Plans made to enforce Blue Law

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

The Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce intends to act on complaints from "both stores and customers" and see that the blue law is enforced locally, chamber president Sidney Clark says.

The blue law prohibits businesses from selling certain items on both Saturday and Sunday. In many cities its enforcement has become practically extinct, but it is still in the law books.

Clark said "I have three letters on my desk" addressed to three local stores — Gibson Discount Center, C.R. Anthony's and K-Mart — saying they "should close completely either on Saturday or Sunday. Or they should cease from selling certain items on one of those days."

The chamber's executive board decided at a recent retail committee meeting to act on complaints — from both customers and other local businesses — and see that the blue law is enforced, Clark said. Why are they so interested in its enforcement? "Because they're in violation of the law," Clark said.

C.R. Anthony's manager Tom Cauthorn said he didn't know why the chamber was concerned about his store because they already close every Sunday. "I think the controversy may be because one Sunday we did stay open, about a month ago... We've asked them (the chamber) before why if they (Gibson's and K-Mart) could stay open, we can't."

Although Gibson manager Ed McCauley was unavailable for comment Friday, a Gibson spokesman said "I don't know what our plans are yet. But we're definitely not going to close."

K-Mart Manager J.F. Truitt was also unavailable. Police Chief Rick Turner said his department intends to begin enforcing the blue law. "We wrote letters to those three stores and said we would enforce the law by checking on those stores on those days," Turner said.

Stores may comply with the law by closing on either Saturday or Sunday or by not selling the prohibited items on one of those days.

Police officials said they didn't necessarily believe or not believe the blue law is needed, however "we are officers of the law and we intend to enforce it," Turner said. Legislators "don't give us any thinking on it or a reason why. They just tell us what the laws are and we enforce it," police Lt. George Quintero said.

Quintero said police "don't expect any problems" from the businesses involved. "We've worked with the business community before and always get 100 percent compliance."

Violation of this particular law has "probably just been condoned for so long that they weren't thinking about breaking the law," Chief Rick Turner said.

"Sometimes we have to have a complaint before taking action. We get caught up in enforcing laws that are more See Blue Laws, page 2-A

200 protest draft

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMIDT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Police today arrested 55 demonstrators who crossed police lines outside Selective Service headquarters.

About 200 demonstrators, mostly young people from various anti-draft groups, rallied in downtown Washington early in the day and then marched to the headquarters in the Georgetown area.

Police, who were nearly as numerous as the demonstrators, cordoned off the area and confined the protesters to a grassy hill across the street from the building.

The arrests came when several of the protesters crossed the police lines and sat down in the street.

Those arrested, 40 men and 15 women, were charged with crossing police lines, a misdemeanor that carries a $50 fine upon conviction.

Most cooperated with officers and walked to police vans to be driven away, although a few went limp and were carried away on stretchers.

Demonstrators carried signs denouncing the Selective Service System and demanding an end to recent indictments of young men for failing to register for the draft.

A few of the demonstrators burned registration forms.

The demonstration forced police to close the street in front of Selective Service headquarters for several hours, but otherwise business at the agency was not disrupted, according to spokeswoman Joan Lamb.

There is no draft, but Selective Service registration is required to provide a pool of names for use in the event of a national emergency.

Registration was instituted two years ago under then-President Carter. President Reagan, although he had campaigned against peacetime registration, decided to continue the program after military rule was imposed in Poland.

DEMONSTRATOR ARRESTED — District of Columbia police arrest demonstrator taking part in the "October 18 Resistance Campaign" today in front of Selective Service headquarters in Washington. The group opposing draft registration vowed to shut down the headquarters for one day. Some 50 people have been arrested so far.

Bess Truman dies at age 97

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bess Truman, the nation's oldest former first lady and the lifelong sweetheart of President Harry S. Truman called "The Boss," died early today. She was 97.

The Truman family physician, Dr. Wallace Graham, said Mrs. Truman died of congestive heart failure. Research Medical Center said she was pronounced dead on arrival at the hospital at 4:38 a.m.

Mrs. Truman lived longer than any other former first lady.

Edith Wilson, wife of Woodrow Wilson, was the oldest at age 89 in 1961. Mary Scott Harrison, the second wife of Benjamin Harrison, died in 1948 at age 90, but was never first lady. The oldest living first lady is 70-year-old Pat Nixon.

Mrs. Truman had been plagued in recent years by a variety of ailments — arthritis, abdominal stress and high blood pressure. On Sept. 2, she was rushed to the hospital from her home in nearby Independence, Mo., with internal bleeding.

Graham said the bleeding, which he attributed to an ulcer in her duodenum, stopped the next day, but Mrs. Truman was not released from the hospital until Sept. 24.

She was hospitalized for six days in August for treatment of hyperkalemia, a potassium buildup caused by diminished kidney function.

In Washington, President Reagan issued a statement saying, "Bess Truman lived a long full life serving her husband, her family and her country with dignity."

"She was a devoted wife, a loving mother and a gracious, unassuming first lady. Bess Truman embodied the basic decency of America. Nancy and I convey our deepest sympathy to her family and to all who will miss this fine lady's goodness."

Mrs. Truman outlived her husband by nearly 10 years. Friends say their childhood romance never flagged — that he was the only man she ever really loved and she the only sweetheart he ever had.

In 53 years of marriage, Mrs. Truman much enjoyed the traditional woman's role of the quiet and unassuming but thoroughly devoted wife and mother. But Truman said she was his closest confidante and adviser on every important thing he ever did — including decisions leading to his upset victory over Thomas E. Dewey in 1948.

"I never wrote a speech without going it over with her," he said of the woman who shared his rise from county official to the U.S. Senate to president.

To some, Mrs. Truman's dignity and reserve left the impression that she was austere, withdrawn and colorless, but those intimates entitled to call her Bessie knew her as warm and gracious, witty and wise.

She said in 1948 that being first lady required "good health and a sense of humor." Of criticism of her husband, she said once, "after 25 years in politics, I've learned to accept it — almost."

And despite her eagerness to avoid publicity for herself, Mrs. Truman became known as a gracious White House hostess and a woman with an amazing ability to remember names.

Observers regarded it as characteristic that she reduced the White House staff by almost half after her husband became president. Guests described her as a housekeeping genius, both in the White House and at the family mansion in Independence.

Known as independent and athletic during her girlhood in Independence — where one magazine writer reported she was the only girl able to whistle through her teeth — Bess Truman was the only daughter in a socially prominent family. She was

Plane overloaded, investigator says

Fourteen killed in skydiving crash

TAFT, Calif. (AP) — An airplane that stalled and crashed in flames on a parachute drop zone, killing the pilot and all 13 skydivers aboard, was carrying twice as many passengers as it was supposed to, a federal investigator says.

"That is not a 14-passenger airplane, even with modifications," said Don Llorente, an investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board who is probing the Sunday crash.

"Under normal seating capacity there would be six passengers and a crew of two, of which only one crew member is required."

The crash of the twin-engine C-45H — a Korean War-vintage plane designed for military use — occurred at a privately operated former military airstrip eight miles southeast of Taft and 130 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

The strip is used by the Taft School of Sport Parachuting, which has operated there for more than 20 years.

"It got 150 feet in the air and stalled out," said Art Armstrong, owner of the club. "It veered off, landed on its left wing tip, and burst into flames like a bomb."

The pilot and owner of the plane was identified today as Morley H. Yarter, 65, of West Los Angeles. Coroner's officials said it may take days to identify the 13 passengers.

Llorente said what appeared to be a pill jar was found on the pilot, and investigators were trying to determine what kind of pills were inside. He also said there was no evidence of required passenger straps in the charred wreckage of the plane.

Airplane passengers are not required to have seats, Llorente said, but passenger restraints or belts are "required for all takeoffs and landings."

The plane is designed to carry a payload of 2,000 pounds, Llorente said. The people aboard each weighed an average of 170 pounds, and each had a 25-pound parachute, for payload of at least 2,730 pounds, he said.

"The issue is why the pilot, with 22 years experience, would take off with 13 passengers," Llorente said. "The overweight aspect is a source of primary concern."

Armstrong identified the victims only as the plane's pilot-owner, an observer, a skydiving student, a skydiving instructor, and 10 experienced sport parachutists.

Coroners worked through the night to match names to the charred bodies, said Kern County sheriff's Lt. John Howard.

The pilot operated his plane out of Van Nuys Airport in the San Fernando Valley north of Los Angeles, Armstrong said, and Llorente confirmed the plane was from Van Nuys originally.

The victims were from communities including Santa Barbara, Lompoc, Santa Maria and San Luis Obispo, Armstrong said.

Eyewitness Herman Dargadz said most of the bodies remained in the wreckage after the plane nose-dived to the ground, although he saw one body about 10 feet away.

Deputy Bill Wonders said emergency workers called to the crash scene immediately realized it was "no use" to look for survivors.

American wins physics Nobel

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — American Professor Kenneth G. Wilson, of Cornell University, won the 1982 Nobel Prize in physics today for his theories about changes in matter and Aaron Klug of Cambridge University won the chemistry prize for his work with electron microscopy.

Wilson, 46, was honored for his theory on "critical phenomena in connection with phase transitions" that solved a classic problem in physics, the announcement by the awards committee said.

The committee said Klug, 56, was cited "for his development of crystallographic electron microscopy and his structural elucidation of biologically important nucleic acid-protein complexes."

Wilson and Klug were the first and second sole winners of the prize this year.

Klug was not immediately available for comment about his prize.

"I'm glad that the champagne will flow freely" at Cornell today, Wilson said in a telephone interview from his home in Ithaca, N.Y.

"Yes I was very surprised and especially so that I'm getting the prize alone," he told The Associated Press.

He said he would have expected to share the award with Michael Fisher of Cornell and Leo Kadanoff at the University of Chicago. The three shared Israel's Wolf Prize in Physics several years ago, he said.

"There's no question that there's greater prestige for me," in winning the prize alone, Wilson said. "I was certainly very proud to share the Wolf Prize with Michael and Leo. I only can only hope that they can participate in the Nobel Prize in the future."

In Chicago, Kadanoff said, "He did magnificent work. He's very, very deserving of it. I couldn't be more pleased."

At Cornell, Fisher said, "That was a very nice thing for him to say. I'm delighted he got the prize. His contribution to theoretical physics has been outstanding."

Fisher "played a leading role through his analysis of experimental data, supported by theoretical analysis and numerical calculations and — probably most important — by taking initiative and acting as a catalyst for further progress," the Swedish Academy of Sciences said in its announcement.

Strike called in Poland

Underground Solidarity leaders mount protests

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland — Fugitive Solidarity leaders urged workers in four cities to stay home today in the second week of sometimes bloody protests over the government's banning of the independent labor union.

No new uprisings were reported over the weekend.

Sources with contacts among the underground union leadership said workers were asked to boycott their jobs in Warsaw, Gdansk, Krakow and Nowa Huta — the model Communist city where police killed a young steelmill electrician during three days of rioting last week.

Worker compliance with other recent Solidarity strike appeals has been spotty and generally ignored in the capital.

Authorities said last Wednesday's shooting of 20-year-old Bogden Wlosik remained under investigation. Earlier reports by the official PAP news agency said Wlosik was mortally wounded when a plainclothes policeman was attacked by demonstrators and opened fire in "self-defense."

Wlosik is the only officially acknowledged fatality in the new spate of unrest touched off by Parliament's Oct. 8 passage of a tough new labor law that banned Solidarity.

Witnesses said Nowa Huta, a Krakow suburb about 160 miles south of Warsaw, was virtually under police occupation as riot squads armed with automatic weapons patrolled the streets Sunday, allowing only small children to place flowers at the spot where Wlosik was shot.

Privately printed funeral notices posted in Nowa Huta said Wlosik would be buried this Wednesday, but official sources in Krakow said no firm date would be set until today. The sources, who requested anonymity, said they feared the funeral might cause tensions to escalate.

Wlosik was the 15th person reported killed in riots since the imposition of martial law Dec. 13, when Solidarity was suspended and hundreds of its leaders were interned, including union chief Lech Walesa.

Union militants staged the first and biggest strike protesting the outlawing of Solidarity last Monday at the sprawling Lenin Shipyards in the Baltic port of Gdansk, where the Soviet bloc's first free trade union was born amid strikes in August 1980.

The strikers demanded Walesa's release and reinstatement of Solidarity, but their protest collapsed after two days when the shipyards were militarized and authorities threatened strikers with five-year prison terms.

Some workers told reporters they had been fired for striking, others reportedly were drafted into the army.

Scattered work stoppages reported across Poland last week were resolved through discussion within a couple of hours.

In a related development, Clark Todd, 38, London bureau chief for the Canadian television network CTV, returned home Sunday after being expelled from Poland for covering the Nowa Huta rioting without proper credentials.

Todd told the news agency Canadian Press that he had a visitor's visa rather than the "blue card" required for working journalists. He said he was interrogated for five hours about his Solidarity contacts after his arrest Friday in Nowa Huta's public square.

When he arrived at the Warsaw airport to board his flight home, officials seized broadcast equipment worth more than $2,500 and some private papers, Todd said.

Lebanese president addresses UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Lebanese President Amin Gemayel came to the United Nations today seeking help in his campaign to rid his country of foreign troops and rebuild it after years of war.

Gemayel and U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar shook hands at the entrance to the Secretariat building and then took an elevator to the 38th floor for a private meeting.

Later in the day, Gemayel was scheduled to address the General Assembly and the 15-nation Security Council.

Gemayel said after his arrival at New York's Kennedy airport Sunday that he had come "to carry to the international community and the American people the hopes and aspirations of the people of Lebanon."

A senior Lebanese official said Gemayel was hoping to negotiate the withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon in talks at the United Nations and with President Reagan in Washington on Tuesday.

Gemayel, who took office Sept. 23 after the assassination of his brother, President-elect Bashir Gemayel, was also expected to ask President Reagan for American help to rebuild his country. Lebanese officials say that could cost $12 billion.

Lebanese Housing Minister Bahaeddin Bsat and the chairman of the Council for Development and Reconstruction, Mohammed Atallah, accompanied Gemayel and were expected to be present at his talks with U.S. officials.

On his arrival, Gemayel referred to "the urgency of the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon and the need for a comprehensive program of reconstruction."

In a speech later Sunday at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, the Lebanese president told 4,500 Lebanese Americans that "very soon, your country will be free and sovereign."

Syria and Israel have said they are willing to withdraw from Lebanon, but Israel insists that Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas still in northern and eastern Lebanon must be the first to leave.

FEELING THE HEAT — Two rig crewmen run for safety from a well fire that rages out of control in southern Ohio. No one has been injured.

Wife suspects foul play

Ex-Braniff executive missing

DALLAS (AP) — The wife of a 51-year-old former Braniff International executive says she has had to keep her emotions in check and organize search parties on her own to find her missing husband.

While Texas Rangers are treating Edson Emerson Beckwith's disappearance as a missing person case, Jane Beckwith said she is sure there is more to it.

Mrs. Beckwith said she suspects foul play, but has no idea what happened to her husband. She hasn't heard from Beckwith in three days, and hasn't received a ransom request.

Beckwith's car was found late Friday night abandoned off a farm-to-market road in remote Northeast Texas, east of Caddo Mills, where a receipt showed he had purchased gas Thursday.

The financial consultant was traveling back from a business meeting in Omaha, Texas, and never made it home Thursday, Mrs. Beckwith said.

"He was coming home for my birthday to take me out to dinner. The people at his meeting said he wanted to leave early to pick up a birthday present for his wife," she said.

"He's always been most prompt. He is a most precise man, a meticulous man," she said.

"I haven't heard of any ransom. Nothing. It's just incredible."

On Sunday, Mrs. Beckwith formed a volunteer search party of neighbors to assist authorities in the East Texas hunt. Two Dallas television stations assisted with helicopters, she said.

Texas Ranger Lloyd Johnston said he found a "reliable witness" Monday morning who saw Beckwith's car Thursday evening at the spot where it was found Friday night.

"We haven't been able to trace it back farther than that yet," said Johnston, who led a search of both sides of Interstate 30 Sunday.

"Yesterday I found some gloves that looked like they had blood or mud on them. I haven't taken them to the lab yet," Johnston said today.

"You know, when you search the interstate highway you're liable to find anything."

Johnston said another witness claimed to have seen Beckwith being forced into another car.

"But I don't put much credibility in that statement. He could have just seen some kids stopping to look at the car," he said.

"So far, it's just a missing person case," said Johnston, the Ranger in charge of the case.

Beckwith's car was discovered by a Texas Ranger shortly before midnight Friday, said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Larry Todd.

"We are handling it as a missing person case and at this point we have no evidence of foul play," Todd said Sunday.

The car was found in Brashear, Texas, about 40 miles east of the Caddo Mills gas station where he was last seen.

"Somebody else had to have driven (the car) back east," Mrs. Beckwith said. "There was no evidence of anything in the car. All the keys, his suitcase and coat were still there. They say there is no evidence of foul play, but obviously something went on."

"It's all very frustrating," she said.

Jury looks into diversion of oil profits

WASHINGTON (AP)—A federal grand jury is investigating charges that an owner of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. improperly diverted $23 million in profits from an oil company he controls to a Swiss affiliate, the Washington Post reported Monday.

The newspaper said the U.S. attorney's office for the Southern District of New York started the investigation of Marc Rich earlier this year. Rich, a New York City resident, is half owner of the film company and is also one of the largest crude-oil traders in the country.

Upon the request of the U.S. attorney's office, the Internal Revenue Service has also entered the case to determine whether Rich's worldwide trading practices violated tax law.

The Post said it interviewed two Texas crude-oil traders who had pleaded guilty and served 10-month prison sentences in connection with unrelated oil transactions.

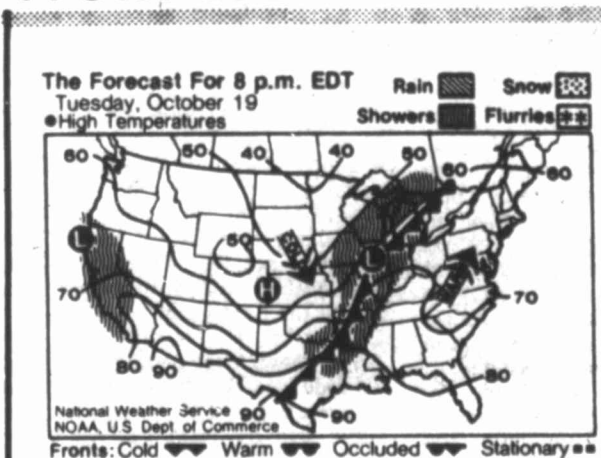

The men, David Ratliff and John Troland, said they told investigators their firm, West Texas Marketing Corp. of Abilene, made transactions with Rich's company, Rich & Co. International Ltd., the Post reported.

The men said they told authorities that Rich's company sold their firm volumes of allegedly price-controlled crude. Their company then allegedly claimed the crude was unregulated and more than doubled the price, thereby generated enormous profits, according to the Post.

Calls to Rich's Manhattan firm and Park Avenue apartment went unanswered overnight. The Post said his attorney, Edward Bennett Williams, refused comment.

7 hurt in speedway crash

CARROLLTON, Texas (AP) — Three people remained hospitalized today after a dirt-track race car smashed through a chain-link fence and then plowed into a crowd at the Buffalo Park Speedway this weekend, officials say.

Four other people were treated and released early Sunday at the Irving Community Hospital, said nursing supervisor Jessie Hooper.

The victims were standing near the pit area at 9:10 p.m. Saturday when a late-model, economy race car driven by Dennis Nelms of Bonham went out of control in a turn and crashed through the fence at the race track in this Dallas suburb.

Nelms, 30, who was not injured, said his brakes and steering failed. The car's brakes had failed three laps before the accident, he said, but he continued to drive in hopes of winning.

"I've never even come close to anything like this," said the 12-year driving veteran. "It's all right for me. I just hope it's all right for them."

A crowd of about 3,000 people had gathered at the speedway for the three-day racing event, which carries a purse of $45,000.

Dirk Bridewell, 12, was listed in stable condition Sunday at Irving Community Hospital with a broken collar bone and injuries to his head, pelvis and abdomen, the spokeswoman said.

Group works to help libraries

There is a new group growing in Texas that seeks to help an age-old institution: the local library.

Books for Texas wants to get more state support for the hundreds of local libraries all over the state. They say that the 31 cents per capita being spent now is sorrowful.

Other states, West Virginia for example, spends $2.40. Many think that figure is not enough; it's a fortune compared to Texas' amount.

The library has a vital role to play in our lives. Television may be more entertaining, but books are still our most important learning tool and resource. It will be that way for a long time, despite many contrary opinions.

Not only is the library vital to the education of young people, it is necessary for continuing education of adults.

School-taught knowledge does not have the same life it once did. Society's changes come too fast and the distractions to real learning are too great. Libraries can become a center for not just school term papers and college research, it can be a place where people can feel free to just go and learn, and enjoy learning.

Knowledge is not generally given a place of importance, but in reality the education of a population is by far the most important economic resource.

Books for Texas has aimed at the simple goal of trying to make sure local libraries have the funding they need. It is a lobbying organization that sees Texas' economic strength. Some of that money, they feel can be spent on simple reading.

Texans have stated a need to get "back to basics" in education. They want their children taught how to read at an early age and they want them taught well. It would help if they had the best materials possible to accomplish that.

Mexico's problems are America's, too

SAN DIEGO — Mexico presents a trickier challenge to this country than Russia, China, Japan and all of Europe. For those distant nations can be deterred or fenced out. But Mexico transmits its disorders directly into the American bloodstream.

That point emerged in the meeting here last week between President Reagan and President-elect Miguel de la Madrid. For the setting here along the border emphasized how much Mexican problems create baffling troubles for the U.S.

The financial problem is now front and center. Mexico is $80 billion in the red to foreign creditors, and lacks the money to pay either interest or principal. Much of the debt is owed to American banks, which would go bust if Mexico defaulted.

To prevent such a catastrophe Washington has organized emergency loans from this country and several international institutions. A moratorium on debt payment is in effect while Mexico negotiates a recovery package with the International Monetary Fund. President de la Madrid, in a chat at a reception given after his official meeting, said he expected an accord with the IMF to be reached by the outgoing president, Jose Lopez Portillo, before his term expires on Dec. 1. If so, new financing will become available and the danger of immediate collapse will be averted.

But in return for IMF support, Mexico will be obliged to accept an austerity program that cuts back government spending and limits economic growth — perhaps to zero. The incoming president acknowledged that the burden of enforcing the program would fall on his shoulders. That obliges him to bear down on several spots that are already raw points in Mexican-American relations.

Illegal immigration for one. Several million Mexicans have come to this country illegally to find jobs already. The financial pinch south of the border has stimulated an even larger flow, which is evident in the number of arrests by the border police just south of here. The austerity program is bound to cause a greater increase over the next few years.

But the U.S. has not yet figured out how to square the demand for Mexican labor with immigration law. And so a problem that defies solution is simply going to grow worse.

Energy is a second sore spot. The huge stores of oil and gas recently discovered in Mexico represent for the U.S. a supply far more secure than any available in Africa or the Middle East. So this country has been pushing Mexico to expand output rapidly.

But rapid development of oil stimulates inflation and gives increase to corruption. And it does almost nothing to solve the most pressing Mexican problem — jobs. Thus by pushing for more energy production, the U.S. contributes to further immigration, and fosters more of the irresponsibility that led to the present financial crisis.

Commerce represents a third sore spot. Mexico is a big buyer of American goods and services, especially along the border. But the present financial crisis has already caused stagnation in many border areas. Sale of retail items to Mexicans is almost flat. So is the market in housing. And the austerity program will further diminish the Mexican appetite for American products.

The more so as the incoming president seems to intend a basic restructuring of the economy. He wants to make Mexico competitive in international markets. That means weaning business away from the pervasive corruption that makes Mexico an extremely inefficient producer. But American interests — it should never be forgotten — also batten on corruption in Mexico.

Managing all these difficulties simultaneously would try any leader. Senator de la Madrid at least understands the problems. He is an economist, versed in government and banking. At the reception after the meeting with Reagan, he observed that Mexico could best meet its responsibilities to the U.S. by solving its own problems. He evinced no trace of the anti-Americanism so pervasive in Mexican politics.

But the incoming president has no doubts about his own. He is a technocrat, not a figure from the heart of Mexico's political powerhouse, the Party of Revolutionary Institutions, or PRI. He lacks the flair and the commanding presence that enabled Lopez Portillo to run the show.

So a reasonable bet is that this country's hard times with Mexico are far from over. For years to come the U.S. will be vulnerable to the many troubles now bred in what is more and more becoming America's soft underbelly.

run more smoothly if the government's monkeywrenches were removed from the machinery. But some of the wrenches, it turns out, were needed to repair the wheels.

It is the genius of the free economy that it does not require the innovator to secure the permission of organized society to launch his schemes. If he can get a few gamblers to bankroll him, he is on his way — free to create, if he can.

If he succeeds, the rewards can be spectacular, and society will share in the gain. If he fails, only he and his improvident backers are the losers.

But it has become increasingly difficult to get an innovative proposal, or even an old routine one, through the layers of bureaucracy that have accumulated in the past 40 years. Just about every private enterprise of any consequence has become ensnared in government red tape.

The problem is this: How much government intervention is necessary to protect the public from the harebrained schemes and grasping hands of private entrepreneurs? But how much government interference discourages free enterprise and results in stagnation?

SEE NO EVIL: How can any president, with the best will in the world, crack down on waste and corruption in the federal government if top bureaucrats ignore misconduct? The answer is simple: He can't.

High officials of the Energy Department have known for more than a year that a printing specialist was moonlighting at a northern Virginia printing company that was doing work for the department. Alerted to this potential conflict by conscientious employees, the bureaucrats did nothing to clear it up.

The employee is now under investigation by a grand jury on charges of funneling government printing contracts to his private employer and taking kickbacks for his efforts. High officials have been called to testify before the grand jury.

The situation is also being investigated by the Energy Department's inspector general, the Government Printing Office's inspector general and the Postal Service's mail-fraud unit.

Top Energy officials have either denied they knew about the allegations of misconduct or refused to comment. The Justice Department attorney who is presenting the case to the grand jury refused to confirm or deny the charges. But my associate John Dillon got the story from Energy Department sources and grand jury witnesses, all of whom asked that their names not be used.

According to these sources, the employee got thousands of dollars' worth of government printing business for his company in violation of regular bidding procedure. On at least one occasion, according to one source, he actually did printing work on Energy Department presses, then packaged the stuff in his company's boxes and billed the government for the job.

Told of Heffelfinger's denial, a source who testified before the grand jury said, "I told him twice."

According to sources, other Energy officials were also informed of the conflict of interest more than a year ago, but, like Heffelfinger, did nothing to resolve the problem.

Bible is strict about divorce

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have a friend whose husband left her recently. He said he was convinced that it was God's will for them to get a divorce. I always thought the Bible was rather strict on divorce, isn't it? — Mrs. V.G.

DEAR MRS. V.G.: This points out the tendency we all can have to substitute our emotions or our own ideas for God's truth. We can be persuaded in our own minds that almost anything is right, and we can talk ourselves into it quite convincingly. But that does not make it true! We need to know what God has said, and we must never substitute our own emotions or thoughts for what God has revealed to us in his perfect Word, the Bible. Listen carefully: God never guides us to do something that is in direct opposition to what he has told us in his Word.

Although I do not know the full circumstances of your friend's situation, you are right in saying that the Bible has a strict view of divorce — much more so than that of our society today. The reason the Bible takes divorce so seriously is that it takes marriage so seriously. Marriage is a lifetime commitment — a vow before God (as well as other people) that the husband and wife will be faithful to one another until death.

One day Jesus was asked if it was lawful (or permissible) in God's eyes "for man to divorce his wife for any and every reason?" He replied, "Haven't you read... that at the beginning the Creator 'made them male and female,' and said, 'For this reason a man shall leave his father and mother and be united to his wife, and the two will become one flesh?' So they are no longer two, but one. Therefore what God has joined together, let man not separate (Matthew 19:3-6).

At the same time, God is able to forgive and heal. We must not take his forgiveness lightly — it cost him the death of his Son on the cross. But when we turn to Christ in true repentance and faith, he will cleanse us of every sin and set our feet on a new path. Pray for your friend, and seek to share the love of Christ with her at this difficult time in her life.

Tax 'scheme' criticized

Dear Editor,
Our esteemed taxing board has now come up with another of their schemes. They now want people to pay this year's taxes on a voluntary basis, based on last year's tax rate, until this year's tax rate is set. Then they can set the tax rates at any amount they want to, then send you a bill for the difference.

You know, these people must think we rode into Big Spring on a load of watermelons. But, I am sure this plan came straight from City Hall. Mr. Davis and Company are squealing, like pigs under a gate. If you run the big spenders out of money, sometimes they will go stark raving mad.

Big Spring is the only town in West Texas that is having this problem. Ask yourself, "Why?" The city last year raised your taxes 28 percent, but did our turkeys tell the people this? Not at all. I think now would be a good time for the recall on every one of our esteemed city dads. They no longer represent the people of Big Spring. They now think they are a power above us dumb taxpayers.

This is the same way in which our federal government has done. Our city dads took an oath of office that they would uphold the laws of the land and protect the constitution of this state to the best of their ability, then went back to their seats and violated our constitutional rights with their little peddler's permit. Which is to protect a few of our businessmen because they have their prices too high and don't want any competition. But, our city dads said they were protecting us from the outside world.

Maybe they think we rode in on pumpkins instead of watermelons.

Today's students

Attending college was one of the greatest things that's ever happened to me and I often think back on those not too distant times to the things I learned, experiences I had and the friends I made.

A while back I had to opportunity to visit one of the larger universities in the area and check out what's happening on today's campus. I was excited at the prospect of hanging out at the student union building, perusing the library and just being on campus like a regular student.

I was amazed at how much my perception of school has changed in the short time I've been out. And I was surprised at the attitudes of some of students. Although I had held some of their same ideas when I was in school, those same ideas seemed foreign and silly to me now that I'm married and in the real world.

Although I don't suggest the impressions I got on that particular weekend hold true for all college students nowadays, I feel I did perceive some general trends I can talk about accurately.

First of all, I was surprised at how much the students were seeking "a good time." The college newspaper was filled with advertisements for happy hours, liquor, beer, dancing, music and the like. The students seemed proud that their school was "a party school," as if that were the most important criteria in selecting a college these days.

Not one time did I hear any praise for a professor, a course or a department. I wasn't in the company of graduate students, however, which could have made a difference, but I still felt the books were not top priority.

I must say I knew students like the ones above in my college days and didn't think bad of them, but now the same kids seem misdirected.

Also these kids seemed to have the impression that a college degree automatically guaranteed them a job — and a good paying one at that. I heard a couple of students bragging about "being able to pick their place" in the business world. I hope they have rich uncles, because right now good jobs aren't ripe for picking in many instances.

I wanted to tell them job hunting is a hard job in itself involving a lot of hours and occasional disappointment. A degree doesn't guarantee anything, but the fact that payments on your college loan will begin in nine months.

The subject of fraternity and sorority pledging popped up with regularity. I was amazed at the $70 fees clubs got for a pledging student and the $100 a month dues some of the more elite clubs charged their members. I wondered if the kids were there to go to college or the country club.

It's really too bad we're so young and naive when we start to college with no idea of who we really are or who we want to become. Many times a student gets swept along by current trends without being able to actually realize his own best course. He may major in business because the job market shows openings, when really his talents lie in teaching or he might study engineering because engineers make a lot of money, when he prefers journalism or writing.

From my observations I believe colleges need to put more emphasis on individuals rather than categories. It seems to me the process of a college education may be getting to be too much of an "assembly line" operation. For those of us who go back for higher education, we'll know what we want the next time we set foot on campus. But the new kids in the dorms are going to learn the hard way until priorities are changed.

I hope my younger contemporaries can cram a bit of learning in between pledging, club meetings, intramurals and hanging out, because down the road it might just come in handy.

Anyone who has ever attended a night session of the Senate, or who has noticed the unerving glitter in the eyes of a congressman as he propounds his latest panacea, or who has scrutinized the gang hanging around the reception room of a party leader, might worry.

For political solutions, invariably more expedient than efficient, have brought us to our present economic state. President Reagan's latest remedies — tight money, tax cuts and free-market measures, all wrapped up in a package called Reaganomics — started off in the clouds but lost altitude rapidly.

The supply-side theoreticians didn't bring the promised prosperity, but, rather, caused the economy to plunge deeper into recession. If the inflation rate has also slowed, it has been caused by a weakened economy, not by the healthy free market that Reagan envisioned.

Our conservative president rejected the "countercyclical stabilization policies" that past presidents have used for 40 years to maintain high employment and keep prices stable. What this profound phrase means is that Reagan's predecessors managed the economy by manipulating fiscal and monetary levers.

Reagan disdained the monetary levers and decided to let the marketplace take care of itself. His theory was that the economy would

Chef offers health tips for people on the road

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer
A vivacious young woman, who made a name for herself as executive chef for New York's Mayor Edward Koch, has developed a program to change the eating habits of plane travelers so they will feel fit when the trip is over, and maybe shed a couple of pounds.

"When embarking on a flight," said 28-year-old Rozanne Gold, "remember that just because the airline says it's mealtime doesn't necessarily mean it's your mealtime. You may feel better just having a snack during the trip."

"It's often a good idea to order a special meal for yourself before boarding," she added. "By ordering at least 24 hours in advance, you can arrange for a low carbohydrate diet, a kosher meal or a fresh fruit plate."

Ms. Gold, who looks more like a fashion model than a kitchen supervisor, said that travelers should be as aware of proper nutrition as top athletes.

"When you're on the go making plane connections and trying to keep track of your luggage, you may need an extra boost," she said. "Have a banana or a glass of freshly squeezed juice or replenish lost body fluids with mineral water."

Ms. Gold must be doing something right, since in the course of her cooking career she has won praise from such notables as Jimmy Carter, Menachem Begin and Sophia Loren.

At present, she is introducing light new eating concepts as co-director of restaurants at New York's Barbizon Hotel, with the single traveler in mind.

Dr. Donohue

Removal of spleen

Dear Dr. Donohue: I was in an accident a year and a half ago and lost my spleen. It was removed. I had heard about the need for the spleen, and that people who didn't have the organ had to get the pneumococcal vaccine. When I asked my doctor, he agreed I should have it. In fact, he was adamant about it and wouldn't let me leave his office without it. I got the shot, but had a bad reaction to it. Still, I was told I should have this protection periodically. How often? Should I get it at all, having had the initial reaction? — Mrs. W.G.

A person who, for whatever reason, has had his spleen removed has lost a valuable one-two punch against germs. The spleen helps fight infections two ways — by trapping bacteria and by producing antibodies against them. This is why the vaccination has been recommended for you.

The vaccine provides immunity against the most common kind of pneumonia organisms, pneumococcus. The side effects from the shot are usually mild. There may be swelling and redness at the injection site, and there may be a fever. Serious reactions are rare, occurring in only five out of every million persons who get the vaccine. If you had a truly serious reaction, the doctor would be reluctant to repeat the shot.

The pneumococcus organism does, in fact, respond well to post-infection treatment with penicillin, so you would not be totally at its mercy should you not be able to have the vaccine's protection. Vaccine protection usually lasts at least three years.

We are not really certain how long beyond that one might remain protected. You will have to check back with your doctor and let him determine just how serious your past reaction was and whether or not you should receive future shots.

(And on the subject of spleens):

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a 67-year-old female. I was having severe pain in my left side. The doctor ordered X-rays and they showed everything normal except for calcification in my spleen. The doctor said the pain would subside in time, and it did. Why did the doctor not give me any medication for this? Just curious. — A.W.K.

My best guess is that the flecks of calcium that showed in the X-ray were old calling cards from a previous and now inactive infection with the fungus, histoplasma. Your return address indicates that you are from an area of the country where that organism is prevalent.

The calcification does not mean you have the infection. It means that sometimes in the past the fungus entered your body, was filtered into the spleen, and became encased in a jail cell of calcium. You probably didn't even realize at the time that all this was going on or that you had the infection. Perhaps the only symptoms were those of a mild cold. When such things occur in the spleen they do not cause obvious symptoms.

Your doctor can tell you whether or not I have made the correct guess in this. Of course, there are other organisms that can be involved besides the fungus I mentioned, but the scenario is the same. I cannot attribute your cramping and pain to this situation, however. I have no explanation for that, but I am glad you no longer have those.

Troubled with gout? To learn about new treatment for this painful disease, write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "Gout — The Modern Way to Stop It." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Abby

Obscene caller

DEAR ABBY: The most effective way I have found to deal with obscene phone calls is to keep a referee's whistle near the phone. As soon as I realize it's an obscene call, I give the caller an earful! All it takes is one shrill blast into the phone and the caller hangs up. And you can bet he won't call again.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote in some time ago telling how I handled obscene phone calls and you printed my letter. Please print it again. If not, please send it back. It's the only one I have left.

MARY W. IN ORANGE, TEXAS

DEAR MARY: It's worth another shot, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My experience may help women who don't know how to handle obscene phone calls. Many years ago, when I was an attractive young woman, my telephone rang, and when I answered it, I heard a male voice speaking all this filthy language. I had never heard such dirty talk in my life! Then it occurred to me that the caller would get no thrill out of talking to a deaf old lady, so that's what I pretended to be.

"I said in a very weak and shaky voice, 'What did you say?'"

"The man then repeated his obscene message — only louder."

"In the same croaking, shaky voice, I again said, 'What did you say? I can't hear you.'"

"The caller started to shout his filthy spiel again when I heard another male voice in the background say, 'Hang up, you fool!'"

"The fool hung up and never called back."

DEAR ABBY: I know that the telephone company recommends that the best way to deal with obscene phone calls is to hang up. Sorry, I don't buy that.

Why should some filthy-mouthed or possibly deranged pervert get away with making an innocent person a victim of such abuse?

I say, call the telephone company and demand that something be done. You can't tell me that in this age of sophisticated electronic miracles, the telephone company couldn't monitor a telephone line if it wanted to.

I would also call the police. I am sick of seeing the rights of law-abiding citizens trampled on while criminals go unpunished!

PTA City Council to endorse funding

The Big Spring PTA City Council met Wednesday at 10 a.m. in the high school board room and voted to endorse Level 4 funding that would provide state funds to the Texas Public Libraries in the amount of $1.50 per capita.

Howard County Library needs the support of the funding to provide more books, say PTA officials. They also need funds to increase the leasing of current and popular books, for access to a shared collection of films, and for the availability of automated library services from the West Texas Library System with reference back-up services.

Funds would also allow access to the services of a graphic artist and the purchase of more popular books in Spanish.

Barbara Claxton, president, said a county wide training session on Drug Abuse will be held at 7 p.m. today in the Texas Electric Reddy Room. The training session will be led by Beverly Barron, Texas' War on Drugs regional director. School coordinators will also be present. The meeting is open to the public, and the PTA says it is seeking parental support at the meeting. The Fall PTA membership report was given by Christina Lawrence with Kentwood reporting 127 percent participation, Moss 125 percent, Washington 120 percent, and Marcy 128 percent. Membership totals sent in to the State PTA office determine the number of delegates each PTA Local may send to the State Convention.

The State Convention is to be held in Fort Worth Nov. 21-23. Each local unit with more than 50 members may be represented by its president or an alternate and one additional voting delegate for each 50 members.

Superintendent Lynn Hise gave an overall view of the Big Spring Independent School District's testing programs and answered questions concerning the tests given to students.

Members representing local units were Wendell Ware and Christine Lawrence, Kentwood; J.B. Cushing, Janet Murley, Nelda Reagan, and Janice Mayes, Marcy; M.A. Barber and Barbara Claxton, Moss; Jean Wilder and Duanna Chester, Washington; and Superintendent Lynn Hise.

District 17 President Dorothy Coleman thanked the Big Spring Council for hosting the fall workshop and said that 109 people from Alpine, Midland, Odessa, Monahans and Big Spring attended.

Rockin' Robin goes hit, hit, hit, hit

Hit-happy shortstop leads Milwaukee, 6-4

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Hits are coming in bunches for Robin Yount, bringing his Milwaukee Brewers within one victory of winning the World Series.

Milwaukee used Yount's second four-hit game of the Series and some tritty pitching by Mike Caldwell for a 6-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in Sunday's pivotal fifth game.

That gave the Brewers a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven Series, with Game 6 set for Busch Stadium Tuesday night. Veteran Don Sutton will try to finish the Series off for Milwaukee while rookie John Stuper goes for the Cardinals, hoping to force it to a decisive seventh game Wednesday night.

The Brewers were on the ropes in the Series, trailing two games to one and losing 5-1 in the seventh inning of Game 4. Then they exploded for six runs — two of them on a clutch single by Yount — to win that game and came right back Sunday to take Game 5, with Yount's blazing bat leading the way.

So suddenly, Milwaukee is in charge of this Series, put in that position by the shortstop who enjoyed a dream season and seems capable of lifting this team by the scruff of its neck whenever necessary.

Brewer fans chant "MVP, MVP, MVP!" every time Yount comes to the plate.

They're talking about his .331, 29-home run, 114 runs-batted-in season. But his Series numbers of 11 hits in 21 at-bats, a .524 batting average, 17 total bases and six RBI border on the awesome. His slugging percentage is .810 and climbing.

MVP, indeed. "I have a couple of cats," Yount said. "I don't need another."

He may just have to cope with the problem if he keeps up this one-man assault on the Cardinals pitching staff.

Yount's 11 hits are oneshort of the record for a six-game Series set by Billy Martin of the New York Yankees in 1953 and two short of the record for a seven-game series, set by Bobby Richardson of the Yankees in 1964 and matched by Lou Brock of the Cardinals in 1968.

The irony of Yount's explosive series is that it has come after a poor playoff. The shortstop slammed a pair of homeruns on the final game of the regular season, turning back Baltimore's challenge of the Brewers in the American League East. But his bat fell silent in the AL Championship Series with 4-for-16 against California. He had no RBI.

"All hitters know there are going to be streaks," he said. "You don't always hit the ball that well and you don't always see it that well.

During the playoffs I was not seeing the ball well. Now, I am."

Yount had four hits in the first game of the Series, a performance that was somewhat overshadowed because Paul Molitor, his partner at the top of the Brewers batting order, set a record with five safeties. But Yount stayed in the hunt and on Sunday became the first man ever to have two four-hit Series games.

"I'm not out to break any records," he said. "If they come, that's fine. But winning the World Series is the only goal I've ever set. That's what I strive for."

Yount got the Brewers started in the first inning Sunday with an infield single. He moved up on a hit by Cecil Cooper, and both runners advanced on Cardinal pitcher Bob Forsch's wild pickoff throw. Ted Simmons' bouncer scored Yount.

St. Louis tied the score in the third on a triple by David Green and a double by Keith Hernandez, who snapped out of an 0-for-15 Series slump with three hits.

In the third, Molitor walked, Yount — there that man again — doubled and Cooper delivered an RBI groundout. Charlie Moore doubled and scored on Molitor's single to make it 3-1 in the fifth.

The Cardinals picked up a run in the seventh on a walk and hits by Lonnie Smith and George Hendrick, but Yount got that run back with a two-out homer in the bottom of the seventh.

"It was a fastball up a little and out over the plate," said Yount. "They've been pitching me away the whole Series."

That, apparently, is by design. "We kept trying to get the ball in a spot," said Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog "and every time we get it in the spot, he hits it."

As the old Henny Youngman joke goes — "A man goes to the doctor and says, 'It hurts when I do this,' and the doctor replies, 'Then, don't do that.'"

"It's a little surprising they stay in one spot," noted Yount.

In the bottom of the eighth, Herzog went to the bullpen for Bruce Sutter, who has one win and one save in this Series. The idea was to keep the Brewers in the Cardinals' sights. It didn't work.

"I used him because I wanted to stay close and take a shot at it," said Herzog. "He gave up two runs."

And this time, the Brewers did their damage without Yount. Singles by Ben Oglivie, Moore and Gantner, sandwiched around a walk, made it 6-2 and it looked like a laugher. The Cardinals had only three outs left but Caldwell, who had been staggering, didn't have that many.

He had pitched a three-hit shutout in the opener but had surrendered twice that many in the first three innings Sunday.

"This was your basic Mike Caldwell game," the pitcher said. "Eight or nine hits, two or three walks and a couple of strikeouts. I don't overpower anyone."

After Molitor threw out Lonnie Smith on a good play to open the inning, doubles by Green and Hernandez and a single by Hendrick made it 6-4. It was the 14th hit off Caldwell and the last one. Bob McClure, the reliever who'd rather start, came in and surrendered a single to Darrell Porter, putting the tying runs on base.

Willie McGee struck out and then Gene Tenace pinch hit for Ken Oberkfell, who had three hits in the game.

"I knew that Obie had three hits," said Herzog. "but I wanted to take a crack at a home run and I thought Tenace could do it."

The pinch-hitter jumped on McClure's first pitch and drilled it to left, well short of the wall, for the final out. It was the second save in a row for McClure, who pitched in the shadow of Rollie Fingers during the season and took a back seat to Peter Ladd in the AL playoff.

Now the Brewers, who came off the deck to beat Baltimore for the division and the Angels for the pennant, are ahead for a change.

"This is a little different situation for us," said Moore. "We've been behind the last couple of weeks. We're putting the pressure on someone else and now it's up to them to catch us."

TOUGH TIME FOR WHITEY — St. Louis Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog wipes his eyes as he is surrounded by reporters in the Cards clubhouse after the team's 6-4 loss to the Brewers Sunday in the fifth game of the World Series.

Few fans cheer on all-stars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Game One of the NFL Players Association-sponsored exhibition may have been a symbolic victory for the striking players even while it was a financial loss for Turner Broadcasting System.

The National Conference East took a 23-21 victory over an AFC East squad Sunday in the 55,045-seat Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington, D.C. Only 8,760 tickets were sold and the crowd didn't look that big.

Meanwhile, Robert Wussler, vice president of Turner Broadcasting that is paying $500,000 per game to the union, said the cable company "did not come close to covering costs, but we're committed to next week's game. There was tremendous pressure on the advertisers."

Wussler said he had no proof of pressure on advertisers from the league or television networks. "We just know there was tremendous pressure on the advertisers," he said.

But the players, whose game will feature the league's western divisions tonight, were satisfied with Sunday's effort.

Brig Owens, the union's commissioner in charge of the games, said, "Everybody thought we weren't going to be able to put it on. We did it in just a week. Just the fact we got it off proves it is a success."

GREAT SEATING AVAILABLE — Fans didn't have trouble finding an empty seat at Sunday's all-star game at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium in Washington, pitting the National Football League Players Association teams

Owens said the NFC East team will meet the winner of tonight's contest next Sunday in Toronto.

Redskins' place-kicker Mark Moseley, named the game's most valuable player after kicking three field goals — including a game-winning 45-yarder with 1:01 remaining — said: "The players feel that a game is a game and the union is made up of players who want to play football. Management is not letting us do it. They can solve the problem if they want to come up with a contract that is fair to the players.

Quarterback Gary Danielson of the Detroit Lions, who threw touchdown passes of 13 yards to John Spagnola of Philadelphia and 48 yards to Mel Gray of St. Louis, said, "We're really proud that we could have pulled it off, especially with the tremendous pressure some of the players have been under."

Danielson said several of the players had been contacted by their team's management and coaches and asked not to play in the union-sponsored game, though he declined to identify anyone.

But I can't see a settlement coming within the next 24 hours."

Since Kagel, a 73-year-old San Francisco lawyer, took control of these talks, the two sides have scratched and clawed their way through non-economic issues, spending as many as 19 hours at the table in a 24-hour stretch.

But the operative word still is money — $1.6 billion, to be exact. The owners have offered it in a five-year package. The union wants it in four years. Neither side has budged.

Twenty months ago, the union proposed a fixed wage scale for all players, based principally on years of service. It proposed that those salaries be paid from a central fund, filled with money from a fixed percentage of the league's gross revenues (since modified to a percentage of the NFL's TV revenues). And it proposed that the fund be administered independently.

Those demands have stuck in management's craw from the outset. It is unlikely that, once the talks move deeply into the economic issues, they will be resolved in just a day or so.

(See "Fifth week" on page 2-B)

Garvey meets secretly with Rooney

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Union chief Ed Garvey returned to the negotiating table as the National Football League players' strike entered its 28th day, following a secret meeting with Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers and a member of the owners' executive committee.

Garvey and several members of the NFL Players Association's negotiating committee met Sunday with Rooney at Martin Airport in Essex County, Md., less than an hour's drive from this Baltimore suburb where intense and extensive talks have been going on since last Tuesday under the direction of private mediator Sam Kagel.

Neither the nature of the Garvey-Rooney meeting nor who asked for it were known. Both Rooney, contacted by telephone at his home, and union sources refused comment.

Rooney and Garvey set up a meeting of the union chief and the owners' six-member executive committee here Oct. 5, when Garvey failed to sell the owners on the union's wage-scale concept, a pivotal part of its demands for a new collective bargaining agreement.

The talks, which recessed at midnight Sunday, have yet to address in depth the economic issues, the primary reason the union on Sept. 21 called the first in-season strike in the NFL's 63-year history.

And as the talks entered their seventh day, time all but officially ran out on next weekend's games, the fifth to be affected by the dispute.

"It doesn't look like there's any way they can be played," a management source close to the talks said of the Oct. 24-25 games which, if lost, would reduce the season to a maximum 13 weekends. NFL owners and Commissioner Pete Rozelle have said 13 or possibly 12 games would be the minimum acceptable number to maintain the "integrity" of the season. And Coach Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings has been quoted as saying he would have to have his players in camp by a Monday in order to be ready to play the following Sunday.

"You're talking about the players having six or seven days to get back and get ready, and maybe even two or three days of two-a-days (twice-daily workouts)," the management source said. "Maybe they would get them in if a settlement came right at the borderline hour.

JVs capture third in 4-A-A-A-A-A tourney

The Big Spring High junior varsity took third place in a District 4-A-A-A-A-A tournament held Saturday at the BSHS gym.

The Lady Steers whipped San Angelo 15-12, 15-3 to take third place in the eight-team tournament.

The JVs opened the day-long event with a 15-10, 17-15 decision over Midland High but then dropped a three-set match to eventual champion Cooper. The Coogs won 15-3, 1-15, 15-2 and then downed Midland Lee in the championship game.

Finishing behind Big Spring were Central, Midland High, Abilene High, Odessa High and Permian.

Offensive sparks for the Lady Steers were Sheri Graham, Jana Mathews and Tammy Yancey while Yancey, Debbie Donelson and Tonya Gilstrap sparkled on defense.

The JVs resume their district schedule Tuesday with a rematch in Abilene with Cooper.

Eggelston takes two BSHS weekly awards

Cornerback Scott Eggelston, who set two Big Spring scores Friday night against Cooper, won two awards this week from the Steer coaching staff.

Eggelston was named Top Steer as the best defensive player and also took home the Hawk Award. In the game, the Steer senior intercepted a pass to set up Carl Green first quarter field goal and then blocked a CHS punt in the fourth quarter to set up the second Big Spring touchdown.

Other awards went to Johnny Smithwick, Conan; George Bancroft, Bullet; and Dale Crenshaw, Golden Spike.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, OCT. 19, 1982

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is fine for investigating whatever you don't understand and for thinking out a course of action that will bring more abundance in the future. Be alert to sudden changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have good ideas for making your business affairs more productive, so put them in operation quickly.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Talk over with associates better ways of handling business affairs. Secretive affairs are exposed and you know how to handle them.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Any problems at home can be solved in the minimum of time by acting wisely. Come to a complete agreement with a former foe.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study new outlet that appeals to you since it could prove quite profitable. Take time for health improvement.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be sure to handle your money wisely so you won't come up short later on. Expressing your finest talents could prove lucrative now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Add more efficiency to your end of a bargain and gain more profits thereby. You can easily become a more popular person.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Ideal day to study your property and to know what to do for improvement. Be ready to make a fine impression on others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You could find yourself in a scrappy mood which could only lead to trouble, so forget any errant impulses.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Confer with an expert and get good advice on how to gain your cherished personal goals. Express happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Listen to the ideas of a rather crutchy friend who has your interests at heart and then you can gain your aims with ease.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Follow your hunches for best results today. Spend as much time as possible with the one you love. Be cheerful.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study new outlets that fascinate you and could bring you much prosperity in the future. A pleasant surprise could come tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be able to figure out many problems, so be sure to give the finest education you can so that there can be real success in this chart. One who will be interested in modern methods. Permit progeny to develop own philosophy. "The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Newspaper office damaged

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (AP) — Four wine bottles filled with gasoline were ignited and thrown against the building housing the weekly Lakota Times and the publisher said the attack apparently was in retribution for a column he wrote critical of the American Indian Movement.

"I see a pattern," Giago said. "You can only have so many instances, and they stop being coincidences."

The bombing was being investigated by the Oglala Sioux tribal police because the paper's offices are on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation. Giago said he will ask the FBI and the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs to join in the probe.

"We've reached a point where my civil rights are being violated," Giago said. "Indian reservation or not, we're still entitled to freedom of the press."

UP, UP AND AWAY — Two unidentified people float in a new amusement ride called "Flyaway" in Las Vegas, Nev. The flyers are supported by winds of up to 120 mph, produced by an airplane engine and propeller. The ride was unveiled Thursday.

Prospectors search Amazon

By BRYNA BRENNAN Associated Press

BELEM, Brazil — Deep within the Amazon jungle, new pioneers are prospecting for mineral riches with the hope they can prevail over the "green hell" of tropical heat and wilderness that so often defeated their predecessors.

The government says the 1.3 million square-mile Amazon River basin contains tons of gold, the world's largest iron ore reserves, manganese, nickel, bauxite, copper and tin. New roads are being built, rails are under way and a Wild West atmosphere has sprung up with the overnight boom towns.

Brazil's right-wing military leaders consider the Amazon's wealth a means of assuring economic freedom in the future and a ticket for buying confidence today. Brazil has a foreign debt of more than $60 billion, largely because it does not have enough oil for its needs.

Many workers head for the jungle projects to escape chronic land disputes and the poverty that plagues so many of the country's 125 million people.

But there is an element of danger in the steamy and unpredictable Amazon jungle, which covers more than half of Brazil, the world's fifth-largest country. While there have been success stories, there have been failures that cost the government and individuals their money and their dreams.

Among the successes: Thousands of prospectors are discovering gold in the Amazon, increasing the largest in the world, is being constructed 186 miles south of Belem to provide the energy to turn bauxite into aluminum. The once sleepy little town of Tucuruí which sits on the Tocantins River now boasts a population of 60,000 and has jet flights from Rio de Janeiro, Brasilia and Belem.

President Joao Figueiredo has described Carajas as the "salvation of Brazil." The government expects the minerals to bring in billions of dollars.

Foreign firms, including Alcan of Canada, Reynolds Aluminum of the United States, as well as Spanish and Norwegian companies have joined in a consortium with the Brazilian government to develop bauxite.

The new pioneers must contend with the same dangers their predecessors faced — malaria, snakes, leprosy, tuberculosis and occasional Indian attacks.

The two-lane road that runs north from Brasilia, the inland capital, to Belem on the coast, opened the frontier and spawned colonization along the 1,200 mile stretch. Created in the same package that gave birth to Brasilia in 1960, the road is now lined with scores of villages, restaurants and small hotels. Jose Vicent Vaz de Lima of the Planning Ministry said the population along the route has grown from 300,000 in 1959 to 6 million in 1980.

The east-west Trans-Amazon Highway, however, is another story. The 3,350 mile road, started in 1970, was intended to open up the Amazon and give the poor in the northeast a chance to escape the misery of chronic droughts by moving west to homesteads. The government offered the pioneers a home, tools and land for a nominal price.

The government planned on moving 5 million people to the Amazon. "I think they only got 40,000," Goulding said.

The jungle has grown across many stretches of the TransAmazon and the rains make other parts impassable at certain times of the year.

Some people call it a victory for the "green hell."

Jacques Yves Cousteau, the famed ocean explorer, recently made a trip down the Amazon and said the jungle was ripe for mining.

"With the technology available today," he was quoted as saying in Brazil's Veja news magazine, "there is no problem whatsoever to explore for petroleum or minerals in the forest without danger."

WHO'S ON TOP — Roger Daltrey of the British rock group The Who appears on the giant video screen over the stage in Shea Stadium's outfield. The screen and stage are framed in lights by the letter H of WHO that stretched across the outfield at the New York concert last Tuesday. More than 70,000 New Yorkers saw the group in what is supposed to be their last tour.

The Who fill Shea Stadium

NEW YORK (AP) — The Who weren't on first, they were in deep center field, and more than 70,000 people went to Shea Stadium to hear them last week.

The Who, the acclaimed 18-year-old British rock group currently on an American tour announced as its final one, was playing the first of two concerts on a clear, mild night.

Everyone seemed to feel excitement and fun and, even more, a joyful sense of community and belonging. A great many left reserved seats to join the standees, milling around near home plate or crowding close together nearer the stage.

The sound system was good. Roger Daltrey, wearing what looked like a beige silk suit and white shirt with collar turned up, said, "The Beatles wore a suit so I got a suit." Then he sang, "Behind Blue Eyes" and the audience sang along.

The audience sang along on several others also, loudest on "Pinball Wizard" and "See Me, Feel Me," from the rock opera "Tommy," composed by Who lead guitarist Peter Townshend. The long show included songs from all phases of the Who's career, including several from the new album, "It's Hard."

Forty-foot high letters, WHO, extended across the outfield. The H, wide like a football field goalpost, made the sides and roof of the stage. Above the crossbar of the H was a screen that looked like the movie screen at a drive-in. From a three-level, lighting structure on the pitcher's mound, Who members were photographed in close-up. The seconds-delayed video was seen by the audience on the screen.

The Beatles played twice from a little stage on second base at Shea Stadium, in 1965 and 1966. Grand Funk Railroad played on a little stage on the pitcher's mound, in the rain, in 1971.

The last rock group at Shea was Jethro Tull in 1976.

The Who are the first to play Shea two nights in a row and the first to sell tickets for the field.

The evening began, for the 20,000 fans who were already there, with a set by the David Johansen Band at 7 p.m. The Clash, the most successful survivor of the British punk rock bands, was the official opening act.

Seventy-six injuries were reported in the crowd, many among people who arrived without tickets to listen to the music outside the stadium. Only 18 people were taken to hospitals.

The Who tour began Sept. 22 and runs, after 20 concerts in 16 cities, through Sunday. Then, after a holiday in England, the second leg goes from the day after Thanksgiving through mid-December. Townshend has said that there may be a few concerts in Europe before the Who disbands.

The Rolling Stones didn't say their 1981 American tour was their last but some fans wanted to see them, thinking it probably would be. The Who says this is its last tour and some think they'll be back.

Who concerts are selling out — in a year when some well-known rock performers are playing smaller halls and still not selling out. The tour is expected to gross more than the Rolling Stones' 1981 tour, the biggest money-making tour in rock history.

Silverman's 'Farrell' above average

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — Former NBC president Fred Silverman's first network program as an independent producer, "Farrell for the People," has a little "Hill Street Blues" flavor. But the aftertaste is not nearly as good.

Then again, the TV movie on NBC tonight is superior to some programs Silverman bought when he was running the network. It's certainly better than "Hello Larry."

It also beats the movie competition on ABC tonight, "Forbidden Love," which asks if a relationship between a woman in her 40s and a man in his 20s can work. It's a question that only television seems to care about.

"Forbidden Love" stars Andrew Stevens and Yvette Mimieux.

"Farrell for the People" stars Valerie Harper, who hasn't done much TV since playing Rhoda Morgenstern in the "Mary Tyler Moore Show" and then her own program. Miss Harper has lost weight and found exercise, so it's defense. The case falls to Liz Farrell (Miss Harper). As circumstances would have it, this is her first major trial.

Most legal shows focus their sympathies on the defense, treating the prosecution as insensitive and rigid. Of course, Liz Farrell is different. She cares and even shows insecurity and feelings, presumably because she's a woman.

"Farrell for the People" rises above typical movie fare in its courtroom authenticity, gritty feel and occasionally clever dialogue. But it falls down with standard characters and relationships. One predictable element has Liz and a public defender — opponents in court — dating on the outside.

Miss Harper is the kind of TV name who makes a pilot movie marketable for a series, but she doesn't carry off the role. Maybe if she played an overweight, single Jewish girl from the Bronx.

Beware of love stories that begin with goopy songs. "Forbidden Love" opens with Dan Hill singing, "I don't care what your friends may say."

Dr. Casey Wagner, a young intern played by Stevens, and Joanna Bittan, a wealthy, sophisticated divorcee played by Miss Mimieux, fall in love and begin living together in her palatial estate.

Moving out of his dormitory wasn't an easy decision. His parents don't approve. Neither does her daughter. (But don't worry. This isn't "The Graduate." He doesn't fall in love with the daughter.)

Although Casey and Joanna come from different baby booms, they are two beautiful human beings. And passionate love conquers all for a while. One day he's watching dorm pranks, the next day he's on Joanna's cocktail party circuit saying, "Your house is exquisite."

Eventually her expensive gifts make him feel like a gigolo, forcing some more deep thinking. She begins acting like his mother, disapproving of his friends' immature behavior.

TV Tonight

not surprising that her character, an assistant district attorney in New York, jogs to work and pumps iron.

"Farrell for the People" is a development project, which means if it develops an audience, it could be an NBC series soon. If so, "Farrell for the People" will have to develop some original plots. This one is a shameless swipe of the celebrated Jack Abbott-Norman Mailer situation.

Jed Carter, an ex-con whose writing talents were nurtured by famous macho author Vince Raleigh, is charged with murdering a waiter. Carter claims self-
