Cockerham, Shaw debate issues

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

MONAHANS — State representatives Larry Don Shaw and Jerry Cockerham cranked their campaigns up to full tilt here yesterday as they squared off in a debate of several key issues in the race for the 69th District seat in the Texas House.

The candidates were limited to three minutes for opening and closing statements, and each was given three minutes to answer questions and two minutes to rebut the answer given by his opponent. The tight format, set up by the Ward County Democratic Club, roped the candidates in somewhat and sometimes complex issues were not given full play they needed.

However, the debate did give voters a chance to compare Shaw and Cockerham and understand a few of their stances on four issues. The debate was held in a city park underneath warm autumn skies with the peaceful setting often disturbed as supporters punctuated the candidates' remarks with applause and cheering.

Rep. Cockerham, who spoke first, told the crowd of well over 200 people, they "had a clear-cut choice" between the two candidates.

"I worked with conservative Democrats and conservative Republicans in the last session and they have always been the majority coalition in the House," Cockerham said. "Many of them hold key positions in the House and most of them will be head of committees in the next session — so I ask who do you think is going to be able to work with his colleagues in the next session."

Cockerham's opening statements also painted Rep. Shaw as having a "liberal stance."

LARRY DON SHAW
...touts record

Shaw rebutted Cockerham's charges by telling the crowd that his record has proved he worked for all facets of his old 63rd District.

"Jerry has said I work for the liberals and that I am somehow bad for this district. Yet I've carried legislation in the House that had dealt with the oil industry, agriculture, education and health issues," Shaw said. "I believe I've dealt with the broad spectrum of what West Texas stand for."

The first question the candidates faced concerned their stance on interest rates.

Cockerham said interest rates in Texas must be allowed to breathe with the national rate rather than putting an artificial ceiling on rates as was the case in 1980 when rates nationally were at 21.5 percent and Texas rates were being held at 12 percent.

"Texas cannot presume it can artificially set a rate ceiling...if unreasonable low interest rates are set in any state money will not be lent in that state and money will go in treasury bills or be lent to other states," Cockerham said.

Cockerham said rates must be allowed to fluctuate somewhat so that money will be available for loans to businesses and consumers.

When his turn came at rebuttal, Shaw attacked interest charges on credit cards and charge accounts.

"There should be a fair profit for those in the lending market, but people that pay bills should not be gouged," he said. Shaw was referring to a recent bill that had set high ceiling rates on amounts of interest that could be charged to consumers.

Things heated up between Shaw and Cockerham on the next question asking them where they stood on regulation of the Public Utilities Commission.

Shaw said he believes the consumer "is being gouged and there needs to be some people on the commission who are consumers, well as representatives of the utility companies."

"Jerry's running an ad now that says he never would support a bill that allows utility companies to pass costs to consumers unchallenged."

"However, there was an amendment to House Bill 600 that disallows utilities to collect increases until after they are approved by the PUC. I voted for the bill and he voted against it and that's a matter of public record and you should know that."

Cockerham retaliated with "I've always been in favor of local control. I think we ought to abolish the PUC and put the powers of rate control back in the hands of the local city council where it belongs."

"So if you have a complaint about your utility rate you can go down to city hall and talk with those setting the rate," he said.

"Also on House Bill 600 there was an amendment to abolish the PUC and I voted for it and Larry voted to keep it so he's not too much opposed to it," Cockerham said.

On the subject of taxes and tax reduction, Cockerham said the current property tax system probably would be revamped in the next session of the Texas Legislature.

Marquez sentenced to five years on assault charge

By MIKE DOWNEY

A Howard County jury sentenced Andrew Marquez to five years in the Texas Department of Corrections for aggravated assault after deliberating less than two hours.

The six-man, six-woman jury found the 23-year-old guilty of aggravated assault in a June 26th shooting incident Friday afternoon after approximately five hours of deliberation.

The only testimony this morning shortly after 9 a.m. was from the defendant. Marquez answered questions from his attorney, Elliott Mitchell, concerning his past convictions. He said he had been assessed a 10-year probated sentence in 1977 for burglary. He also served four and a half years in the Texas Department of Corrections on a 1977 aggravated robbery conviction.

Marquez said he was paroled on Nov. 10, 1981. He said his parole would probably be revoked and he would be returned to serve between seven and nine years remaining on his previous conviction.

During closing arguments, District Attorney Rick Hamby asked the jury to consider "the rights of the people" during this punishment stage of the trial. He reminded the jury that Marquez was not a first offender. "He's been shown compassion and it's been thrown back

Officer hospitalized after scuffle

Big Spring Police Sgt. Jimmy Wallace suffered neck injuries and a 34-year-old Midland man was arrested on suspicion of attempted capital murder of a police officer after a fracas between the two men Saturday night.

The suspect — Dan Busby Jr. of 1923 E. Pecan, Midland — was arrested about 8:15 p.m. in an alley on the 300 block of N.W. Fifth after police officers chased him from Kwikie Drive-In Grocery, 510 N. Gregg, police Det. Avery Falkner said.

The incident began about 10 minutes earlier when Delphia Turner of 300 S. Stonewall, Midland, told police that a black male struck her in the head with a whiskey bottle on the 400 block of N. Gregg, Falkner said. When she tried to escape, the suspect struck Ms. Turner's face with his fists and twisted her arm, police reports said.

Sgt. Wallace arrived on the scene and pursued the suspect, Falkner said. When Wallace tried to handcuff the man, he struck Wallace several times with his fists, wrested Wallace's service revolver away from him and

Texans to vote on Property Tax repeal

By JANET WARREN
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Repeal of the state property tax, increased welfare spending and further tax relief for farmers are among six proposed constitutional changes that Texas voters will rule on Nov. 2.

Another proposal includes hiking the interest rate on state general obligation bonds so those bonds now in limbo can be sold in today's market.

Apparent attempts to save taxpayers money are behind two other proposals — one to lengthen the term of office in some rural water and reclamation districts and the other to dissolve the office of county treasurer in two counties.

Proposal One, which would repeal the state property tax, may end a long political and legal struggle over those funds, which provided new buildings for 17 Texas universities, including Midwestern State University, Angelo

State University, Sul Ross State University, Sam Houston State University, East Texas State University, Texas A&I University.

The tax, 10 cents per $100 valuation, has not been collected since 1979, when the Legislature rendered the tax uncollectable by severely cutting the assessment ratio. That move was bitterly opposed by some university interests because it dried up their flow of construction dollars.

Finding themselves in a questionable legal position, legislators decided earlier this year to let the voters rule on whether to keep the tax. Lawmakers also earmarked $151 million for as a stop-gap appropriation for the schools. But they won't get that money unless the repeal proposal is approved.

To date, no permanent replacement mechanism for the state property tax fund has been adopted.

A "yes" vote is in favor of repeal, "no" against repeal.

Proposal Two would raise the ceiling for spending on Aid to Families with Dependent Children and make way for Texas to administer the welfare program entirely if the federal government hands it over to the states.

If approved, the state ceiling for AFDC spending would be set at $160 million for the 1982-83 period. Beginning in 1984, the state level would be 1 percent of the state budget each biennium. Legislators would not necessarily spend up to the ceiling amount.

State funds are matched with federal funds in these assistance programs. Lt. Gov. Hobby has estimated that the next Legislature will need about $100 million for state matching funds.

Proponents have claimed the constitutional change is necessary to keep the amount of the state's contribution from reaching its current ceiling of $80 million per year and forcing benefit payments to be cut or some people to be denied. Also, they say, benefit payments need to be increased, therefore, more money needs to be appropriated for that program. The payments are currently the 49th lowest in the nation.

A state welfare official says the state is in no danger of bumping the ceiling within the next few years because of a reduced caseload and other factors. But payment levels desperately need to be raised since they have not been increased since 1969, said Leilani Rose, AFDC analyst

'Candy Man' seeks appeal

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ronald Clark O'Bryan, dubbed the "Candy Man" for allegedly poisoning his son with trick-or-treat candy laced with cyanide, asked a federal appeals court today to halt his scheduled Halloween execution.

In a 13-page brief filed with the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, lawyers for O'Bryan said the jury that recommended his death didn't give enough consideration to his peaceful nature.

"There was no evidence that Mr. O'Bryan had a prior criminal record or that he ever committed an act of violence in the past," the appeal said.

It described the condemned man as always having his family's interest at heart.

"Mr. O'Bryan admitted to living beyond his means because he wanted his family to live as well as possible," it said.

"He was a dreamer. He dreamed the very best he could get for himself and his family."

The appeal also said jurors who might have been more reluctant to recommend death for O'Bryan were unfairly excluded at his trial.

O'Bryan was convicted in 1975 of killing his son, 8-year-old Timothy Marc, by giving him a sugar stick laced with cyanide on Oct. 31, 1974. The boy died a short time later.

O'Bryan maintained someone else had poisoned the candy.

Texas District Judge Mike McSpadden ordered that O'Bryan die before sunrise Oct. 31, saying he felt Halloween would be an appropriate date.

Tylenol victim's relative called 'prime suspect'

CHICAGO (AP) — Investigators say a relative of one of the Tylenol murder victims has been under surveillance as the "prime suspect" in the seven cyanide killings, the Chicago Sun-Times reported today.

The newspaper said unidentified investigators believe the suspect — possibly acting with another person — placed cyanide-tainted Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules on the shelves of several stores to give the appearance the relative was killed by a random murderer.

Investigators were told the suspect had a violent argument with a relative shortly before the poisonings occurred, the newspaper said. As a result, investigators now believe six of the seven deaths were caused to cover up the one killing, the Sun-Times reported.

The newspaper also said the suspect has been under around-the-clock surveillance since shortly after a task force was organized to investigate the deaths.

But one unidentified investigator emphasized this could be another coincidence that doesn't lead to an arrest, the newspaper said.

Task force spokesman Morton Friedman had no comment on the report.

"All we are doing is continuing our investigation in a regular manner," said police Commander Kenneth Curin.

Asked whether anyone had been identified as a suspect, he said "No."

Chicago investigators said meanwhile they have been unable to determine who may have returned the seventh Extra-Strength Tylenol bottle in which cyanide-laced capsules were discovered.

The makers of Extra-Strength Tylenol are preparing to reintroduce the pain-reliever and have begun an advertising campaign urging consumers to "continue to trust Tylenol."

A series of 60-second television messages began Sunday night on all three major commercial networks featuring Dr. Thomas N. Gates, medical director of McNeil Consumer Products, the maker of Tylenol.

"We want you to continue to trust Tylenol," the commercials say.

Gates says the company eventually will reintroduce Tylenol in tamper-resistant containers.

Tylenol capsules were withdrawn from the market after the seven deaths were reported between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1 in the Chicago area.

A spokesman for Johnson & Johnson, McNeil's parent company, said the television spots would continue through Wednesday.

The company will study consumer reaction to the spots before deciding whether to run them after Wednesday, Lawrence G. Foster, Johnson & Johnson vice president for public affairs, said in New Brunswick, N.J.

The message in the spots, Foster said, tells the public "that what happened was the act of a deranged person and that the product was not to blame. It reinforces those points and asks for continuing support for the product."

Although there has been no indication that the capsules were tampered with at the McNeil plant in Fort Washington, Pa., company officials also announced new security measures there Sunday.

Meanwhile, in Chicago, investigators have been unable to identify the consumer who may have returned the seventh Extra-Strength Tylenol bottle.

The seventh container was discovered Thursday by a laboratory technician checking bottles of Tylenol for the company. The bottle was among a batch turned over by a Dominick's Finer Foods store and was believed to have been turned in by a customer.

in our faces," Hamby said.

The district attorney did not ask for a certain number of years from the jury, but said he was "quite comfortable to leave the decision to you." Hamby cautioned the jury not to be moved by compassion for Marquez. "The compassion should be for us, not for the defendant," he said.

Mitchell asked the jury to consider the different situations involved in aggravated assaults in their deliberation of punishment. He asked for the jurors to "take into consideration his past convictions at a young age." He asked for a chance for Marquez to have some kind of normal life when he completed his time.

"Andrew Marquez will go back to the penitentiary regardless of what you decide here today," Mitchell said. He requested the jury to do what's just when they considered Marquez' punishment. "Rather than revenge, I hope you'll consider justice."

Information on shooting of Johnny Solis sought

District Attorney Rick Hamby, in conjunction with Big Spring Police Chief Rick Turner, is appealing for anyone with information relating to the Aug. 31st shooting of Johnny Solis to appear before the Howard County grand jury Wednesday.

Hamby said the police department had conducted its own investigation into the matter. "I have discussed it with Chief Turner and we are both of the opinion the grand jury should look into the circumstances (of the shooting) independently," Hamby said.

"We encourage anyone knowledgeable of matters regarding the incident to contact the district attorney's office," Hamby said. All relevant information will be presented to the grand jury at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, he said.

CRMWD releases financial report

By JOE PICKLE
Retired Herald Editor

For the first three quarters of this year, the Colorado River Municipal Water District is running well ahead of the same time a year ago in both revenues and expenses. The good news is that revenues have risen faster than expenses.

There are three primary reasons for greater revenues — sale of more water, higher rates and earnings on bond transactions. Revenues through September amounted to $8,401,160, up $1,731,000 from a year ago. Expenses of $5,008,277 were up $1,296,000, leaving $435,000 more on the plus side. This is handy, for 1982 is the peak year for debt service requirements.

September revenues of $1,091,005 marked the first time the District received more than a million dollars in a single month.

Linda Sue Hernandez, 22, of 908 N. Goliad, posted a $1,000 bond to be released in connection with a DWI offense. Bond was set by Peace Justice Bobby West.

Kevin Patterson, 23, of 601 Circle, was arrested by sheriff's deputies on a peace bond issued by Heflin's office. Patterson posted a $1,000 bond to be released.

with the Texas Department of Human Resources.

Arguments against the proposal are that welfare spending should be cut, not increased.

Proposal Three would grant tax relief to farmers and ranchers by completely exempting agricultural equipment and machinery from property taxation.

The Legislature tried to accomplish this with legislation in 1981. But the attorney general ruled the legislation applied only to individually operated and owned farms. Those operated by partnerships and corporations could not qualify, the ruling said. It also limited the value of property that could be exempted.

The proposed constitutional amendment would wipe out these limitations.

Exempt property would include equipment such as tractors and cultivators but not barns, silos and sheds, according to a Texas Research League report. About $2.15 million in property tax revenue would be lost statewide if the plan is enacted.

needs, according to a Texas Legislative Council report.

Proposal Five would abolish the county treasurer's office in Bee and Tarrant counties and shift those duties to the county auditor.

Arguments for the change are that it would save the county money. Arguments against are that it would eliminate a needed safeguard against misapplication of funds and substitute an elected office for an appointed one, according to a Texas Legislative Council report.

Proposal Six would raise the maximum interest rate on state general obligation bonds from 6 to 12 percent.

The proposed change is aimed at increasing chances of selling already authorized bonds in the areas of water quality enhancement and water conservation, park development and student loans.

Arguments against the change are that the sale can be postponed until interest rates come down. Also, payment of high interest rates contributes to inflation.

Bill 30) will have to be brought up in the next session and made more palatable to the people.

"The issue will be hotly debated and I hope we come out with something more equitable than we have today," Cockerham said.

Shaw listed his work for gasahol exemptions, inheritance taxes, livestock and poultry exemptions and repeal of the property tax amendment saying that he "not only talked about lowering taxes, but I acted on it and the record shows it."

Shaw also agreed the property tax problem would have to be worked over again, but he felt like the 40 percent homestead exemption and rollback election clauses in the present law were helpful to taxpayers.

The final question of the day dealt with law and order.

Both candidates advocated stronger and swifter penalties for persons committing violent crimes.

"We're letting people out and judges are putting people on parole that shouldn't because because of overcrowding in prison," Shaw said. "It's imperative that the Legislature work hard in a bipartisan effort to and correct this problem and provide those facilities to properly incarcerate those people."

Cockerham said "swift and sure punishment is the only real deterrent to crime."

"I don't think prisoner should be mistreated, but they should not live lives of luxury, privileges and right — they are there to be punished," he said. "When they get out they should have a real fear of going back and we don't have that now."

In their closing statement the candidates called on supporters for help in the final eight days of the campaign. Both expressed optimism at winning and each took at parting shot at his opponent.

"Jerry Cockerham has said that for some reason I'm bad for this part of the country," Shaw said. "I submit to you if I'm so bad why did Jerry Cockerham support me on my legislative program — not just a few items — but 100 percent."

"Let's send someone to Austin to discuss the issues of education, crime and of things we need to do about this state's economy. These are the things this campaign should have been about, not about name calling and who Falkner said Wallace sprayed mace on the suspect and he again fled from Wallace. By that time, back-up officers had arrived and the man was taken into custody, Falkner said.

Police said another Midland man, 23-year-old Edward Turner of 300 S. Stonewall, was also arrested at the scene, on suspicion of hindering apprehension. Both suspects remain in city jail, police said.

Wallace is in stable condition at Malone-Hogan Hospital and should be released today, a hospital spokesman said. Wallace was admitted for observation of possible respiratory problems, the spokesman said.

Police Beat

Suspect arrested on three charges

Police said they arrested a 29-year-old man from Lawn, Texas yesterday on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of marijuana and unlawful carrying of a weapon.

Johnny Ray Herron was transferred to Howard County jail and released after posting $1,000, $1,500 and $2,500 bonds, police said.

The suspect was stopped at Jo-Boy's Restaurant, 1810 S. Gregg, about 12:50 a.m. on suspicion of DWI and, when asked for a driver's license, the suspect reached under the driver's seat, police reports said.

The arresting officer placed Herron under arrest, looked under the front seat and found two bags of what appeared to be marijuana, a pipe with what appeared to be marijuana residue, and a .22-caliber pistol, police said.

Police reports also showed the following:

- Two 26-year-old Big Spring men were arrested last night on suspicion of possession of under two and over four ounces of marijuana. Craig Wendell Panek of 609 E. 13th and Vince A. Wagner of P.O. Box 2785 were arrested about 10 p.m. after police stopped their vehicle on the 300 block of W. Fourth for a traffic violation.
- Police said they frisked Wagner to check for a weapon and found a plastic bag of "green vegetation" in the front of his trousers.
- John Spacek of 701 Lancaster said that someone stole two speakers from his car parked at the Ritz Theater between 7:10 p.m. and 9 p.m. yesterday.
- Virginia Diaz of 705 Lancaster said a person known to her drove past and fired a shot from an unidentified caliber weapon at her house about 1:20 a.m. yesterday.
- A one-vehicle accident at Moss Lake sent a 25-year-old man to Malone-Hogan hospital for treatment last night. Bruce Boling of 1007 E. 14th was treated and released from the hospital after the driver of a 1979 Ford pickup truck he was a passenger in lost control on an unpaved lake road, causing the truck to roll down a steep hill.
- The driver, 22-year-old Brian Copeland of the same address, and another passenger, 24-year-old James Tilman, received minor injuries, but were not treated at Malone-Hogan, a hospital spokesman said.
- Vehicles driven by Grady L. Cahill of P.O. Box 1708 and Robert Florez of 2615 Hunter collided at Wasson and Parkway at 9 p.m. Saturday. Police cited Cahill for making an improper right turn. No injuries were reported.
- Shane Forgas of 1604 Wren lost control of his Ford pickup truck, struck a fence and ran into a house and parked car at 4:00 Bilger about 11 p.m. Saturday. Police cited Forgas for no driver's license and for driving an unsafe speed.

CHURCH MEMBERS KILLED — A member of the Christ Miracle Healing Center and Church in Miracle Valley, Ariz., grieves as two other women try to lift the body of one of two men killed Saturday in a shoot-out with sheriff's deputies who tried to serve a traffic warrant.

Two die in sect riot

Religious group angered over soured land deal

By LARRY LOPEZ
Associated Press Writer
MIRACLE VALLEY, Ariz. — A bloody melee between a religious sect and police that left two people dead was sparked by the group's anger over a real estate deal that went sour, the Arizona Daily Star reported today.

Quoting an anonymous source, the Star said Julius Gillespie, an elder in the all-black Christ Miracle Healing Center and Church, told friends before the confrontation Saturday that members were outraged over "fraud" in their purchase of a former motel.

Details of the alleged fraud were not described in the newspaper.

The blue-painted motel building on Highway 92, dubbed Saint's Place, is home to many church members. It also was the scene of an argument last week, when a church member tried to take down a notice of a sheriff's sale for the property, the Star said.

A WITNESS said a Cochise County sheriff's deputy told the church member he could be arrested if he removed the sign. The deputy left after erecting it, but within hours the sign had been taken down, the newspaper said.

FBI agents interviewed church members Sunday in the investigation of the previous day's violence, which left nine injured.

Details of the violence remained sketchy, said Sgt. Allen Schmidt, spokesman for the Public Safety Department, who did not know if any of the church members shot had been armed.

Paul Brinkley-Rogers, a reporter for the Star, said he was threatened by a church member as he witnessed the melee.

"I was trying to take down her words in my notebook and watch for the women behind me running toward the law officers with ax handles, hammers, baseball bats, gardening implements, scissors and even a broom," Brinkley-Rogers said in a copyright story.

Tensions have surrounded the sect, with an estimated 300 members, since it moved here in 1979. Residents of predominantly white Miracle Valley complained about the sect's armed security patrols.

AUTHORITIES SAID deputies entered Miracle Valley on Saturday to arrest three church members, two for misdemeanor traffic violations and a third on a warrant charging felony fleeing.

The shooting erupted after a large crowd of church members surrounded deputies reinforcing the officers trying to serve the warrants, witnesses said.

William Thomas Jr., 38, son of the founder of the sect, and another sect member identified as Agastar or Arguster Tate, 52, were killed with high-powered rifles, police said.

Two church members and one deputy remained hospitalized today. Church member

Roy Williams was in satisfactory condition with a severed spine. Church member Johnny Jamison was serious but stable condition with a bullet wound in the shoulder. Cochise Deputy David Jones was listed as stable, no condition given, with gunshot pellet wounds in his chest, arms and legs.

FIVE OFFICERS were treated and released Saturday, and one more was released Sunday.

Nine church members were arraigned Sunday before Justice of the Peace John Sharp in Bisbee on one count each of aggravated assault on a peace officer, and ordered held on bond of $68,500 each, Undersheriff Dale Lehman said.

A tenth church member was arrested Sunday for investigation of carrying a concealed weapon, authorities said.

Sheriff's Lt. Frank E. Peterson said bond was posted Sunday for the two church members sought on the misdemeanor warrants. The third member named was not believed to be in the area, he said.

Roadblocks around Miracle Valley on Saturday night were relaxed Sunday afternoon, and non-residents were allowed into the area of the sect, which was founded by Frances Thomas in Chicago in the early 1960s.

Phoenix Police Capt. Harold Hurt, a community relations specialist, met with Mrs. Thomas and Sheriff Jimmy Judd Sunday. Hurt has met with Mrs. Thomas previously, officials said.

State fair closes

DALLAS (AP) — The State Fair of Texas ended its 1982 run — without breaking any attendance records, officials said.

Attendance for the fair's 17-day schedule was expected to fall just under 3 million people. That figure would top the 1981 attendance of 2,737,532, officials said.

October 1981 was the third-rainiest month in Dallas history and fair officials blamed the bad weather for the lowest attendance in at least eight years.

Clear weather this year helped boost attendance, according to officials.

The crowd count through Saturday was 2,643,690, compared with 2,566,400 for the same time last year. The fair closed Sunday.

Lech Walesa's wife tells of strip-search

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa's wife says she was forced to undergo a "horrible" strip search by policewomen who also frisked her hysterically weeping daughters in an apparent hunt for smuggled messages from the interned labor leader.

In an exclusive interview after she spent five days with her husband, Danuta Walesa also told The Associated Press that her husband had been offered, but rejected, freedom in exchange for an endorsement of the government's banning of the Solidarity labor union.

Mrs. Walesa said she and her daughters Magda, 4, and Anna, 2, were held for two hours last Friday at the Przemysl police station, near the place in southeastern Poland where Walesa is held. He has been interned without charge since martial law was imposed last Dec. 13 and Solidarity was suspended.

Visibly distraught, Mrs. Walesa said she was forced to strip in front of female security agents who apparently were searching for notes from her husband. She speculated that authorities were looking for documents that might be used as evidence to file formal charges against Walesa.

"It was the most horrible thing. It's impossible to put into words," Mrs. Walesa said, adding that she protested the search, but the security agents ignored her. She said she would file a complaint with the Communist authorities about the search.

There was no comment from the government on Mrs. Walesa's claims, made in an hour-long interview Saturday after she returned to her home in Gdansk, the Baltic seaport where Walesa co-founded the Soviet bloc's only independent trade union during the shipyard strikes in August 1980.

Mrs. Walesa said she heard the screams of her daughters as agents tried to undress them in the room adjacent to the office where she was searched.

The agents finally frisked the weeping girls through their clothes, Mrs. Walesa said, adding that nothing was taken from them and they were released after two hours.

Mrs. Walesa said she has not been strip-searched on previous visits.

Kidnapped man found slain

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police early today found the mutilated corpse of a Roman Catholic father of seven who was kidnapped by Protestant extremists in what authorities called a vengeance-seeking hostage snatch.

The body of Joseph Donegan, 48, was discovered in an alley in Protestant east Belfast near Shankhill Road, hours after the midnight deadline set by his Protestant extremist captors, the outlawed Protestant Ulster Volunteer Force.

The extremists had threatened to kill Donegan if guerrillas of the mostly Catholic Irish Republican Army did not release Protestant militiaman Thomas Cochrane, 55, by midnight. Cochrane was kidnapped 12 hours before Donegan was snatched Friday night.

While police resumed their search for Cochrane in South Armagh near the border with the Irish Republic, Donegan's daughter, Anne, a 23-year-old news reporter, made a dramatic plea to the IRA to free the Protestant hostage although her family was grieving at the loss of their loved one.

"We still want Mr. Cochrane to live because we do not want Mrs. Cochrane to go through a similar ordeal," Miss Donegan said from the family home in Belfast. "If he is alive, we want him to go free and back to his family."

Hours earlier, the Donegan and Cochrane families staged a rare show of sectarian unity in the strife-torn British province, pleading for release of their loved ones in a radio broadcast.

Belfast police said three men were being questioned about the killing and a car found near Donegan's body was being examined.

In an unrelated killing in Armagh, police said gunman firing from a car shot a man to death early Monday. Police said the 47-year-old victim, not immediately identified, was walking from a Catholic housing estate with other men when a red car pulled up, a gunman jumped out, fired four times and hit the victim twice in the head.

Weather

Warm days, cool nights to continue

By The Associated Press
Clear skies and cool temperatures dominated the Texas weather picture today.

Some high clouds were noted before dawn over the Panhandle and South Plains. Temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 36 at Marfa to 56 at McAllen.

Winds were variable at speeds of 10 mph or less over most of the state. Southerly breezes at 5 to 15 mph were reported over the Panhandle and South Plains.

The forecast called for fair to partly cloudy skies with cool nights and slightly warmer days through Tuesday.

HIGH WINDS and heavy rain pounded the Virginia and North Carolina coasts early today, battering beaches and forcing some residents to be evacuated.

The winds neared hurricane force, producing floodtides. High waves tore at the beaches, and more than 3 inches of rain was recorded at Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Flooding prompted evacuations around New Bern, N.C., where winds gusting to 60 mph blasted the coastline.

Meanwhile, cold weather settled into the Northeast, and a cold front brought cloudy skies and a few showers to the West.

Rain and thundershowers were forecast for later today over the Pacific Northwest and into Nevada and Utah, and rain was expected to continue over the mid-Atlantic coastal states.

FORECAST
West Texas: Fair to partly cloudy through Tuesday. Highs mostly in the 70s. Lows mostly in the 40s. Highs Tuesday mostly in the 60s.
EXTENDED FORECAST
West Texas: Continued warm days and cool nights. Lows lower 40s Panhandle to lower 50s south. Highs lower 70s Panhandle to lower 80s south with lower 90s Big Bend valleys.

Prince Andrew's films missing?

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace today denied press reports that letters from Prince Andrew to his American girlfriend, erotic movie star Koo Stark, and a home movie of them together, had vanished from her London apartment.

"There is no foundation for these stories," a palace spokesman said. "No letters or films are missing."

The Daily Express tabloid reported today that royal detectives were "anxious" to trace the items, which it said could further embarrass the royal family because of Andrew's widely publicized Caribbean vacation with the 25-year-old actress.

The tabloid quoted neighbors as saying they saw the 22-year-old prince at the apartment recently, although it was vacated, and he may have been trying to retrieve the film and letters.

Some of the letters were written while he was serving in the Falkland Islands conflict with Argentina as a helicopter pilot, the Daily Express said.

"There is no suggestion that the film is anything other than an innocent record of a social visit. In one shot Andrew is seen standing by the kitchen sink with his arms around Koo," the Daily Express said. The paper did not explain how it knew what was on the film.

Fighting drugs is no easy job

Fighting drugs is going to be harder than even President Reagan had expected.

The arrest of auto industry maverick John Z. De Lorean on charges he was attempting to save his ailing company with a $24 million cocaine deal confirms that drug-trafficking is no simple back-alley business of hoodlums.

In fact, federal agents said that De Lorean might have avoided their undercover net if he'd been a little more careful in trying to hide his tracks, as a cautious businessman would be expected to.

De Lorean was a cautious — and very successful — businessman who, according to FBI allegations, was so determined to help his failing company that he thought nothing of mounting an enormous cocaine deal.

The former General Motors executive had founded his own firm seven years ago after an impressive record in Detroit. He quit — or was fired — as a $650,000-a-year vice president in 1973.

He built a De Lorean Motor Cars Ltd. plant in Northern Ireland on $120 million raised from such diverse sources as the British government and Johnny Carson. But the company met the same roadblocks the rest of the auto industry encountered.

A couple of days before his arrest he said in an interview that he had raised the money he needed to save the firm.

Drug enforcement agents and the FBI, who said De Lorean had several pounds of cocaine with him when he was arrested, alleged he was trying to raise the money by buying and reselling "coke" with a value of $24 million.

Fortunately this is not a common method of raising capital among big businesses. But the fact that some of it exists demonstrates the major hurdles facing drug law enforcers.

Crowded court docket

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court returned to work with a vengeance last Monday. Not only is the docket unusually crowded, but it includes a heavy load of business normally left for decision by the Legislative and Executive branches.

In the case of the present Court, weaknesses in the other branches count more than judicial activism for the overt intrusion into matters of public policy. So, though the Court is not ideal for settling such issues, it deserves sympathetic scrutiny — especially from the enlightened sector of the public.

The size of the docket is perhaps the only non-controversial feature of the Court's work. The term opened this year with 126 cases accepted for argument, and 12 more were added on Monday. So the season starts with a record number of cases. Six of the nine Justices, indeed, have broken the usual silence by commenting publicly — and in most cases critically — about the heavy caseload.

Many reasons account for the spurt in the Court's business. A statute passed in 1978 raised the number of federal District and Circuit Court judges from 496 to 648. So the Supreme Court has that many more diverse findings to harmonize.

Internal divisions have also marked the work of the Supreme Court itself. During the decade of the 1970s under Chief Justice Warren Burger, the Court has averaged 28 decisions per year by a 5-4 vote, or a plurality. That contrasts with an average of 11 for the Court headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren in the decade of the 1960s. The narrow decisions, not to mention the proliferation of split decisions, means that there is an abundance of uncertain rulings that the Court is prone to reconsider and refine over and over again.

Then there is the increasing involvement of the justices in public policy issues. According to a calculation by Bruce Fein, a legal scholar here in Washington, the docket this year includes cases on abortion, antitrust, bankruptcy, drug abuse, drunken driving, immigration, job rights, prisoners' rights, state support for the religious school, taxes and voting rights.

Because American society in the 1980s keeps throwing up such issues in constant profusion, the Court's interest in them by itself yields a growing volume of cases. The more so as decision in such controversial matters is usually by the narrow majorities, which call for more and more refinement in still further rulings on the same subject.

As an additional index of the Court's plunge into public policy, Mr. Fein cites the number of federal statutes held unconstitutional invalidated 18. That is just short of the 20 held overruled by the Warren Court in the 1960s. But both are far higher than the norm for years past. In the period of more than 70 years leading up to the Civil War, in fact, the Supreme Court invalidated only two statutes.

A crucial difference on that score sets the Burger Court apart from the Warren Court. The Warren Court was activist in approach, and deliberately reached out to improve public policy. The Burger Court is far more prone to judicial restraint. Public policy issues have been thrust upon it, not drummed up.

The reason is that the President and the Congress have recently been pulled into many areas of new responsibility. In those areas, the general practice is to frame laws that are loose in definition and open-ended in application. Environmental law offers many examples. Almost always the statutes leave open to the courts large questions as to when and how regulations are to be applied.

The judicial process, by its very nature, is not ideal for decision on such matters. It depends on individual cases which arise more or less at hazard, and which get decided one by one — not in the comprehensive manner most favorable to general policy. Court decisions tend to go up or down, and do not set out general rules for a variety of cases in the way open to the Legislative or Executive branches. Moreover, judicial decisions are framed in a highly restrictive circle. Judges and lawyers are almost everything. The diverse crowd of interests and professions that form the essence of American society are largely excluded.

Criticism of Court rulings comes easy in these conditions. So a couple of cautions are in order. Since the Justices are only filling vacuums, not grabbing turf, it is unfair to attack them as usurpers about prison reform, school prayer, civil rights, and freedom of the press, and to be especially circumspect in criticism. For the court is far more sensitive to the values dear to enlightened persons than are those elected to the Congress and the White House by the voters of this essentially populist country.

Billy Graham

I can't get off alcohol

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Gradually over the years I guess I have become more and more dependent on alcohol. I'd like to stop, but I'm not sure I can. Do you think God can give me the strength?

DEAR R.G.: Yes, I certainly believe God can help you — and that he wants to help you overcome this problem. Your experience is, I suspect, like that of many alcoholics: this problem did not happen all at once, but crept up on you almost without your being aware of its grip on you. Perhaps this is one reason the Bible warns, "Do not gaze at wine when it is red, when it sparkles in the cup, when it goes down smoothly! In the end it bites like a snake and poisons like a viper" (Proverbs 23:31-32).

You have already taken the first step in dealing with your problem and that is you have admitted your need of help. One of the biggest barriers for many alcoholics is that they are unwilling to admit their helplessness to break their habit. But what do you do now, and how can God help you?

There are at least two ways God can help you, if you are willing to receive his help. First, he can help you resist the temptations that come your way. He can by his Holy Spirit give you an inner strength and courage you have not known before as you trust him and seek his help. But I want you to note that one of the ways he will help you deal with temptation is to get you to flee from it right now. The Bible says, "Submit yourselves, then, to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you" (James 4:7). Let me be specific. If you find you are tempted to drink in certain situations (such as a party or a bar), then don't even go near them. Avoid like the plague situations that would tempt you.

Then God can assist you by helping you deal with whatever has caused you to turn to alcohol. Perhaps, for example, you have used alcohol to help you escape from problems (although the problems are still there).

The art of tact

I observed the following scene a few days ago...

A store clerk was confronted by an angry customer who was upset about a catalog order that hadn't arrived on time.

"I've got a bone to pick with you," announced the customer in a heated voice. "You people have let me down. This is the second time I've ordered something and it hasn't come in on time. I'm tired of this happening — the service used to never be this bad before."

The poor clerk flinched at the remarks and I could see her stiffen as the assault continued. The clerk tried to break in on the customer's tirade several times to say she would check on the order, but the customer wouldn't have it until he finished his speech.

After a couple of minutes of degrading the store, the service and anything else he could think of, the man ended his harangue by telling the clerk, "I don't want you to take this personally, but I felt I had to get it off my chest."

I could see the hurt in the clerk's eyes. Even though she attempted to remain helpful, there was no way she didn't take the attack "personally." Anyone with even a hint of pride is going to take negative criticism like that to heart.

However, the clerk gathered herself, and told the customer she would promptly check on the order's whereabouts.

"Where's the manager, I want to speak to the manager, I've gotten the runaround long enough," snapped the man maintaining his belligerence.

The manager came up and got the same speech. He kept asking the customer for information about the order so he could check on it, but the man just kept complaining.

The manager finally was able to ascertain the item had been back-ordered for a couple of weeks.

"It'll be another two weeks before the order comes in, I can refund your money if you don't want to wait," the manager said.

"No, I don't want any refund, I gotten the runaround so much already I don't guess another two weeks is going to matter," the customer said as he left.

Clearly the man had not come in to have his claim settled. He was intent on venting his rage. Getting his problem solved was secondary.

We've all had that problem of someone coming in and yelling at us, whether it's our fault or not. And we try to remain civil because we are our business' representative while the person has his way with our feelings. Then perhaps they feel they justify the outburst by telling us "not to take it personally."

That's not to say customer complaints are unwarranted, it's just that a kind manner would get things accomplished much faster than anger and loudness.

I don't think too many people purposely make mistakes, and sometimes if a mistake is made most people are willing to make good on it. So, there's really no reason to get upset in most cases.

Of course, the above scenario works both ways. A person shouldn't have to walk into a store with a problem and get "What do you want?" as an opening sales pitch from a clerk.

Most people, be they clerk or customer, only want cooperation and a friendly manner from the people with whom they are dealing.

It's a good feeling to be able to help someone, and it's pleasurable to be treated with respect when you need help. Unfortunately, some of us forget what it's like to be on the other side of the fence. We need to have empathy for our fellow man.

It couldn't hurt for us to embrace kindness and use it when dealing with one another. Days wouldn't be so demanding and jobs not as grinding if common courtesy were in better supply.

So the next time problems arise, try to remember what it's like to be on the other side of the counter. Tact, diplomacy and a smile are some of the best tools we have, so don't let them get rusty.

A gigantic stink bomb

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's multimillion-dollar chemical warfare program is turning into a gigantic stink bomb.

Poison gas was used with such horrible effect in World War I that no nation dared to unleash it in World War II for fear of devastating retaliation in kind. Yet research in the deadly field went on, and scientists developed ever more lethal chemical warfare weapons.

Alarmed by reports that the Soviets had made great strides in perfecting nerve gas and other chemical/biological killers, Congress and the Reagan administration listened sympathetically to the generals' pleas to close the "gas gap." Over the past two years, hundreds of millions of dollars were appropriated to build up our chemical arsenal.

It's debatable whether the United States needs to achieve the capability of retaliating on an exact, tit-for-tat basis against whatever weapon the Soviets may decide to develop. Critics see no reason why the threat of nuclear weapons, for example, couldn't deter the first use of poison gas.

But on one point there is no argument: defending our front-line troops against a sneak chemical attack. Unfortunately, the Pentagon's chemical warfare defense program has turned into an expensive bonfire that has wasted millions without developing the needed protective measures.

Quite simply, the protective gear intended to nullify the effects of an enemy gas attack are almost as dangerous as the enemy's chemicals. If it weren't so potentially tragic, it would almost be laughable.

The uniform designed to protect soldiers from poison gas — mask, boots, gloves and coveralls — can incapacitate or even kill the wearer.

An internal Army manual states that the outfit is so bulky and airtight that it "could cause significant numbers of heat casualties" (dizziness and fainting) at any time," the report warns.

Being rendered even temporarily helpless on the battlefield is bad enough. But the protective gear can even cause heat stroke, which the Army report notes "has a 50 percent mortality rate."

Still, the Army concluded, after weighing "heat casualties versus chemical casualties," that the protective outfit should be worn after all. "Reduced chemical protection of troops should not be permitted unnecessarily," the Army warned, "because the risk of heat stress or even exhaustion normally involves only a brief illness, whereas chemical casualties can be much more serious."

The gas mask is also a problem. The Defense Department recognizes the possibility of "breathing difficulty caused by the mask," as well as an understandable impairment of the ability to hear and make oneself heard.

There has even been trouble with the antidote developed to counteract nerve gas. The original antidote was atropine, but that is so dangerous itself that the Army spent $1.4 million on a drug known as TAB (no relation to the soft drink).

But sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado that the new antidote contained a hallucinogen. Soldiers taking it would be "high" for hours. They might be protected against nerve gas, but they'd be helpless against other weapons — just as, in World War I, laughing gas was sometimes used to render enemy soldiers incapable of defending themselves against cold steel or lethal gas.

After this expensive false start, the armed services developed another, non-hallucinogenic antidote, and largely scrapped TAB.

Footnote: A team of investigators for the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., is now scrutinizing the Pentagon's chemical warfare expenditures more closely. A Pentagon spokesman said the Defense Department will use the increased funds to improve outdated protective gear.

REFUGEE DILEMMA: For nearly four years, the Ayatollah Khomeini has been persecuting Iranian religious minorities — Bahais, Jews and Christians. The State Department has finally decided to initiate a special refugee program for these Iranians — if they can manage to get out of their own country.

Refugee Coordinator Eugene Douglas was responsible for pushing the Foggy Bottom bureaucracy into the program, which he hopes will bring 8,000 Iranians to the United States in the next year.

One reason for the long delay in helping the Iranian religious minorities was the fear that Congress and the American public would be unwilling to offer shelter to Iranians of any kind because of the hostage crisis.

Another fear was that setting up a special program for Iranians would infuriate the ayatollah and cause him to intensify the persecution. Now, however, everyone agrees that the repression couldn't get any worse.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Unemployment rates could surpass those of the Great Depression if the supply of Persian Gulf oil were to be cut off, according to an unreleased, congressional study. U.S. employment could jump from the current 10.1 percent to more than 35 percent as oil-dependent industries shut down. West Germany's jobless rate could hit 40 percent and France's could top 36.5 percent.

The Swedes are confronting the Russians in the air waves as well as underwater. Low-power Swedish civil defense radio transmitters are being used to beam programs to the once-independent Soviet republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, in support of growing dissident movements there.

Dr. Donohue

Doctor defends medication

Dear Dr. Donohue: Could you tell me anything about bad effects from the DPT shots for children? Is it possible for them to make a child overactive? — Mrs. V.E.S.

DPT refers to the triple vaccine for diphtheria-pertussis-tetanus protection, which is routinely given to all infants. A recent TV program raised the issue of possible complications to the pertussis (whooping cough) part of the vaccine, with particular reference to brain damage. I've had other mail like yours, so I do feel I should respond with what I feel is the most sensible approach to the subject.

Such untoward reactions have been reported, but I want to stress that they are extremely rare. Also, because the shots are given in a series (three about a month apart) there is opportunity to detect one of those very rare occurrences. In fact, as you know, the initial series is followed about 18 months later with repeats. Finally, the child receives the booster before entering school for the first time.

If there were convulsions or signs of nerve involvement following the first injection, the whooping cough part of the vaccine would not subsequently be included. Or if the child had been very sleepy, had a temperature of 105, or cried and screamed for more than an hour after the shot, then it would be discontinued — again referring to the whooping cough part of the vaccine.

This triple vaccine has been used for many years. Because of it you rarely see a case of whooping cough in this country. In countries where the whooping cough vaccine was abandoned, there has been a great increase in that problem. And whooping cough itself can lead to serious complications, including brain damage and death.

So what is my personal view? It is that not only would I have a child of mine vaccinated with it, but would badger the child's doctor to give it. That's how convinced I am of the effectiveness and safety of the vaccine and how little I fear the very rare instances of complications from it.

In answer to your question regarding hyperactivity and the DPT shots: No, I have not read of that connection at all.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Every time I brush my teeth they start to bleed and then my gums hurt and start getting puffy. What is the reason? — G.B.

The cause of bleeding gums can run the diagnostic spectrum from insignificant to catastrophic. Now, how's that for an answer?

To be a bit more specific, the bleeding can be caused by the way you brush. Or there may be a gum infection present, or you could have a serious blood disease causing the bleeding. I could go on, but why? I want you to go to your dentist and tell him about it.

That just makes sense. He, probably more than any other health professional, sees such problems with regularity. After he examines your teeth and your mouth, he can decide whether you need a fuller examination. He can also decide whether you are mechanically injuring your gums by the way you brush.

I answered your letter. Your part of the bargain is to call your dentist. Will you do that?

Dear Dr. Donohue: My 20-year-old son has a discoloration of his skin around his feet and ankles. It's like a mass of tiny freckles. His doctor told him he has Schamberg's disease. We've never heard of this, but any time you're told you have a disease, it is a worry. What is it? — Mrs. R.E.B.

I know what you mean about the word disease. But this one is not serious and will not cause your son problems. It's a rare thing resulting from minor inflammation of tiny blood vessels (capillaries) serving the skin. Blood leaks out in the leg and foot area, producing the pinhead-size dots. They look as though someone has sprinkled Cayenne pepper on the skin. The dots occur in patches. Although there is no specific treatment, or need for specific treatment, some doctors advise use of support hose and leg elevation as ways to prevent the leakage of the red blood cells from the capillaries. If you don't like the word disease, you can think of it as a pigmentary dermatosis.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Since I am told that bile is an important thing for proper digestion, what takes over for it when a person has the gall-bladder removed? — M.W.

Bile. Bile is only stored in the gall bladder but the liver continues to produce it. It gets to the digestive tract, by bypassing the removed bladder.

Are you having a gall bladder problem? To find out how the gall bladder works and what kinds of trouble to look for, send for the booklet, "You and Your Gall Bladder." Write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611, for a copy, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in this column whenever possible.

Music club studies life of composer

The Big Spring Music Study Club met Oct. 13 in the home of Mrs. Paul Lindell. The group continued a study of the year's theme, American music.

Mrs. Bernard Zilberg, president, read excerpts from the life of Stephan C. Foster. Various selections written by Foster were sung by the group, led by Mrs. Arnold Tonn and accompanied by Mrs. Carrol Moore on the violin and Mrs. J.W. Cowan at the piano. The program ended with the solo "Beautiful Dreamer," sung by Mrs. Tonn.

Joining the club as new members were Karen Lee, Laurie Sloan and Carol Boyd.

Hostess was Mrs. Cleo Carlile. The next meeting will be at 3:30 p.m. Nov. 10 at the First United Methodist Church.

Modern Women discuss how west was won

The Modern Woman's Club met in the home of Mrs. H.M. Rowe recently with Mrs. F.C. Tibbs, president, presiding.

Mrs. Rowe gave a program on "What Really Won the West." She said that legend has it that the six-gun won the west. In reality, the steel plow, barbed wire fence and portable windmill made it possible for pioneers to settle here. She outlined a little history on each object.

Mrs. Tibbs distributed the 1982-83 yearbook. The theme for the year is "History and Heritage." Club flower is the red rose, and club colors are crimson and white.

The club met again Oct. 22 in the home of Mrs. S.R. Nobles, 405 Washington.

Dear Abby

Pennies for treats

DEAR ABBY: Halloween will soon be here, and despite all the publicity about children who have been victims of poisoned candy and apples with razor blades, thousands of youngsters will be out "trick-or-treating" again this year.

I pray you will print this suggestion: Instead of handing out candy or fruit, get several rolls of pennies from the bank, and when the youngsters show up, drop two or three pennies into their trick-or-treat bags. The kids will get a kick out of counting their money when they get home, and their parents will rest a little easier.

This may not solve the problem entirely, but it might help.

MARY B., CHARLESTON, S.C.

DEAR MARY: Good suggestion. And regarding this "trick-or-treat" business: In the good old days, youngsters would tour their own neighborhoods to show off their Halloween costumes and receive a modest treat.

In recent years, however, gangs of older kids have gone all over town demanding booty in exchange for "protection" against having one's garbage cans overturned, windows soaped, eggs thrown and property vandalized. This is blackmail! Law enforcers everywhere have had to swell all their ranks in order to protect citizens.

In these crazy times, young children should not be out at night unless accompanied by an adult.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very good friend who always brings her 4-year-old son along when she comes to play bridge at my home. The boy interrupts when adults are talking, runs around the house making as much noise as he can, walks on my furniture and is generally a nuisance. I've tried to keep him amused with toys, color books, TV, etc., but he wants to be where his mother is.

When he misbehaves, his mother meekly asks him to "stop" — but he pays no attention to her.

I don't think it's my place to discipline the child, but I

FRUSTRATED HOSTESS

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Ask your friend to please get a sitter and leave the boy at home. Explain that the child is bored in the company of adults and he misbehaves to get attention. If your friend continues to bring the boy, don't invite her back until the boy grows up.

DEAR ABBY: I met this guy I'll call Ritchie one night. He said he was 24. (I'm 20.) I really fell for him hard. We dated for about a week. He told me he lived at home with his parents. Then when I tried calling him, his father answered the phone and called Ritchie, but when I said, "Hello, Ritchie? This is Terri," he hung up the phone.

I have tried calling him several times since then, but as soon as he hears my voice he hangs up on me. The last time I said, "Please don't hang up, I want to talk to you," but he hung up before I even finished the sentence.

What could the matter be? If I did something to upset him or make him angry, I wish he would tell me. We were getting along great together. I can't figure out, can you?

OUT OF IDEAS

DEAR OUT: You are "out" all right, and better off for it. In any case, Ritchie has given you a very clear message: He doesn't want to talk to you, which I think says it all.

MORE THAN EXPECTED — These are some of the 70,000 workers who rallied behind AFL-CIO president Lane Kirkland and other labor leaders Sunday in a belated Labor Day parade and rally in San Francisco. The rally focused attention on unemployment and Reaganomics. Police did not expect the crowd to be as large as it was.

Labor march draws 70,000 protestors

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A rally expected to attract 15,000 people turned into the biggest labor demonstration in this city in 34 years as almost five times that many protesters marched, waved signs and chanted slogans blasting the Reagan administration.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, one of several labor leaders who addressed the crowd, urged voters to turn Republicans out of office and "stand by all those friends of labor who've stood with us over the years." Chanting "Jobs, Not Jelly Beans," the crowd, estimated by police at 70,000, marched up Market Street for three hours, then gathered in front of City Hall for speeches by Kirkland, Teamsters Secretary-Treasurer Ray Schoessling, Longshoreman President Jim Herman and Ed Asner, president of the Screen Actors Guild.

The labor leaders blamed President Reagan and his supporters in Congress for the 10.1 percent unemployment rate, and endorsed the Democratic candidates for offices ranging from state Assembly to U.S. Senate.

"This is a time for action that will not come again for two long years. Let us all pledge ourselves to make the most of it," Kirkland said as he endorsed Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. for the U.S. Senate and Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley for governor. He also backed the re-election bid of Rep. Phil Burton. All three are Democrats.

"We know they're on our side," said Kirkland. "We know equally well which side their opponents are on. When they speak, it's money that talks."

The crowd of carpenters, teachers, engineers, grocery clerks, newspaper workers, longshoremen, steelworkers, auto workers and other tradesmen cheered wildly as Schoessling urged them to "vote labor for jobs and justice."

"We are sick and tired of politicians who continually turn a deaf ear on labor, our interests and our complaints," said the Teamster chief.

Asner, whose union Reagan once headed, recently lost his own job when CBS canceled the television series "Lou Grant."

"Our goal for Thanksgiving this year is to have our turkeys on the table, not in Congress," he said.

Before the march, organizers had hoped 15,000 people would turn out. But police Sgt. Tom Tyrell said 70,000 people were in the parade. Al Lannon, a member of the event's coordinating committee, put the number at 50,000.

Labor leaders said they postponed the rally until now so it would be closer to the November elections.

Texas-made herbicide banned by military

DALLAS (AP) — A controversial herbicide produced in Texas has been banned from military use, linked by a federal agency to cases of brain cancer in factory workers and accused in lawsuits of causing kidney damage, swollen joints and respiratory and eye problems.

Environmentalists recently have begun to question the safety of picloram, the widely distributed herbicide manufactured 24 hours a day by workers at a Dow Chemical Co. plant in Freeport.

Texas is one of the largest users of the chemical, and state agriculture officials say no health complaints have been lodged because of use of the herbicide in Texas.

A Dow spokesman said picloram, marketed under the trade name Tordon, is safe if used according to label directions and he flatly denies the notion that it causes cancer.

However, picloram is the active ingredient in a defoliant code-named Agent White that was discontinued for military use after 1970 when military researchers concluded it could cause "permanent ecological damage" in Vietnam.

A recently released May 1980 Environmental Protection Agency memo said the Houston office of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration raised questions about possible health problems related to Tordon, the Dallas Times Herald reported in its Sunday editions.

"There appears to be an extremely high incidence of primary brain carcinoma (cancer) in employees of a manufacturing plant making Tordon 225E in Freeport, Tex.," the EPA memo said.

The EPA reported that OSHA had identified 11 cases of brain cancer among employees in Texas making Tordon. The report prompted a large-scale study of brain cancers among 40,000 employees by Dow and the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health. The study found 25 brain cancers among workers — twice the number expected, said Dr. Gordon Reeve, assistant chief of epidemiology at NIOSH.

But Reeve said researchers were unable to identify any chemical or pesticide that may have caused the cancer. He said the EPA memo suggesting a link between Tordon and the cancers is inaccurate.

Numerous lawsuits have been filed throughout the nation alleging that exposure to Tordon has caused swollen joints, headaches, fatigue, skin irritations, enlarged livers, respiratory and eye problems and kidney damage.

One, filed by a Tennessee family in Knoxville federal court last year, charged that 11 of the 15 family members had ailments related to picloram-contaminated drinking water.

Last March, one of those 11, 41-year-old Alice Fouts, left her home in the Appalachian Mountains of eastern Tennessee and spent 18 days in an isolation area of the Dallas Environmental Health Center constructed of all natural products. She was placed on an organic-food diet, and returns periodically to Dallas for treatment.

"It got in our water," said the former schoolteacher from Tellico Plains, Tenn. "We drank it for 18 months. We had a healthy family and suddenly we're not. We didn't know what was happening to us."

For two years, Mrs. Fouts had been sick. Her right arm and face became swollen; rashes developed on her body; she became fatigued easily; her vision was dim; her memory was short and her breath hard to catch.

In North Carolina, a state task force is investigating a possible link between picloram and an increase in the cancer rates of Cherokee and Macon counties.

In Texas last year, more than 53,000 pounds of picloram were applied to 200,000 acres, primarily in South and West Texas, said William Bower, assistant director of the Texas Department of Agriculture's environmental sciences division — the agency that regulates pesticide use in the state.

In Freeport, about 100 employees work around the clock manufacturing the world's supply of Tordon.

Salazar hustles to take his third NYC Marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — Alberto Salazar and Grete Waitz got what they wanted in the New York City Marathon — victory. And Fred Lebow, the marathon's director, got what he wanted — a close race.

In a tense finish, decided by a late surge by Salazar, the 24-year-old long distance star from Eugene, Ore., edged gritty Rodolfo Gomez of Mexico Sunday in 2 hours, 9 minutes, 29 seconds for his third consecutive triumph in the New York City Marathon.

Waitz, 29, from Oslo, Norway, won the women's division for the fourth time in five years, in 2:27:14 — her first marathon finish since capturing the New York City event for the third year in a row in 1980.

Neither winner was close to breaking the world-bests — Salazar's 2:08:13 for men and New Zealander Allison Roe's 2:25:29 for women, both in this race last year.

Both, however, were very content to win. Salazar had suffered tendinitis in his left foot three weeks ago while training and had refrained from making a prediction on his time, as he had done in each of his two previous New York races.

Waitz had the same idea after dropping out of last year's race near the 15-mile mark with shin splints and dropping out of the Boston Marathon in April with leg pains after leading past the 20-mile mark.

Lebow was more concerned with a close finish than with the men's and women's winners running faster than Salazar and Roe did in 1981.

The confident Salazar got all he could handle from the dogged Gomez, who had been unbeaten in three marathons this year and had finished second in this race in 1980.

Both runners admitted they were in pain during the race, but both gutted it out to produce the first close finish in the race's 13-year history. Only four seconds separated them at the end — Gomez finishing in 2:09:33, his personal best.

Without "a rabbit" to set a fast early pace, Salazar took control of the tempo. But his pace was not nearly as fast as the record race he had run a year ago.

He led most of the way until Gomez forged ahead near the 18-mile mark. Gomez held the lead, opening what appeared to be a substantial margin, between the 19th and 20th miles.

It was Salazar's second straight close marathon victory. Six months ago at Boston, he beat Dick Beardsley by two seconds.

Beardsley, expected to be Salazar's closest competitor Sunday in a "grudge" race, never was a factor. He suffered a cramp near the nine-mile mark and wound up a disappointed 30th in 2:18:12.

Little-known Dan Schlesinger of Raleigh, N.C. finished third in 2:11:54. He was followed by Ryszard Marczak of Poland in 2:12:44 and Dave Murphy of England in 2:12:48.

Julie Brown of San Diego was the women's runnerup in 2:28:33. Then came Boston Marathon winner Charlotte Teske of West Germany in 2:31:53, Laura Fogli of Italy in 2:33:01 and Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway in 2:33:36.

A total of 14,308 started the nationally televised race under sunny, cool skies.

Players back Garvey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five weeks into their strike, National Football League players have reaffirmed their support of the demands that first placed them on the sidelines.

Approximately 100 players, with representatives from every team in the league, attended a five-hour meeting Sunday to review the status of negotiations and prospects of ending a strike that has forced either the postponement or cancellation of five weekends of the regular season.

At the close of the meeting, which included a number of previously outspoken critics of the association's leadership, union President Gene Upshaw announced, "To a man they said they will not go back without a contract."

During Sunday's meeting, the union's 28 player representatives unanimously adopted a resolution reaffirming their support for a proposal first approved by the player reps in August.

The proposal calls for a collective bargaining agreement to include: immediate substantial wage increases for virtually all players; a guarantee that players will receive a fair share of future NFL revenues; elimination of wage inequities; lengthening of careers through elimination of incentives to cut older players for financial reasons; and rewarding performance through significant incentives.

The same resolution was passed by the player reps on Aug. 31 in Chicago, the site of their last meeting.

The player representatives also demanded the league's negotiators "bargain in good faith to end the strike."

"We came out of this meeting even more united than before," said Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' association.

The league's 1,500 players have been on strike since Sept. 21.

Negotiations aimed at ending the league's first in-season strike were recessed Saturday with no date set to return to the bargaining table.

The recess ended 12 days of bargaining that included agreement on most of the non-economic issues that had separated both sides in the dispute. The key economic questions remain, however, with both the union and the owners holding to their original positions.

The player demands management has refused to negotiate on are the implementation of a wage scale, creation of a central salary fund and the players' demand for a fixed percentage of the league's TV revenues.

Referring to the five points listed in their resolution, Garvey said: "Management has yet to come up with a system to address these issues. The wage scale and central fund are our way. If they have some solution we will listen to it. "Management's side keeps saying there is an alternative," Garvey continued. "We say what is it?"

When the two sides recessed their negotiations on Saturday, mediator Sam Kagel instructed both sides to "reassess and re-examine" their positions.

"We reassess and re-examine and came back to where we are," Upshaw said Sunday night.

Sunday night, Garvey attempted to contact Jack Donlan, the owners' chief negotiator, in hopes of setting up a new round of talks. Garvey said Donlan, who was not at home, would return the call today.

"We don't want to delay the negotiations," Garvey said. "We're ready to bargain tonight."

One of the issues discussed Sunday by the player representatives was the effect of a ruling last week by the U.S. Court of Appeals overturning a lower court decision that had prohibited club owners from filing suit in local courts to bar players from playing in a series of union-sponsored all-star games.

Joseph A. Yablonski, the union's chief counsel, said the union is reviewing its options including asking for a rehearing in the appellate court, taking the case to the U.S. Supreme Court or returning to U.S. District Court to attack the validity of the league's player contracts.

The player representatives also received a briefing on the decision last Thursday by National Labor Relations Board General Counsel William A. Lubbers to issue a complaint that management negotiators have failed to bargain in good faith.

Lubbers indicated he would monitor the negotiating process prior to seeking an injunction against the owners' negotiating team.

"I would think the likelihood of the injunction has increased as a result of the recess," Yablonski said.

Cowboys busy campaigning

DALLAS (AP) — Some politicians are hoping that, for most Texans, their heroes have always been cowboys — at least the football-playing variety.

Some members of the Dallas Cowboys, faced with idle time in the wake of the pro football players' strike, have hit the campaign trail for various candidates.

For example, Gov. Bill Clements is a big beneficiary. Billy Joe DuPree — chief of Athletics for Clements — staged a door-to-door precinct walk over the weekend. DuPree even gave other campaigners a pep talk.

"Let's get out there today and do a good job of what we have to do," DuPree told his fellow volunteers.

Political consultants told The Dallas Morning News that because of the Cowboys' image as winners and as being a team with "integrity," their help is a bonus to any candidate.

Mike Richards, the Republican candidate for state comptroller, likes to tell his campaign audiences that a factor in his deciding to run was when Cowboys Coach Tom Landry agreed to be his statewide chairman.

Landry also took center stage last summer when Clements staged a whistle-stop train tour through Texas.

Former Cowboys Cliff Harris and Charlie Waters also have traveled the state with Clements.

Clements admitted the volunteers are important to his campaign.

"People relate to them when the character of Cliff or a Roger Staubach or a Landry or a Bob Lilly is known and accepted by the public ... that they support me, it says something," Clements said.

Harris stresses that he is now a businessman. "I support Gov. Clements because I believe what he has done is good for Texas," Harris said.

U.S. Rep. Jim Collins, who is challenging incumbent Democratic U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, also proudly voices Landry's support of his campaign.

The Dallas Cowboys' cheerleaders also got into the act — for a while.

The National Conservative Action Political Committee attempted to use the cheerleaders' image in an anti-Bentsen television ad earlier this year. That ad was withdrawn after the Cowboys threatened legal action.

END OF A GOOD PLAY — Big Spring tight end John Roemer (88) is stopped by Midland Lee defender Wayne Brandt (46) after picking up a first down on a pass from quarterback Adam Rodriguez. Roemer caught three passes in the game for 65 yards but Lee squeaked out an 8-7 victory in the final two minutes of play Friday night in Memorial Stadium.

Peete captures Pensacola

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Calvin Peete stalked a pair of rookie leaders for three rounds of the Pensacola Open. But in the end, his quest for the $36,000 first prize became a battle between himself and the Perdido Bay Country Club course.

CALVIN PEETE ...wins fourth event

"I didn't really feel any pressure. With the wind and tough pin placements, I felt if I could beat the course, I would have a chance to win," Peete said Sunday, after firing a 6-under-par 65 en route to a seven-stroke victory in the $200,000 event.

"It's a confidence builder that you can go out on the last day and shoot a good score like that," said Peete, who captured his fourth PGA title of the season. "It gives you a feeling that whenever you're within four or five shots, you've got a chance."

Peete, who finished with a 72-hole total of 16-under-par 266, began the final round two shots off the pace set by rookie Hal Sutton.

Sutton faltered on the front nine of the par-71, 7,093-yard Perdido course, however, and never seriously challenged Peete after falling behind on the seventh hole.

"Players have a tendency to try to protect their lead, while the guy who is behind goes out and plays his normal game," added Peete, who birdied two of the first three holes to pull within a shot of the lead.

Sutton, who became the most prolific money-winning rookie ever, shot a final-round 74 to finish in a tie for second with 1980 Pensacola Open winner Dan Halldorson at 9-under-par 275.

U.S. Open champion Tom Watson was among five golfers at 276, while defending Pensacola champion Jerry Pate led a group at 277.

Joining Watson at 276 were George Burns, John Fought, Mike Sullivan and Brad Bryant. J.C. Snead, Larry Mize, Pat Lindsey, Mark McCumber and rookie Steve Liebier, who led the first two rounds, were even with Pate.

It was the fifth career victory for Peete, who had already won the Greater Milwaukee Open, the Anheuser-Busch Classic, and B.C. Open earlier this year.

The triumph boosted his 1982 earnings to $317,361 and vaulted him from seventh to fourth among tour money leaders. Peete now has career earnings of $702,751.

Sutton, meanwhile, surpassed Pate's first-year earnings record of $153,102. He won $17,600 for his third second-place finish on the year to hike his winnings to $165,694.

Bowling tourney set

Entry deadline is midnight Sunday (Halloween) for the 13th Annual Big Spring Mixed Bowling Tournament sponsored by the Kopper Kettle.

The tourney will be held Nov. 6-8 and Nov. 13-14 at the Big Spring Bowl-A-Rama and is open to any ABC or WIBC bowlers. Doubles teams (one man, woman) and four-man teams (two men, women) may enter at $6.75 per bowler.

The action begins at 1 and 3 p.m. each day. Entry forms are available at the bowling alley and can be turned in there or to tournament directors Pam Robey and Sandy Griffin.

Forsan tops G-City

FORSAN — Lee Morris connected with Lance Soles for two touchdowns to lead the Forsan eighth grade to a 26-0 victory over Garden City.

Also scoring TDs for the Buffaloes were David Stinson and Pepe Alvarez. Wayne Wright hit two PAT kicks.

The seventh grade won a scrimmage with Garden City as Mike Chandler and Byron McElreath scored TDs.

The eighth grade and junior varsity teams travel to Robert Lee Thursday.

Coahoma pair excels

ODESSA — Coahoma running specialists Sherril Easterling and Donald Webb won their respective age divisions at the Odessa Longhorn 10-kilometer Run here Saturday.

Easterling ran the 6.2 mile course in 39:40 to win the overall women's division. Webb won the 50 and over division in 37:43 but importantly averaged 5:55.0 per mile, breaking the 6-minute barrier he was working towards.

The race was run on a course adjacent to the University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

Thanks, Big Springers

What a great experience this football season has given all of us involved in the program so far in '82. The coaches and players are highly appreciative of the support we have received.

The Big Spring Herald headlined the enthusiasm: "City catches Steer fever." We are hoping to go a step further and plant some permanent seeds of a winning tradition for Big Spring.

Let me share with you some ideas for doing this that were passed on to me recently in the form of an analogy of planting a garden.

Plant three rows of peas: preparedness, perseverance, and positiveness.

Next plant four rows of lettuce: let us be faithful, let us be loyal, let us be unselfish, let us support one another as a school and a community.

No garden is complete without turnips: turn up for the game, turn up with real determination, turn up with positive anticipation.

The BSHS coaching staff and team refuse to let the few setbacks we've had this year pull us back down into the old Big Spring losing syndrome that has prevailed for years. We ask you to join us in planting our "winning garden" described above. Drive over to Odessa Friday night to watch the Steers battle Permian and be in the stands for the last home game the next week against San Angelo. — STEER HEAD COACH QUINN EUDY

PUBLIC NOTICE
NOTICE OF THE PRELIMINARY DETERMINATION OF ALL CLAIMS OF WATER RIGHTS IN THE LOWER COLORADO RIVER SEGMENT OF THE COLORADO RIVER BASIN.
 Notice is given pursuant to Section 11.312 of the Texas Water Code that August 31, 1982, the Texas Water Commission made a preliminary determination of all claims of water rights under adjudication in the Lower Colorado River Segment of the Colorado River Basin, which consists of the Colorado River and its tributaries below Mansfield Dam in Travis County to the Gulf of Mexico and includes portions of Hayes, Travis, Caldwell, Bastrop, Lee, Fayette, Colorado, Wharton, and Matagorda Counties, Texas.
 On August 17, 1981, the Commission entered an order severing the water right claims of the Lower Colorado River Authority (LCRA) from the adjudication proceedings in the Middle Colorado River Segment and making the claims a part of the adjudication proceedings in the Lower Colorado River Segment. Therefore, this preliminary determination adjudicates all of the LCRA's water right claims, including the LCRA's water right claims in the so-called Highland Lakes (Lake Buchanan, Lake Lake, Lake Lyndon B. Johnson, Lake Marble Falls and Lake Travis).
 The preliminary determination of August 31, 1982, and all evidence presented to or considered by the Commission will be open for public inspection at the offices of the Texas Water Commission in the 14th Street, Austin State Office Building in Austin, Texas. The period of time for public inspection of the preliminary determination and evidence shall expire on December 10, 1982, at 5:00 p.m., which is a period of time not less than 60 days from the date of the notice, in accordance with Section 11.318, Texas Water Code. The times and hours for public inspection will be from 8:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. of each working day. Copies of the preliminary determination are also available for public inspection at the offices of the following counties: Midland, Dawson, Howard, Mitchell, Runnels, Tom Green, Concho, Coleman, Brown, Mills, Menard, McCulloch, San Saba, Kimble, Llano, Burnet, Gillespie, Bastrop, Fayette, Colorado, Wharton and Matagorda.
 As provided by Section 11.313 of the Texas Water Code, any water right claimant affected by this preliminary determination, including any claimant of water rights within the Colorado River Basin who disputes the preliminary determination, may file on or before January 1983, a written contest with the Commission stating with reasonable certainty the grounds of contest. The statement filed to contest the preliminary determination must be verified by an affidavit of the contestant, his agent or attorney. If the contest is directed against the preliminary determination of the water rights of any other claimant or claimants in the Lower Colorado River Segment, a copy of the contest shall be served on each of these claimants or his attorney by certified mail and proof of this service shall be filed with the Commission on or before January 19, 1983.
