Council may replace judge

By MIKE DOWNEY Staff Writer

Bobby West, Big Spring's municipal court judge, is expected to be out of that job soon due to what city councilmen are calling an "economic revamping" of municipal court.

West, who also is a Howard County justice of the peace, has been the municipal court judge on a part-time basis since his appointment by the city council two years ago.

According to Councilman Larry Miller, the council feels it is beneficial to the city to go to a full-time judge." Miller estimated the move would save the city between $6,000 and $7,000 a year.

The savings would come since the full-time position has been offered to a current city employee, Miller said. He declined to name the employee, since that person was considering whether or not to accept

Councilman Russ McEwen said the council has taken "no formal action whatsoever' on the municipal court situation but is "contemplating some things... different alternatives for the

Asked about the reason for West's possible release, McEwen also said the move was economic.

"Speaking for myself, I'm satisfied with his work," McEwen said. "We're not disappointed in West's job. Miller stressed the planned changes have "nothing to do with West — it's no reflection on him whatsoever." West said he had been contacted by the council Friday about its impending plans "It was kind of a shock to me, but I don't stand in the way of progress," he said Saturday, adding he would not devote more time to the municipal

West said he felt no animosity toward the city, nor did he disagree with the move to a full-time judge. "The workload (in city court) is increasing more and more each week," West said. "It's high time they had a full-time judge." He said he expected the city's decision to be official by Nov. 1. The municipal judge is responsible for all Class C misdemeanors that are fines only, mostly traffic violations,

West said. Although the municipal judge and the justice of the peace have shared jurisdiction, the municipal judge is limited to disposing of city violations only. A peace justice's responsibilities are broader, he said.

Councilman Jack Y. Smith said the issue will be discussed at the next council meeting. The regular Tuesday night meeting of the council has been re-scheduled for 1 p.m. Friday due to several councilmen's plans to attend another function Tuesday, McEwen

They came in screaming, carrying placards, signs and effigies. They ringed their targets and shouted.

Not a lynch mob, not a band of marauding vigilantes — it was a pep rally for the Big Spring Steers.

The screaming, shouting mob was not bent on destruction and mayhem. Instead, hundreds of Steer fans turned out Friday to show their support for their football heroes at an afternoon pep rally Students, businesspeople, townspeople, proud mommas and proud poppas turned out in droves at the high school to back their Steers in a scene not observed in Big Spring for years. Coaches and players stood silent and shook their heads in wonderment as the fans filed in and fed an uproar the varsity cheerleaders had started

The Steers, perennial doormats of District 4-AAAAA, are in the thick of things midway through the season, and Big Springers were justly proud

The pep rally may not have sparked their Steers to another win (they lost that night to Abilene Cooper, 37-15), but the players knew they were

Candidates debate again

DALLAS (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements continued to stress what he called his opponent's incompetence, while challenger Mark White harped on the state's 600,000 unemployed Saturday night during a third, and possibly final, face-to-face meeting in the gubernatorial campaign.

Both men claimed victory after the hour-long, somewilat subdued, exchange, which was hosted by KERA-TV of Dallas and beamed to nine other public television stations statewide.

Clements, a Republican, opened the debate with a list of endorsements which he said included Texas newspapers, four former Texas attorney generals and three former

Democrat governors. "This gubernatorial election will set an all-time historic record for ticketsplitting," Clements said. "Why? Because I've been a governor all all Texans: Republican, Democrat or independent - black, white or brown."

White, a Democrat and the state's attorney general, opened with a salvo against Clements on the issues of utility regulation, the economy, education, tax increases and the environ-

He contended Clements has appointed incompetent people to the Public Utility Commission, saying "Every housewife in Texas is more qualified than Bill Clements' ap-pointees" to the commission.

Both candidates accused the other of favoring an increase in state taxes.

HIGHTOWER HITS HOME -Democrat Jim Hightower, campaigning for Texas agriculture commissioner, spoke to a gathering at the Howard County courthouse in Big Spring Saturday afternoon. Hightower defeated incumbent Reagan Brown in the May primary and faces Republican Fred Thornberry in the Nov. 2 election.

Hightower: aid the farmer, beat the GOP

By MIKE DOWNEY Staff Writer

Jim Hightower, Democratic candidate for Texas agriculture commissioner, swung through Big Spring Saturday afternoon to promise aid for family farmers and victory for Democrats in November

Hightower met with a small group of local Democrats in the county

The Democrats are "going well" towards victory in the November election, Hightower said. "People are fed up with it and they're going to vote Democratic," he said. "They're going to surprise Bill Clements."

Farmers are the hardest-hit group as a result of the current administration's policies, Hightower said. Production costs on all agriculture products are now higher than the prices the farmer receives,

Hightower said his opponent, Republican Fred Themberry, does not believe farmers are "depressionbound." Pulling out a sheet of Thornberry's cam literature, Hightower as ... That 10,000 farmers went out of business' during the last five years proves that Texas agriculture is strong."

Hightower added: "Unless you're one of the 10,000.

Thornberry, his opponent said, just is not aware of what is happening in agriculture. If elected agriculture com-

U.S. may pull out of UN assembly It reinforced a similar threat voiced States threatened Saturday to halt payments to the United Nations and withdraw from the U.N. General Assembly if the assembly votes to expel Israel

"Such action would do grave damage to the entire United Nations system and it would hurt us all," Secretary of State George P. Shultz said in a strongly worded statement issued Saturday. He called on U.N. members to "turn aside such initiatives.

"If Israel were excluded from the General Assembly, the United States would withdraw from participation in the assembly and would withhold payments to the United Nations, until Israel's right to participate is restored." the statement said

Wednesday by U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, who said American diplomats are employing a 'full-court press' in lobbying against the ouster campaign, mounted by Iraq and Libya against Israel in the 157-member assembly.

U.S. participation in the 15-member U.N. Security Council, which is charged with maintaining peace and security in the world, would not be affected by a withdrawal from the General Assembly, the United Nations' main forum for discussion. Neither would U.S. participation come into question in other U.N. bodies, such as UNESCO or UNICEF, in which there is "no wrongful action against a legitimate member," American officials said. ### Arts, crafts festival has 'anythina hands can make

By MIKE DOWNEY

Staff Writer Query: Where would one find a framed seashell, a barbed wire wall hanging, an almost-edible ceramic pie, an Aggie switchblade and a bull..

excrement award? Answer: The sixth annual Big Spr ing Arts and Crafts Festival at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum

Actually, the first day of the festival is over, but today the festival is open from 1 to 6 p.m.

Entering the coliseum at any entrance, the eyes are met with literally "everything the hands of mankind can imagine to make." The range of the items arrayed in the booths around the coliseum and on the floor are from wood to metal to cloth, from wax to clay to ceramic, from painting to photograph to sculpture.

A brief tour of only the tip of the iceberg yields these delights: the wry humor of Erma Calhoun's painted and mounted awards of cattle droppings, the astonishing clarity of George Boutwell's water colors, the delightful expressiveness of a Bill Smith metal figure depicting a golfer missing a

Other pleasures at the festival include ceramic pumpkins and pies that cry out to be eaten, quilted dolls awaiting the clutch of little arms, wooden toys poised for play, color photographs astounding in their clarity and lamps shaped of the Old West cowboys to light the nights.

One booth is selling an Aggie switchblade, a complicated contraption made of rubber bands and ice cream sticks that would not scare a twoyear-old. A painter stands putting the finishing touches on another work. A potter molds wet clay to fashion a delicate piece of functional and decorative art. A sculpture wields a wand of fire to braze together a wire piece of art

And the paintings. The painting range from huge paintings to fill a living room's wall to thumbnail etchings to fill a corner of a jewelry box. The subjects vary, but most are concerned with the great Texas outdoors, its men and women and the creatures that inhabit it. Windmills, barns and other buildings are also popular topics. The styles range from water colors to oils to razor-sharp pencil drawings. Some paintings can be found on candles, slabs of wood and even saw blades

The list of items goes on and on, but the best part is that all of these goods are for sale

The Big Spring Arts and Crafts Festival concludes its two-day run Sunday. Admission is free. The doors open at 1 p.m. until 6 p.m.

Howard College enrollment up 1.8% this year

AUSTIN - At least 47,000 more students enrolled in Texas colleges and universities this fall than fall 1981 with 21 of them in the Howard Community College District, according to preliminary figures reported to the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University

That 6.75 percent statewide increase compares with a 3.7 percent jump for the same period last year, bringing total enrollment for the 1982 fall semester to 748,499, the board report said.

Preliminary enrollment totals for the Howard Community College District showed 1,144 students enrolled this fall, a 1.8 percent increase.

The preliminary enrollment data is based on 12th day class figures, the report said, and is subject to revision when official reports from the colleges and universities are certified.

The largest increases occurred at public institutions. Enrollments rose 4.1 percent to 356,203 at public four-year institutions

Although the report said enrollment remained relatively stable at independent schools, the number of students attending 18 of the 39 four-year independent institutions declined. Enrollments at public community colleges grew 11.8 percent to 291,810 students, with four of the state's 47 community college districts reporting a decline since 1981.

Firearms safety class held

The Howard College Continuing Education Department announced a firearms safety course, covering topics such as firearm safety and range commands.

The lecture part of the course will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., Oct. 19-28, in room A-10 in the south annex of the administration building.

On Saturday, Oct. 30, demonstrations and performance practice will be held from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. at the police practice range

Students must furnish their own weapons and 50 rounds of ammunition. Cost for the course will be $18. Instructor for the course is Ed Wright. For further information call 267-6311, extension 220

Absentee voting under way

Absentee voting for the Nov. 2 general election began Oct. 13 and 80 persons already have cast ballots, according to Howard County Clerk Margaret Ray.

Mrs. Ray said, in addition to the 80 persons voting in the county clerk's office, 54 ballots have been mailed to prospective voters.

Absentee voting continues through Oct. 29 in the county

Rodeo planning gets started

It's not too early to be thinking of next year's Big Spring rodeo, says rodeo President Charles Creighton, even though the dust has barely settled from this year's summer rope-and-ride extravaganza.

The 1983 rodeo will be held from June 22 to June 25, and is should be a bigger show than usual, Creighton says, since 1983 marks the 50th anniversary of the renowned

'MASH' comes Big Spring

"M.A.S.H." may leave the tube this fall, but Big Spring will resurrect it in October for a day at least. Radio station KBST, Malone-Hogan Hospital and Co. D, 111th Engineer Battallion of the National Guard, will set up a giant army tent amid the cedar scrub west of town to stage the first "M.A.S.H." community blood drive. The event is scheduled for Oct. 23 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. near the National Guard Armory.

Recruiters for the drive plan to sign up donors before Saturday, where possible, to steady the flow of donors throughout the day. Donors may sign up at KBST by calling 263-6391 between the hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Malone-Hogan Hospital will be conduction preregistration of donors Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, planning to recruit two donors for 15 minutes of each hour of the drive. Civic groups have been challenged to recruit their members to sign up for the drive, according to drive spokesmen. "KBST will give a donation of $100 to the group signing up the largest percentage of their membership," said Rebecca Powell, one of the organizers of the drive. The radio station will also give "I Gave Blood At M.A.S.H." T-shirts to all donors.

Emily Ward, public relations director at Malone-Hogan Hospital, said the war-zone setting is an appropriate, as well as fun, setting for the drive

"Those of us who take responsibility for hosting a blood drive tend to blur the real need for blood - either covering it up with gimmicks to attract donors or announcing it and letting it happen as it will. This M.A.S.H. setting makes us realize that blood, or the lack of it, is a real need in this community," said Mrs.

Army cots, trucks, ambulances, and a medivac helicopter — the type used to evacuate soldiers from war zones - will be a part of the "M.A.S.H." set. Volunteers and technicians will be dressed in army fatigues and surgical scrub suits.

All Big Spring hospitals will benefit from the drive.

Freedom-seeking convict frees hostages, surrenders

NEW YORK (AP) — A 33-year-old convict who took five people hostage in a hospital basement during an escape attempt released his remaining hostage and surrendered Saturday, ending a 46-hour siege.

SEARCHED AFTER SURRENDER - Larry Van

Dyke is searched by police at the conclusion of a 46-hour hostage drama in a New York hospital, in which

Larry Van Dyke, a "career criminal" who was to have been sentenced Friday on an armed robbery charge, agreed to give up in exchange for making a final statement to reporters on prison conditions.

"I am not a madman," Van Dyke told reporters through a window shortly before giving up. "I'm a man that was trying to get freedom ... I got caught, I'm The ordeal began at 10 a.m. Thursday when Van Dyke, who had gotten a cast removed from a broken hand, seized a prison guard's gun, wounded the guard in the arm and holed up with five hospital employees in a basement locker room at Brooklyn's Kings County Hospital, the nation's second-largest hospital after Cook County Hospital in Chicago. At 8:25 a.m. Saturday, Elton Smith, 28, a clerk, was released. Five minutes later, Van Dyke, who is called Larry Gardner in court papers, put his gun on the window ledge and clambered out of the basement, surrendering to heavily armed police and negotiators. It was not immediately clear what criminal charges Van Dyke would face. Police said a complaint would be after interviews with everyone involved in the case. In explaining his bid for freedom, Van Dyke told police early in the negotiations that he did not want to spend the rest of his life in prison. That was the maximum term he was to have faced Friday if sen-

All along, Van Dyke linked his actions to promises of media coverage, repeatedly trading hostages for television and radio time. Various local broadcast stations complied with police requests for help, in one case even to the extent of rerunning a 10-minute statement by the convict during the prime-time news.

Van Dyke, who has spent much of his life behind bars for crimes ranging from car theft to kidnapping, constantly complained the state prison system was rife with corruption and incapable of rehabilitation. He said he also had been used by white prison officials to frame black prison guards on narcotics charges.

Police negotiators who clustered around an 8-foot well leading down to the window of the locker room rode an emotional roller coaster with Van Dyke as the hours passed and he did not sleep. He threatened suicide several times, at one point having Smith tell police, "You're gonna hear a shot. It won't be me. He said the minute you hear the shot you can come and get

Another time he told police connected with him by closed-circuit television and telephone, "I've got nothing to lose. We're going to play Russian roulette." That was the only time police considered rushing Van Dyke. They called it off when the convict spotted

Ex-cop held in shooting of former Pioneer official

 ${\bf HOUSTON}~({\bf AP})-{\bf A}~{\bf former}~{\bf police}$ captain offered no resistance when officers arrested him at a hotel early Saturday in connection with the shooting of a retired businessman at a downtown Amarillo intersection, a homicide detective said.

L.R. Wynne, chief of detectives for the Amarillo Police Department until 1971, was arrested at the Ramada Inn Southwest about 12:20 a.m., said officer Ken Williamson

The arrest came 11 hours after a gunman stopped beside a pickup driven by Erle Winston Mathis, 63, fired at least three shots from a largecaliber pistol through the pickup window, then sped away.

Mathis, a former vice president of Pioneer Production Corp., an oil and gas exploration subsidiary of Pioneer Corp., died Friday afternoon at Northwest Texas Hospital from wounds suffered in the 1:20 p.m. shooting, police said.

"There wasn't much to it," Williamson said of Wynne's arrest. He said Amarillo police notified his department that Wynne probably was in Houston

Williamson said he did not know how or why Wynne traveled to Houston and could not say when Wynne would be returned to the Panhandle.

Potter County Peace Justice L.B. Bartlett issued a murder warrant after the shooting, naming Wynne as Mathis' killer.

Police said they believed the shooting erupted over a business deal that went sour. However, Amarillo police Lt. Jimmy Boydston said that is only speculation at this point

"Anything I said right now would not be concrete," Boydston said. 'We've got some leads but nothing very solid

Wynne, who recently sold a security company, and Mathis were described as prominent Amarillo businessmen. Police said the gunman fired a large-caliber revolver at least three times into the truck's window, then A 1982 Oldsmobile Cutlass, rented in Wynne's name, was later recovered at the Amarillo International Airport where witnesses said the driver switched to a 1982 Cadillac and drove

The Cadillac, registered to Wynne, was found about 8 p.m. at the Lubbock

Mathis, who was hit once in the arm and twice in the chest during the shooting, died while in surgery, authorities said

Pioneer Corp. spokesman Jerry Searcy said company officials did not know if the shooting was related to

"Everybody in the world knows more about this than we do right now," Searcy said.

Mathis served as a consultant to Pioneer Natural Gas following his retirement last fall, Searcy said.

Mathis joined the energy conglomerate in 1974 and was promoted to vice president a year later, a position in which he was responsible for the acquisition of drilling rights.

Rebels hit Salvador capital

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Guerrillas launched their biggest attacks on San Salvador in six months, and 4,000 troops were battling leftists in a northern province where an American was reported killed fighting with the rebels, military sources said Saturday.

Judicial authorities said six people were found dead in the capital, but it was not immediately known how or when they died. Many of the bodies found in this country are believed to be victims of right-wing death squads who allegedly collaborate with the government.

Residents of Usuluan, 68 miles east of the capital, said three students were shot to death Friday and a school administrator on Thursday, apparently victims of death

Guerrillas believed to have entered San Salvador from bases on the Guazapa volcano 15 miles to the north attacked at 10 spots around the capital late Friday. The drive was the leftists' most serious assault on the capital since their unsuccessful attempt to disrupt March 28 elections for a Constituent Assembly Combined army and national police drove off guerrillas from the northern, working-class suburb of Ayutux-tepeque after they attacked from sniping positions for about 40 minutes, a local civil defense patrolman said. Police said guerrillas ambushed a treasury police patrol Saturday in the center of the city, injuring one

The rebels also bombed five telephone exchange boxes and dynamited two power poles in northern and central San Salvador late Friday, blacking out part of the capital for a short period

Official reports gathered from military commanders around the country said guerrillas have killed or wounded at least 122 troops in their week-long offensive

Guerrillas claim to have killed or wounded 163 troops in the same period, while official reports claim at least 153

Reagan tells unemployed to 'hang in there'

told jobless Americans on Saturday to "hang in there" because the economy is getting better.

Reagan accused opponents of his program of exploiting the fear that comes in troubled times, and he recalled the famous line from Franklin D. Roosevelt's 1933 inaugural address, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself.

In his weekly radio address, which itself is reminiscent of Roosevelt's broadcast "fireside chats," Reagan said, "Unemployment such as we have now is a terrible thing, but it may not be our No. 1 problem. Although the Labor Department's weekly claims figures do indicate that 618,000 people left the unemployment compensation rolls that week, that does not mean they found jobs. Some may have gone to work, but most simply exhausted their regular 26 weeks of unemployment compensation checks and ceased drawing benefit checks. The department's weekly publication of new claims figures, however, does not survey those leaving the relief rolls to determine why they stopped getting benefits. Reagan cautioned his audience not to listen to his political opponents, whom he called "those crepe hangers who are howling like a dog sitting on a sharp rock."

RETIREMENT PLANS (Under the New Law)

The new tax act makes several significant changes affecting retirement plans. Differences between corporate pension and profit sharing plans and those of self-employed individuals are, in general, eliminated

Rules have been made more liberal for Keogh HR-10) plans and more restrictive for corporate plans. Annual contributions to corporate "defined contribution plans" have been reduced from $45,475 to $30,000. Benefits that can be provided from corporate "defined benefit plans" have been decreased from the current annual $136,425 to $90,000.

On the other hand, the allowable contributions to Keogh plans are increased from a current maximum of 15% of earned income or $15,000 to 20% of earned income or $30,000 for 1984.

The increase allowed Keogh Plans applies also to Sub-chapter S plans and Simplified Employee Pension plans. Another significant change is the reduction of the previous "unlimited exclusion" from your gross estate of retirement benefits under qualified plans to an exclusion of only $100,000 of such benefits. If you have more than $100,000 in one of these plans, you will and your estate plan should be reviewed. Loans from retirement plans are subject to stricter rules. A participant is permitted to borrow up to one-half of his vested benefits, not to exceed $50,000. He can borrow up to $10,000 without regard considered distributions and taxable as income. Loans in excess of five years will be treated as taxable distribution regardless of size. #### Chapman and his half truths...

The article by Steve Chapman highly infurtiated me with the half truths and distorted views.

The other questions Americans should be asking is what other country in this world provides as cheap a food and feeds half the rest of the world? The American farmer feeds himself and 76 others for 16.7% of their disposable income compared to the United Kingdom at 19.3%, France at 20.1%, West Germany at 22.0%, Japan at 23.3%. Israel at 24.9%, Finland at 27.7%, Soviet Union at 34.0%, Venezuela at 38.0%, Thailand at 46.7%, India at 59.3%

Cost too high in the U.S.?? Compared to what? Salary - takes less hourly wage to buy more food than ever before. Compared to what the farmer gets? Who are you trying to fool? THE BEST VALUE TODAY IS THE BEST INVESTMENT IN TOMORROW

Another question: What else does this country have to export to other countries for a balance of trade?

Why should the federal government provide so much help? Would you rather have a food cartel similar to oil or have the largest industry in this country, next to finance, go broke and depend on another country tohave the generosity of the U.S.? The fruits of the labor of the American farmer, I'm sure would sell cheap like imported oil. What other country can boast that 1.7 million commercial farms feed and clothe the U.S. and half the Russia subsidizes its farmers 27 to 28 billion a year and invested 290 billion from 1966-76 on their farmers with very little results. Their farm profitability from 1970-1977 fell 70%. The European Common Market countries give their farmers more in subsidies than the U.S. farmers sell their crops for just so they can under bid us on price on the world market.

Can any of the other U.S. industries compete with this practice and survive? The result of farmproduct specialization over the last two decades was that farm productivity increased nearly twice as fast as that of the industrial worker. The average farmer took in nearly 60% of his total income from sources other than farm-

In Mr. Chapman's little scenario, instead of conscientious objectors, they should declare the American farmer an endangered species and open hunting season on farmers with no bag limit and wipe all of us out. The statement that all price support levels have been raised for nearly every crop the government subsidizes is an outright lie. The price support level is not a guaranteed income but a price floor that is less than 60% of cost of production. If the farmer uses the price support to borrow on his crop, he repays storage plus interest and this doesn't cost the taxpayer one red

The total outlay for farm programs is in fact less than 2% of the total budget. Higher price supports have not been what has put farmers in the worse condition in years by encourag-not regulate production to domestic demand because the elements are a factor and there is no coordination among among the producing units. We can cut our production acres but we are not like General Motors, we do not know when we plant seed whether or not it will grow or make a bumper Sure we are not the only people in economic trouble these days. Can any other industry buy retail and sell wholesale? Are our prices too high today or were they too high in 1920 when wheat sold for $2.94 a bushel, cotton 37'/lb. Today cotton is about 48'/lb.

Although I question Mr. Chapman's analysis of our annual income and our net worth, you cannot compare a farmer to a laborer and expect them to have the same income level and be able to replace and update equipment on the same income scale. You cannot compare gross income of my profession to that of any other industry unless you know what my imput costs are. A farmer, farming 4,000 acres, loses just as much per acre as a farmer who farms 1,000, especially if he hires all labor because of shorter machinery life. Large companies or corporations failed because they couldn't compete with the efficiency of the American farmer.

You can't judge from my equipment or home whether it is paid for, a gift or I have an oil well or got rich in the stock market

Mr. Chapman's little article about sugar reminds me of a short memory when about three years ago the floor price to the producer or support price was about eight cents a pound and the

Sure, ... it's rough being the but think of where we'd be if our ing over production. Agriculture canthe price went through the ceiling and buyers boycotted. Would it be better to be at the mercy of other countries to supply our food?

I'm not mad at my city cousins and need their support but I am sick and tired of misinformed people who cuss me with their mouth full. If you doubt my facts I can verify them with USDA fact sheets. Hostile reporting such as Mr. Chapman's only poisons our image and misinforms the public. Sincerely

Litter problem

Dear Editor,

My hat is off to Mr. Tommy Hart for the Editor's Column that was in the paper. Big Spring could be a beautiful town if people would get together and insist that something be done about the people that litter and destroy public and private property.

I would like to see a law passed. Everyone caught littering would have to work 1 or 2 days picking up cans, bottles and trash and anyone caught destroying city signs on any property would have to fix it back just like they found it. Not only our parks but our streets are a disgrace to drive up or down with bottles broke all over them and cans and bottles on all sides.

We the taxpayers have to pay the state or city workers to clean up after them. Don't the city manager or chief of police have any authority in our city? Or who does? They have to kick down your door before you can defend yourself. Get their license plate number, turn it in and see what happens. Someone stole the stop sign on 23rd and Main Saturday night and it still has not been replaced. I reported it Sunday morning.

Out of touch

Dear Editor.

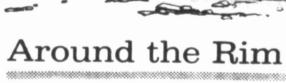

As the political campaigns come down to the finish line, the Republican candidates are becoming more desperate by the day. Most of them have no record to run on, and the few who have a record don't dare mention

Jim Reese, the republican candidate for the Texas State Senate in the 28th District, has become so confused that he is running ads in the newspapers telling everyone that his Democratic opponent is endorsed by labor. This should be a great asset to John Montford's cause.

It seems that Jim has been out of touch with the people for so long that he doesn't realize that the working men and women still out number the fat cats by a ratio of at least 40 to 1.

I am sure that John Montford is very happy to know that the working people of this West Texas area are backing him in this race

A third party to freshen the air

A peek into a crystal ball revealed something startling recently. In the year 2000 there will be, not just two, but three presidential party conven-

By the end of this century, the U.S. political body will consist of three equally strong parties: the Democratic, the Republican and the Third (or as some oldsters may still call it then, the Women's Party.)

The Third Party will be born and survive on its own merits because it will have no connection with what is now loosely called women's liberation or plain lib, male chauvinism and other shrill cliches.

It will be the natural result of several decades of resurgent changes in the status of women, and it will be the equally natural result of a tacit and peaceable acceptance of the plain fact that women are different from

By the end of the tenth decade, the old stridency and anger, and words like "feminist," "militant" and "liberation," will have been discard-ed in a full acceptance of the basic fact that men and women are different. It does not mean that no more females will be good Republicans or Democrats, any more than it does that fine men will not work with and for the Third Party.

IT SIMPLY means that we as a nation will have recognized that, because the approach of the two sexes to religion, sex, love, art, money and politics is completely different, we can use the special inner language of the female mind to help clear up a few ever-present issues like war and peace, corruption and the price of

It seems highly probable that by then we will have agreed, with some relief, that the basic difference between the sexes is a vital asset that can be shaped as such and not distorted or pushed under the rug.

Women's skills in diplomacy, in handling money, in being females instead of imitation males, in language and behavior, can be of value to any country, and especially to one still struggling to emerge from decades of historical puzzlement. In the 1980s it is still believed that most females can be relied on to vote for men whose hair styling they like, or whose face reminds them of their favorite uncle. As many men are believed to favor a candidate who is reputed to tell a darn good story at the local club's smokers.

Probably it is nearer the truth to say that most voters of both sexes think well beyond such cosmetic values, but that women need to reflect less upon what they have read and heard in politics. They dare to rely more upon gut reactions to honesty and strength than clubhouse

FOR CENTURIES, women have almost literally held the purse strings to find food for their households. They continue to feed and clothe their families with bland if dogged assurance.

Women direct industry differently and know in their seemingly simplistic ways how to handle strikes, and even to foment revolutions, in a nonantagonistic fashion.

All this is true because they have continued, through centuries of masculine training, to listen to their own inner vocabularies while doing perforce what men have told them to do - and even learning how to reply gracefully in the dictated formulas of language

They have learned how to sing the way men wish they would, as any great diva can prove. But when women sing their own songs, and write their own phrases, they are dif-

This is true in many arts. Although Mary Cassatt was taught to by men, she painted in a way no man has ever tried to copy. When she got past her assumption of a masculine approach to the palette and its powers, she attained something she never could have reached otherwise.

Men and women work well together, once stripped of their built-in suspicions. The Third Party, based on how the female talks, thinks and acts, will freshen the air and free us from a few more cliches.

Silly fears and frantic rivalries will have changed into a frank agreement that we are instrinsically different but that we can and do collaborate for the common good: each other.

Billy Graham

Starting over

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Is it possible to begin life over all again? I have made such a mess of things that I would give anything to start all over again with a clean slate. - Mrs.

DEAR MRS. B.M.A.: Let me tell you about a woman that Jesus met on one occasion. Her situation may not be identical to yours, but she also had made a mess of her life and desperately needed to start all over again. And that is exactly what happened to her when she met Christ, and the same thing can happen to you.

You can read about her in the fourth chapter of the Gospel of John. She lived in an area known as Samaria, and one day Jesus and his disciples were passing through there. Jesus met her by a well and began to talk with her. Jesus lovingly, yet firmly, made her face her need of forgiveness and new life from God. She had been married five times, and was living outside of marriage with another man. Yet Jesus told her that if she beleived in him and followed him she could have new life. She believed, and her life was changed.

Yes, you can start all over again with a clean slate. How is tis possible? It is not possible by making new resolutions or trying in your own strength to change your life — you have probably tried that and failed. But it is possible with God. God can wipe away the past by forgiving you of your sins, and God can redirect your life as you learn to walk with Christ every day. That does not mean it is always easy to follow Christ instead of our own desires, but he can give us stength and new goals and wisdom if we will but let him.

Right nows I urge you to get on your knees and confess your need of forgiveness to God. Ask Christ to come into your heart and cleanse you, then tell him that by his grace you want to follow him and make him the center of your life. The Bible says, "If anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; the old has gone, the new has come!" (2 Corinthians 5:17). This is the experience of countless people throughout the ages, and it can be yours as well if you will turn to Christ.

Meltdown

The nuclear power industry has had more than its share of headaches in recent years - vocal public opposition, regulatory delays, rising costs and the near-disaster at Three Mile Island. Now it is faced with the legislative equivalent of a meltdown.

The danger comes from an odd source: Sen. Pete Domenici, a New Mexico Republican, who is trying to help the uranium mining industry. A powerful industry in his home state, it is plagued by low prices that have forced widespread layoffs of miners. So he's tucked an arcane amendment into a routine Nuclear Regulatory Commission authorization bill. In the name of national security, it would allow the president to slap quotas on imported uranium if its share of U.S. demand is projected to reach 37.5 percent for any two consecutive years.

What's good for uranium miners would be awful for the nuclear power industry. Increasingly strict safety standards and endless lawsuits have raised its costs at an alarming rate; a restruction on imported uranium would raise them still further. The result would be to make nuclear power even less competitive than today - and possibly to doom it.

Aides to Domenici deny that his amendment establishes an import quota. Hitting the ceiling merely requires the secretary of Commerce to make a study of the "national security" dangers posed by imported uranium. If he finds a threat, the president may then impose duties or outright limits - if he chooses.

But this flexibility is tactical, not philosophical. The only reason Domenici isn't pressing for an automatic quota is that his colleagues wouldn't approve it, particularly since the White House is opposed to such measures. Half a loaf is the best he can hope for. Uranium miners might like to return to the good old days, when federal law banned all uranium imports. That didn't change until 1977, when a phase-out of the ban began. Imports now provide about 14 percent of our domestic needs. Thanks to the price advantage enjoyed by foreign producers, that share is bound to rise. Canada, our biggest outside supplier sells its uranium for $20 or less per pound - compared to anywhere from $24 to $30 for American producers. Australia and South Africa, the two other major sources, enjoy a similar price advantage.

American suppliers, however, have an advantage of their own, namely that their supplies are more reliable than those of producers elsewhere. Political troubles in South Africa could disrupt its production, and there has been talk in Australia of outlawing uranium exports. So presumably utilities will pay some premium for American uranium they know they'll

How much uranium imports will rise is anyone's guess. A Domenici aide notes one study suggesting that they could take 80 percent of the U.S. market by the end of this decade. But the American Nuclear Energy Council, a trade group representing both mining firms and utilities, doubts that they will even attain the trigger level of 37.5 percent. A study for the Department of Energy projected imports at 34 percent of domestic use in Domenici thinks that dependence on foreign uranium is just as dangerous to national security as dependence on foreign oil. Well, why? Since it's cheaper than the homegrown stuff, it keeps electricity bills down. If foreign companies should organize their own OPEC to boost uranium prices, we can use our enormous domestic supplies. The United States has a third of all the world's known uranium reserves. That is also enough to keep producing nuclear weapons, in case anyone is worried about the Pentagon's plutonium needs.

In any case, we're less vulnerable to supply disruptions in uranium thanin oil, because we rely much more heavily on oil. More than 40 percent of all U.S. energy comes from oil and less than 4 percent from nuclear power. There's no practical substitute for oil in transportation, but electricity can be generated by coal, gas, oil and water (in hydroelectric plants). Three-quarters of our electricity comes from non-nucler sources.

Ironically, the same U.S. mining firms that are supporting Domenici are responsible for much of the increase in imports: many have filled their contracts by buying uranium on the spot market, which these days is cheaper than producing it here at home. And the bill won't achieve anything for at least three years, since domestic suppliers can fill that demand out of their inventory.

But there is no danger to Americans from uranium imports and no reason to restrict them. Domenici's amendment is purely a means of propping up American mining companies and providing mining jobs - particularly in New Mexico. Its only value is to validate Chapman's Principle: When doctors mention ethics or politicians talk about "national security," you'd best keep an eye on your wallet.

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau AUSTIN - At a recent fund-raising dinner in the heart of super-conservative Midland County, U.S. Rep. Jim Collins was asked whether the media have been fair to his campaign for the U.S. Senate.

"The press is really rough on conservatives," Collins answered. He then launched an attack on the media for wanting special privileges and pointed out that his opponent, incumbent Lloyd Bentsen, supported legislation to help the nonprofit foundation that owns The Houston

If looks from the audience members could have killed, the reporters sitting at the press table — yours truly, George Kuempel of The Dallas Morning News and some local TV folk - would have been zapped into puddles in our folding chairs.

Probably, it would be difficult to convince some people in the Bentsen camp that I'm not out to destroy their man's hopes for a third term. Some undoubtedly remember a story I wrote about Bentsen arguing for reduced federal spending on the same day he was dedicating a fishing pier financed with a Bentsensupported federal grant.

As election day approaches, the tension between candidates and reporters naturally increases.

In a state as large and diverse as Texas, almost every candidate must rely on the news media to a large extent to get out his or her campaign message.

An exception might be Gov. Bill Clements, who can afford to buy every voter's attention. But even in that super-rich campaign, a lot of effort goes into maximizing press coverage.

Most candidates look for any way to produce a story in the newspapers and a spot on the six o'clock news. It's part of the campaign strategy, and, of course, they want favorable stories about themselves and unfavorable ones

Paintings bring lofty prices

HOUSTON (AP) — A print of John James Audubon's painting of the great blue heron sold for $26,000 Saturday, failing to break a price record set the previous night when an Austin physician paid $32,000 for the naturalist's depiction of a male wild turkey.

"That rather restores the order," auctioneer Nicholas Stogdon said. "Traditionally the turkey's always been the most expensive.

Stogdon declined to release the buyer's name immediately. Dr. C. Dale Parker set the new price record Friday night. He paid $35,200 including the seller's premium. The great blue heron had brought $33,000, including the premium, at a 1980 sale in New York, where the turkey sold for only $20,000, Parker said. The auction of 291 of the 434 hand-colored engravings, made between 1827 and 1838 for inclusion in Audubon's folio "Birds in America," had raised about $900,000 by mid-afternoon Saturday, Stogdon said.

Officials of Christie's, the art firm conducting the auction, had predicted the sale would bring between $800,000 and $1.2 million. "We had quite a lot of spectacular prices," Stogdon said. Both the Louisiana heron and the Canada goose brought $20,000. A trumpeter swan surprised everyone by bringing $30,000. "I'd never have guessed that one," auctioneer Stephen Massey said. The presale estimate predicted a price between $7,000 and $9,000.

The long-billed curlew print, which showed the city of Charleston, S.C., in the background, was sold for $19,000, Stogdon said. The snowy heron — "with a portrait of John James himself" - sold for $18,000.

John Connally, former governor of Texas and former secretary of the Treasury, bought two prints, bidding $1,650 each for a plate with the mountain mockingbird and the varied thrush and for a plate with the evening grosbeak and the spotted grosbeak. The 27-by-40-inch prints are being sold by the Delaware

Art Museum. The engravings were given to the museum by Francis V. DuPont.

Robert Seaver, coordinator of sales outside New York for the auction firm Christie's, said about 165 complete sets of the folio were made and approximately 130 are known to exist. He said 420 of the prints in this set had never been bound or trimmed for inclusion in a book.

The turkey is the first picture in the folio. It and the great blue heron are among four birds which each cover

Bob Frankel, director of the Delaware Art Museum, said the collection is being sold because his faciliy lacks room to display it.

"This will create an accessions fund which will allow us to make other purchases," he said.

"It seemed appropriate to hold this auction in Texas where we know many people are interested in these works acclaimed by artists, scientists and collectors for more than 140 years," said David Bathurst, president of

Q. We've waited for the housing market to improve to sell our home. Now that I believe the time is near, how do I determine the best selling price?

A. You are right in giving this question a great deal of thought. An in-flated price tag benefits no one; you lose time and money, prospective buyers shy away from a house that is way over their price range and your broker can't aggressively promote the sale of overpriced property. Also, if the house remains on the market too long and you eventually reduce the price, prospective buyers may think there is something wrong with the house. Because your broker has built his business on know-how, customer satisfaction and market trends, use this expert in the important matter of

"Finally, I started getting a little curious," Mrs. Bryan said. "I finally said, 'You can't have my labels. I'm going to do it myself.

"Everybody we told about it said that it was too much hassle. But most consumers will do anything they can to save a buck.

So it wasn't long before requests for the Salvage and Save Gazette - a 24-page magazine that every two months lists several dozen refund offers and publishes advertisments from readers wanting to trade coupons and refund slips - began coming into the Garland home, Mrs. Bryan said.

But relatively few shoppers began subscribing until Mrs. Bryan begin telling her inflation-fighting story on television talk shows like ABC'S Good Morning America, NBC's Real People and Donahue.

The idea of making money — or at least paying relatively little - on the family grocery shopping trip obviously is attractive. For the Donahue segment Mrs. Bryan bought $191 in groceries for 52 cents. And she likes to tell about the time she bought 24 rolls of paper towels for a net profit of $1.26. The Bryans don't often save that much money on shopping trips, but it isn't impossible to do when you consider that the family saves empty packages religiously and only shops on double-value coupon days at grocery stores that offer refund slips. Mrs. Bryan claims save to up to $150 on

Of course, she couldn't return to Braniff even if she wanted to now that the airline has suspended operations. But Mrs. Bryan said she has had offers to take jobs outside the home. And some people have suggested she open an office for her mailing service.

AUSTIN - Republican Fred Thornberry calls his opponent, Jim Hightower, a "charlatan" backed by "liberal agitator groups." Hightower responds that Thornberry is "seriously dumb.

Harsh words in a campaign for agriculture commissioner, by all accounts one of the most boring jobs in the Texas state government.

But the race to determine who gets to calibrate gasoline pumps and inspect sweet potatoes has produced the best campaign rhetoric, faux pas and one-liners of an otherwise routine political season in the Lone

Democrat Hightower, 39, former editor of the liberal weekly Texas Observer, has emerged as a kind of born-again redneck and standup comic. He says things like, "If you were to lay all the experts end to end, it would be a good thing.

His staff calls him "Whole Hog." Thornberry, 45, is a Texas A&M alumnus and chicken expert who quotes German philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche in his campaign press releases. He entered the race after Hightower defeated state Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown in the Democratic primary on May 1.

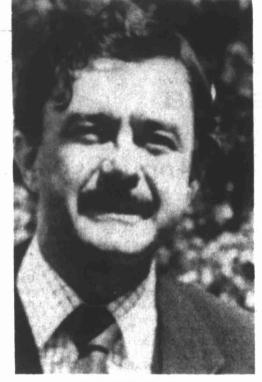

Brown was no slouch at making headlines,

He once accidentally cut off a finger with a chain saw while building a "Safety on the Farm" exhibtion booth. He battled the fire ant with such religious fervor that stuck his hand in an ant hole so television cameramen could get footage of him being stung.

Just before the primary, Brown stumbled before TV cameras when he referred to renowned educator Booker T. Washington as "that great black nigger.

In the primary campaign, Brown traveled the state charging that Hightower's support came from "socialistic punks up East." But Hightower soundly defeated Brown by promising to save family farms and reduce supermarket prices.

"There's a lot more to being agriculture commissioner than putting a straw in your mouth and humming 'Thank God I'm a Country Boy'," Hightower says. It's a line he used against Brown, and he likes it so much he has revived it for the campaign against

Hightower says he wants to use the job to influence farm legislation in Washington, but Thornberry — as Brown did in the primary warns that Hightower is a "political opportunist" who is seeking a steppingstone to higher office and who would turn the state agriculture department into "a training ground for political radicals. Hightower, once an aide to liberal former Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Texas, ran a losing campaign for state railroad commissioner four years ago as a "populist." He has written two books on agricultural policy, "Eat Your Heart Out" and "Hard Tomatoes,

This year, Hightower is believed to be the beneficiary of voter discontent over record farm bankruptcies, idled grain elevators and low farm prices, and is regarded as a shoo-in to succeed Brown.

"It's time to raise less corn and more hell," Hightower says, as he lambastes President Reagan and Republican economics.

"Old Ronnie Reagan is sitting up there eating caviar and sipping Cabernet Sauvignon," he tells farm audiences. "We've had about as much Reaganomics as we can stand. 'Reaga-mortis' is beginning to set in out there in the countryside.

Thornberry accuses Hightower of using false or misleading statistics to exaggerate the plight of farmers and consumers. He is, says the GOP candidate, "a charlatan who uses the populist label to camouflage his strong ties with the AFL-CIO and with liberal agitator groups on both the East and West

Replies Hightower: "Thornberry says there is no exodus from the farms. You've got to be seriously dumb to make a comment like that. Everytime he stands up, his mind sits

Wolf Brand Chili cans are recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas company has voluntarily recalled nearly 2,500 cases of canned chili that may contain food poisoning organisms, the Agriculture Department said Friday.
Officials said the 15-ounce cans are labeled Wolf Brand

Chili Without Beans and were produced by Wolf Brand Products, Corsicana, Texas.

Merlin A. Nelson of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service said two lots of the suspected chili were produced on Aug. 2 and distributed in Texas and

No illnesses have been reported, he said.

The cans can be identified by the code numbers PC2H2 and AC2H2, and the official establishment number, 1057, which are embossed on their lids. No other codes or products made by the company are involved in the recall. Consumers who have bought the canned chili should return it to the store where purchased. "Under no circumstances should the product be opened or eaten, even if it looks and smells normal," Nelson said. The problem was brought to the agency's attention after a distributor in Garland, Texas, reported swollen cans. Tests at USDA laboratories "confirmed the presence of clostridia-type organisms which could be of potential public health significance," the announcement said. Clostridia-type organisms includes those which can produce botulism, a deadly form of food poisoning. However, a spokeswoman, Karen Stuck, said the kind of organisms found in the chili were not the type which result

By this summer the subscription list built to 4,000 and tripled after Mrs. Bryan's July appearance on the Phil Donahue Show in

'We just wanted to have an outlet," Mrs. Bryan said of the newsletter as she fed her eight-month-old daughter lunch. One of two full-time secretaries filed through a subscription list at the kitchen table.

Mrs. Lawson was making $80 to $90 a month, turning in proof-of-purchase labels from empty packages when Mrs. Bryan became interested

"Finally, I started getting a little curious," Mrs. Bryan said. "I finally said, 'You can't have my labels. I'm going to do it myself.

"Everybody we told about it said that it was too much hassle. But most consumers will do anything they can to save a buck."

So it wasn't long before requests for the Salvage and Save Gazette - a 24-page magazine that every two months lists several dozen refund offers and publishes advertisments from readers wanting to trade coupons and refund slips — began coming into the Garland home, Mrs. Bryan said.

But relatively few shoppers began subscribing until Mrs. Bryan begin telling her inflation-fighting story on television talk shows like ABC'S Good Morning America, NBC's Real People and Donahue.

The idea of making money — or at least paying relatively little - on the family grocery shopping trip obviously is attractive. For the Donahue segment Mrs. Bryan bought $191 in groceries for 52 cents. And she likes to tell about the time she bought 24 rolls of paper towels for a net profit of $1.26.

The Bryans don't often save that much money on shopping trips, but it isn't impossible to do when you consider that the family saves empty packages religiously and only shops on double-value coupon days at grocery stores that offer refund slips.

Mrs. Bryan claims save to up to $150 on refunding and another $80 with coupons.

"It's almost a racket, but it's a way for the consumer to save some money and do it at home," she said. "People are fools if they

She demonstrates little patience for other women who don't show some of her zeal. A Fort Worth woman wrote the newsletter, complaining that her husband had thrown away the packages she was saving for refunds because Mrs. Bryan had not replied to an earlier letter with ideas for filing the empty boxes

"What a wimpy broad that couldn't figure out how to file away labels?" Mrs. Bryan

Mrs. Bryan used the money she saved from refunding to buy a $5,400 Apple home computer that turns out 75,000 to 80,000 mailing labels a month for Dallas-area business. "I didn't even know how to turn on a computer when I got it," she said. But now she has trained a half-dozen other women to operate terminals of their own and the business has expanded. So the money the refunding is saving the family now is "a drop in the bucket," she acknowledged. She and Mrs. Lawson still keep up with the coupon clipping and label saving, however, she said. "We have to know what we're doing for the newsletter.

"It really does work and for people who don't have a lot I can't imagine their excuses for not doing it," she said.

Of course, she couldn't return to Braniff even if she wanted to now that the airline has suspended operations. But Mrs. Bryan said she has had offers to take jobs outside the home. And some people have suggested she open an office for her mailing service. She won't have anything to do with it.

'That would cancel out everything I started it for." she said.

By KATHY BAKER Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN - Republican Fred Thornberry calls his opponent, Jim Hightower, a "charlatan" backed by "liberal agitator groups." Hightower responds that Thornberry is "seriously dumb."

Harsh words in a campaign for agriculture commissioner, by all accounts one of the most boring jobs in the Texas state government.

But the race to determine who gets to calibrate gasoline pumps and inspect sweet potatoes has produced the best campaign rhetoric, faux pas and one-liners of an otherwise routine political season in the Lone

Democrat Hightower, 39, former editor of the liberal weekly Texas Observer, has emerged as a kind of born-again redneck and standup comic. He says things like, "If you were to lay all the experts end to end, it would be a good thing.

His staff calls him "Whole Hog." Thornberry, 45, is a Texas A&M alumnus and chicken expert who quotes German philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche in his campaign press releases. He entered the race after Hightower defeated state Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown in the Democratic primary on May 1.

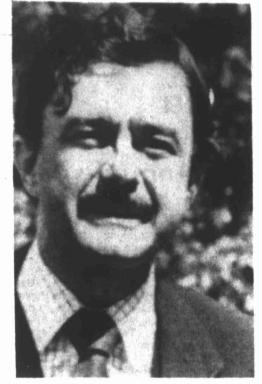

Brown was no slouch at making headlines,

He once accidentally cut off a finger with a chain saw while building a "Safety on the Farm" exhibtion booth. He battled the fire ant with such religious fervor that stuck his hand in an ant hole so television cameramen could get footage of him being stung.

Just before the primary, Brown stumbled before TV cameras when he referred to renowned educator Booker T. Washington as 'that great black nigger.

In the primary campaign, Brown traveled the state charging that Hightower's support came from "socialistic punks up East." But Hightower soundly defeated Brown by promising to save family farms and reduce supermarket prices

"There's a lot more to being agriculture commissioner than putting a straw in your mouth and humming 'Thank God I'm a Country Boy'," Hightower says. It's a line he used against Brown, and he likes it so much he has revived it for the campaign against Hightower says he wants to use the job to influence farm legislation in Washington, but Thornberry — as Brown did in the primary warns that Hightower is a "political opportunist" who is seeking a steppingstone to higher office and who would turn the state agriculture department into "a training ground for political radicals.'

Hightower, once an aide to liberal former Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Texas, ran a losing campaign for state railroad commissioner four years ago as a "populist." He has written two books on agricultural policy, "Eat Your Heart Out" and "Hard Tomatoes,

This year, Hightower is believed to be the beneficiary of voter discontent over record farm bankruptcies, idled grain elevators and low farm prices, and is regarded as a shoo-in

"It's time to raise less corn and more hell." Hightower says, as he lambastes President Reagan and Republican economics.

"Old Ronnie Reagan is sitting up there eating caviar and sipping Cabernet Sauvignon," he tells farm audiences. "We've had about as much Reaganomics as we can stand. 'Reaga-mortis' is beginning to set in out there in the countryside.

Thornberry accuses Hightower of using false or misleading statistics to exaggerate the plight of farmers and consumers. He is, says the GOP candidate, "a charlatan who uses the populist label to camouflage his strong ties with the AFL-CIO and with liberal agitator groups on both the East and West

Replies Hightower: "Thornberry says there is no exodus from the farms. You've got to be seriously dumb to make a comment like that. Everytime he stands up, his mind sits

Wolf Brand Chili cans are recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Texas company has voluntarily recalled nearly 2,500 cases of canned chili that may contain food poisoning organisms, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

Officials said the 15-ounce cans are labeled Wolf Brand Chili Without Beans and were produced by Wolf Brand Products, Corsicana, Texas.

Merlin A. Nelson of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service said two lots of the suspected chili were produced on Aug. 2 and distributed in Texas and

No illnesses have been reported, he said. The cans can be identified by the code numbers PC2H2 and AC2H2, and the official establishment number, 1057, which are embossed on their lids. No other codes or products made by the company are involved in the recall. Consumers who have bought the canned chili should return it to the store where purchased. "Under no circumstances should the product be opened or eaten, even if it looks and smells normal," Nelson said.

The problem was brought to the agency's attention after a distributor in Garland, Texas, reported swollen cans. Tests at USDA laboratories "confirmed the presence of clostridia-type organisms which could be of potential public health significance," the announcement said. Clostridia-type organisms includes those which can produce botulism, a deadly form of food poisoning. However, a spokeswoman, Karen Stuck, said the kind of organisms found in the chili were not the type which result

Rumors are running rampant on the campus that Bryan Stringer is receiving outside help on the weekly megaphone. It would seem a logical assumption as it is a well-known fact that Bryan's vocabulary only credits 50 words to his usage. So lets put all rumors to rest. ### Arm chopped off, but he survives

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — For nearly five hours Robert Renfrow lay unconscious under a broiling July

His arm had been chopped off at the shoulder by a hay bailer and he was severely sunburned.

Doctors gave the 42-year-old Locksburg, Ark., farmer a two percent chance of survival, said Dr. Michael Blankenship, one of four physicians who treated him at Wadley Regional Medical Center. But Renfrow beat the odds.

He was discharged this week from Wadely, without an arm, but otherwise fully recovered.

The accident happened July 24, Renfrow said slowly. Gently combing his sandy hair, his wife Laverne helped him reconstruct the events. Renfrow said his long-sleeved shirt got caught in the

"I don't know how long it (the arm) stayed," he said. The powerful machine also clasped Renfrow's face and trunk to it, Mrs. Renfrow said. "I just knew something had happened by the time I got there," she said.

Renfrow said he had managed to crawl closer to the road, hoping people would see him, but it was four or five hours before his wife found him.

He was first taken by ambulance to De Queen General Hospital and then transferred to Wadley where he spent most of his stay in the Surgical Intensive Care Unit.

"He certainly was in the thoes of death," Blanken-

Within a day of his arrival at Wadley, his kidneys gave out, the doctor said.

Renfrow underwent daily dialysis and was treated with a new antibiotic because of a resistant bacteria infecting his blood.

"Within a few days, he started to bleed from the (amputated) arm. We had to transfuse him a lot," the Renfrow also had seizures, which may have resulted from the July accident or from a fall on his had about two years earlier, the physician said.

Mrs. Renfrow is a little anxious about her husband

"He's been gone three months. I'm nervous in a sense. The responsibility is mine now. Down here he had doctors and nurses.'

Sometime after Jan. 1, Renfrow will probably be fitted with an artificial arm, Mrs. Renfrow said. By the spring he should be able to do what he used to do, she said — "bail our hay, tend his own cows. He'll pick up where he left off before.

LIFESAVER - Former weightlifter George Winkleman yanks open the door of a burning truck cab to save the trapped driver, John Perry, minutes before the cab became engulfed in flames. The rescue occurred near Indianapolis Friday

Dramatic rescue

Man saves fellow trucker from flaming wreck

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A former weightlifter helped rip the steering column from the cab of a burning truck and freed the trapped driver minutes before flames engulfed the cab, police said.

"I was scared to death," said George L. Winkleman, 29, of Morristown, who pulled his own truck across two lanes of Interstate 70 traffic Friday to go to the aid of John Perry, 39, Dayton, Ohio.

Winkleman pulled his rig to the curb, ran to Perry's overturned semi and began tugging on the door.

"I could see the flames come up around his face," he said. "I didn't want to see this man burn.

The door was pulled off with a chain attached to another truck, and Winkleman wrapped a chain around the steering column so it also could be pulled

Police said Perry veered into the median of the interstate to avoid another motorist, and his truck hit a drainage ditch, tipped over and burst into flames.

Winkleman said he knew as he was slowing his rig the other trucker was trapped, and noticed small flames emerging from spilled fuel.

"It was just a snap thing. I saw the thing turn over, and I stopped," he said

State police said the rescue took about five minutes. Afterward, Winkleman got back in his truck and "They were calling me a hero or man of the hour. It makes me feel funny," he said.

Perry was listed in critical condition in Methodist Hospital with second-and third-degree burns

Upset rancher to leave missile base

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — An 81year-old rancher left this top-secret U.S. Army base Saturday, ending a standoff that began four days ago when he gathered guns and food and went to reclaim his homestead

Dave McDonald and his niece, Mary McDonald, left the range about 10:30 a.m. after meeting with two members of New Mexico's congressional delegation, a state legislator and the state's Cattle Growers Association president, said White Sands spokesman Jim Eckles.

The McDonalds sneaked on to the missile-testing facility land early Wednesday morning and set up camp at an old homestead McDonald says the Army took from him 40 years ago. The Army ordered them to leave but the McDonalds refused.

McDonald's departure was a relief to Army officials, Eckles said.

'Now we can get back to business,' he said. Eckles wasn't sure if the McDonalds would be prosecuted for going onto the restricted range. That decision, he said, would be made by base commander Maj. Gen. Niles Fulwyler.

Eckles said Fulwyler agreed to send letters to the Defense Department "informing them of Mr. McDonald's

The rancher was angered by a dispute over his claim to the ranch. The Army took the land in 1942 for a bombing range and the atomic bomb development program known as the Manhattan Project. For years, McDonald was paid for the lease on the desolate grasslands.

But in 1980, lease extensions expired and the U.S. Corps of Engineers began eminent domain hearings in which the land was condemned and McDonald was to be paid.

McDonald has not received lease payments and or withdrawn any money from the $35,000 escrow account the corps placed with the federal district court clerk, although some of his relatives apparently have withdrawn about $22,000, said corps spokeswoman Kay Peterson. McDonald had asked $960,000 for the 640 acres, or about

$1,500 an acre. The dispute remains with the federal court, which Eckles said is trying to reach a middle ground through an appraisal committee. The McDonalds were armed with two rifles, an old pistol and provisions for a month when they drove onto the range in two pickup trucks. But in talks with Army officials, McDonald agreed not to use his weapons.

They refused several times to leave the area. Army officials served papers on McDonald on Thursday and repeated their demands Friday, to no avail.

The group that helped bring the stalemate to an end included Rep. Joe Skeen and Sen. Harrison "Jack" Schmitt, both Republicans. The others were state Rep. James Martin of Socorro and Bob Jones, president of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association.

Klan clashes near Boston City Hall

BOSTON (AP) — Two dozen robed Ku Klux Klan members were taken away in police vans Saturday after a screaming mob of 1,000 people broke up a Klan rally in front of Boston City Hall.

At least 13 people were injured in the resulting confrontation between protesters and police, authorities said.

Police Superintendent John F. Geagan said police decided to remove the Klan members for their own safety. He said the Klansmen were taken back to their cars and Police spokesman Brian McMasters said two men were arrested at the scene, one on charges of disorderly conduct and the other on charges of illegal possession of a switchblade.

The Klan rally was called by Bill Wilkinson, the imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, after he was attacked during a television talk show Thursday.

Wilkinson, 40, of Denham Springs, La., and Angie Stringer, a member of the KKK Youth Corps, were pelted with eggs during the live "People Are Talking" show on

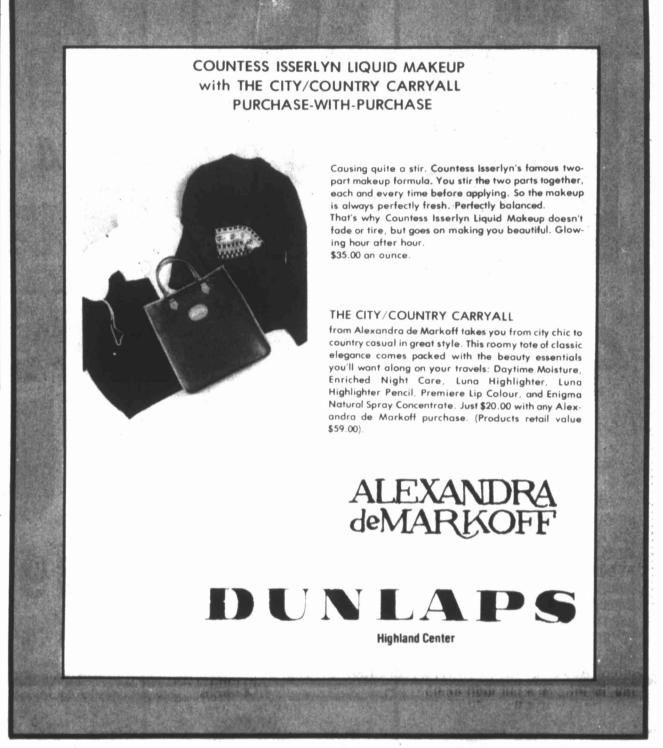

Wilkinson was punched by one demonstrator and said he was kicked by another person. The Klan leader filed a complaint against three people Friday in Brighton

His call for a demonstration sparked plans for counterdemonstrations by groups that included the International Committee Against Racism, which claimed responsibility for disrupting the television show.

A racially mixed crowd of about 400 people, ranging from priests and nuns to teen-agers, rallied at Government Center in downtown Boston an hour before the scheduled Klan rally.

The crowd grew, with demonstrators waving signs reading, "Death to the KKK" and "The KKK Shoots To Kill, The FBI Foots The Bill.

Geagan said the 22 Klan members, wearing white hoods and robes, marched to the plaza under police escort and were escorted through the crowd.

Putt Choate: Football past, present, future

Putt Choate is ready to play some football again. And he doesn't have to wait on the pros to do it, either.

Choate has been busy in the past few weeks organizing a semipro football team for oil czar Grady Cunningham. After watching the West Texas Stockmen fold, spindle and otherwise mutilate the confidence of area football fans, Cunningham has given Choate a free hand — and oversized wallet — to put together a legitimate organization.

The Oilers (of the Cunningham variety) seem to be the lead for Choate to return to football. Since a broken leg sidelined his rookie year with the Atlanta Falcons and things didn't work out with Oilers (of the Houston variety), Choate has been away from the game he played so well in high school and college.

A standout at Coahoma, this hard-hitter went on to become a two-time all-SWC choice and AP all-American his senior year. Without football, he turned to power-lifting and became one of the top 50 in the nation. But he got tired of the total abuse the sport put on his body and has retired.

Lifting all that weight built up his legs and now that he's training again, he's just as fast — if not faster — than he was in college. Working out with the Oilers, he's feeling like his old mean self, that self who refused to let running backs or quarterbacks get more than an inch a play.

Already the Denver Gold (coached by Red Miller) and the Boston Breakers (coached by Dick Corley) of the United States Football League have made contract offers. And now with the NFL players striking, he may be a hot item again.

His recent interest has been with "Putt's Olympic Gym," and he has one each in Odessa and Midland. He also worked for an oil company before Cunningham hired him as the Oilers' GM.

Besides building the Oilers into a legitimate business operation, Choate has kept on eye on the NFL strike, entering its fourth Sunday today.

"As an ex-player, I definitely feel like football players are worth more money than they're making right now," he says. "Unless you are Terry Bradshaw or someone, they are grossly underpaid as a professional athlete. $40 or 50,000 in the real world is a lot of money but for the pro athlete who plays for an average of four years, that's not much money."

But that's are far as Choate goes. "What they're asking for is totally ridiculous. I'm against that 100 per cent. You know who it's hurting? The second and third year guys. Upshaw Gene is making what...$150,000...it's not hurting him. But a guy like Tony Dickerson — a friend of mine from SMU - who's hurting. The second, third and fourth year guys who get a new car and nice $150,000 house and are married and have a couple of kids. They're not getting paid right now and it's hurting."

He doesn't want to see free agency dominate football like it has other sports. "I don't see how Dave Winfield is worth $1 million or Moses Malone $2 million a year. Gosh almighty," he shakes his head.

Does he think football will return this fall?

"I think this season is over. If it's not settled in two weeks, it's over," he said Monday. He said when contract talks go public, it's a sure sign negotiations are logjammed. "Things have to be settled in the back room...in private." And it seems negotiators took his advice this week.

He adds the players are not 100 per cent behind union negotiator Ed Garvey. "It's bad for football. This is the worst of all possible years to go on strike because the nation is in economic turmoil," he said. Looking ahead, he thinks the strike will clean some house in the NFL and give the USFL a new look. "I wasn't a member of the union when I was with Atlanta because it's an open-shop state," he added. "I caught a lot of flack for that. It was mostly because the dues were too high," he laughed.

One thing Putt Choate is serious about though is his association with football. Pro or sendpro, he's returning to his native environment. And soon.

Zealous Cougars claw lethargic Steers, 37-15

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

ABILENE - Players with sweat-mopped heads and grass-stained jerseys ringed the Big Spring dressing room in tomb-like silence. All that could be heard were muffled victory chants seeping through the walls from the Cooper Cougars locker room, a hard reminder of what had just taken place on the turf at P.E. Shotwell

The Steers had just learned a valuable lesson. Utilizing both the pass and the run as big plays, the Cougars piled up 310 total yards and got three short touchdown dives from Allen Gunter to corral the Steers 37-15 before a crowd of 7,000 here Friday night

The win by the Coogs snapped a four-game losing streak and capped homecoming ceremonies before an enthusiastic crowd. Big Spring dropped to 4-3 for the year and an even 2-2 markin district while Cooper surged to 2-5 and 1-

"We didn't come over here ready to play I guess," said defensive tackle Monty Lamb when the silence broke. "I tell you what. Starting tomorrow I'm going to work my butt off to get ready for Lee.

"I can't believe we came over here overcondifent " continued linebacker Danny Stephen. "I guess the defense expected them to lay down for us. It's good to be confident but we were overconfident.

Thus, the Steers - only moments after absorbing their hardest loss of the year - had learned their lesson.

On the other side of the coin, the Cougars cast aside their lackluster play of late and showed signs of their old selves. Cooper executed the big play when it was needed and that impressed Big Spring coach Quinn Eudy

'They didn't do anything out of the ordinary," Eudy said, "but they executed better than we did. That was the difference. This team has the best talent of any team we've played this year."

The third quarter performance of the Cougars turned a heated battle into a one-sided affair.

A poor start on the opening kickoff return by Eric Sherman put Big Spring in a hole and the Steers couldn't get out. Jay Pirkle punted out of trouble but Cougar Bill Aldridge returned to the

On third and short from the 24, quarterback Tommy Tarr looked for Scott Kendrick and found him open over two Steer defenders. First and goal at the one. The ball went to the bullish Gunter and Cooper had a 22-9 lead after Dan Worsham's extra point kick

Later in the quarter, Cooper started in Steer country again after a punt and personal foul on Big Spring. Tarr passed 12 yards to Mike≰rnold and then kept it himself for 14 yards to the seven. On third down from the five, he floated a pass over Sherman to Derrick Wilson in the right corner of the end zone and the Cougar's had turned the game into a landslide with one quarter to play.

While the Coogs didn't do as much different on offense as predicted, their extra point tries were another story. Twice Cooper succeeded on a trick play with Gunter running in a two point conversion. With the center, holder and Worsham lined up in front of the goal posts, the rest of the team huddled off to the side. The ball was quickly snapped to Gunter who ran past the napping Steers.

The first half was a free-for-all of activity Both teams missed early chances of taking full control of the ballgame

On Cooper's very first play, Tarr lobbed a short out pass that cornerback Scott Eggleston read perfectly, intercepted at the 40 and returned to the Cougar nine. Three plays netted a come to play. While Cooper had twice as many penalties in the game as Big Spring, Big Spring errors played an important part in setting up Cougar scores A late hit charged after the kickoff set up Cooper at the Steer 46. Gunter bulled straight ahead for 11 yards and then Tarr - showing none of the slow motion that critics have noticed recently - cut inside on an option and dashed 31 yards to the Steer 4. On third and one, Gunter scored. He scored again seconds later on the first

Big Spring had a second big chance near the end of the quarter. Pirkle punted out-of-bounds at the Cougar one and the defense poised for a strong stand successful conversion trickery and Cooper led 8-

But Gunter got 16 yards on a draw and Tarr passed 18 yards to Allen Colyer and the Coogs were out of trouble. The drive continued downfield further when Tarr fired a short pass just over the fingertips of Stephen and into the hands of Kendrick who then escaped to the Steer seven. On fourth and one, Gunter dove and was stopped. He rolled over the stack, however, and had his second touchdown. Worsham kicked this time and Cooper led 15-3 with nine minutes left in the quarter.

Midway through the period, Big Spring got going. Starting at their own 14. Dean Gartman entered the game and got a first down on a keeper. He passed 15 vards to Dale Crenshaw and nine to John Roeiner. On third and two from his 49, he kept again. After getting six yards and about to be wrapped up and tossed to Stephen who went 17 more steps.

A spearing call on Cooper put the ball at the 13 with 2:54 to go. The momentum fizzled when Sherman was nailed by Kent Strain for a five yard loss. Again Big Spring had to try the field goal but Green's 32-yard effort was short with 1:26 to go

Brews tie up Series

Gorman Thomas and Robin Yount each drove in two runs in Milwaukee's six-run seventh inning, and the Brewers, their backs to the wall once again, charged to a 7-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday to even baseball's 79th World Series at two games apiece.

Trailing 5-1, the Brewers were headed for a third loss in four 1982 World Series games — a deficit from which only four teams have recovered — when they sent 12 men to the plate in the seventh

"Hopefully, this will give us a lift for the rest of the Series," said Paul Molitor, who walked and eventually scored the tying run in Milwaukee's big inning. "We didn't want to be staring into a situation of having to win three in a row

Such a predicament would have been nothing new. They had to beat Baltimore on the last day of the regular season - after losing three in a row to the Orioles - to win the American League East. They did.

In the AL playoffs, the Brewers fell behind West champion California 0-2 and had to win three straight games for their first American League pennant

'The attitude of this team very seldom changes, no matter what the situation," said Yount, whose two-run, check-swing single drew the Brewers to within one run, 5-

When you play in a World Series, every game is important," Yount continued. 'This took this game the same as any, with the attitude that we want to win.'

Former All-American huddles up semipros

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

Whatever happened to the West Texas Stockmen, you ask? Putt Choate knows but he would rather people orget that fiasco and support the new semipro team he has organized for this part of West Texas.

The Cunningham Oilers opened play last night in Oklahoma City, playing the first of seven games for this fall. The team is being backed financially by wealthy oilman Grady Cunningham and Choate, the former all-American at SMU and NFL journeyman, serving as the organization's first general manager.

The idea of a semipro team was first proposed during the summer by Clifford Barnes but he failed miserably with the idea. Cunningham thought enough of the plan to salvage it and asked the former Coahoma High football standout to head things up.

"He called me up and asked me if a viable project is backed properly, would it work and can you run it?" Choate recalls. But he already had his hands full running two health spas and working an oil-related job. He told me to quit my job and makes this my job. Now I'm the general manager

And so semipro football returned to this area. The nucleus of the team are former Stockmen but Choate will now accept players with a minimum of two years college experience. Almost 100 players came out for the team but the traveling squad has been cut down to the 40-45 level. The Oilers went before the BSHS School Board

Thursday hoping to gain access to Memorial Stadium. And if the crowds are good here, the team will play in "If the support is here, we'll stay here," Choate promised. "If we give them a good product to see, all we ask is for them to support us and we'll be here. The organization is honoring those fans buying advertisements and-or tickets for the Stockmen. Tickets for the Nov. 20 (Dallas Texans), Nov. 27 (Oklahoma City) and Dec. 4 (Dallas Outlaws) home games will be near the $4 mark.

The Oilers are members of the United Football Teams of America, picking up the schedule of a team in Shreveport, La. which went out of business.

Next year, the Oilers will go through a series of preseason tryouts that will narrow the field of candidates quickly. "We want to run it really professionally,"

Choate will coach the defense along with former Texas Tech receiver Don Earl. Buck Bucola is the offensive coordinator with Rhiny Williams helping with the linemen. All but Bucola (formerly with Phildelphia Eagles) will play and coach.

A SMILE OF CONFIDENCE ... Putt Choate likes semipros' future

BUFFALO INTO THE OPEN - Forsan running back Brad Jenkins (21) bursts into the clear for a good gainer Friday night against Roscoe. The Plowboys, however, scored late in the game and nipped the Buffs 21-18 in a key District 7-A game.

Ybarra lifts Sands by Roby

ROBY - Santos Ybarra ran for a twopoint conversion with 1:20 left in the game to lift the Sands Mustangs to a thrilling 14-13 victory over the Roby Lions here Friday

The win evens the Mustangs at 1-1 in league play while Roby drops to 0-2. Sands is now 6-1 for the year, doubling their previous high win total in 11-man football. Roby falls to 3-4 with the loss.

Sands trailed 13-0 after three quarters but finally got on the scoreboard with 6:30 left to play when Alden Franco passed 37 yards to Johnny Rodriquez. The kick was blocked, leaving Sands seven points down.

Roby took the kickoff and gained one first down before quarterback John Ethridge fumbled the football away to Chris Wigington at the Mustang 40. The Mustangs used nine plays on the winning touchdown drive, mixing up both the pass and the run.

A big play was a three and eight completion of 14 yards from Franco to Rodriguez. That put the ball at the Lion 28 and seconds later, Ybarra burst to the seven. Robby Creswell got the touchdown on a three-yard dive, setting the stage for the

the first half, each coming on a big play against the Mustangs.

With five minutes left in the first quarter, Benny Putnam ran by defensive overpursuit

The Lions held Creswell to his first sub-100 yard game of the year as the junior back managed just 61 yards on 23 carries. Ybarr took up some of the slack with 67 yards but the story was Franco who hit 10 of 17 throws for 188 yards. It was the best passing performance of the year for the Mustangs.

After Sands scored with 1:20 to go, the Roby had scored both its touchdowns in Mustangs squib-kicked and Roby had its final try at midfield. Four passes by Ethridge, however, went incomplete.

Sands hosts Roscoe — 21-18 winner over Forsan - this Friday

FORSAN - It was an outcome you wouldn't dare predict before the last seconds. Both the Forsan Buffaloes and the Roscoe Plowboys were hungry. Both considered it a must-win. But it was Roscoe that came out ahead in the end Friday night, edging Forsan 21-18.

The win pushes Roscoe's record to 5-2 and drops Forsan to 4-2-1.

The Buffaloes didn't give the game away. They kicked off to Roscoe and Jimmy Cannon recovered a Plowboy fumble two plays later. Forsan drove the ball 40 yards in 6 plays to move ahead 6-0 with a long 8:19 to play in the first quarter.

Here is where the Buffaloes met their stumbling block for the game. Forsan was unable to convert a conversion play in three attempts. When the game is lost by three points, it's obvious how much those misses hurt.

The Plowboys came right back after that first touchdown and launched a scoring drive of their own Junior running back Rudy Guzman. who could not be stopped all night, picked up 19, 15 and 11 yards in three plays and then grabbed an 8-yard pass from quarterback Matt Denman to tie the score with 2:47 to

But Tommy Williams' kick was on target, and Roscoe moved ahead 7-6. Forsan struck first, but they would be chasing all night.

Roscoe held the Buffaloes and have done all season, to 197 yards total rushing. Quarterback Todd East attempted six passes, but was only able to connect with one, gaining 16 yards in the air. Neither team, however, came to the field looking to pass the ball. Roscoe completed four of 10 passes, East carried the ball but chalked up only 28 yards.

Instead, the Plowboys ran. Forsan scored again on the first possession of the second quarter. From their own 10 yard line East moved the Buffaloes slowly, until Bristow found Roscoe's first defensive hole of the night and broke for a 43-yard run to place the ball on the 38

Two plays later Bristow caught East's 16 yard pass and Lewis Boeker followed with a 14-yard escape to put the Buffaloes at the Plowboys' door. East got the ball across, but Bristow's pass on the two-point conversion try missed its mark. The half ended with Forsan leading by 12-7.

A short Forsan punt set the Plowboys up for a score early in the second half. Starting with the ball on the Buffalo 38, Roscoe had little trouble moving downfield. Denman, Guzman and Britt Pieper took turns running the ball for short gains, the Price, Daniel Bristow and Guzman made his way

Forsan wins twice

FORSAN - The Forsan junior varsity edged Robert Lee 8-2 as Thomas Thompson sneaked over for the game's only touch-

Loraine topped Forsan 6-0 in the eighth grade game while the seventh graders whipped the Goliad Gold team 26-6.

Byron McElreath, John Roman and Mike Chandler scored TDs while Lathy Williams got an extra point and Michael Self recorded a safety for Forsan. The JVs are now 5-0, eighth grade 2-3 and seventh grade 3-1. All three teams play again Thursday, the junior high teams against Garden City and JVs against

Runnels, Goliad win volleyball matches

Goliad and Runnels both swept to big victories over Andrews Thursday.

The Goliad A team won a three-setter, 15-5, 10-15, 17-15 as Michelle Chapoy scored nine, Lori Gonzales seven and Katrina Thompson six points from the service line. Setters Brenda Hernandez and Gonzales sparkled as did spiker Eunice Drew.

The Goliad B team also won, taking a 15-4, 15-11 decision behind Kris Connell's seven and Debbie Bradbury's six points. Both teams play Lamesa Thursday.

The Runnels A team downed Andrews 16-14, 15-1. Theresa Pruitt, Deborah Lemaster and Paula Jolley each scored six points. The A team won 15-11, 15-10 as Tabitha Green scored 14 and Kelly Preston seven points. Lisa Hale performed well as a setter. Both teams play Snyder Monday.

Hayes acquitted in trial

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Bob Hayes has been found innocent of a charge of driving while intox-

A four-man, two-woman jury deliberated less than three hours Friday before returning the verdict.

The jurors spent most of the four-day trial outside the courtroom as attorneys argued points of law before County Criminal Court Judge George B. Shepherd Jr.

Prosecutors attempted to introduce into evidence testimony about a white pill found on Hayes after his arrest in Dallas June 7. Hayes' lawyers argued there was no evidence that Hayes had taken medication that would have affected his driving ability and said the pill had not been analyzed for chemical content.

"This is so inadmissible, it stinks," the former football star's lawyer, Frank Jackson, said of evidence about the pill. "It could have been a bird dropping."

The victory ended 11 years of frustration for the Vols, who had not won this annual skirmish since a 24-0 triumph

Alabama, which earlier closed a 14-point defficit to seven, threatened in the final 90 seconds, moving to the Tennessee 17 where Mike Terry intercepted a passed, tipped by Lee Jenkins, in the end zone to seal the victory with 17 seconds remaining

The Vols, trailing 21-13 at halftime, took the lead with an 11-point outburst within a span of 1:32 early in the third

Coleman had a 21-yard run and Cockrell completed a 13yard pass in the opening drive of the second half which ended on Reveiz' 45-yard field goal two plays after Cockrell's apparent 24-yard touchdown pass to Darryal Wilson was nullified by an illegal use of hands infraction.

Two plays later, Ken Coley was stripped of the ball as he rounded the right corner and Tennessee's Jenkins covered at the Alabama 38. Two plays later, Cockrell fired a 39yard touchdown pass to Mike Miller, who made the reception on the Alabama 13. Cockrell then connected with Kenny Jones on a two-point conversion and the Vols

It was the first setback in six games for Alabama as the Crimson Tide's SEC record fell to 2-1. Tennessee went to 3-2-1 overall and 1-1-1 in the conference.

Arizona 16, Notre Dame 13

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Max Zendejas' third field goal of the game, a 48-yarder coming as time ran out Saturday, lifted Arizona to a 16-13 victory over previously unbeaten and ninth-ranked Notre Dame

The Wildcats mounted a final drive from their own 20, with quarterback Tom Tunnicliffe firing 19 yards to Brad Anderson to set the ball at the Irish 32 with six seconds remaining. After Arizona called time out, Zendejas drilled home the winning points as the clock ran out.

Arizona scored its only touchdown of the game midway through the fourth quarter as Phil Freeman capped a 79yard drive by plunging the final yard. The score was the first rushing touchdown yielded by Notre Dame this season and Zendejas' conversion tied the game at 13-13

Notre Dame, seeking its fifth victory, took an early 10-0 lead on a 25-yard TD gallop by freshman Allen Pinkett and a 22-yard field goal by Mike Johnston. But early in the third quarter, Arizona's Ray Moret intercepted a Blair Kiel pass to set up Zendejas' first field goal, a 38-yard boot, and Don Be'Ans stripped the ball from Joe Howard on the ensuing kickoff for a Wildcat first down at the Notre Dame 14. Although Arizona could not gain, Zendejas nailed a 32-yard field goal to pull the Wildcats within 10-6.

The Irish, plagued by turnovers all day, managed only one score in the second half, that coming on a 43-yard field goal by Johnston to build a 13-6 cushion.

Notre Dame's final drive bogged down on the Arizona 42, and punter Mike Vircola kicked into the Arizona end zone, moving the ball back to the Wildcat 20, from where Tunicliffe engineered the winning score.

Pitt 38, Temple 7

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Dan Marino, ending a fourgame slump, threw for three touchdowns and 344 yards as third-ranked Pitt erupted in the second half to beat Temple 38-17 in college football Saturday.

Marino, despite throwing three costly interceptions, hit Julius Dawkins in the right corner of the end zone on a 21yard touchdown play late in the third quarter to lift the unbeaten Panthers to a 24-17 lead

Marino, completing 26 of 36 attempts for the day, then set up the first of two scoring runs by Bill Beach with a 51yard pass play to Dawkins in the fourth quarter. Five plays later, Beach gave Pitt a 31-17 lead with 5:41 remaining by leaping into the end zone from a yard out.

Beach added a second scoring plunge late in the game as the Panthers raised their record to 5-0.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Jojo Townsell dashed 53 yards on a flanker reverse midway through the third period to put sluggish UCLA ahead to stay Saturday and the 12th-ranked Bruins went from there to a decisive 42-17 victory over Washington State in a Pacific-10 Conference football game at the Rose Bowl

The visiting Cougars, listed as 23-point underdogs, took a 17-14 advantage by scoring 10 points early in the third quarter before Townsell's touchdown run with 6:55 to go in the period ignited a four-touchdown UCLA outburst in a

Ohio St. 26, Illinois 21

sacked in the end zone for a two-point safety. Spangler, who missed three earlier field goals, spoiled Illinois' 14-point fourth quarter rally and handed the Illini their first Big Ten loss of the season.

USC 41, Stanford 21

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) - Senior tailback Anthony Gibson scored the first three touchdowns of his career to lead a powerful Southern California running attack as the 14th-ranked Trojans routed Stanford 41-21 Saturday before a crowd of 75,185

Gibson took over for injured starter Todd Spencer and racked up 120 of the Trojans' 227 yards on the ground. Spencer rushed for 99 yards before he sprained his left knee late in the second period of the nationally televised

LSU 34, Kentucky 10

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - Alan Risher passed for two touchdowns and directed another scoring drive Saturday night as 16th-ranked Louisiana State drubbed Kentucky 34-10 in a Southeastern Conference football game. A pair of quick Kentucky turnovers gave the Tigers a 10-0 lead less than four minutes into the game.

SAN ANGELO. Texas (AP) - Ernest Pennington scored on two short runs and the Angelo State defense withstood a fourth-quarter rally as the Rams defeated Abilene Christian 24-14 Saturday in a Lone Star Conference football game before a regional television au-

The Rams built a 10-0 lead on Mike Thomas' 23-yard field goal and a 1-yard run by Pennington. With 26 seconds remaining in the first half, Pennington capped a sevenplay, 90-yard drive with a 2-yard run raised the margin

But Abilene Christian's Steve Parker took the following kickoff seven yards deep in the end zone and returned it for a touchdown as the Wildcats sliced the lead to 17-6 at the half.

Rams quarterback Slade Sherrod, who completed 15 of 31 passes for 229 yards, hit split end Michael Elarms with a 23-yard touchdown pass midway through the third quarter to give ASU a commanding lead at 24-6.

The Wildcats rallied in the fourth quarter behind the passing of Loyal Proffitt, the LSC's passing leader. ACU's Vin Smith intercepted a Sherrod pass at the Angelo State 32 early in the final period, and the Wildcats covered the distance in nine

Library friends schedule book sale

By DONNA JACKSON Children's Librarian

The Friends of the Library is sponsoring a book sale at the Howard County Library Oct. 23 and Oct. 26 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. We hope that beginning the sale on a Saturday will encourage those who work on Monday through Friday to stop in and see what we have.

This year some of the interesting titles include "America's Ski Book," "How to Wake Up The Financial Genius Inside You," "Child Photography" and "The Hundred Yard War

As in past book sales, a great variety is available. In the non-fiction area biographies, religious texts, books on travels, geography and science are included. In the fiction area you will find Reader's Digest Condensed Books, magazines, westerns, mysteries, science fiction and general fiction.

There is again a generous supply of the ageless National Geographic. For those wishing to complete their collections some older issues as far back as 1954 are available. For paperback fans we have two tables full of those lightweight publications.

There are two sets of encyclopedias that will be of interest: the 31-volume 1976 edition of the Encyclopedia Americana and the 23-volume 1974 edition of the Colliers Encyclopedia. The 1966 McGraw-Hill Encyclopedia of Science and Technology also will be in the sale. Bids will be taken on these as well as the older encyclopedia sets.

The prices are: hardcover 25 cents each, paperbacks 10 cents each, National Geographic 15 cents each, other magazines 5 cents each, paperbacks 25 cents and 10 cents each, newer hardcovers $1 each and Reader's Digest Condensed Books 15 cent each

We hope you decide to come to the book sale and take advantage of bargains.

'No complaints' over being a living legend

By JANE BOYKIN Lawton Constitution

LAWTON, Okla. (AP) — Next time you find yourself alone in a room full of people, try this experiment. Say the magic words and see if you're not instantly surrounded by people — each eager to voice his or her opinion.

The magic words? Willie Nelson. People either love Willie or they hate him. But everyone knows who he is.

How does it feel to be a living legend? "It's OK, I have no complaints. It keeps me honest anyway. I'd be in a pickle if I ever tried to get away with something. Everyone would know who I was," he said in a telephone interview recently from York, Pa., where he was on tour before heading southwest.

"Music is what I like to play," he said. "I was born listening to it. My grandparents raised me and they always had the radio on, playing music of one kind or another. I just took to country. Country is the easiest

"I play what I like, whether it's country, gospel or old standards like 'Stardust,'" he said. "My whole show is songs I like to sing - not just those I've written. 'Stardust' opened a lot of doors that were closed to traditional country music.

Nelson says his current hobbies are golf, horseback riding and running.

'When did I discover running? When I discovered I was getting fat, that's when. I've become addicted to it, now, and I usually run about five miles a day," he

But he shuns "health foods."

"I'm a garbage disposal. I'll eat anything." Especially his favorite food chicken-fried steak with cream gravy. Nelson characterizes his life as "better now" than when he first hit the Nashville music scene in 1959 "I spent more time getting to Nashville than I should, I guess. I should have gone to Nashville probably five or 10 years before I did. I lived in Houston then, and was working day and night, singing and teaching music at a studio there. It was good money, but I was working really long hours. So I decided to take the big plunge and move to Nashville. When I did get there, everything seemed to fall in place for me and it really wasn't that hard to get started.

'I was fortunate enough to meet the right people," he said. In the early 1970s, Nelson took another plunge: He left the Nashville music scene to return to Texas to live and work. He became an "outlaw

Just what is an outlaw, anyway?

'Well. I always thought it was someone who robbed banks and broke the law. I'm not sure I know. Maybe you ought to ask the people who think I'm an outlaw just what they mean by that.

"No, I think I do know what they mean. When I left Nashville and moved to Texas, I went my own way instead of going along with the crowd. I think an 'outlaw' is anyone who is contrary to the establish-

Waylon Jennings did it, Kris Kristofferson did it. Hank Williams. George Jones. You could even go back a few years and say Hank Thompson did it. You know, if Hank Williams were alive today, he'd be an outlaw too. An outlaw just doesn't follow the existing rules.

And if that's true, then Nelson is country music's No. 1 outlaw. With his long hair and his earrings, he doesn't fit the stereotype of a country star.

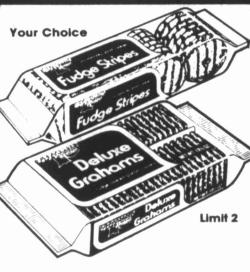

"I enjoy irritating people. It's fun. You know what they say about the wheel that squeaks — it's the one that gets the grease. I've been criticized by so many that I don't even listen anymore. I read it all and don't pay attention to anyone. I figure if I make mistakes, I've got no one to blame but myself."

Nelson said, "If there's anything wrong in this world, it's not having a good time. I know people who have every reason to be unhappy, but they refuse to let it get them down. You make your own happiness.

"I have my friends, my health, my kids, my band. It would be a sin for me to be

Local girl discusses winning America's Perfect Teen title

BEACH BEAUTIES — Felicia clowns around with other contestants during her stay at Myrtle Beach and the pageant headquarters. The girls spent every spare moment on the beach and getting to know one another.

By TINA STEFFEN Lifestyle Editor

Although she's a teenager, Felicia Ford is not only well-known in this area, but increasingly is becoming well-known around the nation as she continues competing in pageants.

Her latest venture proved successful as she was crowned America's Perfect Teen, Sept. 18, at a pageant in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Miss Myrtle Beach did the crowning honors and Felicia was awarded $1,000 in cash, a rabbit fur jacket, gold chain bracelet and large silver bowl. Felicia is the daughter of Mr. and

Mrs. V.P. Dunbar, 424 Edwards, and Roy Ford, 1308 Princeton. THIS VENTURE BEGAN a few months ago when Felicia's aunt, Mrs. Homer Rosenbaum of Bryan-College Station, sent her a news clipping about applying to represent Texas in the America's Perfect Teen Pageant. The article requested young women between the ages of 14 to 18 to send in a picture portfolio and autobiography of themselves and their scholastic and community achievements to the pageant headquarters. Felicia was selected on the basis of her submissions, and was Myrtle Beach bound for the national pageant.

The three-day pageant began Thursday, Sept. 16, with a photo session and get-acquainted time.
"When I got there Thursday, I found all the girls were very beautiful and intelligent," Felicia said. She didn't believe she had a chance at winning. She phoned her mother, telling her how tough the competition was and not be disappointed if she didn't win.

"Friday was hectic," she said, with interviews and lunch with the judges, a beach party, rehearsals for the pageant show and an all-you-can-eat seafood dinner.

The girls became very close, she said. Miss South Carolina didn't like her formal gown, so Felicia lent her competitor one of hers. Felicia's roommate asked "What if Miss South Carolina wins in your dress?" Felicia replied, "Then my dress will be famous. I'll have her send some pictures of my dress.

Twenty girls competed for the title with twenty percent of their scores based on the swimsuit competition, 30 percent on evening gown competition, and 50 percent on interview.

OF ALL THE PAGEANTS Felicia has competed in, this was the first one which required her to compete in a swimsuit competition, an event she dreads because of her modesty.

She was "very very embarrassed," she said. "The girls had good figures and I thought I was a fat slob. But on stage, I had to do my very best. I was psyched up for it and just prayed, God, please make me skinny...just "I'm just pretty modest about

'When it came down to the actual pageant, it was very professional and anything," she said. "When the cheerleaders want to wear shorts, I'm just too modest. I don't want to. I get really embarrassed.'

For America's Perfect Teen, the judges sought a well-rounded person who was beautiful, poised, a good public speaker, ambitious, optimistic, had a good figure and a pleasing personality and was involved in the community. "The judges stressed, You can have beauty and figure, but beauty is only skin deep." Felicia said. "They don't want a beauty queen with no personality. They want a person with Christian morals, a positive attitude and high goals for the Saturday was spent rehearsing and resting up for the show that evening. Family, friends and relatives from all over the country, interspersed with curious Myrtle Beach residents, gathered to cheer for their favorite

First, the excited and nervous Miss Ford was selected as a finalist. Later the winner was announced and the Texas beauty found herself crying, relieved and surrounded by her peers. Felicia is America's Perfect Teen.

The pageant was the second national pageant Felicia has won. As a 15-year-old, she won the Miss Regal Girl U.S.A. Pageant in Las Vegas, Nev. with three titles: photogenic, overall model, and pageant winner.

THE AMERICA'S PERFECT Teen Pageant was different from other pageants she participated in because it didn't have a talent competition, she said. "It gave me a chance to achieve something without my talent, my main strength.

Even under competitive pressure, Felicia enjoyed her stay with the pageant officials and contestants partially because of the casual atmosphere. Unlike most pageants, "The girls ran around with no makeup and their hair was always wet because they spent every spare moment at the beach." The girls fixed themselves up thirty minutes before they were to do something important,

Felicia said the contestants felt at home and did not feel like they had to be "on stage" or perfect the entire time as opposed to other pageants.

Thinking back, she remembered a funny, yet embarrassing incident. "I was wearing my roommate's bloomer shorts for a rehearsal, and the shorts wouldn't stay up while we were dancing and jumping around. I kept jumping jacks and my pants kept falling down on my hips and I had to pull them up. So one of the girls took the shoestrings out of her shoes and tied them around my waist so the shorts would stay on. It was embarrassing. The judges were there and watching me too.

AMERICA'S PERFECT TEEN - Felicia Ford, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V.P. Dunbar and Roy Ford, was crowned America's Perfect Teen, Sept. 18. She recieved a rabbit fur coat, $1,000, a gold chain bracelet and a silver bowl. Felicia is the first winner of this pageant for teens.

formal. The pageant was beautiful," Felicia said. Chuck Woolery of 'Wheel of Fortune'' fame emceed the

"My friends (at school) were so supportive of me," Felicia said. "Flowers were sent to me all during the day I left from friends, the cheerleaders and my family, and the teachers helped me with my homework," Felicia said in appreciation. When she came back to school, she recieved more flowers and "There was no jealousy at school. It means a lot to me for them (her peers) to be that way. It's worth it, she said.

To prepare for the pageant, Felicia got a haircut, her eyebrows plucked and her nails in shape. Her mother did the hard work, she says. Mrs. Dunbar went to local businesses to gather help and financial support for her daughter's participation, of which the two are deeply grateful for.

THE PAGEANT, in its first year, is the blossom of an idea two sister-inlaws had. Mary Ellen Shank and Michele Shank, both of whom live in Huntington, W.Va. and have had teenage daughters compete in pageants, wanted to establish a 'different' beauty pageant. They wanted a pageant "with career counseling and close contact with parents" — improvements based on disappointing experiences when their daughters competed, said the Herald-Dispatch, their local newspaper.

Next year, they plan to have the pageant broadcasted nationally. "Our dream is to be as big as Miss America but on the teen level, with the same standards of excellence," Michele said, according to the newspaper. "People say if it's not showing a profit after the third year to give it up. But I'm never going to give up.

Felicia will return to the pageant next year and crown the next America's Perfect Teen.

There is a one in 500 chance new parents will have a child with Spina bifida. For parents who have had a child with Spina bifida the chances are one in 20 that subsequent children will have the defect.

"That's not a real good risk, especially when you're talking about a baby," Mrs. Walker says. When she was four months pregnant with her second child, Mrs. Walker had a sonargram performed, a test which showed no defects in the baby's spine. Robb was born free of the defect.

BECKY HAS something in common with the national March of Dimes poster child, Ben Hill of Paso Robles, Calif. Five-year-old Ben was born with multiple birth defects, including Spina bifida, on March 31, 1977, and underwent a spinal closure Before he was a year old,

Ben underwent two additional operations to implant and revise his shunt. He now walks with the aid of crutches and lower leg braces

But Ben, like Becky, likes to stay active, and enjoys swimming, playing basketball and throwing footballs

Becky will confine her duties as poster child to counties within the Caprock Chapter of the March of Dimes. Ben will visit more than 50 cities and travel more than 60,000 miles this year to call attention to the more than 250,000 children born each year in the United States with physical or mental damage due to birth

Cousins from Glasscock County win gold star awards

Cousins Lisa Halfmann and Karen Halfmann were named Gold Star winners at the annual Achievement Night Awards Banquet Oct. 5 in St. Lawrence.

Karen, 17, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Halfmann. Her record book on safety took top honors in county and district competition, and placed second at state. Offices held by Karen this year include president of the Glasscock County 4-H Council and Club, president of the beef club and treasurer of the swine club. At present, she is the treasurer of her senior class at Garden City High School and president of the CYO in the St. Lawrence Community Projects she has carried during her eight years in the 4-H include beef, swine, leadership, family life, clothing, safety, foods and nutrition, petroleum power and foods preservation. For the past four years, Karen has been a junior leader in these projects.

Start early to prevent teenage suicide

Suicide is second only to break up of an adolescent accidents as the leading case romantic relationship of death in 15 to 24-year-olds, says Cindy B. Wilson, family life education specialist with Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

The Suicide Prevention Center in Los Angeles, Calif., estimates 50 percent of teen suicides are disguised as accidents. Adolescent females make 15 to 20 percent of all suicide attempts. Since there are many more attempts to commit suicide by adolescents than by adults, experts see this as a cry for help," Wilson says.

Many suicides can be prevented if parents, families, peers, teachers, school counselors and children themselves take some preventive measures,

Research indicates the following factors are involved in the teen suicide problem: 1) A home environment in which the teen feels unloved, unwanted, and a burden on parents and the family. 2) Parent-child difficulties which result in a loss of love and parental approval. 3) Some research reports that a confusion of role indentity caused by the current blurring or blending of roles by males and females and divorce of parents plus the blending of several families to form stepfamilies are influences on potential teen suicide.

divorce, separation or the communication, en- become aware of any one of the most difficult precipitates suicide. 5) Stress of school competition and actual or anticipated failure contributes to suicide. 6) Depression and problems in dealing with sexual identity. 7) The normal process of growing and developing through the adolescent life stage can sometimes be so stressful that teens will try to commit suicide. However, most suicides are due to miltiple factors, not just being an adolescent.

Prevention of teenage suicide should begin early in the child's life. Wilson says.

Provide opportunities for responsibilities and experience in making decisions and solving problems so teens are not overwhelmed with suddenly learning to do these things while going through one of the most stressful life stages.

Pageants and parties

Several lucky young women are competing for the titles of MISS HOWARD COLLEGE and MISS SWCID Thursday evening. The pageant will be a gala affair held in the Howard College Auditorium at 8 p.m. The winners will represent their college in several events during the year.

Speaking of "young women", when CLARICE GUILL, mother of Big Springer RUTH ANN COX, began working as a transcript clerk in West Texas State University's admissions and registrar's office. she planned to work only a short time before returning home to her young children. Twenty-three years later, she has decided to retire from her position as assistant to the registrar of the Canyon based institution. Congratulations on your retirement.

LINDA FOSTER, daughter of MRS. HOWARD SMITH, 510 Scott, graduated in September from Houston Baptist College, Lubbock Extension, with a 3.4 grade point average. She earned a master's degree in business management. She also attended Howard College and earned her bachelor's degree from Angelo State University in San Angelo. Linda will put her new business management skills to work in the purchasing department of Texas Instruments.

While sitting in the office waiting room of DR. J.H. FISH AND DR. J.R. FISH the other day, I was thumbing through the May '82 issue of Ultra magazine. In the wedding section, I found a picture and caption of RITA KAY LANGLEY and JAMES MURRAY DUNCAN'S wedding. The caption said, Rita Kay Langley, a Big Spring native, and James Murray Duncan were married in Highland Park Presbyterian Church. A reception followed in Dallas Country Club. The couple is at home in Dallas. It isn't everyday your wedding picture appears in an exclusive magazine.

Everybody is still talking about the Steers game against Odessa and the delicious chili supper the Mariah Color Guard served. I noticed several notable people at both events. Among those were DON FISHER, BILL NEHLS, DAVID TRUSTY, THE DICK JOHNSON FAMILY, THE CLIFF CLEMENTS FAMILY, JANICE ROSSON, MARTHA POSS, RICK TURNER, JAMES DUNNE, DON DAVIS, AND DAVID LARGENT.

We in the Herald newsroom enjoy throwing parties for our co-workers' birthdays or similar occassions. This time a party was thrown for City Editor BILL ELDER Thursday afternoon. Not only was it a happy affair, but a sad one as well. Bill is leaving us this

I must give FELICIA FORD my vote of confidence. Last Saturday, a week ago, she sang several musical numbers along with a recording at a style show in the Big Spring Mall. In the middle of her first song, the speakers became very static sounding and then gave out. Felicia has real courage. In front of at least a hundred people, she kept on singing, accapella, as if nothing had happened. She really deserved the round of applause she recieved both during and after the Word has it that twins RONNIE AND DONNIE WHEELER and their parents, MR. AND MRS. JOE MAX WHEELER recently returned from a vacation trip to Las Vegas. I wonder what shows they saw and how their luck was on the slot machines?

TOMMY AND BARBARBA GAGE have bought a new home in Ruidosa, N.M. which overlooks Old Mountain Baldy. My source told me one of their reasons for buying it was so their friends would come up there to visit them.

RED AND EDNA WOMACK, along with MR. AND MRS. TED HALL and MR. AND MRS. JACK COOK, recently went to the Womack's home on Lake Granbury near Granbury. While there, they saw JO ANN MILLER perform at Opera House. My source tells me Ms. Miller is the singing star that used to perform with Tommy Dorsey. I wouldn't know... That was before my time, I think.

Anyways, from what I hear, many people from Big Spring, Dallas and Fort Worth retire at Lake Granbury. My source also told me CLIFF COOK, son of former Big Springer PETE COOK, has the Coo Coo's Nest Restaurant in Granbury.

Until next week.

Daughter angry at mom

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17½ year-old girl with a problem: my mother. She asked me if I was sexually active with my boyfriend and I told her the truth, and now I'm not allowed to see him anymore.

Dear Abby

My mother listens in on all my telephone conversations and I am treated like a criminal. If I go anywhere, I have to tell my mother where I'm going so she can call and check up on me, and she always does.

I am seeing a counselor. She advised me to drop my boyfriend to make peace with my mother, but I love him too much to drop him. I was a virgin when I met him and I have no plans to make love with anyone else, so I don't think I'm a whore like my mother says I am, do you? Now I'm sorry I was so honest. I really love this guy, and I think I have the right to do what I want with my body, don't you?

SHOULD HAVE LIED DEAR SHOULD: I don't think you're a "whore" either.

Neither do I think you should have lied. As for the "right" to do what you want with your body: As long as you are living under your mother's roof, she has the "right" to raise it if you don't abide by her rules.

DEAR ABBY: Can you tell me if a wife has any legal right to know some facts about her husband? I've been married for several years, but I don't know where my husband works. (He says, "Somewhere in Detroit.") I don't know what he does, how much he makes, how much he owes, or if he has anything saved. I don't know if he has any insurance, and if he has, who the beneficiary is.

He never has any friends over. He never mentions any names. No one ever calls him at home, yet he must have some friends because he goes somewhere. If I ask any questions, his routine answer is, "Don't worry about it."

Thank God I've got a good job. I make all the house payments. I also pay for improvements. He pays the utilities. I buy my clothes. He buys his.

No mail comes here for him. It sounds as though he could be a criminal, doesn't it? Well, I had the police check, and he has never been arrested for anything. He's never paid any fines or been in jail.

If someone comes to see me, he goes into the bedroom and stays there. No amount of pleading will get him out. After my guests leaves, he yells at me for opening the door. He doesn't even want me to answer the phone. Please help me. I need some answers soon.

IN THE DARK IN MICHIGAN DEAR IN: Your husband is either sick (paranoid) or he is hiding out. The chances are that he is using a phony name. One thing is certain - something is very strange. First see a lawyer to determine a wife's "rights." You may have to hire a private investigator to find out why his behavior is so secretive. If you choose to live with this mysterious man, it's your right, of course. But I am "in the dark" as to what you are getting out of this marriage besides abuse.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was named "Junior" after his father. His father is known as John Paul Jones Sr. When my husband's father dies, will my husband then be known as John Paul Jones Sr.

MRS. JOHN PAUL JONES JR. DEAR MRS. JONES JR.: No. He simply drops the "Junior," because if his mother survives his father she will be known as Mrs. John Paul Jones Sr., and were your husband to become John Paul Jones Sr. you would then become Mrs. John Paul Sr., causing much confusion between you and your mother-in-law.

If you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Quick availability of fuel

I spoke recently on anaerobic energy. That is, I explained, the kind that comes from the body's very limited, but highly-efficient ATP fuel, the kind stored in muscles. Because it is in such limited supply, the body uses it for very special needs, chiefly when you require energy for short-burst activity.

No oxygen is needed to tap this energy and this fact gives it its name — anaerobic, without oxygen. The classic example of use of this fuel is running the 100-yard dash. Here the runner gets power by training himself for use of this special fuel. But the sprinter is not the only athlete who has to call on ATP muscle fuel. The basketball player in a fast break, the weightlifter, the tennis player - all must use these sudden bursts of ATP energy

Generally speaking, training for use of this short-burst energy supply requires exerting great efforts for short periods of time, about one-minute long. This intense activity is then followed by three to four minutes of rest. Then the short-burst effort is repeated at the same high intensity for another minute, and, again, a three to four-

These work-rest periods are repeated for a total of at least five times. That is not an arbitrary number of times, but one based on optimum effectiveness in utilizing that very limited ATP fuel and building up the body's ability to

As a concrete example, some athletes run sprints of 50-100 yards at the fastest possible speed to the point of exhaustion. Then the rest period is taken and the sprinting is resumed. This is done for five cycles. Improvement from initial capability can be accomplished by increasing the numbers of work-rest periods. This increases the total effort required.

Although running is the example used here, an exercise can be devised for whatever competitive sport is involved. It is important, in fact, that the muscles to be used in the competition be used in the exercise. It takes only a little imagination to incorporate the general principles into a training program. In summary, it's the all-out effort for short periods, utilizing the motions of the particular muscles involved in the specific sort. It works.

Engagement policy

We will be pleased to announce the news of your engagement in the Lifestyle section of the Big Spring Herald from anytime after the engagement is a reality until at least three weeks before the wedding. We try to use the story on the date you request, but sometimes space does not permit this

The information must be submitted to us on a form available at the Herald no later than Wednesday noon before the Sunday it is to be published. The form should be signed by the bride-elect, prospective bridegroom or parents of either

We will use a picture of the couple or the bride-elect. The picture must be of a quality that will reproduce well in the newspaper. We prefer a 5 x 7 glossy black and white print. If the bride-elect, prospective bridegroom or their parents do not now or have never lived in our area, we need to know why you are submitting your engagement to our paper. If only grandparents live in our area, please give their names and addresses.

The information may be brought by the Lifestyle Department of the Big Spring Herald, 710 Scurry, or mailed to the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720.

Call us at (915) 267-7331 if we can help with more information or clarification of our policies.

MRS. LARRY ALLAN NEWTON ...formerly Terri Jo Cook

Cook—Newton

Terri Jo Cook and Larry Allan Newton exchanged wedding vows at 7 p.m. Saturday in the Midway Baptist Church with Dr Rick Davis, pastor, officiating.

The couple stood before an arch centered on the aisle, flanked by two brass candlelabras with a fivebranched candlelabra in the background. The setting was completed with a threebranched memory tree.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Cook, Route 1, and Mr. and Mrs. Lindell Newton, Route 3.

Sherry Fryrear played the organ and piano during the ceremony. Ronda Fowler was vocalist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown featuring a sweetheart neckline and puffed sleeves with seed pearls in Alencon lace over a skirt of white silk chiffon and taffeta, which formed a sweeping train of angel wings. A cathedral cap embreidered in seed pearls with white silk illusion was trimmed with white silk scalloped lace and

Big Spring Herald

BIG SPRING (TEXAS) HERALD, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1982 People of the Permian Basin are no strangers to the oil industry. Although everyone may not be directly involved in the petroleum industry, every single person in the Basin is affected by what goes on in the oil patch.

If you drive a car, you use petroleum products. If your home is heated by natural gas, the source of your fuel lies deep underground. If plastic holds a place in your daily life, petroleum does also. Storeowners in Big Spring sell goods to oilfield workers. And many, many people in Howard County are employed by oilfield and oilfield-related industries.

After Santa Rita No. 1 came in, in 1923, the region became one of the wealthiest in the nation. The Permian Basin proved tremendously productive, holding about one-quarter of the petroleum reserves in the lower forty-eight states.

Dozens of rigs like the one pictured above near Luther "make hole" in the hope of striking one of the petroleum-productive areas which lie deep underneath the topsoil.

This special section, edited by Herald staff writer Cliff Coan and written by Herald staff writers Bob Carpenter, Carol Daniel, Mike Downey, Richard Horn and Tina Steffen and accompanied with photographs by Coan and James Iley, attempts to provide an overview of the petroleum industry in the Big Spring-Howard County area.

Oil is Big Spring's biggest industry

Petroleum permeates area's economy

By BOB CARPENTER Staff Writer

In 1981 Howard County's total oil and gas production stood at $489 million, making the oil patch far and away the area's biggest industry. Farming is a distant second with about $25 million annual production.

With heavyweight statistics like that it's easy to see the oil industry is the hand that feeds Big Spring and

When turning through the Big Spring phone book's yellow pages, the oil industry holds a dominant place. There are ads for equipment, equipment repair, hauling, oil well service, exploration, marketing, cementing, drilling, testing and on and on.

The industry permeates the economy. It furnishes jobs for people who in turn pump the town's businesses full of dollars. The residents rent aparments, buy houses, purchase clothes and food and the economic wheel turns nicely because of oil. In addition the mineral-rich area foots many bills by paying its share

Several of Big Spring's leading business, finance and employment experts recently gave their thoughts concerning the area's economy as influenced by the oil industry. The leaders felt Big Spring had a stable economy because of oil, but also said the city is strengthened by agriculture and governmental services. Most were optimistic that Big Spring would continue to escape the recession that's denting the

However, the leaders said, operations within the oil industry are running cautiously nowadays. Money is tight and exploration and production are down. An economic turnaround will be slow and gradual. Meanwhile, Big Spring will remain stable — a good sign in these times of economic unrest

Jimmy Taylor, president of First National Bank. feels the base of the oil industry in the Permian Basin is solid and that the prudent businesses will continue to operate efficiently and profitably. The slowdown, however, has affected some parts of the industry.

"Obviously the boom got out of hand and some people were hurt by the "shake out," Taylor said. The established companies can be more efficient, profitable and viable, however, the undercaptilized companies who couldn't stay through the slowdown are the ones who were hurt and we have seen some of 'The oil industry is very important to Big Spring. In the last two years we've seen increased exploration, and leasing has been a big benefit to land owners. Although prices have fallen off now, the overall price increase has boosted the royalties land owners have received," Taylor said.

LeRoy Tillery, executive vice president of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, who works with a wide variety of businesses in town, maintained the oil industry was the driving force in the area economy.

"The oil industry is why we're here today. You can look at main companies like O.I.L. and Cosden and all the people that work for them and then look at all the people locally that supply those companies with services and you can begin to see how the community is tied to the oil industry." Tillery said.

The oil industry is far more important to economy than other industries in area. Agriculture is important, but there is so much more oil related employment than in any other element of the economy," he said.

Tillery pointed out the economic woes of other states while saying that Texas was healthy in comparison.

"I was up in New York a few weeks ago at a meeting" and when I started complaining of our six percent unemployment rate those people couldn't relate to that they don't think we have any problems.

However, total employment is still very strong and running ahead of last year. We still have people coming in looking for a place to live or a job or both. We get them from all over," Tillery said. He also said new technology in the oil patch has Damm feels the jobless rate in Big Spring will always remain under the national rate. August employment figures for Big Spring showed 5.5 percent in the jobless ranks, while the national average 9.8 percent and the state average was 7 percent.

"The oil industry contributes a sizable chunk of income to our economy. It creates a lot of other jobs and retail services that go along with the oil industry,' Damm said. "We have the basis for a good economy and we're fortunate to have a low jobless rate even though a large percentage of people are employed in the oil industry. We have other fields like agriculture. government jobs like the VA, state hosptial that comprise a sizable work force. If things go bad in the in oil field the bottom won't drop out."

All that glitters is not gold is an old expression, but still applicable to the economic situation in the oil patch. What kind of future can we expect in regard to the oil industry?

Variables involved in the oil industry include such issues as the Middle East situation, petrochemcial production abroad and the Windfall Profits Tax. These and other issues have and could still change the way the industry operates.

Jim Weaver, president of Citizens Federal Credit Union, voiced his opinion on some of the problems

'One thing that worries me is the part dealing with the petrochemcial end. Japan is building large, modern petrochemcial plants and the Japanese government is subsidizing material and goods so the plants can ship petrochemical goods to consuming nations. That could really hurt petrochemical exports in this country — how many jobs are going to be affected by something like that?" Weaver said.

Weaver also indicated the oil production in the Middle East could keep prices down thus slowing exploration and production in the U.S.

'The OPEC countries keep producing oil to keep up with their debt payments which keeps the foreign price falling. It's not worthwhile for domestic producers to explore and produce oil, especially the wildcatters. As long as they (OPEC) keep producing then there won't be much production or exploration domestically, Beil also commented along these same lines about the Windfall Profits Tax and other governmental regulations.

'As long as consumption of oil products is off and government continues to tax heavily and intrude in the oil business, oil operators are going to be discouraged and not produce as much. The lower the price the less the industry benefits," Beil said.

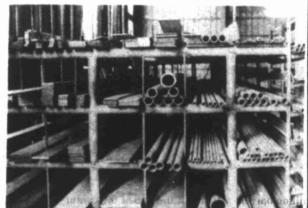

Almost all those questioned believed the economy would remain stable with perhaps some gradual growth. They were optimistic about the future and cautious, which appears to be a trend in today's oil

Jimmy Taylor's comments were typical: 'Most people that we deal with are optimistic. Most that have been in business for a long period of time are not looking for a turnaround before 18 months to two years pass," Taylor said. "I don't think we'll ever see things as wild as they were. It's not going to be as easy to get investors to put money into wells as it has been

"The established companies and industries who've been in the oil business for a number of years will continue to operate efficiently and the newcomers and we know this because the bankruptcy courts are full — will fall by the wayside," he said.

"I'm optimistic that the oil industry as we've known it will continue to operate and be viable in our

Petroleum marketers are 'in bed with an elephant'

ALLAS (AP) — The nation's independent petroleum marketers must fight to secure legislation that would protect them from being crushed by the "elephant" of competition from major oil companies, an independent's

"Marketers are, in essence, in bed with an elephant," said National Oil Jobbers Council executive vice president Phillip R. Chisholm. "If the elephant becomes uncomfortable and decides to roll over, it doesn't matter if he does it intentionally or not or whether he's intelligent or stupid. The result is that the marketer is no longer there." Chisholm has accused the big oil companies of scheming to drive smaller, independent marketers out of business through price cutting and other methods. The practice has brought lower prices at the gasoline pump now, but the strategy is aimed at winning greater control of prices later when smaller competitors are crushed, he told delegates to the jobbers' convention here. He said the NOJC wants federal legislation that would force the big oil companies to give up the gas stations they own and operate. In a keynote address to the convention of motor fuel and heating oil marketers and distributors, former CBS foreign correspondent Robert M. Evans said that

Americans could once again experience gas lines at stations if a political upheaval occurs. "Now that we have an oil glut, people feel the gasoline shortages and other problems of the oil crisis will never plague us again, that we can forget about them," Evans told the opening session of the 6th annual petroleum marketing exposition. "Our energy vulnerabilities have lessened, but they are still there and we as a nation have done so little, so very little, to prepare for it," added Evans, a former Moscow bureau chief for CBS News who has lived and worked in several dozen countries.

Evans, who lives in Atlanta, said the danger in continuing Mideast hostilities is that when a regime falls, there is the possibility it will be replaced by one not as friendly to the United States.

"At least six to 10 regions in the Middle East are considered precarious. The odds are heavy at their not being able to survive the decade to come," he said.

Any change could threaten America's access to energy and could result in production of oil by a country hostile to the United States, he added.

Evans said he agrees with former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger that the major threat to America's energy needs is not the troubles between Israel and the Arab states, but rather among the Arab states them-

Chisholm said the problem is that many major oil companies have in recent months altered their traditional relationships with their jobber and wholesale class of trade and have engaged in what jobbers believe to be pricing practices that discriminate against jobbers and other independent marketers.

He said refinery-owned outlets often sell gas at the retail level for less than the refiners' wholesale price to independents. At the same time, he said, some refiners have altered or taken away the traditional allowances granted to jobbers and wholesalers for their services.

The major companies have denied any fault, Chisholm said. He and other NOJC officials met with the companies' Washington representatives recently, and they denied any malice, he said

The council is prohibited by anti-trust laws from negotiating directly with the big oil companies, Chisholm

Oil dependence likely to continue

WASHINGTON (AP) - A study by the Office of Technology Assessment indicates that this country's oil imports are not likely to decline greatly by the year 2000 unless vigorous efforts are made toward conservation and

The congressional agency said in the study released recently that oil imports could still be as high as 4 to 5 million barrels per day at the end of the century, "unless imports are reduced by a stagnant U.S. economy or by a resumption of rapidly rising oil prices.

U.S. petroleum imports averaged 5.4 million barrels a

The study, prepared as a guideline for congressmen cutting oil imports - increased automobile efficiency, greater synthetic fuels production and reduction of oil use in utility and industrial boilers

"Only with vigorous promotion of all three options and (considerable) technological success can the nation hope to eliminate oil imports before 2010," the study said.

The estimate of auto fuel savings was based on projections that the average new-car fuel efficiency will increase from 30 miles per gallon in 1985 to 51 miles per gallon in 2000.

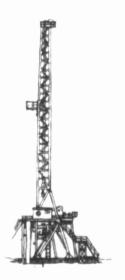

However, the study said fuel efficiency could range as high as 80 miles per gallon by 2000, "depending on the success of technical developments, demand for fuel efficiency and the size mix of cars sold.

Development of synthetic fuels is unlikely to have a significant impact on oil imports "unless there is virtually a war mobilization-type effort," the study said.

In the area of stationary plants — utility and industrial boilers — the study said oil use could be cut significantly from the current level of 4.4 million barrels a day by switching to other fuels.

The problem of achieving oil independence is complicated by a projected decline in domestic production. Domestic oil production totaled 10.2 million barrels per day in 1980 but expected to drop to 7 million barrels per day or lower by 2000.

Permian history runs deep

Area's first oil wells drilled in 1920s

By CLIFF COAN Staff Writer

Although the Permian Basin came into oil production prominence in the early 1920s, the area's destiny was pre-ordained

The name Permian Basin comes from the city and province of Perm, west of the Ural Mountains in the Soviet Union. In 1841, British geologist Sir Roderick I. Murchison first identified distinctive rock formations in that area.

Of the world's Permian formations, the most notable from the standpoint of petroleum production has been the approximately 68,000-square-mile area in West Texas and New Mexico - the Per-

Approximately 200 million years ago, a salt sea covered the area. As the structure of the earth formed and changed, a limestone floor developed in the sea, to be overlaid by other types of rock, such as dolomite, anhydrite and more salt. When rivers emptied sand and red clay into the sea, they covered the plants and animals whose remains yielded the hydrocarbons that later resulted in the formation of oil Geological happenings of and gas. particular interest were the upheavals that created vast mountain ranges beneath and above the surface. During the development of these ranges, layers of rock shifted, trapping deposits of hydrocarbons in faults, anticlines and salt

Another important geological feature was the formation of giant coral reefs. As marine life — vegetable and animal — was deposited on the reefs, that life furnished he basis for the formation of petroleum

From the state's original strike that resulted in commercial production which occurred in Corsicana in 1894 Texas was infected with oil fever. Not only the great Gulf Coast fields - Spindletop, Saratoga, Batson, Sour Lake, Humble and Goose Creek - of the early years of the century, but also significant later discoveries closer to West Texas, such as Ranger in 1917 and Desdemona and Breckenridge in 1918, carried the fever. In 1920, a field opened in Mexia, thirty miles

Even before Corsicana raised the curtain of commercial production, drilling had begun in the Permian Basin. Most of the oil discovered in the Permian Basin prior to 1920 was a by-product of water wells, and the show of oil encouraged wildcatters to continue drilling. Although none of these wells was commercially profitable, they demonstrated the presence of some petroleum in the area enough to sustain wildcatters' hopes.

Among the regions where oil prospectors tested their hunches was Mitchell County. Leading citizens of Colorado City, eager for their county to share in Texas' oil wealth, invited potential wildcatters to consider their area. Steven Owen, manager of the Underwriters Producing and Refining Company, a New York corporation, investigated the situation and Ricker and company could raise. decided to put down a test well on the Texas and Pacific Railway land, some three miles northwest of Westbrook

Drillers spudded the well, which became known as T. and P.-Abrams No. 1, on Feb. 8, 1920. The bit encountered a show of oil at 450 feet, but drilling continued to 2,130 feet, where signs of a real well occurred. Work proceeded and the local newspaper reported on June 25 that a big well had come in. At 2,345 feet the bit entered an extremely deep pay horizon of 105 feet. News of the well raised lease prices in neighboring protions of the

After 2,530 feet the well began to produce on a pump. The Permian Basin discovery well produced less than 20 barrels a day but it proved that the region could yield petroleum in commercially profitable quantities and spurred further ex-

Later, the Rio Grande Oil Company of El Paso bought the production of the wells and built a two-inch pipeline to the railroad at Westbrook. This first pipeline began carrying oil at the end of March in 1922.

Mitchell County never underwent a genuine boom because the amount of oil from Mitchell County wells did not encourage a sizeable influx of population. Even though there were no boom towns, the county seat of Colorado City became a minor oil center. The California Company, a Standard Subsidiary that took over the Underwriters' properties, had its Texas headquarters there, and Col-Tex Refinery began operations just west of town in 1925. This refinery handled 10,000 barrels a day until the 1950s, when Cosden Petroleum Corporation bought it, transferred operations to Big Spring, and closed the Colorado City refinery. Until that time, the refinery had employed 140 men and had met an annual payroll of around $350,000.

But the first more substantial discovery occurred on University of Texas lands in Reagan County.

Rupert P. Ricker, a former resident of Big Spring, began to consider the possibilities of oil beneath the barren stretches of Reagan County after World

An attorney, he went to the University of Texas and read reports by Dr. Johan A. Udden, chief of the university's Bureau of Economic Geology, regarding the likelihood of finding oil on University

Fired by the reports and with the aid of some associates, Ricker filed 171 applications with county clerks for drilling rights in 674 adjoing sections on a wide swath of university lands.

To receive drilling permits, Ricker had to file the applications with the General Land Office in Austin and within 30 days pay the fee of ten cents per acre, or $43,136 However, this figure far exceeded what

In 1919, Ricker traveled to Fort Worth, hoping to interest investors in his scheme

By chance, he encountered Frank Pickrell, a member of his unit in World War I, on the streets of Fort Worth. Pickrell and an associate, Haymon Krupp, bought out Ricker for $2,500 - half of what Krupp and Pickrell refiled the applications, and began to raise money to finance the exploration for oil. Known as the Texon Oil and Land Company, the two managed to get the legislature to extend the time limit for beginning drilling.

With the extension, Texon was able to raise $137,000 to drill its first well.

Some Roman Catholic women in New York who had invested in the company requested the well be named after Santa Rita, patron of the impossible, since the venture seemed unlikely to succeed. Pickrell honored their request by climbing to the top of the derrick and dropping rose petals blessed in the saint's name to christen the well Santa Rita No. 1.

After a frantic scramble to begin drilling before the deadline on Jan. 9, 1921, Santa Rita No. 1 reached 3,050 feet on May 25, 1923. Dee Locklin, the tool dresser on the cable tool rig, noticed gas bubbles at the top of the casing about 5 p.m., and he and Carl G. Cromwell, the driller, pulled the tools, boarded up the entrance to the derrick floor and scurried to neighboring ranches, leasing mineral rights to some

Early in the morning of May 28, Santa Rita No. 1 blew in, sending heads of oil over the crown block. Because the Texon company had not expected the well to flow in such quantity - the daily heads exceeded 60 barrels each - it had not prepared adequate facilities. Therefore, until June 25, the well flowed out of control

Santa Rita No. 1 thus opened the Big Lake Field, the first major find in the Permian Basin. The towns of Big Lake and San Angelo initially profited most from the discovery, but Midland and Odessa, situated in the middle of the region would become the dominant city of the Permian

Big Spring began its surge into a city while it served as the commercial center for exploration in Howard and Glasscock

The area's first profitable well was Hyer-Clay No. 1, which began producing between nine and 18 barrels a day on Nov.

But more important than the discoveries in the area was the establishment of the Cosden Refinery in Big Spring in August, 1929. J.S. Cosden built the refinery to process crude from his leases on Dora Roberts' land. It became the largest plant in the Permian Basin and now is heavily involved in the manufacture of petrochemicals.

Keep up the good work, men and women of the oil industry!

Will we strike out or not? We've asked that question every day for 63 years.

It's the question an oil company like ours asks itself every time it drills a hole in the earth. Looking for oil is still a risky business that takes a lot of time, money, experience, guts and determination. Duncan Drilling has been looking for oil in Texas and New Mexico for over 63 years... and we'll keep on drilling as long as you and your family need more oil. America's future growth and prosperity depends upon exploration companies such as ours being willing to take the risk.

Oil talk: it's a whole new language

Staff Writer accumulator — source of pressure for hydraulic operation of rams on a blowout preventer and in tensioner systems. A unit of a blowout preventer system designed to store fluid under pressure to operate the preventers when hydraulic pumps are not working, or to supplement pump output when rapid preventer closure is desired.

back off - loosening or unscrewing

bail — connecting link between hook and swivel. Entire assembly serves to lift and lower strings of pipe and sucker rod out of and into well.

bailer — cylindrical device used to recover liquid or cuttings from the well bottom.

barrel - unit of measurement for petroleum products...One barrel is equivalent to 42 U.S. gallons.

basket sub - device run above bit as fishing accessory to allow recovery of small bits of metal or junk in a well. bit - cutting device on the end of a drill string which makes the perforation. Cutting edge may consist of natural black diamonds, tungstencarbide tip, or hardened steel. The motion may be rotary or percussion.

The bit chews up the formation rock and dislodges it so that drilling fluid can circulate the fragmented material back up to the surface where it is filtered out of the fluid. Bits are chosen according to the hardness of the formations to be drilled.

bit breaker — wrench type device which fits into bowl of a rotary table and serves as a wrench for unscrewing the bit from the drill collar.

bleed — draining off liquid or gas. blind rams - parts of BOP which create a seal by fitting against each other, thus shutting off space below.

block — a framework which encases a set of freely rotating grooved pulleys or sheaves over which ropes pass to form a hoisting tackle.

blowout — a general term referring to any uncontrolled production of oil, gas, or water. Occurs when interior pressure exceeds pressure applied by drilling fluid.

bobcat - a short wheelbase earthmoving machine.

bobtail — a short wheelbase truck. BOP — abbreviation for blow-out preventer. Installed at wellhead to control flow between casing and pipe or open hole. At a drilling site, BOPs can be found under the rig floor. bopd — abbreviation for barrels of oil produced per day. borehole - hole drilled by bit. box — female threaded end of a drill pipe; also threaded end of certain drill stem tools such as stabilizers, key seat wipers, etc. break down - to dismantle drill stem on completion of well or on changing from one size of pipe to another; also on mechanical failure. Term equivalent to laying down. breakout - to unscrew pipe sections, especially when it is being withdrawn.

BS or BS&W - Basic sediment, or basic sediment and water which appears in bottoms of crude oil storage tanks and gathering tanks.

bumper jar - used to loosen stuck sections of drill string cable-tool drilling - used primarily where shallow wells are drilled. In this method of drilling a cable is used to raise and drop a percussion type bit which actually punches out the hole. The operator has to stop to bail out the hole in order to remove cuttings cased hole — a well into which pipe casing has been placed. casing - a pipe which lines a well hole to prevent a cave-in.

cathead - a friction cathead is a drum around which a large rope can be wrapped. Crew members move fairly heavy items of equipment on the rig floor with it. Mechanical catheads are used exclusively for spinning up or breaking out the drill string during trips and connections.

catline - a line of either manila or wire rope used on a cathead to move heavy items or to operate manual ceramic bean - a ceramic insert of predertermined size to be found in a choke valve. Provides positive control of the flow of a well, choke - a valve or flow bean which controls the flow of liquid or gas from Christmas tree - the control valves, pressure gauges, and chokes control the flow of oil and gas after the well has been drilled and completed. So named because of its shape and the large number of fittings branching out above the well head.

company man - well superin-

confirmer — this is the second well drilled in the vicinity of a wildcat, confirming that a reserve appears to be underground.

cores - cylindrical columns of rock, ranging from two to four inches in diameter and one to two feet in length. Drillers take cores from the bottom of wells to determine whether the rock formation shows prospects of crater - cave-in of well hole. To crater is to cave in as a result of violent uncontrolled oil gas and-or water flow under exteme pressure eroding the well's orifice.

crown block - main assembly of cable pulleys (sheaves) at top of rig. derrick - supports the hoisting, rotary, and circulation systems. derrickman - guides the ends of pipes as they are run into or out of the die collar - a device used in fishing operations. It is a piece of drill pipe which has a thread die on the lower end. This is lowered on to the stuck fish (the piece of stuck equipment). By rotation it cuts the thread on the fish, enabling its removal.

doghouse - housing built on the derrick for drilling crew.  $\label{eq:downhole} \textbf{downhole} - \textbf{any} \ \text{portion of the well}$ below ground level drawworks winch-like mechanism for hoisting. drill collar — a heavy pipe to which the bit is attached. It provides weight spider, preventing the drill pipe from falling into the hole. Slips, also referred to as doughnuts, are used only when running pipe into or out of drill pipe — a heavy pipe which transmits torque to the bit from the drill pipe slip — a wedge-like device which fits around the drill pipe in the drill stem - includes everything from the swivel to the bit in rotary drilling. The makeup would be kelly, drillpipe, stabilizer, key seat wiper, drill collar, nearbit stabilizer, and the drill string — includes entire drill stem in some geographic areas. In others, however, it excludes the drill collars and kelly.

dry hole — this is a well which was drilled "and it just didn't come up with any hydrocarbons," as one local oilman describes it.

dual completion — a well which produces from two different fordutchman — a fragment of pipe connection. Also, short section required to lengthen equipment. elevators — a clamp used to remove casing, tubing, drill pipe or sucker which has broken off inside a female rods from wellhole. finger board — device constructed on the mast in which pipe is racked. fish — a tool which has become lost or stuck at bottom of well. fishing - process of recovering tools or equipment which have become lost, stuck or broken at the bottom of the well. flowline — surface pipe used to conduct crude oil or gas from a well. formation — rock or mineral makeup through which or into which the well bore passes. frac job - hydraulic fracturing consists of injecting gel water and sand into the gas- or oil-bearing formation at high pressures that force the strata apart, thus promoting a freer flow of oil or gas. geronimo — wire rope used to swing off derrick in case of emergency.

green bit - a serviceable used bit. A bit not completely worn out before being withdrawn from the borehole. heater-treater — separates water and gas from crude so it can be pumped through a pipeline. junk - consists of any unwanted metal in the hole. It may have been separated from the drill string or dropped into the hole by accident, becoming an obstacle to drilling. kelly — either square or hexagonal hollow tubes through which drilling mud is pumped to the bit. kelly cock or kelly valve — a valve which is placed between the swivel and the kelly to prevent pressure upsurges from reversing flow of mud. kick — an unexpected surge of fluid or gas pressure downhole, greater than the pressure of drilling fluid, creating prospects of a blowout.

kill line — a heavy line through which liquid may be pumped into a well to prevent the flow of oil or gas. loss of circulation - indicates that the mud which is being pumped to the bottom of the well via the drill string is seeping away macaroni rig — a light workover rig which handles 3/4-inch to one-inch tubing.

master bushing — has either a hexagonal, modified triangular, or square opening and fits into the rotary table bowl. A kelly of the same configuration as the bushing opening passes through the bushing and provides the means of rotation for the attached drill string.

mechanical jar - an upward percussion device which loosens stuck tools by impact. The impact is provided via application of tension on the monkeyboard - platform constructed on one side of the mast on which the derrickman stands and guides the ends of pipes as they are run into or out of the hole.

mousehole — a hole sometimes dug through the rig floor when the derrick substructure is not very tall and used to hold a joint of pipe ready for makeup.

mud - a liquid circulated through the wellbore by means of downhole pressure during rotary drilling and workover operations. It also brings cuttings to the surface. mud pit — a tank into which drilling mud is circulated to allow sand, etc., to settle out. It is also referred to as a shaker pit or setting pit. open hole — a well without a casing. overshot - a tool that encases or passes over a fish in a well, permitting removal by means of interior wedge grippers. pay horizon - zone from which oil penetration rate - the speed with which the bit drills the hole. It is usually expressed in feet per hour. pin — the male end of the body of a bit, drill pipe, or any oth threaded pig — cleaning device all oilfield tubular goods such as drill pipe, casing, tubing, line pipe, etc., may be designated as pipe. pipelining — work on a pipeline plug - cement pumped into a well bore for the purpose of abandoning the well. It may also be activated mechanically.

pony rod - a shorter than standard length of sucker rod.

primary recovery - when an oil well first brings oil to the surface. It does so utilizing the pressure generated underground. pulled in — collapse of a derrick rathole - hole dug beside the cellar and lined with pipe. Used to store the kelly when it is temporarily out of the MIDLAND - Since the Permian Basin is one of the nation's most important resources for oil, it should come as no surprise that it is also home for the nation's largest and most complete museum of the oil industry.

But the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum is more than just a collection of sucker rods. A short visit to the building on Interstate 20 near the Midkiff exit will introduce you to:

• life in the Permian Basin from prehistory to the pre-the science of discovering oil •the mechanics of recovering oil • the horror of a well blowout

• the risks and gambles of searching for petroleum •key figures in the Basin's oil history

The museum receives its support from the oil industry, but its contents are aimed squarely at the curious - and even not so curious - oil-user.

It was built at a cost of $1.7 sylvania (at the site of the million and was officially opened by President Gerald Ford in October of 1975, according to Ed Rowland, the museum's assistant director. A new wing, costing almost that much, was dedicated by Vice President

George Bush last November. "It was the goal of the founders of the museum that the exhibits be as authentic and elaborate as possible,"

OIL GLUT — A FANTASY

We read a lot today about a so-called "oil glut."

What glut? It's a fantasy ... certainly in the United States where we continue to import 5 million barrels of oil a day.

Those imports contribute to a trade deficit of $35 to $40 billion a year. If that money were not flowing out of the United States every year it would remain in our own economy where it would turn over several times — and generate enough taxes. to more than cover our federal budget deficits.

An oil glut? The fact is that the United States is not producing enough oil: not enough wells are being drilled. We are a long way from "energy self-sufficiency." As long as we have to spend our resources in this manner, there is no oil glut as far as this nation is concerned.

How did we come to this sorry state?

It started some 20 years ago when the liberal Yankees controlling Washington screamed, "More imports." They thought it would be nice to help out those poor nations that had some oil to sell. Now those nations have so much of our cash they can't spend it all and they are buying up half of our own country.

In order to increase the imports, the liberal Yankees told Texas oil producers they could pump only eight days a month. The price was controlled at $2.75 a barrel.

Then came the Suez crisis when Egypt's Nassar cut off shipping in the Suez Canal. The Yankees told Texas to produce 30 days a month, but we still could get only $2.75 a barrel. Faced with a five-month delay in reaching such capacity and without a price incentive, the independent producers had to back off; they couldn't afford it.

But the liberals, as usual, didn't learn anything. We had to suffer through the Arab embargo of 1973 and another serious shortage in 1976 before they finally realized domestic oil prices had to be decontrolled. A lack of courage, however, prompted them to do it piecemeal.

Then with their puppet, Jimmy Carter, running around spouting, "Obscene profits," they turned around and imposed a "windfall profits tax." The Yankees giveth, and the Yankees taketh way.

To top it off, by late 1980 they let inflation soar to nearly 13% and interest rates were up to nearly 22%.

The first step to make the United States energy self-sufficient was taken by Ronald Reagan early in 1981 when he completely deregulated the price of oil — over the screams of the liberal Yankees.

Texas producers could pump oil with some prospect of making a fair return for their investments. They drilled wells and produced from their reserves to an extent that actually let the market price fall. For the first time we began to reduce the amount of oil we were importing.

The problem is that the independents especially have run out of reserves. Neither can they afford to drill at $400,000 to $500,000 a hole. Interest rates have come down from Carter's 22%, but not far enough. Inflation has been cut to less than half of Carter's 13%, so there is hope that drilling costs will not rise too fast in the next few years.

With interest rates coming down and inflation reduced, there are growing indications that the tax cuts are beginning to take hold to stimulate the economy. With encouragement like that we are seeing a slow pickup in drilling activity in the Permian Basin.

Despite the progress of the last 20 months, the liberal Yankees, who even have a few henchmen in Texas, want to throw it all away.

"Too many people out of work," they say.

To which I say, "Who put those people out of work with high interest rates and runaway inflation?"

Most of our unemployed in Howard County are oil people. It was the liberal Yankees who put them out of work with over 20 years of policies and regulations that promoted imports and killed domestic oil production. Twenty months is not much time to correct all that damage. Ted O. Groebi

Here's how to get your own oil well

Staff Writer
"If you don't have an oil well," the Western Company used to say in advertisements, "get one." Sounds easy, doesn't it.

Unfortunately, there's more to getting an oil well than just punching a hole in the ground and watching black gold gush up from the earth's bowels. Oil well drilling at its best is a risky, often unprofitable, expensive morass of activities before the money begins to come in.

But to understand the process of drilling a well, one must begin at the beginning. And, in the beginning was the Hydrocarbon deposits, created from long-term pressure from layers of dirt overlying organic material and trapped by a fault or other impervious area, lie thousands of feet underground in many areas.

However, just somehow finding one of these deposits is not enough. The deposit (or reservoir) must give up the fluids at a satisfactory rate when a well is drilled. Therefore, the layer which contains the hydrocarbons must be both porus and have a measure of permeability (the pores must be connected) so that the hydrocarbons can move from the deposit into the well Forces known as "drives" will move the oil out of the reservoir into the well itself.

Depletion drives sometimes force this migration. A depletion drive occurrs when the expansion of hydrocarbons provides the only energy for the oil or gas to reach the wellbore and move toward the surface. Two types of depletion drive are solution-gas, which occurrs when the gas in solution in oil expands to force oil into the wellbore, and gas cap, which occurrs in a reservoir that has a "cap" of gas over the oil deposit. As pressure is reduced in the oil zone by withdrawal, the gas cap expands and pushes the oil out ahead of it. Other types of drives are water drive, when water replaces the oil as it is drawn out; bottom water drive, where the oil is totally underlain by water; edgewater drive, where water occurs only on the edges of the reservoir; gravity drainage, where a steeply-sloping reservoir floor moves oil toward the well and combination

Exploration aids in determining the extent, location and types of oil deposits. The most primitive exploration method is by a search for an oil seep, where oil flows out of the ground itself. Methods used to locate the porus layers which might contain oil include seismographs, magnetic readings, gravitational readings (dense rocks exert more gravitational pull), and stratigraphy (matching samples from one wellbore with another well to estimate the location of a pay zone).

Once a possible reservoir is located, permission must be obtained from the landowner to drill.

Drilling itself is usually handled by a drilling contractor who is assisted by various companies providing well services. Drilling contracts may be of several kinds: turnkey (in which an agreed-upon price will be paid when the well is finished), footage (the company pays the drilling contractor a certain amount per foot drilled), daywork (the driller is paid for the number of days spent at one location) and combinations of these.

Once a location is selected and a contract agreed upon, the land around the location is cleared and leveled, access roads built, water made available, and an earthen pit dug out and lined with plastic to serve as a waste collector.

At the exact spot of the borehole, a rectangular pit called a cellar is dug and prepared to accomodate drilling accessories installed under the rig. In the middle of the cellar, the main borehole is started.

This hole — the conductor hole — is large in diameter, from 20 to 100 feet deep, and lined with a conductor pipe.

Another hole, called the rathole, is dug beside the cellar and lined with pipe. The rathole is used to store the kelly (a square or hexagonal piece of pipe usually 40 feet long, which transmits torque from the rotary table to the drill stem, causing the stem to turn) when it is temporarily out of the borehole. Sometimes, when the derrick sub structure is not very tall, a third hole, called the mousehole, is dug. It extends through the rig floor and is used to hold a joint of pipe ready for makeup.

The contractor then moves in his rig and related equipment so drilling can begin.

Almost every drilling rig now used utilizes a method called rotary drilling, a method that was first developed in France in the 1860s. In rotary drilling, the power comes from a rotating motion that turns the bit in the wellbore. The drill operates something like a dentist's drill, and both are lubricated to keep cool and flush out excess particles of matter.

Other drilling methods sometimes used or under development include jet-erosional (uses fluid under high pressure and balls of various types of metals to erode away soil and rock), continuous chain (uses circular chain-link device that incorporates fifteen separate sets of drill bits — designed to permit rotating dulled bit and replacing it without having to pull up whole drill string), Stratopax (uses diamonds and conventional steel bit) and spark drill (high-voltage electric sparking to chip away at Once the rig is in position over the conductor hole, drilling begins. The first bit is large and attached to the first drill collar, then lowered into the conductor hole, with sections of drill pipe added until the bit is on bottom. The kelly is attached to the topmost joint of drill pipe.

Every 30-40 feet (the length of the kelly), another joint of drill pipe is added to the drill stem. This operation—making a mousehole connection—is accomplished by the use of tongs and a tong pull line or a kelly spinner, an air actuated device mounted near the top of the kelly. The kelly is unscrewed from the drill pipe, moved over the pipe in the mousehole, stabbed into the drill pipe, and tightened by the crew. The new joint is then connected to that in the hole, while it is being held by the slips. A connection is made each time the kelly is drilled down.

At some depth when the hole has gone past soft, sticky formations, gravel beds and such that lie near the surface, drilling stops and the drill stem is pulled out of the hole. This first hole is known as the surface hole.

Pulling the whole drill stem and bit out of the hole is called tripping out. To trip out, the slips are set and the kelly, kelly bushing and rotary hose are removed from the drill pipe and stored in the rathole. The floormen latch the elevators onto the drill pipe, and the driller raises the pipe out of the hole, while the derrickman grabs the pipe from his position on the monkeyboard at the top of the derrick, guiding it to the fingerboard. The pipe is usually removed in stands of three joints at a time. As the stands are removed, they are arranged in an orderly fashion on the rig floor. The drill collars and bit are last to come out of

Once the pipe is out, the casing crew moves in and runs the surface casing. Casing is large-diameter steel pipe and is run into the hole with the use of special heavy-duty casing slips, tongs and elevators. Centralizers keep the casing in the center of the hole, while scratchers help remove the caked drilling mud from the wall of the hole. The guide shoe guides the casing past debris in the hole, and the float collar serves as a receptacle for cement plugs and to keep drilling mud from entering the casing. Once the casing string is run, it is cemented into place.

After the cement hardens and tests indicate that the job is good, the rig crew attaches and tests the blowout-preventer stack and drilling is resumed.

To resume drilling, the drill stem and a new, smaller bit that fits inside the casing must be tripped back into the hole. The drill bit drills through the cement inside the casing, and making hole continues. At a certain depth, drilling stops again in order to run another string of casing — this time smaller in diameter. This intermediate string runs through the surface string down to the bottom of the intermediate hole. At this depth, formations are troublesome. They could cause a blowout or contain shale that sloughs off and fills the hole. To resume drilling, the drill stem and a new, smaller bit

Using a still smaller bit, the final part of the hole is drilled. The bit and drill stem are tripped in, the intermediate casing shoe is drilled out, and drilling resumes with the pay zone in mind — that is, a formation capable of producing enough gas and oil to make it economically feasible for the operating company to complete the well.

To help the operator decide whether to stop drilling or continue, several techniques are used. Among these are examination of the cuttings (a mud logger analyzes cuttings at the shale shaker as they are pumped out and analyzes in a portable laboratory), electric or radioactive wellogging (logging tools are lowered to the bottom on wireline and slowly retrieved. As they pass back up the hole, they measure and record properties of the formations), drill-stem tests and core samples

When the desired depth is reached, the company decides whether to set casing or plug the well.

If casing is to be set, pipe is hauled to the site and tested, while a contract casing crew goes back into the hole to clear it out. Usually a drilling contractor will run tubing, set the wellhead and bring in the well.

The wellhead is the equipment used to maintain surface control of the well. It forms a seal to prevent well fluids from blowing or leaking at the surface. The conditions expected to be encountered in the well determine the type used. Sometimes, all that is required is a simple assembly to suport the weight of the tubing in the well. In other cases, the control of formation pressures is necessary, and a high-pressure wellhead is required. The wellhead is made up of a combination of parts called the casinghead, tubing head, Christmas tree, stuffing box and pressure

The casinghead is a heavy steel fitting at the surface to which the casing is attached. It provides a housing for the equipment from which intermediate strings of casing are suspended. During drilling and workover operations the casing is used as an anchor for the pressure-control equipment that may be necessary.

Staff Writer One aspect of the petroleum industry the layman hears about only in general terms is the oil lease. Before exploration, drilling and production of oil can take place, petroleum corporations must acquire leases from landowners.

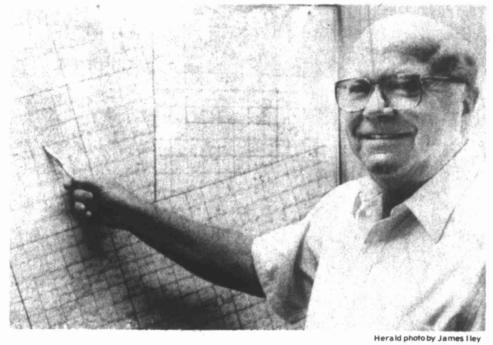

Major and independent oil companies often depend on individuals to find and acquire these leases for their use. One such individual is Jack Cook of Big Spring. Cook is a Realtor who specializes in oil land and leases

"My first love is land work," Cook said from his office on Scurry Street. "Oil gets in your blood, but a landman needs to know the land.

Although his job calls for a knowledge of land, Cook says most of his work is basically dealing with landowners, then with mineral downers." In the past, he might spend considerable time out in the fields, Cook said. Now most of the work is done on the phone.

"You do meet lots of interesting people and some vicious dogs," Cook said to lease. Using the legal description from a land map, the company tells him the location of the block and usually how much they are willing to pay, he said.

"I start contacting the owners then," Cook said. However, this process is not always as easy as it sounds. Landowners do not always own the mineral rights under half or a portion of the the same piece of land. Cook said. Before the oil boom occurred in the early 1900's, people would sell land without regard to the mineral rights. When the oil

Consequently, the ownership of the mineral rights to a certain piece of land was passed from father to son to daughter and on and on, Cook said. While 20 to 25 persons could own mineral rights under one piece of mineral owners is three or four, the Realtor said.

"As time goes on, more and more mineral owners appear all the time," Cook said. "My father said 'If you really want to test your title, discover oil on your land.""

'You spend most of your ime hunting mineral owners," Cook said. "It's a matter now of being a detective." A landman has to find out the names and addresses of the owners of the minerals under the land he wants to lease, he said. "Landowners usually know what they own," he said. He checks the abstracts to see who actually owns the land and checks the title, Cook said.

An abstract company or the landman will make copies of all the instruments (transactions) in the county clerk's office that pertain to this particular piece of land, Cook said. Determining mineral ownership often depends on checking probate wills to determine who has been left what, he said.

"We deal a lot with wills, usually very lengthy ones,' Cook said. "You have to check every probate on every piece of land to be leased

One of the most unusual wills Cook has dealt with turned out to be a valid will that resulted in the purchase of two oil leases. "Before this woman died, she left her will on a Big Chief tablet." Cook said. The lawyer working with the will called it one of the most "eloquent and intelligent" he had seen, Cook

Sometimes a person dies without leaving a will, Cook said. In cases like that, a heirship affadavit has to be sworn detailing all the facts and information concerning the deceased and his family. he said.

Once all of the details of mineral and land ownership have been determined, the title still has to be "cured." "I see a lack of concern Cook said this involves settlcollateral for loans is a usual transaction, he added.

> 'We must secure subordination from the lending agency," Cook said.

> After all the checking, the re-checking, the phone calls and the comparing, the landman is ready to start trading with the prospective mineral owners. Once a price per acre is decided upon between the owners and the company desiring the lease, other considerations come into play.

The typical oil and gas lease establishes the terms of the agreement between the corporation and the landowners. The basic length for a oil and gas contract lease is approximately three to five years, Cook said. Normally, if a company does not drill within the trms of the contract, the lease lapses, he said. A lease is perpetuated (continued) once drilling commences and oil is discovered, Cook added.

A landowner is usually paid a cash bonus for signing the lease in addition to a guaranteed rental fee on the lease. The corporation is normally granted a definite lease period as well the right to defer drilling if delay rental fees are paid. A delay rental fee is determined by the two parties to be paid by the petroleum corporation if drilling has not commenced by a certain date, Cook said. This allows all indications the United States will be dependent on foreign oil until well into the 21st century. Even with increased reasearch and development It will take many decades to develop alternate energy sources. Confrontation over the ever dwindling supplies of oil and gas is not a an unreal expectation.

World energy politics have been thrown into turmoil. Oil has been transformed from a commerical product traded by private international oil companies into a raw material fulcrum controlled by Middle East governments. Because of the tsen expressed concern world's dependence of these countries the balance of power has swung to these nations

Legislation on several fronts is looming before our elected law makers. Offshore drilling, the leasing of federal lands for oiland gas exploration, natural gas deregulation, the Middle East and the possible repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax are issues at hand.

Which way our country proceeds rests on the decision making policies of bur elected officials. In preparing our special oil edition the Herald solicited the opinions of several elected representatives to present their views on the issues within the oil industry. Deregulation of natural gas is one of the most important issues facing the U.S. government today. Some industry experts feel natural gas is being held at an unnaturally low price. They think if natural gas were deregulated then consumers would have to pay for what his gas actually costs and would voluntarily cut back - thus importation would be limited and the dollar's value would climb on the world market.

The leading world powers have encouraged the U.S. to cut back on petroleum imports because they feel the "U.S.' continuing dependence on imports also keeps the *American dollar in a declining state against the major currencies in the U.S. Senator John Tower recently spoke to the problem of natural gas deregulation. "A key element of our goal gain energy selfsufficiency deregulation of natural gas prices at the wellhead. Since the '50s, natural gas has been under the same type of controls as was domestic oil," Tower said. "We have seen gas sold interstate (outof-state) at a fraction the price of alternative fuels in virtually all of its markets while intrastate (within the state), the prices are competitive.

Natural gas producers have complained that there is no incentive to explore because their most profitable market is in Texas. Obviously, they can only sell so much gas in the limited Texas market and there is no need for additional finds. 'Predictably, the result has been excessive demand and waste combed with a decline in exploration and production of natural gas. Limited and phased decontrol already has improved the supply sittion, showing that a reduction in federal involvement yields tanble results," Tower said. "We need to move a rapidly as possbile to end natural gas price regulation altogether."

"Oil field theft goes on all over the state every week; it's all over the world," says Howard County Deputy Sheriff Eddie Owens, who has a background of 35 years in the oil field in addition to his law enforcement experience.

Figures as to how much oil field theft is costing companies ranges from $20 million dollars a day nationwide to $50 million dollars a day in the Permian Basin to unmeasured billions of dollars a year, according to oil

'Wherever oil is, oil field theft is big business,' Howard County Deputy Sheriff Bill Shankles said.

"It's a business like the auto theft rings, dealing in high dollar items," Texas Ranger Charles Brune said. "Everything in the oil field is top dollar/high dollar," Brune said.

Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard says theft in Howard County oil fields goes in "peaks and plateaus." 'We've stayed at a normal pitch in the reporting of oil field thefts," the sheriff said, "even during the boom in Midland and Odessa

Thefts made in the oil field usually follow particular patterns. During the boom times last year, the thefts were taking place due to a shortage of the parts themselves, Standard said. Manufacturers were unable to keep up with the demand, the sheriff said, so thefts increased

'People were getting anything they could anyway they could." Brune said "There's always a market with no questions asked," the sheriff added Often thieves are looking for particular items when they rob a drilling site, Owens said. "They take orders and get the stuff that they can deal," Owens said. Shankles added that thieves will ignore expensive tools on a site and pick up only what they know they can sell. Pulling units are especially susceptible to oil field theft, Shankles said. These work crews and equipment travel to sites periodically, the deputy said.

Standard said the last 90 days had seen only a few oil theft reports in the county. The reason for the apparent slowdown was credited to the decrease in production and the various security agencies specializing in oil field work, Standard said.

One oil field security specialist, Howard Kloss, owneroperator of Oil Safe in Big Spring, credits his success to operating with one train of thought: oil field theft. Law enforcement personnel have other crimes -domestic problems, homicides, assaults and so forth — to concentrate on, Kloss said.

Oil field thieves usually zero in upon certain items, Standard said. "Generally, smaller items such as slips, elevators, hand tools and tongs - all used around the (well) hole — are taken," the sheriff said. These items are 'readily accessible and can sell rather easily," Deputy Shankles added.

Deputy Owens noted most items taken are ones that can be loaded quickly by one or two men into a car or pickup. One reason for the "popularity" of oil field theft is the cost of the items involved. Owens mentioned one case where two men carried a set of power tongs valued at $20,000. Kloss recalled a case where two pumpjacks, valued at $55,000, were disassembled in the field and stolen. Five items involved in one theft case were valued at more than $20,000, Shankles said.

This year alone, Kloss stated his firm had recovered $1 million of stolen items.

Ranger Brune estimates "$3,000 to $5,000 for elevators as the cheapest thing" on an oil well site, excepting hand tools. "A man can hit a rig and get $20,000 to $30,000 just like that," Brune said. Brune says the petroleum industry is taking more notice of the problem, however. "There's more security than they've ever had," he said. "Drillers are tired of getting hit for carelessness." The oil field is a "different world," Brune said, with expensive equipment left out in the open. "They lack security because some places are out in the middle of nowhere." Brune says

The staggering monetary losses associated with oil field theft is finally resulting in some changes by petroleum companies, but not enough, according to some. "Some companies just put up with the theft, " Shankles said. 'You'd be surprised in the oil field that can be stolen.' Kloss says one reason for companies ignore oil field theft is peer recognition.

'They'd rather handle it themselves rather than look like dummies," Kloss said. The matter is part of a public relations image as well as a peer problem, he said. Covering up from the stockholders or superiors sometimes happens, too, Kloss said. "The last thing they want is exposure," he said.

Yet, companies take a chance ignoring the thefts. Kloss said. "If they write it off, they're encouraging it," he said. 'Thieves know if you're not doing anything and they'll steal again. As long as it's ignored, thieves are having a big time," Kloss said.

The companies may be more aware of the problem of oil field theft, but they are ignoring it still. "I don't see any improvement in the companies in taking a front-line stand about the problem," Kloss said.

Law enforcement officials in Howard County are hampered by a lack of manpower to deal with oil field theft, Standard said. "To work in an area that active, we need somebody at all times for the oil field," Standard said. Although the sheriff's office patrols help "in some degree," the sheriff said, "around the clock surveillance is best" to prevent thefts.

However, the worry over theft in county oil fields is lessened because of the deterrent value of private security firms, Standard said. "Security people are the best deterrent. We have cooperation with security companies to solve cases and recover items," Standard said. "Security firms are on the front line with oil field work.

Kloss operates one such security firm out of his small rock office in Big Spring. Kloss says his firm has an 80 percent clearance rate on recovering stolen oil field equip-tion are inside of the industry.

The relative ease that some oil field thefts can be made is illustrated by a case worked by Owens in another county. A man had been stealing oil field pipe and selling it, Owens said. He kept doing this until he made more than $100,000 and finally was caught, the deputy said.

When asked why he continued taking chances when he could have stopped with plenty of money, Owens said the man replied: "It was just too easy."

Not all oil field thefts are so easy and successful, however. The Howard County sheriff's office has had four recent convictions for oil field theft, according to the sheriff. Recent legislation has also toughened up penalties for oil field theft, he added.

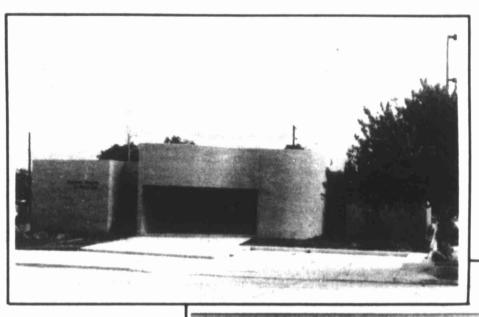

The general consensus, however, of persons involved in investigations of oil field theft is that preventive measures are the best method to stop thieves. Brune notes that even if the law is able to recover stolen goods "we still have to identify items.

Owens says people should be more conscious of what's happening in the oil field. "Get a license number or something when you see something in a field," Owens said. Even if someone turns out to have a legitimate reason for being in an area, no harm is done by taking down some information, he said. One reason for the bulk of theft information coming from industry insiders is that many oil field thefts are connected to people inside the business. "Eighty to ninety percent of the cases we've worked have some kind of inside involvement," Kloss said.

Why theft takes place in the oil field is a question without a definite answer, Kloss says. Greed, possibly drugs and even the ease with which things can be stolen are all possibilities, he said, See Theft, page 17D

THE LOOK OF UNION CARBIDE — Union Carbide's new Big Spring air separation plant will look like this when completed in early 1983. The plant initially will produce 200 tons per Glasscock, Upton and day of high-purity nitrogen for use in oil and gas well stimulation and servicing.

Union Carbide builds new Big Spring home

By BOB CARPENTER Staff Writer

It's a known fact that oil is becoming more scarce by the day. So, it becomes important to get every drop of precious oil from wells that are productive and through technology, wells that were once thought to be depleted can now be revitalized by fluid injection.

Fluid injection is primarily a secondaryrecovery operation in which an essentially depleted reservoir is restored to producing status by the injection of liquids or gases into the wellbore. In essence, this injection restores the reservoir's energy, moving the formerly unrecoverable secondary reserves through the reservoir to the well. This practice has become increasingly important to the oil industry as the demand for petroleum products continues to grow. Injection fluids are put into selected wells at or near discovery pressure to achieve maximum recovery efficiency.

Union Carbide, seizing the opportunity for secondary recovery injection fluids market in West Texas, presently is building a $10 million air separation plant in Big Spring to provide liquid nitrogen for oilfield services.

The new plant, scheduled for operation in early 1983, will have an initial capacity of 200 tons per day of liquid oxygen. The product will be marketed through Wellnite Services — a joint venture of Union Carbide and the Halliburton Co. — for oil and gas well stimulation, cleanout, pressure testing, cementing, jetting and other well services, according to John Dobbins, manager of bulk atmosphere gas at Union Carbide.

Dobbins said the Big Spring plant — one of six such major Union Carbide air separation plants in Texas — will contribute more than $3 million per year in payroll and local taxes and purchases to area.

The plant will be staffed by 16 full time employees and will operate 24 hours a day featuring highly automated controls to maximize energy efficieny

The basic raw material for the plant will be air," Dobbins said, "which will be compressed and liquified and then separated into nitrogen, oxygen and argon.

'Only the nitrogen will be retained at the Big Spring plant and stored in a 32 million cubic foot nitrogen tank prior to shipment in Union Carbide cryogenic (low temperature) tank trucks to Wellnite field camps located within a 150 miles radius of the plant," Dobbins said.

Dobbins said the nitrogen will then betransported to destinations in West Texas and New Mexico.

The new production facility is situated on a 16-acre tract on the north side of Interstate 20, approximately six miles east of Big Spring near Arnett Road. The property, which adjoins Cosden Oil and Chemical refinery, was purchased by Union Carbide from the Arnett Estate.

Permian Basin oil-rich area

Staff Writer

It ranks as the sixth largest petroleum-rich area the world and has probably produced somewhere between 6 and 7 billion barrels of oil. It is responsible for supplying 16 percent of America's oil

So it can be assumed that the Permian Basin - once just a geological designation - is known the world over.

Geographically, the Basin extends as far west as Roswell in southeastern New Mexico and reaches almost as far east as Abilene. It extends south to Edwards and Val Verde counties and north to just above Lubbock.

The heart of the area, in terms of where the most oil is, can be found in Reagan, Midland counties. Other especially oil-rich areas include Hockley and Cochran counties. Andrews County and Ector County.

The Basin shows no signs of "drying up" and becoming a ghost region as some have predicted, according to Lyle Case, the man in charge of exploraton in the Permian Basin for Texaco, Inc.

The resources of the area are a gift that has transformed a dusty land where even cattle had a hard time into a thriving nnnnomic oasis. This gift was unknown until the 20th Century was well under way.

According to geologists, few of whom, according to Case, really agree, a salt sea covered the area 200 million years ago. As the structure of the Earth changed, the sea developed a limestone floor. More salt formed and the floor was overlaid with various types of rocks dolomite and mostly anhydrite.

The remains of plants and animals yielded the hydrocarbons that later resulted in the formation of oil and gas. The most important geological phenomena were the uiphevals that created vast mountain ranges beneath and above the surface.

During development of these ranges, layers of rocks shifted, trapping deposits hydrocarbons in faults, anticlines and salt domes. The giant coral reefs that formed in the area received deposits of marine life - work we do right now is vegetable and animal modeled on old wells. We're which were the basis for the not going to find anything formation of petroleum. really new out there.

Geologists say there is no way to tell the scientific history simply, but they also say no one thinks about it much. Their concern is with what's out there and how to find out where to recover it

'This is a very oil-rich area with quite sizeable reserves," Case explains. "But whenever oil is taken out it becomes harder and harder to find usable areas for drilling. Those reserves get smaller and smaller and it becomes more and more expensive to get it out."

The major oil producers in the area employ exploration teams who go out and find the oil. "We have about 90 people here who work on that exploration end of the business," Case said. "They fall into three groups: geologists, geophysicists and land men.

the geologists is scrutinizing rock samples for evidence of petroleum. Men in the field use hand lenses to study the shale fragments and send Bureau of likely samples laboratories where geophysicists examine them more elaborate equipment.

One of the most important sciences used by geologists is seismography. The seismograph is a portable instrument that measures vibrations set off by dynamite charges in the earth. When the soundwaves hit potential oil-bearing formations, they reflect on the seismograph, where a ray of light records the sound's impressions on sensitive paper.

'Geophysicists really just back up the geologists' findings. They have a number of methods for testing the proposed site, including gravity methods, magnetic methods, electromagnetic fields and electrical fields," Case said.

"Occasionally we send out sesimic crews. These are contracted out and have from 30 to 35 people. They can be used to further back up our guesses - which we hope are a lot more than just guesses," he said.

IN THE EARLY days of oil exploration in the Permian Basin, many independent oilmen scoffed at the idea that you could scientifically search for oil. Practical experience in the oil field was seen as the best way to

It's easy to understand that attitude. Men with no background in geology and geophysics had met with considerable success by way of emperical methods and plain hunches.

It wasn't until the turn of the century until the work of university-trained geologists began commanding respect. The discovery well of the Permian Basin, in Mitchell County, was the result of "an educated guess," but oil companies began seeing the validity of hiring geologists Among the main tasks of to back up their investments with a little science.

> Johan A. Udden, chief of the University of Texas' university-owned lands in West Texas and in 1916 issued a report and map showing where oil and other minerals were likely to be

This was the inspiration for geologists' work in the Permian Basin. During and after the 1920s they traveled across the deserts with their equipment tethered to the outsides of their cars.

These field geologists gathered rocks and took those of interest and potential to laboratories for further study. Their findings gave oil companies a reasonable idea of where to start working.

Their work was given a boost by the coming of seismography. Rock formations bearing petroleum give off distinctive waves which enable geologists to make more accurate predictions and remove a lot of the guesswork from the

STILL, THERE is a good amount of luck - and expense - involved in the process. And while the Permian Basin is not Economic according to Case, getting

"There are fields where it is too expensive to recover the oil," Case says. "But as a rule we work on supply and

Will there ever be a time when it is too expensive or too hard to look for and recover oil?

"The answer to that question," Case says, "can be found in the question 'Do we have to have the oil?' If we do, the no, there will probably not be a time when there is oil that we don't try to get.

"The reason some of it is too expensive is that some is too deep," Case says. "Some have too small a flow. Some fields are too remote. We found a good, strong field near the Rio Grande. It's right near the border. But we have to have a line to get it back to where it can be produced. Does that work and expense make the drilling down there worthwhile?

"Fields like that will probably be used. But right Permian Basin is not now there are more "running out of oil," it is, economic moves," Case

Staff Writer Chris Christopher, Chief Executive Officer of Oilfield Industrial Lines (O.I.L.), is a man brimming with

Sitting on a couch in his plush Industrial Park office, a painting of President Reagan and the American flag behind him, Christopher points out just how optimistic he is. "We believe we'll be a worldwide contender in (oilfield) equipment building simply because - we're in business," Christopher says.

Christopher's two-year-old company is Big Spring's largest private employer and — although it already encompasses about 22 buildings on 5 million square feet of the Industrial Park — it's beginning to be a little cramped for room.

OIL management plans to keep expanding OIL, both in marketing and physical size. "We plan to expand right on down the (airport) flight line as space opens up," Marketing Director E.D. (Dean) Holland said. 'The city is completing three new hangars ... all three will be used (by OIL) for manufacturing areas.'

Why the smugness about the company's role in the industry? Christopher and Holland say its because OIL has no "real" competitors and because management has an "aggressive attitude to a downturn economy."

"Unlike other companies, we've tried to stay ahead of the times," Christopher said. "We made preparations for a slowdown. Our market plan dealt with a slower market ... When the market got tough, other companies just closed down ... It's a buyer's market out there and we know how to take advantage Christopher said a lot of rig companies went out of business during the economic slump because they were composed of "inexperienced people that capitalized on an industry they knew nothing about. Eight hundred to a thousand of those four thousand rigs reported in December shouldn't have been put together.

OIL presently has 12 rigs under construction "of different sizes and configurations" on which purchase agreements have been signed, Holland said. There are six rig-up pads and four substructure or box pads in the Holland said.

The fledgling company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Kidde Corp. since 1981, has enjoyed "tremendous growth" since its inception in 1980, Holland said. According to Christopher, OIL's sales have grown from $17 million in 1980 to $160 million in 1982. In 1983 the entire corporation should see close to $500 million in sales, Christopher said.

And Dean Holland attributes this growth to management's "aggressive attitude." "We don't feel we can take the viewpoint of most companies, that is, sit back and wait. If we did that we'd be in the same situation they are.'

Holland said that of the 29 rigs sold in the first six months of 1982, 16 were sold by OIL. The rest of the industry sold the other 13. "It's due strictly to an aggressive approach to a downturn economy," he said.

"Don't get me wrong. They're not knocking the doors down. But they are ringing the doorbell," Holland said. OIL's success also is attributed to what they call "innovative financing," Holland said. OIL provides their customer's the "oppurtunity to go full circle" within OIL and its sister companies, Holland said. This means the customer not only purchases the rig from OIL, but may also finance the drilling project through Kidde Credit Corporation (an unconsolidated subsidiary of Kidde), and obtain a drilling contract through the Dallas-based OIL Energy.

OIL Energy will provide the drilling location, operate the rigs, and oversee the drilling operation. Holland said OIL has financial interest in lease acreage in Oklahoma, West Texas, the Texas panhandle, southeast Texas, east Texas and Louisiana. The company plans to expand drilling exploration to New Mexico, Colorado and Kansas.

OIL is also negotiating with customers to enter the international market, Holland said. "We recently brought on Robert Sherrill as International Sales Manager. The overseas market is fairly active in that there is tremendous drilling activity in South America and the Middle East.

 $\rm OIL$  builds fully-equipped drilling rigs in the 10 to 30,000 feet depth category, portable drilling rigs from 4 to 10,000 feet, and well-servicing workover rigs rated from 8 to 20,000. They manufacture most of the rig components themselves, and the rigs are painted according to the customer's specifications.

It takes about 90 days from the time the purchase agreement is until the rig is ready to deliver, Holland said. Rig costs range from about $5 million to $10. million, the price totally contingent on the rig's depth' capacity and extra equipment stipulated, Holland said. 'We're a total manufacturing entity rather than a rig-up vard." Holland said. Although Christopher believes "we're looking at an economy, the worst since World War II," he says OIL

Railroad Commission powerful state agency

By CAROL DANIEL Staff Writer

There's an old saying in Texas that there are four important state officers and the governor isn't one of them. Of the four — land commissioner, water commissioner, agriculture commissioner and railroad comissioner - it is the railroad commissioner (actually, there are three of them) whose regulatory powers are least known both in and out of Texas. Yet the Texas Railroad Commission. which regulates oil and gas as well gas utilities and governmental agencies.

mission oversees make its influence all the more imposing: over 27 percent of the U.S.' crude oil reserves (8.2 billion barrels) and about 28.5 percent of its production; some 25 percent of the country's natural gas reserves (50.3 trillion cubic feet) and 34.4 percent of its production.

The RRC literally allocates these diminishing resources among competing interests, deciding how much will be given to multinational oil and gas corporations and how much to the smaller, independent Texas producers.

Oil and gas taxes alone yielded 28.3 percent of the state's $7.7 billion tax revenues in fiscal year 1981, according to the State Comptroller's office in

The commission was set up in 1891 to regulate the railroads, which then had an armlock on the transportation of Texas farm products. But the commission's real power has always centered on oil.

The RRC regulates among other things: all intrastate oil and gas pipelines; all pumping and drilling activities of the oil and gas industries, including the establishment of allowable daily quotas for wells; and the state's gas utilities.

Though oil production began in Texas in the 1860s.

it was not until the early 1900s, with the great Spindletop strike, that huge amounts of the stuff began to be produced. Over time, the commission got the right to prorate — control the production of — all Texas fields

The commission never handed over the state's oil industry to the majors most of whose capital came from out of state anyway but instead gave the small independents a fair shake.

This resulted in allocation policies designed to keep prices constant while round transportation, meeting market demand all gas utilities and and also acre by acre well acreage to drill more wells.

DEEP IN THE HEART OF COSDEN — The heaters in the foreground are one of the first stops crude oil makes in its journey through the Cosden refinery. There, crude oil is heated to 750 degrees to aid the separation processes. Rising in the background is a fractionation tower, where crude is separated into its various ingredients.

Cosden is vital to area oil industry

Cosden Oil and Chemical Company bears the name of Joshua S. Cosden, a Baltimore drug clerk who moved to Oklahoma because of his health.

After establishing a small refinery in the early 1900s in the center of Oklahoma's Osage Indian field, he built the refinery in Big Spring in August, 1929, to process crude from his leases on Dora Roberts' land.

Fifty-odd years later, the Cosden Refinery is still a familiar sight to travelers entering Big Spring, but few have any idea of what actually takes place behind the refinery fences

About 600 employees work for Cosden, most of those directly involved in the refining process. By that process, the Cosden plant receives crude oil from various places and breaks it down into the various substances, which are then sold. Jimmie Wood, safety supervisor for the Big Spring Cosden plant, said the first area the crude oil enters when it reaches the refinery itself (as opposed to storage tanks in the Cosden tank farm) is the heaters. Rows of piping run through the heaters, which raise the forced into the tower, where downtown Big Spring. temperature of the crude to a catalyst and the feed stock around 750 degrees, Wood said.

Desk & Derrick club 30 years old

By TINA STEFFEN Lifestyle Editor

Although most people working in the oil industry are men, the women have their place too. It is because of women's involvement in the oil industry that the Desk and Derrick Club was formed.

The Desk and Derrick Club of America, an international organization, will celebrate its 30th year of association this year.

A group of women who worked in the oil industry believed forming the club for educational purposes would help them provide better service in the industry and understand the industry better, says Venita Blassingame, president of the local club. From this idea, they formed the motto 'Greater knowledge; greater service.'

us finish-

The purpose of the association is "to promote among the women employed in the petroleum and allied industries through informative and educational programs, a they serve, to the end that the enlightenment gained thereby may increase their interest and enlarge their scope of service," according to Mrs. Blassingame.

The local club was chartered in 1954. Most of the charter members were employed by Cosden Oil and Chemical. At that time, Cosden was about the only oil industry in Big Spring that employed women.

Presently, four charter members are still active in the local club. Three are retired and one is still employed by Cosden.

bership in the organization. "Employment can be related to the oil industry in any respect," Mrs. Blassingame said.

The Desk and Derrick Club meets the third Monday of each month at 7 p.m. in the rear of Kopper Kettle. The highlight of each meeting is the educational programs presented by someone in the oil industry. Some of the most recent programs presented were about oilfield and equipment theft, water flooding in oilfields to make wells produce and the process of making

The organization's only fund raising project is selling Christmas Cards each year. Money raised from the project is used in sending delegates to regional and associational meetings and to support educational seminars

Mrs. Blassingame said she joined the organization in order "to understand more what the industry is about and to help me to knowledge through the club

At the time she joined 12 years ago, she was a PBX-TWX operator at Cosden. Today she is the administrative manager over the warehouse, traffic and distribution, mail room, yield accounting and PBX departments. Understanding how a well is drilled and oil is brought to the surface and produced is the biggest benefit she believes she has recieved from her involvement in the organization.

Future of oil industry open

Staff Writer

What is the future of the oil industry? Are the doomsayers correct in predicting the end of petroleum reserves? What is the Permian Basin and Texas planning to do about oil in the next several years?

The courses of thought concerning the oil industry's future run two directions, according to two authorities. One view, represented by Ed Thompson, executive vicepresident of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, is optimistic. The other view is represented by Brian Schaible, director of the Office of Information Services of the Railroad

'Wide open' is the future of the oil industry as Thompson sees it. "Good things are happening," Thompson says. "Nothing, other than the federal government, can pull it

The only negative element in the future of oil is governmental restriction, Thompson said. "Any controls of any kind hamper domestic improvements, '' he said. Legislation like the windfalls profit tax could continue to cause problems for the petroleum industry, Thompson said.

"Even with the government with its nose under the tent, we're making a recovery,' Thompson said

The drop in the number of wells being drilled in the Permian Basin's 54 counties is not a negative factor, according to the petroleum executive. Despite a drop from 527 a week last year to 291 a week this year (Oct. 3rd), Thompson pointed out an oftenoverlooked point. "The 291 is the seventh-best in the last five years - last year was a boom year and a letdown is normal." he said.

The boom time brought in lots of inexperienced crews and poor rigs because the money was so good, Thompson said. "We've cleared out the shoddy operations. We have better crews, better rigs and the investors are more careful with their money now."

The Permian Basin is not running out of oil, Thompson said, despite what many people believe. "Fifty years ago, they said we were running out of oil and we needed to nationalize the oil companies to conserve oil," he said.

The reserve status of the Permian Basin was presently at seven billion barrels of oil, Thompson said. "Without any more discovery of oil, with present production, six to ten years remain," he said. However, techniques have "drastically" improved even since last year, Thompson said.

"The Permian Basin covers 100 square miles with one well per square mile,' Thompson said. Three of the 54 Permian Basin counties have one-third of the producing wells, he added. "Obviously, we have a lot untouched," Thompson said.

But not according to statistics gathered by the Railroad Commission.

Schaible notes that Texas oil production has been steadily declining every year. "A steady decline in oil reserves is taking place also, Schaible said. With production and reserves "downward," Schaible said the current reserves stood at 8.5 years, compared to 10 years supply remaining in 1975.

The Railroad Commission director admits "so much depends on variables we can't predict" but statistics do reveal certain trends. One trend indicated by RRC statistics is lowered oil production.

"Total oil well completions are up over last year," Schaible said. "New holes being drilled is ahead of last year's pace. But although more wells are being completed, it's not increasing production. Production is down. Even with the boom year, production is actually less than the year before.'

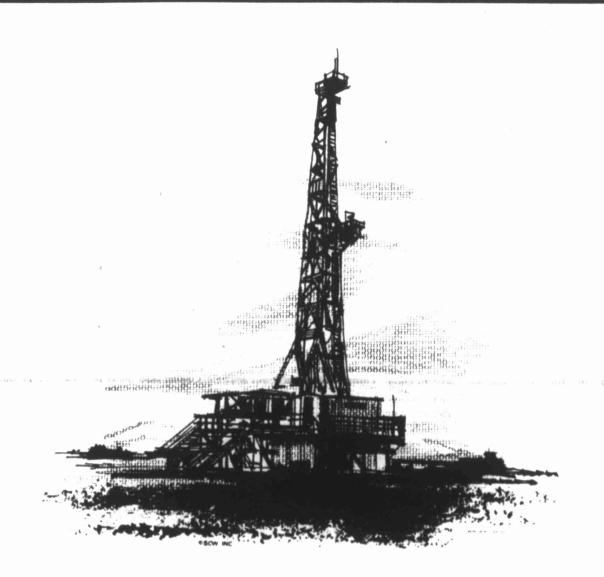

Schaible pointed out another contradiction in statistics concerning oil rig counts. Using the latest figures from August, they showed 815 rigs for 1982 and 1,300 for 1981. "Less rigs are active (according to statistics), but more new holes and more completions are reported," Schaible said.

"Even if there are increases in drilling, there are no more big finds of oil anymore that would make any difference," Schaible

Schaible stressed the RRC does not make prognastications based on its statistics, but said "we have the numbers and the trends

Thompson maintains the petroleum industry is "on the increase again and on its way back to a solid operation." Schaible says, while the direction of the oil industry is "difficult to forecast due to so many variables," the indications are oil productivity and reserves are declining steadily.

What happens if the oil runs out? The "whole basis of the Permian Basin" is crude oil production, Thompson says. "Without it, the rest of it couldn't go," he said. The future of the petroleum industry? Schaible labels it "cloudy."

Dedication, grit foresight and hard work. That's what it takes to make a success in the oil industry...and in banking. We take pride in being a part of this community.

Fiberflex sucker rods popular in oil patch

SUCKER RODS - Fiberflex, located in the Big Spring Industrial Park, manufactures fiberglass sucker rods. The rods are often selected over their steel counterparts because of Fiberflex Industries in the Big Spring Industrial Park makes fiberglass sucker rods used throughout the oilfield world.

Three Big Spring natives, Russ Rutledge (executive vice president for sales). Rutledge (president) and John (executive vice president for manufacturing) started the company in 1978 because they thought they knew how to make sucker rods better than anyone else

Apparently they were right. Fiberflex has grown to Texas. They are also supply sucker rods to planning to increase their oilfields around the world. They now employ 115 people and have recently expanded with the building of a 50,000 square foot facility, according to Jerry Foresyth, national ss manager

'We have sucker rods in in Canada, South America, Mexico and have e expanded in Europe and the Mideast," says Russ

'They're a little higher in Freeman price, but they can increase your production. We think they're the best in the world," he said.

There are Fiberflex sales outlets in Billings, Mt., Lewiston, N.D., Casper, Wyo. as well as points in marketing group on the West

But Fiberflex has made its mark internationally, too. They supply rods to well projects in South America and are expanding operations in the Middle East and the Phillipines. Russ said.

longer life resulting from better corrosion resistance

The Halliburton Company, located on West Highway 80, has been in Big Spring since the 1950s. The company, headquartered in Duncan, Oklahoma, has branches throughout the world, and the company's red and gray trucks are a familiar sight throughout the Permian Basin. Big Spring's Halliburton employees service oil wells and oil rigs throughout Howard, Glasscock, Coke, Sterling, Mitchell, Martin, Dawson and Borden counties. Halliburton employees from throughout the world may attend a driver's training school held locally, where preventive maintenance, first aid, safety and driving tips are taught during the 14-day course.

Halliburton employs modern-day technology to enable drillers to get the utmost out of every oilfield, using secondary and tertiary recovery systems. As oil becomes scarcer with every year, it becomes more important to milk every possible drop out of present day reservoirs. Frank Newton is district manager for Halliburton in the forces are working to dictate the level of drilling, production and consumption of domestic oil supplies. Since full decontrol the price of gasoline at the pump has decreased, when adjusted for the inflation rate of other prices.

"There is considerable evidence of competition in the industry all the way from drilling activities to distribution, refining and retail sales at the gasoline pump. The market is now providing the competition that has not existed for 10 years," Farabee said.

Since the advent of the worldwide oil glut exploration and production has decreased domestically. Sen. Farabee gave his thoughts on whether or not drilling would pick up in the Permian Basin.

'There is now speculation about the longterm movement of world oil prices in light on the current oil glut. Certainly, the recovery of the U.S. economy and the economies creasingly important."

of other industrilized nations will greatly influence the demand for energy in "It is clear that market general and oil in particular.

'As the demand for oil increases, we should see the return of some drilling activity. However, many analysts now believe that the real price of crude oil will not rise before 1985. Therefore, one might expect the drilling activity to return to a more moderate pace than existed in late 1981," Farabee said. What does he see as the future of the Permian Basin?

"The long-term future of crude oil markets must mean that the price of oil will continue to rise relative to other prices. Under free market conditions that now exist in the U.S., we may expec to see short-term fluctuations in both the price of oil and in drilling and production activities," Farabee said. "The longterm trend in oil prices is certainly up, and the value of known reserves of oil, like that of the Permian Basin, should continue to rise. Enhanced recovery and strategic infield drilling, therefore will become in-

Oilfield theft

Companies need good identification numbers on all their equipment, Standard said. "A good marking system" is needed, Kloss said, but other practices need improvement also.

Better recordkeeping needs to be practiced by oil field companies, he said. Drilling firms should practice better logistics, Kloss said. An example is to stop delivering items days ahead to a site, as is common practice. The practice of getting equipment to a site too early increases the vulnerablilty of the company, Kloss said.

Why is oil field theft a problem for the community? Standard says the cost is eventually passed on to the public through costs of fuel, costs of insurance and even the costs of the preventive measures. Yet, Kloss feels the effect on the community runs deeper.

"If the problem continues escalating, the rich - and the not-so-rich - will spend less and pinch more due to their losses," Kloss said. Charities, schools, hospitals and others who benefit from the largess of business will suffer. he said. "They'll tighten up and wait for better times."

The cost is not completely in financial terms. Kloss warns, but in human terms as well. People who find oil field theft so easy may turn to another form of crime, Kloss said. "If they're stealing on a daily basis, it's easier to cross the line each time. Next time, they might use a gun at the local supermarket," Kloss said.

Getty Oil plant in area since '53

Getty Oil Co.'s natural gas plant has been a fixture in the East Vealmoor area since 1953, processing many millions of cubic feet of gas in its nearly 20 years of

At East Vealmoor, natural gas is gathered from wells located in five surrounding counties. Some of the wells were drilled back in the early 1950s, according to Glen Welch, plant superintendent.

One of the biggest problems the plant must overcome is the vast size of their plant reserves. Welch says the plant operates over 1,400 miles of pipeline to gather the gas. We are continually bringing new gas on line to help keep our production rate steady. One of the newest fields that we receive natural gas from is in Coahoma, and its a good distance from the plant." Getty's East Vealmoor operation is part of the company's natural gas department headquartered in Tulsa, Okla. The department oversees an operations office located in Pampa, which serves as an operations and technical service center to 14 plants in six states, said John Cygul, Getty information officer.

The Pampa office provides engineering support for new and existing plants, day-to-day evaluation of process problems and laboratory facilities for analytical and enviromental testing, Cygul said.

Natural gas plants were originally referred to as natural gasoline plants because they produced from the gas stream a 26-pound liquid product known as "natural gasoline."As markets developed for residue gas and technology advanced, plants were modernized to further seperate the gas stream into seperate products, according

'The East Vealmoor plant uses a refrigerated oil absorption process to extract liquids from the gas stream. A fine Kerosene-like material comes into contact with the natural gas at low temperatures to extract different products. Liquids produced include various forms of ethane, propane, butane and a 14-pound natural gasoline

The uses for liquid components vary widely; propane for home heating and cooking; and ethane, propane and butane for plastics and petrochemical manufacturing

The East Vealmoor plant processes about 40 million cubic feet of natural gas daily, which yields more than 400,000 gallons of liquid product. Eight underground storage units, each with a capacity of 38,000 barrels, are leached out of salt formations on plant property.

The plant was built in 1951 and was purchased by Skelly Oil in 1967. Getty merged with Skelly in 1977.

The plant now employees some 66 workers at its facility 25 miles north of town. Most of the employees are from ther Big Spring vicinity. "I have the "first team" in nastural gas plant operations working for me," Welch says. "They have a strong record for work without a losttime accident.

Although natural gas processing is Getty's main activity in the Big Spring area, the company also conducts petroleum exploration and production operations. Getty recently began a tertiary recovery project in the East Vealmoor field to boost the ultimate draw from the field.

Getty is conducting an active program involving the search for oil and natural gas throughout the West Texas area. Last September, this activity resulted in a petroleum discovery in Borden County. A development well was completed near the sight last December.

Fiber Glass Systems calls Big Spring home

Fiber Glass Systems is one of the many oilfield-related industries which have made a home in Big Spring. And, although this year's oilfield slump has forced some cutbacks, Fiber Glass Systems' home in Big Spring appears to be secure.

In 1969, the company decided to locate in Big Spring because it needed to be in the middle of the Permian Basin oil action, according to Carl Ritter, company treasurer.

The company manufactures high-pressure fiberglass pipe, which is used primarily by petroleum industry. Fiberglass pipe has a higher initial cost than the traditional steel pipe, according to Ritter, but can quickly pay for itself when corrosive chemicals are involved.

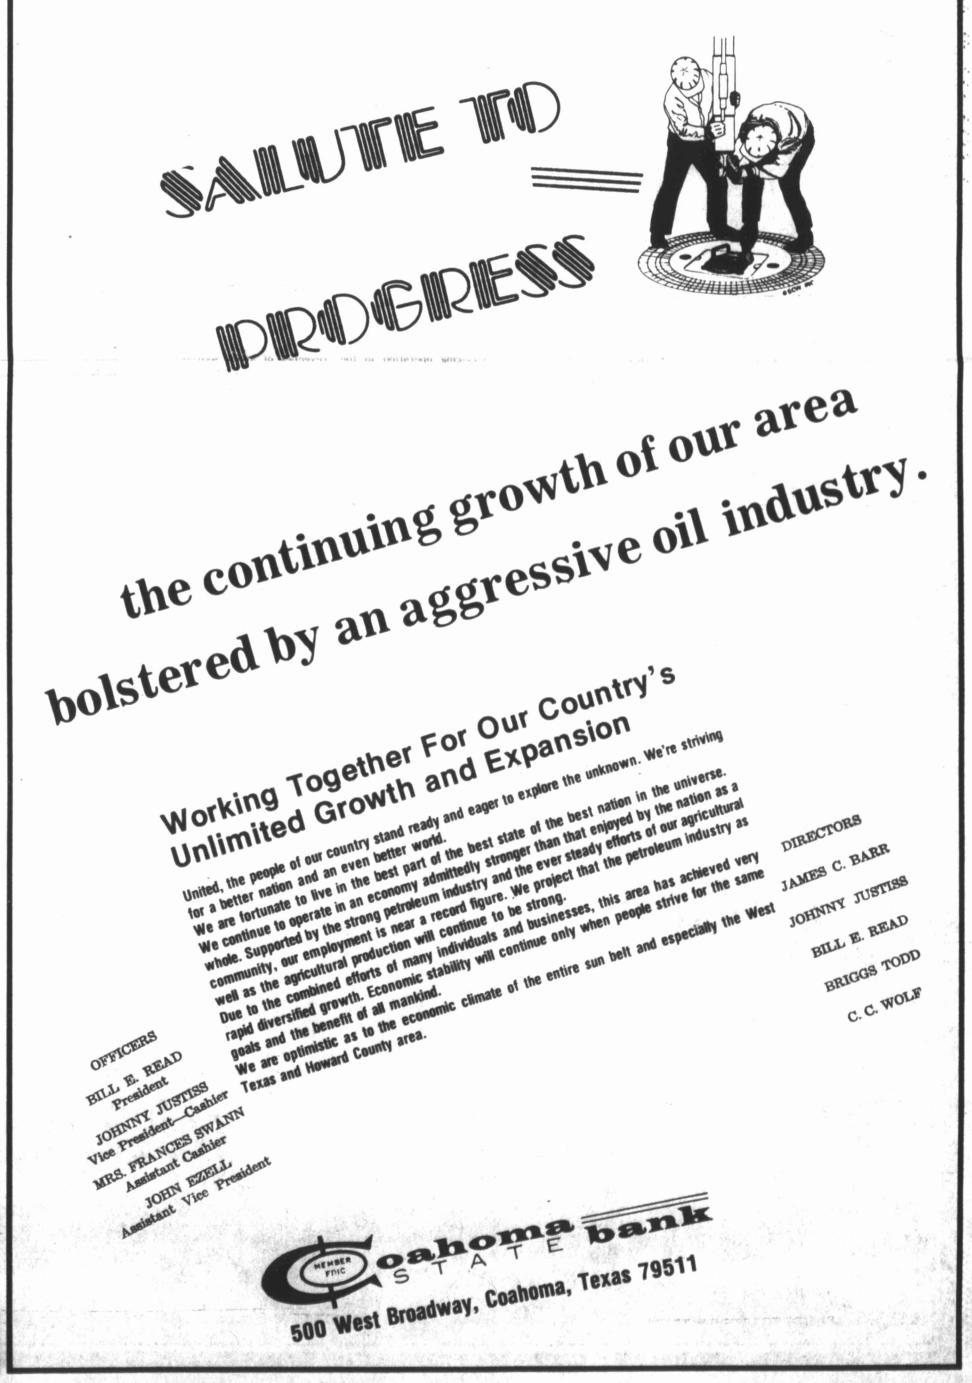

Many oilfield chemicals are extremely corrosive. quickly causing steel pipe to detriorate. "You wouldn't use fiberglass unless corrosion was a problem." Ritter "Treating the steel only prolongs the life fiberglass eliminates the problem."

Ritter said the company has seen steady growth since it opened for business here. Employment reached 160 during last year's boom times, but the slump forced some cutbacks and today's employment stands at a "normal" level of 100, Ritter said. "We'll probably come back to around 140 (employees)," he said, noting that things had been slow but were beginning to pick up.

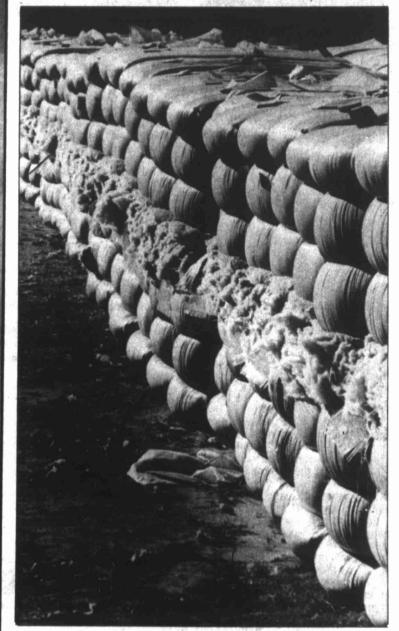

Although the company office headquarters were relocated about two years ago, the manufacturing plant remains in Big Spring, on the North Lamesa Highway. Plans are underway to construct another plant at the office headquarter city of San Antonio, Ritter said.

Fiber Glass Systems products are sold mainly in the United States, although some overseas sales in places such as Germany, France, Argentina and Venezuela are
