from U.S. Attorney Farris, it was Kleindienst who "rushed in" and agreed to the proposal, Wilson said.

"They did it without getting down in black and white what Sharp's testimony was going to be," he said. "Then they ran it before Judge Singleton."

Wilson stressed that it was Singleton's decision, not the justice department's, to determine punishment for Sharp.

"Kleindienst was shocked and surprised when Singleton didn't give him a penitentiary sentence," he said. "I don't think he dreamed, at the time he accepted the plea, that the judge wouldn't give Sharp some hard time."

Regarding the political motivation, Wilson said: "I don't think there is any doubt but that Kleindienst saw Sharpstown as a major political coup. Actually, that's why he rushed in there ...

"Knowing Kleindienst as I do, I'm quite sure that if he could wrap up Smith and Barnes and Mutscher and the whole Democratic power structure in one bundle, he would regard that as quite a coup ...

Wilson said Kleindienst did not submit the proposal to his superior, Attorney General John Mitchell, and that Mitchell never took part in the decision. (Several efforts to reach Kleindienst at his Tucson, Ariz., home and office for comment were unsuccessful.)

Smith, though identified in court once as a "co-conspirator," was never indicted in the scandal, let alone convicted.

"But that's what Kleindienst had in mind when he agreed to accept the plea and accept Sharp as a witness," said Wilson.

Q. My wife and I want to buy our first house. I say let's buy now because homes seem to move better in the summer. She wants to wait for the slower winter market when sellers may be willing to make a better deal. Who's right?

A. There is logic in both arguments, but the best time to buy anything — a car or a house — is when inventory is high. Generally, most people want to move in the summer. Sellers are competing — a buyer's market. So, this is probably the best time to buy that first home. But, it is also the time to make a wise homebuying decision. Don't rush into what may sound like a good deal without advice. Seek the advice of a qualified, experienced real estate agent — someone who is highly interested in helping you obtain the best home, with the best deal.

AS A SIDELIGHT to the immunity issue, Will Wilson and others less outspoken suggest that "the key to this whole thing is to find out who persuaded Singleton not to give Sharp hard time."

Wilson said he had no proof but believes former President Lyndon Johnson may have figured in the Singleton decision. Singleton was a Johnson appointee. And the ex-president was no friend of Wilson's.

Wilson said Johnson never forgave him for his investigative role in the sensational sordid episode that led to the resignation of Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas.

"After I parted with Lyndon, he never spoke to me again," said Wilson, who had not ingratiated himself with Johnson during his earlier handling of the Billie Sol Estes fertilizer case.

Singleton refused to discuss the issue at length. Said he: "All I can tell you is just go and get the records. The man (Sharp) appeared in my court. He pleaded guilty to two counts of an 82-count indictment. I had no more to do with it than that."

To that extent, he sounded somewhat like Dr. Elmer Baum, Preston Smith's investment partner, whose icy "no comment" preceded a phone click by roughly one second.

Contacted by telephone in Lubbock, his hometown, Smith was scarcely less reticent.

"If you don't have anything better to do than hash up something like this, you ought to just quit your damn job," he said. The former Texas governor then hung up on a newsman requesting an interview.

Sharp himself had little to offer other than two cryptic comments, neither with elaboration.

"I know what the whole score was and how it was done," he said during a telephone request for an interview.

And this regarding Smith: "I know why he was not indicted. When ... they were really able to put the screws to him ... he got on that (state) plane that weekend and went to Washington. And it was decided that he would not be indicted."

Smith never appeared before Travis County grand jurors in Austin but former District Attorney Bob Smith said, "We did look into Smith as well as Mutscher."

Said he: "We couldn't show any quid pro quo at all on the governor's part."

In effect, Smith, now an Austin attorney, said the grand jury could not link the governor's bank-stock profits to any official favoritism toward Sharp.

The governor did open a special legislative session in 1969 to permit consideration of Sharp's banking bills but later vetoed them after they won legislators' approval.

In retrospect, most of the Sharpstown figures say Smith avoided criminal indictment by his surprise veto.

Smith's explanation of his veto was murky at best. But most sources, including John Osorio, the bills' chief lobbyist, traced the veto to Allan Shivers.

The former governor was a so-called "big" banker and occasional adviser to Smith.

Osorio, one of the key Sharpstown figures, argued that the two bills would merely permit newly created state-chartered insurance corporations to insure state bank deposits from the maximum FDIC coverage from $15,000 to $100,000.

Osorio maintained that the increased coverage would be "in addition to" and not "in lieu of" federal insurance.

But Sharp himself admitted the bills were designed to get FDIC investigators off his back.

Whatever, Preston Smith's veto most likely rescued him from the fate that befell Mutscher, who was indicted and subsequently convicted of conspiracy to accept a bribe.

"Thus, as he had done many times in his political life, Smith walked through the barnyard without mending up his boots," wrote authors Sam Kinch Jr. and Ben Proctor in their book, "Texas Under a Cloud."

Although he prosecuted Mutscher, Smith testified on behalf of Waggoner Carr.

"I took a hell of a beating for that," he said. "But I

Ex-engineer claims Comanche coverup

FORT WORTH (AP) — A former engineer at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant says he quit his job last month because the plant's operators are covering up a safety problem that could increase the risk of radiation releases during a serious accident.

Mark Walsh said the problem could cost millions of dollars to correct and could set back by two years the construction of the plant, which is being built near Glen Rose, about 90 miles southwest of here.

Walsh said computer studies showed thousands of pipe supports might break if temperatures in the reactor shot up as a result of a loss of coolant.

He said the plant supervisor drafted a memo March 8 invalidating the findings of the computer study after the scope of the problem was realized.

"They wrote that letter to cover themselves and they put the pressure on us not to even look into it," he said.

Walsh, 29, worked at the plant for a year. He said officials of Texas Utilities Co. refused to conduct computer analyses of all effects of superheated air on pipe supports, increasing the risk of pipe breaks.

A spokesman for Texas Utilities, which owns more than 87 percent of the plant, said that federal safety regulations do not require such tests and that the nuclear industry has determined they are unnecessary.

George Hendrick said the plant was in "absolute compliance" with pipe support standards set for nuclear plants by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

State unemployment rate hit 7.2 percent last month

AUSTIN (AP) — A slowdown in the oil business and layoffs in most other industries contributed to a significant rise in unemployment rates statewide, say officials of the Texas Employment Commission.

Texas posted a 7.2 percent overall unemployment rate in June, compared with a 6.3 rate only a month before.

"We've become so diversified in the state, that any downturn nationally is going to affect us," said TEC spokesman Jerry Bischoff, although certain industries have had specific effects in different areas of the state.

Terence Travland of TEC's economic research division said Friday that poor economic conditions nationally and a traditional summer rise in joblessness combined to give Texas one of its highest unemployment figures in recent memory.

"A lot of it is seasonally oriented," Travland said. "It's the kind of thing we see each year as kids get out of school and look for that first job or look for summer work."

"The situation is further complicated by a national recession which is clearly getting a firmer and firmer grip on Texas," he said. "It was slow in getting here, but it clearly is here now. We're seeing layoffs occurring pretty much across the state in a variety of industries."

Texas' economy still swings to a great extent with the pendulum of oil industry fortunes, as indicated by jobless rates in Midland and Odessa.

Midland posted an unemployment mark of 7.6 percent for June, compared with 4.6 percent in May. Odessa tracked that increase, going from five percent unemployment in May to 8.4 percent in June.

Those Permian Basin jobless figures are mainly due to oil exploration and production slowdowns, Travland said. But that means a corresponding slump in the oil equipment manufacturing — affecting Houston and Dallas.

Travland said many areas have seen worse times, but "generally speaking, most areas are seeing some of the most difficult times they have had in a long time."

Shipment of Mexican citrus fruit prohibited

UVALDE, Texas (AP) — All shipments of citrus fruits into the United States from Mexico have been banned by federal agriculture officials who fear that a crop-destroying disease might spread to U.S. orchards.

The quarantine, which was ordered Friday afternoon, closed the U.S.-Mexican border from Texas to California for an "undetermined time" until authorities evaluate how prevalent a bacteria called citrus canker is in Mexico.

"We have reason to believe that citrus canker is present in Mexico and we're prohibiting all citrus fruit until such time we can determine what the situation is down there," said Charles Hall, area director for the Plant Protection and Quarantine Service.

"The only safe thing to do is prohibit all of it," said Hall, who predicted the quarantine could cause some shortages, particularly for sour limes.

Citrus canker, which appears as a lesion on the fruit, is a highly contagious bacterial plant-disease, said Hall.

The disease is not harmful to people who eat the fruit, but because there is no treatment for infected trees, the disease is considered a threat to U.S. citrus crops.

Dr. Harry Mussman, administrator of the Federal Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in Washington, ordered the embargo at about 3 p.m. Friday.

"We have officers stationed at all the ports of entry. We work closely with Customs and Immigration," said Hall. Shipments by air or sea to other ports of entry also are prohibited.

Hall said agricultural authorities will turn away or seize and destroy any shipments of Mexican citrus at the border. He estimated an average of 250,000 pounds of Mexican citrus are imported each day through Texas.

He said U.S. agriculture officials in Mexico believe the disease is established in groves in that country's interior.

"Really the only treatment for it is to destroy the grove."

War on voter fraud declared

AUSTIN (AP) — State and federal investigators agreed Friday to join in a task force to investigate election fraud in Texas.

"We all know there are irregularities that occur with some frequency throughout the state," said Texas Secretary of State David Dean. "Combating those irregularities is a high priority item for all the participating agencies."

U.S. Attorney Dan Hedges of Houston said U.S. Attorney General William French Smith expressed interest in greater cooperation between state and federal investigators looking into election irregularities.

Dean said his office has received complaints about "numerous incidents" of vote fraud in Texas.

Careers rebuilt 10 years after Sharpstown scandal world to it again. Waggoner thinks he was caught up in politics and he may very well be right. He was only a bystander in the matters I looked into. Asked if he ever had any doubts about the validity of the Mutscher-Sharp bribery case, Smith said:

"I never had a question but that bribery was the intent of Mr. Sharp. I felt like Gus never did think of himself as having accepted a bribe.

Smith said it is difficult sometimes for people in public office to differentiate between campaign contributions for political favors and "taking money for the same thing."

Now, at age 59, does he see things differently? "I really don't feel like I had very many options. I don't feel like I was in complete control of my destiny. There was too much pressure... But I think what was done had to be done."

Looking back, Smith said the most "visible effect" of Sharpstown was that "it brought down Ben Barnes, who in my opinion was a very capable, upcoming young man."

Smith said he never uncovered a link between Barnes and Sharpstown and "I said so at the time, to the chagrin of a lot of people."

Smith recalled one grand jury in Austin with "some real bomb throwers on it... They were dedicated to indicting Ben Barnes just for being Ben Barnes."

For Barnes, the erstwhile underdog of Texas politics, Sharpstown was rarely a laughing matter. Few doubt that it cost him the governor's seat. More than a few claim it cost him the presidency.

ON A STEAMY, late spring morning, Ben Barnes and a companion sped through the lush greenery of the Texas hill country, bound for Austin.

"It's been a quick 10 years, hasn't it?" he observed, flashing the smile that won him millions of votes back in the champagne days before Sharpstown.

"I believed back then if I could shake enough hands I could overcome the Sharpstown scandal... But I was naive. It didn't work that way."

"I should have spent more money on media and a lot less on gasoline going to see the people."

Ten years ago, almost to the day, he was winding down a Democratic primary campaign for governor, a race once considered a perfunctory step to the mansion. And probably beyond.

"I never answered the charges of Sharpstown," he said over the hum of the air conditioner. "My public relations people and my polls showed that was not such a negative factor for me. They indicated I should ride the high road."

He wonders now if he should have met the Sharpstown issue head-on.

"I jumped on Smith during the campaign, but not because of Sharpstown," he said. "I jumped on him because I thought he was an ineffective governor."

"I don't think that Gus Mutscher was found guilty," he added. "I think state government was found guilty."

"I guess the thing that upsets me the most was that Frank Sharp was given immunity. He was the key figure and he never got anything but public embarrassment."

Barnes said it might have been different if Sharp's testimony had been used to ferret out some misdeeds.

"I don't think Sharp's testimony helped send anybody to jail or helped convict anybody," Barnes grumped. "His testimony didn't help convict Mutscher."

Barnes said what everyone suspected: Sharp was a lousy witness, who did little to incriminate Mutscher.

Mutscher would hardly argue. He told a Dallas reporter recently he was convicted of a crime he did not commit.

His losses included his wife, Donna, who as Donna Axum was a former Miss America.

"It was a political trial and a political movement that was taking place," said Mutscher, now Washington County judge in his hometown of Brenham.

Barnes, then 34, with Huckleberry Finnish good looks, was on a political roll, a veteran legislator, two-time House speaker and reigning lieutenant governor.

His only liability was pending marital strife and a roving eye that got him the nickname "Bedroom Ben."

Friends encouraged him to run for the U.S. Senate. Barnes' polls at the time showed him heavily favored over Ralph Yarborough, the ultra-liberal incumbent.

When I turned down the opportunity to run against

FRANK SHARP
Figured prominently

Yarborough in 1970, it was my polls that got Lloyd Bentsen in the race," Barnes recalled.

Bentsen beat Yarborough decisively. Two years later, Barnes was sinking in the quagmire of Sharpstown, though never officially accused of any wrongdoing.

"Not one single member of the SEC or the FBI or any grand jury investigator, or anybody representing the government, no one came to talk to me or take my deposition or ask for background material," he recalled.

"If there had been any evidence that I had done anything, I believe somebody would have come talked to me."

There is credible evidence to support Barnes' contention that he was a political target, probably No. 1 atop the GOP hit list.

Inter-office Justice Department memoranda acquired by the news media long after the scandal broke reveal that a former Texas Republican chairman encouraged Sharpstown investigators to tie Barnes to the bank-stock affair.

The memos show that Dr. George Willeford, the state GOP chairman in 1971, suggested a deal to get Barnes through John Osorio, an indicted Sharpstown figure.

One Justice Department memo quoted Willeford as saying that "you guys have been working hard and wouldn't it be nice if we could convince Osorio to bring Ben Barnes into the investigation."

Osorio, a former Texas insurance commissioner, told the AP that Justice Department attorneys tried to force him to implicate Barnes.

"They didn't mess around," he recalled. "They just flat told me if I didn't tell on Ben Barnes they'd indict me from El Paso to Texarkana."

"And they did. Thirty-nine charges. If I'd bought off Ben Barnes I would have told them so, but I didn't. They said... I was lying."

Osorio, president of Sharp's insurance company, was convicted of conspiracy and embezzlement and spent a brief time in prison.

"I wasn't guilty then, I'm not guilty now and I'm not going to be guilty when I go to my grave," said Osorio, now a Dallas investment consultant.

Barnes ran third behind Dolph Briscoe, later elected governor, and liberal activist Frances "Sissy" Farenthold. He left politics, plunged into the business world and amassed a fortune with his longtime benefactor, Brownwood contractor Herman Bennett.

"Getting beat was probably the best thing that ever happened to me," he said with a half-hearted grin.

As the car rolled into Austin, and toward a business meeting at the elegant Headliner Club, Barnes recalled that long ago Democratic "Victory Gala."

"It had been a pretty well kept secret," he said of the SEC investigation. "No one had told me about it at all."

There would be no winners, he worried. And he was right.

FOLLOWING THROUGH — Big Spring's Mark Slate lets fly a backhand return from the baseline Friday in a boy's 14s doubles match at the Figure Seven Tennis Center.

Lamesa LL quiets Burrow's big stick

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

LAMESA — It was truly unbelievable. Even the script experts in Hollywood couldn't have come up with a better ending.

Two dropped balls at the plate by American catcher Kevin Pirkle in the top of the sixth inning led to two Lamesa runs and allowed the home-standing all-stars to claim a 7-5 victory and the District III Little League All-Star Tournament championship.

The victory gave Lamesa a perfect 4-0 tournament record and sends the team into bi-district play, one step away from the 16-team tournament in Waco.

The loss was heartbreaking for American to say the least as the Big Spring all-stars had battled back valiantly from a 17-6 thrashing at the hands of Midland North Central Tuesday night. After falling into the loser's bracket, American had to win against Midland Mid-City, defending champion Texas and a rematch Friday night with North Central.

Saturday night had two heroes in the making for American. The first was pitcher Aaron Allen who came in the first inning to relieve starter Taff Wennik and tossed a two-hitter in six official innings.

The second hero could have been outfielder Matt Burrow. Burrow had spent most of the tournament on the bench but stepped up to the plate twice last night and belted two home runs.

As costly as Pirkle's mistakes were in the sixth, the two runs should have only tied the game. If Guinness was around, he might have put two additional American misfortunes into his book of records.

KEVIN PIRKLE
...RBI hit for American

The first involved Burrow. After slamming his pinch-hit homer to bring his team within 5-4, he never touched home plate. Lamesa alertly caught on and tagged the plate to negate one of the crucial runs. Mistake No. 1

Then came the fifth inning when Allen rapped a one-out single. When Lamesa left fielder Cedric Mason momentarily bobbled the ball, Allen went for two. He was thrown out. Up came Burrow again and the American outfielder lined another home run to left. Had Allen been on board, it could have been a two-run blast. Mistake No. 2.

Allen gave up two unearned runs after Lamesa scored four off Wennik in the first inning. Ted Smith had an RBI double, Johnnie Ellis an RBI single and Allen balked a runner home before Pirkle allowed a ball to get by him for a fourth run.

Allen then set down 10 straight before Brian Mayfield reached on an error in the fourth. Paul Lucio singled with two out to score him and give Lamesa 5-0 lead. That was before Burrow's heroics.

After American had tied the score 5-5 in the fifth on Burrow's second homer, American couldn't hold the fort.

David Scott singled to open the sixth, went to second on a bobble by Burrow in left and to third on a passed ball. With two out, Mason walked and stole second.

Up stepped Lucio and when he looked at ball four, Pirkle didn't. The ball got away from the American catcher but Pirkle's quickness made Scott turn around halfway home. He fell down but Pirkle was late nailing him at third. David Kilgore chased him home and tossed back to Pirkle. The American catcher dropped the ball and Scott was safe.

Meanwhile Mason kept touring the bases and caught the Big Spring battery dozing. He charged home and Pirkle missed getting him in a cloud of dust.

Mayfield was the winning pitcher, giving up six hits and five runs. He struck out 11 including the first nine

Highway 80 tournament brings two days of tennis

BSHS coach falls hard in finale

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

The Big Spring stop on the Highway 80 tennis tour was good for everyone involved, except local tennis coach Allan Holliday.

Tied 4-4 in his men's open singles championship match with Robert Montgomery, Holliday severely pulled a calf muscle and was forced to default the Friday match. Not only was the injury painful (Holliday was still out of commission Saturday) but the Big Spring High instructor had just rallied to tie the first set after trailing 4-1.

In the men's closed singles championship, Greg Brooks downed Ron Smelly to take the title.

Another default came up in the men's open doubles final where the team of Montgomery and Mike Boles defaulted to Aubrey Weaver and Richard Holliday. In the closed doubles final, Brooks and Steve Wilson teamed to defeat Griffith-Williams for the championship.

TOUCH ON THE BALL — Paul Prudhomme raps a backhand volley at the net in a singles match in the Highway 80 tournament this week at the Figure Seven Tennis Center.

The teams of Katy Grimes and Jean Prudhomme and Kathy Terrazus and Sharon Andrews advanced to the championship match of the women's closed doubles division and will play their title match Tuesday morning.

A default came up again in the mixed doubles final where Kim Madry and Dana Jones were named winners when Boles and Claudia Patterson defaulted the match.

In the boy's 17 singles final, Richard Holliday of Andrews downed Paul Prudhomme 6-4, 6-0 while Shannon Sullivan of Odessa rallied by Laura Schneider of Midland 6-2, 6-4. Schneider won the consolation bracket and then stung Sullivan 6-4, 6-4 to force a second match to determine the champion.

In the women's open singles final, Penny Prudhomme made the finals with a 5-7, 6-2, 7-6 victory over Becky Miller but lost to Marcy Nichols in the championship match, 6-1, 6-2.

NFL all-star tilt now? Owners-players talks bring up possibility

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association is exploring the possibility of staging its own all-star games on cable television if the owners lock out the players union.

"We feel that, legally, the minute the players are locked out they can go to work where they please because the owners are refusing to pay them," said a union source, who requested anonymity.

He said if the union gets a cable contract, there would be a game-of-the-week with the players representing the four NFL divisions.

The comments came Friday after two days of negotiating between representatives of the association and the NFL Management Council.

The negotiations opened Thursday in the wake of a report that a majority of the NFL owners support locking out the players union just before the Sept. 12 start of the regular season unless contract negotiations improve dramatically.

The Washington Post said a league-wide lockout is becoming increasingly more appealing to the owners, who want to deny the union the leverage of calling a strike once the season begins.

ED GARVEY
...talks gain very little

In another development, however, the union threatened to take a "job action," possibly a strike, during the current training-camp period to prove to management that the union is unified.

Mark Murphy of the Washington Redskins, a member of the union's executive and bargaining committees, said Jack Donlan, the Management Council's executive director, has "publicly admitted they're going to test the union's strength on Sept. 8. Between now and then it is incumbent on us to show that we are strong."

Ed Garvey, the union's executive director, added: "We have to show some solidarity in camp to show we're serious." Garvey declined to say what action the union might take.

In 1974, the union unsuccessfully struck during training camp. The clubs countered by holding pre-season exhibition games with rookies, free agents and veterans who crossed the picket lines.

As an indication of the lack of progress made in the two days of hearings, Donlan said the only item agreed on by the two sides was that there would be meetings in New York next Tuesday and Wednesday.

A few minutes later, Garvey said that was wrong. "We'll meet here," he said. "We told them the active players need a place to work out, and they told them to go to Central Park."

Donlan described Friday's session as "less than acrimonious," and Garvey said, "We made no progress whatsoever."

Writer's radio debut something to talk about

Things that generally don't mix — cats and dogs, oil and water, stuffed wallets and inflation, Liberals and Conservatives. Just toss those elements together and the resulting bad weather is wilder than a West Texas evening thunderstorm.

Then there are newspaper folks and radio folks. Put those two in a tight pressbox and it's like similar ends of two magnets meeting. Verbal warfare, if it's a minor skirmish. Fisticuffs, if things get out of hand.

Philip Ashby, a staff writer now in Abilene, reports that radio broadcasters and newswriters in Vernon fight like inlaws. The case is true in many cities but, fortunately, not in Big Spring.

Christian B. Showalter, the morning voice of KBST, recently asked this writer to do the "color" portion of Little League all-star tournament games. Figuring that two of Big Spring's great sports minds would be a treat for the listener, "CBS" was taking a bigger risk than he might have thought.

If this writer was good at speaking under the heat of a microphone, he would have been a speech communication major instead of journalism. And sure enough, when CBS launched his first question, the scribe responded with, "(silence)...uhm...well...uh... (more silence)" as the veteran sports announcer flailed his hands in a signal that meant "say something, you dummy, we're on the air."

After that stunning debut, the writer settled down and actually began enjoying wearing those blasted headsets that make your ears perspire (the sweat runs down and fills the aural canal, making it a mini Venice).

When the District III tourney started in Lamesa, the writer and the play-by-play man decided to share rides. That would cut down on gas expense and make our respective bosses happy. We usually talked sports or music and fired up for our nightly forays on the airways.

CBS's confidence in the writer grew. The writer knew he was progressing when he was allowed to do the station identification: "It's 10 o'clock...this is KBST...Big Spring." Just like Kasey Kasum.

Then came the big break. CBS was hit with a mid-tourney sinus attack one night and in between pitches, had to turn off his volume and gasp for air. That left a lot of potential "dead air" but the writer stepped right in to fill the voids.

"Okay, Stephen Gonzales is off the mound to tie his shoe. Now he's wiping his glasses clean. Those are important things for a pitcher if he's going to pitch a good game," sputtered the writer, much to the delight of the listening audience. Oral brilliance.

It's really tough for a journalist to ramble on and on. Sports announcers learn to keep talking between plays. Journalists are taught to be terse and to the point. So when CBS leads, "That was some kind of strange inning, Greg," it is only natural the writer would follow with, "Yes it was, Chris."

Lamesa KPET has home rights to Saturday's broadcast and KBST had to take a feed for the championship game. That left CBS at home and the writer by himself in the box. It was then that the fun of it all hit.

Showalter is not the KBST sports director but does a morning show among other duties. He does try to keep up on sports and his broadcasts — such as the Little League tourney — are much of his own doing. He's not bad at play-by-play and hopes someday to broadcast major sports like baseball in a major market.

All good things must come to an end and when American lost Saturday night, so did the summer broadcasts. The team of Showalter and Jaklewicz (sounds like law firm or brokerage house) may now be history unless future sports summon them out of retirement.

And so from the receding waters of Lake Lamesa, this is Greg Jaklewicz for Chris Showalter, saying, "For this time, until next time, have a good time."

Not bad, eh?

Tigers trip Texas, 3-1

DETROIT (AP) — A brief trip to the minor leagues has eased some of the first-year jitters for Detroit Tigers pitcher Larry Pashnick.

"I'm a little less nervous this time around," the 26-year-old Michigan State University product said after pitching his first major-league complete game to beat the Texas Rangers 3-1 Saturday.

"I decided that my staying up here wasn't in my hands, so why worry about it?" Pashnick said. "Being nervous is no way to play this game. There's enough pressure without creating your own."

Pashnick's victory raised his record to 2-3. He was sent to the Tigers' Evansville farm club on June 17 and recalled July 6.

Pashnick gave up five hits in the first two innings and scattered nine in the game, but walked only two. Texas had runners on base in each of the first six innings, but Pashnick retired 10 of the last 11 men he faced.

"I felt more of a rhythm late in the game," Pashnick said. "Sure, I was worried when they hit me early, but I had good defense behind me. Those two DP's (double plays) helped a lot."

Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson was unhappy with only one facet of Pashnick's performance, a two-out walk in the ninth to pinch-hitter John Grubb.

"He walked the one guy you can't walk," Anderson said. "You just give him a high fastball. You don't want the tying run to come to the plate."

Blue Jays 8, White Sox 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Hosken Powell's tie-breaking, two-run single in the sixth inning and Jesse Barfield's three-run pinch homer in the eighth carried the Toronto Blue Jays to an 8-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

Losers Dennis Lamp, 7-5, was sailing along with a two-hitter but ran into trouble in the sixth inning when

American League

Toronto scored four runs after two were out.

Orioles 5, A's 4

BALTIMORE (AP) — Rookie Floyd Rayford, the last man left on the bench, led off the 13th inning with his third homer of the season to lift the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-4 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday.

Rayford's homer off Bob Owchinko, 1-2, came on a 3-2 pitch and after Baltimore interim manager Cal Ripken Sr., running the club during Earl Weaver's one-week suspension, had used every player on the roster except pitchers.

Tippy Martinez, 4-4, earned the victory by holding the A's hitless in the top of the 13th.

Baltimore sent the game into extra innings with a run in the ninth off reliever Dave Beard. Pinch hitter Jim Dwyer led off with a walk and moved to third on a pair of grounders. Al Bumbry then singled to score Dwyer.

Yankees 6, Angels 5

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Mumphrey's second home run in two nights broke a 5-5 tie with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning as the New York Yankees edged the California Angels 6-5 Saturday night.

After Willie Randolph struck out leading off the ninth, Mumphrey smacked the second pitch from reliever Bruce Kison, 6-4, into the right-field seats for his third homer of the season.

Rudy May, 3-3, pitched the last four innings for the Yankees, giving up five hits and one unearned run, while walking two and striking out three.

Brewers 7, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Cecil Cooper hit a home run and a single, driving in three runs and powering the Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-4 victory Saturday night over the Kansas City Royals.

Robin Yount tripled in the first inning off loser Derek Botelho, 1-1, and Cooper followed with a two-run homer, his 20th.

Willie Wilson tripled leading off the Kansas City first off Pete Vuckovich, 11-4, and made it 2-1 on U.L. Washington's sacrifice fly.

Twins 5, Red Sox 3

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Rookie reserve shortstop Lenny Faedo slammed a two-run homer and Gary Ward hit a run-scoring double during Minnesota's three-run seventh inning, carrying the Twins to a 5-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Faedo hit his second homer of the year off reliever Bob Stanley, 7-3, following a leadoff single in the seventh by Sal Butera.

One out later, Randy Bush doubled and came home on Ward's two-out double for a 4-2 Minnesota lead and the Twins' eventual winning run.

Mariners 9, Indians 0

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rookie Mike Moore hurled his first complete game in the majors with a four-hitter and Bobby Brown's two-run homer keyed a 17-hit attack as the Seattle Mariners routed the Cleveland Indians 9-0 Saturday night.

Moore, 5-7, pitched out of jams in the first and fourth innings.

Len Barker, 10-6, yielded Seattle's first seven runs.

Julio Cruz led off the first for Seattle with an infield hit and scored one out later when Brown lined his third home run over the right field fence. The Mariners added another run in the inning on an RBI single by Rick Sweet.

BACK IN TIME — Houston Astro Dickie Thon dives back to first base before St. Louis Cardinals first baseman Keith Hernandez can put the tag on him during Saturday's game in St. Louis. Bob Forsch had thrown to Hernandez on the play. Thon was later thrown out at second base as he tried to steal. St. Louis won the game, 5-1.

North All-Stars top South, 7-0

HOUSTON (AP) — The North's Earl Johnson practiced all week in the shadow of the South's Anthony Byerly.

But Johnson, from Dallas Thomas Jefferson, played in the spotlight Friday night, keying a fourth-quarter drive and scoring the winning touchdown on a five-yard run to lead the North to a 7-0 victory over the South in the Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star football game in the Astrodome.

Johnson, named the North's most valuable player, gained 34 yards on four carries in the winning drive and scored the winning points with 7:11 left in the game.

"I think the truth on E. Johnson is coming out," said Johnson, whose high school teams won only nine games in three years. "At first I was apprehensive about what to think, but I knew I could do it."

Johnson's touchdown sprint took the hero's role away from Kerrville Tivy's John Telschick, who booted a record 46-yard field goal that gave the South a 3-0 halftime lead.

Byerly, of Newton, came into the game as the most publicized running back in the 48th annual all-star game, having finished his schoolboy career with 6,598 rushing yards.

"I think I did pretty well," Byerly said. "It will just take some time to adjust to this level. Timing was the biggest stumbling block."

Byerly led the South rushers with 46 yards on 12 carries but never was able to break open the game. Byerly and Johnson will continue their rivalry next season when Byerly attends the University of Texas and Johnson goes to Oklahoma.

Linebacker Ty Allert of Houston Northbrook won the most valuable player honors for the South.

Telschick's field goal broke the record of 37 yards set in 1971 by Austin's Mickey Mocaluso.

Johnson, 5-11, 185, was Dallas' leading schoolboy rusher last season with 1,462 yards, accounting for 7 percent of his team's total offense.

The South had apparently taken a lead early in the first quarter when quarterback Tom Muecke, who will attend Baylor, faked to Hawkins and raced 79 yards to the end zone but a clipping penalty wiped out the running gem.

"We just couldn't seem to get going after the clip," Byerly said.

Cards deck Astros, 5-1

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mike Ramsey drove in two runs, and Tito Landrum had an RBI in St. Louis' four-run fourth inning, boosting the Cardinals to a 5-1 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday.

Right-hander Bob Forsch, 10-5, scattered 10 hits over 7 1/3 innings and pitched St. Louis to its third straight victory, getting relief help from Jim Kaat and Bruce Sutter.

Assisted by five walks, the Cards made the most of five hits, all off Bob Knepper, 4-11, who left after four innings.

Ozzie Smith singled and stole second to start the third inning. He went to third on Forsch's sacrifice and scored on Tommy Herr's sacrifice fly to give St. Louis a 1-0 lead.

George Hendrick and Gene Tenace each singled with one out in the Cards' fourth. Landrum singled home Hendrick, with Tenace stopping at third, and Ramsey followed with a two-run single to center.

Ramsey took second on the throw to cutoff man Art Howe and went to third when Howe's throw was wild. Smith then hit a sacrifice fly to cap the inning.

Forsch surrendered Houston's only run in the fifth. Dickie Thon doubled after two were out and made it home on Terry Puhl's single.

Giants 5, Expos 2

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rookie left-hander Atee Hammaker pitched a six-hitter, surviving solo homers by Al Oliver and Tim Wallach, as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Montreal Expos 5-2 Saturday.

San Francisco tagged loser David Palmer, 5-3, for two runs in the first inning. Joe Morgan singled with one out, and Chili Davis was hit by a pitch. The runners advanced on Jack Clark's grounder, and Darrell Evans' bloop single to left scored them both.

National League

Hammaker, 8-5, blanked the Expos on three hits until Oliver and Wallach connected in the seventh inning.

The Giants added one unearned run in the sixth and two more in the ninth.

Reds 5, Cubs 2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Johnny Bench hit a two-run homer and the Cincinnati Reds survived a late threat to outlast the Chicago Cubs 5-2 Saturday night and snap a seven-game losing streak.

Bench's home run, in the first inning, was his second in two nights.

Frank Pastore, 5-7, had allowed only one runner to reach third base until the Cubs scored two runs with two outs in the seventh. Reliever Joe Price cooled off the Cubs, gaining his first save.

In the bottom of the first, Tom Lawless walked, stole second, moved to third on a grounder and scored on Dan Driessen's infield hit for the Reds' first run. Bench followed with his homer for a 3-0 edge.

Cincinnati made it 5-0 in the third off Doug Bird, 6-10, on an RBI double by Paul Householder and run-scoring single by Alex Trevino.

In the top of the seventh with two outs, Scot Thompson walked and scored on Ryne Sandberg's double. Junior Kennedy then drove in Sandberg with a single that knocked out Pastore.

Braves 4, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Chris Chambliss singled home two runs to highlight a four-run seventh inning that rallied the Atlanta Braves to a 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday night.

After failing to score in 28 straight innings, the Braves batted around in the seventh to overcome a 2-0 Pittsburgh lead. Bob Horner, Bob Porter and Bruce Benedict each singled for the first Atlanta run.

With two outs, Pirate starter Don Robinson, 10-5, delivered his third wild pitch of the game, putting runners at second and third. After Claudell Washington was intentionally walked, Rafael Ramirez walked on four straight pitches to force in the tying run.

Chambliss followed with a single off reliever Rod Scurry past a diving Bill Madlock at third base.

Pittsburgh took a 2-0 lead in the third off winner Phil Niekro, 9-3, and added a run in the seventh off reliever Gene Garber, who got his 18th save.

Mets 4, Padres 3

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bob Bailor's surprise two-out bunt single in the ninth inning brought home Hubie Brooks from third base with the winning run Saturday night as the New York Mets rallied for a 4-3 victory over the San Diego Padres.

The Mets trailed 3-2 entering the ninth when John Stearns led off with a double to chase Padre starter Chris Welsh. Luis DeLeon, 3-3, came on and surrendered an infield single to Brooks to put runners at first and third, then yielded a pinch-double to Rusty Staub that tied the score 3-3.

After the third San Diego pitcher in the inning, Gary Lucas, got pinch-hitter Joel Youngblood to ground out and struck out Mookie Wilson, Bailor dumped his bunt to the left of the mound and beyond reach of the left-handed Lucas. Second baseman Tim Flannery threw late to first as Brooks crossed the plate with the Mets' winning run.

Lendl tops local boy at D.C.s

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia beat local favorite Rodney Harmon 6-1, 6-1 Saturday night to advance to the semifinals of the $240,000 D.C. National Bank Tennis Classic.

In a match to determine the final participant in the semifinals, 17-year-old Jimmy Arias of Grand Island, N.Y., defeated Eric Fromm of Long Island, N.Y., 7-6, 6-3.

Arias will meet Argentina's Jose Luis Clerc in one half of Sunday's semifinal matchups with No. 4 seed Yannick Noah crushed American Van Wittsky 6-0, 6-3.

Lendl, proved too stern a test, however, as he used his forehand groundstrokes to pass the on-rushing Harmon.

Peete leads Busch field by 2

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Cal Peete composed another no-bogey round, this one a 68, and established a two-stroke lead Saturday in the storm-delayed completion of the second round of the $350,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Peete, who has not made a bogey for the tournament, completed 36 holes in 134, eight shots under par.

He was among the 90 players who were stranded on the Kingsmill Golf Club course Friday by a series of thunderstorms which disrupted play and reduced the tournament format from 72 holes to 54.

The tournament will be completed with a single round Sunday. The full tournament purse will be paid even though the sponsors had the option of reducing it by 25 percent.

"That's great," Peete said. "I thank the sponsors for coming up with the idea."

Bill Rogers, one of the men tied for second at 136, was less enthusiastic about the shorter tournament format.

"You're geared for the word go for a 72-hole tournament," Rogers said. "It's a different feeling, a little weird, knowing it's only a three-round tournament."

"But it's nice to know that I'm going into the third round with a good chance of winning the tournament. With a good round, I can put some pressure on the guy in front."

"Calvin hasn't had a bogey yet? That's unbelievable on this golf course. He might be due."

Rogers, the 1981 Player of the Year, had a second-round 70 and was tied at 136 with Rik Massengale, who finished off with a 68.

Tied at 137 were Hal Sutton and Payne Stewart, a winner last week in the Quad Cities Open. Sutton had a 69, Stewart 68.

The group at 138 included Lee Elder, who finished off a 66 before the rains came Friday, David Edwards, Dan Pohl and Doug Black. Edwards shot a 70, Pohl and Black 66.

Defending champion John Mahaffey could do no better than a par 71 and was at 139. First-round leader Bruce Lietzke blew to a 74 and was six strokes off the pace at 140.

Peete, who didn't join the tour until the relatively advanced age of 33, has won twice in the last three seasons and is noted among his peers as one of the game's more accurate players.

But he had some difficulties this hot, humid day.

"This was a little more exciting. I had it in some unusual places — the high grass," Peete said.

He managed to avoid a bogey, however, but had to sink a 25-footer to save par on the eighth hole.

He scored from 18 feet on the next hole and got his other two birdies on approach shots that left him within three feet of the flag.

Chinese tennis star vanishes

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (P) — The U.S. State Department confirmed Saturday that it is investigating the disappearance of China's top woman tennis player who vanished here during the Federation Cup matches.

An anonymous caller said Hu Na would seek political asylum.

"Everything is on an official basis now," said International Tennis Federation Secretary David Gray. "The captain of the Chinese team asked us to put their consul in touch with the U.S. State Department a few days ago and it's in their hands."

State Department officials in Washington, who asked not to be identified, said they did not know where Ms. Hu was nor whether she was seeking asylum. They confirmed that they are investigating her disappearance.

The 19-year-old Ms. Hu, who vanished Wednesday, led her team Monday night to an upset victory over Japan in the first round of the 52-nation Federation Cup.

Federation officials said they believed the Chinese coach and women's team, which was eliminated in the second round of the tournament by West Germany, flew back to Peking on Saturday, but they could not confirm that.

Gray said the general manager's office of the Marriott Hotel serving as Federation Cup headquarters received an anonymous telephone call Wednesday from someone who claimed to be an attorney harboring the player.

"The caller said the girl is safe and wants to seek political asylum," Gray said. "The coach was terribly worried. He didn't know where (Ms. Hu) was."

Wes Merhige, the general manager, said Saturday he could not confirm whether such a call was received.

"Aside from that anonymous call, we have no clue as to where she might be," Gray said. "Nobody can discount the possibility of some sort of strange abduction or kidnapping, although that probably is not likely."

"She went to bed on Tuesday night and she told her roommate she was going to read," Gray said. "Apparently she didn't get undressed and she left the hotel. The next day when her roommate woke up, there was no Hu Na."

Ms. Hu, a 5-foot-8 player from Szechuan, is considered to have world-class potential. She won a tournament in Mexico last year and was the only woman selected to accompany a men's team to the U.S. two years ago.

"It's very disturbing," Gray said. "The Chinese worked very hard at their tennis to produce players of championship caliber. There were many signs of progress, then they lose their best player."

"This could stop the Chinese program. It could put them back five years," Gray said.

When Martina Navratilova, the world's top-ranked player, defected from Czechoslovakia in 1975, "it took the Czechs a year or two to recover," Gray said.

In an interview after her impressive singles and doubles victories against Japan, Ms. Hu talked about how she began playing tennis at the age of 9. Ms. Hu spoke through an interpreter.

She said her grandfather played tennis in college, and he and an aunt taught her the game.

Paradez powers American Friday

outs of the game.

American advanced to the championship game thanks to a one-man show by Joe Louis Paradez Friday night. Paradez rapped four hits including a three-run home run and fired a four-hitter as American destroyed Midland North Central 11-2.

Saturday night.

It sweet revenge for manager Jerry Robinson and his troops the night before as American made up for a poor showing in a 17-6 loss to North Central three nights before.

The last remaining Midland team hadn't seen the likes of Paradez, however, and the big 12-year-old made sure his opponents will remember him for years to come.

At the plate, he connected for two doubles and single to drive in one run as American raced to a 7-2 lead. After David Kilgore drove in a run in the sixth, Paradez followed with a blast to center field the accounted for three more runs and sealed the victory for the Big Spring all-stars.

Meanwhile, on the mound, Paradez was tough on North Central — keeping the ball down and mixing up his good fastball and tailing curve. He allowed just four hits, struck out seven and walked five. The two runs scored against him in the fifth inning were unearned.

American scored seven runs in the second as North Central starter Rick Starek dug his own grave. Allen led off with a double and when Brent Hartfield tried to sacrifice him to third, Starek threw the ball away at first letting Allen score.

He played Leslie Robinson's grounder okay but then threw away another slow roller by John Montgomery to let in another run. Then he hit Burr Settle with a pitch and that was enough to get the American bats going.

Pirkle singled in Montgomery,

Paradez singled in Settles and Stephen Gonzales doubled to send home two more runs. He scored on an error and suddenly it was 7-0.

American didn't score again until the sixth but had its chances. A great double-play by Midland amazing shortstop Dudley Jordan killed one rally in the fourth and Paradez was nailed at the plate trying to score in the fifth by catcher Geoff Rich.

Starek left the game in the fifth and was replaced by Randy Milby, the winning pitcher Tuesday night. American tagged him for all four sixth inning runs.

The only Midland runs came in the fifth as Sonny Dykes and Jordan both scored on passed balls.

The game was marred by an injury to Dykes in the sixth. Trying to leap and catch Paradez's drive to center, the Midland center fielder got hung up on the fence and fell on his neck. He had to leave the game but his injuries were not thought to be serious.

Landry has good vibes on rookies

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys head coach Tom Landry said Friday he was pleased with the crop of rookies and free agents he has seen thus far in training camp here.

"We have potential here," Landry said. "I don't know if there is an Everson Walls or a Mike Downs in this group, but so far I like what I've seen, particularly from our top five draft choices."

Walls and Downs were rookies last year who became defensive starters.

The Cowboys' rookies will scrimmage against rookies from the Los Angeles Rams here Saturday. Free agent Brad Wright will start at quarterback for the Cowboys.

Sidelined by injuries are veteran defensive lineman Don Smerek, achilles tendon; linebacker Jim Eliopoulos; punter Tom Striegel, tendinitis; center Greg Benefield, hamstring pull; linebacker Todd Lacy, Charley horse; tackle Craig Opatz, twisted knee; defensive tackle Scott Settelund, knee; and defensive tackle Joe Gary, stomach cramps.

AUTUMN SPENCER AND HER WEIGHTS ...trying to compete with the bigger girls on the block

Autumn and weighty matters

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

What does a 19-year-old North Carolina native, studying to be a dental hygienist in Big Spring, do in her spare time? Pump iron at the local muscle hut, of course.

That's just the beginning of the story for Autumn Spencer. She was in El Paso Saturday competing in the Third Annual Mr. and Ms. Physique Southwest contest — flexing, posing and generally trying to look the "macho-est" among the other female contestants.

The competition is the fourth she's entered in the 12 months she has been lifting weights more than just for fun. She competed twice in Dallas but was most successful earlier this month in Odessa where she won trophies for fourth place overall, best pose and best legs.

But this is no beauty contest. It's hard work to develop a good physique, especially when you're a female.

"I work out at the Bodycentre six days a week," Autumn explains. "I divide my work-out into three parts and do each part twice a week — my chest and shoulders, my back and arms and my legs."

"I work on my stomach every day when it's close to contest time," she continues. "The work-outs are about an hour and a half."

The interest in weights come from her father who built a complete gym piece by piece in 20 years. All the kids used the weights but it was only three years ago that Autumn began pumping seriously.

"It's a good way to stay in shape...and you don't have to look like a man, either," she says. The 5-2, 105-pounder isn't too worried about looking like a male since overcoming her size disadvantage is her prime concern.

"Especially in my upper body," she smiles. "There are a lot of girls that you can't see their collarbone." She always had good size in her legs (weighting as much as 137 pounds in 10th grade when she was really into squats) but has worked to slim up there and build up in her chest and shoulder area.

What's the reaction to her muscled-up figure?

"Most people are good about it...on the streets I get a lot of looks," she laughs. "I want to look good but not be as built like a lot of the other girls."

Autumn met her husband, a Big Spring resident, at Fort Bragg, N.C., at a karate class and the couple moved to Texas. He is more into running than weightlifting but approves of his wife's appearance. "Yeah, he really likes it," Autumn says.

Now Autumn hopes the contest judges will do the same.

USFL New York entry told to change name

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP)—Even before New York's team in the fledgling United States Football League signed its first player, it was thrown for a loss—by its landlord.

The team will be known as the New Jersey Generals.

When part-owner Chuck Fairbanks was introduced last June 2 as head coach and president, he said emphatically that the franchise would be a New York team, regardless of where it played.

The authority — political appointees — was severely criticized by New Jersey residents when it allowed the National Football League's New York Giants to move in without changing its name.

In the New York-New Jersey area, only the 76,000-seat Giants Stadium, within sight of the Manhattan skyline, could realistically house the new team.

Yankee Stadium and Shea Stadium, both in New York City, each is used by a baseball team, presenting a serious conflict in the availability of playing dates during March, July, when the USFL will play its 20-game regular season.

Fairbanks said even though the team has adopted a New Jersey identity, it will not rely on local college talent from Rutgers and Princeton.

"This metropolitan area is so professional sports oriented we don't feel that in our location a territorial-type identification will add as much as it would in Birmingham, where Alabama players would be a draw to local people. That's not significant here," Fairbanks said.

Instead, Fairbanks said he hopes to attract football-starved fans who have been unable for years to buy season tickets to sold-out Giants games.

The new team is the fifth professional sports franchise at the Meadowlands sports complex, which opened in 1976. Besides the Generals and Giants, the complex hosts the Cosmos of the North American Soccer League (which uses neither New York nor New Jersey as part of its name), the New Jersey Nets of the National Basketball Association and the National Hockey League's New Jersey Devils, formerly the Colorado Rockies.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day for pleasing others and letting them know how fond you are of them. The evening could bring unexpected changes that require tact and self-control. Show patience.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Ideal day to put your finest points across to others, but be sure not to argue. Smile more and get excellent results. Be wary.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Study your immediate surroundings and make plans for improvement. You can easily gain a most cherished aim now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good time to attend the services of your choice and express love for others. Avoid the social in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make plans to have more abundance in the future. Consult an influential person for the advice you need.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Ideal day to do the things that you enjoy doing the most. Take time to visit a relative you haven't seen in a long time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can concentrate and make the right decisions during the early part of the day. Home is the best place to be tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Being with good friends today can bring forth many new ideas and could result in mutual benefits in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you confer with a business adviser, you can obtain the information you need. Plan how to improve your image.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Avoid arguments with family members and maintain harmony at home. Make a fine impression on neighbors.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Your horizons are good during the early part of the day. Make sure you do nothing to hurt an innocent person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Listening to the suggestions of others can be most helpful now, but steer clear of a troublemaker. Be kind.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) A day when you can easily gain your personal aims. Study your property well and make plans for needed repairs.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will require much love and affection in order to best express the personality. There could be much fame in the child, particularly in the field of politics and entertainment. Give as fine an education as you can afford.

The Stars impel, they do not compel. What you make of your life is largely up to you!

NANCY

THE TROUBLE WITH YOU IS THAT YOU'RE ALWAYS TOO PRACTICAL. BAW-W YOU'RE ALWAYS SAYING THAT.

AS LONG AS I'M CRYING, I MIGHT AS WELL WASH MY HANDS AND SAVE WATER.

BLONDIE

YOU KNOW WHAT YOUR PROBLEM IS, COOKIE? NO, WHAT?

YOU ALWAYS THROW THE BLAME FOR THINGS ON OTHER PEOPLE. NO, I DON'T, YOU DO!

IS PROPERTY SELLING? That's a question we are asked almost every day. Frankly, the way a property "moves" depends a lot on how it is handled. For this reason, when you are selling, we suggest that you give us a call. We are old enough to be experienced, young enough to be aggressive, large enough to be efficient, and small enough to be personalized. For more information and professional market analysis, call the Home Real Estate professionals at 263-4663.

It's Boom-Boom!

Mancini defends WBA title

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini retained his World Boxing Association lightweight championship before a hometown crowd Saturday, stopping No.1-ranked contender Ernesto Espana as the bell ending the sixth round was ringing.

Mancini, 21, unleashed a furious combination of punches during the final seconds of round six before referee Stanley Cristodoulo stepped in front of Espana, apparently seconds after the bell ending the round had sounded.

Cheering from the partisan fans as Mancini unleashed his final blows made the bell nearly inaudible. Cristodoulo said he did not hear the bell, but added, "The fight was over."

The victory improved Mancini's record to 24-1, while Espana, a 27-year-old Venezuelan who held the title in 1979-80, dropped to 34-5.

The first round was fairly even, with the lanky, 5-foot-10 Espana trading left jabs with Mancini, who is four inches shorter.

Mancini appeared to take control during the third round, opening with a three-punch combination that sent Espana to the ropes. But Espana, a native of nearby Youngstown, did not unleash the relentless attack that earned him his nickname until he flew out of the corner to start the fifth round, hitting the challenger with a left-right-left combination.

The champion again rushed out of his corner at the start of the sixth, but was forced to wait several seconds while Espana's corner cleared some water from the canvas.

Espana, however, appeared to be laboring in the late-afternoon sun as temperatures hovered in the mid-80s at Warren Harding High School's Mollenkopf Stadium.

RAY "BOOM-BOOM" MANCINI celebrates after stopping Espana in the sixth round.

Mancini pursued Espana, who was against the ropes for much of the round, before Mancini released the series of punches that ended the bout.

It was Mancini's first defense of the title he won May 8 with a first-round knockout of Arturo Frias.

The official time for the end of the fight was 2:59 of the sixth round in the scheduled 15-round bout. Mancini weighed in at 135 pounds, with Espana at 133½.

Scottish boys experience American lifestyle

Big Spring welcomed Scottish visitors this past week. Andrew Tefler, 15, and Douglas Hawthorn, 17, both of Aberdeen, Scotland, were here for the first part of a trip to West Texas and New Mexico. Sponsored by the Rotary Club in Aberdeen, Scotland, they will stay with families of Rotary members and at a Rotary Club camp.

The young men applied for the trip while at school in Scotland. Only two would be chosen of the many who applied. Andrew and Douglas, after going through two interviews, were the lucky two chosen.

"I was really pleased," Douglas said. "It took a while to sink in, but I was really pleased."

Andrew also "was surprised and pleased." He was at a youth club committee meeting when the news came. "When I got home, I phoned them back so they could break the news to me personally."

BAG PIPE ENTHUSIAST — Andrew Tefler of Aberdeen, Scotland visited the Spring City last week as part of his tour to three Texas cities and a Rotary Club camp in Tres Rios, N.M. Andrew is a member of a pipe band in Aberdeen and played the bag pipes during a recent church service.

Neither of the boys have been to the United States before. Andrew had visited Switzerland once with the Scouts, but this trip is Douglas' first abroad.

Expenses for the trip are being paid by the Rotary Club in Aberdeen. The duo's main objectives are to attend the Rotary Youth Leadership Camp in Tres Rios, N.M., and to learn what American life is like by staying with families in three cities.

John Taylor, a past district governor of Rotary Clubs in West Texas who now resides in Aberdeen, Scotland, was their contact in Aberdeen. He made the trip possible for the two.

DOUGLAS SAID TEXAS is "not at all like 'J.R.'" He said he is impressed with the friendliness and helpfulness of people and with people taking the time to show them around. "That will always stick in my mind," he said.

"One of my friends had just gotten back from America before we left and commented on how friendly the people were," Andrew added.

The "first noticeable difference" between life in Scotland and America was the accents, they said. Andrew has even noticed the difference in accents within a city. "Americans speak slower than Scottish people."

The clothing styles are basically the same. "We don't wear 'Stetsons' or baseball caps... We wear 'Wranglers,'" Douglas said.

Scotland is hillier, damper and greener than the Big Spring area. And cooler. "It's hot. When we walked out of the airport in Dallas, we walked back in," they both said. "When I heard countries had 100-degree weather, I thought it was hot. Now I've felt how hot it really is," Douglas said. They said a temperature of more than 68 degrees Fahrenheit is a hot day in Scotland.

Having been to the United States and Texas only a week, the pair haven't adjusted to the climate totally. Swimming (in an outdoor pool, something not seen in Scotland), water skiing, and staying in air-conditioned rooms helps them keep cool.

The two young men have been touring many local industries and a ranch, learning about the American way of life. They've been careful not to get sunburned.

DOUGLAS NOTICED the flatness of Big Spring as compared to his native country. "I find it hard to believe it will be flatter in Lubbock or Amarillo," he said. "Your roads are very straight. Hardly any like that at all in Scotland. Zilcho."

"Roads are a lot wider and cars are bigger," Andrew said. In Scotland motorists drive on the left side rather than on the right.

"They don't drink ice tea in Scotland," Douglas said. "They drink hot tea with milk or without milk in it," Andrew added.

"We are going to a rodeo tonight (Wednesday). We are looking forward to that. We don't have rodeos in Scotland," Douglas said. Other new experiences for the visitors have included watching a baseball game, touring industries and a ranch, waterskiing, tasting "real Texas barbecue" and Mexican food, playing basketball at the YMCA, seeing buffaloes and longhorn steer for the first time and attending Six Flags Over Texas Thursday.

At camp they will participate in many sporting activities and learn youth leadership skills. One of the camp speakers will be a security man that helped protect Reagan during the assassination attempt.

TOURING — Tina Steffen, Lifestyle editor at the Big Spring Herald (left), describes the new computerized process being used at the Herald to pizza Tefler, center.

Douglas likes spicy foods. He ordered a pizza in Midland for himself to eat and didn't realize how large it would be before ordering it. Apparently he had a difficult time eating it all.

The two say they are grateful for the opportunity to stay with American families on their trip. They believe they wouldn't have had the opportunities to visit the area as well otherwise. "We've been able to do things most people in Big Spring don't have the opportunities to see, like some of the plants (industrial plants)," Douglas said.

WHAT HAVE THEY enjoyed the best about their stay? "Everything!" Andrew said. He especially noted the niceness of people. One of Douglas' favorite things is seeing the clear blue skies. He says it is cloudier in Scotland and he doesn't get to see clear blue skies often. They least like the "bugs — the beasties" and the heat. According to Douglas, they have different types of bugs in Scotland.

Andrew is the middle child in his family. He has an older and younger sister and the three of them play musical instruments. Andrew is a member of a pipe band (bag pipes) in Aberdeen. Last Sunday, he played his bag pipes during a worship service at First Christian Church. He enjoys playing basketball and golf and has had a "craze" for playing tennis ever since Wimbledon. Andrew attends school and has a part-time job selling cream. His father is a college principal and his mother is a housewife. Andrew stayed with the Troy Fraser family while in Big Spring.

Douglas is from a family of boys. He has three brothers. His father is a lecturer at a college in Aberdeen and vice president of the Scottish Amateur Swimming Association. His mother is a primary school teacher. (Primary school has grades first through seventh). Douglas enjoys competitive swimming, rugby, mountaineering and many other sports. He stayed with the Victor Sedingier family during his stay here.

The young men will visit Lubbock, Amarillo and Tres Rios, N.M., for a week's stay in each during the remainder of their trip. They left Friday for Lubbock.

TESTING THE WATER — Douglas Hawthorn, above, says there are few, if any, outdoor swimming pools in his native country of Scotland. Douglas, also of Aberdeen, enjoys competitive swimming. He is learning much about the American way of life during his month long trip to the United States.

By RHONDA WOODALL, Lifestyle Writer

Hazel Duggan enjoys volunteering her time to several organizations. She does work for the First United Methodist Church, is a member of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program and helps with Mobile Meals.

Nearly five years ago Charles Parham, music director at First United Methodist Church, asked Mrs. Duggan to make some banners for the Madrigal Feast. "If he hadn't asked me to do it, I never would have done it," Mrs. Duggan said.

"I got an idea for one of the banners from National Geographic. I make a few sketches of a banner and he (Parham) looks at them and picks one out," Mrs. Duggan said. "I'll try one or two colors and decide the colors don't match and will start again." Mrs. Duggan spends a day or two to make the felt Madrigal banners.

Mrs. Duggan also has made four banners for Advent. "Edwin Chappell (then pastor of First United Methodist Church) asked me to make them. Keith Wiseman used them again this year," Mrs. Duggan said. "When I see them hanging I think look at all those wrinkles." The Advent banners are made of silk and velvet and takes a week or two for Mrs. Duggan to make.

In 1980, Mrs. Duggan traveled to Utah with other church members to build a church for the Navahos. "I mostly peeled potatoes and wash dishes. I also painted a sign for the front of the church," Mrs. Duggan said.

For 15 years, Mrs. Duggan has taught Sunday School for the church.

Last summer Mrs. Duggan took a Mediterranean cruise with a church group of 400 people from across the United States. On the cruise, she went to the Holy Lands, Cairo, Athens and Istanbul. "I'm so glad I went," Mrs. Duggan said.

Mrs. Duggan also does some painting and is a member of the Big Spring Art Association. One of her paintings is from a snapshot she took while on the cruise. "It was very difficult to take a picture in Jerusalem because the Moslems think that you are stealing their souls when you take their picture. In Egypt, however, they seem to want you to take their picture."

"When I was growing up I use to paint alot. I paint two or three pictures a year now," Mrs. Duggan said. "I work frantically a day or two before an art show or exhibit to turn out a new picture."

Mrs. Duggan is an active member of Retired Senior Volunteer Program. "I like a variety in volunteer jobs," Mrs. Duggan said.

Her favorite volunteer job is Mobile Meals. "I deliver meals once a week, using my car," Mrs. Duggan said. She also delivers books from the Howard County Library every third Tuesdays, provides escort service at Veterans Administration Medical Center one afternoon a week and is on the Public Responsibility Committee at Big Spring State Hospital. She says the escort service consists mainly of pushing patients around in wheelchairs and at BSSH she listens to patients' complaints and reports them.

"We got started in the volunteer program when my husband was alive. Joy Decker came to see us about delivering meals in the spring of '78," Mrs. Duggan said. "I enjoy it."

"The VA and BSSH could use more volunteers. They can always use more volunteers," she said.

ANOTHER HOBBY — Mrs. Duggan paints a picture for an art show. She is a member of the Big Spring Art Association.

THINKING BACK — Mrs. Hazel Duggan reminisces about her Mediterranean Cruise that include visits to the Holy Land and Egypt. She took the cruise with six other members of the First United Methodist Church.

Engagements

AUGUST RITE — Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Henry, No. 10 January Circle, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Nancy Lorene Davenport of Coahoma, to Rodney Russell Newell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Newell, 302 W. 14th. The couple plans to wed August 21 in the First Baptist Church Chapel with Dr. Kenneth G. Patrick, pastor, officiating.

TO WED — Mr. and Mrs. Bill Harlin, 503 Scott, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Donna Taylor of San Angelo, to N.C. "Butch" Halbert, son of Mrs. Ioweta Stiefer Cristian of San Angelo. The couple will be married Aug. 28 in Southland Baptist Church in San Angelo. The Rev. Martus Miley, pastor, will officiate at the ceremony.

PLANS ANNOUNCED — Mrs. Patt Rudd of Forsan and Bob Dyess of O'Donnell announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Monica Dyess, to Brent Nichols, son of Dick Nichols of Big Spring and Mrs. Jeanette Snell of Lubbock. The couple plans to wed August 28 in the First Baptist Church Chapel with Dr. Kenneth G. Patrick, pastor, officiating.

OCTOBER RITE — Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Pribyla of Tarzan announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Nancy, to Capt. Karl Horst of Columbus, Ga., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Horst of Watauga, Wash. The couple plans to wed in St. Ann's Catholic Church of Midland October 23. The Rev. Cliff Blackburn, priest, will officiate at the ceremony.

Child talks, plays at same time

Two-and-a-half year-olds are busy learning about living. Speech is developing with a rush. A 2 1/2-year-old will talk to himself almost constantly as he plays. His experiences are still limited so he talks and plays about what he has seen, heard and experienced, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter. At this age the child's experiences have largely been centered in and around the home. It is natural and normal then for all children to be interested in dolls (child care) or substitutes (teddy bear or stuffed animal) and their associated doll beds, carriages, etc. The child is also interested in the delivery trucks and other trucks which operate through the neighborhood. The Growing Child newsletter follows a child's development month-by-month. For more information on the social and physical development of children from birth to six years old, write to Growing Child, PO Box 620N, Lafayette, IN 47902.

Prospectors Club has social

The Prospector's Club held its annual social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Leek, 4216 Parkway, July 15. Homemade ice cream and cake were served. Members of the Faceters Guild of Midland were guests. On display were items from the copper mine, in Ajo, Ariz. The items belong to Lonnie Griffith who was taken on a tour of the mine, the third largest open pit copper mine in the United States.

Older homes means high maintenance

When buying an older home, which usually means high maintenance, consider an inspection to check plumbing, heating, cooling, wiring, insulation, and structural soundness, says Dr. Peggy Owens, housing and home furnishings specialist. Owens is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University Service.

Jo Ann Forest speaks at luncheon

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor
Jo Ann Forest, coordinator of Community Based Residential Council Program at Big Spring State Hospital, was the featured speaker during the hospital's Volunteer Services Council Luncheon and General Orientation for Volunteers Thursday.

Ms. Forest spoke about her program, the Community Based Residential Program, and its purpose. It is for patients at the hospital who can live in the community with periodic care in a halfway house type of situation. They take patients and furlough them to existing facilities in the state. They believe this service can facilitate the rehabilitation of these patients better than having them stay continuously at the hospital.

In order to take part in such a program, the patients must meet certain qualifications. The program's coordinators try to never place a patient in the program that would be a danger to either themselves or to the community. The luncheon was part of a general orientation session for BSSH volunteers. A tour of the hospital campus also was included in the day's events. In order to be certified as a volunteer, the persons desiring to be one had to attend the orientation session. The Volunteer Services Council informed prospective volunteers of requirements, tips, emergency procedures, job ideas, tax information and the various therapy programs the hospital is involved in.

Join the coupon campaign. Send in for refunds, advises Linda McCormack, family resource management specialist.

In 1980, the average household sent in for five refunds as compared to four in 1977. Families with an average income of $15,000-$25,000 were the most frequent participants, she says.

McCormack is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Dr. Donohue

Tennis creates friction

Dear Dr. Donohue: After taking it easy all winter, my first outing on the tennis courts invariably produces a few blisters on both my feet and hand. Please discuss the best treatment for these afflictions along with any tips you may have on their prevention. — J.M.S.

Blame friction. Here's the setting for them. When the topmost layers of skin are pulled across the more fixed under layers, a split appears between them. Fluid pours into this vacuum and there is your blister. Those who put their hands and feet back to use on the golf course after a winter layoff usually can detect the beginning of friction blisters by around the fourth hole. If they stopped at about that point to look at their hand, they would detect a warm spot. That is the budding blister. For the summer tennis player it could start at about the second set or earlier. The quicker the treatment begins, the better.

Once a blister has formed, it should be drained rather than trying to continue activity. First, you clean the area gently, with soap and water. Then puncture the top with a sterile needle. But you leave the dome of the blister intact. It will stick to its base and act like a natural Band-Aid. You may have to repeat a few times to keep it drained. Always be sure the needle is perfectly clean along with the area itself.

If you have a spot that you know is blister prone, put a light coat of petroleum there. Keep your feet dry with liberal use of dusting powders. Sometimes you can halt a blister in its tracks by gently padding the area as soon as you've detected one with the skin heat test mentioned earlier.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I quit smoking three years ago after smoking more than two packs a day for 42 years. Do you have any idea of how much damage to my lungs I did? Can my lungs ever return to normal? I try to run and jog, but I am having a hard time building up a training base for myself. I can jog about a mile, and then I am done. Do you think all that smoking ruined my lungs altogether? I am 67 and in otherwise good physical condition. — T.L.

Congratulations. It must have taken some will to part with your companion of 42 years. That's a lot of smoking and it would be very hard to imagine that your lungs will ever be as good as they would have been had you never smoked. But they will not get worse and will improve because you have stopped the daily lung irritation.

Your mile sounds great to me. If you can't do more than that, then walk. You shouldn't be getting out of breath this way, to the point, that is, that you are completely done in. Why don't you do this: Go to your doctor and ask for a pulmonary function test. That will give you a good idea of how good or bad your lungs are.

Dear Abby

Wife no. 2 upset about predecessor

DEAR ABBY: What is the proper way to introduce one's ex-daughter-in-law? My husband, his mother and I were recently at a function when my husband's ex-wife (I'll call her Marge) walked in. My mother-in-law greeted Marge warmly, put her arm around her shoulder and proceeded to introduce her to everyone as "my daughter-in-law." My husband said nothing at the time, but I could see that he was annoyed. I said nothing either, but I was steamed!

My husband and I have been married for seven years. Occasionally we run into Marge at weddings, funerals, etc., and if my mother-in-law is there too, she always falls all over Marge, referring to her as "my daughter-in-law." My husband has reminded his mother that Marge is no longer her daughter-in-law and to please quit introducing her that way, but his request has fallen on deaf ears.

What do you make of this, and how should we handle this irritating and awkward situation?

STEAMED

DEAR STEAMED: You don't say how long your husband and Marge were married, but if it was a number of years, your mother-in-law may still have some strong emotional ties with her former daughter-in-law.

In any case, whether she's forgetful, insensitive or just plain spiteful, you can best handle the situation by ignoring it.

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for years, and now I need help with a personal problem. I am an 85-year-old widow, but my friends say I look 65. My husband and I lived in this town 61 years and had a host of friends. Since his death 14 years ago, when I have gone out, his male friends have been greeting me with a kiss!

Last Sunday, three of his friends kissed me on the cheek in the dining room of the country club with 200 people looking on! I am sure that each kiss was only a friendly gesture, but I do not like such a display of affection in public.

How can I put a stop to it without hurting the feelings of good friends?

LOVE SANS KISSES IN VIRGINIA

DEAR LOVE: Rejoice! To reject such well intentioned gestures of affection would surely offend the kissers. What's wrong with letting the entire country club know that you are still considered a warm and kissable friend?

DEAR ABBY: "On the Spot," a 60-year-old college student, resented being asked to write an essay on the first time he made love. He said, "To tell you the truth, I can hardly remember, so it wouldn't have been very good anyway."

That reminded me of my own father, who died at 84. When he was 83, he was asked by a longtime crony if he could remember the first time he made love. My dad's reply: "I'm so old, I can't remember the last time."

Use credit cards wisely

A popular form of credit used today is the credit card or charge account offered by many retail stores, banks and other businesses. Using credit cards is easy and convenient. If you know how to use them wisely, they can be an important source of credit for you.

Every store or company that offers a credit card or charge account may have its own rules and regulations about credit. Always find out what the policies of each business are.

To get and use a credit card, fill out an application and send it to the company. If you qualify for their credit card, you will receive the card and the instructions about how to use it. You will also be told how much you can charge — this is known as your credit limit.

If you use the credit card, you will get a statement showing all your purchases made during the month. When you get the statement, you usually have a choice: First, you can pay the entire bill by the due date noted on the statement and avoid paying any finance charge. Or, you can pay only part of the bill. The company adds a finance charge on to what you still owe. This second method is called "revolving credit."

With a revolving-credit account, the minimum amount you can pay each month depends on the credit agreement you sign when you open the account. Be sure you understand what the credit agreement says before you sign it. Using revolving credit, you can continue to make purchase while you are paying off previous charges, as long as you do not exceed the maximum amount of your credit limit.

When applying for a charge account or credit card, check with the business to find out what its charge-account policies are. Be sure you know your credit limit, when the bill must be paid, how to figure out your minimum payment, and when finance charges start.

Credit cards have a number of advantages. By using credit cards, a person does not have to carry large amounts of cash. Credit cards are an excellent source of identification. Credit cards can also let you take advantage of a sale or make other needed purchases even though you do not have the ready cash.

But there also are disadvantages of using credit cards. Instead of shopping to compare prices, you may pay more for something because a particular store or business allows you to charge. Another disadvantage is you may either lose or have your credit card stolen. A major problem with credit cards is that it is easy to overspend without knowing it.

If you lose a credit card, notify the company at once, first by telephone and then in writing. The company will stop payments on the old card and issue you a new one.

Keep a record of your credit cards in a safe place where you can easily get it when needed. Include the name, address and telephone number of each company and your credit card number.

Smoke detectors can cut fire deaths in half

COLLEGE STATION — Smoke detectors can provide an early warning of fire that could cut deaths in half.

Estimates show that an early-warning fire detection device could save from 40 to 50 percent of the people that die in home fires, points out Dr. Gary Nelson, safety engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Nearly 7,000 persons die each year in almost 700,000 home fires in the U.S. Since most of these deaths occur while people are asleep, an early-warning device such as a smoke detector can be a life-saver, contends Nelson.

The engineer believes a smoke detector is more suitable than a heat detector because most home fires start by smoldering. Thus smoke will likely be one of the first combustion products.

Smoke detectors are self-contained units that can run on batteries or can be plugged into existing electrical systems. Cost averages $20 to $50 per unit. Get two or three price estimates, and be sure the units bear UL or FM labels.

Test units as you install them in your presence, suggests Nelson. Be sure you get an instruction booklet on their operation, testing and maintenance.

A single smoke detector installed outside the bedroom area on the ceiling or wall will provide minimum protection for the average home, says Nelson. For a two-story dwelling with bedrooms on both floors, he recommends two units — one outside each bedroom area.

You'll Find a Friend at First National Bank

Number 4 of a Series

Nelda Colclazer

"When the bank doors open, it lights up our lives," says Nelda Colclazer, a sixteen year employee at the First National Bank. Nelda is supervisor of new accounts. Her department serves as the information base for the entire bank. It is physically the first department one passes in the bank, as well as the first place a new customer makes contact with bank personnel. Nelda wants the new customer to feel welcome, comfortable and relaxed, no matter how large or small the account.

Nelda's outgoing personality and her ability to put people at ease are not unique to her banking experience. She was active in McCauley, the small community in Fisher county where she grew up. She was a cheerleader, active in sports and band, and was the class valedictorian.

Growing up on a farm meant work for Nelda and her family, but she has fond remembrances such as the trip she won through 4-H. She was about twelve and rode on the train to College Station for a three day meeting at A & M. Her family moved to Fort Worth for one year during World War II and Nelda worked as a soda jerk at Walgreen's during that time.

Immediately after high school graduation, Nelda married R.V. Colclazer of Snyder. They lived in Snyder until moving to Big Spring in 1961. R.V. worked for Phillips 66, but is now retired.

Nelda spent much time during her children's formative years working with activities such as PTA, Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts. She considered her family her most important asset. The family built their first home in Snyder from the ground up, doing all the work themselves. After her daughters Virginia and Cheryl and her son Michael were grown, she became active in civic endeavors, particularly the American Business Women's Association, Cactus Chapter. She has enjoyed the scholarship and community emphasis of this group and has been able to travel all over the United States to the organization's conventions.

She has given a great deal of time working with the projects of the ABWA, especially the Cinderella Girl Pageants in Big Spring. She has gained satisfaction seeing what the pageants can do to assist young ladies gain experience, poise and scholarships. Nelda has worked tirelessly on the local level and was asked to work on the staff of the State Cinderella Girl Pageant in Denton. She has also assisted at the International Pageant in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

After her marriage, Nelda's parents left their farm where the family had lived for two generations and moved to Hamlin where they operated a restaurant. Her parents recently retired and have moved to Big Spring. Nelda is enjoying having them close by. Her great-aunt still lives on the land, but Nelda's parents tore down the home place and used the lumber to build their home in Hamlin. She likes to go back to Fisher County and visit, finds it nice that the land is still in the family, but Big Spring is her home and she loves it here.

Nelda's primary hobby is sewing. She made all her daughter's clothing when they were young. She is an active member of the Primitive Baptist Church. She and R.V. have six grandchildren.

Nelda joined First National in 1966 and worked in the bookkeeping department. During her tenure at the bank she was supervisor of installment loan tellers. Then, she moved to auditing and accounting and eventually to the New Accounts Department.

Nelda's devotion to the bank is evidenced by her compliments of those who work with her. She says First National customers like to come in because of the friendly "hello's" of the employees. She thinks the bank has a great President, fine directors and officers. This is why employees stay. "In return," says Nelda, "customers value our experience, maturity and longevity. I have made so many friends through the bank; people whom I would otherwise never had the opportunity to meet."

Tidbits

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

Welcome to my new gossip column called "Tidbits." It will be a weekly addition to the Lifestyle section beginning today.

The column will be chock full of the latest word on people, places and even things in our area. If you have some juicy news you think our readers may enjoy, my ears are wide open. I want to hear it. Who knows, you may be surprised and find your name in big bold letters in Tidbits.

Local artist and teacher VIRGINIA WHITTEN recently was chosen as winner in the Texas Fine Arts Association, Region 20, 27th Annual Regional Citation Exhibit. A reception and open house Sept. 11 in the Municipal Garden and Art Center in Lubbock will honor the winners and feature their works. Mrs. Whitten is widely known in art circles for her talents and accomplishments. Her work at the exhibit will be displayed to the public through Aug. 1.

With fall just around the corner, new fashions are out on the market. A fall and 'back to school' fashion show will be held in the BIG SPRING MALL Aug. 7 around 2 p.m. for the public to enjoy. Men, women and children's fashions will be presented. You are sure to enjoy it.

Summer is the best and busiest time for family reunions. The GEORGE RICE family will hold its reunion at the Kentwood Older Adults Activity Center Sunday July 25.

The VICTOR SEDINGER family and the TROY FRASER family were hosts to two very special guests this past week. Two young men from Aberdeen, Scotland, DOUGLAS HAWTHORN and ANDREW TEFLEK, stayed in families' homes and toured the Big Spring area this week. They saw buffaloes and longhorn steer for the first time and visited many local industries and Six Flags over Texas.

Kids, kids, and more kids will converge upon CIRCLE SIX BAPTIST CAMP this week for a week of fun and frolic. More than 200 youths from six Baptist Associations will attend the camp. Will the counselors survive?

Okay, JERRY WORTHY, I hope you're taking notice. I understand you're the one who suggested this type of column to my boss several months ago. Now if you'll just follow through and get all your friends to call me with all the latest social news, my job is secure.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY—Dr. Richard Moriarty, director of the National Poison Center Network in Pittsburgh, puts a "Mr. Yeesh" sticker on a bottle of "Sunlight" dishwashing liquid in his Pittsburgh home Thursday. People around the country have been mistaking the soap for a lemon juice and have been putting it in iced tea and salads. The stickers were designed to show children poisons but Moriarty hopes that the adults will catch the message too.

Lodge members visit Snyder for meeting

Big Spring Rebekah Lodge No. 284 met July 20 with Mabel Morrison presiding. Members went to Snyder and ate supper with Snyder Lodge and heard Edna Schueter, Texas Assembly president, speak. The mayor of Snyder gave the welcome.

Members of the refreshment committee for July are Lillian Rhyne, Mildred Collins, Myrtle Gring, Iva Kenny, Ruth McNew, and Sheri Wilson.

The Past Noble Grands will meet at Furr's Cafeteria, Monday at 6:30 p.m.

Seminars teach Americans about family life

LUBBOCK — Americans are learning more and more about the family from infancy to old age.

Workshops and seminars on human development across the life-span are increasing for those in service professions and for the public interested in enhancing life at all stages.

In one recent seminar at Texas Tech University, topics ranged from learning for infants from six-weeks-old through 18-months-old to creative potential and marriage in old age.

Other subjects included custody arrangements in the child's best interest and coping skills for working mothers.

Mabel Jarret of Hobbs, N.M., a teacher, said, "Infants are no longer regarded as little blobs that don't learn anything. We now know they begin learning very close to birth."

Nancy Ridenour, a registered nurse and nursing professor, investigated the potential of the elderly. To illustrate what they can achieve, she played musical pieces performed or directed by senior citizens Andres Segovia, Arthur Fiedler and Pablo Casals. Artworks created during the ebb of life by such masters as Pablo Picasso, Paul Cezanne, Pierre Renoir, Claude Monet and Henri Matisse were presented.

A "Dear Abby" letter about nursing home romances sparked Kathy Baumgart's research on the elderly relating to the opposite sex. She said older adults are often hindered from expressing sexual feelings or remarrying late in life because of social attitudes, children, declining health and seeing themselves as unattractive.

For those who do marry in their 60s to 80s, Baumgart said, studies show most are happy. Happiness for men is usually based on internal aspects — love and companionship — while for women, it is usually related to external aspects — environment, house and social status, she said.

Becky Glover, a paralegal with Lubbock Legal Aid Society, presented some aspects of long-term research for a thesis and future clinical counseling about custody. She said she will weigh the advantages and disadvantages of joint custody and single-parent custody. She also wants to see if all children at some time experience the isolation, anger, blame, fear, loyalty conflicts and loss of a psychological parent, commonly attributed to only children of divorce.

Roberta Buck of Lubbock and Vicki Ellison of Ralls, both school teachers and mothers, explored that particular lifestyle.

They said coping involves freedom from guilt, good time management, stress relief, sharing the workload, replacing quantity time with quality time, and relying on community-shared resources.

Research cited 15 million American working mothers, six million with children under age six, and revealed no constant difference between children of employed and unemployed mothers.

The two said research did not support the myth that working mothers will have broken marriages and emotionally deprived children.

Class participants will develop programs or projects in their communities and professions as an outgrowth of the seminar.

Special services can help in delivering mail

By FRANK HARDESTY
Postmaster

When you need to send valuables or important papers through the mail, the Postal Service recommends you understand what registered, insured and certified mail can do for you.

By becoming familiar with these service options offered by the Postal Service, your mail will receive the best handling and the most cost-effective delivery. Registered, insured and certified mail give you the customized services for mailing that special letter or package.

Registered mail is the safest way to send valuables. It offers special handling for your letter or package mailed at the First-Class rates. You receive a receipt when you take the material to the post office. Then, the movement of that piece is monitored from the point of acceptance to delivery. All irreplaceable articles, regardless of value, and all items worth more than $400, should be sent by registered mail.

Jewelry, stocks and checks or money orders for large amounts are good candidates for registered mail. This type of service provides protection against loss or damage. The full value of the mailing must be declared when mailed for security and insurance purposes. The registration fee includes insurance protection up to $25,000 for domestic mail.

The fees for registered mail depend upon the value of the material being mailed. For instance, if the value of the package is from $101 to $500, the cost is $3.60.

A return receipt costs 60 cents extra, but it will allow the sender to have a written receipt of when and to whom the item was delivered. For a return receipt indicating to whom, the date, and the address where the item was delivered, the fee is 70 cents.

Restricted delivery service is also available with registered mail. It allows delivery only to the addressee, or to someone who is authorized in writing to receive mail for the addressee.

Insured mail is a good bet if you are sending birthday, wedding or other gifts or fragile items. First-Class Mail, Priority, Third and Fourth-Class mail may be insured. Insurance, available for merchandise only, can be purchased for materials mailed which valued at less than $400. Insurance rates, like registered mail rates, vary according to the value of the material being sent. If articles are insured for more than $15, a receipt of delivery is signed by the recipient and filed at the delivery post office. The insurance enables you to receive payment for domestic mail that has been lost, rifled or damaged. You may request a return receipt or restricted delivery when sending something insured for more than $15.

Certified mail is your best buy if you are sending important letters, insurance forms, contracts or bids for business contracts mailed at the First-Class rate. At 75 cents plus the charge for postage, certified mail costs less than registered mail.

It should be used when the sender requires a receipt as proof of mailing. The coupon receipt is postmarked to establish the date of delivery. A record of the delivery is also kept at the addressee's post office for two years, but no record is kept at the office from which you mailed the material. You may request a return receipt or restricted delivery receipt with certified mail.

Certified mail service is provided only for First-Class or Priority Mail containing no intrinsic value, and insurance is not available.

Certified mail labels, which can be obtained from your local post office, must be completed by the customer for this type of mail.

Engagement policy

We will be pleased to announce the news of your engagement in the Lifestyle section of the Big Spring Herald from anytime after the engagement is a reality until at least three weeks before the wedding.

We try to use the story on the date you request, but sometimes space does not permit this.

The information must be submitted to us on a form available at the Herald no later than Wednesday noon before the Sunday it is to be published. The form should be signed by the bride-elect, prospective bridegroom or parents of either.

We will use a picture of the couple or the bride-elect. The picture must be of a quality that will reproduce well in the newspaper. We prefer a 5 x 7 glossy black and white print.

If the bride-elect, prospective bridegroom or their parents do not now or have never lived in our area, we need to know why you are submitting your engagement to our paper. If only grandparents live in our area, please give their names and addresses.

The information may be brought by the Lifestyle Department of the Big Spring Herald, 710 Scurry, or mailed to the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720.

Call us at (915) 267-7331 if we can help with more information or clarification of our policies.

MRS. STEVEN TRACY THOMPSON
...formerly Becky Sue Blalack

Blalack — Thompson

Becky Sue Blalack became Mrs. Steven Tracy Thompson in a Saturday evening ceremony in St. John's United Methodist Church in Lubbock. The Rev. Doyle Ragle, pastor, officiated at the 8 p.m. rite before a sanctuary table covered with a white cloth with wedding rings entwined on the cloth's skirt. Two candelabra stood on each side of the table. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Blalack, Route 2, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Thompson of Hobbs, N.M. are parents of the bridegroom. Jane Ramsey, organist, provided music for the ceremony. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal-length candlelight gown handmade by her mother. The Victorian neckline was accented by bell sleeves and a bodice of lace and pearls. The chapel-length train of taffeta was accented with lace appliques. The bride carried a candlelight fan with a spray of orange tiger lilies, peach and ivory roses and carnations. Matron of honor was Kathy Vines of Lubbock. Bridesmaids were Johnnie Blalack, sister of the bride, Sherri Blalack, sister of the bride, and Mitzi Knight.

Wigingtons announce birth of first child

Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Wigington, 611 Elgin, announce the birth of their first child, a daughter, Heddy LeAnn, at Malone-Hogan Hospital. The infant arrived at 9:06 p.m., July 12, weighing 7 pounds 9 1/2 ounces and measuring 19 inches in length. Heddy's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wigington of Ackerly and Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Danford of Long Beach, Miss. Her great-grandmothers are Mary Ainsworth of Bay Springs, Miss., Mrs. Kittie Riddle of Long Beach, Miss. and Inez Danford of Winters.

Higdon — Sanders

Mary Teresa Sanders became the bride of Michael Anthony Higdon in an outdoor ceremony in Odessa Saturday evening. The Rev. Tim Airheart, cousin of the bride and pastor of First Baptist Church in Dulin, officiated at the 7 p.m. rite before an altar decorated with blue and white carnations and blue satin bows. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Awtrey, 1101 East 16th, and Charlie Sanders of Conroe. Mr. and Mrs. Carl Higdon of Odessa are the parents of the bridegroom. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Charlie Sanders. She wore a formal-length dress of white lace trimmed with seed pearls at the neckline and cuffs. She carried a bouquet of white and blue carnations accented with white satin streamers. Rhonda Gaskin was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Robyn Sanders, sister of the

McKern — Tidwell

Christina Pearl McKern and Gary Don Tidwell were married May 22 in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Scarborough of Valliant, Okla. Stan Bryan officiated at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. H.C. Tidwell, 2107 Grace, are parents of the bridegroom. The ceremony was followed by a garden reception. The couple is at home near Broken Bow, Okla. after a wedding trip to Brady Mountain Lodge, Queen Wilhelmina Lodge and Hot Springs, Ark.

Bridal shower held in honor of Valerie Richardson

Valerie Richardson, bride-elect of Christian B. Showalter, was honored with an old-fashion pouncing at Texas Electric Reddy Room Monday. Hostesses for the event were Mrs. Trina Chavez, Mrs. Candy Chesworth, Mrs. Maria Morgan and Melissa Richardson. The hostesses presented her with a recipe file box and a spice rack. Special guests included the bride's mother Mrs. Myrna Richardson and the bride's grandmother Mrs. L.B. Thomas. All were presented yellow daisy carnations. Miss Richardson and Showalter will be married August 7.

Weddings

MRS. STAN FEASTER
...formerly Melinda Hawes

Hawes — Feaster

Melinda Hawes of San Diego, Calif. and Stan Feaster were united in marriage in a ceremony Saturday morning at Hillcrest Baptist Church. Dr. Phillip W. McLendon, pastor, officiated at the 10:30 a.m. rite before an altar decorated with a brass column archway flanked by two seven-branch candelabra and a unity candle tree. Each column was topped with an arrangement of white roses and yellow glams.

The Rev. W. H. Hawes of Neosho, Mo., grandfather of the bride, read scripture I Corinthians 13:1-13 during the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Bill Hawes of San Diego, Calif. and Naomi Hawes of Dallas. Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Feaster of Vealmoor are the parents of the bridegroom.

Ila McCormick, organist, Mike Hawes of San Diego, brother of the bride, electric pianist, Laurie Sloan, pianist and vocalist, James Kinman, Randy Anderson and Bill Sloan, vocalists, provided music for the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal-length gown of white organza. The Queen Anne neckline and bodice were embellished in French imported Chantilly lace accented with pearls. The full bishop sleeves of matching lace ended in cuffs. The full A-line skirt with three-tiers of Chantilly lace fell from an empire waistline into a chapel-length train. To complete her ensemble the bride chose a fingertip-length veil of illusion held by a bandeau headpiece embellished in Chantilly lace.

For something old, the bride carried a handkerchief belonging to her grandmother, something new was her gown and something blue was her garter.

The bride carried a cascade of yellow daisies and roses accented with baby's breath and blue and yellow satin streamers on a white Bible.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Mike Hawes of San Diego, Calif., sister-in-law of the bride. Bridesmaids were Londa Feaster, sister of the bridegroom, LuDawn Klinglesmith of Joshua and Dawn Rachug of Clifton. Melissa Hargreaves, niece of the bride, was flower girl. Crystal McLendon and Jason Smith of Hobbs, N.M. were train carriers.

Doyle Smith of Hobbs, N.M. was best man. Groomsmen were Johnnie Sevey, Gary Phillips and Jeff Wilson. Ushers were Mark Hawes of Dallas, Randy Samuels of Abilene, and Chris Harwood. Candelighters were Tracy Manly of Rockwall and Chris Harwood.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. The bride's table held a three-tiered wedding cake made by Clara Lewis, aunt of the bridegroom. The cake was accented with clusters of yellow and blue rosebuds and sweet peas. White filigree hearts were placed between lattice drops. Encircling the second tier were white swans with lilies of the valley accenting them. The cake was topped with a replica of the bride's bouquet. The cake featured a six columned fountain encircled in greenery and flowers. A brass candelabrum entwined with greenery and small flowers was the centerpiece.

The bridegroom's table was covered with a pastel blue cloth overlaid with a French blue cloth. The table held double ring cinnamon coffee cakes. The centerpiece was two puppets dressed as a bride and bridegroom. Serving were Clara Lewis and Tammy Lewis, cousin of the bridegroom.

The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents.

The bride is a graduate of Christian High School of San Diego, Calif. and attended Dallas Baptist College of Dallas. She is employed by Dr. Douglas Smith, Orthodontist. The bridegroom is a graduate of Sands High School in Ackerly and is employed by Barber Glass and Mirror Co.

Following a wedding trip to the islands of Hawaii, the couple will make their home in Big Spring.

MRS. RICHARD TREVINO

MRS. TEDDY JAY COOLEY
...formerly Dana Jill Westbrook

Westbrook — Cooley

Dana Jill Westbrook and Teddy Jay Cooley were wed in a ceremony Saturday evening in the Church of Christ in Gail. Herbert Love, retired minister, officiated at the 7 p.m. rite before an altar decorated with English ivy on a white garden trellis. The trellis was flanked by two candelabra, holding three hurricane lamps, embellished with greenery. The trellis was centered with a five-branch tree candelabra accented with white tapers and entwined with pink Althea hibiscus.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross W. Westbrook of Gail. Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Cooley of O'Donnell are the parents of the bridegroom.

Lisa McLeroy and Gena McLeroy, both vocalists, provided music for the ceremony.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a formal-length Victorian-style gown of white tulle over taffeta. A high embroidered collar was edged in lace and a deep ruffle of embroidered tulle and satin ribbon formed the V-neckline. The fitted bodice was enhanced by full sleeves ending in wide cuffs of embroidered tulle and satin ribbon. A three-tiered skirt, accented with Chantilly lace and satin ribbon, fell from a sash bored with white satin ribbon tied in a bow in back. The bride wore a two-tiered fingertip-length veil held by a wreath of white silk flowers.

The bride carried an old-fashioned all white nosegay of gardenias, feathered carnations, forget-me-nots, fern and puffs of illusions encircled by ruffled Chantilly lace and accented by a bow and streamers.

Maid of Honor was Camille Mickey of Midland. Mrs. Tommy Reed of Beeville was matron of honor. Sid Westbrook of Gail, brother of the bride was best man. Gene Cooley, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsmen.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in Borden County School Cafeteria in Gail. The bride's table held a four-tiered cake accented with pink roses, white doves and bells. The cake was topped with pink satin wedding bells, lily of the valley and silk illusion. The table was covered with a pink cloth overlaid with white lace.

The bridegroom's table held a chocolate sheet cake decorated with boots, spurs, horseshoes and rope. The table was accented with an arrangement of wild flowers in a brown ceramic boot. The table was covered with a beige damask cloth.

Servers were Camille Mickey, Mrs. Tommy Reed, Mrs. Joe Hancock and Kelly LaBorde.

The bride is a graduate of Borden County High School in Gail and Abilene Christian University in Abilene. She is employed by Borden County Independent School District. The bridegroom also is a graduate of Borden County High School and does farming in Borden County.

Following a wedding trip to Colorado, the couple will make their home in Gail.

Sewing fabric with surface interest

Fabrics with surface interest always get part of the fashion limelight for fall and winter, and they should get special care in sewing and pressing.

Surface interest in fall fabrics often means a napped or pile fabric. Its direction affects the color of the finished garment. In laying out a pattern on napped fabric, be sure you place all pieces in the same direction using the special layout guideline for napped fabrics. This layout often requires extra yardage.

If the nap runs down, the garment will look lighter and shinier than with the nap running up.

To determine nap direction, rub it along the lengthwise grain. When you stroke with the nap, the surface will feel smooth. When you rub against the nap, the surface will feel rough.

To prevent fabric layers from slipping during the actual stitching, pin them together closely or baste before sewing. For best results stitch with the direction of the nap.

Pressing is important for a professional appearance, but avoid flattening the nap.

Press on the wrong side with steam or with a slightly dampened press cloth between the iron and the fabric. Also, press over a terry cloth towel or needleboard, and do not let the weight of the iron rest on the fabric.

COORDINATING TABLEWARE PATTERNS
When choosing your china, silver and crystal patterns, be sure to consider how your choices will look together. Here at the ACCENT SHOPPE, we suggest you start by looking at table settings in magazines. You will want to strive for balance between the ornate and the simple. Two patterned and one plain, or two plain and one patterned, is a good rule. Above all, trust your own taste; you'll be enjoying this tableware for many meals to come!
