Economy's growth slow GNP gains, but recession not dead yet

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

The U.S. economy grew slightly in the third quarter of the year, the government said today. But the rate of increase was so small, even with a gain in the previous quarter, that economists were unwilling to lay the recession to rest.

Typically, two quarters of growth signal the end of a recession, just as two quarters of decline are seen as evidence of a recession.

The Commerce Department said in the July-September period the economy grew at an annual rate of 0.8 percent, following a 2.1 percent gain in the spring quarter.

In past years, recessions have been reversed by annual growth rates of about 7 percent.

But economists were cheering the government's report of a pickup last month in housing starts as fresh evidence that home-building may help lead the economy out of recession.

The stock market, meanwhile, remained in a holding pattern in the early going today. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 0.92 points to 1,012.88 after one-half hour of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that housing starts jumped 14.4 percent in September from the month before to an annual rate of 1,146,000. And starts on single-family houses alone increased 6.6 percent to a rate of 663,000.

"Growth in home-building appears likely to assume its customary leading role in the economic recovery" of the nation, said Commerce Undersecretary Robert Dederick.

"Our feeling is that housing will continue to improve with interest rates declining," said Michael Sumichrast, chief economist at the National Association of Home Builders.

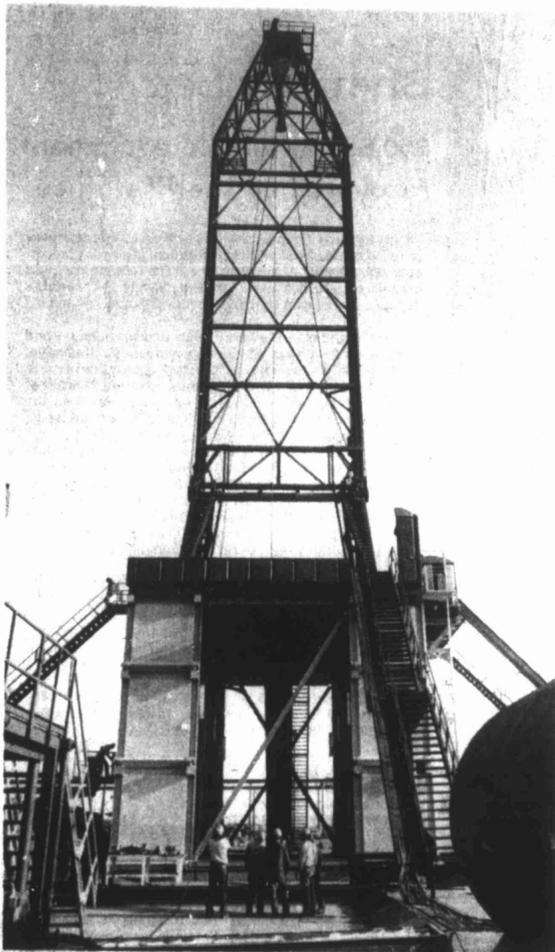

The Commerce Department also reported that Americans' personal income rose 0.3 percent in September from the month before, while personal consumption spending rose 1 percent.

"The consumer, in his infinite wisdom, may have decided he's had enough of this recession," said Robert Ortner, chief economist for the Commerce Department.

But a private economic forecaster, Donald Straszheim of Wharton Econometrics, focused on the income figures.

"They especially reflect continued weakness in payrolls, and I don't think there's any reason to expect that October will be much better," he said.

THE BIG RIG—Oilfield Industrial Lines erected their biggest rig ever Tuesday at the Industrial Park. In case you're wondering just how big the rig is, O.I.L. chief engineer Ron Osborn says the rig is rated at 30,000 feet drilling depth, is powered by a 3,000 horsepower drawworks, uses two 1,600 horsepower mud pumps, and is rated at one and a half million pounds hook load capacity. If that doesn't mean much to you, the mast is 150 feet tall, and sits atop a 36-foot substructure. To grasp that visually, note the worker descending the stairs to the left and the worker on top of the stairs at the right center of the photo. Osborn said the rig, which carries a price tag of approximately $10 million, has been sold to the Western Drilling Company of Oklahoma City to be used in drilling gas wells in the Anadarko Basin of Oklahoma.

Singing the blues

Local stores to heed enforced blue law

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

The managers of K-Mart and Gibson's discount stores say that, although they've violated it in the past, their current plans are to abide by the blue law.

K-Mart manager Jim Truitt said his store will close on Sundays and Gibson's manager Ed McCauley said that his store will remain open on Sundays, but with certain merchandise roped off by departments. The managers said their action is based on notification by the local police department saying the blue law will be enforced.

Truitt said although K-Mart stores in Midland and Odessa "stay open (on Sundays) because they don't enforce it" there, "we'll go along with it because people want it."

"Personally, I like being closed on Sunday. I think it gives us a nice day off," Truitt said.

Enforcement of the blue law came into question recently when the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce acted on complaints from "both stores and customers" by notifying the county attorney of three stores apparently violating the law, chamber president Sidney Clark said.

Police Chief Rick Turner said the department sent the stores — Gibson, K-Mart and C.R. Anthony's — letters saying the law will be enforced and that they could comply by closing either Saturday or Sunday or by not selling certain items on one of those days.

C.R. Anthony manager Tom Cauthorn said his store already closes on Sundays.

The blue law was first enacted in Texas in 1863 "on the grounds of the religious belief in the Lord's day of rest."

Some say it's name originated because Puritans in the northeast printed their Sunday legislation on blue paper or because it was bound in blue. Others surmise it was because the legislation originated with "blue-nosed" Puritans.

Since 1981, at least 20 states have repealed their blue laws, leaving 20 states — mostly in the south and east — with the law on their books.

Revco and Eckerd's drug store chains and Gibson's, Southland Corp., Safeway, Alpha Beta, Winn-Dixie and other grocery store chains have attempted many times to push for repeal of the Texas blue law.

McCauley said "I believe it should be repealed. Anyone should be able to buy anything they want to seven days a week. Take a person that works six days a week. Sunday is the only day he can do minor repairs around the house."

"We had a guy come in Sunday. His hot water line broke. When he came in we told him we couldn't sell the items he needed. He said he guessed he'd have to go to Midland or Odessa. And we didn't sell to him."

But the two managers said their main concern now was to see that the law is applied to all stores, not just their own.

"If they're just discussing enforcement on three stores, then they're not enforcing it evenhandedly," Truitt said.

Truitt said he has not sent a crew to other stores to check on blue law violations, however "I probably will send some employees on Sunday to check on some stores like 7-Eleven, Furr's and Safeway."

Truitt said his store had been violating the blue law

Mishap sends 2 to hospital

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Staff Writer

A one vehicle accident approximately a mile north of the Big Spring city limits on State Highway 350 sent two local residents to the hospital Tuesday evening.

Enrique Reyes, 20, of 709 W. 18th St. and Kim Berry, 24, of Big Spring were admitted to Malone-Hogan Hospital after the late model pickup truck Reyes was driving veered off the road and hit a utility pole according to Department of Public Safety trooper Jim Lasater. The vehicle was traveling south at the time of the accident which occurred at 7:29 p.m.

Reyes was admitted for observation while Miss Berry was treated and released.

"I was standing over here," said Edward Miller, pointing to a pickup in the driveway he was filling with gas, "when I heard a bunch of tires squalling. He was running off the highway on the other side and then started coming this way. I didn't see no more because I was heading the other way."

Miller said he saw the pickup first go off the right side of the highway. "He ran off the road down yonder and then he ran it back on. He was on the road twice. I heard him coming, too. He had it wound for sound."

The truck struck the utility pole at the left front entrance of Miller's driveway. "He hit way up on that pole. When the dust settled, the pickup was still rocking," he continued.

Miller found Miss Berry and said "she had a pulse beat,"

HJCJD okays early tax payments

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Following in the footsteps of the city and county, the Howard County Junior College Board of Trustees voted yesterday to allow for voluntary payment of property taxes based on 1981 tax rates. The trustees are concerned the district will not have a certified tax roll to work from before 1983 because of the extensive hearings now being conducted by the tax review board.

Payment is strictly voluntary and refunds will be made if payments exceed taxes charged on new rates. However, if taxes paid are less than required once the new roll is out, the taxpayer will have to make up the difference.

Dr. Charles Hays, president of the district, said he had been approached by several people concerned about itemizing the tax on their 1982 returns.

"I've had a group of people come to me concerned about whether they were going to be able to pay ad valorem taxes before Jan. 1 enabling them to take it off on income tax returns," Hays said.

Hays said he had already visited with county tax-accessor collector

Sports car producer arrested in drug bust

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES—Innovative sports car producer John Z. De Lorean was arrested Tuesday at an airport hotel as he arrived to pick up 220 pounds of cocaine in a $24 million deal he hoped would save his debt-ridden company, the FBI said.

De Lorean, 57, and two other men were charged with conspiring to distribute cocaine and possession of cocaine with intent to distribute. The FBI said 60 pounds of cocaine worth $8.5 million was actually seized Monday when the other two men were arrested. Police did not say if they knew the whereabouts of the remaining cocaine allegedly involved in the total deal.

Richard Bretzing, FBI special agent in charge of the Los Angeles office, announced the arrests at a news conference, saying they culminated a five-month investigation which involved numerous federal agencies and the Police Department of Ventura, Calif.

De Lorean "expressed interest in financing something that would produce quickly large sums of money in return for the investments. ... His company is in severe financial problems and he feared the possibility of his company being closed down by the (British) government which had extended loans to him," Bretzing said.

His arrest came on the same day the British government announced De Lorean's car plant in Northern Ireland will be closed permanently.

De Lorean, son of a Ford Motor Co. assembly worker, rose to a vice presidency at General Motors before leaving the company in 1973. He won $143 million in British government grants and loans to help set up his own auto plant at Belfast. His company produced a $25,000 sports car with a stainless steel body and gull-wing doors.

The Belfast plant, which went into receivership in February, probably will end operations within 10 days, plant officials said Tuesday.

Cyanide case suspect reported in New York

By JOHN DOWLING
Associated Press Writer

Police and FBI agents fanned out through New York, looking for a "prime suspect" in the Chicago Tylenol murders after it was learned that he and his wife stayed in a Manhattan hotel until late last week, it was reported today.

James L. Lewis and his wife, Leann, checked into the Rutledge Hotel on Sept. 20, nine days before the first of seven Chicago-area deaths from Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules filled with cyanide, the Chicago Sun-Times reported today.

The Chicago Tribune said scores of New York City police and FBI agents fanned out through New York looking for the couple on Tuesday.

However, New York City police Sgt. Ed Burns said today the police department was not the source for the reports that Lewis was in New York. He said he had no knowledge of Lewis being in the city.

Meanwhile, Chicago's police superintendent disputed a prosecutor's characterization of Lewis, who was born as Theodore Elmer Wilson, as a prime suspect and police turned to a computer for help in determining if Lewis was depicted in a drugstore security photograph that also showed a Tylenol victim buying the poison-laced medication.

In addition, police in southwestern Missouri, where Lewis grew up, said it was being theorized that he may have blamed Tylenol's maker for the 1974 death of his young daughter.

Lewis, charged in a $1 million extortion scheme linked to the murders between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1, is wanted for questioning in the slayings themselves, said Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, who heads a task force of investigators. Lewis allegedly threatened a second wave of poisonings unless the money was paid.

"Everything in his background was motivated by money," Fahner said, and the two are the "kind of people who are capable" of such a crime. While labeling Lewis a "prime suspect," Fahner conceded there is "no tangible evidence" against Lewis.

Chicago police Superintendent Richard Brzczyk disputed Fahner's characterization. "There have been no prime suspects, no tentative suspects, no suspects period."

After Chicago authorities charged Lewis in the extortion, it was learned he once had been charged with murder in Kansas City, but the charge was dropped because the victim's cause of death wasn't determined and some evidence was obtained illegally.

But according to the two Chicago newspapers, investigators have witnesses who saw the couple in New York last month and who said Leann Lewis worked in the city temporarily as a bookkeeper. She used the name Nancy Richardson, an alias she had used in Chicago, the Tribune said.

Blue law

"until last week when we realized they would be enforcing it. Gibson's had been open for the past six to eight months selling everything. So my bosses told me to open up too. Now we'll be closed on Sundays."

McCaughey said he also plans to send "someone," not necessarily an employee, to check local stores for violations. "When I was selling (prohibited) merchandise on Sunday, I went to other grocery stores and bought the same items I was selling. I never filed on those stores because (the law) was never enforced."

Each sale that violates the blue law constitutes a separate misdemeanor offense and is punishable by a maximum $100 fine on first conviction. Repeat offenses may get the offender a maximum six months in jail, a $500 fine, or both.

Prohibited items include wearing apparel, furniture, kitchenware, home appliances, power-driven tools, jewelry, timepieces, luggage, motor vehicles, musical instruments, recordings, toys, mattresses, linens, floor coverings and cloth piece goods.

and then she didn't and then she started talking. I thought she was dead at first. I don't know how she got there," he added, after finding the Big Spring woman laying on the ground several feet from the closed cab of the pickup. Patrolman Lasater says the woman may have been thrown from the passenger side of the vehicle and the door shut again upon impact.

Big Spring Fire Department rescue units had to use

"Jaws of Life" to pry open the driver's door and remove Reyes from the pickup.

Lasater said the occupants were fortunate not to strike the utility pole solidly. "He was in the process of spinning around when he hit it," the patrolman said.

Lasater said the vehicle was heading south on 350 and rounding a curve when he lost control of the pickup and went off on the right shoulder of the highway. He regained enough control of the vehicle to bring it back on the road but then lost control again and hit the utility pole.

Police Beat

Suspects fire shots at police officer

Police Officer Ed Covington was shouted at and then shot at while on duty last night on the north side of town, police reports said.

Covington was watching a stack of cotton bales obstructing the road near Highway 350 and Interstate 20 when a white and blue 1978 Ford Thunderbird occupied by four Hispanic males stopped near his vehicle, and one of the men shouted insults at Covington, police reports said.

Covington chased the car to 405 N.E. Ninth and got out of his car to talk to the men, police said. The four advanced on Covington, so he went back to his vehicle to wait for other police officers to arrive, police said. As he backed his patrol car, someone fired two shots at him, one of them hitting the car, police said. The four men then drove off, police said.

Police said no arrests been made in connection with the incident.

Police reports also showed the following:
• Keith Putman, 21, of Washington state was arrested last night at 2512 Ent on suspicion of soliciting during prohibited hours and soliciting without a permit. Peace Justice Bobby West set bond at $200 for each charge.

• Frederick S. Scott of 906 S. Bell said someone stole a green one-and-a-half ton chain hoist from his backyard between 10 p.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Saturday.

• Richard Dumas, a Yellow Checker Cab driver, said someone stole a gold moneybag containing $90 cash from his taxi cab parked in front of Hall-Bennett Hospital about 10:15 a.m. yesterday.

• Margaret Jimenez of 207 S. Benton said a person known to her tore her shirt and took a cross necklace from around her neck about 1 p.m. yesterday.

• Vehicles driven by Michael J. Hanson of 3803 Connally and Irma R. Martinez of Gail Route, Box 64-P collided on the 300 block of S. Runnels about 4:30 p.m. yesterday. Police cited Hanson for making an improper start from a parked position. No injuries were reported.

• Part of a letter "I" fell from a Whites Home and Auto Store sign at 17th and Gregg and crashed through the windshield of a car stopped at the intersection about 12:35 a.m. today. Larry N. Sonntag of 1706 State, driving a 1962 Corvair, was not injured.

Clement's backers campaign here

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

Three West Texas former politicians showed up in Big Spring Monday to endorse Governor Bill Clements in his bid for reelection.

The three, former U.S. Representative O.C. Fisher of Junction, former State Senator Dorsey B. Hardeman and former State Representative Tom Massey, stood on Clements' past record. They avoided attacks of any kind on Clements' opponent, Mark White.

"In fact, the only major mention of White was that he was 'an unknown quantity,'" as Massey said. Clements' track record received accolades from each man.

"He's been a good governor," said Fisher, "and I believe Texas would be better served if Clements were elected to serve the next four years. Everything that I think is of major nature . . . Clements has been on the right side."

"He's a fighter and a proven administrator," Fisher continued. "Texas would be wise to reward him with a second term."

"He's on the right track . . . on top of a lot of things," said Hardeman. "He's made a good governor so far. I like a businessman who will speak up and not quibble."

All three men cited Clements' powers as an administrator, his stands on education, crime and the right to work, and his interest in water for West Texas.

"Water is really the reason I volunteered to help the governor," said Massey. White had said "the governor wasn't doing a thing about water," Massey said, "and it irked me. I happen to know that under the governor's leadership, we've made more progress in planning in the last three years than in 15."

"He has appointed a blue ribbon task force to make plans," Hardeman said. "The Stacy Dam is the largest and most important project before the water commission in many years," he said, adding that Clements supports the completion of the dam.

As to why Democrats would support a Republican candidate for governor, Massey said, "My state, my community, has to come ahead of the party."

Sheriff's Log

$50,000 in oilfield equipment recovered by sheriff's office

The Howard County Sheriff's Office recovered more than $50,000 in stolen oil field equipment yesterday, according to Sheriff A.N. Standard. The equipment was discovered stashed west of Big Spring by sheriff's deputies acting on a tip from a "middle man," Standard said.

The equipment — elevators, slips and wrenches — had been stolen from four oil rigs approximately a week ago, Standard said. Two rigs in Midland County and two in Howard County had been hit by thieves within 24 hours of each other, he said. No arrests have been made in the case, but the sheriff's office is following up several leads, Standard said.

• Sheriff's deputies took four juveniles into custody last night at 11:50 p.m. after discovering the four had taken a vehicle from Jack Lewis Buick and Cadillac Company. The group was discovered on the Borden County Road, reports say. The four was arrested for suspicion of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, according to reports. Juvenile authorities were contacted, according to sheriff's office reports.

• Sheriff's deputies arrested three persons on separate charges on county warrants of issuance of bad checks. Johnnie Baker, 41, of Box 582 in Big Spring, paid a $25 fine and bad checks to be released. Vicki Hodnett Bumbulis, 21, of 906 S. Douglas, paid a $26 fine and bad checks totaling $69.49 to be released. Jose Perez Garcia, 39, of 1305 Utah, posted a $1,500 bond to be released.

• Margie Roberts, 25, of 204 Adick in Dallas, remains in county jail following her arrest by sheriff's deputies last night for suspicion of public intoxication.

Secretary Larry Speaks held an impromptu news conference. Brady was wounded in an attack on President Reagan in March 1981.

Officials see many problems of withdrawal from Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the Reagan administration still wants foreign forces out of Lebanon by the end of the year, officials say virtually all of the major issues concerning withdrawal need to be worked out.

Lebanese President Amin Gemayel was flying to Paris today after a day of meetings with President Reagan, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and other top administration officials.

While the meetings Tuesday were regarded as useful, officials indicated a great deal more needs to be done before an agreement for a withdrawal of Syrian, Israeli and Palestinian troops from Lebanon could be worked out.

One official, who asked to remain anonymous, said "a number of seemingly irreconcilable positions" still need to be resolved, although he said the administration is aiming to get a complete troop withdrawal by the end of the year.

Morris Draper, Reagan's special Mideast envoy, planned to return to the region later this week to resume negotiations.

Gemayel also raised the possibility of broadening the size and mandate of the multinational force, but he did not specifically ask for more U.S. Marines, according to a senior American official.

Reagan told Gemayel that "all of these matters will have to be given serious consideration," said the official.

The official said: "No one asked for an increase in American forces... Having said that, if we wish to volunteer them, I suppose they would be welcome." The official asked for anonymity.

About 1,200 U.S. Marines, part of a three-nation peacekeeping force, have been deployed in Beirut since mid-September. French and Italian troops comprise the rest of the force.

Reagan said he had promised Gemayel his administration would continue its support for "the sovereignty, unity, territorial integrity and freedom of Lebanon."

Gemayel thanked Reagan and the American people for their efforts to "end the suffering of my country."

In a briefing for reporters following the Gemayel-Shultz meeting, the senior official said "virtually all" of the major issues leading to a withdrawal still had to be resolved.

"Nevertheless, if you are going to get a withdrawal of all foreign forces, all foreign forces have to withdraw,"

Creditors backing Braniff plan

DALLAS (AP) — Although a survey of Braniff International's creditors indicates they will support the airline's joint venture with Pacific Southwest Airlines, the two airlines probably will face a battle with other airlines if they try to reclaim Braniff's landing slots before spring.

Six of Braniff International's primary creditors told the Dallas Morning News they probably will approve the joint venture, which would create a new airline under the PSA name but using Braniff employees, planes and routes.

"I think it has a good chance. It is a feasible idea," said one lender, who asked not to be named.

But several of Braniff's rivals said they would take a dim view of relinquishing Braniff's former landing slots, which the Federal Aviation Administration doled out through a lottery.

More than 300 former Braniff slots have been held by other airlines since Braniff halted operations in May.

Although the slots were distributed with the condition they must be given back on 24-hour notice, airline officials question whether Braniff could reclaim the slots if another carrier — PSA — actually would use them.

"We simply don't know how that would be handled, because there isn't a formal agreement yet that we can see between Braniff and PSA," said FAA spokesman Dennis Feldman.

A landing slot gives FAA authority to an airline to land a regularly scheduled flight at a certain time at a specific airport.

Landing slots have been restricted since the 1981 air traffic controllers' strike, but FAA officials said a nationwide phaseout of restrictions will begin in the spring.

At that point, new slots could become available Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, Braniff's major hub.

"We certainly want to stay at D-FW airport, and would not want to lose the slots we have," said a spokesman for United, which received some of Braniff's 153 landing slots at D-FW.

Southwest Airlines, which received about a dozen former Braniff slots through the summer, already has traded them for other slots, said chairman Herbert Kelleher.

"We have replaced all but one of the Braniff slots with our own permanent slots," he said. "We just didn't want to take the chance that we would lose them."

Cold front drops temperatures

By The Associated Press

A strong cold front drove through Texas today as temperatures dipped and overcast skies covered most of the state.

The frontal line reached the Lower Rio Grande Valley before dawn. Gustly winds from the north and northeast covered most of North and Central Texas.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 32 at Amarillo to 71 at McAllen and Brownsville.

Skies were cloudy over most of Texas. Fair skies were noted in the Panhandle, South Plains, far West Texas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

The forecast called for cloudy to partly cloudy skies with widely scattered thundershowers in South Texas today. Light rain was expected to develop in West Texas tonight.

The Midwest's first major snowstorm of the season left up to 6 inches of snow today in parts of South Dakota and up to 5 inches in Iowa and Nebraska.

The snow fell Tuesday, damaging some trees and downing powerlines in Nebraska, but no major damage was reported.

Snow continued to fall today over parts of Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota, and began falling in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

FORECAST

West Texas: Partly cloudy to cloudy with a chance of light rain through Thursday. Highs 58 Panhandle to near 80 Big Bend. Lows 38 Panhandle and mountains to near 58 extreme south. Highs Thursday 42 north to near 63 Big Bend.

EXTENDED FORECAST

West Texas: Fair. Much warmer through Friday night, then little day-to-day temperature changes weekend. Lows mid 40s north to mid 50s south with upper 20s mountains. Highs upper 70s Panhandle, mostly 80s elsewhere except low 90s Big Bend valleys.

Violence feared at Irish elections

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — With more than 25,000 soldiers and police guarding politicians and polling places, the people of Northern Ireland voted today for a new provincial assembly that Britain hopes will bring Protestants and Roman Catholics together.

Despite Britain's high hopes, however, the election is not expected to produce a blueprint for peace after 13 years of fighting between Northern Ireland's estimated 1 million Protestants and the 500,000-strong Roman Catholic minority.

A steady trickle of voters was seen at polling places around Belfast early today as residents cast their ballots on their way to work on a windy, chilly morning.

"Things are quiet for now," a police spokesman said.

But later, army ordnance experts dismantled a gasoline bomb found at the house of a relative of James Molyneux, leader of the Official Unionist Party, the main Protestant party.

On Tuesday, a bomb exploded outside the party's headquarters, but there were no injuries. The Marxist Irish National Liberation Army, an offshoot of the Roman Catholic-dominated Provisional Irish Republican Army, claimed responsibility.

In the biggest security operation since 1981 riots triggered by the deaths of 10 Irish nationalist hunger strikers in Maze prison, 25,000 police reservists and British troops were called out to guard voting stations and candidates.

Political observers predicted that only half of the province's 1 million eligible voters would turn out. Most Protestants reject the idea of an assembly that would force them to share power with the Catholics, and many Catholic leaders oppose the assembly plan because it does not end British rule.

The first official results of the balloting for the 78-member assembly were not expected to be announced until Thursday.

After 10 years of direct rule by the London government, Britain has promised to hand over limited social and economic powers to the new assembly — if 70 percent of its members approve. The provision is designed to avert any possibility of Protestant control of the assembly.

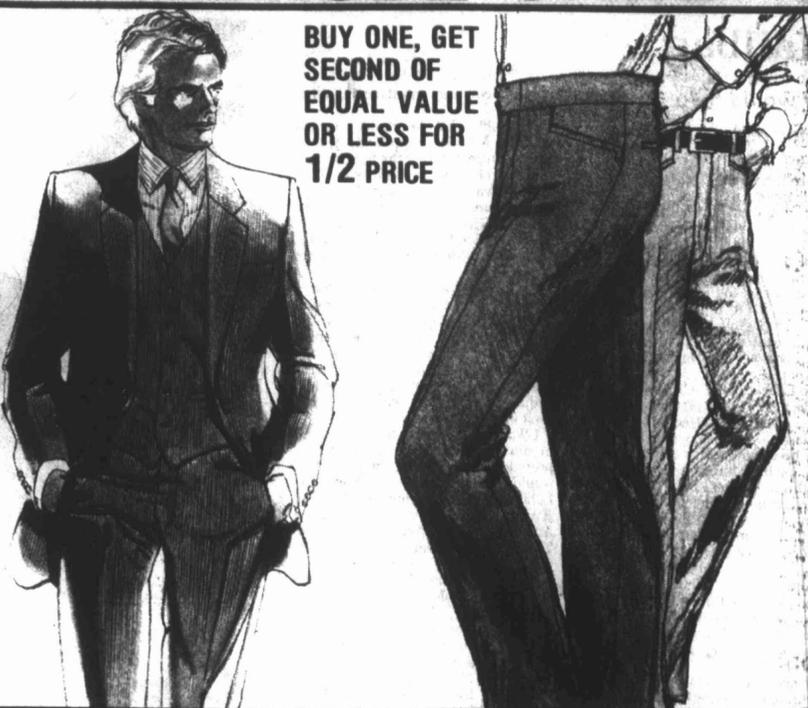

It is Britain's first major political initiative in the province since the last power-sharing attempt six years ago. Britain suspended the Protestant-controlled Parliament in 1972.

The province has gone to the polls nine times since 1973, but all elections failed to produce a compromise to end the bloodshed.

A British Broadcasting Corp. opinion poll last week indicated that moderate parties were likely to make gains in the election.

But such polls have proved notoriously inaccurate in the past, and most political observers agreed that Ulster was expected to vote along traditional sectarian lines. Religion has determined political loyalties in Ireland since the 16th century.

Act would help handicapped children

Dear Editor,

Since 1975, hundreds of thousands of handicapped children have been benefitting from a free, appropriate education in classrooms across the country alongside their non-handicapped peers. The Reagan Administration, under the guise of saving money and transferring more responsibility to individual states, is now proposing to "gut" the regulations which mandate educational services for handicapped students.

The Education for All Handicapped Children Act (PL 94-142) has proven to be one of the most effective pieces of legislation ever enacted. Parents have been involved in the education plans for their handicapped sons and daughters. These children are demonstrating talents and competencies never before imagined. And the bottom line, for those who are concerned about cost-effectiveness, is "pay now or pay more later." Graduates of special education programs are getting jobs and paying taxes. Because of PL 94-142, we are seeing fewer handicapped people requiring life-long care at public expense.

We need PL 94-142 as it is presently constituted. To water it down would be a cruel blow to handicapped children who deserve their chance to succeed.

Sincerely,

Arts festival a success

Dear Editor,

Now, at the close of another highly successful Arts and Crafts Festival, we would like to pause to say "thank you" to the many volunteers and civic organizations that assisted us in putting the show together.

I would first like to thank the many exceptional men and women who unselfishly give up their time each year to serve on the Festival Committee. They not only insure the smooth running of the show, but make many visitors to our city feel welcome. I would especially like to thank Mel Stinson, Phyllis Stinson, Faye Reed, Margie Gamble, Martha Conn, Bill Forshee, Jean Jenkins, Lou Wilson, Bill Reed, Pam Shuttlesworth, Linda Williams, Daryl Roberts, and Judy Smith.

I would also like to thank the coliseum staff for their cooperative attitude from the beginning. Thanks to their special effort — especially those of John Weeks and Jesse Zapata — the Sixth Annual Arts and Crafts Festival was our smoothest show to date. We feel their helpful attitude will help the coliseum in attracting other events.

I would like to thank Jimmy Wallace for the exceptional job he does each year during the Festival. As a result of both his professional attitude towards his work and his easy going manner in dealing with the public, he has earned the respect of festival officials and exhibitors alike. He is a credit to the Big Spring Police Department.

And while I am on this thought, I would also like to thank the Police Explorer Post. They did their best to keep problems from developing during the heavy traffic flow and congestion that result each year during the festival. Other groups should contact this group when planning their events.

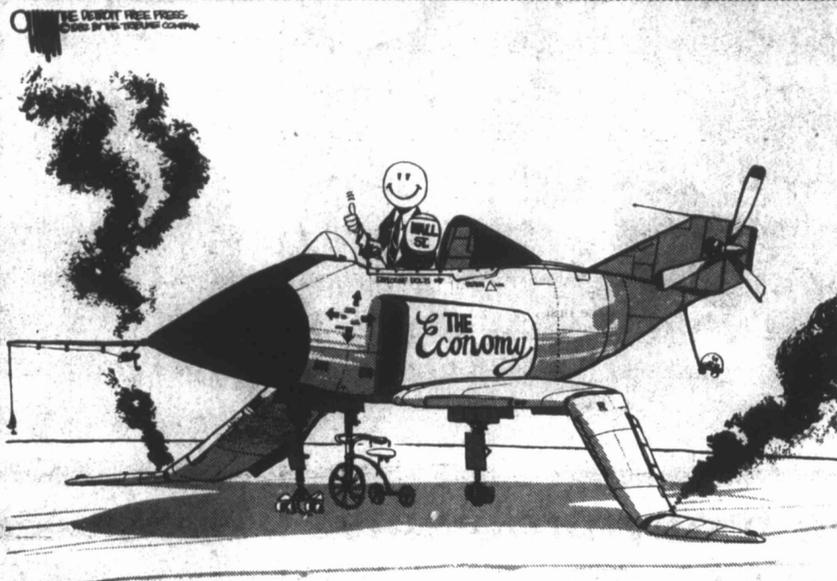

I would also like to thank the area media for the excellent publicity they provided in publicizing the festival. I would especially like to thank the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, Midland Reporter-Telegram, Odessa American, San Angelo Standard-Times, Snyder Daily News, Sweetwater Reporter, Andrews County News, Big Lake Wildcat, Bronte Enterprise, Colorado City Record, Crane News, Eden Echo, Fort Stockton Pioneer, Borden Star, Groom News, Iranan News, Winkler County News, Lamesa Press-Reporter, McCamey News, Ozona Stockman, Rankin News, Robert Lee Observer, Stanton Reporter, and the Wink Bulletin.

I would also like to thank KACT of Andrews, KWGH of Big Lake, KVMC of Colorado City, KBSN of Crane, KPST and KPJH of Fort Stockton, KPST and KCOT of Lamesa, KEND, KFYO, KSAX, KLBK, KSEL, KTEZ of Lubbock, KCRS, KWMJ, KJBC, KMND, KNFM, KWEL, KBAT of Midland, KJJT, KKKK, KOCV, KOYL, KMND, KNFM, KWEL, KBAT of Midland, KJJT, KKKK, KOCV, KOYL, KUFO, KOZA, KQIP, KRIG, KYXX of Odessa, KBIL, KBKL, KOSA, KIXY, KPEP, KSJT, KTEO, KWLW of San Angelo, KSNY of Snyder, and KXOX of Sweetwater. I would like to give special thanks to KBYG, KBST, KWKI, and KHEM of Big Spring for the excellent coverage they provided prior and during the festival. They did much to make up for the poor coverage we received from the Big Spring Herald.

I would like to especially thank Harry McMillan for his cooperation, and understanding, and patience both prior to and during the festival. Without it, I would not have had the time, nor materials, necessary for the task of putting the festival together.

And last, and most importantly, I would like to thank the thousands of Big Spring and area residents who have continually supported the festival since its humble beginning in 1977. We all certainly appreciate you and your friendly attitude towards the exhibitors. Because, without you, there would be no arts and crafts festival.

Sincerely,
Mel Prather, Founder & Chairman

Stock market politics

WASHINGTON — The coming elections bear a close relation to the stock market surge. But not in the sense, imagined by many, of a conspiracy between the Reagan administration and the monetary authorities at the Federal Reserve Board.

Still less because of a concerted policy, as President Reagan implied in his televised address on Wednesday. On the contrary, the Fed sent the market soaring on the wings of administration failure.

The failure is announced unambiguously in the economic statistics. Though inflation has been cut in half, prices remain high, and the cost of slowing them down has been deep recession. So unemployment is over 10 percent, and farm income is at a 15-year low. So manufacturing companies are operating at 30 percent below capacity, and bankruptcies abound.

The roots of the trouble run deep, and engage practically all of us. A stiff dose of inflation was injected into the American economy by the energy price rises forced by OPEC, first upon Richard Nixon and then Jimmy Carter. Oil price increases were spread through the economy by excessive wage settlements negotiated between (largely Republican) big business and (largely Democratic) big labor. Social programs, initiated by Democrats but sustained by Republicans, made it that much harder to fight inflation.

The Reagan administration contributed more than a little. The massive three-year tax cut enacted in 1981 did not, as advertised, stimulate business confidence to the point of an investment boom. Instead, investment declined, and the chief product of the tax cut was a fall in government revenues that opened endless vistas of high budget deficits. That prospect, with the implication of huge government borrowing to pay the debt, worked to hold interest rates abnormally high.

The rates had originally been forced up by the Fed as part of an all-out assault on inflation. In October 1979, the Fed adopted a policy of squeezing down on money supply no matter what the impact on interest rates. That policy eventually trimmed inflation. But interest rates rose above 20 percent. The high rates crippled housing, and autos, and eventually begat the deep recession of 1982.

The depth of the recession, and especially the surprise bankruptcies, began to alarm chairman Paul Volcker and his associates at the Fed in the spring of this year. To avert catastrophe, they started to ease up on money supply. But the relaxation was inhibited by the Reagan administration. Treasury officials, led by Secretary Donald Regan and Undersecretary Beryl Sprinkel, screamed warnings of inflation when the Fed began to miss money supply targets. Those warnings combined with the prospect of budget deficits to keep the financial community hooked on inflation long after the Fed had acted to lower rates.

The impasse was shattered by the approach of elections. Rather than go to the voters with record deficits, the President finally acceded to a tax increase which the Congress passed at the end of summer. As banks and companies continued to stumble, the Treasury stopped pounding at the Fed to treat the monetary targets as objects of religious awe.

With the pressure eased, Volcker & Co. started to come clean about pouring money into the system. Interest rates dropped, and as they did, short-term hedges in Treasury bills and money market funds lost their appeal. Investors switched to stocks, which took off. Thus, by a combination of failure and inadvertence, the administration and the Fed collaborated to stimulate a stock market boom on the eve of the elections.

So the country is not "recovery-bound," as the President claimed. The administration has a scenario for recovery, but not a strategy.

Billy Graham

Is there any hope for peace

Dear Dr. Graham: I know you have been known for your concern about peace in our world, but do you really feel there is any hope for peace? — T.U.

Dear T.U.: When you read the headlines and hear the newscasts every day you begin to realize that we live in a very dangerous time — in some ways the most dangerous time in history. Never before in the entire history of the human race have we had the awesome ability to destroy all of human life from the face of this planet because of nuclear weapons.

Yes, I believe it is possible to have periods of peace, and I believe we need to pray and work for peace. Paul commanded Timothy to pray "for kings and all those in authority, that we may live peaceful and quiet lives in all godliness and holiness" (1 Timothy 2:2).

At the same time it is clear from both history and the Bible that lasting peace will never come on our earth until Christ comes to establish his Kingdom. Any peace we may achieve between nations will only be temporary and will eventually break down. That should not keep us from searching for peace in our world, but it should make us realistic.

Why is it that men cannot seem to live together in peace? Why is it that even so-called civilized nations and nations with great material security become involved in war? The Bible says the basic problem is the human heart. "What causes fights and quarrels among you? Don't they come from your desires that battle within you? You want something but don't get it. You kill and covet, but you cannot have what you want. You quarrel and fight" (James 4:1-2).

There is only one lasting answer to the problem of human selfishness and greed, and that is Christ. Only he can take the hate and lust from our hearts, and replace them with love and compassion. That is why there is no lasting answer to the problem of war apart from spiritual renewal. And when Christ comes again, he will rule so that "nation will not take up sword against nation, nor will they train for war anymore" (Isaiah 2:4).

Learn to accept criticism

Criticism, whether constructive or otherwise, is one of the most misunderstood and maligned aspects of contemporary society. The entire spectrum of criticism almost always creates a certain amount of tension — a lightning of the being — in its target.

An athlete squirms as the coach disciplines a play the way "it should be run." The executive pales when the boss minutely scrutinizes a personal project. An author angrily crumbles at a harsh review of his latest opus. A face hardens into a mask as a friend delicately points out a fault.

The majority of people just cannot handle criticism very well. No matter how well-meaning or how badly needed a piece of criticism is, the basic reaction is usually an angry or hurt "Not me." Even if a person accepts the critique as valid, the feeling of vague resentment often persists.

SO MANY have so much difficulty dealing with critics is hard to ascertain, especially in light of the fact most individuals are aware they need criticism. Few people have the ego to actually believe they, their jobs, their beliefs and their world are unassailable by doubt and unneeding of change. Usually, those who have achieved this so-called perfect stature are in the most need of constructive criticism. Undoubtedly, one of the central reasons for the combativeness critics arouse is the insecurity and dubious self-confidence far too many persons possess. The tenuous fabric of their emotional and spiritual well-being cannot handle the stress of the slightest opposition. Their house-of-cards confidence floats to ruins at the mere breeze of doubt.

BUT CONFIDENCE can be rebuilt, emotional bonds renewed even stronger. Although criticism hurts, the pain is rewarded by creating a better person — as good criticism is supposed to do.

However, too many persons react adversely, even violently, to the hint of personal evaluation. "Criticism" means "attack." Whatever the intent of said critique, the reaction is a furious rejection and denial.

Often, the result of such criticism is a strained relationship between employer and employee, friend and buddy, loved one and lover. Worse still, the behavior, or whatever was pointed out, goes on unabated and sometimes gets worse.

But the attempts do have to be made, always in hope of better work efficiency or better persons or whatever.

Angry denial to faults or blemishes can occur in personal matters as well as greater ones. An individual instance is my own experience as a novice journalist at the Herald.

Coming from graduate school and all of those 20-page research papers, I felt I could write anything. But no one else seemed to share my feelings. My incensed disbelief that I had to re-write several of my first efforts did nothing for my ego, but did wonders for my newspaper writing. Without that initial evaluation, I would still be churning out complicated, boring diatribes — in the unemployment office, though.

On a larger scale, society in general does not like having anything negative pointed out for any reason. A local example would be the Herald's recent series on prostitution. Numerous people were outraged the paper pointed out this blemish in the community. Criticism does not judge, but rather attempts to improve by noting all facets of the whole.

Prostitution would still be there even if a series on nurses or Girl Scouts had been done instead, as many suggested.

A MORE RECENT example of negative criticism coming under fire is the Chapman column on the so-called wealthy and subsidized farmers. However inaccurate and biased his piece may have been, many people were speechless with rage that the paper would print anything detrimental to farmers.

Although cooler heads did, and are, pointing out the weaknesses in Chapman's argument, many people were, and probably still are, displeased that that aspect of agriculture was mentioned at all.

Criticism, whether constructive or just plain disagreeable, has as its primary function the intent to inform. Of course many attacks are disguised as critiques, but it is un-American to deny someone the right to speak just because they might be wrong or another might disagree with them.

When people try to shut out or deny criticism, they, and we, become lesser individuals.

Qaddafi plays Santa Claus

WASHINGTON — Offhand, it's hard to think of anyone more ill-suited to play Santa Claus than Muammar Qaddafi. Somehow the long white beard, red-flannel costume and jolly cries of "Ho! Ho! Ho!" just don't fit Libya's scowling Moslem dictator.

But that's the unlikely role Qaddafi chose to play in Washington when he was riding high during the Carter administration. Retrieved from Justice Department files, the Libyan Embassy's 1979 Christmas-gift list contains the names of prominent government officials, members of Congress and supposedly influential journalists whom Qaddafi wanted to butter up.

Like Santa in the kids' song, Qaddafi was "making a list, checking it twice, gonna find out who's naughty or nice." My name was on the list, but was crossed out, presumably after I returned from a visit to Libya that year and wrote some unkind things about Qaddafi. I always wondered where that lump of coal in my stocking came from that Christmas.

Qaddafi wasn't as extravagant with his Yuletide outlay of petrodollars as the late Shah of Iran had been. Instead of Persian rugs and beluga caviar, the Libyan Santa gave cameras, perfume and assorted trinkets of more embarrassment value than intrinsic worth.

By a curious twist of logic, the most important people on Qaddafi's Christmas list were given Polaroid cameras (current average price about $75); those considered a little less worthy of cultivating got Canons (current average price about $300). Warren Christopher and David Newsom, then the No. 2 and No. 3 men in the State Department, made the Polaroid list, as did Harold Saunders, who was then assistant secretary of state for the Near East. All three told my associate Lucette Lagnado they had not kept the cameras, which the law discourages them from doing.

Morris Draper, then as now a key official in the Near East Bureau at Foggy Bottom, was put down on the Libyan list for a Canon camera. Reached in Lebanon, where he is in the thick of the crisis negotiations, Draper said the only gift he could recall receiving from the Libyans was "an ashtray."

The Rev. Timothy Healy, president of Georgetown University, was on the Canon list. In 1977, Georgetown had accepted $750,000 from Libya to endow a professional chair in honor of a Libyan hero. The university later returned the money, but kept the professorship anyway. Father Healy said he returned the camera.

On Capitol Hill, the Libyans courted legislators who were either perceived as friends for one reason or another, or who were thought likely to become friends. The Christmas list included Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho; then-Rep. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, now a senator; Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., an outspoken critic of Israel and a congressional champion of Arab causes, and Del. Walter Fauntroy, D-D.C., who had also spoken up in behalf of the Arabs.

The Libyans also put supposed behind-the-scenes movers and shapers of policy on their Christmas list, like columnists and the heads of think tanks. They included Michael Hudson of Georgetown's Center for Contemporary Arab Studies, and Dean Brown of the Middle East Institute.

When queried about the gifts, some of those on the Libyan list said they could not remember whether they ever got anything from the embassy, while others said they had received some inexpensive trinket. A few flatly denied ever having received anything. Many expressed strong disapproval of the Libyans' tactics.

ARMY SNAKEPIT: A viper is a snake-in-the-grass. A Viper is a fancy new anti-tank missile the Army has developed, and it may have been more aptly named than the brass hats realized. It is one of the many Pentagon snakes that will poison any attempt by President Reagan to bring his budget deficits down below $100 billion.

A sort of souped-up bazooka, the Viper is a hand-held missile intended to give infantrymen a fighting chance to destroy an enemy tank at close range.

It is supposed to replace the Army's existing Light Anti-tank Weapon, known as the LAW missile. It is also supposed to be cheaper and better than the LAW.

As it turns out, though, the Viper is neither cheaper nor better. Its cost has already zoomed to $900 apiece, compared to the LAW's $200 price tag — and the Army wants close to a million of the new weapons.

Furthermore, throughout its development and testing, the Viper repeatedly misfired and broke down. Last year, the Army assured Congress that all the bugs had finally been worked out. On the strength of this assurance, Congress approved enough money for 1,400 Vipers, but instructed the Army to study alternatives.

The study of alternatives has yet to begin, and the first four Vipers that rolled off the assembly line were all duds.

WATCHING THEIR WASTE: The Office of Personnel Management's Western Region recently spent almost $4,000 on a five-day "organizational effectiveness seminar" in the posh California resort of Carmel. But they did cut a few corners to economize. The seminar was timed to follow the region's regular meeting for area directors in reasonably nearby San Francisco. And the 12 bureaucrats stayed at the Carmel Valley Inn, which offered the lowest rates in the area — $2,700. They also carpooled to the seminar, which took place, incidentally, not long after OPM employees in the Western Region were furloughed for six days to save money.

Open for business

Thank you, Big Spring business people, for your tremendous show of support for our STEERS Friday at the pep rally. Did you notice who was leading the group — Mayor and Mrs. Clyde Angl. And no one could miss Kelly Draper of Faye's Flowers and his life-sized cheerleader puppet.

Several people were asking where they could get the air horns that made all the noise at the pep rally and game — well, I found out that Automotive Parts of Big Spring, and probably any of the other auto parts dealers, have the air horns made of compressed air in cans. Go by and get one to create a good racket at the next game.

Postmaster Frank Hardesty called to warn us of an upsurge in mail fraud which is not unusual this time of year, but an unusual twist is that so much of it is being done through telephone solicitation, especially from Florida. He urged anyone getting a phone bill or an order they didn't place to call him immediately. "If anyone offers you a deal too good to be true, it probably is," he said. The Postal Inspection Department has had a high rate of success in prosecuting the cases reported.

An exciting, slick new magazine has just begun aimed strictly at West Texas and the golden triangle of Abilene, San Angelo and Midland-Odessa which puts us smack dab in the middle. The publisher is Jerry Lackey, a 28-year veteran of such publications as The Cattleman, The Ranch Magazine and the Livestock Weekly. He was agriculture editor at the San Angelo Standard Times where he captured top news coverage awards. He is author of four books and a syndicated column that appears in 40 Texas newspapers. He is a good friend of Tommy Hart. Jerry said, "Our goal with the West Texas Business magazine is to bridge this boom in business and industry through interpretative articles centered around and within the golden triangle. West Texas is being touted in the national press as one of the most prosperous regions in the nation. Bank deposits, savings, employment and productivity are revealing positive economic indicators." This quarterly publication will offer in-depth reports ranging from small independent businesses to the powers behind large corporations. Agri-business and the petroleum industries will be a major part of each edition.

Even more exciting is the fact that the magazine intends to feature Big Spring in the January edition. Call me for information about advertising, subscriptions or who you might contact to submit material for publishing in that or other editions.

The number of bureaucrats at all levels of government is declining, a new Census Bureau study shows. The number of workers in state and local government dropped in 1981 for the first time since World War II. Federal bureaucratic rolls receded by 34,000 workers in 1981.

Median individual earnings rose to $308 a week in the second quarter of 1982 according to Bureau of Labor Statistics. This is 8.3% greater than a year ago. Median family earnings rose to $455 a week, up 5.7% over the preceding year.

Jay Holtzman, publisher of a retail marketing magazine made a great point in discussing customer targeting. We need to be aware that in a down economy, it's easy to lose sight of positive business trends. If a retailer is still thinking of the average customer as a guy who lives in suburbia with a wife and 2.3 kids, that store probably has poor sales.

There are 17,816,000 one-person households in the U.S. — that's one fifth of all households. And one-parent raising children households is now at 10 million. Eight and a half million women head these one-parent households. There are currently 45 million women in the workforce.

What does that mean to the retailer? That the old advertising and promotions don't work. Brand loyalty, for instance is weakened in single-person households. Women living alone or with children need tools for do-it-yourself projects but she isn't acquainted with or impressed by brand names. Men are familiar with brand names in cleaning products.

People over 65, most of them retired, will account for one out of eight Americans by the end of the decade. Remember them when you plan your promotions. Train your salespeople to answer questions about price, quality and use of products.

Targeting your customer is not a cure-all for poor sales, but it's a positive way of meeting your sales challenges head-on and winning!

Unemployment low but times tough in S. Dakota

PIRRE, S.D. (AP) — South Dakota is a double winner in economic statistics — it has the nation's lowest jobless rate and is the only state where unemployment is shrinking. But the farmers who are the backbone of its economy say they're only working themselves deeper in debt.

"The economy here is just a different type of economy. It's all on a smaller scale," state labor Secretary Judith Meierhenry said Tuesday after the U.S. Labor Department reported South Dakota's jobless rate for August was only 4.3 percent. That was a drop from the August 1981 level of 4.4 percent. Unemployment jumped in every other state.

The seasonally adjusted national average increased from 7.2 percent for 1981 to 9.6 percent this year, capped by a 10.1 percent rate in September.

The hardest-hit states have been heavily industrialized, with large steel and auto plants. Rural South Dakota, with about 690,000 residents, has been protected from high unemployment by its lack of heavy industry. Mrs. Meierhenry said.

Dave Stenseth, president of the Sioux Falls Development Foundation, said South Dakota's agricultural base is its economic strength.

"Even when the (farm) prices are lousy, it's a pretty stable industry," he said.

The state's farmers and small businessmen are still being hurt, however, by the recession, forced deeper into debt by low grain prices, high interest rates and a sluggish economy.

"You may have farmers in trouble because they are having trouble making ends meet, but they not actually seeking a job," said Ardelle Lundeen, an associate economics professor at South Dakota State University.

While South Dakota's unemployment rate fell, so did the number of jobs — and the number of people looking for work.

State Labor Department figures show the number of employed adults dropped from 331,075 in August 1981 to 320,074 in August this year. At the same time, the number of jobless workers fell from 15,233 to 14,353.

The overall decline in the work force could have been caused by people who gave up looking for a job in the bad economy, meaning they aren't counted as unemployed in labor statistics, said Jerry Johnson of the University of South Dakota's Business Research Bureau.

'Atlantic' celebrates its 125th birthday

BOSTON (AP) — A Nobel laureate and a famous television chef joined about 400 other people in helping The Atlantic magazine celebrate its 125th birthday.

A telegram of congratulations from President Reagan was read at the black-tie celebration Tuesday night of the country's oldest continuously published magazine.

"The Atlantic has spanned the range of human concerns and feelings," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. "The magazine has been a home for American writers."

"God only knows what would have become of me if it had not been for magazines such as this," said Saul Bellow, who won the Nobel Prize in literature in 1976 and has a story in the current, 125th anniversary issue of the magazine.

He also spoke of the need for arts to present new and different views of the world.

"The Atlantic monthly never ceased to be aware of the need to intermingle arts with public events," Bellow said.

Julia Child, famed as the French Chef on public television, recited John Greenleaf Whittier's poem "Barbara Frietche," which The Atlantic published in 1863.

Boston Mayor Kevin White recited Longfellow's "Paul Revere's Ride," also published by the Atlantic in 1863.

The candles on two birthday cakes — one decorated to look like the cover of the magazine's first issue in November, 1857, the other to look like the latest issue — were blown out by Kennedy, Bellow, Ms. Child, White, magazine owner Mortimer B. Zuckerman, publisher David Auchincloss and its editor, William Whitworth.

During the ceremony, the orchestra played the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Julia Ward Howe was paid $4 for that poem by The Atlantic, which published it in 1862.

Cyanide puts scare into this Halloween

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
Associated Press Writer

The Tylenol murders prompted one community to ban trick-or-treating this Halloween out of fear of "copycat" poisonings and police in many cities are taking extra precautions, but most say you can't outlaw a tradition.

"I would not allow my children to take candy this particular Halloween," Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne said on Tuesday. Other authorities concurred, and in many places, police planned stepped up patrols or increased inspection of Halloween plunder.

Halloween often is dangerous. A Louisiana man last year shot and killed a 13-year-old youth who showed up at his door wearing an Army costume and carrying a toy sub-machine gun. Police in Muncie, Ind., found some lick-on stickers picturing Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck that had been laced with LSD.

But the deaths of seven people in the Chicago area 2½ weeks ago after they took Extra-Strength Tylenol spiked with cyanide prompted warnings that this year could be worse.

"Bad things come out at Halloween," said Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, who heads the task force investigating the poisonings. "This year has particular problems."

Since the cyanide deaths, products such as mouthwash and eyeprops have been found laced with acid or poison in isolated cases in several states, including California, Florida, Ohio and Colorado.

Fahner said many "very concerned" people have called the Tylenol hotline, worried about copycat poisoners. He is writing to PTA groups and churches in the state suggesting they organize Halloween parties in churches or neighborhoods to "control what's given to kids."

MRS. BYRNE said more than 1 million flyers will go to schools, libraries and churches, urging parents to accompany children on Halloween night and to examine carefully everything children eat.

A California mother of two boys, ages 7 and 14, said, "All you can do is keep cautioning and cautioning."

"It's a cardinal sin for my kids to eat anything before I inspect it," added Diane Peets, president of the Meadows School PTA in Valencia, a Los Angeles suburb.

"We don't want to cancel trick-or-treating because of the flakes out there," said Pittsburgh Police Sgt. Herman Mitchell, supervisor of community relations, "but we're going to be extra careful this Halloween."

Pittsburgh police are expanding a Halloween candy check program that has been in effect for three years. Youngsters are urged to take suspicious candy to their neighborhood precinct station where police and health department officials can inspect it.

"We're beefing up the program this year," Mitchell said. "All our precincts will be open."

In Cheyenne, Wyo., Memorial Hospital of Laramie County has announced free X-ray service for bags of candy children collect. A spokesman said it would detect solid hazards such as pins or razor blades, but not drugs.

Officials in Lexington, Ky., have asked that trick-or-treating be restricted to two hours early in the evening of Saturday, Oct. 30. Police also have advised children to check the wrappers of commercial treats for signs of tampering.

LIKEWISE, MAYOR Mike DiNunzio of Lansdale, Pa., a short distance from the headquarters of the manufacturer of Tylenol, said, "We just instituted a program of local mayors to concentrate all trick-or-treater activities on Saturday evening. This way we can have our police forces aware of everything that's going on."

"We didn't have Tylenol in mind when we did it... But I can see where what we've done would be important."

As for banning trick-or-treating, he said, "You can't do that. It's such a custom around here."

HOSEHEAD — No, this photo does not show a giant worm carrying off a workman through a hole in the roof of a Philadelphia home. But it does show an insulation mechanic checking with a co-worker who is blowing insulation into the attic of the twin-home recently. The work is being done as part of a weatherization program sponsored by a local gas company.

Ancient ship rebuilt

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Wasa, a Swedish warship salvaged 21 years ago after lying on the seabed for 333 years, is now in the final stages of restoration.

King Gustav II Adolf's magnificent flagship capsized and sank on her maiden voyage in Stockholm's harbor in a humiliating national catastrophe in 1628.

The arduous process of preserving the Wasa, raised in 1961, has turned the Swedish capital into an international center for marine archeologists. They come here to inspect the oldest identified, raised and restored warship anywhere.

"A wreckage matching the size and condition of the Wasa is likely never to be found," said Bengt Ohrelius, chief press spokesman at the Wasa shipyard in the Stockholm Harbor.

Experts are busy putting back on the ship 14,000 wooden pieces, including 700 sculptures and carved details. Artifacts found aboard the wreckage or scattered in the mud nearby and sculptures, many of them gilded, will be pieced back in their original, dazzling shape.

"We call it the world's biggest jigsaw puzzle," Ohrelius said.

The Wasa's hull was intact, although marked by the years, when rediscovered in 1956 by amateur marine archeologist Anders Franzen. There are no shipworms in the Baltic Sea.

"We were pioneers," said Ohrelius. "Nobody had ever tried to preserve 31,783 cubic feet of solid oak that had been lying on the seabed for hundreds of years."

Experts sprayed the huge hull daily for 18 years with an estimated total of 200 tons of preserving fluids after the salvage operation was completed on April 24, 1961.

A process of drying and seasoning of the hull began after spraying stopped in 1979.

The Wasa's hull, 230 feet long and 38.4 feet wide, is encased on a pontoon lying next to a pier on Djurgarden island.

The shipyard serves as a makeshift museum that looks unimpressive from the outside but still attracts every year almost half a million people, 50 percent of them foreign tourists.

People stand on mezzanine-like balconies encircling the five-deck ship to watch the archeologists at work.

Once finished, the vessel will be put on permanent display at a nearby site on Djurgarden island, possibly in 1987.

An architect's competition for a state-sponsored Wasa museum is to be decided at year-end. The museum will be located about a quarter of a mile from the spot where the national catastrophe occurred on a sunny Sunday afternoon Aug. 10, 1628.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I want to have a party in the family room of our house next spring. My problem is my father. He said I can't have it here because that's where he likes to sit and relax during the evening.

My father said that when he was my age (I'll be 14 in March) he had parties in the basement, garage or outside. He gave me those choices for my party, but we have no basement, our garage is too small, and there would be a problem with mosquitoes if I had it outside. How can I persuade my father to let me have the family room for just three hours — from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m.?

NEEDS YOUR HELP

DEAR NEEDS: You need more help than my help — you need an ally in your camp. You don't mention your mother; if you have one, draft her! Perhaps if your father knew more about your plans — how many kids, the games you'll play, what refreshments you plan to serve, etc. — he'd be more cooperative. Your father, like most people, probably fears the unknown, and is therefore negative. If you ask for his help in planning the party, it might improve your chances. You sound like a good kid. Good luck!

Phosphorous level waxes and wanes

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband went to a health clinic for a complete checkup. All the test findings were normal except for the blood phosphorous, which was slightly diminished — 2.1. I was told not to worry about it because the difference wasn't much. Can you explain to me just exactly what this phosphorous is in the blood for. What does it help? Must you eat certain foods to get it, and should my husband have further checkups to watch his level? What would the signs be of a low phosphorous level? — Mrs. J.D.

Phosphorous is one of the most abundant minerals in our body. In combination with calcium, it is part of the stuff of which bones are made, and it's also a part of every cell's outer membrane. And it plays a role in our body's total energy production. Important stuff, phosphorous.

However, a slight drop can be insignificant, especially that noted in a single spot test. Levels of it wax and wane in the course of a day. For example, if your husband had eaten a lot of sugar before the test, the level would be lower. Also, levels in men seem to get a bit lower with age. No, your husband's reading was not excessively low.

Now if phosphorous levels stay on the low side for prolonged periods you have to consider a long list of possible problems.

Increased production of parathyroid gland hormones can be involved, or osteomalacia, a bone problem. A vitamin D deficiency can lower blood phosphorous, and so can certain water pills, certain antacids and alcohol. A person with diabetes may have a lower phosphorous level.

Persistent excessively-low levels can cause loss of appetite, dizziness, bone pain and muscle weakness. I would bet that your husband's one-time low reading was a fluke, but he should have it rechecked. I doubt he will need any special diet, because any reasonably balanced one provides plenty of phosphorous. However, foods high in it are dairy products (including eggs), cereals and meat.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My doctor described my problem as "essential hypertension." If essential means something that is required, I am confused. The word must have a special meaning when used by doctors. If so, what? Please comment. — B.M.S.

It does have a different meaning for doctors when speaking of a disease such as high blood pressure (hypertension). Essential hypertension is the most common kind of high blood pressure. It refers to a kind that has no specific factor to take the blame.

Sometimes, high blood pressure can be traced to a problem or group of problems. It is then described as being "secondary" to those problems. For example, a tumor of the adrenal glands can cause blood pressure to be high. That elevation of pressure is secondary to the tumor. When the tumor is removed the pressure returns to normal. That is just one example of secondary hypertension.

No cause can be found in your case, so your hypertension is essential, or primary. It is the garden variety of hypertension, the most common kind. But it doesn't mean you can ignore the usual helpful steps to control it, like salt restriction, etc. — in general those outside factors that play such an important role in any kind of hypertension.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

It's easy to cash in on Mount St. Helens

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

CAMP BAKER, Wash. — It took Mediterranean merchants more than 1,500 years to get in the souvenir business after Mount Vesuvius dumped on Pompeii. Entrepreneurs in the vicinity of Mount St. Helens were much quicker off the mark.

Must be American know-how at work: quick cash from catastrophe.

Within a few weeks after the mountain blew its lid with a fury of 500 Hiroshimas on Ash Sunday on May 18, 1980, the volcano shockmeisters were behind their counters.

They peddled an amazing fallout of trivia ranging from Frisbees and funny hats with the crown missing to before-and-after place mats.

NOW AT CAMP BAKER, the logging camp wiped out when that 20-foot wall of mud, rock, melting snow and toppled trees came roaring down the mountain at 50 miles an hour on its way to devastating 150 surrounding square miles, a whole catalog of calamity-related memorabilia is available to the tourists, including a helicopter ride for $40 (half price for children under 14) around the rim of the still seething crater.

For two bits to 10 bucks, depending on the size, you can have a hunk of lava rock or pumice stone disgorged from the crater or you can just walk out and pick up your own.

Some of the little old ladies who take the trip even complain to the pilot if the mountain isn't "venting," giving off its wispy smoke plume, as if anxious to call down the thunder again that claimed 59 lives, did damage into the billions of dollars, cut down 3.2 billion board feet of timber, reduced the north side of the mountain by nearly 3,000 feet, dumped a half-inch of ash on places like Yakima, 88 miles away, and blew out with a roar that was heard for 200 miles.

"That one in Hawaii — is it Mauna Loa? — was much more exciting. It smoked like a volcano should," I heard one old dear in a magenta coiffure scold the driver of the Grayline tour bus, which for a dollar takes volcano voyeurs up a steep denuded hillside for a better view of how the pyroclastic flow, that avalanche of devastation, came seething down the north fork of the Toutle River.

Geologists or vulcanologists or whoever is in charge of such statistics have determined that the eruption on Mount St. Helens dumped a ton of debris for every person on earth, which doesn't keep the souvenir vendors from offering a two ounce vial of genuine volcanic ash at $2.75 to folks standing there wondering how they're going to get the stuff out of their shoes without dirtying up the carpet in their camper. For two bits to 10 bucks, depending on the size, you can have a hunk of lava rock or pumice stone disgorged from the crater, or you can walk outside the shop for 20 miles in any direction and pick up your own.

Gift shops and snack bars all up and down the road flog ash glazed coffee mugs, Mount St. Helens martini glasses ("guaranteed to blow the top off your head"), volcano burgers, crater tacos, the "only soap made with pumice from Mount St. Helens," ashtrays made out of ash, lapillus jewelry, the usual assortment of slides, postcards and pamphlets and for what seems to be the standard price of $7.95.

T-shirts offer a bizarre choice of inscriptions: "Get Your Ash Off Our Lawn."

"Old Mount Shake and Bake." "Ashes to Ashes, Dust to Dust, Mount St. Helens Belched on Us."

Clara Ottosen's museum in an old dance hall offers a macabre array of jetsam, including the green Volvo belonging to Reid Blackburn, the National Geographic photographer killed eight miles from the blast and a crushed Ford pickup whose occupant, as the sign reads, "died of explosive disintegration and incineration," meaning the superheated lethal gases got him before the cataclysm's boiling effluent.

I thought of Pompeii and its belated tourist trade while flying around Mount St. Helens' crater in a single engine Piper Warrior with editor Ted Natt of the Longview, Wash., Daily News, whose paper won the Pulitzer Prize for its fine coverage of Ash Sunday and its aftermath.

Vesuvius roared to life on August 29 in the year 79, burying Pompeii under 12 to 15 feet of ash and neighboring Herculaneum under 60 feet of mud.

Pompeii lay buried and forgotten until 1672, when a local land owner named Count Sarno Muzio Tuttavilla decided to build an irrigation canal at the edge of his vineyards. The first thing you know the laborers were digging up gold coins, bronze statues, lovely pots called amphora, precious gems, even the skeleton of a Roman centurion still in the stirrups of his skeleton horse. The souvenir business came to life and soon the palace of the Bourbon King of the Two Sicilies and the homes of rich men all over Europe were filled with knick knacks from the buried city. Finally a chap named Johann Joachim Winckelmann, who is now regarded as the father of archaeology, got the authorities to call a halt to this robbing of history's richest grave and go about the excavations in a more scientific way, block by block.

They're finally getting the hang of it in Pompeii. When I visited there a summer ago, you could buy pumice stone jewelry and an ash wine flask guaranteed to blow off the top of your head. Some T-shirts were on sale, inscribed with the graffiti found on Pompeii's walls, the famous "Romula Amat (loves) Staphylus" and the even more famous (in translation) "Everyone Writes on Walls, Except Me."

It's gratifying to see American optimism amid such desolation exported so expertly.

Church will stay closed because of controversy

LOUISVILLE, Neb. (AP) — Deputies will guard the padlocked Faith Christian Church indefinitely to enforce a court order barring the operation of a non-certified school in the basement, the sheriff says.

Cass County Sheriff Fred Tesch said the church, the scene of a scuffle Monday between police and 85 weeping and praying protesters, will not be allowed to open, even for worship services.

However, the county prosecutor said the church will be opened for religious services Wednesday and closed again.

Tesch, three deputies and 12 Nebraska State Patrol troopers entered the church shortly after 6 a.m. Monday and told the supporters of the fundamentalist church to leave the building.

The orders were drowned out by praying and wailing from the occupants, who knelt on the floor between pews as the officers entered the church.

"I've seen a lot of anti-war demonstrations and other things," said State Patrol Capt. Raymond Systo, a 33-year-old veteran of the patrol. "I'm not sure I've ever seen anything like this."

"I didn't expect to have the resistance at the door," Tesch said as the church was padlocked for the second time in a little more than a year. There were no injuries in the scuffle and no one was arrested.

"I would not like to see my officers or any other officers go through what we went through tonight. They always told us they were not violent people."

The sheriff said that if the church is opened for services Wednesday, "we can assume it will be a recurrence of this morning on a much larger scale."

Tesch said he will report what happened at the church to Cass County Attorney Ron Moravec and Cass County District Judge Raymond Case.

Moravec said he didn't want to comment on Tesch's remarks about not allowing the church to be opened for worship. He said lawyers on either side can request that the order be changed but for now, the padlocking and reopening for worship will continue indefinitely.

Tesch said he plans to meet with Case to request a change in the court order so the church cannot be reopened for worship. Case said he "probably wouldn't favor" changing his order.

"I don't feel confident about closing it down for church services," Case said. "That would be something I probably wouldn't favor, but I don't want to give a flat yes or no. I have to consider both sides."

Several supporters of the church said school classes were held elsewhere Monday and would continue to be held, but they did not disclose the location.

The pastor, the Rev. Everett Silvein, has completed half of a four-month jail sentence for defying an order to close the school. The dispute over the Faith Christian School, which refuses to use state-certified teachers, has been going on for five years.

The most recent order to padlock the church came last Thursday from Case.

USS Ranger brings 4,800 home

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The aircraft carrier USS Ranger is home after covering 50,000 miles in a 6 1/2-month tour of the Pacific and Indian oceans.

Thousands of relatives and friends were at docks Monday to greet the ship and its crew of 4,800.

At one time, the Ranger steamed for 102 days in the Indian Ocean without touching land.

Two accompanying missile cruisers, England and Fox, and the destroyer Porter also returned on schedule. Their crews numbered nearly 1,100.

The pilots and crews of 90 aircraft that trained aboard the Ranger flew in Sunday to their bases in Lemoore, Calif., Whidbey Island, Wash. and San Diego.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers manager Gene Larkin said they are exactly what they want to be in the playoffs.

"If you can avoid Ted Simmons early today, 'But I've been through this. Hopefully, we have how to pull it out of these circumstances."

The Brewers' 13th straight win ended early this time as the Cardinals' rain-delayed game ended early this time as the Cardinals' Series at three apiece, setting a decisive seventh-inning home run.

"Sometimes it's easier to lose a game than to lose a 5-4 second basemen Gantner. 'There is no explanation for what happened tonight. We're tails kicked.'"

"But it is only one game before, and we know we have to do it through," he said.

The Brewers blew a 2-0 lead in the sixth before they clinched the American League Division title in a game of the season.

Then they lost two games of the playoffs to California before winning the series.

RUNNING CARDINALS SCORE RUNS — St. Louis Cardinals runner Willie McGee slides safely into home as Milwaukee Brewers catcher Ted Simmons has trouble holding on to the throw in the second inning of Tuesday night's World Series game in St. Louis. McGee scored on a double by Cards batter Tommy Herr as St. Louis won the sixth game, 13-1.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The preliminaries are over. Now, the St. Louis Cardinals and Milwaukee Brewers are ready for the main event. The rollercoaster 1982 World Series, which has twisted more times than a belly dancer, is down to one decisive, final game with the world championship on the line.

The Cardinals forced tonight's seventh-game showdown with a marathon 13-1 rain-delayed victory Tuesday night in Game Six, a game during which temperatures plunged more than 20 degrees.

Clear but cold weather, with lows in the mid-30s, is forecast for Game Seven with Joaquin Andujar going for St. Louis against the Brewers' Pete Vuckovich in a rematch of the Game Three starters. St. Louis won that game 6-2 but Andujar was forced to leave in the seventh inning when he was struck on the right leg by a batted ball.

Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog said he had no hesitation about using the fiery Dominican right-hander, who was the best pitcher on the St. Louis staff for the season's final month.

"Joaquin gets the ball," said Herzog. "If I don't give him the ball, I'm sure I'd be one dead manager."

Rookie John Stuper had the ball for Game Six and responded with a four-hitter. He was backed by a high-powered Cardinal attack that included home runs by Keith Hernandez, who drove in four runs, and Darrell Porter, who delivered two, and a Series record three extra base hits by designated hitter Dale Long.

Stuper thought the Cardinal hitters seemed awfully familiar. "We looked like the Milwaukee Brewers," he said.

St. Louis climbed all over Brewer starter Don Sutton, tagging him for seven runs and seven hits in 41-3 innings. Sutton left an instant before the first rain delay, a 26-minute teaser in the fifth inning.

Then, in the sixth, a deluge hit Busch Stadium, halting play two hours, 13 minutes in the middle of a Cardinal rally that produced six runs and wrapped up a victory St. Louis had to have.

Stuper waited out both delays and came back without problems each second baseman Jim Gantner and shortstop Robin Yount, who carried a .524 batting average into the game but went 0-for-4. When Yount made his second error in the ninth inning, the remnants of the crowd of 53,723 booed him, mimicking the MVP chants he has heard so frequently from Milwaukee fans.

This nightmare started early for Milwaukee with the Cards striking for a pair of unearned runs with two out in the second inning. Iorg doubled on a ball that glanced out of left fielder Ben Oglivie's glove. Willie McGee followed with a bouncer that went right through Yount's legs for an error and then Tommy Herr doubled, scoring McGee.

In the fourth, George Hendrick opened with a single and trotted home on Porter's homer, making it 4-0. Then Iorg tripled and buzzed home on a suicide squeeze bunt by Herr.

In the fifth, Lonnie Smith singled and Hernandez, who had snapped out of a 0-for-15 Series slump with three hits in Game Five, ripped his home run, making it 7-0. At that point, Sutton departed, a moment before the rains came, delaying the game for the first time.

"I just couldn't put the ball in the right spots," said Sutton, "and you can't get away with that with a good hitting club."

Asked about the home runs, the Brewer pitcher frowned.

"They were not good pitches, because good pitches aren't hit that far."

The rains let up and after a 26-minute mini-delay, play resumed. But in the sixth inning, the rain began in earnest.

time. He retired 15 consecutive batters over the middle innings and had a two-hit shutout until the ninth inning.

"Considering the circumstances and the importance of it, this is the best game of my life," said Stuper.

Before he started, he had been a little concerned about the pitching pairing, a rookie going up against a 17-year veteran with 258 career victories.

"I said that the matchup of Sutton and Stuper seemed like a huge mismatch," he said. "But in the game of baseball, anything can happen."

And on Tuesday night, just about everything did. There were four errors by the Brewers, two apiece by

Brewers' backs to wall again

ST. LOUIS (AP) — To a man, the Milwaukee Brewers spoke bravely that they are exactly where they want to be — with their backs to the wall.

"If you can avoid this, I would recommend it," catcher Ted Simmons said early today. "But we have been through this before. Hopefully, we have learned how to pull it out under these circumstances."

The Brewers' 13-1 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals in a rain-delayed game that ended early this morning, squared the 1982 World Series at three games apiece, setting up a decisive seventh game tonight.

"Sometimes it is a lot easier to lose a game like this than to lose 5-4 or 2-1," said second baseman Jim Gantner. "There is really no explanation for what happen tonight. We just got our tails kicked."

"But it is only one game. We have been through this before, and we know what we have to do to pull it through," he said.

The Brewers blew a four-game lead in the standings before they clinched the American League's East Division title in the last game of the regular season.

Then they lost the first two games of the league playoffs to California before winning the next (See 'Brewers' on page 2-B)

RAIN WAS JUST ONE OF THE PROBLEMS ... Brewers pitcher Don Sutton has tough night at work

Cards bats filling up the gaps

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Keith Hernandez say the time of the year may be accounting for the St. Louis Cardinals' sudden resurgence at home plate.

"The ball carries here until the middle of May, and then it doesn't carry again until after the middle of September," said Hernandez following an eruption by St. Louis again Tuesday night during the rain-delayed Game Six of the World Series.

"Humidity is what usually keeps the ball from carrying. This is a big ballpark, but we have enough power," said the Cards' first baseman. "We're 'gap' hitters. We hit the ball between outfielders and get doubles and triples instead of home runs."

It was the second straight heavy-hitting performance for St. Louis, which beleaguered four Milwaukee Brewers pitchers for 12 hits in its 13-1 victory.

Six of the Cards' hits were for extra bases. And, thanks to two-run clouts by Darrell Porter and Hernandez in the fourth and fifth innings, the National League champions homered more than once for only the 10th time in 1982.

"It's been kind of hard to figure it," said St. Louis second baseman Tommy (See 'Andujar' on page 2-B)

Owners pull in offer; camp orders given?

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Thirty days into the National Football League strike, the owners are beginning to hit the players hardest in two vulnerable spots — in the wallet and on the field.

On Tuesday afternoon, mediator Sam Kagel said the two sides were involved in "serious" negotiations covering the players' economic demands, an area barely touched during the talks the previous seven days.

But on Tuesday night, the owners said that because of the calling off by the league of a fifth regular-season weekend (Oct. 24-25), they had decided to withdraw from the table their guaranteed five-year, $1.6-billion offer.

"We spend so much time marching in place, and then the first step anyone takes is backwards," said Philadelphia Eagles linebacker John Bunting, a soft-spoken, hard-liner on the union's executive committee.

And at midnight, barely two hours later, reports were circulated by the union that the Washington Redskins and Cincinnati Bengals were paging their players and threatening to open training camps, an apparent violation of Kagel's "status-quo" directive at these talks.

Tuesday started with reports that the negotiations were on the verge of being recessed by Kagel for a cooling-off period of a few days. The recess request was made by the owners — but a recess has to be bilateral. Otherwise it's a walkout. And when the union refused and insisted on staying at the table for more talks, the Management Council, the owners' bargaining unit, walked back into the room with its $1.6-billion bombshell, withdrawing that guaranteed package.

"We based that guarantee on five years of uninterrupted revenues," a management source said, referring to the $2.1-billion television contract signed last March with the ABC, CBS and NBC networks. "We are experiencing a substantial drop in revenues because of the missed games and for every game we miss the revenues fall further."

Next weekend's games are the first eliminated which will cost the NFL dearly. Two of the wiped-out games will be made up later in the season and two others, although cancelled, will be paid for by way of additional commercial revenues next season.

Ed Garvey, the union's executive director, said of the Management Council action: "It just shows the $1.6 billion was never really there. It will not help the atmosphere but we will continue to bargain here."

Then came the next jolt, the threat to open the camps. Safeties and player representatives Mark Murphy of the Redskins and Mike Fuller of the Bengals said they had been contacted by teammates who told them of being called by their assistant coaches and advised their training camps would reopen Thursday.

Murphy, also a member of the union's executive committee, said the threat was the first overt attempt by the owners to break the strike and was tied directly to the Management Council's withdrawal of the $1.6-billion package. "As they open the camps," he said, "they'll offer to put the money back on the table."

Kagel had ordered that during the mediation process the camps were to remain shut. To re-open them would be a violation of his order.

Jack Donlan, the owners' chief negotiator, denied any knowledge of the threatened reopenings, but insisted: "I would not consider that to be any more of a violation than the playing of their all-star games." But the union-sponsored all-star games played last Sunday and Monday night were not covered by Kagel's order.

New England Patriots executive Chuck Sullivan, chairman of the owners' executive committee, said by telephone from New York that opening the camps "would be contrary to our instructions. No such decision has been made and we are very, very strongly committed to the mediation process and to maintaining the status quo."

Hernandez's stick awakens

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said there was no thought to calling the game. No World Series game has ever been shortened by weather and the tradition wasn't about to be changed now.

"We knew we were going to play nine innings in fairness to everybody," said Herzog.

Milwaukee Manager Harvey Kuenen wasn't about to surrender three innings worth of swings just because of a little rain.

"We weren't going to leave until the game was finished," said Kuenen. "The game is meant to be played over nine innings. That's the way it should be."

That was fine with the Cardinals. They had scored one more run before the big rain on Iorg's double, a wild pitch by Doc Medich and a single by McGee. Herr had followed with another hit and another wild pitch advanced the runners. When play resumed, David Green walked, loading the bases and Hernandez delivered two more runs with a single. Hendrick singled, making it 11-0 and two more runs scored on Gantner's second error of the game. Stuper, who had applied hot packs to his arm during the rain, returned to the mound for the seventh inning. "During the regular season, I might not have let him come back," said Herzog. "But this is the World Series and he was working on a shutout. He can rest all winter."

Stuper carried his shutout into the ninth before surrendering a run on a double by Gantner, a single by Paul Molitor and a wild pitch. Had the Brewers failed to score, it would have been the largest shutout margin of victory in World Series history.

This marks the 20th time in the last 38 years that the World Series has gone to a seventh game. For the Cardinals, it marks the eighth time in their 13 Series that they've gone to a seventh game. St. Louis won the first six but lost their last one, in 1968 against Detroit.

For the Brewers, tonight's game marks the third time they've gone into a sudden-death situation in three weeks.

After losing three straight games to Baltimore, Milwaukee had to win the last game of the regular season to beat the Orioles for the American League East crown. Then, the Brewers lost the first two games of the AL Championship Series before bouncing back with three straight victories to defeat California.

No more preliminaries. Now, the main event.

three for the pennant.

"What we are doing probably isn't pretty. I wish there were an easier way to do this. But maybe it was meant to be this way," said third baseman Paul Molitor.

"We have come from behind all year, with our backs to the wall, and now we have to do it again," Molitor said. "Maybe we are running out of time. Maybe there is only a given number of times we can do this."

"But we are here," he continued, "and I guess we are going to find out what kind of character this team is made of."

The Brewers led with an ace pitcher Tuesday, Don Sutton. He had thrown the division-clinching victory against Baltimore and then beat California after the Brewers trailed the Angels by two games.

Sutton, 37, ran out of magic against the Cardinals. They rocked him with home runs by Keith Hernandez and former Brewer catcher Darrell Porter.

Sutton said he did not have the same quality slider that he used against the Angels.

"I thought I made some good pitches, but my location was not very good," Sutton said. "The slider I had in Milwaukee that day was the best I had all year. I didn't have the same kind of slider, but I thought I had good enough stuff to win if I had made my location better."

"I made some good pitches, but you have to give them credit," he said. "They hit some good pitches where I didn't want to pitch them."

Sutton said he could not second-guess the homer pitches he threw.

He said both were in the direction he had intended, but that he got them too high.

"If I could have had good location, I don't think any of that would have happened," he said. "They really weren't bad pitches. But they hit what I gave them."

"There is nothing you can say about them," pitching coach Pat Dobson said. "He had all the pitches, and he had good command most the night."

"There were just a couple of pitches that got away from him," Dobson said, "and that seemed to give them whatever it was that they needed."

Clippers GM down on Walton plan

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The new general manager of the San Diego Clippers says he has reservations about Bill Walton's once-a-week playing arrangement.

Paul Phipps, who took over the NBA club's operations Monday, said Walton's part-time situation was "one of the first questions" he discussed with Clippers' Coach Paul Silas.

"I asked him 'do you like the arrangement or is it going to be more disruptive?'" Phipps said Tuesday

Herr in respect to a Series which now stands tied at three games apiece.

"There really hasn't been a set pattern to enable you to figure how things are going to go. We felt Game Five should have been ours. It's really unusual to get 15 hits and not get a win."

Herr ventured the opinion, however, that "the best team's going to win" tonight's seventh and final game.

"Both teams have shown that they can score a lot of runs. Both teams have shown that they can come from behind," he said. "The team that executes the best and doesn't make mistakes is going to win. It may come down to a little play."

Cards rookie outfielder Willie McGee predicted St. Louis' lopsided margin of victory Tuesday night would mean nothing in the final contest.

"It's going to be interesting. In baseball you never know, you just hope," McGee said. "Tomorrow night will be different. We'll have to forget about tonight."

The hitting heroes for the Cards included Dane Iorg, who by doubling twice and tripling became the first designated hitter in a World Series game to collect three extra-base hits.

Cooper tops Lady Steers

ABILENE — In a match where the action was tenuous than the scores indicated, Cooper High stayed in the running for the District 4-AAAAA second half title with a 15-5, 4-15, 15-5 victory over Big Spring here Tuesday night. "It was much closer than the scores indicated," said BSHS coach Becky Holliday. "It was back and forth most of the way."

Tammy Yancey got a hot streak going in the second set, serving 11 points and the Lady Steers gained the split and forced a third set. "The whole team played well, especially my sophomore Tris Clemons and Teresa Adamson," Holliday said.

The Cooper JVs also won, taking a 15-5, 15-5 victory over Big Spring. Jana Matthews scored four points in each of the two sets for Big Spring.

The Lady Steers host Midland Lee Thursday.

The Goliad B team also fell to Snyder, losing a tough 15-7, 11-15, 15-10 three-setter. Genie Fulesday tallied 12 points from the service line while Debbie Bradbury added seven. Kim Phillips played an all-around good game.

The B team is 10-3 and joins the A unit for Thursday games at Lamesa.

New faces arrive in area this week

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

At least seven new faces made this week's Big Spring area football honor roll.

It may have been the last chance for some of the coaches to relax as several big games are on tap for this Friday night. The two biggest feature No. 5 state-ranked Eden at Garden City and Forsan at Klondike. Both contests are key battles in District 7-A but involving teams in different zones. Eden and Garden City play in the south zone and Forsan and Klondike in the north.

Eden and Garden City are both sporting 4-0 league records as the Bearcats have charged back from a 1-2 start. Forsan is 1-1 in district play after a narrow 21-18 loss to Roscoe while Klondike is 2-0 after wins over Roby and Loraine.

Quarterback Tim Cope of the Cougars had a good week against Loraine, hitting eight of 18 throws for 197 yards and three touchdowns. Grady's big running back Lynn Key bulled over McCaulley for 145 yards and also had time to throw four pass completions.

Coahoma played perhaps its best game of year, falling 19-18 to Crane when a two-point conversion in the final seconds failed. Running John Wilson had 140 yards on the night, bursting 72 yards for one of the Bulldog touchdowns in the first half.

Johnny Rodriguez was equally of value to Sands. The Mustang receiver broke and tackle and scored on a 37-yard touchdown pass from Aiden Franco to get Sands back into the game against Roby. He then caught two more passes, one on a third and eight situation, to set up the winning touchdown as the Mustangs tipped the Lions 14-13.

On defense, Darryl Snell of Stanton linebacked his way into 17 tackle situations as the Buffs blasted Miles 43-0.

Grady standout Randy Gutierrez led another night of terror, this time against McCaulley. He had eight solo tackles, was in on seven others, had three quarterback sacks and blocked a PAT try.

Middle linebacker and noseguard Ramon Miranda was in on 19 tackles for Forsan while Garden City's Robert Hefner made 14 tackles from his defensive guard position.

Coach Steve Park of Stanton honored his offensive line (James Bass, Tracy Spinks, Jimmy Leftwich, Bobby Almaguer, Polo Mendez, Tommy Eparza and Nicky Reyna) while coach Tom Ramsey of Colorado City liked the play of his line.

Coach Jim Warren of Lamesa did not select honor players this week.

Mrs. Dorsett drops suit

MCKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Julie Dorsett, the wife of Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett, has dropped divorce suit, according to court documents filed in Collin County.

A motion to dismiss the suit was accepted Monday by State District Judge John McCraw.

Mrs. Dorsett, 28, had filed for divorce June 22 after almost two years of marriage to Dorsett, also 28.

The divorce petition said "discord of conflict of personalities... prevents any expectation of reconciliation."

Machine guns popping up as popular sport

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — From the woods of Oregon to the wilds of Georgia, the hills are alive with the staccato of machine gun fire — the sound of a sport its backers say is just good, clean fun.

In Oregon and 34 other states, it is legal for citizens to own and shoot fully automatic machine guns, weapons that in the movies are shouldered mostly by gangsters in trench coats and jungle guerrilla fighters.

There are 87,372 serviceable machine guns in the United States, according to the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, which controls their ownership and sale. More than 31,000 are in the hands of investors and hobbyists, who think of machine guns the way others think of rare coins.

"You can collect buttons, you can collect bottle caps, you can collect stamps, but if you collect machine guns, people think you're nuts," said Robert J. Imel, a registered automatic weapons dealer and gun history buff who also likes the thrill of spraying bullets at inanimate objects.

"We would never even think of these things as something to use against other people. This stuff poses no threat to anyone. It's just fun to collect and fun to shoot," he said, pausing. "Boy, is it fun to shoot."

At an isolated, wooded range at the end of a snaking driveway near Salem, Imel demonstrated his hobby against a dirt bank papered with shot-ragged targets. Spectators were given earmuffs to deaden the deafening noise. A burst of fire made clods of earth jump about 50 yards away as Imel showed a novice how to aim and shoot a 1921 model Thompson submachine gun, an M-16 and a 9mm gun he manufactures. On a paper target, a cluster of seven tiny holes appeared almost before the report of a gun was heard.

Within minutes, the brass casings of about 100 rounds of ammunition were lying on the ground.

"I can take anybody out here and they enjoy these guns," Imel said. "I guess it's like riding a roller coaster — once you do it, you want to do it again."

Through the 1920s, when Tommy gun-toting criminals gave machine guns a bad name, there were no restrictions on private ownership or use of machine guns, said Mike Bodisco, firearms and explosives coordinator for the federal firearms bureau in San Francisco. Since passage of the National Firearms Act in 1934, however, buying an automatic weapon has been a time-consuming and carefully monitored process.

Federal law requires buyers to be at least 18 years old, U.S. citizens and without a felony conviction or dishonorable discharge on their records, Bodisco said.

They must fill out a federal application that includes fingerprints and photographs. The form must be signed by a local law enforcement officer, stating that owning and operating a machine gun is not against local law, he said. And a buyer can only purchase a machine gun registered with the federal firearms bureau. A $200 federal transfer tax is charged every time the weapon changes hands, Bodisco said.

It now takes the federal bureau at least three months to process each application, he said.

Although crimes with machine guns are not unknown in this country, machine gun dealers are quick to point out that it's the non-registered weapons that are involved.

Bodisco said he knows of only one crime committed with a registered machine gun, and it had been stolen.

Soviet swimmers struggle

MOSCOW (AP) — The little comrades thrashed in the water, struggling to stay afloat and were finally fished out of the pool, choking, sputtering and trembling with fright.

The scene was not a beginner's class in swimming but a competition for certified graduates of a Soviet swimming course.

Describing typical confusion at such a meet, the newspaper Sovetsky Sport said many of the kids were so ill-prepared that they ran the risk of drowning.

"Tears flowed afterward at poolside, and the instructors were sincerely bewildered because they had taught these kids how to swim," the paper said.

"Really they did. But how did they teach them?" the national sports daily asked rhetorically in an article indicting both poor teaching and unmotivated students.

Although Soviet athletes vie with the best at major swimming competitions, carrying off a share of Olympic and other world championship medals, most Soviet children never learn how to swim properly.

This is the dark side of the Soviet sports system — lavishing fine facilities on athletes who win glory for their country at the expense of the masses.

Pools, fine coaching and plenty of training time are provided at special schools for children picked as likely prospects for the Olympics. But most other children never advance beyond the dog-paddling stage.

According to the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, there are only 1,900 pools in the entire country — one for every 140,000 Soviet citizens. Nearly all the pools are concentrated in urban areas and several hundred of them are reserved for elite sport schools.

Pravda said there are only 5,000 Soviet swimming teachers. It proposed tripling the number and using 1,500 public pools to train all children.

"Investigations show that some pools, particularly those belonging to organizations, are used only to 20 or 30 percent capacity," Pravda noted.

Sovietsky Sport revealed the problem in a major expose this summer headlined: "SOS on Water. How Certified Swimmers Can't Even Swim Across The River."

Pravda took up the theme Oct. 4 in an article demanding major efforts to improve swimming instruction.

Of 24 million school children between ages 6 and 12, only 1.5 million to 2 million actually get swimming instruction, the newspaper said.

But instruction is so weak, Pravda said, that nearly half of these kids never learn to swim well. "Leaders of sport clubs and establishments practically don't monitor the swimming instruction."

One result is the high toll from accidental drownings. A Soviet newspaper revealed in 1980 that 26,000 Soviets drown every summer, nearly four times the U.S. total.

The latest available U.S. statistics from the National Safety Council showed 7,026 drownings in the United States in 1978.

Pravda's detailing of massive shortcomings in the national swimming education was written by Leonard Zhdanov, deputy chief of the Moscow regional State Institute of Physical Culture, and Yuri Semenov of the Soviet Swimming Federation.

The inability of Soviet young people to swim is a great concern to military planners, since many drafted report for duty without being able to meet the minimum requirement — staying afloat for 10 minutes in an emergency or swimming a 50-yard-wide river.

Sputnick: 'beeps' that fueled the space age

By SUSAN SMITH
States News Service
WASHINGTON — It transmitted an eerie "beep...beep...beep" and President Eisenhower downplayed its importance, saying, "What's all this fuss about putting small balls in the air?"

But Russia's launching of Sputnik 25 years ago this month catapulted America into the space age. No bigger than two basketballs, this shiny Russian sphere shattered American confidence in its military prowess and eventually served to escalate the Cold War between the Soviet Union and the United States.

Under intense pressure to beat the Russians in space, Congress created the National Aeronautics and Space Administration a few months later. And after President John F. Kennedy challenged the Russians to a race to the moon, Congress poured billions into the national space program over the next 10 years.

In the early moments of American space exploration — those amazing days when John Glenn orbited the earth three times and Eugene Cernan first walked in space — the country's resources seemed almost limitless.

But the down-to-earth realities of fiscal austerity have placed a fence around the "New Frontier" heralded by the Kennedy administration. The Reagan administration, NASA supporters complain, seems to be more concerned with Laffer Curves than orbital paths.

With the moon mission completed and the Vietnam War draining the country's financial resources, Sputnik was nearly forgotten. As a result, federal funding for the space program plummeted from a peak of $14.5 billion (in 1961 dollars) in 1966, three years before astronauts Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin planted the American flag on the moon.

Some observers on Capitol Hill say one problem facing the space program is the shortage of "space champions" in Congress. Two former astronauts serve in the Senate — Glenn of Ohio and Harrison Schmitt of New Mexico. But as one NASA official noted, "They have other interests as well; they have their own constituencies."

In the early days, then Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson pushed for the program. Later, as Kennedy's vice president, the Texan was instrumental in the decision to push ahead for a moon landing.

At the same time, Texas Rep. Olin "Tiger" Teague chaired the House Manned Spaceflight Subcommittee. Congressional observers say Teague used his position wisely to spread NASA construction contracts to businesses across the country and then kept his House colleagues well-informed of how space programs affected each congressional district.

Some in Congress are concerned that whatever momentum there is for the space program is misdirected. They fear the defense Department is gaining at the expense of NASA's civilian and commercial space programs, which many believe should take priority in order to preserve peace.

Soon after the "Eagle" touched down on the moon, the nation's attention turned to the war in Vietnam. Federal resources poured into beating the communists in the jungles of Southeast Asia rather than in outer space. Now the United States and the Soviet Union are back on the Cold War battlefield in outer space again. This time the weapons are sophisticated spy satellites instead of capsules with monkeys strapped inside.

"The Pentagon is not the organization to deal with space for peace," said Schmitt, who flew on the Apollo 17 mission. He believes two

Some in Congress believe the administration is trying space shuttles may be necessary — one for the military and one for NASA. To capitalize on popular support for the space program to increase military spending.

"That's disastrous," said Iowa congressman Tom Harkin, a former Navy pilot who once sought to become an astronaut. "More and more money is being spent to develop space weaponry rather than for developing space colonies, energy sources, mining asteroids and exploring the moon."

Some congressmen are concerned that the military will dominate the space program in the next decade. At least one House member fears the administration wants to spend more money developing a "space war game" that would allow commanders to maneuver battlefield tanks from a satellite, like video game robots.

"We have money for that kind of stupidity," one congressional aide complained. "But not enough money to fund Voyager (the mission to Saturn and Jupiter)."

Others fear the U.S. space program is losing the national debate over how to divide the country's limited financial resources.

"Everything's so dad-gum expensive now," said NASA historian Lee Saegesser. "It costs so much to start up a new program."

Harkin, a member of the House committee that approves NASA spending, observed, "The only attention the space program gets is when the shuttle lands and is recovered. In between it's completely forgotten. It's just no a big ticket item anymore."

During the past quarter century, other national issues have come to the forefront. Inflation developed into a chronic, pervasive problem. The young nation's seemingly inexhaustible resources began to decline and run out. Persian Gulf nations interrupted gas supplies to the United States and for the first time pollution became a popular symbol for those concerned with preserving the planet's fragile ecosystem.

"Instead of facing outward, we began to face inward toward Earth," said NASA's Saegesser.

Facing double-digit inflation, the aftermath of Watergate and other problems at home following the Vietnam war, neither Gerald Ford nor Jimmy Carter brought forward any aggressive new ideas like those that followed Sputnik. As a result, NASA funding levels remained relatively constant during the 70's as the agency launched unmanned missions to explore distant planets.

Even though the public's appetite for spectacular space missions has remained strong over the past 25 years, presidential support has not.

Congressional leaders say lack of White House direction and enthusiasm for the space program is the main reason its growth over the past decade has been stagnant.

"Most technical issues take leadership from the White House," said Schmitt. "Without that, progress is very slow. We just don't have a space policy foundation. We have not had one since JFK."

Forecasting with caterpillars

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — John R. Hershey Jr. doesn't want to be empty-handed when he appears on a television weather program to provide some homey words about forecasting.

Hershey, the business manager of the Hagers-Town Town and Country Almanack, wants to bring a handful of woolly caterpillars with him, and he's willing to pay a bounty for the shaggy critters.

Some folks forecast the harshness of winter by checking the thickness of the caterpillars' coats.

"I would like to get about 10 or 15 of them, really, and take them down and put on a demonstration with a king caterpillar," Hershey said Tuesday.

He is offering $25 for the blackest caterpillar, and another of $25 for the caterpillar having the heaviest coat.

Hershey said he had recently found the perfect caterpillar, and was storing it in a paper cup on his back porch, but it tipped over the cup and escaped.

"The signs of a long, hard, cold winter are if the caterpillars are really black and they have a heavy coat of fur," he said.

Nevertheless, his nearly 200-year-old publication's long-term forecasts are prepared by tracking certain types of storms across the United States.

School requires personal computers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Hoping to give its students a competitive edge in a computerized world, Carnegie-Mellon University is gearing up to become the first college to require every student to buy a personal computer.

The university will announce Wednesday which company it will hire to implement the system. By the fall of 1985, the university plans to install more than 7,500 student-bought computers that will be connected to a master computer and can be used alone.

"Everybody would agree that America is becoming more and more computerized. We want to give our students an advantage when they leave school," university spokesman Don Hale said Monday. "If they have that computer capability, it stands to reason they will be more attractive to employers."

The cost of the computer to each student has not been estimated, but Hale said it probably will be less than $1,000. Tuition at Carnegie-Mellon is $6,300 a year. University officials say the widespread placement of computers will significantly alter the students' education.

"The computers will enable a student to do other things than the drudge work that goes with putting together a term paper," he said. "It frees up students to do other things."

For example, students can review a library bibliography in their dormitory rooms, edit a paper without retyping it, and quickly get through complicated computations, he said.

Upon graduation, students could take their terminals home or sell them to an incoming student.

Through technological advancements, Carnegie-Mellon expects to provide its graduates computer access to university resources and possibly to courses-by-computer even if they leave the Pittsburgh area, Van Houweling said.

The system will cost the university at least $10 million to implement, said Douglas E. Van Houweling, vice provost for computing and planning.

Carnegie-Mellon, with one of the country's best-known computer science departments, has about $30 million of computer equipment on campus.

The university, which has about 1,000 terminals for its 5,500 students, plans to have more computers than students in three years.

Terminals will be installed in fraternity houses, libraries, lounges and other areas where students congregate, Hale said.

While no other universities have announced similar plans, Van Houweling said he assumes others are considering such projects.

There's good times with 'Fast Times'

In the vast wasteland of teenage movies that have bombarded the movie screens of late, "Fast Times at Ridgemont High" comes across as a pleasant surprise.

Of course there's not much plot outside of boy meets girl, girl meets boy and can you guess the rest of the story? But at least in this effort, a little time has been taken with the dialogue and personalizing the characters.

The best of the cast is Jeff Spicoli (Dean Pena) who is into little else besides surfing, eating and being a few numbers. His classroom encounters with history teacher Mr. Hand provide the best laughs of the movie, especially when he shows up on time for a change...only to have a pizza delivered right in the middle of a lecture on Spanish-Cubanties.

Mr. Hand himself is a character, a teacher that at first comes across as intolerable but one you wish you had teach those long hours of world history. He gets even with Spicoli at the end but they part with a handshake.

And there's Mike Domone, the slick guy of Ridgemont High who catches all the girls' glances but isn't everything he's built up to be.

The plot, I suppose, revolves around a "normal" school year at Ridgemont High. The movie really should have been entitled "Fast Food at Ridgemont Mall," since that's where most of the action centers. Stacy and Brad (brother and sister) work at quick-order pizza and hamburger stops in the mall and the movie takes off from there, branching out until we meet just about everyone enrolled at RHS.

The audience follows Stacy as she has "first times" with 26-year-old Ron (a stereo salesman in the mall) and Domone. When she realizes times aren't always so good on 45, she slows her record pace to 33 1/3 and begins a "passionate romance" with smart-but-shy Mark, doorman at the mall cinema and biology classmate.

Brad is a pleasant fellow but struggles with making burgers, frying fish and ditching his girlfriend for all that senior fun. Life is rough sometimes — he can't even enjoy privacy in the bathroom anymore but with the help of Spicoli, he becomes a hero at the movie's conclusion.

The only time dedicated to Ridgemont High is the annual football biggie with Lincoln. Spicoli and the younger brother of the team's football star (Jefferson) wreck No. 33's car one night cruising the town. They get out of "deathly" situation by blaming the vehicle's battered condition on Lincoln pranksters. The end result...Ridgemont 42, Lincoln 0 as Jefferson goes ape in the game.

The soundtrack is great. The Go-Gos, Sammy Hagar, Jackson Browne, Joe Walsh and others pooled their talents to write original music for the movie and it works in well.

The difference between "Fast Times" and the truckload of other teen movies is that instead of relying solely on slapstick and sex for all the action, the movie attempts to breathe some life into its characters. The dialogue is hip but smooth and most of the situations believable.

Although fun is poked at teachers Mr. Hand and Mr. Vargas, the loony tunes biology instructor, the movie doesn't go overboard with silly gags. And for once, parents are left out of things, getting "Fast Times" away from the traditional put-down mode of most teen flicks.

The folks behind "Fast Times" evidently spent a little bit more time making this show rather than just trying to make a fast buck.

Hamilton Jordan's story set for television

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hamilton Jordan's story of the final days of the Carter administration and the Iranian hostage crisis is being developed as a miniseries for CBS.

"Can we pull it off and make it credible?" asks Jordan, a former White House chief of staff. "We'll have to wait and see. A lot of voices will be heard in this film."

"I'm sensitive to the fact that I was the reporter for this story. You'll have to see how we handle it. I hope when it's all over people will see that we have not whitewashed the facts."

Jordan was in Los Angeles to promote his new book "Crisis," and to talk about plans for the six-hour TV series based on his account of the hostage crisis. Three hours of the screenplay have been completed and the other three hours are due Dec. 1.

A decision on whether to go ahead with the miniseries will be made after the network looks at the screenplay, says Bob Markell, CBS' vice president for miniseries.

Jordan attended a press luncheon with Markell and Gerald Rafshoon, who ran the media campaigns for Jimmy Carter in 1976 and 1980 and was the president's assistant for communications. Rafshoon will be executive producer for the miniseries.

Jordan says the televised story would not be told exclusively from his viewpoint and would contain additional material not in the book.

"There is a distinction between the book and film," Jordan says. "I did a lot of research that I did not include in the book."

"For instance, I interviewed the doctor of the Shah of Iran. No one knew that the Shah had cancer for a long time. Not even his wife. That didn't fit in because my book was a first-hand account of what I knew at the time. But it will be in the film."

The leading characters will be the actors from the hostage crisis: Jordan, President Jimmy Carter, the Shah, Ayatollah Khomeini, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, Gen. Omar Torrijos (the leader of Panama), Col. Charles A. Beckwith (leader of the aborted American rescue effort), and Lt. Col. Charles W. Scott (highest-ranking American hostage). Rafshoon did not want to discuss any possible actors for the roles.

'Male hunks' dominate TV

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — The most blatant theme of new shows in the month-old television season is Stud Power. The top stars all seem to be male hunks.

Last Sunday, swarthy Erik Estrada posed in his skivvies as a male model on "CHiPs," then postured in his bikini briefs as a boxer in the movie "Honeyboy."

"It didn't take long for the new country cousins from the 'Dukes of Hazzard' to show off their physiques. In the first episode, right after their car leaped across the screen, Coy and Vance Duke had their first public inspection. They took off their shirts to chop wood."

This bulging beefcake is designed to appeal to young audiences, whose major requirement is that the star smile a lot and look pretty. Byron Cherry (Coy Duke) had never acted before. Peter Barton of "The Powers of Matthew Star" was a model.

Publicity shots of Jon-Erik Hexxum in "Voyagers" feature his bare chest. David Hasselhoff, upstaged by his computer car in "Knight Rider," was soap opera heartthrob Snapper Foster for six years.

Older audiences, looking for a little sophistication with handsome hunks, can also find it in the new programs. These stars can be merry men, capable of joking themselves and others. The art of self-deprecation, mastered by Tom Selleck, is now practiced by Lee Horsley of "Matt Houston," Bruce Boxleitner of "Bring 'em Back Alive" and Robert Urich of "Gavilan."

"One NBC promo for the yet-unveiled "Gavilan" shows him punching out a culprit, then wringing his hand at the pain of it all.

"Women love Tom Selleck, but he's also a man's man," says Al Onorato, a casting director. "Men don't feel threatened by him."

Television, if anything, is not a three-dimensional medium.

If you're a man, you should be tall, dark and handsome, like Selleck, or Jack Scalia, who was a high-priced fashion model before "The Devil in Connection."

One irony is that the new shows projected as the biggest hits are "Newhart" and "Gloria." Bob Newhart and Sally Struthers don't come from the sex-symbol stamp.

"Hollywood didn't know what to do with Sally," says Onorato. "She doesn't have sex appeal. She's bizarre and kooky."

Miss Struthers is one of the few female leads in the new programs. Part of this relates to the networks, their consciousness raised a bit by feminism, pulling back on aging female beauties who couldn't look good and act well at the same time.

It's also the realization that women are controlling the commercial dial more than ever. Advertisers have always coveted women viewer-consumers. And, with cable television's sports and movies attracting male viewers, NBC, CBS and ABC are in danger of programming for ladies only.

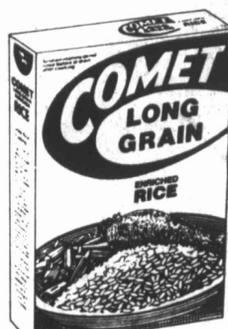

This is the season they practice.

American economist awarded Nobel prize

SUCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — University of Chicago Professor George Stigler found firm statistical support for his hypothesis in a number of studies, but it still is too early to assess the ultimate accuracy of his theory, the impact of government regulation on the economy.

Another study showed regulation of electricity rates lacked observable effects. Stigler said one explanation was that regulation can be based on erroneous perceptions and in practice be difficult to implement.

His work on the consequences of regulatory legislation has set a pattern for numerous similar studies, performed by other researchers in many countries, the award citation said.

The Swedish Academy said Stigler "through long and extensive research efforts... has made fundamental contributions to the study of market processes and the analysis of the structure of industries."

Stigler's achievements establish him as a leader in applied research on markets and industrial structure — a field popularly called industrial organization, the statement said.

He said he supports President Reagan's policies of less government spending and deregulating the economy, but that he could not make any substantive comment on this.

"Certainly no economist, no one at all really, can avoid hearing talk about (Reaganomics), but I'm quite conservative and I think the emphasis on decreased public expenditure and decreased public regulation would be fine," he said. "But that's not a very scientific observation."

"I'm no specialist in that area," he said, "but judging from what I've seen of Nobel prize winners, you have to learn to comment on things you don't really know much about."

As early as the 1940s, Stigler studied effects of some regulatory legislation in the United States, particularly rent controls and minimum-wage legislation. He indicated that far-reaching, unintended side-effects could arise alongside the preliminary, desired effects of regulation.

Preliminary observations led him to the hypothesis that, in practice, some regulations protect firms, organizations, and professional and occupational groups instead of the general public.

PUBLIC NOTICE
INTENT TO CHANGE RATES
Notice is hereby given that CAP ROCK ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE, INC. (the "Utility") intends to change rates for electric utility service effective November 4, 1982, or as soon thereafter as permitted by law. The changes are applicable to all areas to which the Utility provides electric utility service. All classes of customers are affected by the proposed changes. The Utility expects that the proposed schedule of rates will furnish the Utility with 12.2 percent more in revenues than are furnished by the existing schedule of rates.

The Utility intends to change its service rules and regulations including rules relating to obtaining service, line extension and line extension charges, the provision of electric service, service fees, and discontinuance of service.

Implementation of the proposed changes is subject to approval by the appropriate regulatory authority. A statement of intent including the proposed revisions of rates and schedules and a statement specifying in detail each proposed change, the effect the proposed change is expected to have on the revenues of the Utility and the classes and numbers of Utility consumers affected is on file with the Public Utility Commission of Texas, and the municipalities of Midland, Big Spring, Coahoma, Stanton and Ackerly.

The statement of intent is available for public inspection at the general office of the Utility located at West Highway 60, P.O. Box 700, Stanton, Texas 79783.

LBJ's daughter enters Mayo clinic

AUSTIN (AP) — Luci Johnson, daughter of the late President Lyndon Johnson, was flown by air ambulance to the Mayo Clinic for treatment of a gastrointestinal ailment, according to a spokeswoman for her mother.

Betty Tilson, Lady Bird Johnson's secretary, said Miss Johnson, 35, had been in Seton Medical Center since Thursday but was not responding to treatment of severe gastrointestinal problems.

Ms. Tilson said doctors believed she has a form of colitis, an inflammation of the colon.

Johnson in the Tuesday flight were her sister, Lynda Robb, a doctor and two nurses. Her mother flew later to the clinic in Rochester, Minn., Ms. Tilson said.

Miss Johnson is divorced and the mother of four children.

Keep your home up and help keep your electric bill down.

A large part of saving energy — and money — is simply a matter of cutting waste. And with electricity costing more, mainly because the fuel to make it costs more — conservation is more important than ever.

You can start by maintaining your own home. Seal cracks around doors and windows with caulking and weatherstripping to stop heating and cooling leaks.

Check attic ductwork to be sure it is sealed and well-insulated. If ductwork isn't properly maintained, much of your heating and cooling escapes into the attic.

For the full story on saving energy — and energy dollars — get our Unhandy Person's Guide. Just call Texas Electric or ask for it on the comment section of your electric bill. It'll help even the most unhandy person tighten up his home.
