Anatomy of a tragedy

Communication gap may have caused newborn infant's death

By CAROL DANIEL Staff Writer

Six weeks have passed since a baby born to 19-year-old Rosalinda Alvarez and her husband, Martin, died in the Malone-Hogan intensive care unit.

During those hot summer days, Rosalinda and Martin have thought about and been grateful for the care their infant girl received from a midwife, an ambulance driver, doctors and nurses.

But they also have thought about and believe their daughter could have lived, could have grown healthy and happy, if she had been delivered properly, by caesarean section.

Rosalinda's obstetrician, Dr. Hubert Jean-Louis, and officials at Cowper Clinic agree with the Alvarezes on that point. They don't agree that Martin and Rosalinda were forced economically to have the full-breach baby delivered by a midwife.

AMID PANIC and confusion, the Alvarez baby was born June 29 in a midwife's home. It was scorching hot that Tuesday afternoon as Rosalinda's female relatives crowded the small, plain delivery room.

The licensed midwife, Benita Viera of 113 N.E. Ninth, worked hard but there were complications. She had never seen the small-framed Rosalinda before, never even delivered a breach baby before.

It was a first for Rosalinda, too. It was her first pregnancy and the baby she carried was large, weighing Rosalinda said she was frightened because Dr. Jean-Louis had told her only days before that the baby was breach, moving down the birth canal feet first instead of head first. She said he told her a full-breach baby must be delivered surgically and, because of the complicated procedure, the delivery would cost more.

Rosalinda and Martin said that's why they turned in desperation to Mrs. Viera. They said it was impossible to come up with the required money overnight. They needed the midwife to be there, to help. Mrs. Viera said she could not refuse. The baby was delivered.

It is uncertain who actually delivered the baby.' Shaffer Ambulance Service owner John Korell said he delivered in the final phases. A neighbor had called the ambulance during the delivery. Korell said that when he arrived, all but the head was delivered and the cervix had tightened around the baby's neck.

Korell said he massaged the "muscles a bit to relax them," releasing the baby from the cervix. Then he gave the baby cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) because she could not breathe on her own, Korell said.

Mrs. Viera said "something was wrong" with the infant, but she was the one who delivered her, the "baby was completely out" when the ambulance arrived

Two days later the newborn died in the Malone-Hogan intensive care unit. Named simply Rosalinda Alvarez II, she was buried Friday, June 30, in Coahoma Cemetery.

WHY DID MRS. VIERA agree to assist in such a complicated birth, a birth she knew was full-breach? "How can you see a girl about to have a baby and not help out?" she said through an interpreter, her daughter Angie.

Mrs. Viera, 58, says she has 30 years' experience delivering babies and says she delivers an average of one baby every two or three months.

Mrs. Viera said she offered no guarantees, only that she would do what she could. The Alvarezes accepted gratefully because they felt they had no other choice, Rosalinda said.

The Alvarezes said they felt helpless because Cowper Clinic had turned them away the day before. Rosalinda was scheduled to enter Cowper on Monday, in time for surgery possibly on Tuesday, she said.

WHY WERE THEY turned away from Cowper (if indeed they were)?

'She could not come up with the money," Dr. Jean-Louis said. "Now, it is true that she finished her payments (for regular visits to the doctor)," but she had not paid her hospital fee, he said.

Consultant and former administrator of Cowper Clinic Truett Thomas said the Alvarezes were told on March 26 the hospital requires a $945 deposit for a normal delivery. If a caesarean section is required, the deposit is upped to $2,000, he said.

The Alvarezes "had paid $500 in the beginning" to pay off a previous debt, Thomas said. One hundred and seventy-five dollars are still owed on that debt, he said.

The Alvarezes said, yes, they owed Cowper money and were paying off the debt, but the $500 was paid only a week before Rosalinda's due date, not for a debt, but for the baby's delivery. The receipt clearly states it as payment for delivery, Martin said. Since the delivery was not made at Cowper, the $500 later was applied to the debt, leaving $175 owed, Martin said.

Thomas said there is a "difference between denying people service and denying credit. No one sick or injured was refused service at this hospital." Maternity cases are handled differently because patients have at least seven months to pay the bill, he said.

"I want to make this very clear, we never turned away anyone in trouble," Thomas said.

Thomas said Rosalinda would have been helped if she had come to the hospital while in labor and that for a "midwife to try to deliver breach is the height of

SWCID musters strength after its tuition is hiked

By CLIFF COAN Staff Writer

The SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf experienced a "setback" when tuition for its out-of-state students was set at $8,750 per year by the Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System, but the mood at SWCID is not one of despair, says acting SWCID Vice President Samuel Hill.

The 2,000 percent increase in tuition from the old rate of $400 per year came about because of Texas Senate Bill 892, co-authored by Sen. Chet Brooks and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby -abill which says the coordinating board shall determine the estimated cost of educating a student (not including

College were pitching in." Although 107 of SWCID's students expected this fall are out-of-staters, "we're not going to roll over and play dead," Hill said. "It isn't the first hurdle we've had to come over.'

The talks with counselors (who refer students to SWCID) and parents have been encouraging, he added.

"None that I have spoken to have said, 'We're not coming back.' Some have said they're going to explore

The increase in out-of-state tuition Overcrowding leads to TDC violence, state says was announced Friday, even though the legislation leading to the increase was created in May 1981

AUSTIN (AP) - Texas prison officials said Saturday that the number of charges against prison inmates in connection with crimes and rule violations have more than doubled since 1961, as a result of cell overcrowding. Officials filed 9,924 disciplinary reports against inmates by the end of June, compared to only 4,250 reports filed in the first six months of 1982, Texas Department of Corrections spokesmen said. "We have been watching those figures increase substantially in the last year or so," said Harry Whittington, a Texas Department of Corrections board member. "There are many more problems partly because people are sleeping in cramped quarters.

He blamed the Texas prison reform order by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice for the increase Justice's order, banning housing of three inmates to a cell, prompted prison officials to move about 4,000 prisoners into tents. TDC director W.J. Estelle has said that prison security is weakened by the use of tents and more rules infractions.

"We've been told that some inmates have been more assertive, obtrusive and reactionary," he said. "A large part of that is the conditions they are living under.

Three riots broke out last November in the prison system, including one in which tents were burned. But more subjective rule violations have also increased, officials said.

Corrections officers are charging inmates more frequently with "indecent language" and "failure to obey an order," statistics show Prison spokesman Richard A. Hartley said the increased charges were a result of a more violent breed of inmates

But Vincent Nathan, a special master in the prison case, said he remains unconvinced and has asked for information from TDC to explain the sudden increases.

"We are noticing the phenomenon and we are inquiring into it," he said. "I have since been in touch with TDC and I am trying to get a handle on what is happening. It is a striking increase and it piqued my curiosity. I think it is important to know why it is happening."

New Dawson

city formed

Dawson County became a city larger yesterday when the residents of an unincorporated area voted 39-0 to become a city.

The new city, a mile southeast of Lamesa, will be named after Israel Ybanez, who was elected mayor in yesterday's balloting by a similarly nanimous vote.

His wife, Mary, was elected one of two commissioners for the new city, as was Francisco Rodriguez.

The city formerly was a 75-acre area known as the Labor Camp and has a voter population of about 100. Still to come is a possible election to

'One counselor said they feel obligated to sponsor the students and do everything in their power to see to it that their students can continue to come here," he said.

SWCID, located in the Big Spring Industrial Park, is the nation's third largest school for the deaf behind Gallaudet College in Washington D.C. and the National Technical Institute for the Deaf in Rochester, N.Y.

Students are scheduled to begin arriving at SWCID Wednesday, Hill said. Only after all students for the fall semester are on campus will the full impact of the tuition hike be known. The response so far, he said, 'does look encouraging.

SWCID, he said, "is the only state college for the deaf. The state has invested $4.9 million in SWCID, and they're not going to let us go under

Focalpoint

Action reaction: Appraisal

Q. When was the deadline for Texas counties to begin using the appraisal district system?.

A. Full implementation of the new Property Tax Code was to begin Jan. 1, 1982. Fifteen counties delayed reappraisal until 1983 or 1984. More than 220 counties began their consolidated district systems in 1980. Howard County already had a consolidated district prior to the new tax code, but lacked a current reappraisal.

I would like to do that for her also. vices will be at 10 a.m. Maybe I would have talked to the people from the Monday in Trinity Memorial hospital. Chapel of Memories with Dr. Jean-Louis said he would offer this kind of help to 'people who speak, who talk'' and explain their need.

'But I think in her case she was willing to take a chance and that's what happened to her. Taking a chance, that's too bad." he said.

Another point of dispute between the Alvarezes and Dr. Jean-Louis is whether he offered to let them pay the extra $500 doctor's fee in installments.

Martin said that when they went to get their money back after their baby's death, Dr. Jean-Louis returned all the money (about $250-$275), except fees for 11 visits. Additionally, Martin said the doctor claimed he had told the Alvarezes the $500 could have been paid at a later date

Christine Jones, a neighbor who interpreted for the Alvarezes, said, "Martin says that's not what the doctor said. I don't think he (Martin) misunderstood because that doctor speaks Spanish. They maintain he did not say that at all.

WHATEVER THE TRUE circumstances, the largest factor playing in this tragedy seems to be poor communication.

"Sometimes I think there is a ... communication gap between people," Dr. Jean-Louis said of the situation, Thomas agrees. "When talking through an terpreter ... (that's a) bad situation," he said. "One thing we didn't do that might have been done is get one of our panish-speaking employees to talk to her (Rosalinda)." Rosalinda and Martin seem to feel little animosity toward those involved, but they are still grieving. They don't plan to have another baby "anytime soon, Rosalinda said.

"I don't feel anything against her (Mrs. Viera). I kind of just panicked. We knew we were taking a chance because it was a breach. I feel like the midwife did all she could under the circumstances," Rosalinda said.

Whether she will use a midwife again "depends on the circumstances at the time," she said. "I'm very grateful to the ambulance drivers and especially the one who did CPR on the baby. It made a difference on how long the baby lived, even if she didn't survive. They really worked hard to save her. They worked real fast," Rosalinda said.

As for Mrs. Viera, her daughter says the midwife has "been a little afraid since that baby died on her, but she still wants to help and gets down on her knees and gives God thanks for it, when a baby is born."

Associated Press Writer BEIRUT, Lebanon - Her wrinkled face broke into a broad grin as Mother Teresa entered the shell-shattered mental hospital in west Beirut Saturday and began embracing the retarded children huddled in a group on the floor.

After more than two months of Israeli bombardment that destroyed much of the Dar Al-Ajaza Al-Islamia Mental Hospital in the refugee camp of Sabra, 37 severely retarded and handicapped children were being rescued and taken across the Green Line to east Beirut.

Asked what she thought of the devastation wrought by the Israelis in besieged west Beirut, Mother Teresa, winner of the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her work among the sick of Calcutta, said: "I have never been in a war before, but I have seen famine and death.

"I was asking (myself) what do they feel when they do this. I don't understand it. They are all the children of God. Why do they do it, I don't understand."

In her blue fringed white habit, the 72-year-old nun moved quietly through the knot of children, tanging in age from seven to 21, shaking hands with one of the older ones. All the while she murmured soft, reassuring words.

Most of the children seemed unaware of what was happening to them. Some began to cry. For nearly half an hour, the small, stooped nun comforted the children.

Negotiations to get the PLO out of west Beirut snarled again Saturday, with the guerrillas refusing Israel's demand for names of evacuees and Lebanon insisting peacekeepers be deployed simultaneously with the departure.

Sources close to the talks said the PLO also rejected demands for the return of an Israeli pilot captured in the early days of the 9-week-old war and the bodies of nine Israeli soldiers killed in the 1978 invasion.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said the PLO proposed instead that the Israeli pilot and the bodies be exchanged for an undisclosed number of guerrillas iailed in Israel

The Beirut newspaper As Safir, which is close to the Palestine Liberation Organization, said the evacuation could begin as early as Tuesday if U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib is successful in his talks with Israeli leaders.

Habib was expected in Jerusalem Saturday night, an Israeli government spokesman said.

As Safir said Israel had given Habib until 5 p.m. Sunday (10 a.m. CDT) - 72 hours after the latest cease-fire went into effect - to finalize the evacuation plan. The report could not be independently verified.

Lebanon's Moslem elder statesman, Saeb Salam, a key intermediary between Habib and PLO chief Yasser Arafat, said Israel insisted 13,000 guerrillas be evacuated. So far, however, the PLO has slated only 7,100 guerrillas for evacuation, without supplying their names or passport numbers.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan told Habib they insist on the PLO evacuation coinciding with the deployment of a U.S., French and Italian peacekeeping force in west Beirut, Lebanese government sources said.

But Israel insists the Lebanese army go in first and that the multinational peacekeepers go in after the guerrillas depart. Otherwise, Israel says, the PLO fighters might use the multinational force as a shield to launch attacks on Israeli forces ringing Beirut.

3-martini deduction saved

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Senate-House tax negotiating committee decided not to tackle the fabled "three-martini lunch" after all but still faced tough decisions Saturday on unemployment benefits, leasing and cigarette taxes.

The panel resumed deliberations late in the afternoon after meeting all night the night before in its struggle to complete a compromise package of tax and revenues increases totaling $99 billion over three years - the largest revenue-raising measure in peacetime history.

During a nearly 18-hour session that ended just before 9 a.m., the conference committee voted to preserve the full deduction for business meals - the "threemartini lunch" - and approved higher taxes on telephone service, airline passengers and the insurance industry.

Congressional leaders hoped to build support for the tax increase by adding extra unemployment benefits to the measure. Another proposed "sweetener" was to moderate the Senate-approved doubling of the eight-cent-a-pack cigarette tax. Members of the conference committee spent little time Friday night and Saturday morning in public session. The House and Senate delegations would meet separately in private to consider proposals from the other side and then go public only to announce agreements and make new offers. Thus, there was almost no public debate on any part of the bill.

Before miring down in disagreement over several business tax provisions, the conferees wrote into the bill stricter limits on the deduction allowed for medical expenses.

Beginning next year, only expenses that exceed 5 percent of adjusted gross income up from 3 percent — could be deducted The flat deduction of up to $150 for half of medical insurance premiums would be eliminated; the full cost of insurance could be deducted only if lumped with other expenses to meet the 5 percent threshold.

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - Demonthe Soviet bloc, and more protests were strators challenged Communist Poland's planned for Monday martial law authorities for the second day

Union supporters in Victory Square unfurled a banner three feet across bearing the name Solidarity and the message, "Justice Lives. Truth Struggles. Unity Wins. We won't forget." Also printed on the banner were 1956, 1968, 1970, 1976, 1980, 1981, 1982, years of challenges to Communist power Scores of people, including a steady stream of bridal parties, gathered to place flowers at the floral cross in Victory Square, where police chased about 1,500 demonstrators Friday.

Since martial law was imposed Dec. 13, the cross has become a symbol of subtle protest to martial law. It marks the spot where Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski's coffin stood during his funeral in May 1981. Uniformed police were not in sight, and there was no immediate move to rout the protesters as riot police did Friday following the most serious civil disturbances in more than two months.

In Gdansk, Poles quietly laid bouquets adorned with ribbons proclaiming the name of the union at a monument to fallen workers. Police were in sight, according to reports from Gdansk, but access to the monument, erected at Solidarity's insistence, was not restricted.

Prepare now

for County Fair

The Howard County Fair has been scheduled for Sept. 20-25 While that's more than a month away, it's not too soon to begin preparing your entries.

The more exhibits and entries a county fair has, the more exciting it is for everyone involved - the participants, the viewers, and the people who run the show.

WHETHER YOUR BAG is in agriculture, animals, flowers, pets, crafts and hobbies, handwork, baked goods, canned goods, sewing, youth projects or "Over 60" projects - now is the time to start thinking about and polishing up your act.

The county fair is an ancient tradition, combining a medieval flavor with a modern twist. You can learn much at a fair, but -equally important - you can have a great time while you're at it

LAST YEAR'S FAIR was truly outstanding; most people says it was "the best ever."

Paul Hopper of Knott is chairman of this year's fair, and it looks like "the best ever" tradition will continue.

In coming days, details about the fair will be announced in the newspaper. Watch for the stories, and get involved.

The graduate

Another August. For the first time in 16 years there will be no school bells ringing for me. I greet that prospect with great enthusiasm. Sadly, some of my college friends don't.

Many of my friends' lives were so enmeshed in the college merry-goround, at graduation their heads spun at the thought of getting off and making that first strike into the real world

I saw one of those friends recently in my hometown. He is a solemn young man (I'll call him David) just out of four years of college in the East. Now he is back home - the epitome of upper middle-class comfort

David brings with him honors from college, as well as a desire to be left alone. Upon his arrival at his family's ranch-style home, he made it clear that for the moment he is unwilling to make a decision about his future.

BUT BEFORE he could get his swimming trunks on, his parents started bothering him about ambition and his parent's friends began freeloading drinks in honor of his return. He resents it and, like an adolescent, is rebelling.

adulthood - is a real doozy. He faces the confusions and dismays, he says, of being freshly plucked from college and plunged headlong into the intellectual vacuum of his parent's circle of friends. David is short with narrow, sloping shoulders, a beak of a nose and a voice that seems to come from a larynx lined with cotton. He's a little soft. Easy. Gentle. And intelligent.

He never seems sure of what his voice, eyes or hands are doing, or whose orders they are following. He is an immature baccalaureate scholar turned loose in an immature society.

DAVID SEEKS escape from what he foresees as an impending nullity of himself by engraining himself in more and more serious chicanery. He's being mucked down in self-hatred and contempt

As I have done with other friends, I tried to ignore the change in David. It's frightening to see old friends, the ones with whom I laughed and played and shared cherished secrets, grow cynical

Once, I admired and imitated David. Now I cringe at his scathing

Editor's Column

Was school board meeting illegal?

Martin The such in the second for

It's hard to admit making a mistake, and it's painful to admit that mistake in print.

And yet, for the good of the community, I think I should admit a mistake I made recently in connection with a meeting the Big Spring Independent School Board of Trustees conducted after a public hearing concerning the desegregation proposal.

As you may recall, a crowd of people gathered at the public hearing on Thursday, July 8, most of them to protest part of a proposal which would send rural schoolchildren to Bauer Elementary instead of Washington Elementary.

Tension was high at the hearing, although the crowd was well-mannered. Herald reporter Bob Carpenter was covering the event, and I was present as an onlooker.

AFTER THE HEARING, the school board went into "executive session," which is closed to the public and the press. This is where I made my mistake. Had I been thinking, I would have risen to the occasion and questioned the nature of the meeting. Under the Texas Open Meetings Act, all meetings of governmental bodies must be open to the public - with the notable exceptions of consultation with an attorney, purchase of real estate, and personnel discussions.

Had the board members responded that they were going into executive session in order to consult with their attorneys, that would have been perfectly legal for them to do, if indeed, that is what they had done.

After the board went into executive session, Carpenter and I talked in the hall a while and then went in different directions. When I returned to the throng that was gathered in the hall outside of the meeting room, Carpenter told me the lawyers had been sent out of the closed session.

AT THAT POINT, I should have started screaming bloody murder (figuratively speaking). Because if the board members were discussing policy, they should have been discussing policy in front of the crowd, as the law My boss, publisher Tom Watson, was out of town that week, but when he returned the following Monday that was one of the first things he men-tioned to me. He said he feared the board may have been discussing policy, and if so, the meeting should have been open to the public (whether or not the lawyers were present). Otherwise the voters had nothing to a by in learning what the voters had nothing to go by in learning what the motivation of each member's vote was, other than the vote itself.

I did some checking and discovered my boss was right. Section 2(e) of the Open Meetings Act states that a governmental body can close its meeting under the litigation exception in order to consult with an attorney, but the attorney must be with an attorney, but the attorney must be present. According to the Media Law Handbook, published by the State Bar of Texas in 1980, "The key element of this exception is consultation with an attorney. Because the exception is often referred to as the litigation exception, some governmental bodies contend that a closed meeting may be held to discuss litigation. That contention is erroneous. A board may consult with its attorney to discuss litigation in closed session, but it may not meet in closed session for such a discussion when it does not involve consultation with an attorney. Thus, this exception will never be applicable unless the attorney is present in the closed meeting."

JUST THIS WEEK, in a casual conversation with one of the board members, I mentioned this aspect. The board member told me that after the lawyers left the closed meeting, the board members took a poll around the table. Each board member told how he was going to vote on the desegregation issue and why.

If this is true, that meeting was absolutely illegal! And my boss is right; we voters have been deprived of knowledge that would help us in making future decisions about the makeup of the board.

In an effort to confirm what the board member had casually told me, I called board president Carol Hunter this past Friday at her office.

I told her my concerns about the legality of the meeting, and she responded, "I'll let you talk to them (the lawyers). They left for a brief moment while we collected our thoughts and then we opened the meeting again. "I understand what you're saying," Mrs. Hunter told me. "But if you could understand all the thought and prayers and efforts that went into this...I think you're making a mountain out of a

At that point, I asked her if it was true that a us of opinion had been taken at the closed meeting. She replied, "I'm not going to make a statement on this...but we were legal, everything was legal. We were trying to keep everything as cool and comfortable as possible — you know what kind of crowd we had. We didn't want anything outlandish to happen." At that point she appealed to me not to go into the matter in print and then she said, "and I would appreciate your keeping my remarks off the record." I told her the conversation was not off the record, that I had called her as a representative of the press and I had written her remarks down. I then read her remarks back to her. She said she would call the school board's lawyer, Guil Jones III, and have him call me. I called Jones' office twice myself Friday morning, but my calls were not returned. (Update: Jones returned my calls Saturday morning, but I missed him.)

The bottom line is, I made a mistake. But sometimes making a mistake is the best way to learn. You can bet I'll never make that mistake again. The next time any governmental body goes into closed session in Big Spring, it will be asked why.

Our staff reporters now have copies of the Media Law Handbook chapter describing the Open Meetings Act, and they know what can be done in closed session and what cannot. The reporters have been instructed to question the nature of any closed session - in order to help fulfill the press's function as the "watchdog" of democracy.

Look closely at appraisals

Dear Editor,

In all the confusion of the tax appraisal has it occurred to us that if an industry wants to move to Howard County, they might have second thoughts. What company wants to move to an area of high taxes???? This is what is happening to the cities in the North that are seeing their factories move overseas or to places with lower taxes.

Let us look at the unemployment rate in Howard County, and think that when the nation does start on the road to recovery, will a company choose our county to locate? Companies look for low taxes not only for their manufacturing plants, but for the assessment on their employees' homes also.

When asked how the tax appraisal district figures the tax, they take an estimate book, figure the cost to build a new house, then take what they think the house has depreciated ... this is called the Cost Replacement Value, not the market value or what the house would bring on the open market. Doesn't it appear that we are being taxed on the wrong value?

It is my understanding that the utility companies have had their taxes lowered, the utility companies are showing a profit these years, but what about our farmers? Many are in bad shape because the price of cotton has gone from 80 cents to 45 cents in the past three years.

It was reported in the Herald Thursday, Aug. 12, that the oil companies valuations had decreased because of the drop in price of a barrel of oil. When the price of oil went from $3 to $38 a barrel was there a similar increase in their taxes???

We need to look closely on how these oil and utility companies have had their assessments lowered. Then consider the home owner, businessman, farmer and rancher in our taxation.

In 1819 Chief Justice John Marshall declared "that the power to tax involves the power to destroy.' Sincerely,

BILLY W. BRYANT Knott Rt. Box 25

P.S. Since the state law gives the tax appraisal board until 1984 to reassess the values, why not accept last year's valuations and give us another year to straighten this mess out????

- a sort of Alice-in fantasy Wonderland-meets-the-microchip. Time magazine, dazzled by its use of fantastic computer images, calls it a 'historical bench mark'' and a 'vision of the movies' future." Its director, Steven Lisberger, says it is supposed to show "why so many people are so excited about computers and video games.

I went to see "Tron" not because I am one of those people, but because I am not. My acquaintance with computers has been limited to writing newspaper columns on an unusually temperamental one. But anyone of my creaking old age (28) has to hustle to keep times from passing him by "Tron," I hoped, would help me to understand the fascination computers hold for people who can't remember a time when men had not trod the moon. At one level, "Tron" is the riproaring tale of a man sucked into a computer — an adventure, as Time put it, that "offers sights that no eye, no camera, has ever before beheld." But the newest of fantasies is also the oldest of stories. A story intended to offer insights into the world of com-puters, "Tron" is also the Christian passion made intelligible to modern programs (duplicates of the people who wrote them), he fights his way through a harrowing maze of video games to destroy the MCP, return to the world and regain his rightful place in Encom.

'Tron': modern, ancient tale

But recounting this straightforward plot fails to capture the rich religious resonance of the film. The computer world of "Tron" is a replica of the real world, as seen through the prism of Christian theology. Flynn is a godlike figure, creator of revolutionary new programs - the "people" who inhabit the computer, who have been enslaved by the MCP. Like Satan, the MCP is a fallen angel rebelling against his creator. (He informs his user that he could run the world at least 900 times more ef-world at least 900 times more ef-ficiently than ordinary people can.) The MCP's chief agent, Sark, is a Lucifer-like being wearing a horned helmet and glowing red. His name comes from combining "Satan" and "dark'\-- an image of the Prince of Darkness. Sark's legions carry nasty-looking red staffs reminiscent of pitchforks.

pitchforks. pitchforks. The programs are miserable wretches oppressed by the MCP and alienated from their creator, con-demned to suffering in a dark, sub-terraneen world — men and women after the expulsion from Paradise, enslaved by sin, "stolen" from God by the devil. They hope against hope for rescue by their users — gods in whose image they are formed. Those who "believe" in users are ridiculed as "religious fanatics."

THE PROGRAMS only hope lies with Flynn. Like Christ, who is God made flesh, he has to become one of the programs, and to endure their sufferings, to free them from bon-dage. He has his John the Baptist --Tron, a helpful program. And he has his Mary Magdalene — Yori, a female program allied with Tron. When Yori expires from the loss of power, he revives her, an electronic Lazarus.

Company and a series and an an an and a series of the series of the

But Flynn, like Jesus, must suffer at the hands of the fallen angel, being chased by Sark and his minions into every corner of the fallen computer world. After confessing to Tron and Yori that he is not merely another program — "Tm what you call a user" — Flynn dives into the whirling malesterm that is the MCP. user" — Flynn dives into the whirling malestrom that is the MCP, like the crucified Messiah descending into Hell. Upon destroying it, he ascends back into the real world — the risen Christ sitting at the right hand of the Father. The programs are liberated, the oppressor is overthrown and the computer world reconciled to its creator.

THE DIFFERENCE, of course, is that in "Tron" it is man who is God. The film deals with the age-old fear that science, once the servant of humanity, may rebel. But here science also serves as the surrogate of original sin; whoever eats of the tree of knowledge must pay the con-sequences. Having fallen from grace, humanity is bound to turn even the most benign gifts to malignant uses. The rebellion of the computers against their creators replicates man's rebellion against his Creator. THE DIFFERENCE, of course, is his death. Afterward I discovered that my brothers and sister had tricked me out of any inheritance, and I feel very bitter about this. Why do people do things like this? - Mrs. G.C.E.

DEAR MRS. G.C.E.: I am afraid people do things like this because they are naturally very selfish. We often don't like to admit this, but if you look within your own heart honestly you know that you also are a selfish person. Sometimes we seemingly can take the sharp edges off our selfishness and greed by selfdiscipline or education - but even some of the most educated people in the world can be cruel and selfish.

The Bible tells us there is a reason why we are this way. It says the reason is a little three letter word: sin. God did not create us to be that way, but we have rebelled against God and decided that we would run our own lives without him. Instead of doing what God wants us to do, we naturally ek to do whatever we think will be best for us - even if it means hurting other people.

What your brothers and sister did is wrong. But it would be very easy for you to be just as wrong as they are, if you allow hatred and bitterness to overwhelm you. The Bible says, "Hatred stirs up dissension, but love covers over all wrongs" (Proverbs 10:12). It also warns, "He who despises his neighbor sins" (Proverbs 14:21). Bitterness is like an acid that will eat away at you and destroy you if you let it.

What should you do? First of all, you need to commit your life to Christ not only this problem, but every aspect of your life. Have you ever invited Christ into your life by faith, asking him to cleanse you and vowing to follow him? Let him take away the to follow him? Let him take away the sting of bitterness you feel, and then pray that the Holy Spirit will give you the ability to love and forgive those who have wronged you. Your brothers and sister need Christ, and your example of love toward them could be the most powerful testimony they will ever see of Christ's love and forgiveness. Let Christ touch you, and then let him touch others through you as you yield to him.

Texas good and bad

States News Service

WASHINGTON - I was in Texas last week visiting the papers I write for. I had never been in the state before. It was not what I expected. Let me explain.

I am from Washington D.C., the birth place of the three-piece suit. The city where young boys collect bubble gum cards of their favorite bureaucrats. (No. 34 - George K. Mortimor, Labor Department Rookie of the Year. Cut over $20 million in programs this year. Named to President Reagan's All-Slash Team.) Yes, Washington. Stuffy. Plastic. Cold. Narcissistic.

I love it.

Texas. Who needs it? Or so I thought.

I THOUGHT Texas was Lyndon Johnson - loud, shrewd, manipulative. Texas was the television show "Dallas" - fast dealing, fast bucks and faster women. Texas? It's the state that stole my beloved Washington Senators 11 years ago. (Actually, we diehards believe the Senators are on an 11-year road trip and will return shortly.) Texas, I knew all about you.

Texas, you're okay. Here are a few reasons why: • The beauty. There is nothing more magnificent than the sunset on Highway 87 going from San Angelo to Big Spring. The red sun's rays streak across the mountain tops. It is an oil painting by God.

• The food. Nachos. Tacos. Oh no! You must surrender your diet, moments after crossing the border. Even the Dairy Queens are fantastic.

• The women. There is something about a Texas girl.

• The state police. They understand that the federal government wasn't serious about the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit. It was just something to give people a good laugh when they got bored driving on those long highways.

• The pride. Texans believe they can do anything. No task is too large. They feel special about themselves and their state. That's the most striking contrast with the nation's capitol. Washington is peopled by clusters of individuals whose only common denominator is their address.

2,000 pages of objections filed

AUSTIN (AP) - Proposed new textbooks for state public schools teach immorality, violence, socialism, sexism and bad nutrition, according to an array of mainly conservative protesters who testified during a five-day textbook adoption hearing that ended Friday.

The 15-member State Textbook Committee has until Sept. 7 to pore over almost 2,000 pages of objections before it meets again in Austin to compile a list of recommended books to be part of Texas public schools' $37 million shopping list.

Norma Gabler of Longview, a perennial textbook protester, testified first thing Monday, complaining that AUSTIN (AP) - Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-LaMarque, wants a special legislative session before Oct. 1 on the subject of unemployment compensation taxes. Criss made the request to Gov. Bill Clements Thursday.

Criss predicted the state is "looking at a tax hike in excess of 2000 percent, meaning businesses which paid the minimum $6 per employee tax this year will owe over $120 in 1983.'

Clements told a news conference Wednesday that the reported tax increase is "a boogie bear that has been massaged lately and has no foundation in fact. I'm not sure the issue exists.

Health books erred by not stressing the long-term dangers of marijuana, Mrs. Gabler complained.

She also complained that referring to hypothetical presidents as "he or she" "caters to women's lib" since there have never been any female presidents of the United States

The National Organization for Women, which also appears annually to protest schoolbooks as "sexist" and for "stereotyping" women, went unrepresented at this year's hearing when members did not show up or arrived too late to testify.

NOW's written testimony compared roles of women with those of men in illustrations and examples in the textbooks. One NOW chapter complained that an English as a second language text erred by showing a picture of a family with the father taller than the mother.

"Males are generally taller than females," responded the publisher

Austin NOW member Donna York said the hearings are still important but that publishers have responded so well to societal pressure that there are fewer offensive passages

NOW objected to 600 books ten years ago, Ms. York said, but only 25 this year.

Texas Daughters of the American Revolution complained that a civics textbook that said speeches that encourage destruction of property could not be given on school grounds "encourages violence.

Quizzed about that view by a committee member, Mrs. Billy C. Hutcheson of Fort Worth said, "Why bring it up? She also complained about health books she said use the World Health Organization definition of "health," which includes mental health. The WHO definition of "health" "reportedly was written by a Soviet spy," Mrs. Hutcheson said.

Representatives of the Texas State Nutrition Council complained about alleged inaccuracies in health books Dr. Margaret Riley criticized one book for not discussing the positive aspects of food additives and said a chapter on "junk food" would "turn off" fourth-graders.

'There is no food that we classify as 'junk,''' she said. People for the American Way, a liberal, anti-censorship group formed by television sit-com producer Norman Lear, lost its bid to speak at the hearing, but was allowed to submit written responses to the conservative objectors.

The group called protests that discussion constitutes invasion of privacy an attempt to "restrict the free exchange of ideas.

MIDLAND (AP) -- Charles Dickens began his "A Tale of Two Cities" with the words: "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times.

Dickens could have been writing about the West Texas cities of Midland and Odessa and their oil-based economies. Unemployment has jumped in both cities in recent 70/10-20 problems for the same of the most months, but Odessa has been the hander-hit of the two. For Midland, the current slugg is but a lull in what are to analysts say still is the best of times. By Midland performs a different function, "Ashby said. "Midland performs a different function," Ashby said.

Both cities are reeling from the effects of last year's oil boom, which saw more drilling activity in the Permian Basin than ever before. Millions of dollars were pumped into the economy and tens of thousands of unemployed people poured into the area to take high-paying jobs in the over-abundance of oil and a more cautious ap proach by investors has caused an economic downturn and a ripple effect throughout the cities. 'You have to understand that everything we do in Odessa revolves around the petroleum industry," said Richard D. "Buzz" Browning, president of Odessa's Texas Commerce Bank. The boom was the result of fevered investment by financiers eager to get in on the last few months of a tax shelter, said Walter Ashby, an economic analyst with First National Bank of Micland. "The federal income tax change explains almost everything that happened last year," Ashby said. "The investors saw a diminished tax advantage in '82, so they tried to invest as much as possible in 1981 The Reagan administration initiated changes in the tax law that set 50 percent as the maximum tax shelter available for oil investors. "Before, if you were in a 70 percent tax bracket, you could invest in a drilling rig and Uncle Sam was taking 70 percent of the risk," Ashby said.

Ashby said the so-called "oil glut" caused by the worldwide recession has resulted in oil prices that are 11 percent less than this time last year. Now, he said, investors have taken a more cautious att tude and have toned down the fevered approach that characterized last year's boom. The new attitude is to be more certain of drilling in the right spot and to get more

"The things we do are related to the number of wells drilled. The things that Odessa does are related to the number of rigs running. The reason for that is a strange dichotomy that has developed between the cities over the years. "Midland is the homework community. We handle the logical studies, the planning and the in

Browning said. Those companies had made major investments for expansion, but recently have been forced to lay off workers because of the slump.

"Some people had a lot more invested in this gearing-up process than they should have," Browning said. "Now, they're sitting there with a great deal of unused building space or equipment.

"If they paid cash for these capital investments, then they can just not of sit on them for a while. But if they borrowed 100 percent on its they've got a problem."

THE LAYOFFS by manufacturers and drilling com-panies have swelled the ranks of the unemployed to numbers that would have been unthinkable six months ago, said Frank Kasko, manager of the Odessa office of

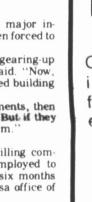

"The bottom has dropped out," Kasko said. "I've never seen anything like it. Last year at this time, we had 600 jail terms and fines for employers who establish knowingly hire illegal aliens. It is intended to discourage illegal immigration by removing the incentive of jobs.

Antonia Hernandez, a lawyer with Mexican American group, said the employer sanctions together with the expanded guest worker program "point to the underlying hypocrisy of the bill."

"On the one hand, undocumented aliens are being told to leave because they take away jobs from U.S. citizens, but on the other hand, the Senate realizes that growers still need cheap labor," she said. By rejecting Kennedy's amendment, the Senate approved a plan that would allow the secretaries of labor and agriculture to approve foreign workers on a temporary basis where needed to pick crops.

Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, a supporter of the expanded guest worker program, said that without illegal aliens who now do the work, farmers in the states of Washington, Oregon and Idaho would be unable to harvest 90 percent of their crops

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of that change and the net gains in the price of oil excited newcomers to oil investment and led to a frenzy of drilling activity before the tax deadline expired, he said.

It was a record-breaking year for the number of rigs in service, the number of wells drilled and the economic and population growth of the two cities. But when 1982 rolled around, the tax shelter diminished and oil prices began to drop.

'There was an overabundance of oil," Browning said. "It's a simple case of supply and demand. When you have too much of something, then the price will go down."

it gets to the point where there's a hole in the ground, we sort of pull back and Odessa takes over.

The cities physically bespeak that separation. Midland is dominated by towering office buildings while Odessa is far-flung, with oil pumpjacks bobbing inside the city limits.

It was Odessa that attracted the workers from around the country when the boom took off, but it is the monied in Midland that have remained above the slump.

Among the hardest-hit have been the companies in Odessa that construct drilling rigs and related equipment,

set up family acting dynasty

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Henry Fonda had not meant to set up an acting dynasty, but it held sway for two decades, as the Barrymores' had before him.

They had much in common: fame, Academy Awards, multiple marriages. But Ethel, Lionel and John Barrymore came from a family deeply rooted in the American and English theater. The Fondas — Henry, Jane and Peter sprang from America's heartland with no theatrical tradition.

"I never really thought about being an actor until Do Brando pushed me out on the stage of a little theater," Fonda once said, referring to Marlon Brando's mother, an activist in theater in Omaha, Neb.

Nor did Fonda plan for his children to follow him into the footlights.

In high school Jane showed no interest in acting. After she graduated in 1955, Fonda returned to his home town to appear with Dorothy McGuire in "The Country Girl" as a benefit for the Omaha Community Playhouse.

Fonda was talked into allowing Jane to play an ingenue role, and he remarked in his autobiography: "For someone who'd never appeared on a

HICKSVILLE, N.Y. (AP) - When a storm rolls in from the Atlantic Ocean and rattles the windows of sedate Long Island homes, strange things start happening

Spotlights light up lawns in quiet suburban neigborhoods. Bells ring. Sirens wail, jarring homeowners from their beds. Within minutes, special lines to Nassau County police precincts light up, as many as 300 calls in five minutes.

All these tocsins and klaxons, installed to deter burglars, are set off instead by wind or rain rattling against window alarms. Most are wired in directly to a police precinct or a private security service.

Chaos. "You can trace the path of a storm across the county," says a police official.

In all, Nassau police say they get about 1,200 burglar alarms a month, 99 percent of them false, triggered by the weather, or a pet, or a child or returning vacationers who walk into their own electronic trap. Even a heavy truck coming down a street can do it.

Civil Air Patrol cadet Douglas Walker of 2806 Navajo received a promotion to cadet warrant officer during last week's encampment held at Bergstrom Air Force Base in Austin

Another local cadet, Sgt. Tammy Smith, served as flight sergeant and squad leader for the female squadron of cadets at the encampment, and cadet Capt Richard Bartlett served as medical officer for the encampment

Approximately 135 cadets from all over Texas participated in the one-week encampment, along with 11 senior members.

Deputy commander for the cadet program of the local Dragonfly Composite Squadron, 2nd Lt. Madeleine Maehl, functioned as TAC officer during the encampment. Walker was a member of the squadron which won honor squadron for the encampment.

FOR PEOPLE like Leibowitz, the demand for alarms is a bonanza. He estimates that his firm, Hiway-Zimco, has increased its business about 20 percent annually for the past decade, a jump of more than 500 percent in 10 years. The security industry is booming.

Consultants suggest that the problems stem from the cheaper systems, which mistake pets for burglars and go off when thunder rattles a window. "If you want to go the cheap way, that's going to happen," says Leibowitz. "If you pay for infrared sensors and tape rather than wires, it won't."

Is all this necessary? The alarm companies think so. "FACT," says a flier for a device called "The Bug," "Someone's home is burglarized every 10 seconds. FACT. Someone is robbed every 75 seconds. FACT. Someone's mother, wife or daughter is raped every 9 minutes. FACT. If you don't call (the manufacturer) it could be a crime.'

Many policemen think spending several thousand dollars to protect your home may be overkill. In Nassau County, sales of security devices zoomed recently after a spree by a gang of thugs who robbed a diner on Long Island, sexually abusing and beating their victims before robbing them.

Push for switch to metric system fading

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. Metric Board is going out of business with a swan song that Americans are confused about whether their government wants them to convert from traditional Anglo-Saxon measures to metrics.

"Some still believe the country is being forced to convert, while others are impatient with the slowness of progress," retiring Chairman Louis F. Polk says in the board's final report.

The board is being abolished Sept. 30 as an economy measure, with a letter of thanks from President Reagan for its 4-year job. "You have succeeded in your objective of educating the American people about the meaning of metric measurements in everyday life," Reagan wrote.

Like his predecessors, Reagan realized that few Americans are comfortable with anything but the traditional system of miles, quarts and pounds and refused to promote anything but voluntary conversion to metrics.

"Small business supports voluntary conversion activities but will vehemently oppose any attempts by the federal government or other groups to impose mandatory conversion," said Roger E. Travis, a small businessman and member of the Metric Board

Plain burglaries, however, have declined - the rate for Nassau was 2,300 for the first three months of this year compared with 2,757 in the same period of 1981.

"The cheapest can still be the best," says Ken Synar of the Nassau police.

That means locking the windows, using dead bolt locks on the door, putting bars on basement windows, or, in an apartment, on windows that lead to fire escapes. It also means making sure newspapers and mail don't pile up outside when you go away, and using time switches to turn the lights on and off

Policeman Cathers says some systems can end up being an annoyance. "Very often people get fed up when these things go off at 3 or 4 in the morning and there's nobody out there," he says. "After it happens three or four times, they unhook the thing and they're left with less than when they started.'

Nassau County, meanwhile, has unhooked alarm systems from the '911' emergency switchboard, where they often tied up operators and lines. Now alarms have a special number of their own. Police continue to check out all calls

Maudie McClendon

Some drive-in customers at First National Bank won't let anybody but Maudie McClendon wait on them. And when she goes on vacation, those customers don't do any banking. "I'll just wait 'til you get back," they say. Maudie's customers are pampered. She'll fill out their deposit slips, inquire about their families and give them change the way she knows they want it: so many fives, ones, etc. She has some customers who say Maudie can't retire until they die.

Maudie was born to Roy and Emma Wilson of the R Bar community. When she was six months old, the family moved to town. "I, the depression, and the low price of cotton were too much for Daddy to handle, so he left the farm," says Maudie. Her Dad went into the construction business and Maudie learned to finish concrete and clean form lumber. She says if you put a trowel in her hand, she'll show you she can finish concrete

Her mother taught music and expression, but Maudie was too much of a tomboy to concentrate on those things. "I'd rather be working with Daddy than practicing on the piano," claims Maudie. "Besides that, I got a salary from him.

Maudie first went to work at First National in 1946, just about the time she was graduating from high school. Except for a year of jerking sodas in a drug store the year before she joined the bank, First National is the only place she has ever worked.

In 1948 Maudie married Bill McClendon, a local boy who had just returned from the service and was working for the railroad. Maudie left the bank for a few years to raise her two daughters, Paula and Linda. When they started to school, Maudie returned to the bank. Maudie's great thrill these days is being a grandmother to Cody, Paula's son and Lindsey, Linda's daughter. Both were born during the last year. Maudie says proudly, "I can certainly see why they call them grand."

When Maudie returned to the bank, she took banking courses at Howard College and received a certificate from the Institute of Banking. Her daughters thought it was great that their Mom was a college student.

Maudie recalls when the bank moved into its present location from its old building at Second and Main. "We shut down on a Friay in the old building and opened up the following Monday in the new building. Everybody moved their own department. We all just pitched in to get it done. That's the way it is here. When there's a big job to do, we can handle it. First National has always been a great place to work and I've never wanted to leave."

Maudie has worked in bookkeeping, the proof department and had other jobs at the bank, but the best job she has ever had is her position as teller in drive-in window number four. "I think I'm really fortunate that I've found this place. I truly enjoy my work. The best people in the world come to my window. The drive-in windows work great for customers, too. You know, bad weather; a rainy day and they have children in the car. Our windows are full service, too. You can do just about anything at our windows: cash a bond, make a car payment. We're real busy Friday afternoons because the drive-in windows are open until 6 p.m." Maudie says sometimes a van or truck comes thru and it's taller than the opening and it'll hit our light. "So I'll get out there and direct traffic."

Maudie McClendon has been a member of the First Presbyterian Church all her life. She has taught a Sunday School class and has sung in the choir. Her mother is in a nursing home now so Maudie spends Sunday mornings with her. They listen to the service on the radio. Maudie went to see and hear the church's new organ the other night. She thnks it's beautiful. Maudie McClendon: One of your friends at First National.

SEAT BELT SPECTER - Air Force Capt. J.D. Fray of Vandenberg Air Force Base in California does things a little differently than most of us on those long holiday weekends. He suits up like the Grim Reaper - not to scare people, but to remind them to drive safely.

"They're doing it right," a Western scientist said recently. "For one thing, they've been using other people's rockets."

India's space program began in 1963 with three basic goals: improve communications, gather weather information and survey the country's natural resources. To meet its immediate needs, technologically advanced nations were paid to build and launch satellites for India. To prepare for the future, India also began developing its own hardware.

The program began slowly, with the equivalent of $325 million spent on space projects from 1963 to 1960. It now is accelerating, with $1.1 billion budgeted for the 1980s. The Soviet Union launched India's first two satellites, in 1975 and in 1979. Last year, a European consortium sent up its third.

QE2 placed back in civil service

SOUTHAMPTON, England (AP) - Trailing streamers and balloons, the Queen Elizabeth 2 returned to luxury liner service today, nine weeks after carrying British troops to the Falkland Islands.

The band of the Prince of Wales Regiment played "Anchors Aweigh" and thousands of well-wishers crowded the docks in this southern English port as the QE2 tooted its fog horn at the start of a five-day cruise to New York

Dozens of pleasure boats escorted the 67,000-ton liner, carrying 1,580 passengers who paid between $1,011 and $3,400 for passage and return air flight.

"We're delighted to have her back," said Bernard Crisp, managing director of the owners, Cunard Line.

"We were proud to have her called to Her Majesty's Service, but by God we're happy she's home safe.'

Requisitioned by the Royal Navy on May 3, the QE2 was transformed in eight days to transport some 3,500 British soldiers to the South Atlantic where they helped evict Argentine troops who had occupied the disputed colony for 10 weeks

The ship's luxurious carpeting was covered in hardboard, the cabins stripped down to accommodate soldiers and its outdoor pools covered in steel to make helicopter landing pads

After the vessel returned to Britain June 11, Cunard spent $8.5 million refurbishing and improving the QE2, while the British government paid an estimated $3.4 million to recovert t

"The way they've got it done now is just fantastic," said Betty Morris of Hopkinsville, Ky., making her first cruise on the QE2.

Expulsion

Her grandson, Christopher Smith of Lexington, Ky., said: "It's hard to conceive of soldiers trooping around her and traveling all the way to the South Atlantic

Southampton dock workers workers expressed pride in having readied a liner for war and returning it to the merchant service so quickly.

"I've got a shivering and shaking feeling today," said Anthony Skelton, 45, an 18-year veteran of the Southampton docks.

"I had it before when she went to the South Atlantic and now I've got it all over again.'

Skelton's brother Raymond, 50, with 30 years' service as a dock metal worker said: "She's the best ship in the world - a totally unbiased opinion.'

Controversy rocks India's space program

In each case, India got its payloads into orbit without spending time and money to develop a reliable launch vehicle. Also, with Indians working alongside scientists from other countries on the projects, there was a transfer of some knowledge and experience.

Then last April, the United States launched Insat-1A, the first of two satellites ordered by India from the Ford Aerospace Co. of Palo Alto, Calif. Just about everything went wrong. The launch at Cape Canaveral, Fla., was delayed twice, a crucial communications antenna required several days of special space maneuvers to unjam, and the stabilizing "solar sail" did not properly deploy.

With Insat's planned seven-year life reportedly reduced to less than half and its television relay capability cut onethird, the voices of dissent filled the air clamoring about waste and inefficiency.

The Times of India newspaper noted, for example, that the satellite's ground facilities were not finished, no television programs had yet been filmed for it to beam to the countryside, and that many villages had no television sets or even electricity to run them.

Defenders of the program countered that Insat was an exercise in frugality. It was the first civilian satellite to combine telecommunications, radio and television broadcasting, weather data and data-relay capabilities. Previously, separate weather and communications satellites had been used, a Ford spokesman said.

The benefits from the Insat program alone could be enormous. It will ease the burden on India's archaic telephone system by handling 8,000 long-distance conversations. It also will provide weather information and storm warnings that could save crops and lives.

The greatest impact, officials believe, could come from the telecasts Insat will beam to India's isolated, rural villages. Initially it will reach about one-fifth of the country's half million villages, but this eventually will be expanded until India's diverse society is linked with a single communication system. At present, television is limited to the major population centers.

Meanwhile, in keeping with its policy of self-reliance, India also has sought the capability to put up its own satellite with its own launcher, and in July 1980 became the seventh nation to do so.

University to start test-tube baby program

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - University of Utah officials have announced plans to start a test-tube baby program soon after the start of next year.

Three medical centers in the United States now are working with in vitro fertilization -Eastern Virginia Medical School in Norfolk, Va., the University of Southern California in Los Angeles, and University of Texas in Houston.

Several others are developing programs, said Dr. A. March Poulson of the U of U obstetrics-gynecology department.

U of U officials and the dean of the medical school have approved a proposal for the program, said John Dwan, a spokesman for the medical center.

Details of the project will be reviewed by the school's Institutional Review Board, even through in vitro fertilization has become an accepted clinical process and is not considered experimental.

Obstetricians are developing protocol under which the program will be operated, officials said.

Poulson said since the first test-tube baby, Louise Brown, was born July 25, 1978, about 50 children who are products of in vitro fertilization have been born.

No potential patients will be screened for the program until the laboratory and other space are renovated and fully equipped, Poulson said

Couples with infertility that has lasted for up to four years with no observable reason, women whose Fallopian tubes are scarred or diseased, and couples in which the male has a low sperm count will be considered, he said.

Only 15 to 20 percent of the attempts at in vitro fertilization result in a successful pregnancy, Poulson said. The fertilization is done by fertilizing an egg in a petri dish in a special medium, he

Poulson said there are questions about possible damage to the developing embryo during its transfer from a laboratory dish to the mother's uterus, but only one of the babies born so far had any defect.

Debate rages over annual auto inspections

By BOB WIELAND

Associated Press Writer GARLAND, Texas (AP) — Two dozen men with grease under their fingernails were learning to become agents of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

They would watch a 45-minute audio-visual training program and then tackle 75 multiple-choice questions to test their ability to inspect motor vehicles under a 31-yearold law that a legislator claims is as archaic as the Model

Would-be inspectors are asked whether a car needs a horn (yes) or a spare tire (no).

Since 1951, Texas motorists have been required to have their vehicles inspected annually for compliance with laws setting minimum standards for the type and operation of safety equipment.

Since the inspections started, the DPS says, the number of accidents related to equipment failure has declined from 17 percent a year to less than three percent.

"Our business is saving lives - against all opposition," said Capt. H.D. Hightower of the DPS Vehicle Inspection Division. His Region I stretches from the Red River to the piney woods of East Texas.

He admits the opposition comes from motorists who feel they may have been coerced into unneeded repairs by unscrupulous garage owners licensed to make inspections.

Another foe is state Rep. Jim Horn, R-Denton.

"All studies show it (annual inspection) makes no difference in the accident rate," Horn says.

He accepts the accuracy of the DPS statistics, but offers an explanation.

States that have never had a program have enjoyed exactly the same improvement over that span of time. Technological improvements in the actual vehicle. coupled with the improvements in highway design are the reasons for the actual decrease," Horn said.

He points out that a drive from Dallas to Houston 30 years ago was over a two-lane highway in a car that might not have had hydraulic brakes, stop lights, turn indicators or seat belts.

Horn introduced a bill in the 1981 legislature to abolish the inspection program and replace it with more vigorous spot-checking of vehicle safety by law officers. Horn's bill passed the house on second reading, but was tabled by a vote of 78-62 the next day.

However, Horn, a freshman legislator seeking reelection this November, is drumming up support for another attempt in the next session.

That prospect saddens Hightower, who says the army of 20,000 certified inspectors at nearly 8,000 inspection stations is needed to save lives.

"We say it's worthwhile and all we want is public upport," Hightower says. The object of the whole program is to make sure that every motor vehicle driven on Texas roads meets the minimum safety standards at least once a year. The vehicle can then display an inspection sticker in the lower left-hand corner of the windshield.

The fee for the inspection is $5. It cannot be waived and is collected even if the vehicle fails to pass inspection.

In that case, the inspector must give the motorist a list of the items not in compliance and perhaps an estimate for repairs. The motorist may have the repairs made any place he wants, or make them himself, Thetford says.

If the listed repairs are made within 15 days, the motorist may return to the station for a free reinspection. The inspection stickers cost the station $1.75 each in pads of 25 Revenue from the stickers and the licensing fees brought in $19.3 million for the last fiscal year, said David Wells in the public information office of DPS headquarters in Austin

One dollar of the amount goes to cover costs of the inspection program. The remaining 75 cents goes into a retirement fund for commissioned DPS officers, Wells says. In his bill to do away with the inspetion program, Horn proposed raising the fees for driver's licenses to make up the amount of money that would be lost. Horn added that by freeing 118 troopers from what he called clerical work, the DPS will be able to put more patrolmen on highways - without additional funds being appropriated.

"That, to me, is called efficient government," said

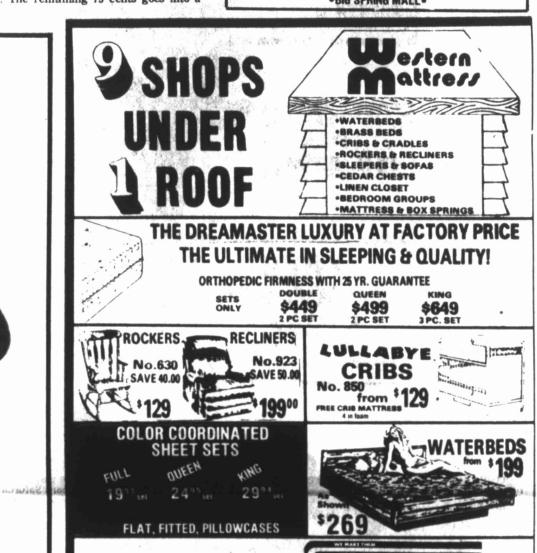

Horn. Hightower defends the supervisory role of the DPS by saying that 274 inspectors were suspended last year, and 162 stations lost their certification.

"It may be surprising to some, but most of the suspensions were for not doing a thorough inspection," Hightower says.

The captain said that the $5 fee is "kind of a bargain" because inspectors may point out potential problems with your car.

Aid for some cooling bills available

AUSTIN Some low income Texans may be eligible for help with their summer cooling bills, if they haven't already received a Home Energy Assistance payment, commissioner Marlin W Johnston of the Texas Department of Human Resources said.

'We need to hear from those low-income households which haven't filled out the Home Energy Assistance program questionnaire we mailed to them," he said

Those eligible for the cooling payments include households which received June benefits for Aid to Families with Dependent Children, food stamps, or Supplemental Security Income

Veterans Certain Administration beneficiaries also may be eligible if they are "needs tested" and their gross incomes don't exceed 75 percent of the poverty level as defined by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Eligible households must be subject to home energy cost increases -- because of higher bills or rent due to rising utility costs. Households are eligible if they live in privately owned or rented housing even if the cost of utilities is included in the rent payment, or if the household pays only a portion of its home energy costs

BIG SPRING, TEXAS, SUNDAY, AUGUST 15, 1982

On the bench again

I just can't wait to get off the bench again The life I'd love is starting just for grins But here I'm ridin' the bench again

On the bench again

Getting splinters where they've seldom been

Wishing I'd play for five minutes or even ten

But here I'm ridin' the bench again

Willie Nelson couldn't find room on his latest LP for this remake of "On the Road Again," but promised this sports writer he'd release it sometime before he retires his bandana and guitar.

If you haven't always been a superstar in sports, chances are that you've spent a quiet moment or two on the bench. People that go to parks like benches. Folks in Cincinnati like their Bench. But athletes are seldom content with watching the action when they could be participating in it.

This summer I was reminded of the joys of riding the bench. Staff writer Bob Carpenter and I ventured into city league softball and while it was love at third base for Bob, this no-glove and no-stick sports writer was assigned to keep an eye on the team's valuables in the dugout when the team was out in the field.

Occasionally his team - the Phunhaus Trippers - let him coach first or third base. It was a job he did quite well, considering the one time he waved a man in home, then stood in his way and was almost run down. Fortunately the baserunner scored and the

Sitting on the bench can be longly. Sometimes the Trippers had 11 players show up and left the sports writer all alone in dugout. Oh, he did have some company occasionally. Kids would drop in and ask him why he wasn't playing like everyone else. The mosquitoes were also on the scene, dive-bombing him like the Japs did Pearl Harbor. One advantage to riding the bench is never having to wash your uniform. The sports writer went through the whole scason wearing a single pair of socks. Once he had to chase a foul ball and got his shoes dusty. He left them in that condition hoping his friends would think he played. It also kept his new glove in top condition. The bench warmer (do they really need one during the summer?) provides invaluable assistance to the team. He keeps up with score which is quite a feat in city league. A check with umpires and several statisticians in the stands usually resulted in a half-dozen different scores so it was important to be able to count correctly. The sports writer did get to play once in a while. In fact he batted 10 times all summer and got - get this - four hits. That's a hefty .400 batting average, folks. Back off George Brett. He only made one error but that lone mistake unfortunately keyed a nine-run rally by an opponent one night. Actually his overthrow of first on a chopper in front of the plate could be blamed on the ball. It was new and pretty slick and that probably caused it to sail over the first baseman and across Interstate 20. Speaking of the plate, when the sports writer did play it behind between the batter and umpire. With no equipment, that no such a safe place to play. More than once a foul ball changed the pitch of his voice The Trippers blundered throught the first half in the "B" division but after losing that game where the opponent scored nine times in one inning, they won every game. Every game, that is, because the sports writer was covering a Little League tournament in Lamesa After hearing a rumor that the team was almost short on players on evening, he returned for the final game. Team leader Randy Thomas was so overjoyed to have him back, he penciled him in at his favorite position...bench.

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Quarterback Matt Robinson's two-yard touchdown pass to halfback Arthur Whittington with 39 seconds to play carried the Buffalo Bills to a 14-10 National Football League exhibition victory over the Dallas Cowboys Saturday night.

The game will be shown on Big Spring channel 4 today from 2-4:30 p.m.

Whittington, obtained from the Los Angeles Raiders this summer, outraced linebacker David Morze to the flag after catching a short swing pass on 4th and 1

Tony Dorsett's 9-yard touchdown run and Rafael Septien's 48-yard field goal, all in the first half, gave Dallas a 10-0 lead.

The Bills missed three field goal tries in the listless affair played on a 90-degree evening before 48,612 fans in Texas Stadium. But safety Bill Simpson intercepted a Gary Hogeboom pass to setup the winning touch-

The Bills also cashed in a Dorsett fumble for a touchdown in the third quarter.

End Sherman White recovered the ball at the Dallas 46, and scored seven plays later on Booker Moore's two-yard run. Buffalo missed two excellent scoring chances in the first quarter. The Bills drove from their own 8-yard line to the Dallas 37 but Gary Anderson missed a 54-yard field goal attempt. Simpson intercepted a White pass and returned it 35 yards, but Dallas held and Jim Asmus missed a 42-yard field goal attempt. Anderson also missed a 31-yard field goal attempt in the fourth period.

The Cowboys drove 75 yards in 12 plays for

Danny White passes of 16 yards to Tony Hill, and 14 and 11 yards to Drew Pearson, setup Dorsett's touchdown burst off left tackle

The Cowboys threatened to pull the game out in the final two minutes after an interferene penalty on Jeff Nixon gave them a first down at the Buffalo 21

However, an offensive interference penalty on Doug Donley and a holding penalty on Donley, both on consecutive plays, put Dallas too far away for Hogeboom to strike

Simpson returned his key interception to the Dallas 46 late in the fourth quarter. Robinson made a clutch play on 3rd and 10 from the Cowboys' 37.

He scrambled 26 yards to the Dallas 11 to position the Bills for the game-winning touchdown pass after Coach Chuck Knox disdained a short field goal attempt that would have tied the game.

Robinson was picked up on waivers after the New York Jets had decided they didn't want him anymore. He was the fourth of the Buffalo quarterbacks to see action in the game

It was the first preseason meeting in history between the two teams. Dallas has a 3-0 regular season record against the Bills.

Both teams shook hands before the game in a show of unity for the player's union which is negotiating with NFL owners. The crowd booed.

Just his mere presence inspired the Trip-pers who snapped their long winning streak with a loss that knocked them out of second place.

It all history now...and more than you think. The Phunhaus - a video arcade on Gregg Street - closed its doors a few weeks ago making the Tripper uniforms a collec-tor's item. Just like Oakland Raiders souvenirs.

Mustangs boast stable of hosses

DALLAS (AP) - Bobby Collins inherits a horn of plenty at Southern Methodist University.

The Mustangs' new football coach took over earlier this year, when Ron Meyer left to become coach of the New England Patriots in the National Football League.

1982 Preview

And the man who led independent Southern Mississippi to 18 victories and two bowl games in the last two years has a lot to like about his first Southern Methodist team.

"It's going to be tough on me since I'm new in the conference, but our team knows it can win the title," Collins said. "A lot of our players have already been

SMU had its second best year ever in 1981, finishing No.5 in the nation in the final AP poll.

Seven of the 11 offensive starters from a 10-1 team return, along with seven of the defensive regulars. The backfield includes Associated Press second-team All-American Eric Dickerson, the SWC Offensive player of the year; Craig James, another 1,000-yard gainer, and All-SWC quarterback Lance McIlhenny.

James and Dickerson became only the fifth pair of backs in NCAA history to each average 100 yards a game for a season

Dickerson rushed for 1,428 yards and James added 1.147.

The Mustang defense forced 48 turnovers and had 31 interceptions, both marks the best in the nation.

Third-team All-American defensive back Russell Carter heads a unit that includes defensive end Russ Washington, strong safety Wes Hopkins and middle guard Michael Carter.

Carter suffered a knee injury in the 9-7 loss to Texas and missed the remainder of the season. The injury was so had that Carter could not defend his NCAA shot put titles but is expected to be ready for the Sept.11 home opener against Tulane.

The kicking game and offensive line will be major concerns for Collins.

Gone are punter Eric Kaifes and second team AP All-America placekicker Eddie Garcia.

'We lost three starters in the offensive line." said Collins. "It's a worry. Depth in the defensive line could be a problem, too, unless Carter and Richard Neely heal from injuries.

The Mustangs have a soft non-conference schedule. After Tulane, SMU meets Texas-El Paso and North Texas outside the league. They close Nov.20 with Arkansas in Texas Stadium

Houston and Texas A&M also have to play in Irving.

Next in the series is a look at the Houston Cougars, coming Monday afternoon.

World champ 49ers tumble

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Chris Bahr kicked a 24-yard field goal in the third period and Marc Wilson set up a fourth-period touchdown with a 76-yard pass completion as the wandering Raiders opened pre-season play with a 17-14 victory over the National Football League champion San Francisco 49ers Saturday.

Bahr's field goal broke a 7-7 tie, with the Raiders capitalizing on a bad center snap by the 49ers on a punt attempt. Greg Pruitt plunged for a touchdown after running back and former Abilene Christian standout Cle Montgomery got inside the 1-yard-line on the long pass play.

San Francisco scored with 1:04 left in the game when rookie quarterback Bryan Clark, son of former 49ers coach Monte Clark, threw a 4-yard touchdown pass to Eason Ramson.

Chiefs 26, Bengals 20

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Nick Lowery kicked four field goals and Carlos Carson caught two touchdown passes from Bill Kenney Friday night, lifting Kansas City to a 26-20 National Football League exhibition victory over the defending American Conference champion Cincinnati Bengals.

The Bengals and Chiefs ran to each other following the national anthem and shook hands at midfield in a show of support for the players' union. The crowd of 39,815 booed briefly

Seahawks 14, Cardinals 0

SEATTLE (AP) - Jim Zorn, playing for the first time in the Kingdome since fracturing an ankle in a game last Nov. 29, fired a 41-yard touchdown strike to Paul Johns Friday night as the Seattle Seahawks beat the St. Louis Cardinals 14-0 in the National Football League exhibition opener for both teams.

and Matt Bahr added the conversion as the Cleveland Browns edged the Detroit Lions 17-16 in the 1982 National Football League exhibition opener for both teams Saturday night.

Packers 21, Jets 19

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) - Rich Campbell threw a fou yard touchdown pass to Paul Coffman, while Eddie Lee Ivery and rookie Willard Reaves both scored on a 3-yard plunges, leading the Green Bay Packers to a 21-19 National Football League preseason victory over the New York Jets Saturday night.

Campbell, who entered the game with 6:33 left in the second quarter and played the rest of the way at quarterback, completed 8 of 17 passes for 98 yards and had two intercepted in his most extensive action since the Packers drafted him on the first round in 1981.

Colts 19, Giants 14

BALTIMORE (AP) - A 1-yard touchdown run by Howard Jackson with 13 seconds remaining, following a 45-yard interception return by linebacker Ricky Jones, gave the Baltimore Colts a 19-14 victory over the New York Giants in a National Football League exhibition Saturday night.

The Giants had led since going ahead 14-10 on a 10-yard touchdown pass from Scott Brunner to John Mistler with 46 seconds left in the first half.

Steelers 24, Patriots 20

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.(AP) - Frank Collins scored on a 1-yard run with 2:58 remaining Saturday night as the Pittsburgh Steelers rallied for a 24-20 victory over the New England Patriots in the 1982 National Football League exhibition opener for both teams.

The Patriots came back strong in the third quarter as wide receiver Stanley Morgan caught a 10-yard touchdown pass and tight end Lin Dawson scored on a 32-yard touchdown pass PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) – Cleo Miller scapered 8-yards for a touchdown in the fourth-quarter play. Brian Clark kicked the first extra point but missed the second.

Falcons 20, Vikings 17

ATLANTA (AP) - Mike Moroski's 19-yard touchdown pass to Reggie Brown with 4:38 remaining gave the Atlanta Falcons a 20-17 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in a National Football League preseason game Saturday night.

Members of both squads met at midfield just after the playing of the national anthem in a showing of solidarity in the player union's fight for a new contract. The act was booed by the 49 831 fans in attendance

- Bucs 35, Eagles 7

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) - Rookie running back Michael Morton scored a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns from 9 and 80 vardsout Saturday night to lead the Tampa Bay Buccaneers to a 35-7 victory over Philadelphia in the preseason opener for both teams.

Rookie Melvin Carver, a college classmate of Morton's at Nevada-Las Vegas, rounded out the scoring in the Bucs' explosive three-touchdown fourth quarter by racing 30 yards for a touchdown with 1:20 to play. Philadelphia was scoreless in the second half

Dolphins 24, Redskins 7

MIAMI (AP) - Second-year guarterback Jim Jensen tossed one scoring pass and fullback Andra Franklin scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 2-yard run Saturday night as the Miami Dolphins rolled past the Washington Redskins 24-7 in a National Football League preseason game.

Members of both teams shook hands in the middle of the field prior to the kickoff in a show of solidarity for the NFL Players Association that met with mixed reaction from the crowd of 37,750. All of the Redskins participated, but 10 Dolphins - nine rookies and 13-year veteran Bob Kuechenberg - stayed on the sidelines.

Franklin's touchdown with 8:27 left in the third period lifted Miami into a 14-7 lead. His run, through the left side of the Washington defense, capped an eight-play, 56-yard drive

During late afternoon and early evening hours, the load on the nation's electrical systems usually reaches its peak. To meet the heavy demand, electric utilities often must use back-up generating equipment that is not energy efficient. Try to use energy-intensive appliances such as dishwashers, clothes washers and dryers, and electric ovens in the early morning or late evening hours to help reduce that peak load. This energy-saving tip is

Get the most out of your hard-earned dollar

By TINA STEFFEN Lifestyle Editor

Let's talk about money, your money. Do you seem to have too much month or week left over and not enough money to live on? If so, you are one of thousands with that problem, and a money management plan can help you.

A money management plan will help you accomplish goals you've set and to cope with unexpected financial problems. If you set down, work out the plan and your goals, it is a way to stretch your dollar. Here is how you can do it.

The first thing to do is set your money goals and prioritize them. One big mistake people make is not setting priorities in their spending, according to local C.P.A. Maxwell Green and other financial experts.

What does your money mean to you? Maybe you want to use it to enjoy the present or maybe you would rather live modestly and save for the future. Maybe one of your goals is to provide for your child's college education. You, can start saving now, thus making the financial strain easier later.

Green says there are two types of people in regards to money. "Investment oriented" people are those who invest their money to make more money, improve their livestyle and standard of living. "Personal oriented" people are those who would rather buy a TV set, for example, than open a savings account. They are interested in using their money to make their life better now rather than "bank" on the future.

After deciding how you want to use your money, set both short and long-range goals. Short-range goals would be plans for the next few years. Long-range goals would be plans for the distant future. Be sure these are reachable goals. Don't set goals that are unrealistic and unaffordable. Otherwise, you will get discouraged and give up, Green says there are five basic categories of survival to keep in mind for planning money management: food, clothing, shelter, transportation and medical. He says people need to figure out what they spend on each category in order to make a workable plan

After calculating the past spending habits, what is spent on what, reduce the items in each category to what is actually needed to get by with. It is easier to reduce your lifestyle to necessities in earlier years so that investments can be made and enjoyed in later years.

"The number one thing to do is tell yourself 'no excuses, I can control my money," says Green, reflecting on the need for willpower.

USING YOUR CHECKBOOK, summarize how much money has been spent in each category during the past month or 12 months. From that determine actual need. Add 10 percent to each category for inflation. Use this figure as a guideline in figuring your money management plan. Prioritize the categories and then the things within each category.

Planning on two levels is important in money management. The first level is to plan for daily, weekly or monthly spending on household items. Household items are everything in the five basic categories. The second plan is a plan for accumulating fnancial resources for long-range financial security - investments. Once this is long-range financial security — investments. Once this is planned the family must control how much money is available for household purposes. A married couple should have one person writing checks or have two checking accounts, one for business-investment purposes that the husband controls and one for all household expenses that the wife controls, Green suggested. (Or, vice versa.) Household expenses include paying bills, shopping for groceries, clothing, repairs, household items, etc., plus entertainment and personal care. Business-investments would be used for savings accounts money markets and any investment that would accounts, money markets and any investment that would make money, not use it.

"Transfer only a set amount from business to household and stay within that amount each month. Do not put any more into it," says Green.

In order for any money management plan to work, there has to be communication. When there is a lack of communication, the spouses fail to express their needs and wants and they have a foot race to write the check first. This results in the disappearance of money, according to Green. Without communication, and fair and complete planning, the carrying out of those plans is almost impossible

"BUDGETS ARE an excellent tool to use provided that it's agreed upon between both parties in the household," says Green. He advises people to "be practical" when preparing a budget..set aside the amount it actually takes to live off of. No less and no more. Look at all elements involved. When you figure your transportation costs, don't overlook repairs, tune-ups, oil changes, etc. Do the same for all categories. Cut out things you can live without

When figuring your income, only use the take-home pay - not gross salary. You're working on a plan for the total amount of dollars you have available for spending. If yours is a two- paycheck family, include both sources of income and any other source of income you receive.

Now figure your fixed expenses. How much do you need for rent or mortgage payments, car payments, insurance, etc. Don't guess — the amounts must be as exact as possible. Use receipts, canceled checks or any other records that can help you find out. See where your money went last year. When does each bill come due?

Figure everything out on an annual basis. Add all the fixed expenses together and this figure is how much should be set aside regularly so money will be on hand when payments are due. Divide the annual total by 52, 26 or 12 - the regularity in which you receive your paychecks. This figure is the amount to set aside for those expenses each pay period.

Next determine day-to-day living expenses. (These are items in food, clothing, shelter, transportation and medical. You may want to add a little for entertainment: however, that is one area that can be cut down if needed.) If you can't pin down actual costs, you may need to estimate them at first. Then if necessary, you can keep records of expenses for three months or more to get a better idea of what you actually are spending each day.

One booklet suggests setting up a savings fund for emergencies and special goals to carry you over a financial crisis if something breaks down or an op-portunity comes along. This fund keeps you from dipping into amounts set aside for daily living or selling in-vestments, Deposit a fixed amount regularly no matter how small for this fund.

Whatever income is left over can be used to increase your assets. Invest this money into savings accounts or higher-yield, better-grade investments such as money market. Green advises cutting down in each category in order to put more money in investments, and stick with nose investments. Don't spend them for penses. This way you can stretch the amount of money you have.

MAXWELL D. GREEN, C.P.A. ... advises in money management

If there isn't any money left over, go over the spending plan again and see what cuts can be made. As one example, Green suggests finding a cheaper means of transportation such as car pools or public transportation.

Review the money plan several times to be sure it's in line with current expenses and income. If rent goes up, you will need to readjust the plan to handle the expense more easily. If the plan isn't working well, review it and discover the problem.

As part of your money management plan, accurate records must be kept to keep track of where the money is going.

ABOUT INVESTMENTS - Green advises young couples to make do with less in their early years and make investments. Put money in something that will make you money. "If you have less than $10,000, put it in a savngs account. If you have more than $10,000, put it in something of a higher yield and better grade," he said. He suggested the six-month money market certificate.

"If you are young and want to take greater risks, there

Green says real estate and oil ventures can be excellent investments but have an extremely high degree of risk involved. For people in high tax brackets, tax-free areas of investments are excellent such as municipal bonds. People will lose money in fast-buck investment schemes and Green doesn't recommend them to anyone

MONEY CAN BE SAVED by avoiding impulse buying and by doing comparative shopping. Do comparative shopping for vegetables and clothing and household goods. Green suggests buying only quality appliances and furniture. He said people will have to pay more at first, but the furniture will last longer and be cheaper in the long run.

According to Green, one of biggest mistakes young couples make is buying cheap furniture to start their household with. He says couples are better off if buying two good quality chairs and a table for themselves that will last them decades, than to buy six cheap chairs and a table that breaks three days after they brought it home.

The process he recommends for buying home furnishings is to buy smaller or fewer items of better, more lasting quality, and to do without and save money toward

The least desirable method, according to Green, is to sign a note and pay for the item over a three-year period. 'Always try to negotiate pre-pay or early payment with no penalty." Green advises.

CREDIT IS A BIG responsibility. For household purposes, (food, clothing, shelter, transportation and medical) stay away from credit completely, Green advises. For big ticket items, use mathematics before committing yourself. In the long run, how much will you end up paying for something that is on credit compared to how much you will pay if you save for it or put it on a nointerest payment plan

It's better to pay cash as you go than to use a credit card. Credit gets people in trouble, Green says. He recommends using it only for business purposes ... borrow money to buy a business, but don't borrow or use credit to buy a pair of shoes.

Prevention lessen chance of heart problems

By RHONDA WOODALL Lifestyle Writer

You say you don't exercise except to change the channels on the television? You enjoy eating junk food, lushious desserts and steak dinners? You smoke? Do you know you have increased your chances to have heart problems?

Even an "yes" to one of the above questions can cause you to become a higher risk factor with heart disease. You may even be setting an example for your children to follow, causing them to become high risk factors too. It's not too late to lessen your chance of heart problems and save your child from facing that problem too.

Linked to heart problems are cardiovascular diseases. The cardiovascular system also is known as the blood system. All the blood in the body must travel through the heart. If there is a problem in the blood system, then the heart will probably be affected in some way. There are 41,290,000 Americans who have some form of heart and blood vessel disease. One in every four adults has high blood pressure. Of the remaining afflicted Americans, 4.4 million have conorary heart disease; 1.92 million have rheumatic heart disease and 1.78 million have had a stroke. In 1979, an estimated 975,550 (51 percent) of all deaths in the United States were due to some type of cardiovascular disease. One fourth of those victims were under the age 65.

HEART PROBLEMS do not appear overnight and do not effect only elderly people. They build up over a period of time. Some people are born with heart defects. Anyone can have a heart problem, and there are ways to prevent can have a neart problem, and there are ways to prevent and correct them. Heart problems in adults can begin in childhood. It should be remembered that a heart attack or stroke does not suddenly occur. The body has to build up to that phase. There are six controllable risk factors that help a person sen his chances of heart problems. They are to reduce lessen his chances of heart problems. They are to reduce saturated fats and cholesterol in the diet, count calories and avoid excess weight, control high blood pressure, avoid smoking, exercise regularly and have regular medical checkups. Stress also is a factor. If you have diabetes, this can be controlled with medical supervision as can high blood pressure and serum cholesterol. To improve your diet, have frequent meals of fish and goultry. When serving red meat, use lean cuts and trim off fat. You should cook with liquid vegetable oils and polyunsaturated shortening, use skimmed (fat-free) milk and skimmed milk products, and eat fewer eggs. Texas Heart Association recommends two eggs a week

"Cigarette smokers have a greater risk of dying of a heart attack than cancer. Someone who smokes two packs a day has seven times the risk of having a heart attack than a non-smoker. Once you stop smoking that risk virtually drops to that of a nonsmoker," said Dr. David Rickey, Permian Basin Regional representative to the Texas Heart Association's board of directors.

The factors below can not be controlled to lessen your chance of cardiovascular and heart problems. They are heredity, sex (more men are effected then women); race (black Americans have a 50 percent chance more than whites of being effected and age (one-fourth of all heart attack deaths and one-seventh of all stroke deaths occur before age 65).

THERE IS NO guarantee that heart attacks can be prevented, but medical scientists say that reducing your risks will give you the best chance of avoiding a heart attack in the prime of life.

What is the difference between a heart attack and a stroke? Heart attack is when complete blockage of blood flow deprives an area of the heart muscle of needed flow deprives an area of the heart muscle of needed oxygen and nutrients, thus causing death in that area of the muscle. A decrease in blood flow, caused by a gradual buildup of fatty deposits, may cause damage to the heart muscles. A stroke is when the brain does not receive its constant blood supply causing brain cells to die. How does a person know he is having a heart attack? Symptoms vary, but usual warning symptoms are prolonged opressive pain or unusual discomfort in center of chest behind the breastbone; pain / radiating to shoulder, arm, neck or jaw; pain or discomfort often accompanied by sweating, nausea, vomiting, or shortness of breath. Symptoms sometimes may subside and then return. return.

If a person suffers a heart attack or what appears to be one, he needs to act promptly by calling his doctor and carefully describe the symptoms. If the doctor isn't im-mediately available, get to a hospital emergency room at

An estimated 549,800 deaths in 1979 resulted from heart attacks. An estimated 350,000 people a year die of heart attack before they reach the hospital. The average victim waits three hours before deciding to seek help. This year about 1,500,000 Americans will have a heart attack and around 550,000 of them will die. One of the victims maybe someone you know

Once a patient has had a heart attack there are adjustments to be made. In many instances a doctor, will advises the victim to keep his weight down, to eat four small meals daily rather than three heavy meals, to get plenty of rest, to take moderate exercise, to guit cigarette smoking and to avoid overexertion and overexcitement.

"THE POPULAR CONCEPTION is that cancer is a terrible way to die and cardiovascular diseases is probably an easy way to die. But I think if you ask a stroke

"Neither one is a pleasant way to go." Adults are not the only victims of heart disease. Children can born with heart problems or they can develop them over a period of time. Every year around the only with some time of heart defect. In 25,000 babies are born with some type of heart defect. In 1979, the estimated postnatal deaths from heart defects were around 6 500

Children who are effected by heart disease are usually born with a heart defect. Most heart defects can be detected in babies the first two months after birth.

Wedding policy

Weddings are published in the Sunday Lifestyle section of the Big Spring Herald. A wedding form, available at the Herald, should be filled out, signed by either the bride, bridegroom or a member of either family and in our office no later than noon the Wednesday before the wedding.

The information may be accompanied by a photograph either of the bride or the couple. A black and white glossy 5 x 7 inch print is preferred. The picture must be of sufficient quality to reproduce in the newspaper. Pictures may be picked up following publication.

If a wedding writeup is turned in after the wedding, the space allotted to it will diminish according to the length of time that has passed since the wedding.

Forms for wedding stories may be picked up at the Lifestyle Department of the Big Spring Herald, 710 Scurry. Writeups may be brought in to the department or mailed to Big Spring Herald, Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720. Please call our office if you have problems or questions. Our number is (915) 263-7331.

By NAOMI HUNT County Extension Agent Tips on purchasing school clothes

Children have special clothing needs because they are growing and active. With careful planning, however, the different needs of each child can be met. To satisfy children and parents, children's clothing should fit well, allow for growth and be durable and easy to care for

The age of a child does not determine size. Children of the same age may vary greatly in height, weight and body measurements. Clothing for children is divided into size classifications based on weight, height and body proportions.

Children's sizes 2 through 6X are designed for boys and girls who are outgrowing baby roundness but still have baby's posture. Boys' and girls' sizes are designed for children who are taller with propor-tionately longer arms and legs and more adult posture.

Girls' sizes 7 through 14 are divided into three classifications designed for the undeveloped figure: regular for the average size, chubby for the heavier figure and slim for the slender figure. Select skirts, sweaters and blouses by height and chest measurement. Buy skirts and pants by hip measurement. Coats and dresses are selected primarily by height.

Boys' sizes 6 through 20 are available in regular, husky and slim for average, heavy and slender boys. Buy boy's shirts, sweaters and coats by height and chest measurement. Choose pants by waist and inseam measurement

The following chart gives standard measurements recommended by the U.S. Department of Commerce and recognized by the garment industry

(inches)	2	3	4	5	6	6X
Height	34	37	40	43	46	48
Weight	29	34	38	44	49	54
Chest	21	22	23	24	25	25 12
Waist	20 12	21	21 12	22	22 1/2	23
Hip	21 12	22 12	23 12	24 1 2	25 1z	26 12

Sizes may vary among different brands and with the style of the garment. A child may also have a minor figure variation that causes a fitting problem. For these reasons, the best way to be sure a garment will fit is for the child to try it on. If a child is between sizes, the next larger size is usually a better choice because the child will grow into it quickly. Avoid buying gar-ments several sizes too large, however, since loose, poor fitting clothes can cause accidents by catching on objects or tripping the child.

Measuring the child before going shopping will save time and give you a place to start. Write the measurements down and take them with you to the store for comparing with garment sizes. This will reduce the number of garments to be tried on to find the proper fit.

Take all measurements with the child in underwear. Weigh the child in underwear and without shoes. Height: Have the child stand against the wall without shoes. Place a ruler or stiff paper level with the top of his head. Mark this point. Measure from the mark to the floor. Chest or breast: Measure under the arms around the fullest part of the chest or breast. Keep the tape measure parallel to the floor.

Waist: Measure the natural waistline. To find the waistline have the child bend from side to side. The point at which the body indents is the natural waistline. Hip or seat: Measure around the fullest part of the body below the waist. Keep the tape measure parallel to the floor. Back waist length: Measure from the prominent bone at the base of the neck in back to the natural waistline.

Inseam: Measure the pants, not the child. Lay a pair of well-fitting pants flat on a table. Fold back one leg and measure along the other leg from the crotch to the edge of the leg along the inside seam.

A number of publications on childrens clothes are available at the Extension office. For a free copy of the publications, telephone 267-8469 or come by the Extension office in the Courthouse basement

Limits to sports records

Dear Dr. Donohue: Some of us were sitting around one night and talking about sports records. The question that came up was about limits, like for the mile run. Will a three-minute mile ever be run? We thought we'd ask you just for kicks. - B.L.

The word in both sports and medicine is never to say never. Having said that, I have to sort of contradict myself by adding that there are obviously limits on how fast a person can run, swim or jump, or how much he can lift.

But it's more than just common sense that tells me this. There are a few definite restraints involved, some biological laws that have to be dealt with in physical performance. Chiefly, they involve the heart, the body skelton and muscles. Consider them one at a time.

The heart: Let's look at the runner. An average runner pumps 18 quarts of blood every minute he's running. A world-class runner pumps 30 quarts. And the most any heart has ever pumped is 36 quarts. We now believe that is about as much blood as any human heart can pump. Unlike the gas tank on your car, you can't simply replace the heart with a larger one, so you have this oxygen-fuel limitation on performance.

Next, the bones: It's been estimated that the human hip bone can withstand pressures up to 1,600 pounds. It's also known that in a dash, for example, the hip and the leg bones withstand pressures about five times body weight, meaning that a 150-pounder puts 750 pounds of pressure on his bin the state of the his hip bones. That would seem to permit some range for improved performance.

Pric

NENS

But no. You have to consider the human body's anaerobic capacity to move those bones. And that brings us to the third element - muscles

Each muscle is packed with little "factories" called enzymes. It is these enzymes that help us convert sugar into fuel to power our body's muscles. With training, the athlete can triple the number of enzymes available. But that's about the limit there.

Putting all these limiting factors together and running them through a computer, some people have come up with a theoretical limit for the speed with which a human can run a mile. The record is now about 3:48 seconds, and some experts contend the absolute record will be 3:30 seconds. And those 18 seconds will be slow coming. We are unlikely to see it in our lifetime. Having gone through all this disertation, I shall now watch the weekend sports sections with some anxiety, because, as I said, one should never say never in medicine - or sports.

Sexagenarian says no to sex

DEAR ABBY: We kiss and cuddle by the hour. We aren't youngsters. He's a widower of 66, and I'm 69 and have never been married - or anything. (Yes, I'm still a virgin.) The kissing and cuddling is as far as I will go. Of course, he would like sex, but I told him no marriage, no sex

He wants to live together first and has given me every excuse imaginable for not wanting to get married. Mainly, his children are against it, and he hasn't enough money. Also, he says there are plenty of women who will give him sex without marriage

The lack of money and his children being against it happen to be true. I don't know about the other women. We live in the same apartment building, which gives me an Sex without marriage is against my principles, but at my age, my chances for marriage are practically nil. The attraction between us is strong.

If I hold out for marriage, do you think he'll give in? YOUNG AT HEART

DEAR YOUNG: Whether he will give in, I cannot predict. You could save a lot of time by giving him a deadline. But never give a man a deadline (or an ultimatum) unless you're prepared to lose.

DEAR ABBY: I received an invitation to my cousin's wedding. With it came an RSVP card, with a stamped envelope for my reply. I accepted the invitation and in-dicated on the card that I was bringing an escort — and I wrote in his name

Now it seems that I have committed a "cardinal sin." I have been informed (by my mother) that I had no right to invite an escort without the permission of the bride's family since they are footing the bill.

I honestly thought it was socially correct for a woman to be escorted, and since no escort was provided for me, I invited my own. Was I wrong?

SOCIALLY AWKWARD

DEAR AWKWARD: Yes. You should not have invited an escort without first asking permission to do so.

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.
