Taxpayers awaiting answers

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

They sit in the basement of the courthouse, waiting. The fifteen or so people clutch envelopes from the Howard County tax appraisal office. Most, in the twilight of their years, want to hear why their property values have changed and what their taxes will be. The low chatter of intense talk abruptly ends as an employee calls out another name. One rises. The others wait.

The average wait for persons to meet with the appraisers who set the evaluations on their property was running about two hours this morning. The talk around the basement hall was about taxes. One man commented, as he registered and received a number, that his taxes went from $300 to $870. "We can't do anything. But they can't tell those big companies what to do," he said. "They'll get lawyers to force them to buy this stuff at these prices."

Three men stood and discussed the equity of the appraisals. One called the new values a "blank check" being handed to the taxing agencies. Tax rates could just go up and up with the new values. "I had a business course and they never said anything about handing out blank checks," he said.

As one gentleman left after his meeting with the appraisers, he said he was satisfied with the changes made in his appraisal values. "All human beings make mistakes — they just made a little mistake," he remarked. However, not every body views the reappraisal in such a positive light.

City Councilman Larry Miller is angry at what he says was an inconsistent appraisal that will result in higher taxes for all property owners. In a political advertisement, he says the taxing agencies have been misinformed to believe they can lower the tax rate. "There's no way the rate can go down and generate the same revenue," Miller said. He notes his own taxes should increase 300 percent, based on an estimated tax rate which he believes could only increase.

FAA rapped on wind alerts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly a month after the crash of a Boeing 727 in a driving rainstorm, the government is coming under criticism for not moving quickly enough to close airports when treacherous wind conditions are detected.

The manufacturer of the device that warns of sudden shifts in wind near airports is urging the Federal Aviation Administration to ground aircraft briefly whenever any so-called "wind shears" are detected.

"We suggest that no aircraft lands or takes off within 15 minutes of an alert," wrote Kent S. Morgan, vice president and general manager of Sangamo-Weston Systems Inc., in a letter to the FAA.

Morgan said in a telephone interview Tuesday that while the length of an airport shutdown may vary, airplanes should be grounded for some period to give time for the severe wind threat to pass.

FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said the agency's policy is to pass wind and other weather information to the pilot and let him make the decision on whether to take off.

Meanwhile, a Ralph Nader sponsored public interest group asked the National Transportation Safety Board to urgently recommend grounding planes whenever a wind shear is detected near an airport by the Sangamo-Weston equipment. The devices are operating at 58 airports around the country.

Federal investigators have yet to determine what caused Pan American World Airways Flight 759 to crash shortly after takeoff July 9 from the New Orleans airport. But they acknowledge two wind shear warnings were sounded minutes for the plane departed.

"The crash of Pan Am Flight 759 would have been prevented if the tower had been required to close the runway after receiving winds shear alerts," said Matthew Finucane, director of the Nader-sponsored Aviation Consumer Action Project.

Although the Air Line Pilots Association has campaigned for installation of airport wind shear detection devices, it says the Sangamo-Weston equipment does not provide enough information specifically on wind shear, is subject to false alarms and should be used as the source of advisory information.

"The final decision on whether to go or not to go should be left to the pilot because he is the only man in a position from which to judge all information that's necessary to make that decision," said John O'Brien, a safety specialist with the pilots union.

Wind shears are sudden and sometimes severe shifts of winds that can have enormous effect on an aircraft attempting to take off or land.

According to the FAA, there have been nine U.S. air carrier crashes attributed to encounters with low-level wind shear since 1973.

Israeli tanks, troops roll into West Beirut

By The Associated Press

Israeli tanks and armored troops steamrolled into west Beirut today, other units battled toward the PLO stronghold from the north and south, and artillery and gunboats hammered Yasser Arafat's guerrilla enclave from all sides in furious barrages that continued after 17 hours.

At least 50 people were killed and 730 wounded in the attack and the toll was expected to rise sharply, initial police reports cited by Lebanon's state radio said. The broadcast said most of the victims were civilians.

Israel said its forces suffered 20 soldiers wounded, two seriously, before the attack, and that as a result of the assault its armor captured a strip 60 yards deep and 600 yards long on a north-south axis along the Green Line dividing guerrilla-held west Beirut from Christian-controlled east Beirut.

Arafat called on every able Palestinian to take up arms and defend west Beirut, and President Elias Sarkis appealed to President Reagan to stop the fighting and protested "what is happening in Beirut where innocent civilians are being subjected to mass killing and destruction."

Reagan administration sources in Washington the U.S. government was considering imposing military, economic and diplomatic sanctions against Israel. They stressed the sanctions under consideration were only "possibilities." Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the latest attack "makes virtually impossible the conduct of diplomatic efforts."

The Israeli military command said it had not launched "an all-out attempt at conquering the city" and the attacks were to show Israel "will not play the game by PLO-set rules."

It appeared the Israeli thrust was concentrated on the man's land between the city's Moslem and Christian sectors, the seaport on the northern edge of the Palestine Liberation Organization redoubt in west Beirut, and PLO entrenchments southwest of the city.

The Israeli attack, which began about midnight (6 p.m. EDT) and shattered the ninth cease-fire in two months of fighting, was covered by intense shelling.

"Hundreds of shells burst within yards of each other and within seconds, the entire southern belt of west Beirut was shrouded in smoke and flames," Associated Press correspondent Terry Anderson said of one 10-second Israeli barrage.

Israeli guns were firing heavily into the crowded civilian district around Hamra Street, the commercial heart of the Moslem sector, for the first time since the siege began, correspondents reported.

PLO gunners and rocket teams fired back into Christian neighborhoods in east Beirut and into the hillside suburbs where Israeli forces are concentrated, witnesses said.

An Israeli officer, who was authorized to speak to reporters in east Beirut, said at midday that no air strikes had been called in for fear of hitting Israeli soldiers.

Preceded by bulldozers to clear away PLO earthworks, 20 to 25 Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers punched into west Beirut at the Museum crossing, midway along the 3-mile north-south Green Line, and witnesses reported battles between Israeli and Palestinian units around the race course area a half-mile past the Museum.

A PLO communique said the Israelis tried to capture the race course, but were driven back by the "stiff resistance" of the Palestinians. The track is on the Corniche Mazraa, an east-west boulevard that separates the Palestinian refugee camps on the south from west Beirut's residential and commercial districts to the north.

GUILTY HUSBAND COMFORTS WIFE — William Chanslor Jr. comforts his wife Sue in a Houston courtroom Tuesday after he was convicted on charges of trying to murder his invalid wife with a hard-to-detect poison. The defense contended that Chanslor, a wealthy attorney, did so at her request. This photograph was taken through the window of the courtroom door.

Doctor convicted in plot to kill his wife

HOUSTON (AP) — The paralyzed wife of a prominent lawyer convicted of scheming to kill her tearfully begged a jury today to give her husband probation.

"I can't live without him," said Sue Chanslor, 42. She testified from her wheelchair in the punishment phase of the trial of William A. Chanslor Jr., 50.

Mrs. Chanslor was the first of 11 character witnesses scheduled to testify in Chanslor's behalf. Chanslor was found guilty Tuesday of conspiracy to commit murder and solicitation of murder.

He could be imprisoned up to 20 years for plotting to poison his crippled wife, who said she "begged and pleaded" with him to help her commit suicide.

"Despite the jury's verdict and all it means, do you still want him to come back and live with you?" defense attorney Robert Bennett asked Mrs. Chanslor.

"Oh yes, I do," Mrs. Chanslor replied.

Asked by Bennett if she realized what probation meant and if she thought her husband could live up to its terms, she composed herself and said, "Oh yes, he would do it."

Chanslor had claimed he tried to obtain a lethal, almost untraceable poison because his wife, confined to a wheelchair since suffering a stroke in 1979, begged him to help her kill herself.

Prosecutors claimed in closing arguments that Mrs. Chanslor wanted to die because her husband showed no love for her, not because of physical pain.

"She had become a yoke and a burden on him," Assistant District Attorney Jim Lavine. "It was a mission of mercy — not for his wife, but for himself."

A state district court jury of seven men and five women deliberated for 2½ hours Tuesday and found Chanslor guilty. Before delivering the verdict, the jurors listened twice again to tapes on which Chanslor told the man from whom he sought the poison that his wife would never commit suicide.

Chanslor, past president of the Houston Trial Lawyers Association, could be sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000. State District Judge Michael T. McSpadden scheduled the punishment phase of the trial to begin today.

After polling the jurors on their verdict, McSpadden allowed Chanslor to enter the spectator area of the courtroom and hug his wife. Chanslor, a founder and deacon of the Westbury Christian Church, refused to comment on the verdict as he and his wife left.

"Mrs. Chanslor is very upset and since the trial is still in progress, I have advised them not to make any statement," Bennett said.

"We are very upset and we don't agree with it," Bennett said about the verdict, "but that is something you learn to live with."

Defense lawyers admitted Chanslor solicited and bought two capsules he believed contained the deadly poison, but said he did so only because his wife wanted to commit suicide.

"Bill Chanslor never intended to murder his wife," Bennett had said in summation.

In testimony, Mrs. Chanslor acknowledged she said shortly after her husband's arrest that she had not asked him to help her kill herself. But she said she had made that statement because she did not believe authorities when they told her Chanslor was in jail.

Lavine, the prosecutor, said the "turning point" of the trial was Chanslor's own "unbelievable and inconsistent" testimony.

"I don't think his story was believable. He admitted to giving false statements to police and then was actually caught in a false statement to the jury. Once that was brought home to them in final arguments, I think that may have turned the tide," said Lavine.

Prosecutors said that Chanslor, using the alias John G. Thompson, met with John Minnery, the author of a series of books entitled, "How To Kill," to obtain ricin, a deadly, hard-to-trace derivative of the castor bean.

Minnery, who Chanslor said referred to himself as "Dr. Death," reported the request to police, who assigned an undercover detective to the case.

'She had been a yoke and a burden on him.'

Chanslor was arrested April 21 outside a Houston hotel, carrying two marked capsules of what he believed to be ricin three times stronger than needed to kill a 200-pound cow. The pills actually were Vitamin C.

Before returning the verdict, jurors twice listened to secretly taped conversations between Chanslor, Minnery and undercover agent Keith Symons at a Toronto restaurant.

On the tape, Chanslor said to the two men that his wife would never commit suicide and told them, "The bitch is really getting to me."

TESCO settles fuel charges plan

Texas Electric Service Co. has reached a settlement with cities represented by the Texas Municipal League and wholesale electric customers on a procedure for obtaining regulatory approval of certain fuel-related charges. The procedure also was approved by the Public Utility Commission.

Unlike the current procedure which does not require prior approval, TESCO will now have to obtain PUC approval of the estimated cost of fuel-related services provided by an affiliated company before the costs are billed to customers.

The new procedure will not change the total amount customers pay for electricity, according to TESCO officials.

"We only charge customers what we must pay for fuel used to make electricity," TESCO President Bill Marquardt said. "This revision cannot be expected to raise or lower the customer's monthly fuel charges."

The new procedure will affect fuel-related services provided to TESCO from two Texas Utilities Co. subsidiaries: Texas Utilities Fuel Co. and Texas Utilities Generating Co.

Under the new ruling the procedure will involve four steps: 1) TESCO will file an estimate of its upcoming affiliate fuel-related costs with the PUC before charging those costs to customers. 2) Customers and cities served by the company may participate in the proceedings. 3) The company will be required to prove during its next rate case that all of its payments to affiliates and subsequent charges to customers have been reasonable and appropriate. 4) Each calendar quarter, the company will make adjustments for any over or under estimates it made in the previous quarter.

The agreement brings to an end litigation that began in 1979 after a special hearing before the PUC into transactions among Texas Utilities Co. subsidiaries.

Heavy rains slow CRMWD deliveries

The effect of a wet month on municipal water demands was illustrated by July figures of the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

Deliveries fell off almost 15 percent on the strength of heavy rains in late June and early July, according to CRMWD spokesman Joe Pickle. However, city demands for the first seven months of the year were running 3.86 percent ahead of the same period a year ago.

Municipal deliveries by the district amounted to 1,762,452,700 gallons, or 14.87 percent under last year's record July of 2,070,275,000 gallons, Pickle said. Deliveries to oil companies during July were 209,240,036 gallons, or up by 3.21 percent over July 1981, he added. This made 1,412,154,843 gallons for the seven months, or 68 of one percent ahead of the first seven months last year.

For July, Big Spring used 311,823,000 gallons, down 11.45 percent. Midland, 408,990,000 gallons, down 3.59 percent. Odessa, 916,929,000 gallons, down 10.52 percent. Snyder, 110,319,000 gallons, down 27.38 percent. Stanton, 11,864,600 gallons, down 21.89 percent. Odessa's seven month aggregate of 4,495,682,000 gallons put it 11.02 percent ahead for the period.

CISD trustees favor tax reduction

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Trustees of the Colorado Independent School District went on record as favoring a tax cut for 1982-83 at their meeting last night.

Specifically, the board instructed school administrators to reduce the effective tax rate from last year's 80 cents per $100 valuation to 75 cents for the coming year.

One board member, Dr. Billy Bridgeford, called for an even greater reduction, but a straw vote of the board indicated a preference for the 75 cents rate. Superintendent of Schools Charlie Usselton agreed, saying in these days of rising taxes, it's good to be able to save money.

The list of proposed capital expenditures for the coming year includes everything from roofing to a computer system for the school district, as well as a $150,000 addition to Hutchinson school. Board member Bridgeford said he opposed such an expenditure during times "such as these."

Other capital outlays include building a new press box, concession stand and restrooms at the football stadium, office equipment and a new van-type vehicle for the school district.

This year's budget calls for revenues of $5,623,000 with expenses totaling $5,413,000.

Study says illegal aliens want to work but not live in U.S.

AUSTIN (AP) — A consultant called it a milestone, but an ambitious survey of illegal aliens in Texas, commissioned by the Governor's Task Force on Immigration, has turned up no real surprises.

Frank Newport of V. Lance Tarrance & Associates in Houston, who conducted the survey, told the task force Tuesday that 1,526 illegal aliens were questioned, the great majority having just been picked up by immigration authorities.

The interviews showed that most illegal aliens want to work in this country legally but not become citizens, and most came here originally to make more money, Newport said.

Newport said the study represents "the largest number of undocumented workers ever interviewed in a face-to-face setting." But he added that the survey relied on a random sample and on truthful answers by sometimes frightened people just apprehended by Immigration and Naturalization Service agents.

The ages of those surveyed ranged from 12 to 69 with a median age of 23, Newport said.

Task force members planned to pass along the information to Gov. Bill Clements without adding any policy recommendations.

Besides the survey "profile" of the illegal aliens, Clements will get a head count released in April that said between 600,000 and 900,000 people are in Texas illegally.

Many of the questioners were former census takers, Newport said, and rode INS buses and interviewed detainees as they were picked up.

A smaller sample was derived through visits to job sites around the state where random selection of Spanish-surnamed employees supplied the sample, so some legal aliens and permanent residents were included.

Newport said the study broke down the sample into categories based on frequency of border crossings and length of time spent in the United States.

Almost half of the illegal aliens were classified as "migrants," who make frequent trips back to Mexico. A small percentage were classified as "commuters," who cross the border almost daily. Most of those were in the El Paso area and worked as domestics, Newport said.

All but 8 percent of those questioned were male, and 37 percent of them were married. Two-thirds of the married illegal aliens had left spouses in Mexico.

The survey showed that even among illegal aliens who have lived in Texas for five years or more, less than half would like to become U.S. citizens. Overall, only 28 percent of the undocumented aliens wanted citizenship.

Newport said 60 percent favored a temporary work permit that would let them go back and forth across the border legally.

More than half of those interviewed said they came into the United States to make more money. The average salary earned by undocumented workers was $4.23 an hour, almost a dollar more than minimum wage in this country.

Only 1 percent said they received welfare assistance and 6 percent said they got food stamps. Most of the illegal aliens said they send money home to Mexico each month, 6 percent sending $600 or more monthly.

5 prisoners escape from Austin jail

BELLVILLE, Texas (AP) — Law enforcement officials in several counties used helicopters to scour a southeastern section of the state for five prisoners who tricked a jailer and escaped from the Austin City Jail.

The five — four men and a woman — overpowered a man and stole a blue Ford Thunderbird about noon Tuesday at Fayetteville, 30 miles west of here, Austin

County Sheriff T. A. Maddox said.

A pickup truck they hijacked earlier was found about one mile from the site where the Thunderbird was stolen, Maddox said.

The Thunderbird was seen shortly after noon Tuesday near the community of Frairsburg, 15 miles south of Fayetteville between Columbus and New Ulm.

misrepresentation of the relationship between valuations and the tax rate, he is more unhappy with the reappraisal itself. "It lacks consistency throughout the district," he said. One example of the inconsistency, he said, is his own business evaluated at $18,000 while an almost-identical, smaller establishment next door was double that figure.

Another unhappy taxpayer is Chuck Cawthon of 2607 Alamesa. Cawthon, who has yet to check with the appraisers, said "If I don't get a change, I'll have to close my doors." Cawthon contends he could never sell his business property at the appraised value. "Some judgment was needed to be put with it (the reappraisal)," he said. "I don't mind paying taxes, that's rent for living in the country."

Cawthon also objected to what he called a "sneaky" manner of conducting the reappraisal. "I don't know anyone who was talked to about it; I just don't like the way it was done — it's unfair," he said.

Whatever the personal reaction to the reappraisal, the taxing entities still must set a tax rate before any of the values become official. Following the certification of the valuations after the appraisal review board meets, the taxing entities will set the rates.

The county will adjust their rate within a few days of the certification, Howard County Judge Bill Tune said. The city would set their rate "as soon as possible" after the certification, City Manager Don Davis said. The Big Spring Independent School District has already used an estimated rate but will amend its rate as soon as the exact values are known, Don Crockett, assistant superintendent of business, said. The Howard County Junior College District is expected to set its rate soon after the certification as well.

Change of venue denied in trial over Amarillo nun slaying

AMARILLO (AP) — Defense attorneys tried unsuccessfully for a second time to have a judge move the trial of an 18-year-old man accused of capital murder in the rape-strangulation of an elderly nun last Halloween in a convent.

Attorneys for Johnny Frank Garrett asked state District Judge George Dowlen to grant a change of venue motion Tuesday before the start of jury selection. Dowlen denied the motion.

Dowlen said in denying the first motion that because of the nature of the case, the slaying received as much publicity in other cities as it did in Amarillo.

Garrett was arrested Nov. 9 after his fingerprints were found on a headboard in the room of Sister Tadea Benz, 76, a native of Switzerland, authorities said.

He has been held since his arrest in the Potter County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond.

The nun was discovered missing from early morning prayers at St. Francis Convent in northeast Amarillo on Oct. 31, 1981. Other nuns went to her room and found her body beside her bed. Thinking she was dead from natural causes, they called a doctor and had her body taken to a funeral home.

About two hours later, a broken window was noticed in the community room of the convent. They then suspected there was a burglary and called police.

Police ordered the embalming process halted and discovered the nun had been raped, beaten and strangled. The nuns already had cleaned up the room where the slaying occurred.

St. Francis Convent is the home of a number of retired or semi-retired nuns. Many of the sisters have teaching backgrounds.

Prince William gets a royal christening

LONDON (AP) — With champagne toasts and cake saved from his parents' wedding, the six-week-old son of Prince Charles and Princess Diana was christened today into the Church of England.

Prince William of Wales let out three little cries when Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie poured water on his forehead from the silver-gilt Lily Font, used for all royal christenings since 1840.

In medieval times, crying was considered a good sign, showing that the devil had left the new Christian's body.

As his parents, grandmother Queen Elizabeth II and about 60 other guests looked on during the family affair, the blue-eyed prince was officially named William Arthur Philip Louis. He is second in line to the throne after his 33-year-old father and will head the Church of England if he becomes king.

At a photo session later, baby William sucked greedily on one of his mother's fingers as she cradled him in her arms. He rejected fingers offered by the queen and his great-grandmother, Queen Mother Elizabeth.

Diana, wearing a rose floral print dress and a matching wide-brimmed hat, blushed each time William let out a squeak. Charles wiped dribbles from his son's chin with a handkerchief.

"He's a good speech-maker," said the queen. Police ringed Buckingham Palace for the double celebration of Prince William's christening and the 82nd birthday of the queen mother.

Before the christening, the queen mother, wearing a pale blue dress and matching hat, appeared on the balcony of her London home, Clarence House, and waved cheerily to some 500 admirers gathered in the street.

A Grenadier Guards band marched by playing "Happy Birthday," and the crowd joined in the tribute to the beloved "Queen Mum."

Bar of eavesdrop evidence sought in Wood murder trial

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Government lawyers are trying to prove FBI agents complied with wiretap laws in court-approved electronic eavesdropping in the investigation of the 1979 murder of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr.

Defense attorneys have moved to bar from evidence tape recordings and transcripts of jailhouse conversations involving Jamie "Jimmy" Chagra, 39; his wife, Elizabeth, 29; his brother, El Paso attorney Joseph Chagra, 35; and Charles V. Harrelson, 43, the man charged with shooting Wood on May 29, 1979.

The electronic eavesdropping, which defense attorneys said was illegal, took place in late 1980 and early 1981 during a massive investigation that resulted in the indictment of six people on April 15.

More testimony was expected today from organized crime expert Michael Defeo of the Justice Department. Defeo presided over the bugging of Jimmy Chagra's conversations with relatives and others at the Leavenworth federal penitentiary in Kansas and of Harrelson at the Harris County Jail in Houston.

Chief U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions is to rule on the admissibility of the tapes at the end of the pre-trial hearing, which began Monday.

Among 45 issues Sessions is to decide are defense motions to disqualify him from presiding at the Sept. 28 trial because Wood was his colleague, for changes of venue for all six defendants, and for severing the cases and trying them separately.

Jimmy Chagra is charged with paying Harrelson $250,000 to shoot Wood because Chagra feared Wood would sentence him to life imprisonment on a 1979 narcotics charge. After Wood was killed, Sessions tried the case and sentenced Chagra to 30 years without parole.

Jimmy Chagra and Harrelson, serving 40 years on separate state offenses, are charged with murder of a federal judge, punishable by mandatory life prison terms.

Harrelson served a 15-year sentence for the 1968 kill-for-hire slaying of Texas grain dealer Sam Degelia Jr.

The pair, Joe Chagra and Elizabeth Chagra are accused of conspiracy to murder Wood and to obstruct justice.

Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann, 41, was indicted on charges of perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Elizabeth Chagra's father, Leon Nichols, 51, is accused of income tax evasion in the investigation.

Defeo testified Tuesday that FBI agents bugging the visiting room at Leavenworth were careful to excise from the tape recordings any conversations involving attorney-client or husband-wife privilege.

The judge noted all six defendants were requesting a change of venue because of pre-trial publicity.

"At the same time you are adding fuel to the fire, if not gasoline, and providing the match" by talking to reporters, Sessions said.

The Chagras talked about "Joe's effort to retrieve the weapon used to kill Judge Wood" and the conversation promptly was reported to FBI agents investigating Wood's murder, Defeo testified.

Also Tuesday, Sessions warned the dozen attorneys representing the six defendants not to talk to news reporters. He reminded them a letter he sent them at the outset imposing a gag rule.

Sessions introduced into evidence recent news articles from The Dallas Morning News and Dallas Times Herald and scolded Harrelson's lawyer, Tom Sharpe Jr., for remarks attributed to him.

CLEAN LEDGER — New Hampshire store owner Ernest Peters decided bad debts were keeping customers with consciences away from his store... so he canceled the debts in a newspaper ad.

All is forgiven, folks

Store owner cancels customer debts

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — A variety store owner who was losing patrons because they owed him money has called off thousands of dollars in debts to get back his customers.

Ernest T.J. Peters, owner of E.J.'s Variety Store, took out an advertisement in Fester's Democrat, a Dover newspaper, canceling debts owed him by about 1,200 customers who charged goods at his store.

"To our charge customers," the small ad began. "Your bill is paid in full. Start fresh with us. We will help you through the tough times. Come back and become a customer again. Thanks, E.J.'s."

"It's a way of saying 'thank you' for their past business and telling them that I want them to come back," Peters said. He explained business has dropped off and he believes people who owe him money are steering clear of his store.

"The whole world is in debt," he said. "The country's deficit is so many billion dollars. So I think, what's a way I can get my little business going again? Just say, OK, you don't owe me anything."

Peters, a stocky cigar smoker, says he doesn't want to spend time and money on collecting bills.

He regularly takes out advertising in the paper, but the debt clearing ad ran only once, he said.

Besides, he confessed, "I don't know all their addresses. Sometimes I just know a first name and I don't know where they live. I don't need to know those things. I'm not a detail guy."

He also doesn't know the exact amount of the debt. But in the past few years it's grown to between $5,000 and $10,000, he said.

"Customers would tell me how they were out of work. I guess I'm susceptible to that kind of stuff," said Peters, 46, who has lived in Dover, a city of about 22,000 people, all his life.

"I would get to be friends with people. They would say they were broke. They'd tell me about their babies... lots of stories. And people would charge, charge, charge, charge."

About a year and a half ago, Peters hurt his knee while dancing. "When I was hospitalized, that's when things really got out of hand," he said. "Everyone was charging because they had my OK."

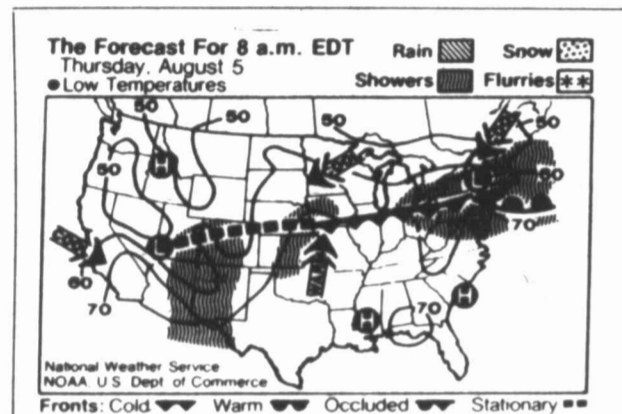

He's still letting customers charge, only now he's more careful.

Peters, who has owned the store for six years, said he isn't bitter and has promised not to mention the debt if customers return.

"I wish the whole country would straighten out," he said. "I'm no economist, but I believe business people are overcharging the public."

"I'm not mad or upset at anybody. These are tough times. I really believe that's why they haven't paid me back. I believe in people. I trust them."

Missouri gives woman the nod for U.S. Senate

By The Associated Press

Harriett Woods, a state senator from suburban St. Louis, is the second woman to be nominated to the U.S. Senate this year, while a Wichita businessman won the Republican gubernatorial nomination in Kansas.

"I was told I couldn't win and I was told I couldn't raise money, but I did," said Mrs. Woods, a Democrat who defeated 10 candidates Tuesday to face Republican U.S. Sen. John Danforth. She said the central issue of the campaign would be Danforth's support for the economic policies of President Reagan.

"The fundamental issue is the campaign is whether I should be retained in office on the basis of the six years I served in the Senate and my eight years as attorney general," Danforth said.

Mrs. Woods' nomination follows Rep. Millicent Fenwick's victory in the New Jersey Republican primary earlier this year. If elected, they would join two other women senators, Paula Hawkins of Florida and Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, both Republicans.

With 93 percent of the precincts reporting, Mrs. Woods, had 249,755 votes or 44 percent. She defeated 10 candidates, including Burleigh Arnold, a Jefferson City banker, who garnered 121,395 or 23 percent, and Tom Ryan, a consumer advocate, who got 70,553 or 12 percent.

Danforth easily defeated Mel Hancock, the leader of a successful drive for a state constitutional amendment limiting state spending and local tax increases.

Meanwhile, Sam Hardage won the Republican nomination to face Kansas Gov. John Carlin, who won renomination by defeating a disc jockey from a country and western bar.

2 men disappear before bail hearing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A lawyer for two men charged with shooting the son of a reputed mob leader said he fears for their safety after they failed to appear for a bail hearing.

The suspects had been in custody briefly after the shooting of Salvatore Testa, but were released after posting $5,000 cash each, 10 percent of the $50,000 bail posted after their arrest Saturday.

Testa, son of Philip "Chicken Man" Testa, who died in a bomb blast in 1981, remained in critical but stable condition at Pennsylvania Hospital with eight wounds from shotgun pellets.

District Attorney Edward Rendell, saying the original bail was too low, got a new bail hearing set for Tuesday so he could ask for bail of $10 million each.

The suspects, Victor DeLuca and Joseph Pedulla, failed to appear. Common Pleas Judge Ned Hirsch revoked their $50,000 bail and sent police to their south Philadelphia homes. They could not be found.

The suspects' lawyer, Vincent J. Ziccardi, said he was "fearful for their lives."

"I don't know if they are over the Delaware (River) or under the Delaware," Ziccardi told Hirsch. "The reason for their not being here may be beyond their control."

Ziccardi said he had told DeLuca and Pedulla to go to his office Tuesday afternoon before going to court, "but they did not appear. I'm not certain they have absconded."

The lawyer later told reporters, "I was very, very surprised that they didn't show up."

Assistant District Attorney Charles Gallagher said after the hearing, "I think anyone would be concerned with their safety."

NAACP to boycott major movie studio

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The NAACP, frustrated by fruitless meetings with film executives over minority hiring practices, says it is about to select a major film studio as a possible boycott target and also is preparing to take on the television networks.

"During the past eight months we have been meeting and negotiating with the movie industry with varying results," Benjamin L. Hooks, executive director of the 500,000-member National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Tuesday in a prepared statement at a Los Angeles Press Club news conference.

"We found that the problems are serious and deeply entrenched. Now that we have the structure set up for dealing with racial problems within the movie industry, and among TV networks, we will act," Hooks said.

The target studio will be selected within the next week and presented with a list of demands. If the studio fails to meet the demands within a specified time period, a boycott or other actions, such as informational picketing at theaters and production facilities, could begin, Hooks said.

He said NAACP chapters could be called on "to use whatever non-violent means" necessary to achieve the NAACP's goals of increased hiring of blacks.

"We don't have any idea at this point of engaging in civil disobedience," Hooks said, but he did not rule out the possibility.

He said any boycott probably would be limited to the film divisions of the studios, many of which are owned by large conglomerates. But he did not rule out boycotts of conglomerate-owned banks or utilities — two industries already targeted as in need of more minority hiring.

Hooks, an attorney and former member of the Federal Communications Commission, said he would be "loath" to call for a boycott on TV watching.

$200 million suit filed over copter crash deaths

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Five companies and nine individuals are being sued for more than $200 million for the helicopter crash last month in which actor Vic Morrow and two children were killed.

The suit was filed Tuesday in Van Nuys Superior Court for the parents of Renee Shin-Yi Chen, who died July 23 along with Morrow and 7-year-old My-ca Dinh Le during the filming of "The Twilight Zone."

Among the 14 defendants are Warner Bros. Inc. and producer Steven Spielberg. On Friday, Warner Bros. and three individuals were fined $5,000 each by state labor officials because the scene was being shot at 2:30 a.m. State law says children may not work after 6:30 p.m.

Fowl unhurt by Wyoming oil spill

BYRON, Wyo. (AP) — A preliminary inspection indicates a massive crude oil spill in northern Wyoming has caused little damage to waterfowl in the area, although it may be too soon to tell.

"We've seen a few birds that had oil on them, but we don't have a number because we couldn't catch them," said Wyoming Game and Fish Department spokesman Bob Gurney.

The spill occurred early Monday morning or late Sunday night when a 12-inch Platte Pipe Line Co. southwest of Byron broke, spewing about 6,000 barrels of oil — 225,000 gallons — into a private irrigation ditch that drains into Whistle Creek, the Shoshone River and Yellowtail Reservoir.

Gurney manages the 19,000-acre Yellowtail Habitat Unit that straddles the contaminated Shoshone River above Lovell. The unit consists of state and federal land reserved for wildlife habitat.

He said four Game and Fish workers surveyed the river from Whistle Creek to Yellowtail Reservoir by air boat Tuesday. They saw some waterfowl with oil on them but found no individual birds that had been killed or badly hurt by the oil slick, he said.

The equipment used to treat oil-soaked birds after a massive oil spill in the North Platte River in April 1980 has been brought to the site of the new spill, he said.

"All the stuff they had down at the Glenrock spill arrived this afternoon," Gurney said. "We would have used it today but we didn't find any sick birds — at least none we could catch."

Game and Fish workers were to search the river for oil-soaked birds again today, he said, and treat any they find.

For the moment, however, Gurney was mildly optimistic.

"We're really at a good time of year for this to happen, if it had to happen," he said. "We're not in any migration period and there just aren't that many waterfowl in here."

The situation may also have been helped because the Shoshone was running high and fast, dispersing the spilled oil.

Jake Strohman, of the State Department of Environmental Quality, called it one of the largest inland oil spills in U.S. history, and officials said they still don't know why the line ruptured.

The oil made its way into Whistle Creek, then down the creek about 15 miles to the Shoshone. The river carried the oil about 20 miles to the reservoir and about a quarter of a mile into the man-made lake, officials said.

Marathon Oil Co. spokesman Bill Ryder said the break was repaired about 9 a.m. Monday, about the same time it was reported to the state Department of Environmental Quality. He refused to confirm a state water quality official's estimate that 6,000 barrels of oil spilled.

The pipeline company is operated and partially owned by Marathon.

The company had floated booms across the Shoshone in three spots Tuesday and was using vacuum trucks to collect the oil stopped behind them, Ryder said.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Sure Enough, just as I had expected all along, the Citizens of Howard County have had it put to them like never before. The Citizens as well as the elected officials of the different taxing agencies have been misled by the tax appraisal office. We have all been told for the last year that we would not see a tax increase after the re-appraisal. This has got to be the biggest example of trying to pull the wool over the people's eyes that I have ever seen. The taxes on my home went from $539.75 to $1,478.78 or about 300%. If this is not a tax increase, then Mr. Pereira, would you please explain to me what it is. On the form that all Citizens just received it states that no additional revenue will be generated. If this is the case, we all know for sure who is getting the ax, but I would like to know who is getting the tremendous tax break & why?

I was elected by the Citizens of Big Spring to represent them, & this is exactly what I intend to do. I will do everything I possibly can to see that the Citizens are not taken in by the biggest boon-doggle ever to come about in Big Spring. The Majority of our Citizens cannot afford to pay this outrageous tax increase. Can't the tax appraisal office open their eyes & see what this is going to do to an already suffering economy.

I very strongly urge every citizen to file a protest & go before the Appraisal Revue Board. Don't bother wasting your time by first going to Mr. Pereira's office & getting a snow job & maybe a one or two thousand reduction. The Appraisal office doesn't want the Board of Revue to find out how unjust & how many discrepancies there are in this re-appraisal. Be sure & fill out your protest form to meet with the Board of Revue before Aug. 15th. I will do everything I can, but in order for any good to be done, it will take a strong effort & protest by you the Citizens.

A time for concern

Property values increased three or thirty times? Does your appraisal notice indicate an enormous jump in your taxes? Relax, this is not the time for panic, but a time for concern. In fact, you may not even need to be concerned.

Increased values do not automatically mean increased taxes. The only reason the notice contains an estimated tax rate and tax is that the chief appraiser is required to calculate the two by the state property tax code. The taxing entities such as the county and the city set the tax rate that determines taxes, not the chief appraiser.

While no one should panic, this could be the time for action if someone feels their values are too high or unequal. A spokeswoman with the state property tax board said the biggest problem across the state is that people ignore the appraisal notices. Then, when the values are used to determine taxes, people complain and say their values were too high. Take action when you receive your notice — don't wait.

TWO COURSES of action are open concerning values: meeting with the appraisers who set your particular values and meeting with the appraisal review board August 16. If you do not feel your meeting with the appraisal office was sufficient, file a WRITTEN notice of protest with the appraisal review board. You can present your case to the board which acts in a judicial function between the chief appraiser and the individual.

Taxpayer input does not stop with values. After the tax roll has been certified, the individual entities set their tax rates. Public meetings will be held should tax rates increase more than three percent. Taxpayers may also hold a rollback election if a taxing entity seeks more than an eight percent rate increase.

Now is not the time for panic, but for calm examination. Check your records to see if an over-appraisal is possible. Contact the appraisal office. If all else fails, you have 10 days from the time you receive your notice to file a protest with the appraisal review board.

New Wave night

In front of me were two guys with green stripes in their hair. To my left were two very solemn-faced fellows wearing black pants, black jackets, black ties with white shirts and white tennis shoes. Beside me was a teenage girl in a silver sequin twirler's outfit. Behind me were an assortment of personages in miniskirts, oddly striped T-shirts and other decidedly off-the-street wear.

The scene was the center stage crowd at the Elvis Costello concert in Austin Thursday night. The people were some of the 3,800 that crowded into a sweltering building to hear a founding voice of New Wave rock music. The concert was part of some insights into a viable culture — almost a subculture — in America.

NEW WAVE has been slowly making inroads in the strangled doldrums of pop music. And the fashion world is reluctantly reflecting some styles of punk and the New Romantics. Of course, here in West Texas, none of this ever comes into view or earshot. The media was my only contact with what was going on until Austin.

Now the average concert goer prepares pretty much the same to see the latest Loverboy, Van Halen clone perform — four T-shirt, old jeans, some drugs and a six pack. The only thing average about the crowd at the Costello concert was that everybody was from Earth.

I almost lost an eye when a blonde, wearing a black backless formal evening gown, forced her way to the stage by prodding unwary listeners with her Elizabethan broad-brimmed hat. Her attire was complete with elbow-length black gloves. She eventually danced over to a strange-eyed person in a Ramones T-shirt jerking to a strange rhythm of his own.

Most of the dazzlingly bizarre fashion twists belonged to the females. From the aforementioned gown to the curious revival of the brightly colored miniskirt via girl group (the Go-Gos), the women definitely grabbed attention. Hairstyles were more varied on them as well. Mohawks with quarter-inch hair, ponytails jutting from one side of the head, hair standing straight up until curling beneath ears. For the men, most had short hair — I was an aberration with a beard.

THE UNUSUAL was the usual. Variety was expected. Not only was the crowd there to enjoy Costello's music, but it was there to enjoy each other. An undercurrent of humor and fun ran through the costume and the music. Naturally, Costello had serious songs and some important themes. But from his theatrical twirling of his face to his quaint dance steps, he was also there for fun.

After the crowd had wrenched a final encore from a sweating Costello and his band, some pogoed over to a local New Wave club. Pogoing is a dance done by jumping up and down, all one can do wedged in a crowd. Club Foot was decorated in early Marquis de Sade featuring papier-mache figures dangling from the ceiling by chains. An occasional limb could be seen swaying before either stark tin siding or automobile mock-ups.

Again the music was all New Wave — nothing one would hear on the radio and therefore all good. More unusual clothing, more hairstyles, another good band — I could ramble about the evening forever, but what does all of this mean?

First, attempting to label the people and the movement is awkward — even New Wave is too restrictive. The spirit that fuels every aspect of this lifestyle is fantastic in its rebelliousness and adventurous attitude. The quirky humor and daring intelligence are matched by just a plain desire to have fun. Deadly serious, deadly funny and deadly different are all qualities of the limitless arena of this music.

New Wave is in tune with reality. Those with doubts should consider Costello's words: "Maybe you don't believe my heart is in the right place — why don't you take a good look at my face?" Listen.

A year after PATCO strike

WASHINGTON — This week marks the first anniversary of the most dramatic success achieved by Ronald Reagan as President — breaking the illegal air controllers strike. By that bold action, Mr. Reagan showed himself ready to stand up for fairness and against inflation.

In addition, because the shortage of controllers required a touch of re-regulation, he promoted safety in the skies and the health of the major airlines. Still, the lesson is that there is much more to government than dreamed of in the philosophy of the Reagan administration.

Before the strike began on Aug. 3, 1981, 17,000 air controllers guided planes in and out of the country's major cities. About 11,000 supplemented by a couple of hundred controllers reassigned from the armed services, and a thousand flight data assistants, mainly drawn from the ranks of unemployed pilots.

TO ACCOMMODATE the shortage, the Federal Aviation Administration has rationed arrivals and departures at 22 of the country's busiest airports. This allocation of slots amounts to a suspension of the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978. Here are some of the results of the re-regulation:

Total number of flights from the 22 airports involved has been reduced. The limitation has been particularly severe in three cities — Boston, Chicago and New York — where the air controllers union was most powerful.

Reluctant cocaine investigation

WASHINGTON — Federal authorities are proving reluctant to raise the blinds on congressmen who may have been snorting cocaine while they were piously passing laws governing drug use by everyone else.

As has been widely reported, the coke scandal began 16 months ago when I first learned that a dope ring was apparently operating full throttle on Capitol Hill.

Rep. Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., a member of the House Narcotics Committee, agreed to take part in a covert investigation after my associates Indy Badhwar and Jack Mitchell presented evidence of cocaine sales in the halls of Congress. Undercover narcotics agents used Dornan's office as a cover for their investigation.

AS A RESULT of the months-long probe, authorities uncovered a full-fledged dope ring and busted three of the alleged ringleaders, Douglas Marshall, Troy Todd and Robert Finkel. They were arrested after selling undercover cops $15,000 worth of coke, and an additional $250,000 cache was later seized.

The suspected dealers and their contacts began to sing. Briefed by the agents, Dornan sent an eyes-only memo to ranking members of the Narcotics Committee, informing them that seven present and two former members of Congress — "each named by at least three sources" — had been accused of buying cocaine from the ring.

Despite the apparent involvement of congressmen, word on the street was that the federal prosecutors were being importuned to drop the whole hot potato. Aware of this, Dornan, a fiery retheaded maverick who lost out in the GOP Senate primary race in California, sent off a private letter to Daniel Bernstein, the prosecutor in charge of the federal grand jury that is studying the case.

"Alarmingly, some members of Congress may have become im-placated... as possible purchasers of cocaine," Dornan wrote. He said he is aware that it is government policy generally not to prosecute drug users, only dealers.

Since the accusations involve members of Congress, he wrote, "I feel it imperative that the public have every confidence in the legislators who write our drug enforcement laws." He added: "My colleagues in Congress must be certain that their own House is free of allegations of narcotics purchase and use if we are to satisfactorily pursue federal hearings around the nation concerning this plague of drug abuse."

Dornan continued: "By now you have heard that I have had special access to some of the results of interviews conducted by investigators close to this case. That is true. Therefore, I feel it my duty to ask to meet with you personally about said information."

Dornan told Bernstein that "I cannot personally confirm allegations I have heard as true, nor do I accuse fellow members of Congress of possible violations of the laws." Then he added: "I hope these accusations are baseless, but I must insist that they be pursued to their full legal conclusions."

Clearly, the congressman intends to keep the prosecutor's feet to the fire on the Capitol coke caper. But he seems equally determined to keep the investigation from becoming even more of a media circus. In a closed-door session, the House Ethics Committee asked Dornan for a list of the accused legislators. He refused.

Footnote: Prosecutor Bernstein said he could not comment on an active federal investigation.

established carriers have benefited from the restrictions. Strong airlines, such as Delta, have weathered the current recession well. American Airlines has been able to increase its share of the hub-and-spoke traffic out of Dallas-Fort Worth. U.S. Air has done the same in Pittsburgh, and it reported record earnings for the quarter ending in June.

A tempering of union demands for higher wages is still another byproduct of the President's stance against the strike. Though other factors such as unemployment and the weakness of various companies in major industries are far more important, the President's win over the air controllers has played a part in reducing the wage element in the inflation cycle.

Still, the arresting feature of the whole episode is that there is no encore available to the President. The show of toughness against the strikers is a once-only event. It does not affect the long-term constraints now forcing high unemployment, slow growth, and big budget deficits.

Nor, as the paradox of good results flowing from re-regulation demonstrates, is the President's love affair with the free market adequate for the complexities of the modern economy. If anything, the President's effective use of his authority against the controllers shows that he is on the wrong track in believing that the automatic solution to all national problems lies in weakening government.

Bringing nation back to God

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: What do you think we need to do to bring our nation back to God? — Mrs. R.S.T.

DEAR MRS. R.S.T.: Our nation was built basically on a Judeo-Christian foundation, in which God was acknowledged and moral standards were upheld. Even those who did not claim to be believers accepted this framework, and it brought stability and justice to our nation. Now our nation has become in large measure secular, and we are paying the price morally and spiritually.

I know some people feel it is impossible to reverse this trend away from God in our land, but I do not agree with that. There have been times in our past when very few people actively believed in God, and God later brought revival and renewal. It could happen again.

If you are concerned about our nation's spiritual state — and if you are a Christian you should be concerned — then first of all you need to examine your own life. A nation consists of individuals, and revival must first of all begin with each of us. If there are sins we are tolerating in our lives, we need to repent of these. Maybe our sins are obvious, or maybe they are subtle and unseen — but no less harmful. Some of our sins may be directly related to others in our society — looking down on a person of another race, refusing to be concerned about the poor, or tolerating injustice around us.

Then we need to pray for our nation and its leaders. Do you pray every day for the President, the members of Congress, your Governor, and all others in government? The Bible says, "I urge, then, first of all, that requests, prayers, intercession and thanksgiving be made for everyone — for kings and all those in authority" (1 Timothy 2:1-2). Finally, work as you have opportunity for a better society. Vote — get involved if God gives you opportunity in projects for better government — write letters to editors and television stations. Don't antagonize people, if possible, but let your voice be heard.

Social Security bill discussed

Dear Editor:

There happens to be 313,000 persons living in 60 foreign countries currently receiving nearly $1 billion yearly in Social Security benefits, however, only 30 are United States citizens.

Survivors and dependents represent nearly 40% of the general population of Social Security beneficiaries. Mexico, Canada, Italy, Philippines and Greece are the leading countries in this category. Dependents and survivors range from 45 in Canada to 73 in Mexico.

The following legislation in bill H.R. 4449, which was introduced in the "House" by Rep. G. William Whitehurst of the second district of Virginia is known as "The Social Security Alien and Foreign Resident Limitations Act of 1981."

Bill H.R. 4449, if passed would 1) prohibit the payment of Social Security benefits to illegal aliens; 2) in cases of non-U.S. citizens who have paid into the system, the primary wage earner would receive a lump sum, with accrued interest; 3) in cases of United States citizens who move to a foreign country upon retirement, only children and marriages existing before the worker reaches age 57 would be recognized.

Rep. Whitehurst, sponsor of bill H.R. 4449 urges all citizens to write to their congressman and also to Rep. J.J. Pickle (Texas) who happens to be chairman of the House subcommittee on Social Security. Ask them to co-sponsor H.R. 4449. If H.R. 4449 is passed it will save several hundred million dollars each year on Social Security payments to recipients living in foreign countries.

Rep. Whitehurst sponsor of H.R. 4449 claims that by giving more giveaways to Social Security recipients in foreign countries we have already created an international welfare state and I am sure you will have to agree with Rep. Whitehurst on this point.

Official: parents should police day-care industry

By JANET WARREN
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Given the ever-increasing number of complaints of sexual abuse and neglect at day-care centers, parents should spend at least as much time selecting those facilities as they do a new car. But the auto usually gets more attention, a state official says.

A lot of the policing of that burgeoning industry is falling on the parents' backs since, with federal budget cuts, the state doesn't have the staff to keep up with routine inspections at those operations. Much of their time is spent handling complaints, said David Beard, director of daycare licensing for the Texas Department of Human Resources.

"I would say I'm deeply concerned. Parents frequently shop longer and more extensively for their automobile than for a place for their children to stay during the day," Beard said.

"My overall concern is that parents increase their vigilance," Beard said. "People using day-care centers should help take up the slack and be more vigilant about what's happening to their children during the day."

Since 1977, the number of day-care facilities in Texas has jumped 120 percent while budget cuts have chopped the number of state inspectors by 60 percent, he said.

Meanwhile, the number of allegations of physical and sexual abuse, confinement, inadequate staff and other problems at day-care centers has climbed. The state's 119 inspectors try to visit each operation twice a year to ensure they meet minimum standards, but complaints take top priority.

"We do investigate any complaint we receive," Beard said. "Sometimes we can't make the required inspection visits because we're making the required complaint visits."

In the last three months of 1979, there were 726 complaints filed with the human resources department about day-care operations. In the first quarter of 1982, there were 982, Beard said.

Statewide tallies show that the department received the following number of complaints in June: physical abuse, 49; sexual abuse, seven; confinement, seven; and hazardous conditions, 73.

The department is seeking funding for more employees just to maintain its present level of operation.

"We tend to think there would be fewer complaints and license revocations if we had enough staff to be at the facility more often," Beard said.

In light of the statistics, Beard urges parents to use extreme care in selecting a day-care center.

In choosing, Beard said parents should do the following:

- Ask to see the operation's state license.
- Visit the center at different times of day.
- See how the staff relates to the children. "Is the noise there happy noise or a distressed noise? You can tell," Beard said.
- See if the children are in competition for the toys. If they are, the operation does not have enough toys.
- Small, at-home operations, even if they are not quite on the scale of day-care centers, must be registered with the state. The individual must pledge the operation meets minimum standards for that level of care.

Trapeze artist injured by fall

DALLAS (AP) — Circus spokesmen say the stunt is one of the most dangerous in the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey show — trapeze artist Gino Farfan flies through the air, somersaults three times and grabs his father's legs.

But the athletic display of skill and timing turned into an accident Tuesday night before 15,000 people. Farfan slipped, collided with his father Armando Farfan, fell into a net and lay unconscious for several minutes.

"He fell head first into the net," said Tim Holst, performance director for the circus. "There was blood. There were some lacerations on the back of his neck."

Farfan, who has been with the circus for nine years, was rushed to the Baylor University Medical Center. A paramedic at the scene said he had a head injury, possibly a fracture of his skull or some bones.

Doctors at Baylor were examining Farfan late Tuesday night to determine the extent of his injuries, said hospital night administrator Wilbur Smith.

Clowns, fellow trapeze artists and other performers huddled in the hospital emergency room to comfort the members of the "Flying Farfans" family and check on one of their own.

Holst said the trick is one of the most difficult for trapeze artists.

"When you swing on the trapeze, you hang on by your hands, go down and build up momentum and as he was doing that, it appeared that one arm slipped off the bar. He may not have had a good grip or whatever... It's a very difficult trick and anything could have happened," Holst said.

The accident occurred about one hour into the three-hour circus.

"It was an accident. The circus is dangerous," said Joseph Gold, the circus' regional marketing director. "They collided in mid-air and Gino fell to the net and Armando lowered himself down."

Gold said said the somersault is "a standard part of the show" and was successful 90 percent of the time.

Ice cream doesn't have to be just plain old chocolate and vanilla. It also can be spiced up with fruit. Homemade ice cream always has that special taste that is delightful for everyone.

Evelyn Johnson is looking for an old-fashioned Corn Meal Dumplings recipe. If you or someone you know has such a recipe send it to the Herald recipe exchange. If you have a special recipe that you would like to share send it in too.

Chill in refrigerator, then add second cup of milk and remaining ingredients. Freeze in a crank-type or electric ice cream freezer, using 1 part rock salt to 8 parts ice. Stores well in freezer without forming ice crystals. To freeze in refrigerator, freeze until mushy, then beat to break up ice crystals. Return to freezing compartment until hard. Makes about 1/2 gallon.

ICE CREAM TREAT—On those hot summer days, cool off with this Peach 'n' Ice Cream Pie. It will be delicious at supper as a dessert or by itself as a snack.

BLUEBERRY PUDDING

2 cups fresh blueberries
3 large eggs
1 1/4 cups milk
1 tablespoon butter
1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
3/4 cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
Pinch of salt
Extra blueberries and confectioners' sugar, if desired
Butter a round 9- by 1 1/2-inch cake pan that has a removable bottom.

Rinse the blueberries in cold water and pat dry on paper toweling. In a small bowl, beat the eggs until foamy.

In a small saucepan, heat the milk and the butter until the butter melts and the milk is warm.

In a large bowl, stir together the flour, granulated sugar, baking powder and salt. Add the eggs and beat until blended. Add the milk mixture and beat until smooth — batter will be thin.

Pour 3/4 cup of the batter into the prepared pan. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until set — 7 to 8 minutes. Spread the 2 cups blueberries over the set batter. Pour the remaining batter over the berries. Continue baking in the 375-degree oven until the top is puffed and set looking — 30 to 40 minutes longer.

Cool on a wire rack until pudding comes away from the sides of the pan — about 15 minutes. Remove the pan's side band. If used, garnish with extra blueberries and sprinkle with confectioners' sugar. Serve at once. Makes 8 servings.

Be careful storing food for long periods

Home-preserved food can last as long and be as nutritious as commercially canned food, says a food storage expert. But you have to do it right.

"If it's handled and processed properly, home-preserved food can have the same shelf life as commercially canned food," says D. Delos Ellsworth, director of the Ezra Taft Benson Institute in Provo, Utah.

Home-canned food can have a shelf life of two to five years, depending on the storage environment, he says. But only if you process it carefully according to instructions provided by extension offices and the major bottling companies. Once preserved, food is best kept below 70 degrees F., preferably between 45 and 55. Food stored above 70 has a significantly shortened shelf life.

Experts from the Benson Institute have traveled extensively to learn and teach food storage and gardening techniques to people throughout the world. For decades, Latter-day Saints Church leaders have counseled members to prepare for emergencies by having a year's supply of food, clothing and other necessities and to grow a home garden.

The garden is significant part of ideal home storage program, Ellsworth says. "It's ideal if people produce as much of their own food as they can," he says. "They don't have to have an entire year's supply in cans and cartons. Some of it can be in the ground." A home garden supplies vitamins, minerals and roughage in fresh form. Additionally, some vegetables (green, leafy ones and tomatoes) grow well indoors year-round as long as they have direct or reflected sunlight.

The rest of a home food storage should include only foods that you are used to eating, Ellsworth says. "The first thing to remember is someday you may be eating what you store." And the first thing to consider in planning garden foods for home storage is to plant the foods that you already frequently use in your diet.

Many people store staples such as powdered milk, wheat and honey, but those foods aren't part of their normal diet, he says. People changing from their usual diet to one of only staples or dehydrated foods may become ill and even require hospitalization. "Which is the last thing you want in an emergency," he says.

So instead of storing only staple food items, keep track of what you eat for two weeks and build a storage program around that, Ellsworth says. Most people don't prepare a wide variety of foods at home; they prepare the same things every few weeks. So by recording what you eat for two weeks and multiplying it by 26 with some modification, you can develop a shopping list of what you need for storage.

If you want to include storage items such as dried fruits or dehydrated eggs, begin incorporating them into your diet, he says. "And don't dry foods just because drying is popular now," he says. "Do it because your family likes to eat dried foods."

Ellsworth gives these home storage guidelines: Store a variety of foods in the quantity your family uses. Even if smaller packages cost more per ounce, you save by avoiding waste and contamination of a large opened container which can't be used completely before it spoils.

Your first storage priority should be the basics: grains, legumes, flour, dry milk, sugar, honey, salt, oil and water. The second priority is fruits and vegetables, followed by items like eggs, cheese or meat substitutes.

Don't make a home storage a one-time panic shopping trip that depletes your savings account as well as the local supermarket shelves. Instead, accumulate a supply slowly and carefully.

Dr. Donohue

Crohn's disease a trying ailment

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have a question concerning Crohn's disease. I have that. I know it is a form of colitis, but I really don't have much information on the disease. Can you give me some? What causes it and how can it be controlled? I am presently taking prednisone. I also have a hard time trying to gain weight. I am 6 feet, and 130 pounds, small framed. It seems as though no matter what I eat, I do not gain. Please give me some help. — G.R.

I know that this can be a trying illness, especially for a young person. Crohn's disease is inflammation of the digestive tract. Another name for it is regional ileitis. That refers to inflammation of the ileum, a part of the small intestine, and the structure most often affected in Crohn's disease. However, the inflammation may also appear in the colon, too. From your letter it sounds like this has happened to you, so it would be a form of colitis.

As with so many diseases, we cannot say just what causes the problem, why the inflammation started in the first place. We do know from experience that the affliction usually begins between ages 15 and 35. The symptoms are those expected from inflammation of the digestive tract—pain, diarrhea, fever, weight-loss etc.

Weight-loss reflects the fact that the inflamed intestines cannot absorb food normally. So the person has to make sure that he or she is getting a diet high in calories and rich in protein. They also usually must supplement regular meals with vitamins and minerals. The inflammation is kept under control, as yours has been, through use of steroid drugs, like your prednisone. Another medicine, sulfasalazine, is often used, too.

You have my moral support. You also have examples of many great people who have led and lead today active, healthy lives in spite of Crohn's disease. President Eisenhower was one. And you have a personal hero of Rolf Benirschke, the pro football player. In fact, he's this year's chairman for the National Foundation for Ileitis and Colitis. He has been able to return to full activity as a football player. He has regained all the weight and strength lost from his illness.

So why not drop the foundation a line? They have many helpful pamphlets. The address is: National Foundation for Ileitis and Colitis, 295 Madison Avenue, New York, NY 10017. You can find out how Rolf did it. He's the greatest.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am writing to ask whether it is possible to inherit shyness through the genetic process. Someone said to me that it cannot be inherited. I don't believe this because both of my parents were shy when they were children, and I was that way most of my life. What have you to say about shyness being a genetic trait? — M.H.

Nothing terribly illuminating, I am afraid. If you mean to ask if there is a gene for shyness, I would have to say I don't think there is. At least no one's turned it up yet. It is true that genes do determine our physical makeup, and we might get into deep woods, indeed, trying to relate physical appearance to personality. But shyness, it seems to me, is more of a learned pattern of living, and such patterns are learned early in life from parental influence. It's sort of like inheriting great wealth. You don't need the genes for it, but it usually helps.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am enclosing a sheet I picked up at a health food store. What it describes sounds really great. Needless to say, anything with a promise of eternal youth will be tried by many women, including me. But there's no explanation with the bottle of pills. It is known that hormones do keep women looking and feeling younger. Could this substance be a hormone? I would surely like to know more about it. — Mrs. M.A.

Healthy curiosity like yours is the death of quackery, Mrs. M.A. The substance described is not a hormone. It's an enzyme. It is not going to add any years to your life. I do agree with one statement made in the sheet you sent me. The stuff is "incredible."

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Abby

Romance loses its bloom

DEAR ABBY: I'm 26, but when I was 16, I fell in love with a married man twice my age. (I'll call him Norman.) For nine years there was never anybody else in my life but Norman.

Last year his wife divorced him so he moved in with me. The problem is I don't love him anymore. He is old and boring, and I am more mature now and want to go with men my own age.

Norman still loves me, and says he gave up his family for me and now I have to marry him. I know it was wrong for me to get involved with him in the first place, but must I pay for that mistake the rest of my life? He has done a lot for me, but I could support myself if I had to.

Oh yes, I have a 6-year-old daughter by him, which could complicate things.

What can I do? My life is miserable. I hate to see night-time come because I have to sleep with him, and I can't stand for him to touch me.

I don't want a lecture, I just want to know what to do.

DEAD END
DEAR ABBY: You're lucky you are able to support yourself, because that is exactly what you should do. Talk to a lawyer about your rights and Norman's. But don't continue to live with a man whose touch you can't stand.

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem, but Hollywood does. I want to complain about the trash they call movies today.

I am 50 years old and can still remember the wonderful movies I used to see. I am a housewife, nurse and Christian woman, and I enjoy a good movie, but I refuse to pay $4 to see a movie with four-letter words in it.

I hear the movie industry is going broke. Good! It deserves to go broke. Don't tell me the public likes to pay to get insulted.

Also, please tell your readers where to write to let the movie big shots know that filthy language is keeping a lot of decent people away from the box office.

ONE OF THEM IN ROCKY MOUNT, N.C.
DEAR ONE: Write to: The Motion Picture Association of America, Inc., 1600 I Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

DEAR ABBY: Every year, many children under age 3 are victims of "whiplash shake syndrome." It is caused by adults who shake youngsters violently, often causing permanent brain or eye damage — and even death. (A Dallas, Texas, father presently is being tried in the shaking death of his daughter. Although he didn't mean to kill her, he shook her until she actually died!)

Many people who feel it is brutal to strike a child will shake a child instead. Most doctors do not even recognize the "whiplash shake syndrome," but it has recently been identified as an insidious form of child abuse.

The bottom line, according to two neurological surgeons who have studied this new problem, is, "Don't shake your children!"

If you think there is an important message for parents here, please help spread the word.

FRANK D. IN KEENE, N.H.
DEAR FRANK: Yours is an important message, not only for parents but also for those who teach (or care for) children.

Thanks for shaking them up!

Scapegoat's suffering self-inflicted

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Being unfairly "picked on" by school or office mates is a painful experience but, according to many former "victims" of such harassment, the suffering is often self-inflicted.

In a report on the problem of "scapegoating," writer Sally Helgesen says that many of the former victims she interviewed now admit they actually encouraged the special attention at the time. "In some cases," Helgesen concluded, it appears that a "victim makes herself an easy target for harassment... (because) she achieves a kind of distinction, although not the kind she desired."

The problem of scapegoating is most common during the teen years, when the social structure revolves around a few select cliques. Often an outcast student, in a desperate effort to attract any attention from the social "leaders," will permit or subconsciously encourage the taunting comments. As one former victim, now an adult, recalled of her junior high school days: "Back then, it seemed like people were picking on me for no reason. I never stopped to ask myself what I was doing to make it happen. But now, I see it was partly my fault. In fact, I was really asking for it!" While she remembers wanting to be "distinguished, envied, and looked up to," she felt too insecure to take positive steps to earn her classmates' admiration. "Instead, I hinted that I was friends with a lot of older kids and acted as though I had a boy friend. Classmates saw through this," and, as a result, consistently made fun of her.

Another former victim recounts a similar past. "I felt so bad that this one little group of five girls mocked me. I concentrated on them completely and ignored everyone else in the class." Her own actions, she said she now realizes, only increased her sense of isolation. "All I wanted was to get the popular group to like me. When that failed, she said, "I didn't want any friends at all."

Clearly, not all victims of "scapegoating" do anything to cause or aggravate the harassment themselves. Taunting is still often related to differences in race, religion, social class or appearance. But, whatever the reason, the survey also revealed another common aspect of the problem: "Teacher participation in scapegoating appears to be surprisingly common," Helgesen stated, "and the victims I've talked to all mentioned it." Why? According to one teacher, Martha Martin of Houston, "Teachers fit themselves are often scapegoats. They get blamed if kids don't learn, so if they are not particularly strong or humane, they take it out on someone in the class who seems slow or troublesome."

Whatever your situation, there are effective ways of dealing with scapegoating. First, try not to respond emotionally. Indicate that you find the action simply thoughtless and unnecessary. Don't assume you are "weird," just because your tormentors may suggest it. But, do try to figure out if you are doing something annoying to prompt the hostile reaction. If you realize you are simply being "picked on" unfairly, discuss the problem with your parents or an older friend. For students it may be necessary to change classes or schools. While you shouldn't blow the problem out of proportion, if left unresolved, scapegoating experiences can continue to cause self-esteem problems for victims long after the actual harassment has stopped.

Woman wins bridge tournament, earns rank

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Mrs. M. Rhodes, 809 W. 14th, was a winner in her section of the Zuni Open Pairs, Flight A, a one-day championship in which 488 bridge players competed. She also attained Life Master Rank in the American Contract Bridge League by completing the Master Point requirements at the 1982 North American Summer Championships in Albuquerque. The Zuni Open Pairs championship was an event among six North American Championships, twelve lesser title races and 60 other events which drew 6,000 bridge players to ten days of competition in Albuquerque. Bridge players of every class of skill compete during the meet, one of the major tournaments each year sponsored by the ACBL. The decisive Master Points she earned to attain Life Master Rank were earned when she won first in her section in the Zuni Open Pairs, Flight A. Among the millions who play bridge, fewer than 33,000 players hold the Life Master Rank awarded to players who earn 300 Master Points, including 50 won at demanding regional and championship tournaments. The American Contract Bridge League is a non-profit organization of some 200,000 competitive players in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Bermuda. It conducts 900 tournaments a year and 4,400 clubs provide weekly games throughout the continent. The ACBL, with international headquarters in Memphis, Tenn., is the governing body for bridge play and ethics throughout the four countries.

Boy learns wilderness survival

Larry Guy McDonald recently attended the Colorado Outward Bound Program. American Petrofina Corporation sponsored McDonald on the 23-day course.

The program centers around schooling individuals in wilderness survival. The school is located near Crestone, Colo. in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains.

The Outward Bound course is designed to show an individual that he can push himself beyond his own expectations. Participants experience a solo, finals which consist of covering 45 miles in three days, and a 12 to 15 mile marathon after learning the survival techniques.

McDonald explained that the solo was a time spent completely by yourself and was the most difficult part of the course. One is isolated three days from everyone and does not eat for that time period.

McDonald believes the Outward Bound course is something everyone should experience. He said he had never before been so physically, emotionally and mentally challenged.

American Petrofina annually offers this type of scholarship to its employees and their dependents. McDonald is the first from this area to receive the scholarship.

McDonald is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry W. McDonald, Rt. 1. He is a recent graduate of Coahoma High School and plans to attend Howard College in the fall.

Speech and language learned at two years

You're having morning coffee with a neighbor. Suddenly your two-year-old rushes in to tell you something important: "Sam broke to me ever!"

Since he's not a fluent speaker yet and the urgency of the situation interferes with intelligibility, you don't know what he's trying to convey to you. What to do?

Below are hints about what not to do.

Don't belittle the child with criticism. "Who can understand you when you talk like that?" Don't threaten him. "If you don't talk better no one will ever understand you." Don't bribe him. "If you say it nicely, you can have a cookie." Don't command him. "Say it like this so we know what you mean." Don't overprotect him. "Go out and play and we'll talk about it later."

Now, what to do: Echo what he has said insofar as you can and replace the unintelligible part with one of the "wh" words: Youngster: "Sam broke to me ever." You: "Sam broke what?"

Assure him that you truly understand his feelings (even if you do not understand his speech). This is very reassuring to a child. None of us ever outgrows the appreciation for emotional support. For a child, a hug or squeeze accompanied by simple feedback: "I know you are upset right now. I understand how you feel. Come have a drink and we'll talk about it." Treating a youngster as a sensitive individual with his own sense of personal dignity which can be hurt or gratified will result in cooperative behavior. At about two years, a youngster has increased speech and language comprehension, but still understands only concrete and practical words and statements. He uses many words that have no meaning for him; he's imitating what he's heard without really understanding.

He uses words which he himself creates. This occurs when he wants to say something and he doesn't know the appropriate word. Many children enjoy their own creations and do a lot of it, combining interesting sounds and phrases.

CARLA JACKSON ...to compete in Korea

Jackson off to ACU but Korea is first

GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

Former Big Spring High track standout Carla Jackson will be going to Abilene Christian University this fall but first, she's bound for the Far East.

Jackson was one of 30 high schoolers selected for the women's team that will compete in Seoul, Korea, Aug. 13-15. The team is being coached by ACU men's head track coach Don Hood and Jim Crumpton, head coach at Cal State Fullerton.

She will compete only in the long jump. She leaves for Korea Tuesday and won't be back in West Texas until Aug. 19.

When she returns, she'll have to start packing for the fall semester at ACU. She signed a scholarship agreement with coach Burl McCoy and expects both long jump and run the 400-meters.

"They have good academics," Jackson said of her choice in colleges. She was impressed the school's atmosphere and said "I think it's pretty good" of the track program.

She is also high on McCoy who guided ACU to national recognition in track over the past few springs. Jackson agrees that going to a smaller school — she had offers from larger universities such as Oklahoma — will give her a chance to compete more competitively and in more events as a freshman.

Jackson won the Class AAAAA long jump this past spring with a state record 20-3 leap. At the district level, she won golds in the long jump, triple jump, 200 meters and ran on winning 1,600 and 800-meter relay teams.

At the regional meet in Lubbock, she won the long jump, triple jump and 200 meters again but performed only up to par in the long jump — her favorite event — at the state meet.

At The Athletic Congress National Junior Women's Outdoor Meet this past July in Los Angeles, she went 18-10 1/2 to finish in a tied for third, but having to take fourth on second best jump.

"It was one of my 'off days'" she said of her performance in California. "It didn't feel any different that it did at the state meet."

Her most recent venture was to Houston to accept a medal honoring her as the top high school long jumper in the state in Classes AAAAA-AAAAA.

Watson on golf trail of Nelson

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Larry Nelson, the quiet little man who will defend his title this week, is confident and, quite possibly, nearing a peak of his very considerable talents going into the 64th PGA national championship.

But then, so is Tom Watson. "I'm relaxed and happy with the way I'm playing," said Watson, whose latest victory made him only the fifth man in history to win both the U.S. and British Opens in the same year.

"I feel like I can go ahead and shoot some good scores and win the golf tournament," Watson said after a practice round Tuesday in sweltering heat at the 6,862-yard Southern Hills Country Club course.

Watson, the outstanding player in the game and winner of four titles this season, will be attempting to pass another golfing milestone in the last of the year's Big Four events, which begins Thursday.

He's now won four British Opens, two Masters and a U.S. Open crown. He needs only the PGA to join golf's most elite club, the four men who have made a career sweep of all four of the big ones.

They are Nicklaus, Gary Player, Gene Sarazen and Ben Hogan. "I'd like to win it very much," Watson said. "And I'd like to win it this year."

Then he named the men he considered the biggest stumbling blocks in his path.

"You have to go with the men who are playing well now," he said, and ticked off some names: "Cal Peete, Bruce Lietzke, Tom Kite, Craig Stadler.

He paused for a moment, let a mischievous smile play across his face, and added: "And Jack Nicklaus — even though he missed the cut in his last start."

Nicklaus, the victim of Watson's spectacular, winning chip-in at the U.S. Open, includes a record-matching five PGA titles in his unequalled collection of 17 major professional titles.

It is not surprising Watson overlooked Nelson.

"It's been my poorest season in several years," Nelson said after a strong finish in the Canadian Open put him among the top 10. "But I'm only about one good tournament away from matching last year.

Some other major standouts in the 150-man field include Andy Bean, Jerry Pate, Ray Floyd, Hale Irwin, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Weiskopf. Among the foreign stars are Greg Norman and David Graham of Australia, Nick Faldo and Peter Oosterhuis of England, Gary Player of South Africa and Isao Aoki of Japan.

Lee Trevino, who won the 1974 PGA title, is recovering from recent back surgery and was forced to withdraw.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised by ABC, ESPN, the all-sports cable network, will provide live coverage of portions of the first two rounds Thursday and Friday.

East Germans rule swimming gold

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador (AP) — Jorg Woithe of East Germany handed Rowdy Gaines of Winter Haven, Fla., his second straight defeat in one of his world-record specialties by winning the 100-meter freestyle Tuesday night in the closest finish so far at the World Swimming Championships.

Woithe won the event with a time of 50.18 seconds, defeating Gaines by the razor-thin margin of .03 seconds. Per Johansson of Sweden won the bronze medal in 50.25 and Chris Cavanaugh of Saratoga, Calif., was fourth in 50.32.

The East German swimmer won the final despite having a much better performance in the qualifying heats. In the morning, Woithe had set a meet record of 49.60, just minutes after Gaines and Cavanaugh had established world championship records of 50.22 and 49.99, respectively, in their heats.

Michael Gross won the 200 freestyle by .08 seconds on Sunday night.

The only individual gold for the United States on the third day of competition at the Alberto Vallarino arena was in the men's 200 backstroke, as Rick Carey of Mount Kisco, N.Y., set a meet record of 2 minutes, 0.82 seconds.

The East Germans continued to swamp the U.S. in women's swimming with two 1-2 sweeps Tuesday night, while the Americans won two more bronze medals, giving them four third places, no firsts and no seconds in six individual women's events.

The East German women have won four of the six, including victories Tuesday night by Kristin Otto in the 100 backstroke and Carmela Schmidt in the 400 freestyle. Otto won her second gold of the night as the East Germans captured the 400 freestyle relay in 3:43.97, with the U.S. second in 3:45.76 and Holland third in 3:45.96. It also was the second gold for Birgit Meineke, who captured the 100 freestyle Sunday night, while Susanne Link and Caren Metschuck also won golds as members of the winning team.

Petra Schneider of East Germany, winner of the 400 individual medley in world-record time on Sunday and top qualifier in the 400 freestyle, was the silver medalist in 4:10.08, while Tiffany Cohen of Mission Viejo, Calif., earned the bronze in 4:11.85.

In the 200 backstroke, Carey outswam Sandor Wladar and also broke the meet record the Hungarian had set in the prelims.

Yankees fire Michael... again

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees fired Manager Gene Michael following a doubleheader loss to the Chicago White Sox Tuesday night and appointed former pitching coach Clyde King as interim manager for the rest of the season.

King originally joined the Yankees seven years ago as a special assignment scout. His duties included working and traveling with the team in 1978 and again in 1980 to work with pitcher Ron Guidry. Last year, he was named pitching coach May 28 and finished the season in that role.

King managed the San Francisco Giants in 1969-70 and the Atlanta Braves in 1974-75.

The 44-year-old Michael was named manager of the Yankees for the second time last April 25, replacing Lemon, who had replaced Michael as manager on Sept. 6, 1981. Michael originally was named manager on Nov. 21, 1980, succeeding Dick Howser.

Michael was fired last season after publicly telling Steinbrenner to stop interfering with the way he managed the team. The Yankees won the first-half AL East crown and, under Lemon, advanced to the World Series, where they were beaten by Los Angeles.

Steinbrenner personally made the announcement of the Yankees' latest managerial switch, their seventh — involving five men — since 1975.

"I just feel a change was necessary," he said. "Sometimes you wish you could let go a lot of players instead of the manager. But that's not the way this game is structured. Some players on this team are not as good as they think they are."

The Yankees have a 50-50 record and are only 2 1/2 games ahead of last-place Toronto in the East. Under Michael this season, they were 44-42.

King, 57, becomes the Yankees' third manager this season. Michael replaced Bob Lemon April 25.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner made the announcement after the Yankees lost 1-0 and 14-2 to Chicago, giving the team a four-game losing streak and dropping it into a fifth-place tie with Detroit in the American League East, eight games out of first place.

King, who has been a member of the Yankee organization since 1976 and was one of the club's five pitching coaches this season, will take over for Wednesday's two-night doubleheader against Chicago.

Steinbrenner said King is taking the manager's job "reluctantly but willingly" as a favor to the owner.

King began the season as an advance scout and was named pitching coach June 11. On July 19, King was moved to the front office on special assignment.

Red Sox fourth in tourney

PECOS — A one-run loss in the first game spoiled the chances of a tournament championship here for the Big Spring Red Sox this past weekend.

The Sox saw their 11-game win streak tumble in the tourney opener as the Loving, N.M., Falcons took a 4-3 victory. The Falcons scored three runs — two unearned — in the bottom of the seventh to hand Luis Rodriguez the defeat in relief of starter David Cruz.

The Sox went on to rip Monahans 4-2 and then won the consolation trophy with a 9-3 win over the Saragosa A's. Rodriguez and John Morellon were named to the all-tournament team. The Sox are now 13-2 on the year.

All items carry our famous EKCO ETERNA™ five year warranty.

All handles are specially contoured for easy use and are made of 100% PAKKAWOOD™. It is a combination of northern and imported hardwood and phenolic resins blended together through the use of extremely high temperature and tons of pressure. In a few hours we have been able to do what has taken Mother Nature thousands and thousands of years to accomplish... produce a type of material similar to petrified wood. Our PAKKAWOOD™ handle is resistant to burns, bacteria stains, usual household acids as well as being dishwasher safe. Under normal use it will not chip, peel, break, crack or melt. No two handles look exactly alike because the natural grain of the wood is retained in the process.

Ekco's CLASSIC CUTLERY blades are specifically made for hard kitchen use. The true beauty and cutting ability of the knife blade is the perfect combination of carbon and chromium which produces a fine quality, stain less steel alloy. It is specifically suited for kitchen knives because it is resistant to rust corrosion and withstands repeated, prolonged exposure to moisture that stains and dulls ordinary steel. Meal preparation calls for much cutting, slicing, paring, chopping, coring, boning or trimming, and it is impossible for one knife to do all these tasks easily, swiftly and well.

Radioactivity from cigarette smoke may cause cancer

BOSTON (AP) — Radioactivity from tiny particles in cigarette smoke may cause cancer, cardiovascular disease and advanced aging among heavy smokers, according to doctors and researchers.

A pack-a-day smoker could absorb enough radiation to "have the same kind of action on the body as standing in front of an X-ray machine," said Dr. R.T. Ravenholt, director of world health surveys for the Centers for Disease Control.

Ravenholt was one of several doctors to write to the New England Journal of Medicine on radioactivity in cigarette smoke. Their letters were published in today's issue of the magazine.

The correspondence was in response to a February letter written by Joseph R. Di Franza and Thomas H. Winters, two University of Massachusetts Medical Center doctors, who reviewed other research and their own observations on the subject.

Anne Browder, a spokeswoman for the Tobacco

Institute, disputed the doctors' conclusions, saying that much of the research they used is outdated.

"It seems that smoking is the scapegoat for everything and anything in our society and now radiation is being attributed to it," she said.

Di Franza and Winters said polonium, a radioactive element found in phosphate fertilizers, produces alpha radiation equivalent to 300 chest X-rays a year — about 100 times the average background radiation — in the bodies of those who smoke 1½ packs of cigarettes a day.

"Alpha emitters in cigarette smoke result in appreciable radiation exposure to the bronchial epithelium of smokers and probably second-hand smokers," they wrote.

The journal published another letter by the pair, who called for federal funding of research into the effects of cigarette radiation.

Winters said his office has been swamped by letters and calls from those who said they were giving up smoking as a result of the journal letter.

"There are a hundred articles on the subject, but few people outside this small select group know anything about this hazard," he said in an interview.

Ravenholt, who did research on the subject in the 1960s, wrote that radioactive particles in cigarette smoke can cause "accelerated aging, and early death...reminiscent of the disease and mortality patterns afflicting early radiologists and others with long-term exposure to X-rays and other forms of ionizing radiation."

His letter included a table showing a higher-than-expected rate of cancer among non-smokers.

"The implications are so huge it just seems as though very few people can think about it squarely," he said in an interview. "The American public is exposed to far more radiation from the smoking of tobacco than they are from any other source or indeed from any other source combined."

New use for umbilical cords found

MIAMI (AP) — Umbilical cords that normally would be thrown away are being used to help extend lives of the elderly in high-risk vascular surgery, doctors say.

About 220 hospitals nationally, including seven in southern Florida, are saving umbilical cords, normally discarded after birth, for use in operations to bypass clogged veins and arteries, said Dr. Richard Turner, director of clinical research of Meadox Medicals Inc. of Oakland, N.J.

The procedure, known as an "umbilical vein arterial transplant," is used when other methods of artery transplant are unsuitable, especially in critically ill elderly patients whose survival chances decrease the longer they are on the operating table.

Previously, doctors used either synthetic implants or veins removed from another part of the body, a process which adds to the length of the operation.

"You use the cord to save time in an older patient who is high risk," said Dr. Harry Senciszewski, a vascular surgeon at Mount Sinai Medical Center in Miami.

He said reprocessed umbilical cords are more flexible than synthetic materials and are similar to a regular vein. "It's very successful. It lasts longer," he said.

Meadox is the only company to manufacture the "recycled" umbilical cords, which are sheathed in a fine plastic mesh for support. The company has successfully used about 20,000 cords worldwide.

A Minneapolis company uses the whole cord in a similar operation for kidney patients, but it has been unable to find a long-term preservative, as Meadox has, Turner said.

The cords are gathered after birth, cleaned, frozen and picked up every two weeks. Hospitals are paid $2 for each cord.

"I think it's fantastic," said John Elder, who watched an obstetrician at James Archer Smith Hospital in Homestead save his son's umbilical cord last week. "It's wonderful that somebody can get help from something that would get tossed in the trash can."

Paula Riggs, a nurse at James Archer Smith Hospital here and head of the salvage program, said umbilical cords must measure about 13½ inches and be free of damage from childbirth.

"It has to be completely milked of blood," Ms. Riggs said. "If there are any blood clots in the (umbilical) cord, it is of no value. We have to cleanse it, rinse it and then bag it."

The cords are sterilized and stripped of all but two arteries and a vein. The cords require no refrigeration and have a shelf life of two years, Turner said.

In the preservation process, the umbilical cord ceases to be living tissue. "Since it's no longer a living tissue, there is no problem with (human) rejection," Turner said.

The company, which has experimented with the cord since 1976, was granted approval to use it in leg bypasses and "straight (vein) replacement" in January 1979, he said.

Border officials fight spread of tuberculosis

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) — Health officials fight a daily battle along the Mexican border against the spread of tuberculosis, which occurs in northern Mexico at 10 times the rate for Texas.

"Treating TB along this border is just like nothing anywhere else in this country," said Dr. Richard Allison, a consultant to the Texas Department of Health tuberculosis control program. "It's just unbelievable. Most physicians have never seen what we have down here."

Allison recently retired as superintendent of the Harlingen Chest Hospital, a state facility for lung disorders.

The bacterial disease was a leading cause of death in the United States before the advent of the drug streptomycin in 1944. In 1946, 2,923 Texans died from it. Last year, the disease claimed 91 lives.

The airborne tubercle bacilli germs most often infect the lungs but can invade other body parts. The germs are coughed or sneezed into the air where they can be inhaled. Body defenses can halt the germ's spread or the bacteria may become dormant, posing threat of later outbreak.

Tuberculosis was once called "consumption" for the way it destroys lung cells and "consumes" tissues if left untreated.

Treatment formerly meant months at a sanatorium or TB hospital or surgery to remove infected tissue.

Prevention and detection programs, such as skin tests for school children, and stronger drugs have lowered the incidence of TB and almost eliminated it in some areas. Patients now frequently require no hospitalization.

It remains a major health problem in areas of poverty, poor diet and crowded living conditions, said Van Fitzgerald, TB control officer for Region 8 of the state health department. The state TB program began in 1965 providing free medical services to anyone, ranging from detection tests to medicine and hospitalization.

Region 8 consists of 26 South Texas counties, including the area bordering Mexico between Laredo and Brownsville.

In 1981, Texas had 2,015 TB cases for a rate of 13.7 per 100,000 population. There were 27,689 cases that year for a rate of 12.6 per 100,000.

The five border counties in Region 8 recorded 193 cases for a rate of 29.3, more than twice the state and national figures. Cameron County, which includes Brownsville, recorded 72 cases for an incidence of 32.7 per 100,000.

"We see now that as long as the border is wide open, there's always going to be a problem," Fitzgerald said. "They used to talk about eradicating TB. Now we talk about controlling it."

The problem probably would be worse without the use of a vaccine in Mexico, said Allison. The BCG vaccine, which uses live bovine bacteria, has not been deemed effective by the American medical community in preventing TB, he said.

However, it tends to build up body defenses against future infections, he said.

Mexico lacks the money and equipment needed for the laboratory work required to analyze each case and prescribe specific drugs to combat the infection, Allison said.

A major problem in treating tuberculosis along the border is that patients will have strains of the disease that are resistant to one or more drugs.

"We see people daily who have been prescribed drugs by a Mexican physician without knowing if the person is resistant or not," he said.

"Some of these people are here legally, others illegally. We don't pay attention to that. If they've got a communicable disease and they're on this side, we feel we ought to be doing something about it," he added.

American physicians prescribe several drugs at once to reduce the chances the disease will develop resistance to medicine.

Resistance also occurs if a person fails to take drugs for the extended cure period, Allison said.

"Our biggest bugaboo in curing is non-compliance of the patients. That's always been a headache," he said. "Anyone who has a working mind, we should be able to convince them to take the drugs when they have an active case of TB but sometimes we can't."

Once a case of tuberculosis is discovered or reported by a private physician, state health officials contact family members, friends and anyone who might have been infected.

Children under age 4, adolescents, the elderly, diabetics, persons taking steroids and those with other medical conditions are considered more susceptible to TB.

A positive skin test indicates the person has the germ. Once a person has been infected, the skin test will remain positive even after he has been pronounced cured.

Allison said he would recommend an annual skin test for anyone living along the border "who has general contacts with a lot of people," particularly in poverty areas.

"I've seen whole families infected from hiring a maid in Mexico," he added.

"Anyone who has persistently coughs up phlegm without an accompanying cold should see a doctor," he added.

The border is not the only area with higher than average TB rates.

Harris (Houston) and Galveston counties had a combined total of 642 cases in 1981 for a rate of 23.8 per 100,000.

According to a state health department report on tuberculosis, part of the problem in the Houston metropolitan area is a high infection rate among the estimated 8,000 Indochinese refugees moving there annually.

"Infectious tuberculosis has been found in about one in every 100 refugees during the first year after arrival," the report said. "About 40 percent of the refugees are infected with tubercle bacilli but show no evidence of disease. Both infected and diseased refugees present significant threats to the public health — one immediate, disease, and one for the future, infection with potential for disease."

Why Reagan OK'd Soviet grain sale, nixed pipeline parts

An AP News Analysis
By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — When Ronald Reagan says farmers are very much on his mind, it could explain something about why he thinks it's all right for Americans to sell grain to the Soviets and all wrong for the Europeans to sell them pipeline parts.

American grain farmers will be voting in this fall's elections. French and Italian turbine mechanics won't, no matter what happens in Poland.

Farmers are critical to the Republican Party this year, for the party is stumbling in the Midwest, even as it seems to be doing pretty well in the rest of the country. If farmers blame Republican candidates for the high interest rates and poor commodity prices that are squeezing profits, the GOP could be in deep trouble in the American heartland.

Huge grain sales to the Soviets would help ease some of the pressure on farmers. And that's just what Reagan paved the way for with his decision last week to negotiate a one-year extension of the grain sale agreement with the Soviets.

To make certain farmers get the connection between grain sales and the elections, Reagan flew to Iowa to talk to farm groups.

"The granary door is open and the exchange will be cash on the barrelhead," Reagan told corn growers in Des Moines, adding that "the farmers of America are very much on my mind."

But martial law in Poland makes Reagan's courting of Farm Belt voters a very dangerous game. Indeed, charges of hypocrisy are being hurled at Reagan from America's allies in Europe, for Reagan has strongly condemned the situation in Poland and the Soviet role in that repression.

To punish the Soviets for their support of repression in Poland, Reagan has pressured Europeans not to sell the Soviets the turbines and other equipment they need to complete a 3,500-mile natural gas pipeline. The pipeline, which could be operational in 1984, would allow the Soviets to sell huge quantities of fuel to the Europeans.

Companies in France, Italy, Germany and Great Britain — backed by their governments — have given every sign they will ignore Reagan's sanctions, pointing to the grain sales as they make their defiance clear.

The Reagan administration's gesture in the direction of punishing the Soviets on the grain matter has been to refuse to negotiate a long-term renewal of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. grain purchase agreement. Farmers would much prefer a long-term pact, for it would assure them a steady customer.

In any case, the differences between this one-year deal and any long-term pact that might someday be negotiated will not become clear until long after Election Day 1982.

And it is the election that is on the White House agenda these days.

currents in the Midwest are troubling for the GOP.

For one thing, four GOP governors are not seeking re-election. Among those four are William Milliken of Michigan and Robert Ray of Iowa, two of the most durably popular and electable moderate Republican politicians in the country. And Wisconsin Gov. Lee Dreyfus stunned party pros by refusing to run again, even though he was considered a good bet for re-election.

And Minnesota Gov. Albert Quie, who won in 1978 when the GOP swept the Statehouse and both U.S. Senate seats there, is also bowing out.

Cash-only gas sales prove successful

NEW YORK (AP) — Business has mushroomed since Atlantic Richfield Co. banished credit cards from its service stations and instituted a cash-only policy on all gasoline sales.

James Morrison, president of Arco Petroleum Products Co., told a news conference the 2,800 Arco-owned service stations increased volume by more than 50 percent in May, June and July compared with the same period a year before.

The news conference was held in Los Angeles and beamed by satellite to New York, Washington and Philadelphia.

Morrison said the average Arco station sold 106,000 gallons of gasoline in June compared with an industry average of 50,000 gallons in March, before credit cards were eliminated. Arco stations averaged sales of 62,000 gallons a month, he said.

Arco, the nation's seventh largest oil company, stopped accepting credit cards at its service stations April 15 in an attempt to boost gasoline marketing profits. Arco said eliminating the credit program saved it $73 million a year.

At the same time, Arco shaved 2.8 cents per gallon from the wholesale price of gasoline to its dealers and suggested dealers pass the savings on to the motorist.

No other major company followed Arco's lead in eliminating credit cards, but several, including Exxon Corp., are experimenting with charging dealers a fee for every credit sale. Some stations also are discounting gasoline to customers who pay by cash.

"Our studies had said the consumer wanted and would respond to lower prices, and that has been confirmed," Morrison said.

Dan Lundberg, a Los Angeles analyst who publishes a national survey of gasoline marketing trends, said the latest reports from service stations indicated Arco dealers were passing along the price savings to motorists. And, he said, Arco was increasing its share of some major markets in the process.

For instance, Lundberg said, a July 23 survey found Arco's average price for leaded regular gasoline sold at self-service stations in Los Angeles was 5.85 cents a gallon cheaper than the average for other major companies and 1.45 cents cheaper than the independents.

Lundberg said Arco moved into second place in California with a 13.96 percent share of the market in May. It was in fifth place in January, with a 9.19 percent share.

He attributed the rise to motorist response to lower prices.

In the first six months of the year, Arco's profit increased 4 percent to $795.2 million on a 13 percent decline in sales compared with the 1981 first half.

At the same time, other major companies reported sharp earnings declines for the period. Exxon's profit was off 77.9 percent, Mobil's fell 53 percent and Texaco Inc.'s plummeted 44.6 percent.

Bus Boys serve own rock 'n' roll

• "American Worker", The Bus Boys, Arista Records
The Bus Boys tout themselves as an American rock 'n' roll band. On their new album "American Worker" they attempt to redefine different types of music — whether it be reggae, synthesizer pop, or surf music — and create their own distinctive style of American rock 'n' roll.

Record Review

In some ways it seems the Bus Boys set out to prove they could play any kind of music. On just this one album of 10 songs you can hear fifties-fueled rock 'n' roll, heavy metal, reggae, pop, soul, funk and surf music. While the band is competent at playing these styles, it makes you wonder if the Bus Boys might be better off settling in with just a few well-defined forms of music rather than trying to cover the whole genre of rock 'n' roll.

However, that's a minor point, because the album is ambitious and filled with lost and found visions of the American Dream. The Bus Boys weave their music with social commentary and we hear songs about the economy, prejudice, having fun, having your back against the wall, courage and of course, love. The Bus Boys are not only interested in making their music sound good, they want it to say something and with "American Worker" they make some fine subtle points about our world today.

In "I Get Lost" singer Gus Loundermon tell us of the prejudice he's seen on the streets even though the constitution says everyone is equal. The song lets us know laws only work as well as people let them.

The Bus Boys attack stereotypical thinking in "Soul Surfing U.S.A." and poke fun at people who are victims of a closed mind. The group wants us to know it's all right to try new things. The Bus Boys are eager to break new ground and they want their audience to follow along. They are eager to provide us with inspiration and hope for a better tomorrow.

I'm not sure the Bus Boys have found themselves yet with this album. It seems they still have a way to go before they settle into a comfortable style which suits them musically and lyrically. But for right now they're working hard and caring about what they put on vinyl, which is refreshing in these days of stale MOR music.

Writer goes in search of 'Maltese Falcon'

By JOHN WINN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

VALLETTA, Malta (AP) — The mystery started with a simple question to a cab driver: Where is the Maltese Falcon?

"We don't get many birds around here," the cabbie replied.

"No, not the bird. You know, the legendary jewel-encrusted statue."

That started a week-long search for the inspiration of Dashiell Hammett's "The Maltese Falcon," and for the classic movie of the same name starring Humphrey Bogart.

An unscientific survey of native Maltese produced a surprising result. Almost none of them had heard of the book, much less seen the movie.

And the stylized black-enamel statue of the falcon that drove Sydney Greenstreet to murder and mayhem across two continents seemed a natural trinket for selling to tourists.

That led to Republic Street, the clogged thoroughfare of downtown Valletta. The street is lined with shops of all descriptions, mainly catering to tourists. Nowhere was there a statue of the falcon, and the proprietors met questions about the absence of such an obvious tourist attraction with a blank stare.

One owner, however, did offer to sell a book on the birds of Malta. It listed four types of falcons that are seen on Malta — none of them native and none of them called Maltese.

And it turned out that the cab driver was right, they don't get many birds, or at least falcons, on Malta.

At most, the book said, only four or five of each falcon group are seen each year on the island during migration.

THE SHOP owner then pointed down the street to the first real clue. It was in the Biblioteca — this island nation's main library, where all the important historical documents of Malta's much-conquered existence are kept.

The librarian said there indeed is a legend of the Maltese falcon, and then shuffled off into a backroom. He emerged 10 minutes later carrying a crumbling book.

In it was this story: The Knights of St. John came from the medieval Order of John the Baptist, established in Jerusalem by Italian merchants as a hospital order to care for pilgrims to the Holy Land. The order eventually developed into a military organization, whose knights took vows of chastity, poverty and obedience.

In 1291, the knights were forced to retreat to Cyprus and then 18 years later to the island of Rhodes, which they held for 200 years.

But in 1522, Rhodes fell to the Ottoman Turks. For several years after, the knights wandered Europe looking for a home.

Finally, in 1530, Emperor Charles V of the Holy Roman Empire offered the knights the 122-square-mile island of Malta, 60 miles south of Sicily.

There were only two conditions. First they had to protect Tripoli 220 miles to the south, and second, they had to pay rent — one falcon a year.

That was the Maltese falcon — the kind with feathers. Even without any jewels, it turned out to be an expensive rent.

Several of Malta's European patrons took a fancy to the idea of receiving the same homage yearly from the knights. Those birds eventually cost more than $3,000 to maintain and ship — a huge amount of money for its time and a treasure that might interest any Sam Spade.

The rent, by the way, stopped in 1718 when Napoleon invaded Malta and kicked out the knights, who later settled in Rome and returned to being a hospital order.

On the road to a mall with CBS

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Kuralt is on the road again. This road leads everywhere — and nowhere. This road ends in a shopping mall.

Tonight's "After the Dream Comes True," anchored by Kuralt, is CBS News' left-handed tribute to shopping malls. Are they a collection of convenience stores coming to the rescue of busy beaver Americans? Or are they coffins of our culture, burying what was real and genuine about this country?

Television

With a wistful glance backwards and a hard look sideways, this wonderfully subtle and sentimental documentary reports that, in the name of progress, future generations will never know the Ma and Pa Marketplace. They'll never know the art of friendly conversation. They'll never know diversity. They'll never know America.

Twenty-five years ago shopping malls didn't exist. But 20th-century pioneers, the developers and real estate salesmen, rediscovered America. To see how far they traveled, CBS went to Overland Park, Kan., where the Oak Park Mall does nearly twice the retail business of downtown Kansas City.

Oak Park doesn't proudly call itself the "Very Best of the Heart of America" for nothing. Its 134 stores, attracting 80,000 customers on a typical Saturday, have all the best — year-round comfortable temperatures, door-to-door muzak and safe shopping.

There are some things about shopping centers that may be a little too controlled," says Dave Sprinkle, manager of Oak Park. "Some of the critics say that some of the basic verve and life is missing in a shopping center, which is possibly so."

But it's nice to know that your wife and kids can come out to Oak Park Mall and not worry about running across a wino out back here by the compactor.

'E.T.' is back on top

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "E.T. The Extra-Terrestrial" recaptured the top slot in the weekend box office race from "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," but both films far outdistanced the rest of a huge pack of summer blockbusters.

Making a quick recovery from its only second-place showing since it was released nine weeks ago, "E.T." grossed $10.4 million at 1,521 theaters in the U.S. and Canada between Friday and Sunday, while "Whorehouse" roped in $9 million at 1,435 theaters.

It was the first weekend that "E.T." had slid below $11 million, but for the eighth-straight week Steven Spielberg's tale of a lovable, stranded alien continued to set new records for gross receipts to date.
