City officials: prostitution 'not a problem'

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

Ask city officials about prostitution and the answer you will get is prostitution is "not a problem" in Big Spring. "It's there. It's illegal. But they're not on the street ... We're not getting any complaints," one police detective said.

Six arrests have been made in connection with prostitution in the past three years, police Identification Officer Marilyn Carson said. Four of those arrests were made last month.

of a nuisance to the public to warrant a crack-down on the offenders.

"Like I say, like drugs, it's there. If you want it, you know where to get it. But they're not out there soliciting. It's not like in Boston where they're lined up on the streets," the detective said.

Howard House Hotel employee Bill Frank Jones — arrested three times on suspicion of promotion of prostitution — said "You understand about how things are don't you? With the town. People know about this. They just don't like to hear about it ... But we do what we can for the police."

COUNTY ATTORNEY Bob Miller said he is "not aware of any public heat (against prostitution)" and doesn't believe "the electorate" consider prostitution a problem in Big Spring.

Two months ago police department officials said they believed prostitution was "under control." Police Lt. John Wolf said "We're not condoning it (prostitution). We are controlling it."

However, comments from Police Chief Rick Turner — the new chief employed in July — may indicate a more hard-line approach to enforcing prostitution laws. "If we had any concrete evidence we would put those (prostitutes) in jail," Turner said in early August.

Since then, four arrests have been made, two for promotion of prostitution and two for prostitution, according to police reports.

Do these arrests indicate a change in the department's policy on enforcing prostitution laws?

"I can't answer that ... My style of enforcement is I do not condone any type of illegal activities. I'm not here to point a finger at anyone," Turner said.

Turner said "busting prostitutes" is "definitely not one of our main objectives," however, police officers will "be enforcing prostitution (laws). We do not condone those types of activities in the city of Big Spring."

BOB MILLER

"We have to control it, keep it to a minimum. We can't condone crime. You can't turn your back on it. Officers of the law have to enforce the law," Turner said.

Although prostitution is "not a major problem ... it's still a violation," Turner said.

Turner said he objects to prostitution's open operations in Big Spring. "It's hard to believe it is as open as it is," Turner said. "We're not going to tolerate these type of things. I don't want to raise my kids in that type of environment and I can't imagine anyone else would."

His main concern is that he has "reason to believe they are working on a circuit" and are involved with organized crime, Turner said.

However, Bill Jones said the prostitution circuit is "a myth. These girls come here on their own." Jones said women call the hotel and are asked questions about their physical attributes and previous experience.

Turner said "The problem is the things behind it when it becomes organized. The people behind prostitution usually, in many cases, are involved in many other criminal activities."

"The offshoots of prostitution are the effects you see in the community. I haven't been here long enough to see (the effects)," Turner said.

"All I can say is the police department should not condone the things surrounding prostitution," Turner said.

"There's lots more to it than just busting prostitutes," Turner said. "This department is not involved in an all out effort to put every prostitute in jail. We are taking care of it."

ANOTHER 'OLD FAITHFUL?' — Gilbert and Lorenzo Yanez, sons of Arthur and Rosa Yanez, couldn't resist examining a geyser that erupted early this morning at Eighth and Gregg. Apparently a water line broke, shooting water into the air, Public Works Director Tom Decell said. City workers began repairs this morning and area residents may experience some low water pressure today, Decell said.

ARB aims to even values

By MIKE DOWNEY

They go before the appraisal review board to seek lower values on their property, whether on their homes or on their land. And in their main goal to equalize values, the Howard County Appraisal Review Board has been obliging them.

The ARB rolled back into action yesterday after the Labor Day holiday still absent a board member. J.M. Sterling is recovering from surgery and is not expected back until Thursday, according to Jimmy Ray Smith, board president. Smith and the other member of the ARB, Gerald Harris, are expected to hear protests through Friday of this week.

The ARB plans hearing through Sept. 13-16 and Sept. 20-23, Smith said. The board has received nearly 1,700 protests with more expected as agricultural-use valuation notices go out this week. The ARB is hearing approximately 25 protests a day.

During an hour's time Tuesday, the ARB heard four protests on values.

On one protest concerning the fair market value on several hundred acres belonging to Juanita Hamilton, Jack Watkins of the Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal board represented Mrs. Hamilton.

Following several minutes of studying soil maps and making acreage adjustments with Appraiser Weldon Peoples, Watkins advised Mrs. Hamilton to await her agricultural-use valuation notice and to reserve the right to protest those values. The ARB agreed.

In three other hearings, the ARB adjusted property values in relationship with other property in a given area.

Joan McKinney told the ARB the home at 2604 Rebecca she co-owned with her mother would not bring the $64,520 appraised value. "I couldn't get that if I tried to sell it," she said.

The ARB noted that sales in the area were around

ROBERT LEE (AP) — A woman was dead and a game warden was wounded in a shooting at a home here, police said.

Victoria de la Cruz Ortiz, 37, was shot to death Tuesday evening, according to Coke County Sheriff Marshall Millican.

Authorities refused to give details of the shooting, saying only that it occurred at a home in Robert Lee.

Millican said a suspect was in custody following the Tuesday night incident, but no charges had been filed. He declined to release any information about the person in custody.

Session winds down; Shaw raps Clayton

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The political rubber-band powering this latest special session of the legislature is beginning to wind down.

House Democrats, concerned about a compromise solution to a crisis in the state's unemployment compensation fund spearheaded by House Speaker Billy Clayton, scheduled a noon news conference to talk about the legislation and what they called attempts by Gov. Bill Clements to cover up the problem.

State Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, is among a coalition of Democratic lawmakers concerned about the compromise and the "coverup."

Clayton irritated the freshman lawmaker last month by supporting the candidacy of his Republican opponent, State Rep. Jerry Cockerham of Monahans.

On Tuesday, Clements also called on legislators to devise a solution for a host of school districts experiencing severe cash-flow problems. School administrators blamed a four-year-old reform of the state's property tax system requiring countywide appraisal districts as the source of their woes.

The House will vote on a proposal Wednesday — already cleared by the Senate — that would allow school districts to borrow money without adopting their tax rolls or setting tax rate.

The unemployment fund compromise, spearheaded by Clayton, calls for a two-step employer surtax in late 1982 and early 1983. Those surtaxes, along with an increase in the employer tax, would be used to pay off interest on a federal loan that would help keep the fund financially solvent.

Legislative budget analysts estimate that under the bill the 1983 minimum tax paid by employers would increase from the current $6 annually to $28.

INVENTORS — Dalton, left, and Connie Hendron display a do-it-all gadget which the Kentucky pair invented. It does everything from light up your life to carry your car keys.

This device does everything

HARRODSBURG, Ky. (AP) — It plays music, lights the night, wakes you up, snaps your picture and gives you the time of day — digitally, of course. It even carries your car keys and pocket change.

It's "The Octopus," a battery-powered, do-it-all gizmo invented by brothers Dalton and Connie Hendron for people who sometimes wish they had an extra pair of hands.

The Octopus includes an AM-FM radio, flash camera, flashlight, alarm clock, stop watch and dual time-zone indicator. The change and keys fit in a storage compartment.

The brothers said the invention was inspired by a woman they spotted on a beach about 18 months ago. She had a radio under one arm, a camera under the other and keys hanging from a chain around her neck.

"She looked very uncomfortable trying to cling to all that stuff," said Connie Hendron, club pro at Brightleaf Golf Course near Harrodsburg. "I thought at the time, while watching her struggle along the beach trying not to drop anything, 'Why hasn't somebody invented a gadget that would combine all those things into one easy-to-handle item?'"

The gadget is manufactured in Louisville and is being test marketed in New York, Miami, Los Angeles and Phoenix, the brothers said.

Groceries confiscated at Mexican border

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Americans taking advantage of the devalued peso to buy foods in Mexico at bargain prices will have some of their groceries confiscated at the border beginning today, the government says.

Mexican merchants claim some American shoppers are taking advantage of the country's economic woes to buy up basic foods for resale in the United States, in many cases stripping shelves bare. Many of the items are subsidized by the Mexican government.

The Commerce Department on Tuesday night issued a list of basic foods that cannot be taken from Mexico without written authorization. It said customs officials will confiscate any of the items found in the possession of shoppers returning to the United States.

The prohibited items include such things as tortillas, bread, sugar, rice, beans, pasta, eggs, soap, detergents, vegetable oil, canned foods, beef, pork, chicken, sausage, fresh fruit and vegetables, crackers, wheat flour, corn meal, lard, margarine and milk products, the government said.

Town goes broke if it pays its bills

PETROLIA, Texas (AP) — The coffers of this North Texas community will contain only $118 if all the city's bills are paid, a councilman says. But the 755 residents of this town say they paid more than enough taxes, and want to know where all their money went.

City aldermen could collect delinquent taxes to put the town squarely back in the black, but say they don't have enough money to hire an attorney to do it.

Residents packed first into city hall, then overflowed into a nearby firehouse Tuesday night to hear city officials explain themselves.

"We're already belly up," said councilman Harold Riney. "They (residents) just don't know it yet. We have just got to have those taxes."

He told the crowd the city is "flat broke."

The council did not adopt a 1983 budget, nor did they set a 1983 tax rate, although both items must be considered, he said.

"If we pay our bills, we will have about $118 left," Riney said. "We have salaries to pay and I don't know how we are going to pay them."

State law provides that the community must adopt a budget and set a tax rate by Oct. 1.

Personal injury suits filed

A $20,000 personal injury suit has been filed in 118th District Court by Laverne Nancy Neefe against Marion Bolt Slavens. The suit charges that Slavens was negligent in driving that resulted in a car collision March 14, 1982.

The accident occurred at the intersection of East Fourth and Owens. Neefe is represented by Jack Thompson.

In other court filings, a personal injury suit seeking $16,400 in damages has been filed in 118th District Court by John D. Gaskin. Gaskin is suing Marvin Burt Teich for injuries in an automobile accident July 22, 1982.

Gaskin claims negligence on the part of Teich resulted in the injuries Gaskin suffered in the collision. Gaskin is represented by Jack Thompson.

Wood murder suspect admits role in plot?

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Elizabeth Chagra, charged with conspiracy in the assassination of U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., wrote a letter to the judge's widow admitting a role in the death plot, a source is quoted as saying.

Mrs. Chagra said her husband, Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, walked into the kitchen of their El Paso home while she was cooking fried chicken and told her he had decided to arrange Wood's death, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram today quoted a source as saying.

The newspaper and WFAA-TV of Dallas reported that sources said Mrs. Chagra, in a letter from her Bexar County Jail cell, said she delivered $250,000 for Wood's killer.

Jimmy Chagra is charged with paying convicted hired killer Charles V. Harrelson $250,000 to shoot the judge to prevent him from presiding at Jimmy Chagra's narcotics trial. Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann, also is charged with conspiracy, as is Jimmy Chagra's brother, El Paso attorney Joseph Chagra.

NIXON IN CHINA — Former President Richard Nixon bows as he pays a visit to a monastery during a tour of Peking. Nixon is on a private five-day visit to celebrate

10,000 teachers on strike; 150,000 students miss school

A new wave of teacher strikes hit Pennsylvania and Michigan, canceling the first day of school for thousands of children, but 200,000 students in Detroit were told to report today after teachers agreed to start work while contract talks continued.

In all, about 10,000 teachers in four states were off the job Tuesday, extending summer vacation for more than 150,000 students.

Teachers walked out Tuesday in seven Michigan districts and remained on strike in four more. About 48,000 students were idled as nearly 4,000 teachers stayed off the job.

In Pennsylvania, teachers in five districts walked off the job, joining their striking counterparts in nine other districts. Almost 3,000 teachers around the state are on strike, affecting about 58,000 students.

About 2,900 teachers remained off the job in Illinois, idling about 49,000 students in six districts.

In the northeastern Ohio district of North Olmstead, 270 teachers were to vote today on a contract offer to end a strike which began Sept. 1. Schools for 5,600 students have been kept open with substitutes, non-striking teachers and administrators.

Most of the strikes involve salaries, with many teachers threatened by pay cuts because of high unemployment and federal cutbacks which have squeezed school budgets.

Detroit teachers rejected a strike proposal and agreed Tuesday to a three-day grace period after Detroit Federation of Teachers president John Elliot said talks were progressing. But Superintendent Arthur Jefferson said he wasn't optimistic a settlement could be reached by Friday.

"We work for three days," warned Elliot as he spoke to about 7,000 federation members in Cobo Arena. "If we don't work anything out, then we're out ... come Monday we'll be on strike."

Detroit's 11,000 teachers currently earn from $15,000 to $30,000. The school board is asking for an 8 percent pay cut, which would roll back salary levels to the 1980-81 school year.

Elsewhere in Michigan, teachers walked out Tuesday in Kalamazoo and the suburban communities of Troy, Traverse City, Southfield, Waterford, Ferndale, and Suttons Bay. Strikes continued in four more districts.

Pennsylvania's largest new strike came in Bucks County north of Philadelphia, where about 630 teachers walked out after what union spokesman David Horn labeled a "worthless" bargaining session Monday. School board president Charles McHenry said he would try to open classes anyway today, but said the 10,000 students would be dismissed early.

Police Beat

Police arrest manslaughter suspect

Police said they arrested 25-year-old John Thomas Midkiff yesterday on an involuntary manslaughter warrant issued by Peace Justice Lewis Hefflin. He was released on $5,000 bond set by Howard County Judge Bill Tune.

The warrant was issued in connection with the August 25 death of 64-year-old Deciderio Hernandez — a passenger in a car struck that day by an 18-wheel truck at FM 700 and Birdwell.

Police reports also showed the following:

- Jerry Franklin Chitwood, 31, of 101 W. Wall, Midland, was arrested last night at the Salvation Army, 308 Aylford, on suspicion of simple assault, criminal trespass and public intoxication.
- The arrest was made after a man told police the suspect called him a "snitch," threatened to kill him, and struck him in the face with his fist. Lt. Carroll Braun of the Salvation Army told police Chitwood refused to leave the premises.
- David Major Rice, 21, of Southland Apartment 7a.1, building 23, was arrested at 2:30 a.m. today on suspicion of possession of under two ounces of marijuana and driving while intoxicated.
- Jose L. Ontiveros, 24, was arrested at N.E. 10th and N. Lamesa at 2 a.m. on suspicion of being a military deserter. Ontiveros is being held for Fort Hood officials.
- John Anderson of 1715 Yale said someone stole about $800 worth of tools from a 3202 Fordham garage between 6 p.m. Sept. 1 and 1:45 p.m. Sept. 2.
- Steve Christian of 1107 Goliad said someone stole a $150 sander-buffer from a car parked at his residence between 10 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. yesterday.

• R.H. Thomas of 1602 Cole said an $1,800 Honda dune buggy was stolen from his backyard between 8:30 p.m. Sunday and 10:15 a.m. Monday.

• Police said a Buick Century driven by Rita M. Franco of 209 N.E. Eighth and a Ford LTD driven by Henry T. Franco of 410 N.W. 11th collided at N.E. Eighth and N. Goliad at 4:06 p.m. yesterday. Police cited Franco for running a stop sign. No injuries were reported.

C-City chamber mulls fair

COLORADO CITY (SC) — The Colorado City Chamber of Commerce met last night and formalized plans to pay additional money on the organization's bank note.

Additionally, the need for selling booths at this year's Mitchell County Fair was discussed. Chamber manager Linda McCombs reported a few sales already have been made.

Also at last night's meeting, board members Virginia Fuller and Mac Perkin suggested the Miss Mitchell County pageant become an annual event, with the thought in mind of sending the winner to the Miss Texas Pageant. This year's winner was Kakai Calloway. The suggestion will be explored by the Miss Mitchell County Committee, with a report to be given at a later meeting.

Prostitution

HOW IS the police department "taking care of it?" Turner said an "officer explained to me that the problems were houses that condone illegal activity. We were able to substantiate criminal activity" at those houses.

"We had a series of interviews with those involved to find out what they were doing and how they were doing it. Then we formulated a plan and made the arrests."

August police reports show four arrests in connection with prostitution at the Howard House Hotel, 118 E. Third. Arrested were 47-year-old Bill Frank Jones of Howard House Hotel room 309 on suspicion of promotion of prostitution and Rebecca Elizabeth Archibald and Jean Elaine Manning, both of Fort Worth, on suspicion of prostitution. Jones was arrested twice and released on $1,000 bond each time. The two women were released on $500 bond each.

Turner declined to say exactly what took place during the arrests, but police reports state that Jones accepted compensation from police detectives for services of a prostitute and the women offered sexual services for a fee to police detectives.

The main difficulty in enforcing prostitution laws is obtaining concrete evidence to substantiate the charges,

Miller said. Law enforcement officers often rely on forms of entrapment, Miller said.

"Sometimes police do a good job (of obtaining evidence) and sometimes they don't ... You have to actually see the money exchange hands and you have to prove" the exchange was for a criminal purpose, Miller said.

"White collar and prostitution-type crimes are the hardest to prove," Miller said. Most suspects plead guilty, are fined and released, he said.

The Texas Criminal Laws Handbook, section 43 classifies prostitution as a class B misdemeanor, unless the suspect has been convicted previously. The second offense is a class A misdemeanor. Promotion of prostitution also is a class A misdemeanor.

Maximum punishment for class B misdemeanor offenses is a $1,000 fine and a 180 day jail term. The maximum for class A misdemeanor offenses is a $2,000 fine and a one year jail term.

No matter what the punishment, prostitution will never be eliminated, Miller said. "Frankly, I don't know how they make any money these days ... It's going to go on from now on. You'll never stop it. It goes back to the Bible. The Bible mentions it ... You can't change mankind overnight," Miller said.

$58,000, utilizing confidential real estate sales records, and adjusted her home's value to that figure.

Mr. and Mrs. Royal Mills of 1206 E. 17th told the ARB their home was overvalued at $40,345. "It'll bring $34,000 at the most according to the situation of the neighborhood and all," Mr. Mills said. After checking sales in the general area, the ARB concurred and adjusted the value to $34,000.

John Ezell of Coahoma said his home had been adjusted in meetings with appraisers from $65,010 to $57,910, but still a value out of line with other homes. As the ARB checked sales figures, Ezell expressed his disapproval with the shift of the tax burden.

"How can the mineral values be down with gas and electric fuel adjustment costs going up all the time?" Ezell said. He wondered why gas and fuel costs were not dropping in accordance with lowered oil values.

According to Pritchard & Abbott, the appraisal firm that evaluated mineral property in the county, mineral valuations dropped due to the lower price of a barrel of oil.

Ezell's home was adjusted to $53,275 in relationship with other homes in the area. "We'd like to do more, but we're just trying to get them (values) as equal as we can," Smith said.

More hostages freed in embassy takeover

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Swiss police, seeking a bloodless end to the Polish embassy siege, won the release of five more hostages today and gained a 48-hour extension of the deadline set by terrorists threatening to blow up the mission.

Authorities said "extremely tough" negotiations were continuing for the release of the embassy's military attaché and four other diplomatic employees.

Police expressed optimism that the crisis would end without bloodshed, but did not rule out an assault against the band of professed Polish anti-communist revolutionaries who have been occupying the building since Monday morning.

The terrorists, demanding an end to martial law and release of all political internees in Poland, claimed to have 55 pounds of dynamite and vowed to blow up the mission with everyone inside if their demands were not met.

They initially set a deadline of 10 a.m. today (3 a.m. CDT), but Swiss authorities announced that after "intensive" bargaining, the ultimatum had been put off until the 10 a.m. (3 a.m. CDT) Friday.

Government spokesman Achille Casanova told The Associated Press negotiators were increasingly confident of "an end without bloodshed."

But, when asked at a news conference if authorities would mount a commando raid on the embassy, Bern police spokesman Daniel Eckmann said: "It is one of the possibilities being considered."

In Warsaw, Foreign Ministry spokesman Tadeusz Kochorewicz claimed the embassy occupiers had tormented their captives by "simulating shooting and putting firearms to their backs." He said released hostages reported the terrorists "have anti-tank projectiles, gas masks and are heavily armed."

• Sheriff's deputies arrested Janell Minter, 38, of 211 N.E. 9th, on a county warrant of issuance of bad checks. She was released on a $200 personal recognizance bond set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Hefflin.

• Sheriff's deputies were called to the scene of a major accident at 4:20 p.m. Tuesday west of Dewees Exxon Station on West Highway 80. Details are sketchy at this time of the two-car collision, but Department of Public Safety officials report one woman was treated and released at a local hospital.

Commander backs claim of El Salvador massacres

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A civil defense commander has backed up three peasant women's claim that government troops massacred hundreds of unarmed villagers during a recent anti-guerrilla drive.

The government denied the charges. "This is misinformation," a military spokesman said when asked about the allegations. He said it was a common guerrilla tactic to claim rebels killed by the army were civilians.

But a civil defense commander at Santa Clara, 45 miles east of San Salvador and five miles south of the site of the alleged massacre, said Tuesday troops had killed 400 people, most of them unarmed civilians.

The commander, who asked not to be identified, said several victims were armed rebels but most were unarmed civilian "subversives" who accompanied the leftist rebels and aided them by farming, spying and other activities.

"They machine-gunned about 60 old women who had sought refuge in a house," he said. The commander claimed to have seen dozens of bodies at the site a few days after the alleged attacks, which purportedly began on Aug. 18.

A U.S. Embassy official said the embassy had no information on the alleged massacre but added rebels often use old women and children as collaborators.

"I'm not trying to pull the wool over anybody's eyes. This kind of thing could have happened," said embassy spokesman Don Hamilton. "But you have to keep in mind that they (the guerrillas) are not just using young men in their operation."

The women on Monday claimed government troops used U.S.-built A-37 fighter-bombers, incendiary bombs, grenades and automatic weapons to massacre 300 unarmed villagers.

They spoke during a news conference organized by the Salvadoran Human Rights Commission, generally considered to be careful about confirring such charges.

The women said the victims were mostly guerrilla supporters living in the village of Amatitan Arriba, about 45 miles east of San Salvador. They said there were no armed rebels present when the alleged attacks began.

The women said the troops trapped the villagers in an area of San Vicente province that is a stronghold of the leftist guerrillas fighting to overthrow the U.S.-backed government of this Central American nation.

"The people tried to leave through the valleys and they cornered them," one woman said. "They killed a mountain of people, children, old people and women."

Army sources earlier had reported 260 guerrillas killed during the operation and had admitted the casualty figures could include women and children. But they said anyone living in the rebel-controlled area was considered an insurgent.

MY STORE — Fred Cianciolo of Cincinnati stands in front of his store, which Procter & Gamble has picked as a spot to try out its new products. Fred says P&G learns a lot from these sneak previews.

Pampers? He sold 'em first, folks

CINCINNATI (AP) — It sits in the shadow of the Procter & Gamble building, a tiny, downtown grocery store that stocks every new product made by the giant manufacturing company that was built on a bar of soap.

Fred's Place is where consumers and P&G competitors alike go to sample the unfamiliar products that P&G hopes will take their place beside Ivory, Jif, Pampers and Charmin on the shelves of the nation's supermarkets.

The proprietor of the 20- by 60-foot store is Fred Cianciolo, who began selling fruit and vegetables at a sidewalk produce stand when he was 6 years old.

"When I first moved over here 14 years ago, they (P&G) approached me and wanted to know if I would handle their new items," said Cianciolo, 52, who followed his father and grandfather into the produce business.

"The same week I was moving into this bigger store, another one was going out of business. They were the originators, but they would only handle the (P&G) food items; I'll take anything that comes out — drugs, medicine... soaps, shampoo."

A half dozen stores in the Cincinnati area test-market some P&G products, "primarily as a means for our employees to try them," said spokeswoman Kathy Gilbert.

Cincinnati is a Procter & Gamble town, where almost 13,000 people work for the $12 billion-a-year packager of a wide range of food, soap, soft drinks and personal care products.

"Every once in a while, I accidentally find out about something I'm really not supposed to know," says Cianciolo.

"I know the next thing they're going to come out with is toothpaste in a dispenser, which sounds like a pretty neat idea," he says, showing off some of the products.

"This stuff (Rejoice, a hand lotion), this is going out in about 10 months because it's not making enough money for them."

"But this one here is going to be a good one — butter (flavored) Crisco."

Cianciolo began working with his grandfather when he was 6, and ran a fruit stand by himself when he was 9. His father, who is 80, still has a produce stand in Cincinnati's historic Findlay Market, and a cousin runs a wholesale produce business.

Two current big sellers — not yet generally available in other parts of the country — are a bathroom tissue called Certain, and Brigade, a toilet bowl cleanser that Cianciolo predicts "is going to be a tremendous item."

After P&G decides to mass market an item, Cianciolo has to buy it like anyone else — at a supermarket.

"I usually do all right until it goes on the open market," he said. "Then it changes; they (supermarkets) sell the stuff cheaper than I can buy it, because they buy truckloads."

IMF under fire as it holds conference

TORONTO (AP) — To the cold-eyed financiers assembled here, the International Monetary Fund is a savior of Third World nations considered financial basket cases, too deep in debt to get more help from private banks.

But the needy nations themselves often view the IMF as an economic tyrant intent on imposing its economic will on sovereign states.

That dichotomy is a bitter source of conflict among the 146 rich and poor nations attending the IMF's 37th annual conference here this week.

The IMF is controlled by the United States and a small group of other rich countries that provide most of the emergency lending funds. It is little-known to people of the industrialized nations, that rarely need its help these days.

But to people of the poor, financially troubled countries, the IMF is well known as a U.S.-dominated bank of last resort that can impose stringent terms on borrowers.

Formed after World War II to help prevent the kind of depression the industrial countries endured in the 1930s, the IMF now is trying to stop Mexico's enormous debt problems from expanding into an international financial crisis.

When it makes loans, the IMF demands that countries make economic "adjustments" — a euphemism for severe belt-tightening measures that usually include cuts in food subsidies, other budget cuts and adherence to a strict schedule for climbing out of debt.

Countries in severe financial distress usually have no choice but to go along — even at the cost of protest riots and political upheaval in some cases — if they want the money badly enough.

Fund officials contend that many of the borrowing countries brought their financial woes on themselves by spending far more than they could afford.

"We shouldn't encourage any nation to be extravagant or a spendthrift and think it could get away with it by being bailed out by the IMF," says U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who leads the forces who want to maintain the strictest conditions for help from the fund to prevent it from becoming an easy touch.

That is one reason why the United States, alone, opposes a substantial increase in member contributions to the fund to handle a growing list of Mexico-type crises.

ONE MAN'S VIEW — Raymond Turmel picketed the meeting of the International Monetary Fund in Toronto and made his message clear to police officers.

Arafat promotes Reagan proposal

FEZ, Morocco (AP) — Yasser Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, has urged Arab leaders to adopt "a conciliatory attitude" toward President Reagan's Middle East peace plan, sources at the Arab summit conference disclosed today.

The sources also said President Hafez Assad of Syria had asked the Arab League to relieve his country of its peacekeeping mandate in Lebanon. The mandate was legal basis for Syria's entry of Lebanon during the 1975-76 war, and its removal could lead to a quick withdrawal of Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon.

Arafat spoke about the Reagan plan to a closed session of the summit leaders on Tuesday, the sources disclosed. He said the Reagan plan and an earlier plan put forward by Saudi Arabia's King Fahd could form the basis for negotiations on a general Middle East peace settlement.

The sources, requesting anonymity, said Arafat, in a major policy statement to the Arab leaders, for the first time offered to discuss the possibility of some form of mutual recognition between Israel and the PLO.

Arafat was reporting to the Arab leaders on decisions taken at a meeting of the PLO Executive Committee on Sunday at its new headquarters in Tunis.

Among the conditions he listed for possible mutual recognition were an Israeli evacuation of all occupied Arab territories including Arab East Jerusalem, and acceptance of the PLO as "sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people."

The sources said Arafat at one point turned to King Fahd and asked for a Saudi guarantee of such a role for the PLO in return for PLO acceptance of Fahd's peace plan as a basis for negotiations.

Neither the Fahd plan nor the Reagan plan makes any explicit reference to the PLO.

Fahd's plan, unveiled last year, referred to peace for "states" in the region. That was seen as an implicit suggestion of general Arab recognition of Israel in return for the evacuation of all occupied territories and creation of a Palestinian state. The territories Israel would have to leave would include east Jerusalem, the Golan Heights, the West Bank, and the Gaza Strip.

President Reagan last week proposed election of an autonomous "domestic authority" in the West Bank and Gaza in association with Jordan. He opposed creation of a Palestinian state, however.

Both plans also called for an end to Jewish settlements in the West Bank. Both have been rejected by Israel.

Wallace in runoff for 4th term as governor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — George C. Wallace, drawing on unusual black support in his bid for an unprecedented fourth term as Alabama governor, topped all his primary challengers but still faces a two-man runoff for the Democratic nomination.

"We're in a fight," Wallace told shouting and clapping supporters as his partial victory became apparent Tuesday night.

Although Wallace, 63, won about 40 percent of the Democratic vote, adding many black votes to his longtime coalition of rural and working-class whites, his total fell short of the majority needed to win the nomination outright.

He will face Lt. Gov. George McMillan in the Sept. 28 runoff. The incumbent governor, Democrat Fob James, is not seeking a second term.

"I've never won an easy campaign in my life... because I have stood against special moneyed interests of this state," Wallace told 300 cheering campaign workers as he and his wife, Lisa, made a midnight appearance at a Montgomery motel.

"Roll up your sleeves," McMillan urged his own followers at a celebration in Birmingham, one of the urban centers where the 38-year-old moderate showed strength.

Finishing third was Alabama House Speaker Joe McCorquodale, 61, who declined to concede until the last votes were counted today. But he said a loss would mean his retirement from politics to once more "fish and turkey hunt and run my businesses" in rural Clarke County.

The winner of the runoff will face Republican nominee Emory Folmar, the rough-hewn mayor of Montgomery. He is expected to be a formidable foe for the Democrats and hopes to become the state's first Republican governor in this century.

Wallace had once cried "segregation forever." But he sought support this year from blacks in a state where they make up about 25 percent of the population, and he led in such predominantly black counties as Macon and Lowndes.

GEORGE WALLACE Confident of victory

Corbet to face Babbitt in Arizona election

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — State Senate President Leo Corbet won the Republican gubernatorial nomination Tuesday and the right to face Gov. Bruce Babbitt in November, while state Rep. Pete Dunn was nominated in the GOP Senate race.

Dunn will meet U.S. Sen. Dennis DeConcini, who won his nomination easily.

In the Republican Senate primary, with 330 of 1,350 precincts reporting, Dunn, of Phoenix, led with 19,884 votes, or 56 percent, to Mesa real-estate investor Dean Seliers' 15,396 votes, or 43 percent.

Dunn, 40, a Phoenix lawyer and three-term member of the Arizona House, had the support of party regulars.

Sellers, 35, an aggressive, conservative newcomer to politics, sought his first elective office with an active, year-long campaign.

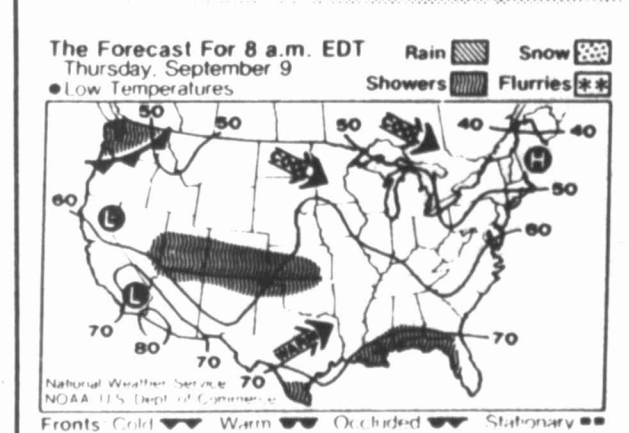

DeConcini quickly defeated Caroline Killeen of Tucson, a crusader for energy conservation who has run for several offices, including the presidency. With 341 precincts reporting, DeConcini had 34,649 votes, or 83 percent, to Ms. Killeen's 6,956 votes, or 16 percent.

With 273 precincts reporting, Corbet, of Phoenix, had 17,088, or 61 percent; to Glendale auto dealer Evan Mecham's 10,601 votes, or 38 percent.

Babbitt's only opposition, Steve Jancek, died last month — too late to remove his name from the ballot. Jancek still recorded 5,669 votes, or 15 percent; to Babbitt's 30,523 votes, or 84 percent, after 285 precincts.

'Take room 204. Would you like it with python, or not?'

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A 6-foot-long python greeted a pair of French tourists when they checked into their room in a hotel here, but they took the uninjured guest in stride.

"Sir, there is a snake in the room," hotel manager Wayne Liebhart quoted Christian Aita as saying when the nonchalant tourist came back to the front desk.

"It was just sitting there right on top of the dresser, all coiled up and its head sticking out," Liebhart said after being summoned to the room Monday by Aita and Sabrina Vuillermin, who are from the Paris suburb of LeBlanc Mesnil.

Police soon arrived and carried the reptile off in a pillow case. An officer took the snake home to his children Tuesday as a pet.

The passive snake may have been left by a Marine who occupied the room the day before, officials said.

"I thought they would want a refund," Liebhart said of the couple. "But they've decided to stay on."

Mexico learns a tough lesson

The dangers of a high national debt, and the painful consequences of runaway government spending are exemplified by the tribulations facing the government of Mexico.

With a Gross National Product of only $107.6 billion dollars, the total foreign debt now approaches $80 billion dollars. It is then no small wonder that such basic necessities of life such as tortillas and bread went up as much as 200 percent in less than one year.

As an additional consequence, Mexico has lost much ground with its trading partners as a result of the devaluation of its currency from an exchange rate of 23 pesos to the dollar to more than 120 pesos to the dollar.

The total blame for the current economic mess in Mexico cannot all be laid at the feet of outgoing President Jose Lopez Portillo, as would be convenient. Portillo was merely carrying on with policies of previous Mexican administrations who thought that Mexico's ills could be solved by massive government handouts, subsidizing everything from rice to petroleum products. Now Portillo and his successor, Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado are having to pay the piper for many years of dancing on credit.

THE MORAL of this grim story is obvious. What may not be so obvious however is the great similarities that exist between the rampant spending of the Mexican government, and the monetary policy of the United States government over the past 40 years.

To be sure, the U.S. is not as poor as our Mexican neighbor, but poor management could lead to our downfall as swiftly as it has forced Mexico to pay for its past economic indiscretions.

History has shown that Mexico will probably land on its feet, provided that Hurtado's administration shows some restraint that has been sadly lacking in past Mexican leaders.

Will the United States be wise also and learn from the mistakes of its neighbor, or will it choose to continue to whistle in the dark, assuming that the till will forever overflow regardless of the abuses heaped on it?

Campaign fund misuse uncovered

WASHINGTON — Congress returns to Washington today from its extended Labor Day recess. Members have been in their home districts, and presumably they've been getting some heat on the charges of moral turpitude, drug abuse and self-legislated tax breaks that have surfaced in recent months.

It's all been enough to make an incumbent cringe. The American voter can be forgiven if he or she wonders just what our senators and representatives have been doing to justify the compensation that puts them in the top 1 percent of American wage earners.

Despite this generous pay scale, there's a widespread suspicion that members of Congress use campaign contributions for expenses that should properly be paid for out of their own pockets.

HOUSE ETHICS Committee rules prohibit the use of campaign funds to pay for official expenses — which are supposedly covered adequately already — or for personal expenses that should be paid for personally. Unfortunately, it's left up to the individual member's judgment to decide what's official and personal, as opposed to political.

Working with an investigative team from The City Desk, a Washington-based bureau for regional and city magazines, my associate Tony Capaccio found many expenditures of campaign funds that certainly lend weight to the suspicions of abuse. Consider these typical examples:

• Rep. Beverly Byron, D-Md., spent $2,000 in campaign funds on drapes for her district office in Frederick and frames for some antique Harper's Weekly prints that hang in her Washington office. She said she "was not aware" of House rules that prohibit such use of campaign contributions. "It won't transpire again," she said.

Mexico gets serious

A pinch of anti-Americanism is a normal ingredient in Mexico's political diet. But during the present financial crisis, the anti-gringo emphasis has been notably absent.

For Mexico is taking its problems seriously, not fobbing them off on unpopular foreigners. And precisely because the available scapegoat is now being spared, there now looms in Mexico the danger of a radicalization that — for once — could go beyond mere rhetoric.

A revolutionary past provides the ideological climate of politics south of the border. A single party — the Party of Revolutionary Institutions, or PRI — has won all elections for the past 60 years. Its chief components are federations of workers and peasants. Its heroic accomplishments include nationalization of oil; establishment of agricultural cooperatives; and the subsidization of prices for basic goods and services. A presidential system — with a powerful leader changed after one six-year term — gives the illusion of fair competition between contending groups.

Beneath the varnish of the revolutionary heritage there exists gross inequalities. Private interests own the best lands and benefit from state irrigation projects. Private companies run the most profitable industries and benefit from protective markets and cheap power and labor. Bribery on a colossal scale buys off labor and peasant leaders, and turns the wheels of politics and government.

Discontent, insofar as it is organized at all, tends to be expressed by left-wing intellectuals. Their complaints have been traditionally drowned in a shower of official anti-Americanism. That tactic found supreme expression in the regime of the outgoing president, Jose Lopez Portillo.

Lopez Portillo initiated a policy of oil-led economic growth that chiefly profited private interests and the political and labor bosses. At the same time, he stepped up the anti-American bias. In that spirit, he embraced Fidel Castro, supported the cause of left-wing revolutionaries in Central America and pushed Mexico forward as leader of the developing countries group in the so-called Third World.

The present financial crisis, while precipitated by the fall in oil prices, marked the failure of that system. Oil-led growth did not produce by itself the large number of new jobs Mexico needs to accommodate its rapidly growing population. State investment of oil revenues in economic

Billy Graham

What happens to nonbelievers?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: What happens to people after death who have rejected God? I tend to believe that they just simply cease to exist. — R.B.H.

DEAR R.B.H.: One of the characteristics of our time is that people generally block their minds from thinking very much about life after death. When they do, they often decide in their own minds what they hope will happen after death, and then accept that as the truth. But the Bible warns us not to do this.

There is no greater task in time than to prepare for eternity. The Bible tells us that each of us has been created in the image of God, and as part of that we have an eternal soul that will live forever.

How do I know there is life after death? I know it because Jesus Christ came back from the dead! By coming back from the dead Jesus Christ demonstrated for us beyond any doubt that this life is not all, but beyond the grave there is eternity. This is true for all people.

But the Bible also teaches that only those who have come to trust Christ for their salvation will inherit eternal life in heaven with God. On the other hand, those who have rejected God's way of salvation (and have therefore rejected God himself) will spend eternity separated from God. Jesus said, "I tell you the truth, whoever hears my word and believes him who sent me has eternal life and will not be condemned, but whoever does not believe stands condemned already because he has not believed in the name of God's one and only Son" (John 3:18).

These are sobering words, and we dare not neglect them. If you have never come to Christ, I pray that you will turn to him and trust him for your salvation. And then if you know Christ, seek to share him with others. All around us are people who face a Christless eternity, and we must do all we can to tell them about Christ, who is the Savior.

Abortion view praised

Dear Editor: I wish to commend Mike Downey on his "Around the Rim" column of September 1. He arrived at the only human conclusion in the abortion issue — the necessity of individual freedom of choice.

In 1973, the United States Supreme Court gave Americans the right to exercise free will and to make individual decisions regarding abortion. Right-to-Lifers are attempting to deny that freedom of choice while the Pro-Choice (a more accurate term than Mr. Downey's "pro-abortionists") movement wishes to preserve that individual freedom.

No one is being forced to have an abortion, but likewise no one should be forced to give birth. No one is forcing Right-to-Lifers to have abortions so why are they trying to force pregnancy on those who do not wish it?

As Mr. Downey states, "Abortion should not be an easy choice, but it should be a choice." CATHY KUPKE, Box 2336, Big Spring

Broken glass in city a hazard

Dear Editor: I have just returned home from shopping in Big Spring and once again I took the life of my car tires in my hands. In three of my five stops today I had to try to dodge piles of broken glass. I'm tired of it. The three stops included two shopping centers and a convenience store.

Now, I know there is a problem with irresponsible-acting persons hanging out at night at these places and breaking and leaving their beer bottles. What I don't understand is why something isn't done to at least clean up the glass. The five other states I have lived in weren't like this. The store owners made sure someone cleaned up the glass, everyday if that is what it took for their customers to have safe driving conditions.

Since moving to Texas I have been impressed with several things, Big Spring included. But I have also never seen so much litter and broken glass anywhere else. Where is everyone's Civic Pride? Doesn't anyone mind or feel inclined to do something about it. CAROL J. FAULTNER, P.O. Box 3102, Big Spring

Around the Rim

By MIKE DOWNEY

We're cops

My partner and I were working the day watch out of homicide when the call came in: murder one. My name's Friday — I'm a cop.

The ballistics boys were finishing up when we got to the scene: a ratty tenement in the 'toe. I remarked to my partner Bill as we climbed the 142 flights of stairs to the victim's room how the building stank.

"The building stinks." "Yeah." "We don't talk much — we don't have to."

O'Malley filled us in at the door: young guy, 25, three slugs in the heart, left lots of dough to some dame in Frisco. They rolled him out as we spoke. He'd been in the room for three weeks. I mentioned to my partner as the deceased was carted by: "He stinks." "Yeah." "We don't talk much — we don't have to."

VICTIM'S NAME was Tony, O'Malley said as he left us with the landlady. Pinched face framed by curlers atop a slight frame hidden in a shapeless faded overcoat, Mrs. Polinski said she knew all her tenants. I said I'd have to ask a few questions. "Shoot," she said with a cackle. Bill and I smiled, an old oke but we still liked it.

Friday: "Who lived in the room across the hall?"

Polinski: "Mr. Thomas — but I only saw a glimpse of him six months ago when he checked in, the sniveling weasel."

Friday: "Just the facts, ma'am."

Friday: "Yes, ma'am, but did he have any unusual marks or habits?"

Polinski: "He always carried an eggplant."

Friday: "Eggplant, ma'am?"

Polinski: "Yes, eggplant, you know, the one that looks like a dead white brain."

Friday: "Please, ma'am, we haven't eaten — Right, Bill?"

Bill: "Yeah."

Thanking the landlady for her help, my partner and I conducted our own search of the apartment. I got 46 cents in change and a travel alarm. Bill got two wristwatches, a mousetrap and a stainless-steel cuff link. We hit the streets.

After sending an APB, we knew we'd need the pulse of the city to find our suspect. We headed for Hank's. Hank runs a quiet, simple newsstand — he runs a few numbers, too; has a couple of girls, pulls a few heists, kills a half dozen a week, even overthrew a country last week.

HANK'S WAS deserted as usual. He doesn't get much business being located next to an open sewer by the city dump. The smell was incredible. I turned to my partner to say — "Yeah," Bill said. We don't talk much — we don't have to.

The word in the streets was Thomas and the eggplant were in trouble. That Frisco dame of Tony's had set him up, bribing Thomas with the lushness of her body, Hank drooled. She'd dumped Thomas already, married a drummer, and was having an affair with a toothpick tester while holding down a job as a combination stripper and wheel balancer.

Thomas was like a wounded animal, roaming the streets looking for something to kill.

My partner and I hit the squad car fast, rolled up the windows real tight, and called for backup — from all of the Western Seaboard.

A howitzer round from the 138th Armored Division got Thomas as he tried to evade the calvary east of the Sunset Strip. He died yelling something about vegetables being man's best friend.

Bill and I were silent during the day-long gun-battle, pausing only in our constant pouring of lead to exchange tension-easing pleasantries: "So, how's the wife and kids?" and "Edged your lawn yet?" I got six pedestrians and three store clerks; Bill picked off eight bikers and a dog catcher.

The case is closed. The sun is going down in the city. We're off-shift. I wonder if Bill still has those cute whips. We don't talk much — we don't have to.

Federal-owned real property is conservatively valued at more than $210 billion, and the idea of selling some of it is gaining attention in this era of budget crunch. Texas is second behind California as the state with the most federally owned property. It breaks down like this: 598,974 acres; buildings with 172,574,052 square feet; other facilities such as sport facilities, dams, irrigation facilities, roads and utilities have a total value of $1,296,515,000. This all equals a total value of just under twelve billion dollars.

Resolutions pending in Congress would provide for further assessments of federal lands and expedite disposal of those deemed unneeded. Present law requires that revenues from federal land sales go into a fund to acquire new lands.

Under the resolutions, which are backed by the administration, the proceeds would be used to reduce the national debt, now more than $1 trillion. The theory is that since the lands are a long-term capital asset, sales technically should be applied to the debt rather than current deficits. Practically, however, the sales would affect deficits because interest on the debt increases budget red ink.

Watch for more controversy and public debate on this.

Note to those considering going into the secretarial field: the demand for secretaries will keep growing. So says the Bureau of Labor Statistics in its Occupational Outlook Handbook. It predicts that by 1990 the demand will grow by a whopping 37.4% over today's demand. That is faster than the growth rate of all occupations on the average. The demand will result from "more paperwork created by the expansion of business and government." The Bureau says that neither office automation nor economic downturns are expected to have an adverse effect on employment of secretaries. Instead the technological developments in office equipment are certain to continue, and they will bring about further changes in the secretary's work environment. It is important to note that automated office equipment cannot substitute for the personal qualities that are essential to a secretary's job.

Stopgap measure prevents IRS layoffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress returned to Washington today to resume its battle with President Reagan over spending priorities after temporarily averting the furlough of one-fifth of the Internal Revenue Service work force.

More than 19,000 IRS employees were spared at the last minute Tuesday when two key Republican senators put aside their problems with the Reagan administration and agreed to allow the agency to temporarily shift $24.5 million of its own funds into its payroll.

That stopgap action will get IRS through the next several days. But it does nothing to forestall the chance of wholesale layoffs in several federal agencies within the next few weeks due to Congress' slowness in approving money bills this year. Aides say that unless legislation is enacted quickly, military personnel might find themselves working for free after next week.

The IRS workers — most of them involved in tax collections and criminal investigations — had prepared to begin an unpaid, unplanned "vacation" from work today because Congress and the White House cannot agree on spending priorities.

The IRS furloughs, affecting workers in every state, were threatened by Reagan's veto of a $14.2 billion emergency money bill that included $260 million to help the tax collecting agency meet its payroll for the rest of the month.

The IRS problem temporarily out of the way, Congress was returning from a two-week recess to confront the veto, which Reagan cast on grounds the measure was too big for the budget.

Although leaders of both parties concede an uphill battle, the Democratic-controlled House will try Thursday to override the veto. A two-thirds vote in the House and Senate is necessary to enact the bill over Reagan's objections.

If the override fails, Congress will have to write a new supplemental spending bill. But quick action along this route is unlikely because members of both parties are upset by the veto.

Facing those bleak prospects, Sens. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and James Abdnor, R-S.D., chairman, respectively, of the Senate Appropriations Committee and the subcommittee that handles IRS money, agreed late Tuesday to permit IRS to shift funds to its payroll account. Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., chairman of the House panel with jurisdiction over IRS funds, earlier had lent his approval.

Gas lead levels knocked by firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — New federal standards proposed for lead in fuels could result in substantial increases in gasoline lead levels in New York and other East Coast cities, a major oil company says.

Crown Central Petroleum Corp. said Tuesday its own estimates showed that lead levels in gasoline could increase by 28 percent in New York City and 12 percent in Philadelphia.

The Reagan administration, presented with new data on the dangers of lead poisoning in children, last month unveiled rules which it said would reduce the amount of lead in gasoline by 31 percent over the next eight years while saving the refining industry $38 million in 1983.

But at a hearing on the rules Tuesday, oil company executives said the change could have the opposite effect in the East.

Some took aim at a proposal that would allow companies who take more lead out of their gasoline than required by the new standards to sell their unused lead quota to other refineries.

California already has more stringent lead requirements than the EPA is proposing for the national standard. Oil executives said many companies which operate refineries in California would likely sell their unused lead quotas to refineries along the East Coast.

Edwin Mampe, an official of Crown Central, said since the older East Coast refineries find it is more expensive to boost octane ratings without lead, they would be willing to buy lead rights.

Dear Abby

Dental fraud claim draws rebuttal

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "On to Him in St. Louis," who accused the dental profession of fraud due to the advent of dental insurance. Perhaps this uninformed reader, as well as a large segment of the population, will be enlightened by the following:

No dentist in the course of an examination can willfully crack, break or dislodge a good filling unless he uses tools designed for archeological expeditions!

It is necessary for the dentist to check all fillings carefully to be sure there is no unsealed or cracked surface through which bacteria could enter and cause decay under the fillings, leading to toothaches, lost fillings and the need for root canal work or extraction of the tooth. Unfortunately, even the best of fillings may eventually require replacement due to the stresses of chewing, poor oral hygiene, improper diet, a bad bite or grinding one's teeth.

About dental insurance: It benefits the patient — not the dentist. I cannot keep track of the number of patients who have suggested that I "pad" the bill and falsify dates of services in order for them to obtain greater financial benefits than deserved. People who have neglected their teeth for years suddenly want "everything" done if their dental insurance covers it.

Also, I have never known a dentist who would participate in a "kickback" arrangement with a root canal (or any other kind of) dental specialist.

The overwhelming majority of dentists are hard-working, ethical, conscientious individuals who are interested in providing the best possible treatment for their patients — and only that treatment which is necessary, regardless of insurance coverage or not!

A DENTIST FROM THE ETHICAL MAJORITY, WEST ISLIP, N.Y.

DEAR ETHICAL: I heard from hundreds of irate dentists chewing me out for printing a letter from an obviously uninformed reader. They said that by giving that "nut" space in my column, I validated her paranoid accusations. Not so! Be assured that dentists are the last group of professionals I would intentionally alienate. I need them often to remove my foot from my mouth.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is a very good Catholic. I'm a Catholic, too, but Theresa knows more about Catholicism than I do. Theresa says that if a Catholic gets divorced he is automatically excommunicated from the church. Is that true?

KATHY
DEAR KATHY: No, Theresa needs to update her information. At one time the divorced Catholic who remarried was automatically excommunicated. (That applied only in the U.S.) However, that ruling was changed in 1977, and it no longer applies.

DEAR ABBY: Somebody wanted to know the difference between "having sex" and "making love." Your explanation was very good. Here's mine: "Having sex" is stopping in the middle of a passionate moment to change the TV channel. "Making love" is turning the TV off. Thank you very much.

Dr. Donohue

Platelet problem causes clots

Dear Dr. Donohue: Will you please write about thrombotic thrombocytopenic purpura. I had been doing a lot of the bleeding, but by the grace of God I have started making platelets again. I am still on medication, and go in for tests twice a year. Whenever I ask what the latest is on this disease I am told nothing. What little I can find to read on the subject says the disease is fatal. What can you tell me about it? What is the difference between it and idiopathic thrombocytopenic purpura, which you did discuss recently? — P.B.C.

That long name refers to a disease identified from the following set of signs and symptoms: fever, anemia, kidney problems and brain symptoms, like confusion or seizures. The person also has a low blood platelet count (that's the thrombocytopenia reference) and may have easy bruising (purpura) because of that platelet (thrombocyte) deficiency. Platelets are, as you know, very thin blood cells that aggregate to prevent bleeding in blood vessels.

The cause is not known, and although it can affect people of all ages and of either sex, it is most common in young, adult women. Clots, large mounds of platelets, are found in the blood vessels. They are called thrombi. Why the platelets settle out in the blood vessels this way is not understood.

Your reading on this subject may be from an older text. Before medicines were available for this illness, it was usually lethal. Today, there are many ways to treat it — steroids, heparin (blood thinner) and surgery for removal of the spleen. The spleen tends to act as a trap for platelets, and removing that trap is helpful.

Newer treatments are being tried, such as infusion of blood plasma. Another newer procedure is exchange plasmapheresis, in which the person's own plasma is removed from the blood, cleansed and returned. One of the cancer drugs, vincristine, is also tried sometimes. No, that doesn't mean what you have is cancer.

Since you are doing so well on your current treatment, you should feel gratified. Yours is a complex illness. It seems from your letter (parts deleted) that you are being watched carefully. When and if some of the other treatments I mentioned are required, your doctors will suggest them.

For now, cool it. If you can control the situation with present treatment, settle for that.

The other illness you mention (ITP) is one in which there is a low platelet count generally. In that the platelets are being destroyed by antibodies against them. Steroids are used to treat this form, as they are in yours.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What is "LactAid" that people add to milk to help those who are not able to tolerate regular milk? Where can it be purchased? — Mrs. A.W.

LactAid is an enzyme product. Enzymes are substances that break large particles into smaller ones, which are more easily digested. The product you mention contains the enzyme lactase. That is the one needed to break down milk sugar into smaller sugars that can be absorbed by the body.

Some people lack this enzyme in their digestive tracts, and encounter trouble with milk and dairy products. They frequently have abdominal pain, bloating and diarrhea after drinking milk or eating dairy products. So they allow the enzyme to do the job beforehand by adding it to their milk. It does not change the flavor of the milk according to the manufacturers.

You can purchase it at some drugstores, but if my mail is any sign, apparently not at all by any means. It's made by the Sugarlo Co., P.O. Box 111, Pleasantville, N.J.

Dear Dr. Donohue: How right you are in the use of the pronoun him. It is grammatical and there is no substitute. We need someone to take a stand against the fanatical females who are trying to ruin our language. — F.C.

I'd rather be grammatical than fanatical, but mostly I'd rather be free of this controversy.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have heard that cold water is just as sterilizing as hot. Is this so, or just a myth? — Mrs. A.H.

If you are speaking of ordinary household methods of sterilization, then boiling water is the preferred process. Ordinary cold water from a tap will not kill bacteria or viruses. Better ways to sterilize are with appropriate chemicals.

Big supply of hay foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says there will be a near-record supply of hay on hand to help feed livestock through the winter.

"I don't know of any region that's in severe shape," says Larry Van Meir of the department's Economic Research Service.

Based on Aug. 1 indications, hay output is forecast at 151.6 million tons, up 6 percent from 143.1 million last year. Van Meir said Tuesday that nothing has happened to change the outlook significantly.

Revised hay production figures will be included when the department issues a new crop report on Friday. Those will be based on prospects as of the first of this month.

The hay marketing year begins on May 1 and runs through the following April 30. Last May 1 the hay left over from previous crops totaled 25.2 million tons, about the same as a year earlier.

Counting this year's crops, the total supply for 1982-83 is estimated at 176.8 million tons, up from 168.6 million last season. The record high was 177.9 million tons in the pipeline in 1979-80.

Total use last year rose to 143.4 million tons from 139.8 million in 1980-81, partly because of the severe winter.

But the hay supply last year was larger and helped hold prices down to a national average of $67.10 per ton for baled hay in 1981-82, compared to the record of $71 for the drought-reduced supply in 1980-81.

Based on the July 1 cattle inventory, the number of animals which will consume hay and other roughage may be down slightly this winter from year-earlier levels, officials said. If that happens, hay prices probably will average less.

The all-hay price in mid-August was $65 per ton, up from $62.90 a year ago, according to USDA records.

Hay prices — as well as quality and supply — often vary widely by regions and states. Last month, for example, the all-hay price averaged $85 per ton, baled, in California and as little as $39 in South Dakota.

In New Mexico, hay averaged $67 per ton in August, compared to $75 a year earlier and $114 in April 1981, before the new crop was ready.

The outlook for the record hay crop this season was based on a 1 percent increase in acreage to 60.5 million acres and a 5 percent boost in yield, to an estimated 2.5 tons per acre.

Based on the Aug. 1 outlook, total 1982 hay production is expected to include a record amount of alfalfa and alfalfa hay mixtures — 90.5 million tons, up 8 percent from last year. Production of "other" hay also was forecast at a record, 61 million tons, up 3 percent.

Nearly a third of the 1982 hay crop was forecast to be produced in five states: Wisconsin, 12.3 million tons; South Dakota, 9.3 million; Iowa, 8.66 million; Minnesota, 8.65 million; and Nebraska, 8.06 million.

Agency promotes U.S. goods abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — What do avocado producers have in common with wheat farmers? Both want a larger export market for their products — and the Agriculture Department has a program to help promote their wares.

More than 50 non-profit organizations — some national and others regional or specialized by commodity — are "market development cooperators" in a program handled by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service.

"Basically, they're the key to the whole export business. They're out there building demand for U.S. agricultural goods around the world, and that's what moves products," says Jimmy D. Minaryard, assistant administrator for foreign market development.

The network also includes about 130 foreign cooperators in 70 countries — called third-party cooperators — which work closely with their U.S. counterparts and the agricultural service in market promotion. Generally, the costs are borne about evenly by the agency, the U.S. cooperators and the foreign groups.

In 1981, the agency's cost in the cooperative effort was $20.2 million, which officials say is small compared to total farm exports currently valued at more than $40 billion a year.

The cooperator program was described in the September issue of Foreign Agriculture, which is published monthly by the USDA agency. The program began with the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 — which is also known as Food for Peace, or Public Law 480.

In May 1955, the National Cotton Council was the first to sign up in the cooperator program. The most recent is the Western Growers Association, which joined in June.

According to the report, which was written by Aubrey C. Robinson, an agency information specialist, the cooperators represent about 2.5 million farmers and "work with more than 1,600 organizations overseas, more than 1,500 U.S. cooperatives and nearly 9,000 private firms in the United States."

Boy falls in hole and dies

ODESSA (AP) — A 2-year-old boy died after he wandered away from other children playing in his parents' backyard and tumbled into a fence-post hole that caved in and suffocated him, officials say.

Pedro Antonio Martinez apparently fell head-first into the hole, which was one of several dug for chain-link fence posts that were to be anchored in concrete, said Capt. Gene Kloss of the Ector County sheriff's department.

"The death was ruled suffocation," Kloss said. "The sides caved in on him just enough to cover his face part."

The open hole in the residential neighborhood was about two feet deep and 13 inches wide, said Kloss.

TEL AVIV, Israel — The Israeli economy drifts in some free-spending space between reality and an economist's nightmare.

It is a place where a 100 percent price increase is described as "controlled inflation," where a quart of milk costs a mere 34 cents but a Dodge Aries automobile an astounding $40,000, where the government each year spends as much as the country can produce, and where blue-and-white Bank Leumi vans followed the tanks into Lebanon so soldiers could continue to make the daily investment decisions that have become part of the inflation-beating game.

SECOND IN A SERIES

The most numbing economic fact in Israel is inflation, which at the moment stands at an annual rate of 130 percent. Because salaries, pensions and savings are tied directly to cost-of-living increases, inflation takes on a life of its own.

But the bedrock fact of the Israeli economy is that in many respects it is built on air — it is a fast-turnover economy heavily dependent on the outside world, through American aid or bank borrowing.

The Israeli government owes foreign creditors more than $18 billion, or $4,500 for every man, woman and child in Israel — about three times the per capita debt of heavy borrower Mexico.

American assistance this year totals more than $3 billion, two-thirds of it U.S. government aid and the rest from Jewish-American organizations and Israeli bond sales.

"Without this aid, we're flat on our bellies," Yakir Plesner, deputy governor of Israel's central bank, acknowledged.

THE WAY Israel spends beyond its means can be seen in its trade figures. In the second quarter of this year, it imported $1.96 billion worth of goods, almost twice as much as it was able to export.

Oil — from Egypt, Mexico and elsewhere — is the big item. Israel must buy 99 percent of its oil abroad, and the oil price shocks of the 1970s helped kick off today's superinflation.

But energy needs are only one factor at the root of the deficit spending that produces Israel's inflation.

The greatest expense is the military — one-third of the current $16 billion budget. That does not include the cost of the Lebanon campaign, at least $1 billion in direct expenditures.

Add to this the heavy costs of subsidizing exports to make them more competitive internationally, low labor productivity, and the fact that half the work force is employed in the public sector — and the result is something far from the lean, frugal economy envisioned by Israel's Zionist founders.

But if drastic anti-inflationary steps are necessary — as most economists here say — neither Prime Minister Menachem Begin's nor the preceding Labor Party government has been willing to take them. "When you talk to Mr. Begin about the economic problems, he says, 'Well, wait a minute, that's No. 10 on my priority list. Let's talk about one through nine first,'" said American industrialist Edgar Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress.

The ordinary Israeli, meanwhile, just holds on tight as he watches the 1980 shekel — Israel's currency — plunge in value from 20 U.S. cents to 9 cents in 1981, to 4 cents today.

One hundred percent inflation may sound frightening, but between government "indexation" and their own nimble-footed investment and re-investment, Israelis appear able to cope.

Four times a year, Israeli salaries are automatically boosted by a percentage equal to four-fifths of the cost-of-living rise of the previous three months. At the same time, the shekel value of bank savings, mortgages, government bonds, life insurance and pensions is raised by the full percentage of inflation, so that the 200,000 shekels one owed on his house last year may be 400,000 shekels today.

When indexation is "factored out," economists say, Israel's real inflation rate is in the range of 20 percent to 40 percent a year.

TO KEEP up with this non-indexed inflation, many Israelis put their money in U.S. dollar investments or in the lucrative but volatile Tel Aviv stock market, using their banker as broker.

Israel's inflation fantasyland produces economic oddities. For example, people carry little cash. The largest denomination banknote, the 100-shekel bill, is worth only $4. Rather than tote around inches-thick wads of cash, Israelis pull out their checkbooks when the bill arrives at restaurants, gas stations or supermarkets.

Despite inflation and what are probably the world's highest income taxes — 60 percent on annual income above $15,000 — Israelis survive, and many seem to prosper. Color television sales are up 11 percent and air-conditioner sales 21 percent over a year ago.

To pay for the Lebanon war, Finance Minister Yoram Aridor has raised some taxes and introduced other measures — including a compulsory loan of up to 5 percent of every worker's salary.

Israel's leaders, as always, forecast a bright future for their nation, once it achieves a lasting peace with its neighbors.

"The Israeli economy is getting away from the more labor-intensive industries and toward more sophisticated, capital-intensive industries, the high-technology industries," Plesner said. "The government is spending more money than ever on research and development because it believes that as a small country without resources it has to take its place in the technological world."

Israel is already a leader in one of those fields — military hardware. Its armaments industry is the seventh largest in the world.

Along the way from the simple, agricultural society contemplated by early Jewish settlers to the fast-paced, urbanized society of today, Israel has developed points of tension and conflict perhaps unforeseen by its founders.

A land founded on principles of egalitarianism has given rise to millionaires and an impoverished class. A country made for immigrants has turned into a source of immigrants for other countries. A land of refuge for the Jews has become a cockpit for bitter conflict between religious and non-religious Jews.

Martina upended by doubles mate

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova's dream of a tennis Grand Slam lies in ruins, smashed to bits by her doubles partner, Pam Shriver, and an ailment called toxoplasmosis.

Navratilova, playing the hottest hand in tennis with victories in 68 of 69 matches, came up short against Shriver in the U.S. Open, losing 1-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-2 in an emotional, pulsating quarterfinal.

Then the two women turned the center court at the National Tennis Center over to a pair of old adversaries, Jimmy Connors and Ilie Nastase. Connors prevailed 6-3, 6-3, 6-4 and Nastase wound up with a $1,000 fine for his night's work.

In the quarters, Connors goes against Rodney Harmon, a 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 3-6, 7-6 (7-1) upset winner over eighth-seeded Eliot Teltscher.

The other men's quarterfinal matches Argentina's Guillermo Vilas against Tom Gullikson. Both advanced Tuesday, Vilas recovering after dropping the first two sets for a 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-4), 6-3 victory over 12th-seeded Steve Denton, and Gullikson with a 6-4, 6-3, 6-3 decision over Chile's Jamie Fillol.

In women's play, second-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd advanced to the quarterfinals with a 6-4, 6-3 victory over No. 16 Zina Garrison. But that match was almost forgotten in Shriver's shocking upset of Navratilova, the world's No. 1 ranked player who was a step away from a Grand Slam after winning the Australian, French and Wimbledon titles in the last 10 months.

U.S. Open

"It was the most disappointing loss, but not the most bitter," Navratilova said of her match with Shriver. "I'm glad it was Pam and not anybody else. If I have to lose, I prefer that it be Pam. I wish she could be more happy about it. It was like she was sorry that she beat me."

Shriver said the victory was somewhat bittersweet for her.

"I have mixed emotions," she said. "I'm thrilled for myself but sad for Martina. She is my doubles partner and she is my friend."

Navratilova routed Shriver 6-1 in the first set. She was leading 5-4 and serving with a 30-15 lead, two points away from winning the match, when it began to slip away.

Navratilova was a victim of toxoplasmosis, an infection which drains its victims of their strength. The symptoms are similar to mononucleosis. Martina's problem was diagnosed last week by Dr. Gary Wadler, physician for the Open.

"I don't know how she played the whole tournament," Wadler said.

"I was getting weaker as the match went on," Navratilova said. "I couldn't run for the ball, or if I could, I couldn't do anything when I got there. It got worse as the match went on."

When Shriver forced the second set to a tiebreaker and then won it 7-5, Navratilova knew she was in trouble.

Navratilova has had only 13 three-set matches all year and has lost only 14 sets of tennis since December. That's why Shriver had to be a longshot. But the 20-year-old from Lutherville, Md., believed she could do well against her doubles partner.

Navratilova's Grand Slam bid began last December in Australia and continued through impressive victories in the French Open and then Wimbledon. She had won 12 of 13 tournaments this year and was working on a 41-match winning streak when Shriver pulled her surprise. A victory in the Open would have earned her an additional $500,000 as part of a $1 million purse offered by Playtex for four victories on four different surfaces.

The match between Connors and Nastase started off on a raucous note when the Romanian was warned for verbal abuse of umpire Don Wiley of Redoubts.

When Wiley tried to suspend play in the first set because of a shower, Nastase threw a towel at the umpire and defiantly took the court, virtually forcing play to continue. He won the next game but never seriously challenged Connors, the No. 2 seed in the tournament.

After the match, Nastase was fined $1,000 for the episode with the umpire. He was also fined $1,000 for verbal abuse during Sunday's victory over Johan Kriek.

Bad streaks sink Big Spring

Bronte claims three-set victory

DOUBLE AT THE NET — Paula Spears (11) and Tris Clemons (10) eye the volleyball at the net during Tuesday night's match with Bronte.

Volleyball is a game that is dependent on streaks — how to start them and how to end them. The Big Spring Lady Steers are having difficulty solving the latter task.

Rallying to take a 15-12 opening set victory, coach Becky Holliday's crew suddenly lost control of the match in the second set and succumbed to the Bronte Longhorns 12-15, 15-12, 15-7 in the BSHS gym Tuesday night.

The loss drops Big Spring to 2-4 for the season and was the second straight defeat at the hands of Bronte, now 7-3.

"We're having to play too much catch-up," moaned Holliday after the battle. "We jump out ahead and then don't finish them off. But we're still in a learning process."

The Lady Steers presented a different Tuesday with Monette Wise called up from the junior varsity. Also she had less than a perfect night on the court, she showed potential in becoming a solid performer for Holliday.

"I rearranged the lineup and one of my new players (Wise) was nervous out there tonight," the Big Spring coach explained. "But she's got lots of potential."

Down 8-0 thanks to some jittery hits, the Lady Steers used two sinking serves by Paula Spears and several scoring blasts from Sylvia Randle to pull even with Bronte 11-11. Spears nailed a serve again to give Big Spring its first lead at 12-11 and when Jackie Adams pounded a shot into the net for the Longhorns, the Lady Steers had a 15-12 win.

Tracy Williams scored the first two points and Big Spring rolled off to a 5-1 start in the second set. Then the shots went into the net, out of bounds or off too many pairs of hands and Bronte burst into an 8-5 advantage.

Shell Rutledge scored to stop the Bronte streak and Spears rapped another thunder shot to bring Big Spring into an 8-8 tie.

Bronte went on top again but a serve by Leslye Overton, error by Bronte's Lesa Dyess and another score by Spears put the Lady Steers ahead 12-10.

Then Overton hit a serve too short. Tris Clemons knocked two efforts into the net and Big Spring was down 14-12. Becky Morrow came off the Bronte bench to hit the set winner for the Longhorns.

Bronte rolled off to a 4-0 start in the decisive set but a serve by Overton and scores by Randle and Spears put Big Spring ahead 6-5.

Then another Bronte streak started and the Lady Steers couldn't find the break. Adams hit two winners but Bronte relied on some ballhandling errors by Big Spring to take a commanding 13-6 lead.

Randle score on a tip shot to make it 13-7. Both teams suddenly went icy, going nine consecutive serves without a point.

Finally Dyess scored for Bronte to return serve. Spears hit a shot into the net to make it 14-7 and Dyess put a lock on the match with a winner, giving the Longhorns a 15-7 win.

In the junior varsity match, Big Spring claimed a 15-6, 15-5 victory. Debbie Holguin had five points in the first set while Beverly Tubb and Debbie Donelson had five each in the winner. Coach Elaine Stone praised Jana Mathews and Tammy Yancey for their offensive play while Donelson, Yancey and Sheri Graham stood out on defense.

"I'm really proud of all of my girls; they played tough and as a team," said coach Elaine Stone. "Taylisa Cork has shown significant improvement over the last two weeks."

In the freshman match, Big Spring stopped Colorado City 15-11, 15-3 as Kerri Myrick scored six points in the first set and Tammi Green seven in the second.

Chargers to electrify in '82

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Chargers, awesome on offense in 1981, awful on defense and Super Bowl no-shows for a third year in a row, are convinced they're ready for the final assault.

If a reinforced defense holds, the Chargers should emerge with a fourth consecutive American Conference Western Division title.

How bad was last year's defense? Bad enough to be last in the National Football League in pass defense, give up an all-time record of 269.4 yards passing per game and finish 27th among 28 teams in total defense.

In a humbling 44-23 to lowly Seattle, the Chargers gave up 486 yards. Minnesota got 526 yards in a 33-31 victory and Buffalo 486.

To try to fix the problem, the Chargers hired defensive coordinator Tom Bass from Tampa Bay, traded for linebackers David Lewis and Dewey Selmon and added Fox and Bruce Laird to stabilize a shattered secondary.

The Chargers, 6-5 at one point, rallied to tie 10-6 Denver on the final day of the season, winning the title on tiebreakers.

No one is anticipating a runaway in a division that San Diego Coach Don Coryell considers the NFL's toughest.

AFC West Preview

The most likely scenario is another Chargers-Raiders shootout down the stretch. After a 7-9 finish, the Raiders have several scores to settle, notably a 55-21 thrashing at the hands of the Chargers.

Quarterback Jim Plunkett has recovered from a broken thumb and Marcus Allen, college football's Heisman Trophy winner in 1981, should feel right at home in the Coliseum.

Kansas City led the AFC in rushing, thanks to rookie Joe Delaney, but finished dead last in passing yardage. To remedy that, the Chiefs took Tennessee's Anthony Hancock, the first wide receiver selected in the draft.

Seattle quarterback Jim Zorn has mended after breaking his left ankle and the late-season arrival of running back Theo S. Brown produced fast results. But the biggest problems are on defense and there appears to be no quick fix.

Five of the 10 Big Spring area football teams chalked up victories on the first Friday of the 1982 season. This column will run each Tuesday and discuss the previous Friday's game and the upcoming contest with each coach. (Because of the Labor Day holiday, Quarterback is being run today).

Richard Gibson (Grady Wildcats): On last week's come-from-behind victory over Loop — "In the first half, we looked a bit jittery. We stopped ourselves on offense. In the second half, I was pleased with the way we played. We played good defense the whole game." On the Dawson Dragons, Friday's opponent — "They will be a much, much better football team. They are rated about No. 3 in the state. They have a lot of quickness and are tough in the open field."

Steve Park (Stanton Buffaloes): On last week's shut out win over Tahoka — "We didn't play real good...we could have done a whole lot better. Tahoka was a little weaker than in past year...they don't have the super back like they usually do." On this week's big shootout with Coahoma — "We will have to execute. This is a big rivalry...it always has been, no matter what record anyone has. They are a well-disciplined team. We will have to do things a lot better."

Joe Longley (Greenwood Rangers): On last week's narrow loss to the Jal, N.M. Panthers — "We made a lot of mistakes...you can't have six turnovers and win the ballgame. We were ready to score three times in the first quarter and couldn't punch it in. The ole kids came back in the fourth quarter. It was a disappointment." On traveling to meet Wink — "I think our kids will come out and play. There are some of them that remember last year (Wink won 40-16). The kids will get up and get after them. We'll have to be ready for their passing. They're a pretty good ole passing team. We'll have to get a rush on the passer."

Jan East (Forsan Buffaloes): On Friday's heart-breaking loss to Bronte — "They beat us with 12 seconds to play. We kicked a field goal with 5:31 to go and then they took that thing and drove it 97 yards. It was a big disappointment. We were real satisfied with our defense. They gave us the ball on the 30 three times and we couldn't do the job. The defense is far enough along; this week we've been stressing offense." On this Friday's showdown with Garden City — "It's going to be a tough one. They are a good ballclub. It's a pretty good rivalry. Last week, I don't think the kids were ready mentally. We'll get after that this week."

Stewart Cooper (Garden City Bearcats): On the high-scoring win over Buena Vista — "We felt pretty good about it. We messed up a few places here and there. The best thing that happened is we got down early but the ole kids didn't give up. We had a chance to fold but we came back and controlled the football." On meeting rival Forsan Friday — "This is always a tough game for Garden City. They are always ready to play us. I think for some years we had a psychological block against them but we'll be ready. We have to be consistent on offense...we can't blow a play and expect to score on them."

Tom Ramsey (Colorado City Wolves): On the tough loss to Slaton. "They are pretty physical. They taught us how to play some football Friday night. We had trouble handling their size. We needed some game experience for the kids and they provided it for us. The kids learned a lot." On rebounding on the road against Seminole — "They are about the same as they were last year when they won that district up there. They might be a little bit better. We've heard they played Andrews a good game. They execute well and play tough defense. They run a Houston veer and make you cover the whole field. They pass and run well."

Larry Hudson (Coahoma Bulldogs): On meeting highly-regarded Kermit in their first game — "Our young men did an outstanding job with the run. A team like this should get three or 400 yards a game. They got 127. We're excited about that. We found some men that are players. We even got the offense cranked up a time or two. We gave them everything they earned but we're pleased with the effort. We just had too many mistakes." On hosting old rival Stanton Friday — "They're a good football team, you better believe it. They have three excellent quarterbacks battling for the job. The 'Italian Stallion' (Maurizo Iaquaniello), we call him, is a long, break-away threat. They are a senior ballclub. I think they have 17 or 18 on the roster and we have six. It'll be a good game."

Jim White (Sands Mustangs): On a season-opening victory over New Home. "It didn't go the way we have been used to. I was pleased with our offensive and defensive lines and how they controlled the line of scrimmage both ways. Our backs averaged six yards a carry and we had two go our 100 yards. We didn't give up a first down until the fourth quarter." On visiting the Water Valley Wildcats — "We tied them 0-0 last year too. They're big and have three kids over 240 pounds. They beat Rochelle in their game and they will be fired up for this one. We'll have to take them seriously."

Bill West (Klondike Cougars): On last week's conquest of Sundown — "We looked real good. We executed well. Sundown did a super job stopping run so we had to move the ball passing. We busted the opening kickoff and that kind of takes a little starch out. Then we tried the onside kick and got the ball right back and scored. It was 12-0 before they ever touched the ball on offense." On getting win No. 2 against Meadow this weekend — "They'll be a lot like Sundown. They are pretty good at stopping the run so we'll have to go to the air again. On defense, they'll lower their ears back and come at you."

Jim Warren (Lamesa Golden Tors): On last week's narrow setback to Levelland — "We played well enough to win. We had 18 first downs to their eight and 300 total yards on offense to their 145. We executed well enough to win but we had a couple of critical errors with our kicking game that cost us the ballgame." On trying to snap losing streak against Brownfield — "All we've seen of them is one scrimmage so they've got to be a mystery team. They have a couple of running backs that have a lot of speed and will be dangerous. We have to continue to execute and correct our kicking game."

NFL talks stumble on

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Football League owners are prepared to raise the ante one more time in an effort to have the players' union drop its demand for a wage scale based on a fixed percentage of gross revenues and avert a strike.

Sources close to the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining agent, have told the Associated Press the new offer, while failing to address the players' demand for salaries to be based on a guaranteed percentage of gross revenues, will include "a substantial across-the-board wage hike." Details of the proposal, the owners' first financial offering since an earlier proposal was rejected by the union on July 13, were not made available.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the National Football League Players Association, said the owners' continued failure to address the percentage of gross concept increases the probability of a player strike.

There has been talk of a possible strike by the Seattle Seahawks before Sunday's

Landry testifies players not forced to play injured

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry has testified in a multimillion-dollar civil suit that he would never risk permanent injury to any of his players by allowing them to play while seriously hurt.

Three former Cowboys are suing the club for $1 million each because of lasting injuries they suffered in games during the 1960s and 1970s. A jury of five women and seven men was sworn in Tuesday morning by State District Judge John Marshall.

Mike Gaechter, 43, a former safety; Willie Townes, 40, a former defensive end; and Leon Donohue, 43, a former offensive guard, complained Tuesday that the medical implications of their injuries were not revealed to them by Cowboys doctors.

Donohue, now a football coach at Shasta College in California, said he has had seven knee operations and foot surgery and that as a result of football injuries he can no longer run.

Townes said he suffered a permanent thigh injury, and Gaechter said his right Achilles tendon was permanently damaged.

Donohue "had bad legs when he came to us," Landry testified. He said he discussed with Gaechter and Townes their injuries.

Frank Hernandez, an attorney for the three former players, produced an interoffice letter that indicated the club organization knew that Donohue had only a couple of seasons of play remaining because of leg injuries. But Hernandez said no one told Donohue his career was ending.

Hernandez asked Donohue, "Would you have continued to play if you'd been told?" "Now I wish I hadn't," Donohue said. Although he also coaches tennis at Shasta College, he is unable to demonstrate tennis movements, he said.

Hernandez criticized what he called the club management's "grand scheme" to deny his clients full information as to the seriousness of their injuries.

Joseph Bailey, the Cowboys vice president for administration, said it is the team's policy to supply photocopies of a player's medical records whenever a player requests.

gets the same pay, or if the collective bargaining goes on for years, there I am... I can't go out again.

"This whole thing is a little deeper than I expected it to be. If I go into camp now, there's no way I can come out again and I give up all the things I stayed out for. So it's not over yet."

Sims said Tockman suggested trying to set up another meeting with Ford, but he acknowledged that Tockman's advice had put him in an awkward position.

"If he (Ford) doesn't want to meet, maybe I'll have to go in anyway," Sims said. "But I'll have to take a risk... I'm so confused."

Sims, who did not report to the team's training camp when it began nearly six weeks ago, claimed Lions general manager Russ Thomas reneged on a verbal agreement to renegotiate the fourth year of his contract after two years. Thomas denied the charge.

Sims said he wanted Ford's assurance that the fourth year of the contract will be considered when the league and the players union reach a new collective bargaining

The former Oklahoma halfback says he is ready to play in the Lions' season opener this Sunday.

Are nations turning cold shoulder to warming of world?

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Although studies predict the world will get hotter in the next century with potentially destructive changes in global weather, governments are turning a cold shoulder to the problem, researchers say.

Experts at the federal National Center for Atmospheric Research say there is growing international consensus by scientists that the atmosphere's carbon dioxide level will double over the next 40 to 100 years, raising temperatures by an average 5 degrees.

The phenomenon is known as the "greenhouse effect," so called because, like a greenhouse, carbon dioxide gas traps heat inside the atmosphere. It was first noticed in the late 19th century after the worldwide industrialization began spewing huge quantities of carbon dioxide from the burning of fossil fuels.

"It's a global problem — the most complex and interesting problem facing the 20th and 21st century," said Robert Schwart, a political scientist affiliated with the atmospheric research center.

A report in July by the National Academy of Sciences, reaffirming its 1979 warning, said higher temperatures could increase the quantity of polar ice melted each year, cause earlier spring snow melts and later autumn snowfalls, and result in a decline in soil moisture in the middle and northern parts of the northern hemisphere.

Scientists have speculated that increased melting of glaciers could raise the level of the ocean — with widespread effects on coastal cities.

"Changes in climate can be good or bad," said Schwart. "People in Boston might like to have Miami's climate. It's an extremely fascinating question."

But Schwart said in a recent interview that the prospect of such changes is not a hot topic for policymakers.

"One reason is because they're living on a four-year political cycle," he said. "The other is that with our current knowledge, the scientific community cannot tell decision-makers information that will be useful for them and their constituencies."

And some scientists have disputed the effects of increased carbon dioxide, speculating that any rising temperatures from a greenhouse effect would result in more clouds, reflecting more sun away from the earth and thus preventing serious overheating.

Dr. William Kellogg, a climatologist at the center, said his colleagues suspect most politicians will be tempted to pass the problem to their successors.

The U.S. government, for example, has cut funding for research of the greenhouse effect from $14 million last year to $9 million, and eliminated completely a Department of Energy study of political and social impacts, he said.

Although scientific models of the greenhouse effect have forecast warmer temperatures and less rainfall for much of the United States, including the rich grain belt, Schwart said, "We can't tell a congressman in Iowa that such and such is going to happen to his constituents' crops."

He said the changes may disrupt some regions and help others.

"There are likely to be winners and losers," he said. "For example, a more regular monsoon pattern could be important to major rice producers, whereas countries such as the Soviet Union and the United States would suffer more."

Kellogg said he does not view the prospect of a warming trend as an inevitable catastrophe.

"We're bright, we're adaptable," he said. "We've got the technology to cope with it. And a good many of the developing countries may be better off."

Shipyards feel the pinch of the recession

HOUSTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit has left thousands of shipping workers without jobs in the last decade and an industry official says the problem is getting worse.

"If a number of yards don't get work soon, we're going to have to make some hard decisions," said Edwin Hood, president of the Shipbuilders' Council of America. "Already 30,000 skilled shipyard workers have been laid off and before another 12 months go by we'll lose another 10,000 in the Orange, Galveston, Beaumont and Houston area."

Hood blamed the maritime industry's ills on the OPEC oil embargo of 1973. And Hood predicted the situation will not be reversed anytime soon.

Temporary relief might come from the U.S. Navy's shipbuilding program, he said. During the next five years the Navy plans to order 130 ships and to convert a number of cargo vessels for use in its Rapid Deployment Force. The contracts are now being awarded.

But Hood said, "They'll only be a stopgap for a number of yards. The real problem persists."

The U.S. Merchant Marine is also foundering on the shoals of a slumping economy.

Fewer ships are flying the Stars and Stripes today as land-locked crewmen wait in union halls for the call to work.

Once ranked the largest in the world, the U.S. merchant fleet slowly slipped to eighth as Liberia, Greece and Japan took command of the world's shipping lanes.

The future of the nation's "fifth branch" of the armed services is being debated by Congress. But officials in the business of handling exports and imports said it will take years before the impact of legislative aid revives activity at shipyards and provides jobs for thousands of out-of-work seafarers.

Twelve years ago there were 819 merchant vessels on active duty, providing jobs for 39,000 people. Last June, the fleet had dropped to 524 ships and 21,000 were employed.

At the Seafarers International Union hall here, about 200 workers fill the meeting room each morning, anxious to board a cargo ship or tanker.

But fewer ships are docking at the Port of Houston, and officials said it sometimes takes a week or longer before a position can be found.

Joe Sacco, the union's vice president, said the solution to the problem is "cargo. We need more cargo."

"You can build all the ships you want. But unless you have cargo those ships will sit just like the others," Sacco said.

And cargoes will only materialize when the United States catches up with the rest of the world in the fair trade market, he said. "There's free trade for everyone except the U.S.," he said.

Currently only 3.6 percent of U.S. imports and exports are handled by American vessels, government statistics showed. The bulk of the business is handled by foreign-flag ships.

Artist plans rock monument bigger than Mount Rushmore

GRANITE, Okla. (AP) — A red rock mountain at the edge of this southwestern Oklahoma town may seem to be an unlikely spot for a world-famous tourist attraction, but Bill Willis is working on a dream.

He envisions a monument of granite 116 feet tall and 126 feet wide with the likenesses of Indian leader Sequoyah, humorist Will Rogers and athlete Jim Thorpe looking right down Main Street. It will be called the Giants of the Plains.

"Each figure will be 108 feet tall," the lifelong granite worker said. "The presidents on Mount Rushmore are only 60 feet tall. Stone Mountain in Georgia is 90 feet tall, and that includes the horses.

"When it is finished, it will be the largest granite mosaic in the world." And that's what makes Willis' project different from the faces of Washington, Jefferson, Theodore Roosevelt and Lincoln that stare from the granite cliff in the Black Hills of South Dakota and the horseback figures of Confederate leaders Jefferson Davis, Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson on Stone Mountain.

While the Mount Rushmore and Stone Mountain memorials were carved from the rock, Willis is engraving the likenesses of the three famous Oklahomans on two-foot-square blocks of granite. Each block then will be fitted together for the finished monument.

"We have a letter from the Guinness Book of Records people saying that it will be the largest mosaic in the world," Willis said.

He has the bust of Rogers finished and said he hoped to begin work on the bottom part of the monument "when it gets a little cooler." The project is being held up right now by a lack of funds, Willis said.

"We've received $20,000 in tax-free donations and my dad and I have put in $25,000," he said. "Contributors can get their name engraved on a panel outside the figures for $25 each, or a family can take a whole panel for $1,000.

"We need at least $1 million more to finish it. We envisioned it as a $1 million project when we began, but with inflation, it's gone up."

He said he hoped to have the entire monument done "as quickly as possible" and certainly before the centennial of the 1889 land run, when the state hopes to host a world's fair. "This would spread the visitors out from Oklahoma City," he said.

Willis said plans called for a small park at the base of the mountain and a zigzag road to the top. "We hope to build a walkway across Main Street, with a little patio, where people can pose to have their picture taken with the giants."

Everything will be free.

Willis estimates the 3,416 pieces of granite that will make up the monument will weigh 512,400 pounds. It will rest on the granite mountain and will be supported by a steel framework between 10 to 20 feet wide at the bottom and 10 feet wide at the top.

There will be a separation between each two-foot block "so the monument will be self-cleaning and also to provide a wind easement. We've worked with an architectural engineer, and he has designed it to withstand winds of 160 mph, with a safety factor," Willis said.

Willis got into the giants business because of his reputation at granite engraving. His portraits on granite hang in such different locations as the Wrestling Hall of Fame in Stillwater and the Greer County Museum in nearby Mangum.

His granite monuments are as far afield as a revolving memorial to country-swing music pioneer Bob Willis in Turkey, Texas, to a 25-foot-long rendition of the Run of 1889 at Medford.

Willis said the idea for the giants had come because the area tourist organization "was looking for a way to attract some of the people who zip by on Interstate 40" about 35 miles to the north.

"They knew I do granite work and they asked me to do a Mount Rushmore. After checking into it, I decided I could do it."

Fake cops loose in Miami

MIAMI (AP) — A team of bogus police officers in three-piece suits surrounds homes, serves search warrants, robs the residents, and then advises the victims to call police if they have any complaints, authorities say.

"They're good, whoever they are," said police Sgt. Tony Monheim. "They are poised, confident and very brazen."

Since April, at least five of the robberies have occurred, usually involving five or six well-dressed, well-groomed men who speak Spanish and also are fluent in English.

The imposters, ranging in age from about 25 to 45, arrive at the victims' homes in vehicles similar to those used by plain-clothes police. They carry badges and police radios and flash search warrants that victims are never allowed to read, police said.

"They target people who have large amounts of cash," Monheim said. "Sometimes they surround the house like they're really serving a search warrant. They've pulled it off in broad daylight, and that takes a lot of guts, especially in a nice neighborhood."

Before the intruders leave, they tell their victims that, if they have any complaints, to call the police department.

"The first case we had, we weren't sure whether or not they were police," Monheim said. "There is still a remote possibility that it could be real cops. But they'd have to be the dumbest cops in the world."

According to Monheim, all of the victims have been Latins.

"We've checked the victims' background for similarities, but haven't found any," he said. "We checked the possibility of a drug connection but haven't been able to come up with anything like that."

In the latest episode, two "officers" dressed in three-piece suits waved silver badges and talked their way into the home of Anna Buxo of Coral Gables on Aug. 30.

The 69-year-old woman, whose husband was downtown opening his jewelry store, said the phony detectives told her they were investigating a burglary in the neighborhood, so she opened the door.

Once inside, the men produced guns, handcuffed Mrs. Buxo and tied up a maid. They then ransacked the house, stole all the jewelry and took $240 from the maid, said Coral Gables Robbery Detective Jeff Vance.

"Before they left, they told the victims they were members of Omega 7 and were committing robberies to raise money to fight Castro," Vance said.

Omega 7 is a group of militant Cuban exiles who have claimed responsibility for a number of political bombings in Miami and elsewhere.

In another case, five men claiming to be "from the U.S. marshal's office" tricked a Colombian businessman into letting them in his home north of Miami. The men told the victim they were to impound large amounts of his money.

Omaha World-Herald
OMAHA, Neb. — When President Reagan needs a new pair of boots, he calls on Omaha's Dehner Co., regarded by many horsemen as one of the world's finest custom bootmakers.

To find Reagan's earliest order for a pair of dress boots, company President Donovan D. Ketzler sifted through Reagan's file in Dehner's new plant and office building, where it moved this spring after 40 years in another location.

The files showed Reagan, now 71, was a 35-year-old movie actor when he placed an order with Dehner March 14, 1946.

Reagan, then living in Los Angeles, said he needed the boots for his part in the motion picture, "Black Stallion," in which he co-starred with Jane Wyman, his first wife.

Reagan's second order for dress riding boots was dated 18 years after the first order — in 1964 — when he was living in Pacific Palisades, Calif.

It was his second pair of boots that appeared recently in newspaper photos when Reagan went riding with King Hassan of Morocco.

"Those are Dehner boots," said Ketzler, a third-generation member of the family that founded the company, studying one of the pictures. "I can tell they were made by us because of the toe construction."

Reagan is one of a number of public figures who have worn Dehner boots.

They have been worn by generations of West Point graduates, a group that included Dwight Eisenhower and George Patton.

It was Patton who helped Carlton C. Dehner, Marin Milana, 78, is an expert at fashioning footwear to meet the special needs of handicapped customers.

Milana and Francis L. Thompson, 73, are the seniority leaders at Dehner. Both have been with the company more than 50 years.

Footwear produced by Dehner is not expensive. Boots like those worn by Reagan cost about $375.

In recent years, Dehner has made a boot that is part leather and part plastic in response to a demand from law-enforcement officers. It sells for about $100 less than the all-leather boot.

In addition to making boots and shoes, primarily by hand, Dehner repairs about 100 pairs a month, many of them years old.

Dehner, which advertises mainly in specialized magazines read by the horse set and law-enforcement officials, has nothing to sell off the shelf. Every order arrives by mail, accompanied by a precise pattern, and it takes several weeks to fill.

3 plead innocent to mail fraud

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Three men pleaded innocent Tuesday to mail fraud in an escrow scheme that federal investigators say was meant to buy $200 million worth of property near Kerrville, Texas.

Trial was set Nov. 30 in U.S. District Court for Wendell Stasey of San Angelo, Texas, Robert Rane of Encino, Calif., and Jack Charles of Canoga Park, Calif.

They were indicted last month on charges of aiding and abetting wire fraud, mail fraud, interstate transport of counterfeit and fraudulent checks and conspiracy.

Islamic center to be built in Arizona

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — A $1.5 million Islamic Cultural Center, a replica of the Dome of the Rock Mosque, is expected to be completed here next summer, according to the center's president, Rauf Diab.

"It's already put Arizona on a very high profile internationally," Diab said, adding that Middle East newspapers have reported on the project.

The 1,300-year-old Dome of the Rock is the Moslems' third holiest place of worship. It is preceded by Mecca and Medina.

The 8,000-square-foot mosque in downtown Tempe will house apartments, classrooms and a retail area with shops, restaurants and a travel agency.

"It's like a compound," Diab said. "As we modernized, the mosque became just a place of prayer. We are going back to an old concept of being self-sustaining. That way, we won't have to keep going back to the congregation for donations."

The retail stores will pay for utility bills and maintenance costs, he said.

The idea came from Diab's father, Dr. Jamil Diab; Abdur-Rahim Shahsiddin of the Phoenix mosque; and Saudi Arabian Air Force Maj. Suliman Ali Al-Shaye.

The Phoenix mosque, Jahratul Al-Islam, isn't sufficiently convenient to serve the some 3,000 Moslems spread over the local valley, including about 800 Moslem students at Arizona State University, Rauf Diab said.

A third of the money has already been raised, he said, and "we're confident we can raise the rest. We own the land, and we have the city approval."

Some residents have said they dislike the idea that five daily calls to prayer will be broadcast through a public address system from the mosque's 70-foot minaret.

But Diab said the chant is "much more soothing and much more quieting than the ringing of a bell."

"Anybody who hears it, it'll remind them to pray no matter what religion they are," he added.

The apartments will house teachers, staff and visiting scholars. The stores and restaurants will feature Middle East clothing, dry goods, books and foods — "things you can't find in other places," Diab said.

The center's classes, worship services and other events will be open to the public, he added. "Anybody that comes with a clean heart or good intentions is welcome ... no matter what their religion."

Just because members are Moslems doesn't mean they agree with the government influence and philosophies of all the Moslem countries, he said, adding that the mosque isn't affiliated with any specific Moslem nation.

These 2 Texans think about the unthinkable

AUSTIN (AP) — While other Texans toil at building houses or balancing books, Bill Dourte and Jim Roby spend their days thinking the unthinkable — planning for a nuclear war.

They are not paranoid, they are just doing their job. Dourte and Roby are nuclear crisis planners at the Texas Department of Public Safety and responsible for devising a state plan as part of the Reagan administration's $4.2 billion, seven-year civil defense program.

The government has dispensed with the idea of shelters — except for military and political leaders — and has opted for a cheap evacuation plan modeled somewhat after a Soviet version.

It's called "crisis relocation" and means, basically, that almost two million Houstonians will be expected to disperse into 35 East Texas counties in three days. These, presumably, are the same Houstonians who think it now takes that long just to get past the city's outer traffic loop. Some of Dallas would go to Oklahoma.

Asked one observer, "What if they won't let us in?"

Meanwhile, Bonham probably will never see so many Mercedes-Benzes and BMWs as when the fashionable Oak Lawn and Highland Park communities relocate there for the war.

It is easy to make fun of such a preposterous-sounding plan, and Dourte and Roby are used to it. But they are serious about their work. "By mere virtue of the fact that we have a plan, there's probably the least likelihood of ever having to implement it," says Roby.

The concept is simple: take people out of "risk areas" near military bases and industrial centers — and disperse them into less populous rural counties. There are 34 risk areas in Texas, mostly the larger cities.

"This is not something that hasn't been done before," said Dourte. "People have historically relocated when there's a threat. They do it all the time — hurricanes on the Gulf Coast and so forth — with a minimum of planning."

The state planners are sold on crisis relocation, and cities long have had civil defense evacuation plans, but the idea of thousands of city-dwellers descending on their communities does not always sit well with rural officials.

Roby said one North Texas county official was more than skeptical when offered help on a plan to handle the refugees.

"He just laughed when I suggested it," Roby said. "He said, 'What have you been smoking?'"

The official changed his tune, though, Roby said, when he was asked just what he intended to do if thousands of frightened urbanites appeared in his town.

"He said, 'I guess I'd need a plan. I'd need to know what to do. I can't shoot 'em.'"

"We very often ask the question, 'How many people do you get at your county fair, or the Wurst Fest?'" Dourte said.

About 70,000 people from central and North Dallas are expected to relocate to Fannin County, population 24,000, after checking in with officials in Bonham.

"You really can't plan for something that you don't know if it's going to happen," said Bonham emergency coordinator and Fire Capt. David Norris. "Where we're going to put them, I don't know."

Dourte and Roby work with a scenario that goes something like this:

Tensions between the United States and some world power increase dangerously. The threat of nuclear attack looms large. Officials in Washington order the implementation of crisis relocation.

Radio and television stations alert the public and newspapers print special sections of relocation instructions. Residents locate themselves on a map, get a sector number and turn to printed "sector designators."

The sector designator goes on the windshield. On the back are directions to the relocation site.

The instructions also include hints such as a "What to take with you" list that includes toothbrush and toothpaste and "casual clothes (seasonal)."

Industries, governments and hospitals designate "key workers," who remain in the risk area caring for hospital patients who cannot be moved and maintaining essential services for those who can't — or won't — leave. Dourte said that estimate is 20 percent.

"There are those that for one reason or another won't want to leave," Dourte said. "They may not believe what they're hearing, that the Soviets are going to attack with nuclear weapons, or they may not want to survive themselves. It's not a pretty picture, when you think about what we'd come out to after a nuclear attack."

But that's where the plan stops.

"It's a survival program, basically," Dourte said. "You're going to have a roof over your head, food, water and you'll be protected from fallout. What we hope to achieve by having this plan is to deter attack."

He said federal officials have surveyed the "host" areas, locating restaurants and school lunch services that could feed newcomers. Assignments of relocators are based on those capacities.

"Of course, they don't stock shelters anymore," said Norris, "so as far as having any shelters stocked with anything, we don't have that. As far as I know, they don't have any plans to do so."

It would be "problem" for Fannin County to suddenly feed three times its present population, Norris said.

"We're going to eat a lot less, I can tell you that," Dourte said. "You'll eat what you can get."

"A lot of people are under a misconception that nuclear war is not survivable," said Roby, displaying a handbook that shows how to dig a trench under your car and turn it into a fallout shelter.

"People who don't take the time to find out how to protect themselves from it will be the ones who won't survive. But those people who take a little bit of time to study the facts and know how to protect themselves, they stand a pretty good chance of coming through this thing."

"There is so much bad, negative publicity about any kind of facet of nuclear attack," said Dourte. "If we don't do something, we know we're going to die. We're going to fry in the streets."

Dog defects to East Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — A dog "arrested" by East German police after it jumped the Berlin Wall has been returned in "completely normal" health, its West German owners report.

The errant West German German shepherd, Ninja, jumped the wall to the east side on Sunday.

She was retrieved by her owner, Peter Teterra, at an East Berlin animal pound on Tuesday, following a request to East German authorities by the West German government, Teterra said.

He said he and his wife had been standing on an observation platform in West Berlin when the 4-year-old dog decided to take the leap. She jumped from the platform onto the 12-foot-high wall, then jumped down on the east side.

The observation platforms, nearly as high as the wall itself, allow people in West Berlin to peer over into the eastern sector.

East German guards quickly took Ninja away, but first called out to the Teterras that they could get her back by telephoning.

The Women's Division of the Howard County Fair is headed this year by Zula Rhodes, our featured cook for this week's recipe exchange. She has contributed several of her favorite recipes. Mrs. Rhodes supervises all activities pertaining to the Women's Division and has spent the past year planning for the week-long fair.

Several persons involved in planning the Women's Division at the fair have recently put together the new Howard County Fair Cookbook for 1982. The cookbook features past Howard County Fair blue ribbon winning recipes and will be on sale during the fair.

JOE'S MARINADE FOR BEEF BRISKET OR GOAT
Zula Rhodes

May be reduced or increased according to size of brisket.

- 1/2 cup worchestershire sauce
- 1/2 cup liquid smoke
- 1/2 cup Louisiana Hot Sauce

Pour all ingredients into a Brown-n-Bag, add brisket or goat. Marinate for 3 to 4 days, turning often. Keep in the refrigerator. When ready to cook, drain marinade and discard. Cook meat slowly at 275 degrees in the same Brown-n-Bag, punch in holes as directed for bag. Cook until tender. Remove from bag immediately.

MUSTARD BUTTER
Zula Rhodes

To serve with roast beef. Mix the following two ingredients in the top of a double boiler and then set aside overnight:

- 1 cup Coleman's dry mustard
- 1 cup white vinegar

Now add:

- 1 Tbsp. flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 well-beaten eggs
- 1/4 tsp. salt

Cook over hot water until mixture will coat a metal spoon. Remove from heat. Makes 2 cups. Store in refrigerator.

PEPPER JELLY
Zula Rhodes

To serve with roast beef too.

- 6 cups sugar
- 1 or 2 cups finely chopped sweet bell peppers (seeded)
- 1/2 cup finely chopped hot peppers (seeded)
- 1 1/2 cups white vinegar
- 1 bottle of Certo, (use nothing else)
- Green food coloring.

Cook first 4 ingredients together. Bring to boil and cook until peppers are tender. Skim top. Add Certo and boil 2 minutes. Put into clean jam jars and cover with paraffin. Note: it is even good on toast.

48 hours, stirring often. Colorful and good. Excellent with meat — especially ham.

CHILI CON QUESO
Zula Rhodes

Use as a dip or a sauce over broccoli or cauliflower. In a small skillet saute:

- 1 medium chopped onion
- 1 clove garlic in 2 Tbsps. bacon fat

Cook until onions are limp and clear — set aside. Into a blender or food processor put:

- 1 7 1/2 ounce can Rotel tomatoes with green chilies
- 1 small can chopped green chilies
- 6 to 8 canned or fresh Jalapeno peppers (optional)

the skillet mixture including the fat. Blend for a moment. Pour this mixture into the top of a double boiler with 1 pound Velveta Cheese, chunked up. Cook over boiling water until cheese is melted. Sauce will be very thin. Beat 1 egg slightly and pour into cheese mixture slowly, stirring constantly. This will thicken the cheese. Serve as a dip with chips while still hot. Marvelous in the winter.

GOOD STUFF
Zula Rhodes

- 5 cups old-fashioned oats
- 1 cup coconut
- 1 cup sesame seeds
- 1 cup chopped or sliced almonds
- 1 cup powdered dry milk
- 1 cup soya flour
- 1 cup wheat germ
- 1 cup honey
- 1 cup corn oil

Mix together with your hands and spread on a cookie sheet. Bake at 250 degrees for 30 minutes. Cool. Store in a tightly covered jar. Really good snacking stuff for adults and kids. "One-half cup for lunch will hold you until supper. Double it and you're going to love it. It is nutritionally perfect," says Mrs. Rhodes.

CHRISTMAS EGGNOG
Zula Rhodes

- 1/2 gallon vanilla ice cream, softened

oats, raisins and nuts along with other basic ingredients. The cookie recipe is one of her favorites.

1 quart eggnog mix
1 quart whipping cream (whipped)
1 quart whole milk
1 pint dark rum
1 pint brandy or cognac
4 ounces peach or apricot liquor

Mix together and serve in a large bowl — serves a bunch.

FROZEN BUTTERMILK
Zula Rhodes

My grandchildren love this dessert — or snack (without the fruit).

- 1 egg white
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup whipping cream (whipped)
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1 16 ounce package frozen strawberries
- 2 sliced bananas

Beat egg white, add sugar. Add whipped cream to buttermilk, vanilla, soda and egg white. Spoon into muffin cups lined with paper liners. Freeze. Peel off paper to serve, turn upside down and spoon fruit over. Serves 10.

GREEN CHILI QUICHE
Zula Rhodes

Bake a 9-inch pie crust. Fill with beans or rice to hold its shape. Set aside.

Filling:

- 1 small chopped onion
- 2 Tbsps. butter
- 3 eggs
- 1/2 cups milk
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1 cup cheddar cheese
- 1 can green chilies (small)

Saute onions in butter until transparent. Beat eggs thoroughly, add milk seasoning. Add onions, chilies and cheese. Pour into pastry shell and bake at 375 degrees 30 minutes or until knife comes out clean. Cool a bit and serve with a salad for a complete meal.

MY MOTHER'S OATMEAL RAISIN COOKIES
Zula Rhodes

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1 Tbsp. cinnamon

Mix together and set aside.

Beat with mixer:

- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 3/4 cup brown sugar

Beat until light and fluffy, add 2 eggs, one at a time, beating well after each.

Add:

- 1 Tbsp. vanilla, mix well
- 2 cups finely chopped walnuts or pecans
- 1 cup raisins
- 3 cups old-fashioned oats

Mix well and add flour mixture. Dough will be very stiff. Form small balls using a teaspoon. Place 2 inches apart on a greased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes. Cover tightly to store or freeze.

KAHLUA
Zula Rhodes

You will need a gallon jug and the following for this recipe:

- 1 fifth of vodka
- 2 vanilla beans, broken up
- 1 8-ounce jar Instant Espresso coffee
- 5 pounds sugar

Water to 3 inches from top of gallon jug.

Combine all ingredients and set in dark place for six weeks. Good over ice as a drink and excellent over ice cream as a sauce.

CLAM HUSH PUPPIES
Zula Rhodes

Great with fish or just a salad.

- 1 box Hush Puppy mix
- 1 onion, grated
- 1 16-ounce can grated or minced clams with juice

Mix together and fry in deep fat by the spoonfuls.

FRANKLIN PECAN CAKE (WHITE FRUIT CAKE)
Zula Rhodes

- 1 pound butter (nothing else)
- 2 cups white sugar
- 6 eggs
- 4 cups all-purpose flour (reserve 1 cup for flouring fruit and nuts)
- 1 tsp. baking powder
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1/2 cups coconut
- 1 pound candied whole cherries
- 1 pound candied chopped pineapple
- 4 cups whole pecans
- 2 tps. vanilla

Sift flour, baking powder, salt together and set aside. Cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time and beat well after each addition. Now add flour mixture 1/2 cup at a time and beat well. Add vanilla last. Put fruit and nuts (whole) into a large bowl with the coconut — add the 1 cup flour and mix by hand until all are coated. Now pour cake batter over the fruit and nut mixture and work with hands until well-blended. Grease a large angel pan with Crisco — cover with brown paper and grease again — be sure to cover center and bottom sections. Place batter mix into pan and bake at 275 degrees for 4 hours or until cake tester comes out clean. Cool cake in pan. Wrap in foil with apple slices in the center — replace every few days — after 2 weeks of mellowing the cake may be frozen. Serves 24 generously. Note: the cake may be baked in large loaf pans but cooking time must be adjusted — will make 2 loaf pans — weight of total cake is about 12 pounds.

Fruit searches for identity

The kiwifruit is having an identity crisis. Those who are unfamiliar with the fascinating fruits sometimes call them "furry little brown things." A Virginia shopper thought they were fuzzy potatoes. A Cincinnati reporter thought they were moldy and tossed them out.

"Beneath that unappealing exterior, however, is bright emerald green flesh with a creamy white core," said Charles Brader, a marketing official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service at Washington, D.C. "When the fruit is fully ripe, the taste is reminiscent of bananas with a dash of watermelon and strawberries."

Kiwifruit is the newcomer to the U.S. fruit market, and growers are anxious to improve its image, Brader said. "It can add an appealing taste and look to menus," he said. "It can be sliced and served fresh or used for jam, jelly or juice."

Originally known as Chinese gooseberry, kiwifruit is a native of the Yangtze Valley in central China. New Zealanders, however, were the first to realize its commercial value. They adopted the fruit and named it after their native kiwi, a flightless bird with grayish-brown hairlike plumage. The New Zealand kiwifruit industry developed after World War II and today is centered in the Bay of Plenty area near Tauranga.

During the 1960's, scientists at a USDA field station at Chico, Calif., developed methods for cultivating the fruit in the United States, and growers were encouraged to experiment with new plantings, Brader said. Two growers imported several thousand plants from New Zealand to establish the first kiwifruit vineyards. Today, kiwifruit is a highly specialized farm commodity that has come of age in California.

Nearly 3,800 acres of kiwifruit are now in commercial production. Shipping volume totaled 1,400,000 seven-pound "flats" in 1981 — up from 15,000 in 1978. A flat holds 25 to 50 kiwifruit, depending on their size.

California and New Zealand share the same markets — mainly Western Europe and Japan. The California kiwifruit marketing season runs from October to May, while the New Zealand season is from May to November.

The California Kiwifruit Commission has launched an advertising campaign to tempt more U.S. consumers to try their fruit. "The kiwi-fruit has everything going for it — novelty, unique flavor and a variety of uses in meals," Brader said.

In an effort to improve marketing, USDA is establishing U.S. grade standards for kiwi-fruit similar to those used extensively by the fresh produce industry for other commodities. The voluntary standards will provide a uniform basis for measuring the quality and condition of the fruit.

Using the grades as a trading language, buyers and shippers separated by long distances can make a fair exchange when they know they are talking about the same quality product.

What's the future for this funny, fuzzy fruit? Time and consumer acceptance will tell, Brader said.

Not all water comes from tap

Not all the water we drink comes from the kitchen faucet. A growing number of Americans are learning about the various types of water available. Many of them are enjoying their water more these days when it comes from a bottle.

Today's water comes from a variety of sources.

Water available today falls into the following general categories:

- Drinking water — water formulated, purified by special process. Minerals, including fluoride, may be added to enhance flavor or help retard tooth decay.
- Well water — water taken from below ground through pipes or other external force. "Artesian well water" means water forced from below ground by natural underground pressure.
- Spring water — water taken from a natural opening in the ground or from a bore hole drilled in the vicinity of the opening.
- Mineral water — water obtained totally from government approved natural spring or underground water-bearing strata. It is collected, bottled and distributed under sanitary conditions. No other minerals are added.

- Distilled or purified water — water from which minerals have been removed to less than ten parts per million.
- Carbonated — naturally carbonated — water whose carbon dioxide comes from same source as the water. Or carbonated natural — water to which carbon dioxide from other source has been added.

Je suis Wiley? Country with a French twist

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sixty-five of the greatest country music songs of all-time have been recorded under the leadership of a man born in the unlikely hillbilly hotbed of Paris, France.

Conductor Albert Coleman, a French-born, classically trained arranger, assembled his 55-member Atlanta Pops Orchestra and recorded the album "Just Hooked on Country," as well as a single by the same name.

The album is a medley of 65 of the all-time favorites in country music. The single, which was released earlier this summer, includes 17 of the 65.

The 17 include "Tennessee Waltz," "Turkey in the Straw," "Wabash Cannonball," "I Can't Stop Loving You," "Orange Blossom Special," "The Games People Play," "Rocky Top," "Under the Double Eagle," "You Are My Sunshine," "Green, Green Grass of Home" and "Your Cheatin' Heart."

"I combined the big orchestra with the beautiful melodies of country," Coleman said in a telephone interview from Atlanta.

The lush sound, and the absence of country music's pervasive cry-in-your-beer lyrics, help make the album appealing to non-country fans.

"That's the idea," said Coleman.

Say hi to Dustin

THAT'S DUSTIN HOFFMAN? — The graduate himself. This time, Dustin is all dolled up for his starring role in "Tootsie," his next movie. No word yet on when it will be released by Columbia Pictures.

The Fonz takes a steady lady

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur Fonzarelli, one of the most eligible skirt-chasers on television, will have his wings clipped on "Happy Days" this season. Ironically, the same actress who played little Richie Cunningham's girl friend eight years ago will become the Toast of Milwaukee as Fonzie's steady lady.

Love won't bloom immediately Sept. 28, when the ABC hit begins its 10th season. "She'll turn off to him at first," says casting director Bobby Hoffman.

What happens is that Fonzie (Henry Winkler) is smitten by a divorced mother and follows her home. "Mom, there's a hood out here to meet you," is the way the daughter puts it.

Mom is Linda Purl, who made an impression in ABC's forgettable "Manions of America" miniseries last season. Daughter is Heather O'Rourke, the little girl in "Poltergeist."

Miss Purl, who was on the stage in Ibsen's "Doll House" recently, won the coveted role over some 400 actresses.

"We also strongly considered Mary Crosby (the woman who shot J.R.)," says Hoffman. "But she was tied up."

If the sultry Miss Crosby were selected, the role would have been played differently than with the tiny Miss Purl. "We were looking for the qualities of strength and femininity combined," says Hoffman.

Miss Purl will definitely not play a greaser. Hoffman says oil and oil didn't mix in 1976, when Pinky Tuscadoro (Roz Kelly), the sexy motorcycle queen, didn't offer enough contrast to Fonzie. "They were competing with each other. The chemistry didn't work," he says.

For the daughter's role, Hoffman considered another Steven Spielberg sensation, Drew Barrymore, the spunky sister in "E.T." Her agent said Miss Barrymore doesn't do episodic television, says Hoffman.

There are those in Hollywood who are surprised that the respected Miss Purl chose to get involved with weekly situation comedy. But peer recognition isn't everything. It's not easy to pass up national popularity, and "Happy Days" is one of the best stardom vehicles around.

Winkler himself was a tapped-out actor from the Yale School of Drama when he got the Fonzie role, a supporting part that he turned into cult hero with solid acting, comic timing and some classic idiosyncracies.

Other famous "Happy Days" alumni include Robin Williams of "Mork and Mindy," Penny Marshall and Cindy Williams of "Laverne and Shirley," Cheryl Ladd of "Charlie's Angels," Jeff Conaway of "Taxi" and Morgan Fairchild of "Flamingo Road."

Montand's singing charms New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Yves Montand, with total artistry making each song a story, turned the Metropolitan Opera into a variety-show cabaret on Tuesday night.

The first night of his seven-performance engagement at the Met, his first here in some 20 years, was sold out and the other concerts are about 80 percent sold. Top ticket price is $30.

Instead of exuding consistent charm and sex appeal through one romantic tune after another, as one might expect from a Frenchman singing popular French chansons, Montand used his expressive hands, body language, sometimes some dance steps and brilliant lighting — which he designed — to create theatrical vignettes.

He sang in French and did little explaining of the songs in English during the intermissionless hour and a half. A listener who understood no French still could know what was going on and remain fascinated throughout.

Montand's voice is flexible and attractive. It is light in weight, with almost no vibrato and mellowness only in the lowest notes. But it is easy almost not to notice how good he sounds because of the impact of the theatrics. The theatrics, however, are not covering up vocal lacks.

The songs that people with old Montand recordings know best had all been arranged differently. From the "French pop sound" that seems dated now, they have been given a mainstream contemporary jazz feel.

Having left the cabarets in 1968 to act in films, Montand returned last fall to Paris' Olympia Theater. Since then, he has toured a good deal in Europe.

Same old songs from Fleetwood Mac

• "Mirage," by Fleetwood Mac, Warner Bros Records

What can one say about the latest from Mac? Like self-appointed leader Lindsey Buckingham sings, the album is for that "dreamer of sighs." The sound is good; the songs are good; the singing is good.

But nothing new, exciting or innovative jumps out at the listener. We've heard this on all the other albums from "Rumours" onward.

"Gypsy" by Stevie Nicks is wonderful to listen to, a song wrapped in delicate harmonies and her pleasant voice. But it's been done before.

"She was just a wish and a memory is all that is left for you now" the song goes — a perfect description of the impact of this well-done but uninspiring work.

'Thorn Birds' looks authentic

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Looking down from the hillock onto the Drogheda sheep station in the valley below might cause an Aussie stockman to start whistling "Waltzing Matilda."
 From the weathered wool shed to the imposing Georgian sandstone main house, it appears an authentic reproduction of a 1920s Australia sheep station. It was built in the Simi Valley northwest of Los Angeles for the nine-hour ABC mini series based on Colleen McCullough's romantic family epic, "The Thorn Birds." It will be telecast in 1983.
 It looks right, from the animal-chewed fences to the wisteria creeping up the ironwork on the main house veranda. It smells right, too, from the sheep to the manure to the roses blooming in the formal garden beside the veranda.
 The replica was constructed at a cost of $2.5 million. But when they've finished shooting in late October the buildings — or what's left after the fire sweeps Drogheda — will be torn down and once again it will become California ranchland.
 Why is a novel so quintessentially Australian being filmed here? Producer Stan Margulies says, "When I got to Australia I saw wisteria, bottle brush, jacaranda trees and roses. It was Southern California."
 "Riding from the airport to Sydney my wife looked at the mountains and said, 'There're the Santa Susana Mountains.' That's what they looked like."
 Executive producer David Wolper says later that it would have added $2.5 million to the $21 million budget to film in Australia. "And we'd still have to build Drogheda there," he says. "Nothing like it exists in Australia."
 Margulies, who produced "Roots" with Wolper, conducted a tour of the sheep station. Sitting on white wicker furniture on the broad, shaded veranda, he says, "We've accumulated more than 200 books on Australia, some specifically on sheep stations. Drogheda doesn't exist any more than Tara did in 'Gone With the Wind.' Colleen McCullough took features from many places to create a fictional setting for Father Ralph and Mary Carson and Paddy and Meggie."
 Warner Bros., hoping for a movie as popular as the super best-seller, acquired the film rights before publication. But after three directors and a number of scripts they gave up. They couldn't tell the sweeping story in just two hours.
 "They had tried valiantly to get Robert Redford to play Father Ralph, but Redford was getting himself mentally ready for directing at the time and wasn't interested," says Margulies.
 After that, Alan Shayne, president of Warner Bros. Television, turned it over to Wolper and Margulies. "We knew it was perfect for a mini series," says Margulies. "We went right to ABC, hired writer Carmen Culver and spent a year on the script."
 "The only other thing we did was to sign Richard Chamberlain to play Father Ralph."
 Chamberlain stars as Ralph de Bricassart, the handsome, brilliant priest who becomes romantically involved with Meggie Cleary (Rachel Ward) and rises to power in the Vatican. Barbara Stanwyck is the strong-willed Mary Carson, Jean Simmons is Fee, Richard Kiley is Paddy, and Australian actor Bryan Brown is Luke O'Neill, the man Meggie marries.
 The wool shed, which measures 150 by 80 feet and is 40 feet high, is the only complete building on the station. The others are all shells.
 "This is the only building where we are shooting both exteriors and interiors," explains Margulies. "We have 16 working sheep shearing stations and a 19th Century steam engine to run them. Recently we filmed them shearing wool for two days.

 "You'll notice that the shed is cathedral-shaped. When the sun is right it throws a cross on the floor. Meggie discovers this at an early age and this becomes her sanctuary. We'll have a lot of scenes here with Meggie and Father Ralph. In the next generation Justine uses it for her stage."
 The fire that sweeps Drogheda is closely supervised by the Ventura County Fire Department, which has two companies and eight tank trucks standing by, and by the Air Quality Control District, which limits burning to 10 minutes an hour.

TIPS FOR ENERGY SAVERS

Maintaining Your Car: Check tire pressure regularly.

Underinflated tires increase gas use. You can lose about 2 percent in fuel economy for every pound of pressure under the recommended pounds-per-square-inch.

This energy-saving tip is brought to you by the classified advertising department in the interest of energy conservation.
