Brezhnev given sad farewell

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW — Leonid I. Brezhnev, "glorious son of our homeland," was laid to rest today in Red Square, given a monumental and mournful farewell by the nation he led to a pinnacle of world power.

The man succeeding him as Soviet Communist Party chief, Yuri V. Andropov, pledged in a eulogy to follow "the strategic line in domestic and foreign policy" that was shaped by Brezhnev in his 18 years as Kremlin leader.

The coffin holding the remains of this stolid son of a steelworker was then lowered into a grave on the grassy plot behind Lenin's mausoleum, before the red-brick wall of the Kremlin.

Factory whistles wailed and church bells tolled across this vast land, which has known only four paramount leaders in its six decades as the world's greatest communist country. In the giant, cobblestoned square, under a forest of Brezhnev portraits, tens of thousands of ordinary Soviet citizens stood silently in the autumn chill, a sea of fur hats and military caps.

Dignitaries from more than 100 nations, including Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George P. Shultz of the United States, also joined in the ceremony, the biggest state funeral here since the death of Stalin in 1953.

Later, Bush met with Andropov in the Kremlin, and the Soviet news agency Tass said Brezhnev's political heir pledged that the Soviet Union is ready to work for better relations with the United States on the basis of "full equality."

Bush told reporters afterward the talks were "frank, cordial (and) substantive." He said the problems between the two countries were difficult but "far from insurmountable." Brezhnev, who also served as Soviet president, died Wednesday at age 75 of an apparent heart attack. Within two days, the Communist Party Central Committee chose Andropov, a former chief of the KGB secret police, to succeed him as party general secretary.

Only nine other "heroes" have been honored with a Red Square burial. Brezhnev was interred between the graves of Yakov Sverdlov, first president of the Soviet Union, and Felix Dzerzhinski, founder of the state secret police.

The embalmed remains of Vladimir I. Lenin, founder of the Soviet state, are on display inside the red granite mausoleum, and longtime Soviet dictator Josef Stalin is buried in the plot. Nikita Khrushchev, who ruled from 1953 to 1964, was removed from power and when he died in 1971 was buried in Moscow's Novodevichy

Rehab services still offered

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

Physically and mentally disabled persons who need help to secure and maintain jobs may still receive that assistance, though the Big Spring Vocational Rehabilitation office closed in July.

The original office — a division of the Texas Rehabilitation Commission — at 207 E. Seventh closed when its director, Mildred Sevey, retired. It remains closed because of economic cutbacks.

However, rehabilitatory services are still offered in Big Spring from a traveling counselor. TRC counselor Ione Priest travels from the Midland vocational rehabilitation office every Thursday and works from the Big Spring City-County Health Unit at 201 Lancaster.

Ms. Priest said that although notices were placed in the newspaper when the Big Spring office closed, clients are still confused about office hours. She stressed the importance of setting an appointment instead of "dropping in" the health unit on Thursdays.

"The best thing to do is call collect and set an appointment," Ms. Priest said. "I'd hate for someone to travel to the office and me not be there. And I'm not going to break an appointment for someone that just walks in. I may have appointments scheduled one after another all day."

Appointments may be made by calling the See Rehab, page 2-A

Pickens epitomizes globe-trotting Texan

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

AMARILLO — They call him cold and bold and shrewd and ruthless and almost anything that goes with being a wheeling, dealing, globe-trotting Texas oil tycoon.

And they could be right. But T. Boone Pickens Jr. would never be mistaken for a loud, lusty, thirsty television wildcatter who pants around after the Sue Ellens of the world.

Second in a series

He's too busy playing racquetball and politics and molding Mesa Petroleum Co. into a shareholder's dream and a competitor's nightmare. "Hell, 96 percent of his employees are also stockholders," said an Amarillo writer. "He's gotta be doing something right."

Pickens, 54, is founder, president and board chairman of the Amarillo-based oil company which flirted with the national fancy last summer in a brazen takeover bid for Cities Service Co.

"A wild roll of the dice," cried one magazine, noting the takeover target's earnings were more than 20 times larger than Mesa's.

The financial press touched on the David-vs.-Goliath aspect each day but it was a cartoon in the Beaumont Journal that most delighted Mesa employees. It showed a small fish with a big mouth attempting to swallow a startled whale.

"We were well prepared to take the whole pot," says Pickens now. "And while we didn't win, the second place finish wasn't all that bad."

Problems develop with suits

Shuttle space walk cancelled

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Serious problems developed this morning with NASA's new generation, $2-million space suits and Mission Control cancelled a joint space walk by two shuttle astronauts.

It was the first test of the suits, which have had a history of development troubles that more than doubled their cost.

NASA officials were considering the possibility of extending the shuttle mission for one extra day, to Wednesday, if the suits can be fixed later today. This would allow a Tuesday space walk, but the scenario was "not too likely," an official said. At mid-morning, the suits were still out of whack.

Shuttle manager Glynn Lunney told reporters, "We still feel very good about this flight," noting the crew last week had accomplished its main mission — deployment of two commercial satellites. But he readily conceded, "We're disappointed" by the suit failures.

One suit, worn by Joseph Allen, had a bad oxygen fan, and its balkiness — a "motorboating" sound — was clearly audible to Mission Control. The trouble with the second suit, donned by William Lenoir, could only be seen on a gauge. Officials said a regulator indicated low pressure.

After Allen's fan broke down, officials wanted Lenoir to test his suit in a space "standstill" by moving out into Columbia's airlock, the ship's doorstep to space. That also had to be scrubbed.

"This isn't our day for suits," said Allen, who had rehearsed the two-man space walk for month-after-month in water-tank simulations. "Good try but no cigar," said Robert Stewart, the ground communicator. "You know how Monday mornings are." The scrub came an hour before the 7:50 a.m. EST space walk was to have begun. The astronauts were never in danger, and even if the problems had occurred after the walk had begun, Lunney said there would have time to safely end the walk.

The suits were developed by Hamilton Standard Division of United Technologies under a $46.9 million contract covering 43 suits and 13 life support systems. Problems, including an oxygen fire in an unmanned suit and a pressure leak because of failed stitching, contributed to cost overruns that pushed the actual price to more than $107 million.

"We'll be right back," Lunney added, saying the walk might be rescheduled on one of three flights planned in the first half of next year. The five-day mission is to conclude with a landing at 6:33 a.m. PST at Edwards Air Force Base in the California desert.

Nobody wants to fight this guy's toy soldiers

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Parkinson is a commanding general with no war to fight but the battle against boredom.

His army is a plastic panzer division — 13,000 model soldiers, built to 1-96th scale. Along with 3,000 support vehicles, the army fills three picnic tables when arranged in parade formation.

Parkinson, a 59-year-old museum librarian from Baraboo, Wis., has spent 19 years building his collection of World War II German soldiers.

He travels to game conventions throughout the Midwest, such as one that drew 2,000 participants over the weekend in Detroit, and spends 24 hours setting up his troops.

He then offers to pit his soldiers against any scale model Allied forces of the same era in mock battle, governed by the roll of the dice and a thick book of rules.

Brezhnev

Cemetery, about three miles from the Kremlin.

Speaking in forceful tones from atop the mausoleum, the 68-year-old Andropov eulogized his predecessor — "a glorious son of our homeland... an outstanding leader of the Communist Party and the Soviet state" — for the accomplishments of his regime.

"We shall always be loyal to the cause of the struggle for peace, for the relaxation of international tension," he said.

Andropov said the Soviet Union was ready for "honest, equal and mutually beneficial cooperation" with any nation. But he pledged Soviet vigilance and vowed to deal "a crushing rebuff to any attempt at aggression."

It was a reaffirmation of the stern warning Brezhnev himself had issued from the same spot eight days ago, as he reviewed his troops on the 65th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

Thus far Andropov has signaled no break from Brezhnev's attitudes toward the United States — policies of continued military buildup coupled with calls for a lessening of super-power tensions.

Earlier, Shultz had told reporters he carried no special message from President Reagan to the Kremlin leadership.

"I don't think the message is complicated," he told reporters. "We are realists, we will stay that way. We are strong. We will stay that way.

We're constructive and we are ready to solve problems and will continue to be ready to do so, ready to respond." Bush issued a statement here before the funeral calling for a reduction in "today's massive expenditures for arms."

The Soviet leadership has not yet filled the post of president, the second, less powerful office vacated by Brezhnev's death.

Analysts do not expect Andropov to be named president. Instead, many believe that a senior member of the Politburo, such as Konstantin U. Chernenko or Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, will be selected and a period of collective Kremlin leadership will ensue.

Pickens

from Mesa but that merger later fell through and Cities Service eventually was taken over by Occidental Petroleum.

For Mesa, the consolation prize was a $40 million gain, "less the cost of throwing the party, which was not insignificant," said Pickens with a vaguely evil smile.

Nor was the "party" without its risks.

At one point, Mesa was staring down the barrel at a possible loss of $25 a share on 4.1 million shares of Cities Service stock. That's a mere $100 million.

company and run it solely in the best interests of the stockholders.

"The goal is to see that our stockholders get a better payoff than anybody else in the industry," he said.

To that end, in 1979, he spun off much of Mesa's energy riches into Mesa Royalty Trust, a tax-avoidance vehicle for stockholders that since has been widely copied.

"That's what we're here for and that's who we're working for," said Pickens. "It's not complicated."

Pickens likes things simple and uncomplicated and tends at times to answer questions with a bit more style than substance.

"We're very keen about what we're doing," he said in response to a question about his business philosophy.

"Everybody loves to win. At Mesa, it's more than loving to win or wanting to win. We expect to win. We're going to win. It's that simple. It's a tradition."

"They know they can get in touch with me."

He is seldom out of contact with his top officers, though he zips in and out of town at all hours and surfaces from time to time at homes in Houston and Palm Springs and his ranch near Pampa in the upper Panhandle.

He frequently appears at division offices in Denver, Midland, Houston and Oklahoma City and less often at his international headquarters in Perth, Australia.

When in Amarillo, he lives in the cluttered elegance of a beautiful wood and stucco home that includes an indoor tennis court which he uses and thousands of books which he doesn't read.

"We actually got a $40 million gain against what would have been a $100 million loss," he said. "So I was pretty happy to get out of the situation."

"People say $40 million isn't much. Well, I'll tell you what, a $100 million loss was going to be a toughie to take."

Worse yet, Boone Pickens came perilously close to losing the company itself.

A $2 billion company without thousands of employees is almost unheard of, but the Mesa work force totals only 900.

"We're an unusual operation," Pickens said with a smile.

Company officials maintain there is no room for deadwood or a stifling bureaucracy and that a tight chain of command speeds up the decision-making process.

Pickens said he was dismayed at high level delays he saw while working for a major oil company after his graduation from what is now Oklahoma State University.

"I couldn't believe it took as long as it did to get a decision," he recalled. "I don't like anything delaying my people as far as decisions are concerned."

"No time to read books," he said, though he prides himself mightily on his organizational abilities and those of his second wife Bea, whose warm and disarming sophistication fits her home like a velvet glove.

"There really are more than 24 hours in a day if you're well organized, and I do feel Bea and I are," said Pickens.

Unlike his first wife, says Pickens, Bea takes an active interest in her husband's business affairs and is usually at his side when he darts around the country in one of the company's two jets.

Associates contend their non-smoking, moderate-drinking boss is a workaholic who uses his planes not for pleasure but as "merely an extension of his office."

In Amarillo, he works in a stylish but unpretentious office and spends hours playing racketball in the $2.5 million "T. Boone Pickens Jr. Fitness Center."

THE MESA STORY is the story of T. Boone Pickens Jr. and vice versa. It's difficult to separate the two and impossible to understand one without the other.

They are unique and widely admired but not universally loved.

Mesa emerged 18 years ago from a predecessor company called Petroleum Exploration Inc., which Pickens founded in 1956 with guts, $2,500 cash and a $100,000 line of credit.

Anyone who rode financially with Pickens for the long haul gambled and won.

And won big.

For instance, a $10,000 investment in Mesa in 1964 was worth as much as $293,485 this year, according to Pickens' top communications executive, Allan Cecil.

That's a 2,834 percent increase and is rivaled only by the national debt and the interest rates charged by one or two Texas loan sharks.

And working for Mesa itself was hardly unrewarding. With Pickens personally managing the company's profit sharing plans, a lot of people made a lot of money, including two secretaries who became paper millionaires.

"Boone was on a tremendous roll for a number of years," explained Cecil with studied nonchalance.

"When it made its move on Cities Service last summer, Mesa's assets included roughly 30 million barrels of oil reserves and a trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

It had survived a $20 million cattle disaster and other less traumatic misadventures and decided that diversification was not the name of the game.

By then Mesa was a $2 billion company and Boone Pickens was known up and down Wall Street as a financial innovator with an uncanny knack for finding oil and gas. An Associated Press survey identified Pickens as one of the most powerful persons in Texas, the only West Texan among the top vote-getters.

He called it a game both intriguing and simple and told anyone who asked:

"You have to find or acquire oil and gas reserves at a reasonable price or you can't stay in business."

Pickens never wavered from his stated goal to build the best possible

Rehab center

Midland office collect at 684-5791. The office is located at 2811-B N. Big Spring in Midland.

Ms. Priest said that if she has no appointments set for Thursday, she leaves the health unit at noon to avoid "doing nothing all afternoon." She then visits various agencies in Big Spring, such as hospitals and rehabilitation centers.

The vocational rehabilitation division is a state agency funded by state and federal sources. Its statewide offices purchase services from resources in the community, such as rehabilitation centers, colleges and technical schools.

"Everything we do is for the purpose of putting people to work," Ms. Priest said. "A person who is disabled should be able to enjoy the same opportunity we have to do something worthwhile and have every chance to support his family and contribute to his community."

The division assists people with all handicaps except blindness. There is a separate state commission for the blind. Some of the major disability groups served are orthopedic deformities, mental health, internal medical conditions, mental retardation, deaf and hearing impaired, and speech and language-learning disabilities.

Two requirements must be met to receive vocational rehabilitation services. The person must have a disability which results in a substantial handicap to employment and it must be reasonably expected that vocational rehabilitation will help the person become employable.

In Howard County, 271 people were served and 32 were placed on jobs, Ms. Priest said. "The others might not have been eligible or are still on the case load. We don't provide indefinite counseling, but we work with people as long as needed."

Ms. Priest said that 94,431 persons were served and 15,580 were rehabilitated in Texas in 1981. An average of $1,580 was spent on each case. "They are now making their own money and paying taxes," Ms. Priest said.

"People that were making $705,516 are now making $2,748,531. And 39 percent of that $705,516 was from receiving welfare and other state benefits. So there's that much difference in taxes being paid by rehabilitating these people," she said.

Ms. Priest added that "The big thing is for Big Spring people to realize we're still here and we want to help."

Phone officials pledge service improvements

A Southwestern Bell management team recently met with 25 business leaders here Monday to discuss telephone service in Big Spring.

According to Darlene Gifford, community relations manager for Bell in Big Spring, various Bell managers with operations in the city gave the businessmen a "state of the union address" on the city's telephone service.

"We do have some service problems in Big Spring," Ms. Gifford said. "But we're taking positive steps like placing additional telephone cable, and improving the city's central office and long distance facilities."

Ms. Gifford will locate her office in Big Spring effective Feb. 1.

"We are interested in hearing feedback from the business leaders on our service in Big Spring," Ms. Gifford said.

Crimestoppers offer reward

Freed Walesa vows to keep fighting spirit

GDANSK, Poland — Lech Walesa, freed from government detention after 11 months, vowed today to remain faithful to the spirit of the outlawed union Solidarity.

He had not "signed anything, declared anything or joined anything" during his detention, Walesa said at a news conference the day after he returned to his family. He apparently referred to "loyalty oaths" extracted from some unionists as a condition for freedom.

Explaining the mysterious one-day delay in his return home after being released Sunday, he said he was taken to a meeting with the Polish general prosecutor for a review of martial law.

He returned home Sunday night to the Gdansk apartment where his family and 500 well-wishers gave him a tumultuous welcome.

"We have to reach agreement, but not on our knees," Walesa told the crowd when their shouts drew him to his window Sunday night. "I will be faithful and there is no force that can divide us. I want everything to go the way we established it," Walesa said. "I will not abandon the road and the ideals which we set forth in August."

At the news conference today in his apartment, Walesa was asked about hundreds of his Solidarity colleagues still interned.

"I weep over their fate and I will do everything to get them out by peaceful means," he said.

Parliament banned Solidarity on Oct. 8. The union had been suspended and thousands of activists interned when martial law was decreed Dec. 13 to crush 16 months of Solidarity-inspired strikes and challenges to communist authority.

Hundreds of detainees have been released but many remain in custody.

Walesa stressed he wanted to help solve problems peacefully, "under existing realities," but did not say specifically what sort of problems he meant.

Walesa, who led the independent union from its creation in August 1980, said "I was, I am and I will be faithful to the spirit of August ... and I shall not depart from the letter of that agreement."

"As you know I never wanted to destroy or knock anything out. I am for peaceful solutions." He begged time and again for time to think things over.

"I must think about the situation," he said, "because I don't know the existing situation now. Give me at least one month, and as I know all of you I will inform you soon when we have a chance to meet."

Walesa expressed surprise that he had been freed. He said that he thought he was about to be put under arrest and sent to prison when Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak visited him after Walesa had offered to meet the authorities last week.

Walesa wrote a letter to martial law chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski offering the meeting, which apparently triggered the decision to release him.

Three persons die in bus, car collision

PAMPA, Texas (AP) — A station wagon was traveling at speeds up to 80 mph just before it slammed broadside into a Trailways bus, killing both people in the car and a bus passenger and injuring nine others, witnesses told state troopers.

The bus overturned Sunday afternoon after it was struck broadside by a station wagon driven by Debra Sue Miller, 32, of Canadian, authorities said.

Ms. Miller and Marvin Wilford Wainwright, 59, also of Canadian and a passenger in the auto, died, authorities said.

Killed in the bus was Ignacia Cruz, 58, of New York City, troopers said.

The collision, which took place at the intersection of Loop 171 and U.S. Highway 60 one mile east of here, knocked the bus onto its driver's side into a ditch about 1,500 feet west of the interchange, DPS trooper John Carter said.

Witnesses said the station wagon was southbound at speeds up to 80 mph when it slammed into the bus just in front of its rear tires. The bus was westbound into Pampa on U.S. 60.

The impact of the collision caved in the drivers' side of the station wagon, which came to rest about 500 feet west of the intersection, Carter said. Both occupants were pinned in the vehicle.

The crash closed U.S. 60 to traffic for about 1 1/2 hours as officials cleared the highway of debris.

Ms. Cruz, who Trailways officials said boarded the bus in New York City, died of massive head injuries, said Walter Johnson, spokesman at Coronado Community Hospital in Pampa.

Two passengers were hospitalized, one in serious condition, as a result of the accident, authorities said.

Johnson said Robert Millard, 25, of Ada, Okla., remained in serious condition after undergoing surgery for multiple fractures and internal injuries.

Blast that killed 89 investigated

Israel mourns death of Mrs. Begin

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM — A grief-stricken Prime Minister Menachem Begin rushed home from the United States on Sunday after his wife of 43 years died, and Israel began a day of official mourning for victims of an explosion in Lebanon that killed 89 people.

Israelis, saddened by Begin's loss of his wife, Aliza, and by the deaths in a blast last week that leveled Israeli military headquarters in Tyre, Lebanon, were told by a Cabinet minister that the explosion was accidental, not sabotage as had been suspected.

Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai said the army had reported the blast was certainly not sabotage. But a Cabinet source said the military had not yet ruled out a bomb, and a military spokesman said all hypotheses were "mere speculation" at this point.

The solemn Israeli mood already had caused Begin to cancel entertainment events during his appearance before a Los Angeles Jewish group late Saturday.

Then he received word that his wife, Aliza, had died in Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital. Mrs. Begin, 62, had a long history of asthma and respiratory problems and had been hospitalized for five weeks. Hospital spokeswoman Margalit Toledano said Mrs. Begin suffered "sudden cardiac arrest" and died at 1:30 a.m. Sunday (5:30 p.m. CST Saturday).

The 69-year-old prime minister cut short his planned 10-day American trip, which was to have included talks with President Reagan on Lebanon and the Middle East peace process, and boarded his Israeli air force Boeing 707 for the long flight home.

The Begins were very close, and an Israel Radio reporter traveling with the prime minister quoted him as saying, "I shouldn't have left her."

A secretary at the Israeli consulate in Los Angeles, Naomi Levi, said Begin would seclude himself from the news media to face his "enormous personal loss."

In Washington, assistant White House press secretary Mark Weinberg said Sunday that President Reagan telephoned the prime minister to express "his deep sympathy" Saturday night before Begin left Los Angeles. Reagan also has since sent a personal note of condolence, the content of which would remain private, the spokesman said.

The prime minister will observe the traditional Jewish mourning period of seven days after his wife's funeral, which is to be held Monday afternoon.

Reporters were told Mrs. Begin will be buried on the Mount of Olives in the Arab sector of Jerusalem which Israel captured in the 1967 Middle East War.

The choice of the Mount of Olives, which has had a Jewish burial ground since biblical times, indicated Begin also plans that his own burial place will be there in a plot reserved for fighters of his Irgun Zvai Leumi (National Military Organization) — the underground Jewish group he led during Israel's pre-independence days in what was then British-ruled Palestine.

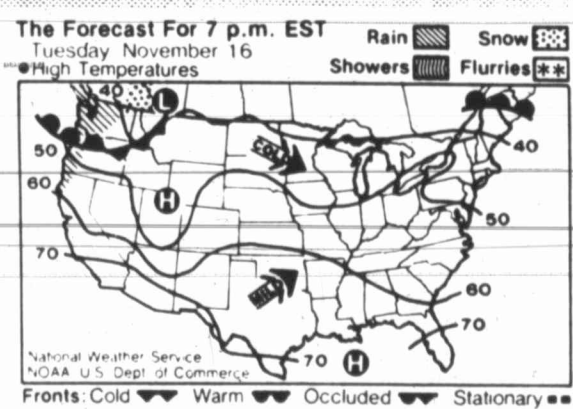

Mrs. Begin's death roused speculation Begin might step down. He often said he had promised his wife he would retire by age 71. But Israel Radio quoted Uri Porat, Begin's spokesman, as saying he was certain the prime minister would overcome his grief and continue in office.

Mrs. Begin, like most political wives in Israel, stayed out of the public spotlight but was known for having a warm and traditional household. She and Begin had a son, two daughters and nine grandchildren.

The Begin family's grief was multiplied around the country Sunday as 50 families buried sons and husbands killed in Tyre. Seventy-five Israelis and 14 Arabs died in the blast.

The Cabinet ordered a day of mourning starting at sundown Sunday and a minute of silence at 10 a.m. Monday.

Warming trend begins tomorrow

By The Associated Press
Clear skies and cold temperatures dominated the Texas weather picture before dawn today, but a slight warming trend was in store for the state. A band of high cloudiness spread slowly across the southern tier of the state. Pre-dawn temperatures dipped into the 30s as far south as Austin. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 21 at Amarillo to 53 at Brownsville. Winds were northerly at five to 15 mph across most of the state. Light southerly winds returned to the Panhandle before dawn. The forecast called for fair to partly cloudy skies with cool afternoon temperatures and another dip into the 30s and 40s tonight. Daytime readings were expected to slightly warmer Tuesday.

SNOW STRETCHED from the upper Midwest across much of the Ohio Valley early today, becoming rain as it reached the mid-Atlantic states. The snow spread across the Great Lakes region and the upper two-thirds of the Ohio Valley. The snowfall was light except at a few spots along the lower Great Lakes. Snow gave way to rain over the Carolinas, Virginia and along the mid-Atlantic coast. A few rain showers, meanwhile, hovered over southern New England. The mercury registered in the teens in the Texas panhandle, and over the upper Mississippi Valley to the western Great Lakes. Light snow was forecast later today across New England, rain was expected over western Washington, and cloudy skies were predicted over the rest of the Pacific Northwest. There was a chance of showers in southern California, and sunny skies elsewhere. Temperatures around the nation early today ranged from 2 in Butte, Mont., to 73 in Key West, Fla.

Ex-CIA agent goes on trial for selling secrets to Lybia

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Former CIA agent Edwin P. Wilson goes to trial claiming he dealt with Libya to gather intelligence secrets for the U.S. government. But federal prosecutors say he had been disowned as a U.S. agent and became an arms merchant to terrorists simply for profit.

Jury selection begins today before U.S. District Judge Richard L. Williams, marking the start of the first of four trials in which the government will contend the burly, bespectacled 54-year-old former spy made a fortune by selling his expertise to the radical Arab government. Specifically, Wilson, held on $60 million bail, is charged here with smuggling four pistols and an M-16 automatic rifle to Libyan officials in Europe in 1979.

Prosecutors say one of those guns, a .357-caliber Smith & Wesson pistol, was used on May 10, 1980 to assassinate Omran El-Mehdawi, a dissident Libyan diplomat, in Bonn, West Germany, the same city in which a Wilson employee allegedly turned the gun over to a Libyan intelligence officer.

If convicted on the eight counts of conspiracy, firearms and export violations, Wilson could face a maximum penalty of 44 years in prison and $245,000 fine.

Later, Wilson faces trials in Washington and Houston on charges of supplying plastic explosives and other munitions for a Libyan terrorist training school, and in Washington on charges of mounting an unsuccessful scheme to assassinate a Libyan dissident in Egypt for $1 million.

Sources say he remains under investigation by federal authorities in Colorado looking into the shooting of a Libyan dissident student there, and in Los Angeles probing the shipment of airplane parts to Libya.

The case here could become the first major test of the Classified Information Procedures Act, a new law designed to prevent former government officials from "greymailing" the government into dropping prosecution of them by threatening to expose government secrets as part of their defense.

The law provides that before trial a judge reviews in closed session the secrets or purported secrets which the defense wants to use, determines whether they are secrets and, if so, whether they are relevant and admissible at the trial. Chief defense counsel Herald Price Fahringer wanted to subpoena Vice President George Bush to testify about Wilson's service to the government after he left the government payroll in 1976. Fahringer has said that "while he (Wilson) was in Libya, he was co operating with the U.S. intelligence community and furnishing them with highly sensitive and classified information."

Social Security computers a mess

The Social Security Administration will mistakenly give away $8.5 billion during the next five years due to obsolete computer systems, according to Social Security Commissioner John Svahn.

Svahn, in an article in the December issue of Science Digest, terms it a "miracle" that the people running the computer system at his agency are even able to get out the monthly Social Security checks.

The federal government is the world's largest user of computers, spending $15 billion annually on computer resources for the 18,000 systems it owns. But the system inherited by Svahn is so obsolete he admits it might soon produce a "disaster of epic proportions."

In order to just mail monthly benefits, Social Security has in effect defaulted on all its other duties, the article states. It is three years behind in posting retirement contributions deducted from the nation's weekly paychecks. It is also three years behind in its annual recomputation of benefits, resulting in long-term under- and over-payments.

SVAHN TOLD Science Digest that in some cases it takes years to discover that a beneficiary is in fact dead — and in the meantime benefits continue. At the current rate, $8.5 billion in erroneous payments will be mailed by Social Security during the next five years.

Former associate Social Security commissioner Jan Prokop attests to Svahn's problem. "I want to assure you that the programs are in at least as poor shape as has been described," Prokop told a congressional committee. "They are antique, they are serial, they are undocumented, they are poorly understood, they tend to break, and when they break it takes a monumental effort to fix them."

Relief, however, is on the way, according to the Science Digest article. Last March Svahn announced a five-year plan to modernize the current system. It won't be a tear-down, start-from-scratch approach, but a step-by-step upgrading of both hardware and software. The estimated cost of ending the electronic chaos is $478 million, and only time will tell if it will make any difference.

The election mystery

WASHINGTON — A shift of less than 40,000 votes in five states would have given the Democrats control of the Senate as well as the House. How come the voters drew back?

The answer is unknowable, an irreducible mystery. The mystery, by a complex process, reinforces the conclusion that the 1982 elections were a win for the moderates. Two types of extreme outcome were, at times, deemed likely. One was the realignment predicted by many of the President's backers after the 1980 elections. The Republicans, had their script been followed, would have taken over the House as well as the Senate and the Presidency.

Right-wing ideologists would have enjoyed a field day. They would have enacted into law all their prejudices about abortion, buses, guns and prayer. They would have cut social services further — thus deepening what is already the worst and longest recession since the war. So if the realignment had taken place, the fabric of American society might well have been ripped to shreds.

The other extreme would have been a big enough Democratic sweep to take control of the Senate as well as the House. To win Senate seats in five of the states they lost narrowly (Missouri, Nevada, Rhode Island, Wyoming and Vermont) the Democrats would have required only a total shift of 35,000 votes. Had that occurred, another disaster would now be making up.

For while the Democrats are not exactly a monolithic splinter group, the senior leaders remain committed to government intervention and big spending. In control of the Congress and its committees, they would have directed at the White House a stream of social spending measures, broken only by the occasional cut in defense outlays. President Reagan, far from being under pressure to compromise, would have been obliged to play veto politics. The country would have been in for two years of paralysis.

CERTAIN CLEAR trends do explain, in part at least, the frustration of those extremists. Unemployment was the big issue, and the Republicans were widely perceived to be the party of the rich. They won a majority only among Americans with annual incomes of over $40,000. They carried less than 40 percent of the total vote in the country. So the electorate killed off, in a deliberate way, any chance of a Republican sweep.

The anti-Republican tide found expression in many victories for the liberal Democrats in the states most badly hit by recession. In the gubernatorial races, Democrats did extremely well in Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois and Pennsylvania. They picked up House seats in blue-collar districts that had gone Republican two years ago in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan.

But several conditions worked to break up what otherwise would have been a tidal wave of support for liberal Democrats. For one thing, there was the South. The Democrats picked up congressional seats in Virginia, North Carolina, Florida and Texas. While the newcomers may not be bull weevils, as the closet Republicans are called, neither are they going to be liberals in the image of Speaker Tip O'Neill.

Then there were the narrow Republican wins in the Senate. Four vulnerable Republicans in states hard hit by recession eked out close victories—John Danforth in Missouri; John Chafee in Rhode Island; Robert Stafford in Vermont; and David Durenberger in Minnesota. Exactly why defies analysis. But a good guess has to do with personal qualities. All are good men who deserved to stay in office no matter what their party affiliation. In that sense, the voters at least half-consciously resisted a sweep, and cast ballots for moderation.

That speculation finds additional support in some results that went the other way. Among the losers were several candidates—with plenty of money and lots of campaigning skills—also known for lack of moderation. There is William Clements of Texas, the Republican governor who lost to Atty. Gen. Mark White. There is Jerry Brown, the governor of California who lost his bid for a Senate seat to Mayor Pete Wilson of San Diego.

Still, the deliberate choice could, at most, have been keyed to certain individuals. It could not have been orchestrated to achieve an overall result. What was a work in the final outcome was something beyond conscious control, something that has to do with the vast space of the country, the inner balance of the economy, the genius of the electoral system, the good sense of the voters.

but at that point analysis gives way to the unknowable. Their rest is veiled in mystery. Sensitive people respect what they do not fully understand. So the mystery of the election should foster and element of self-doubt and caution that, in hard times and on uncharted seas, worked to make all of us more moderate.

Civil War soap

BY BOB CARPENTER

I eagerly awaited CBS' eight hour Civil War epic "The Blue and the Gray" which premiered last night, with two other installments planned for Tuesday and Wednesday.

After reading a couple of lukewarm reviews by television critics, I dropped my expectation a notch or two — after all it is television.

I should have been suspicious when the critics used such words as "ambitious" and "sprawling" which are often euphemisms for a good idea that has somehow gone wrong.

However, I was not prepared for how bad television could mangle the Civil War.

The immediate thing that bothered me was that the plot revolves around two fictionalized characters: John, a newspaper illustrator covering the war; and Jonas, a scout for the Union Army. It would have been much more effective to pick real people in pivotal roles in the war and tell the story from their point of view.

minutes of last night's three-hour installment all the viewer was treated to were several burgeoning romances a la "Gone With the Wind" and a lot of stiff acting and stereotypical characters.

We never see the events leading up to the war: the plight of the slaves, South Carolina's secession from the Union, John Brown's raid or the firing on Fort Sumter.

Evidently these things weren't interesting enough for TV so CBS subjects the viewer to several insipid romantic subplots that do little but distract and bore.

The viewer gets none of the political maneuverings of the war, no war strategy and no good looks at the actual historical characters who do happen to stumble across the screen between the war romances.

THE FIRST installment, and I assume the next two, never capture the gritty realism of the war. One never feels like "he is there" watching history being made.

The only redeeming feature in the three hours was the battle of Bull Run which captured the confusion, smoke, fear and senseless death of war. The Civil War was not about love, as CBS thinks, but about hate and the battle scene is the only resonant part of the "epic" so far.

From where I sit, bored and disappointed, TV has managed to make the Civil War — which looms as a giant landmark in the United States' historical development — into a soap operish romance with the war as a convenient backdrop.

In parts of Germany, white mice were considered good luck.

CIA report predicted Israeli invasion

WASHINGTON — The Central Intelligence Agency began secretly supporting the Christian militias in Lebanon last year to keep them from falling completely under Israeli influence. The evidence is contained in a startling top-secret memo dated March 6, 1981.

This document correctly forewarned fully 15 months in advance that Israel would invade Lebanon, that the Palestinians would be routed, that the Christian Phalangists would emerge as the dominant Lebanese faction, and therefore, that the United States would "forfeit all influence" in Lebanon unless "military and financial assistance" was funneled to the Phalangists.

Up to that time, it had been U.S. policy to bolster the Lebanese government. But the government was held together by a delicate political and religious balance, which had "disintegrated," the memo declared.

"Since the establishment of a PLO state within a state in the 1970-73 period and the subsequently massive inflow of arms to both Christian and Moslem communities," reported the memo, "the Government of Lebanon has been unable to exercise its authority throughout the country."

The CIA not only saw "no prospect of improvement," but anticipated that the Israelis would lose patience with the Palestinians and come crashing across the Lebanese border to deal with them.

"Further Israeli incursions, if not imminent, are nevertheless inevitable," the memo predicted. "The question is not so much whether or when such incursions will occur but the scope and purpose of such incursions, and their potential for igniting a wider and more dangerous confrontation."

A large-scale invasion, warned the memo, "might seek to link with the Israeli-supplied Christian militias to the north, redrawing the political map of Lebanon."

The CIA decided, therefore, to lean the Phalangist militias from Israel. "It is concluded," stated the top-secret memo, "that the agency should provide military and financial assistance, as requested, to the Phalangist militias."

"Should these militias remain solely dependent on Israeli support," the memo argued, "the U.S. will forfeit all influence in a post-incursion environment, with the likely resulting suppression of the Moslem communities and expulsion of the Palestinians."

The CIA strategy has been so successful that Lebanon may now wind up a U.S. protectorate. There has also been a corresponding breakdown in the historic cooperation between the United States and Israel.

KICKING CRIPPLES: When a shortage of space developed at the Agriculture Department's parking lot in downtown Washington last summer, none of the agency's 130 bigshots lost his spot. But 11 handicapped employees did.

One of those who got kicked out on the street was Warren Tilghman, a 44-year-old special-projects officer. He has severe back problems — two discs removed and a third ruptured. In May, his condition was aggravated when he slipped and fell in an Agriculture building; since then he has been able to work only half-days.

Tilghman appealed the ruling that deprived him of the reserved-parking privilege he has had since he joined the department in 1979. In July, a Veterans Administration doctor certified that Tilghman is a "40 percent service-connected disabled veteran," and recommended that he be allowed to keep his parking place.

An Agriculture spokesman told his reporter Allan Lengel that a department doctor had reviewed all the handicapped cases and concluded that Tilghman and 10 other employees no longer deserved special treatment. The spokesman declined further comment on grounds that Tilghman's appeal is pending.

Meanwhile, Tilghman has to get to work at 5:30 a.m. — half an hour before his shift starts — in hope of finding a place to park on the street near his office.

God can help cure your grief

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I can't believe this is happening to me. My husband has just left me and I am sick with grief. I have prayed and prayed, but nothing seems to help me. What can I do? — I.W.S.

DEAR I.W.S.: I am very sorry that this has happened to you, and I can well understand your grief and perplexity. Nevertheless, God is with you in the midst of this crisis (whether you sense his presence or not) and I pray that you will reach out and discover his comfort and strength.

I know I cannot fully understand all the emotions which are in your heart right now, but I suspect there are at least three things that are weighing upon you. First, it may be that you are feeling a great deal of guilt, and questioning whether or not there was anything you should have done to prevent this from happening. You may even be wondering if you are really worth very much, if your husband was so willing to leave you for another.

Second, you have suddenly been left with a great void or vacuum in your life. Once you had companionship and love, but now it is gone and you feel that hurt very much. Third, I suspect you are afraid of the future — afraid it won't get any better, and afraid of getting into any relationship which could hurt you in the long run. And there may be many other concerns in your mind and heart as well.

Why do I mention these? Because God wants to help you right now — and he wants to help you very specifically by dealing with each one of these things you are feeling. For example, he can give you the strength to put the past behind you, and if there are legitimate feelings of guilt because you were not all you could have been as a wife, he can forgive if you will turn to Christ and seek his forgiveness. Remember, God loves you and wants you to learn to walk in fellowship with him. You are valuable to him, and he can help fill the void you feel in your life. He also is able to give you hope.

Don't give in to despair, but pray that God will use this time to show you your need of him and bring you to himself. Then you can face each day knowing that Christ is with you. "Cast all your anxiety on him because he cares for you." (1 Peter 5:7).

Thoughts

If there is one thing in the world that will make a man peculiarly and insufferably self-conceited, it is to have his stomach behave itself, the first day at sea, when nearly all his comrades are seasick.

SMOKEOUT — Londa Henry, public information officer for the American Cancer Society, holds up a poster proclaiming Thursday as "Great American Smokeout Day" across the nation. A number of booths will be set up in Big Spring Thursday offering support to smokers trying to quit for at least one day.

People urged to stop smoking for one day

By CAROL HART
Lifestyle Writer

It's called "The Great American Smokeout," and posters displayed across the nation are urging smokers to "take a day off from smoking" Thursday.

Members of the American Cancer Society hope that smokers will give up cigarettes not only for one day, but for the rest of their lives. Londa Henry, public information officer for the local branch of the American Cancer Society, says.

Mrs. Henry said 16 million Americans, including smokers and non-smokers, participated in the Great American Smokeout last year.

"Five million people didn't smoke for 24 hours," Mrs. Henry said. Three million more didn't smoke for one to 11 days following the Great American Smokeout. The figures were obtained from a Gallup Poll.

Object of the day "is to get as many people as we can to stop smoking," Mrs. Henry said. Clyde Angel, Big Spring Mayor, has indicated that he plans to proclaim Thursday "Honorary Smokeout Day" in Big Spring.

Participants anticipating Great American Smokeout day have been distributing "wrist snappers" with Smokeout national chairman Larry Hagman's picture on them. The snappers give smokers something to do besides lighting up a cigarette.

Goliad Middle School and Ruhnels Junior High are also sponsoring a theme contest, in which children are encouraged to write a theme on why they want a loved one or a friend to stop smoking. Prize in the event will be $10 at each school.

Representatives will be at Howard College today and Wednesday during activity period to display a smoking machine, a machine which shows what smoking does to the lungs. Pledge cards and wrist snappers will also be distributed at the college.

Pledge cards are for smokers who pledge to quit smoking for 24 hours.

Mrs. Henry said local cheerleaders and members of the Future Homemakers of America have aided the American Cancer Society by putting out posters and distributing pledge cards across the city.

Members of the American Cancer Society will be manning booths in four locations in Big Spring Thursday in which pledge cards, wrist snappers, and gum and candy will be distributed. The booths will be set up in the courtyard of the College Park Shopping Center, at the Highland Mall and the Big Spring Mall, and on the east side of the Howard County courthouse.

Dr. Donohue

Achalasia: A swallowing problem

Dear Dr. Donohue: My son, who is athletic and works in a physically-demanding job, has a problem with eating. He cannot eat more than a few mouthfuls of food at a time. It backs up into his esophagus. A gastroenterologist diagnosed this as achalasia. He has been losing weight because of this. One form of treatment suggested is the insertion of a balloon that would be inflated. Another suggested answer is actual surgery to correct the condition. I am told there is a high risk involved in the balloon method — 50 percent risk. Could you please give us a way to make an educated decision? — S.R. I am sure you understand your son's condition, but I think it's worthwhile to go over it briefly. When you swallow food, it passes from the throat into the esophagus, which propels it downward through rhythmic squeezing motions that begin at the top and work their way down. In achalasia, this rhythmic motion is not there. Furthermore, at the very end of the esophagus there is a barrier that prevents proper entrance of food into the stomach. A way to diagnose this condition is with a manometry test, which determines the movement of the esophagus walls. It provides a pretty clear picture of just what is going on.

I can sympathize with you and your family. It is not easy for a lay person to have to make decisions about subjects beyond their sphere of knowledge. You mention the balloon method, which is pretty much as you describe in your letter. You should discuss this again with the young man's doctor. No procedure with a 50 percent complication rate would be allowed except in emergency situations, life-threatening ones. I am sure that if the doctor is familiar with the procedure, he will be able to set your mind more at ease with regard risks.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Abby

Grudge should die

DEAR ABBY: No, no, ten-thousand time NO! Your advice to "Seeing Red," who wrote that a relative had extracted a deathbed promise that if "H" showed up at his funeral, he'd throw her out, was desperately off the mark. "Seeing" asked for suggestions on how to keep his promise, and you actually helped him!

Abby, except for public figures, church funerals are not private invitation-only affairs. They are opportunities for individuals to lay aside the divisions that may have separated them in life in order that they can pray for the repose of the soul of the dead. If a reconciliation was impossible while one of the aggrieved parties was living, at least at the funeral the survivor can make some sort of peace.

The church does not bar its doors to people merely because they quarrel. In my opinion, the person who should be bounced from this funeral is not the one the dying man finds so odious, it is the corpse who, even facing Judgment, cannot relax his embrace on a grudge.

PRIEST IN CHICAGO SUBURBS
DEAR ABBY: Sorry, Father, I cannot go along with "bouncing" a corpse from his own funeral.

If "H," who was specifically asked to stay away, wants to "make some sort of peace and pray for the repose of the soul of the dead," let her do so privately, at another time, instead of crashing the funeral.

DEAR ABBY: I am a senior citizen in fairly good health. I lost my wife many years ago and have some living relatives, but when I die I do not want to leave anything to my relatives. Some I haven't spoken to in 30 years. I want to leave everything I have to a couple who befriended me. (I have a nice savings and some time certificates, furniture, etc.) I talked to a man at my bank and he told me that whatever I leave will automatically go to my nearest kin. Is this correct?

SACRAMENTO, CALIF., READER
DEAR ABBY: No. Only if you leave no will does everything automatically go to the nearest of kin. Now, talk to a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I disagree on something and want you to settle it.

He appreciates fine wine and most of our friends are aware of it, so occasionally when we invite guests for dinner they bring a bottle of wine.

My husband thanks them for it, puts it away, and then he serves a wine of his own choice with our dinner.

We were recently criticized for not serving the wine a guest had brought that evening.

My husband insists that when someone brings the wine, it is a gift for us, and we are under no obligation to serve it. I say that if a guest brings a bottle of wine, no matter what wine we had intended to serve we should serve the wine the guest brought. Maybe I'm wrong, but I am not having another dinner party until I find out.

ON THE FENCE

DEAR ON: Get off the fence — on your husband's side. He's right. (P.S. If it is understood in advance that a dinner guest is providing the wine, then that wine should be served.)

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Vietnam veterans believe the war is far from over

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Parading Vietnam veteran George Robinson carried a sign on Constitution Avenue Saturday which declared that, for him, the war is still not over.

The weekend's events — a triumphant three-hour parade and the dedication of a Vietnam Veterans Memorial — went splendidly for participating veterans, serving as a long-needed catharsis.

But Robinson's sign raised some questions no parade can answer:

- “WHY wasn't war declared?”
- “WHY were the privileged exempt?”
- “WHY should the few sacrifice for the many?”
- “WHY only men to the slaughter?”
- “WHAT has been learned?”
- “TO WHOM are Americans indebted?”

Other veterans have other concerns, less global than Robinson's, but still urgent.

They feel they are still paying for having served. Vietnam service is a job handicap, according to Larry Brinker, a Labor Department official. He said men who fought have higher unemployment than those who stayed home.

“They have to bear the brunt of the disapproval of that conflict,” he said. “The biggest problem these veterans have had is the stigma of Vietnam.”

Agent Orange, a chemical defoliant, is another vexing worry.

The Veterans Administration says it has no proof that those exposed to Agent Orange have a greater risk of contracting cancer or of fathering children with birth defects.

Three years after Congress told the VA to find the answers to those questions, the research project hasn't started.

At an Agent Orange forum last week, Glenn Sinclair, 35, of Cleveland said each of his five children was born with a birth defect.

When he went to a VA hospital for an exam, he said, it took all his self-control to keep from strangling the clerk who met him with bureaucratic sarcasm: “Oh, another one of you.”

“I pay taxes and I fought for this country, and I've been treated like dirt,” Sinclair said.

Ex-GIs gave him a standing ovation. Veterans noticed that the memorial was built at the instigation of veterans — not of the country — and that government participation was minimal.

VA Administrator Robert Nimmo made no public appearances, explaining through an aide that since he has announced that he is resigning, he thought it was best to keep a low profile.

Everett Alvarez Jr., deputy VA director and a prisoner in North Vietnam for 8½ years, was the only administration official in Saturday's memorial dedication.

Veterans commented that President Reagan found time to go to the Soviet embassy to pay respects to Leonid Brezhnev but not to participate in the dedication. Reagan flew to Chicago Saturday for a memorial service to his father-in-law, who died Aug. 19.

Determined to strengthen NATO alliance

West German chancellor to meet Reagan

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — With a major irritant to allied relations out of the way, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl is heading into talks with President Reagan determined to reinforce the partnership between NATO's most militarily powerful members.

Indeed, in a television interview hours before Kohl's meeting with Reagan, the chancellor said his nation was not “joining the choir which is condemning the Americans.” His only elaboration was to tell his interviewer that the United States has “many friends in Germany.”

West German officials said before Kohl's arrival Sunday that Reagan's decision to lift sanctions on firms involved in building the Soviet gas pipeline foreshadows a meeting between the two leaders.

That issue, along with the implications of the leadership change in the Soviet Union, is expected to dominate Reagan's meeting and working luncheon with Kohl today.

In an interview Sunday with West German television, Kohl said he doubted that the death of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and the succession of Yuri Andropov as Communist Party leader will bring about any dramatic, short-term change in Soviet policies.

“The problems naturally remain after Brezhnev's death: the problems of Soviet over-arming, the problems that we watch with concern every day in Poland, the war continuing in Afghanistan and the necessity to reach worldwide disarmament and detente,” Kohl said.

He also said it is “quite obvious” that West Germany must be cautious about preserving its ties with the United States because of his country's dependence on American military power for its security.

On taking office last month, Kohl said he was determined to “lead the German-American relationship out of the twilight zone and confirm and stabilize the relationship.”

Asked today to elaborate on that remark, Kohl said his nation “is inseparably tied up with the NATO defense alliance and with the presence of American forces in Europe and in my country for the last 30 years.”

But he added that NATO “is not primarily a military alliance; it is primarily a community of ideas, made up of nations and peoples with the same constitution based on freedom, based on the concept of civil rights, based on the concept of human rights. This is something which I would like to give more emphasis (to) in Germany.”

Reagan's decision, earlier this year, to impose sanctions on U.S.-licensed West European companies involved in building the Siberian pipeline caused strains in Washington's relations with Bonn.

Although less committed to East-West detente than his predecessor, Helmut Schmidt, Kohl has been insistent that West German companies taking part in the Soviet gas pipeline project should honor their contracts.

The impasse ended Saturday when Reagan announced the sanctions would be lifted as a result of what he said was a “substantial agreement” between the United States and its allies on guidelines for future East-West economic ties.

Interviewed today on ABC-TV's “Good Morning America,” Kohl said Reagan's decision was “correct.” But he added that, “I consider it to be very important that all of us honor treaties and contracts that have been concluded.”

BSHS honors war veterans

The Big Spring High School student council held a ceremony last Thursday to honor those teachers at the high school who had military service, as well as those veterans who have served to keep America free.

Those teachers recognized for their service were Tom Ament, John Annen, Randy Britton, David Budke, Val Lee Cox, James Dalrymple, Craig Fischer, Joe Horton, Edward Loveless, Ralph Matteson, W.A. McQueary, Bernard Rains, Pedro Ruiz, C.W. Tanner and Phillip Wynn.

ARGUELLO'S SIDE POINTS A FINGER — Alexis Arguello gestures during a press conference Sunday in Miami. Arguello appeared with his agent, Bill Miller, who charged that Aaron Pryor was taking illegal substances during their bout. Miller said the protest was filed with the WBA on behalf of his fighter, but without Arguello's consent.

Korean fighter Kim lies near death

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — South Korean fighter Duk Koo Kim, showing no sign of brain function or response to any stimuli, remained alive only with the help of life support machinery while the doctor who operated on him said it would be several days before he makes a decision on shutting the machinery off.

"We want to see if we can do anything else," Dr. Lonnie Hammargren said Sunday, though adding there was "no sign of any responsiveness" and little hope Kim could survive.

"What functions remain, we don't know," he added.

Kim, knocked unconscious by World Boxing Association lightweight champion Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini in the 14th round of their title fight Saturday with a vicious right hand to the left side of the face, suffered a torn blood vessel and has a blood clot on one entire side of his head, according to Hammargren.

Mancini, who attended mass in a local hotel Sunday, said he was praying for the 23-year-old fighter.

"I pray for him and I ask the people of America and my family to pray for him," he said. "I also pray for his family."

Mancini, his voice cracking at times, said he was numb by Kim's condition.

"I'm very saddened, very sorry it had to happen," he said. "It hurts bad to know you're a part of it."

Mancini, his family, and about 100 followers crowded into a room at the Tropicana Hotel to celebrate mass with the Rev. Tim O'Neil, a priest who traveled with Mancini from Youngstown, Ohio, for the fight.

"Being a Christian I rely on my faith in God that all things happen for a reason," he said. "I just have to rely on my faith to get through this."

Mancini, wearing sunglasses to hide a bruised and swollen left eye, said his future in boxing was uncertain, adding that he was "going to have to sit down and seriously think about it."

The 21-year-old champion emphasized he was not thinking about retiring, but was thinking about not fighting again in the near future.

Kim, the WBA's top-ranked contender who received $20,000 for the nationally-televised bout at Caesars Palace, took a beating throughout the scheduled 15-round fight, but did not go down until Mancini caught him early in the 14th round.

Kim struggled to his feet, but then fell unconscious to the canvas. He never regained consciousness as he was carried away on a stretcher and taken by ambulance to Desert Springs Hospital.

Boxing promoter Bob Arum, who staged the title fight, called for the temporary suspension of professional boxing while a blue-chip panel of medical experts studies the risks involved.

Arum said previous ring deaths occurred because the fighters were mismatched or the referee didn't stop the fight in time. This time, he added, the referee could do little.

"There was no opportunity to stop this fight," he said. "It was a one-punch knockout."

able to absorb and still perform," Miller added.

Meanwhile, Pryor's physician, Dr. Ronald Cheeks of Cincinnati, arrived at a news conference called to announce the protest and labeled the allegations "ridiculous."

"I can guarantee everyone in this room that there were no stimulants of any kind used in Mr. Pryor's water or inhalation or any other form," said Cheeks.

Speaking directly to Arguello from the rear of the conference room, Cheeks told the Nicaraguan: "We know that during any fight that with the power both of you have, one punch can make a difference. You were staggered by one punch and that was the difference."

Miller, who wants the bout declared "no contest" and a rematch ordered, said tapes of the fight show that between various rounds, Pryor either sniffed something placed before his nose or drank from a bottle.

The agent alleged that whatever it was, it allowed Pryor to take "shots that would have stopped King Kong," yet come out for each round "charged up."

Miller also lashed out at the boxing inspectors assigned to the match, saying they were too emotionally involved in the fight and failed to do their jobs watching the corners between rounds.

Although no urine analysis is required after a fight by the WBA, the Miami Boxing Commission had requested both fighters agree to submit to tests before and after the fight.

Specimens were taken from both fighters before the contest, but neither was asked to give them afterward, said Al Goodman, chairman of the Miami Boxing Commission.

Arguello wants no part of fight protest

MIAMI (AP) — Alexis Arguello admits surprise at the amount of punishment Aaron Pryor endured during their World Boxing Association junior welterweight title fight, but says he won't press to find out if the champion took stimulants during the match to help him win.

Arguello, admitting that his pride had been hurt, said Sunday that he lost to a "great champion" last Friday and disavowed any involvement in a formal protest lodged with the WBA by his agent, Bill Miller.

"I don't know what happened," said Arguello, sporting stitched cuts around his left eye. "I don't want this thing to go too far. I was beaten by a great champion. There is no doubt in my mind I don't want to question his ability or honesty."

The Nicaraguan, who still holds the World Boxing Council lightweight championship, acknowledged, however, that Pryor's ability to take shots to the face surprised him.

He immediately backed off, though, adding, "The way I feel, he was defending his title and anybody defending his title has to be able to take some punishment."

Miller alleged that Pryor, who retained his title with a 14th-round technical knockout in the Orange Bowl, was given "various foreign substances" either before or during the fight which enhanced his ability to withstand Arguello's best punches.

"What those foreign substances are, I can't say," said Miller, adding that the protest was filed without Arguello's consent. "In my opinion, he was given some kind of stimulant which allowed him to operate in a manner not normal for any athlete."

"It allowed him to absorb punishment that he should not have been able to absorb and still perform," Miller added.

Meanwhile, Pryor's physician, Dr. Ronald Cheeks of Cincinnati, arrived at a news conference called to announce the protest and labeled the allegations "ridiculous."

"I can guarantee everyone in this room that there were no stimulants of any kind used in Mr. Pryor's water or inhalation or any other form," said Cheeks.

Speaking directly to Arguello from the rear of the conference room, Cheeks told the Nicaraguan: "We know that during any fight that with the power both of you have, one punch can make a difference. You were staggered by one punch and that was the difference."

Miller, who wants the bout declared "no contest" and a rematch ordered, said tapes of the fight show that between various rounds, Pryor either sniffed something placed before his nose or drank from a bottle.

The agent alleged that whatever it was, it allowed Pryor to take "shots that would have stopped King Kong," yet come out for each round "charged up."

Miller also lashed out at the boxing inspectors assigned to the match, saying they were too emotionally involved in the fight and failed to do their jobs watching the corners between rounds.

Although no urine analysis is required after a fight by the WBA, the Miami Boxing Commission had requested both fighters agree to submit to tests before and after the fight.

Specimens were taken from both fighters before the contest, but neither was asked to give them afterward, said Al Goodman, chairman of the Miami Boxing Commission.

Kim's mother hopes to visit son's bedside

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The 66-year-old mother of South Korean boxer Duk Koo Kim, who was clinging to life in a Las Vegas, Nev., hospital, says she hopes to go to the United States to be at her son's bedside.

"I'm very anxious and worried at my son's tragedy," Mrs. Yang Sun-yo told reporters today at her home in Kojin, South Korea. "I want to go to the United States, but it is difficult for me because I have no money for the trip to see my boy."

The 23-year-old Kim was knocked out Saturday by World Boxing Association lightweight champion Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini in the 14th round of their title fight. He suffered a torn blood vessel and had a blood clot on one side of his head.

The doctor who operated on Kim described the head injury as terminal. The fighter showed no sign of brain activity, did not respond to stimuli and was being kept alive on life-support equipment.

The fight was televised live to Seoul by satellite, and oriental boxing observers thought Kim had put up a stronger battle than expected. The fight was close prior to the knockout, but Kim appeared to tire after the 10th round.

Kim won the Oriental Boxing Federation lightweight crown last February and had successfully defended the title three times. He had a record of 17 victories, one draw and one defeat before facing Mancini in Las Vegas.

No sign of resumption in NFL talks

NEW YORK (AP) — There is no sign that talks aimed at ending the 56-day National Football League players strike will resume soon, as management sticks to its position that it has made a "bottom-line" offer.

In fact, there were several indications Sunday that negotiations would not take place again without movement on the players' side.

"I don't think they will meet soon, not unless the ballplayers move further from the position they've already taken," said Kay McMurray, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, after separate talks over the weekend with management negotiator Jack Donlan and union chief Ed Garvey.

MacMurray said he expected both sides "are going to have to let the pressures build up" before there is movement.

Meanwhile, Donlan said Sunday he has told mediator Sam Kagel that he saw no reason to have another meeting with Garvey Kagel recessed the latest round of bargaining Nov. 6 after little progress was made.

At that time, Donlan made what he called a "bottom-line offer," a package the owners valued at $1.313 billion over four years, starting in 1983, and $60 million in bonus money in 1982. The union has asked for $1.1 billion over three years, starting in 1982.

Donlan conferred Sunday with Chuck Sullivan, owner of the New England Patriots and chairman of the owners' executive committee.

Sullivan, asked if he felt the best interests of the league were being served in Donlan's rejecting Kagel's proposal to restart the talks, replied: "Absolutely. The meetings we had in Cockeysville (Md.) and New York were a waste of time. It created feelings in the fans and players that something was happening when, in fact, nothing was happening."

Garvey pulled a reverse of sorts last week by enlisting the aid of McMurray in his quest to resume the negotiations. Shortly after the strike began, Donlan suggested federal mediation but Garvey rejected it.

A hearing before an administrative law judge on a complaint issued against the Management Council by the National Labor Relations Board, originally scheduled for today, has been postponed to Nov. 29 at the Management Council's request. The complaint cites 17 violations, including failing to bargain in good faith and attempting to bypass the union and negotiate directly with the players.

The New York Daily News reported in today's editions that the six-man executive committee of the players association had voted to accept the general framework of management's last proposal. Approval would still have to come from the player representatives, however, before the union would act further.

David Sheridan, spokesman for the players association, said Sunday night that 26 player representatives had met Sunday night "for a 30-minute informational meeting. No votes were taken."

The meeting did not start until 10:30 p.m. EST, after being postponed several times.

CELEBRATION — Southern Methodist University football players celebrate after SMU scored against Texas Tech in the game's closing seconds Saturday in Lubbock. Blane Smith (23) at the bottom of the heap, pitched the ball to Bobby Leach on a kick return, who ran down the field to score, breaking a tied game. SMU won 34-27, to remain unbeaten for the season.

Pitt could be Cotton Bowl weevils against Mustangs

DALLAS (AP) — Pittsburgh in the Cotton Bowl as the visiting team New Year's Day?

Events over the weekend and what happens in the polling place early this week could position the Panthers for the official invitation Saturday.

The scenario could go like this:

Unbeaten and No. 1-ranked Georgia would likely retain its edge in The Associated Press poll over No. 2-rated and unblemished Southern Methodist, which plays Arkansas Saturday in Texas Stadium if SMU wins or ties Arkansas, the Mustangs will be the host team.

Georgia already has clinched a berth in the Sugar Bowl. As the No. 1-ranked team in the country, the Bulldogs probably would draw the highest ranked challenger possible.

A spot opened up over the weekend after Arizona State, previously unbeaten and untied, lost to Washington 17-13.

Nebraska, ranked No. 4 last week, would likely move into the third spot because of Arizona State's loss.

Nebraska will battle it out with Oklahoma for the Orange Bowl.

Next in the rankings is Penn State, which should slide into the No. 4 spot by virtue of its victory over Notre Dame.

Here comes the rub for the Cotton Bowl.

It's no secret that Penn State coach Joe Paterno is hankering for his first national title. The best way to get it is to play the team on top.

A possible Georgia-LSU matchup went out the window Saturday when Mississippi State upset the Tigers.

The Cotton Bowl also was looking hard at LSU.

So, where does the Cotton Bowl turn with Penn State thinking Sugar?

How about the defending national champion Panthers? They only have one loss, and could move from eighth place to sixth place in the rankings this week. Also, Pitt still has a game against Penn State and could make the Cotton Bowl look good with a victory over the Nittany Lions.

The Cotton Bowl gets down to a hard-core decision Tuesday.

SuperSonics fly by Rockets

The Seattle SuperSonics, still going at top speed, left the winless Houston Rockets on the launching pad again.

The Sonics, 10-0 this season, held off a late rally to defeat the 0-8 Rockets 102-99 Sunday night. Seattle is now five victories away from equalling the best start ever by a National Basketball Association club, 15-0 by the 1948-49 Washington Capitals.

"We've played well, and if we keep going like this, we'll be real good," Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens said. "We haven't had many tests, like being behind 15 or 20 points. We need a couple more tests."

The Sonics, who have won all seven of their road games, built a 90-75 lead by hitting seven of their first eight shots in the fourth quarter. But Houston rallied, cutting the Seattle lead to 99-96 with nine straight points, capped by James Bailey's free throws with 1:10 to play.

Gus Williams' foul shot with 58 seconds left and two more free throws by David Thompson with 33 seconds remaining gave Seattle a 102-99 edge.

Rookie Terry Teague tossed in a three-point shot with 21 seconds to go to trim the deficit to 102-99. The Rockets got one more chance to tie the game in the waning seconds, but Allen Leavell's three-point attempt missed.

"I thought we were more aggressive than we have been," said Houston Coach Del Harris, who saw his team lose by 33 points at Seattle in the season opener for both. "We were more serious about defense and rebounding. When you're shooting as bad as we are, the only way to keep in the game is by rebounding and defense."

ON THE RUN — Milwaukee's Junior Bridgeman leads the Bucks fast break up the court followed by Boston's Robert Parish (00) during the National Basketball Association action Sunday night in Milwaukee. Bridgeman scored 17 points in the game and Parish hit for 11. Boston won the game 100-98.

Philadelphia won its eighth game in nine outings as Julius Erving scored 25 points and Moses Malone added 20 points and 19 rebounds against Washington.

The Bucks blew an early 13-point lead, but still had a 43-41 advantage at halftime. Then with Erving and Malone scoring nine points apiece, Philadelphia outscored the Bullets 19-10 at the start of the second half and Washington never got closer than seven points in the fourth quarter.

Greg Ballard led the Bullets with 22 points.

Larry Bird had 20 points and 14 rebounds and Boston held Milwaukee scoreless for 5:41 down the stretch.

The Bucks overcame a 16-point Celtic lead in the second quarter to take a 94-90 edge with 7:18 to play. But Milwaukee's scoring drought enabled Boston to come back. Free throws by Cedric Maxwell and Robert Parish broke a 98-98 tie in the final seconds.

Sidney Moncrief had 22 points to lead the Bucks.

Suns 102, Blazers 94

Alvan Adams scored 22 points and Maurice Lucas added 21 as Phoenix beat Portland for its fourth victory in a row.

The Suns, 8-2, never trailed, although the Trail Blazers got within two points on several occasions in the third quarter after Phoenix led by as many as 13 in the first half. A 10-0 spurt by the Suns to start the fourth quarter kept them in control.

Darnell Valentine and Calvin Natt scored 20 points apiece for Portland.

Lakers 111, Cavaliers 98

Jamaal Wilkes scored 30 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 25 more to lead Los Angeles over Cleveland.

The Lakers, 7-0 since a season-opening loss, handed the Cavaliers their seventh loss in eight starts.

An 18-2 streak at the end of the first quarter put Los Angeles ahead 32-18 and the Lakers never led by less than seven thereafter.

Dry bounced off Frogs' lilly pad

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — F.A. Dry, who tried and failed to resurrect Texas Christian's discontinued football program in six years, was fired as head coach today because he couldn't win, The Associated Press was told.

Dry announced his firing in a telephone call to the AP, saying "They didn't give me a reason."

However, Athletic Director Frank Windeger admitted, "It was the wins and losses."

He said, "F.A. is a good man and he brought more talent here, but this is a harsh business and F.A. knows it."

TCU beat Utah State, Baylor and Rice this year and lost seven going into Saturday's game against Texas A&M, which Dry will coach. Three of the Southwest Conference losses were by nine points total.

"We thought F.A. would turn it around this year but he was snakebitten or whatever you want to call it," Windeger said. "We felt a change was needed."

Windeger said he hopes to have a new coach in three weeks.

Dry has two years remaining on his contract and Windeger said "We will honor it unless he gets another job ... It's like any other personal service contract."

Dry told the AP "they gave me a chance to resign but I told them I had more class than that."

Dry said he was called to a meeting at Windeger's office this morning and there Chancellor William Tucker handed him a letter of termination effective Nov. 21.

Dry said, "I'm not bitter ... I feel like I've got too much class to be bitter, but TCU didn't give us a chance this year. They started in on the

Rice Owls' head mentor 'not quitting'

HOSTON (AP) — Rice University Coach Ray Alborn, on the brink of the Owls' first all-losing season in 71 years, has some information for those who have been critical of his football program.

"They can't run me off; I'm not quitting," the fiery Alborn said Saturday following Rice's 10th straight loss this season, a 35-13 defeat by Baylor. "The people who count have told me there is no problem."

Alborn has two years remaining on his Rice contract.

"If they want to buy me out that is something else, but I have no indication from the people that count," Alborn said.

Rice has never gone through an all-losing season, although the Owls finished 0-9-1 in 1968.

Alborn said his support included Rice President Dr. Norman Hackerman and Athletic Director Augie Erfurth.

"I've got a lot of influential friends who support me but I do know of one particular individual who is out to get me," Alborn said. "I put no credence in those spineless people. It's as if I am not unhappy with our situation. It's as if I set out to make us lose."

"You've always got your radical people out there who never come out until things go wrong and then they want to be a negative influence," he said. "Where have they been the past two years?"

The Owls, who have not had a winning season since 1963, appeared on the upswing with a 5-6 record in 1980 that included upsets of Arkansas

McEnroe prepares for Davis Cup

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — John McEnroe is still winning as the United States tennis team prepares to defend the Davis Cup against France.

He downed Brian Gottfried 6-3, 6-2, 6-4 in the final of the Benson and Hedges Grand Prix tournament at Wembley Arena Sunday and has now won 49 sets in a row.

McEnroe will play in exhibitions in the United States this week and then heads for Grenoble, where the Davis Cup final is scheduled for Nov. 26-28.

"I must be pretty close to playing the best tennis of my career," McEnroe said. "Anyway, I am potentially at my best for next year."

"I am looking forward to the Davis Cup. I always enjoy the Cup matches because it is an honor to play for my country."

McEnroe has not dropped a set since Jimmy Connors beat him in the U.S. Open final in September.

The Wembley tournament was an important Davis Cup warmup for McEnroe. In the quarterfinals he scored a hard-fought straight set win over Henri Leconte, the brilliant 19-year-old French star who is likely to play him again at Grenoble.

Leconte played brilliant tennis at times but was not good enough to hold McEnroe on a medium fast rubber court. At Grenoble the French are laying a clay court that promises to be slow, like the courts at the Roland Garros stadium in Paris where the French Open is played. That is not the kind of surface McEnroe likes best.

Leconte, bouncing with confidence and attacking with almost every stroke he plays, said a Grand Prix tournament is not the same as the Davis Cup final.

Taxing consequences: the effects are coming

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Millions of Americans are about to reap the benefits and pay the penalties of the 1981 and 1982 tax bills passed by Congress.

Many of the major provisions of last year's tax cut did not take effect until this year. You will see the first dollars-and-cents tax impact of things like All Savers Certificates, Individual Retirement Accounts and the reduction in the marriage penalty when you file the return due April 15, 1983.

Congressional action this year was much more limited, but the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 also could affect the amount of money you owe or the size of the refund you will get.

The most sweeping change is the four-stage reduction in rates that began in October 1981. The impact on last year's tax bills was relatively small — a 5 percent cut was implemented on Oct. 1; spread over the entire year, it meant a reduction of only 1.25 percent.

The 1982 cut, however, is a full 10 percent, and so is the 1983 reduction. (The 1984 cut will be 5 percent.)

Here's an example of what it means: Assume you're married with a taxable income of $30,000 and are filing a joint return. Your federal income tax bill for 1981 was $6,160. Your marginal tax rate — the maximum rate you paid — was 37 percent.

Your 1982 tax bill will be $5,607 — a cut of $553. Your marginal tax rate is 33 percent.

Your 1983 tax bill at the same income level will be only $5,064 — a cut of $543. Your marginal rate will be reduced to 30 percent.

The rate changes mean that income you earn next year will be worth more money in your pocket than income you earned this year. And, on the opposite side of the coin, this year's deductions will be worth more than next year's.

Suppose you earn an extra $500 this year. You get a Christmas bonus or make an extra sale. The Internal Revenue Service will take 33 percent or $165. If you earn that extra $500 next year, the IRS will take only 30 percent or $150.

The interest earned on an All Savers Certificate, for example, is excluded from your income up to a maximum of $1,000 for a single person and $2,000 for a married couple filing jointly. The certificates went on sale Oct. 1, 1981; they will be available until Dec. 31, 1982. If you haven't earned the maximum, you might want to buy one of the certificates; interest earned in 1982 can be excluded from 1982 income.

Contributions to an Individual Retirement Account or a Keogh plan also can be subtracted from your income; there is no tax due on the contributions or on the interest they earn until you begin withdrawals.

Conversely, suppose you reduce your taxable income by $500 this year — not by earning less, but by cutting the amount that is subject to federal income tax through a deduction, exclusion or exemption. You'll cut your tax bill by $165. Next year, the same reduction in income would be worth only $150.

The year-end planning strategy is to try to defer your income until 1983 — and

High-interest accounts OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators voted today to let most banks and savings associations offer depositors new high-interest, $2,500-minimum accounts designed to compete with money market mutual funds.

The Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee voted 3-2 to set the minimum, at federally insured institutions, despite two members' arguments that setting any minimum might keep the account from being truly competitive with the funds.

Congress recently authorized creation of the accounts, ordering that they be "directly equivalent to and competitive with" the private funds, which have more than tripled in assets to over $200 million in less than two years. Part of those gains, by all accounts, have been at the expense of the nation's savings institutions, where withdrawals have outpaced deposits.

The law, signed Oct. 15 by President Reagan, left it to the DDC to fill in the details. One main attraction for the new accounts, as approved by the DDC today, is that they will be federally insured for deposits up to $100,000. The funds, since they are private, have no such coverage.

Minimum initial deposits vary among the funds, and there had been considerable discussion as to what — if any — limit the DDC should impose on the new accounts. Congress had suggested that it be no higher than $5,000.

Committee member Edgar Callahan, head of the National Credit Union Administration, argued that the accounts should have a minimum, that "this item is the key as to whether they will be competitive or not."

However, the DDC voted 3-2 for the $2,500 minimum after Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker raised the possibility that setting no minimum would be too costly to institutions, forcing them to pay too much interest and thereby hurting their earnings.

William Isaac, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., voted with Regan and Volcker, although he made several comments in favor of the no-minimum idea. Richard Pratt, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, argued strongly for no minimum.

Roy Green, chairman of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, predicted the new account "is going to be fantastic."

"This account has every element of being the dominant account, the new one account," he said shortly before the trade group opened its annual meeting in New Orleans.

"Depositors will see this as absolutely the best account in America today," he said.

The trade group estimates that the account will attract $80 billion to $100 billion of money by the end of next year, with $20 billion to $30 billion in money coming from outside the industry.

Other main features of the accounts, which may be offered beginning Dec. 14, are:

- As with the money market mutual funds, there will be no limit on interest that can be paid on deposits. Most other accos, a financial institutions have interest ceilings.
- Also, as with many funds, depositors may write checks on their deposits, though they will be limited to

Family plans trip to Antarctica

HOUSTON (AP) — John and Kris Annexstad are planning an unusual family outing — a 40-day scientific expedition they believe will make them the first father-daughter team to explore the Antarctic.

John Annexstad, a planetary scientist at the Johnson Space Center, will spend 40 days camping on the snow and ice with his 22-year-old daughter, an architecture student at Rice University.

Annexstad will turn 50 during the meteorite-collecting trip. It will be the ninth birthday he has spent in the Antarctic.

"This time I will have someone with me that I know and love well," he said.

Annexstad also has spent eight Christmases in the polar region. His family plans to celebrate Christmas at Thanksgiving this year.

The National Science Foundation, which finances much of the expedition, believes the trip will mark the first time a father and daughter have worked in the Antarctic, Annexstad said, adding that the foundation didn't hesitate in approving his daughter for the trip.

"NSF encourages this sort of thing," he said. "When I told them I would need a field assistant and told them about Kris, they approved right away."

"This is going to be great for both of us," he said. "I've been involved with the Antarctic for 25 years. I've been showing photos of the place around our house since she was a little girl."

The pair will be alone on a polar plateau where high winds and temperatures 20 degrees below zero are not uncommon. They and their snowmobiles and supplies will be taken there by helicopter.

"The Allan Hills region is not easy country. Work there is difficult and trying," he said.

Asked if she is excited about the journey, Kris Annexstad replied, "It's probably not going to hit me until we get on the plane Dec. 6."

"I never once thought of actually going there. I never thought Dad could take someone with him," she said.

Her father pointed out that a help will be the fact that she lived in Alaska while he was at the University of Alaska for eight years. Another advantage is her athletic ability; she is a volleyball player and attends Rice on an athletic scholarship.

Annexstad belongs to a team of scientists that has made four trips to the Antarctic to search for meteorites. According to one theory, meteorites are the remains of some of the material that formed the planets and other bodies of the solar system.

U.S. and Japanese scientists have found more than 5,000 of the stones, and more than 1,500 have been taken to the Johnson Space Center, near here for analysis and storage under conditions like those used for moon rocks.

The Annexstads will be collecting meteorites and measuring movements of huge sheets of ice. Kris Annexstad will help with the survey work needed to determine the movement of the ice.

Springsteen guitarist has his own album

Miami Steve Van Zandt, guitarist since 1978 in Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band, has his first solo album out, "Men Without Women," on the EMI America label. The artist is listed as Little Steven and the Disciples of Soul.

"I would like to be looked at like a new act," Van Zandt says. "Let people judge what it is rather than what they think it should be. When the Asbury Jukes was formed, people thought it sounded like the E Street Band. Five years later, people said this has nothing to do with the E Street Band. I'm trying to skip that five years if I can. I just wouldn't really want to any way exploit my past, which hasn't been entirely my own."

"Even interviews I'm ambivalent about. It's a kind of glorification of a singer's opinions. I stopped signing autographs a few years ago. I always felt funny doing that. I felt I was encouraging people to think they were different than I was. I don't like the whole celebrity thing about performing."

Van Zandt, whose 32nd birthday is Nov. 22, said records were important to him, growing up. "They were the only thing that got me going in the morning, got me to school. And I looked forward to listening more after school. I remember there being songs you didn't understand very many of the words. It didn't matter at all. Musically and emotionally, you knew you were being spoken to. You were definitely being moved."

These days, Van Zandt says, "I think rock is art sometimes; it can be a valid art form. It can be an artistic expression just like anything else."

"People who hear your show or record can just dance or they can be inspired or motivated to change their life or change the world. You don't set any limitations. You hope maybe you can change the world. Why not?"

Van Zandt wrote a lot of the first three Asbury Jukes albums. He wrote one song on each of Gary U.S. Bonds' two recent albums and he has written all the songs on "Men Without Women."

That phrase, he says, is a metaphor for loneliness. "The work of touring rock 'n' roll is kind of lonely. That is where it comes from. Good relationships are like a reward in some way for your work."

Van Zandt went out of music for a couple of years in the 1970s and worked in construction, as his father does.

"I lost the desire to play," he explains. "I didn't like what was happening on the radio. Being a guitar player, I thought if I heard one more guitar solo, I would die."

"To sort of get back into it, I joined a touring, oldies show, doing Holiday Inns. You work five or six nights a week. Then the minute you step out of it, it disappears. They don't advertise and the audience doesn't care, as long as you play some vague rendition of those old hits they remember. I was in the background. It was awful."

Janie Fricke catches her breath

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Singer Janie Fricke (pronounced Fric-kee) got married one afternoon, gave a benefit concert that evening and appeared with the musical group, Alabama, for the next three nights.

Three weeks later, she capped off her seven-year career by winning the female vocalist of the year award from the Country Music Association and receiving a standing ovation from 4,400 appreciative friends and associates at the Grand Ole Opry House.

Now she's making the rounds of the television shows: "Entertainment Tonight," "Merv!" "The Mike Douglas Show."

"Honeymoon? What's that?" she says during a recent telephone interview from Dallas, where she lives in a 130-year-old refurbished farmhouse complete with four fireplaces.

"There's no time for that," she says. "We enjoy just getting home and resting for a day or two. Our honeymoon is being on our farm and getting dirty and muddy and feeding the cats."

She and husband, Randy Jackson, who also is her manager, have just shared the two most exciting months of her life.

"You have to be a happy person," she said. "You have to be happy with yourself and happy with the people you love. It shows in your performance. I think I've achieved it."

The 34-year-old singer had her first No. 1 record this year, "Don't Worry About Me Baby," and her current single, "It Ain't Easy Bein' Easy," is in the top 10 of the country music charts. Also out now is her greatest hits album, plus her sixth LP, "It Ain't Easy Bein' Easy."

Miss Fricke first received national recognition for singing commercial jingles for United Airlines, 7-Up, Coors Beer, Toyota, RC Cola, Pizza Hut, Orange Crush and Red Lobster.

"I'm not sure which ones are still showing but I still get residuals," she said.

Later, Miss Fricke became one of Nashville's top backup vocalists. Her voice has been on such recordings as "I'd Really Love to See You Tonight," by England Dan & John Ford Coley; "Stranger," by Johnny Duncan; "I'm a Stand by My Woman Man" and "Let My Love Be Your Pillow," by Ronnie Milsap.

With such a solid background, she has jokingly been accused of having 16 voices.

"I do have different approaches for different songs," she says. "It depends on the mood of the song and the style of music. It's fun to change it around some."

Miss Fricke was raised in South Whitley, Ind. She has a degree in elementary education from Indiana University. For the past year, she's been on tour with Alabama, the four-piece band that won the prestigious entertainer of the year award from the CMA the same night Miss Fricke was chosen top female vocalist.

GIVE HIM A HAND — A seemingly four-armed creature called the Mystic Master pontificates in a scene from "The Dark Crystal." The film, to be released for Christmas, chronicles the adventures of elf-like creatures from an ancient race as they pursue a quest through fantastic lands to fulfill a prophecy. Jim Henson, creator of the Muppets, also created the film's stars.

Muppet creator offers strange creatures 'beyond experience'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD — What happens when the creator of the Muppets and the producer of "Star Wars" combine their talents? The result is "The Dark Crystal," a movie with non-human actors in a strange, unworldly land.

At Christmastime, filmmakers will be able to see the collaboration of Jim Henson, the man who made puppetry a major industry, and Gary Kurtz, partner of George Lucas in "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back."

They have been joined by Frank Oz, the voice of Miss Piggy and Yoda, and Brian Froud, co-illustrator of the best-selling book, "Faeries."

The stars of the $20 million movie are newcomers: Jen, Aughra, Kira, Fizzig, urZah and a variety of Gelflings, Skeksies and Urrus.

They live in a world "out of time and place, with a secret, sometimes frightening ambiance... a world of fantasy and imagination, where forest and swamp breed danger and uncertainty. Creatures strange beyond experience hop, crawl and skitter, singing sweetly or shrieking in unfamiliar languages."

Universal Pictures is hopeful that the unknown cast and the imaginative plot and locales will capture today's youth-oriented movie market.

Kurtz, Henson and Oz were in Los Angeles recently to open an exhibit of "The Dark Crystal" artifacts at the Craft and Folk Art Museum. It's part of the campaign to call attention to the film, which opens in 800 theaters on Dec. 17.

Henson, a lean, full-bearded man of 46, said "The Dark Crystal" evolved from characters once shown on television's "Saturday Night Live."

"They were puppets, but they were unlike the Muppets and because the show was on late at night, we were able to do some questionable material," he said.

"For the first time we used taxidermist's eyes in the puppets, making them seem like living creatures. Then it became a challenge to take them a step further. Could we create another world in which there were no people?"

Henson sketched out the story of Jen, an elf-like creature from an ancient race who pursues a quest through fantastic lands to fulfill a prophecy. The script was written by David Odell, who had worked on "The Muppet Movie" as well as the television shows. Brian Froud's visualizations provided the early impetus for the project, Henson said.

"But I never knew it was going to take five years," he adds.

The 42-year-old Kurtz joined the project when he asked Henson's help in creating Yoda, the sage of "The Empire Strikes Back."

"At that time Jim had a few people working in the lab," Kurtz says. "He showed me the problems they were having with the latex molds, and we talked at length about the project. I was intrigued with the idea of doing a film with no human beings."

After "Empire," Kurtz devoted full time to research and development of the "Dark Crystal" characters. Some are 30 inches high, some are six feet. They move and talk and express feelings through complicated machinery: mechanical, hydraulic, radio control, cable linkage, etc. "The film is live-action throughout, no animation," Kurtz emphasizes. "Sometimes we studied the storyboards and said, 'This character is not capable of performing that action.' At times like that, we thought how much easier it would have been to hire Barbra Streisand and Robert Redford. Five actors only have to step onto the set and do their work."

With real actors, the producer reasoned, the budget would have been one-third less. But actors would have created an anthropomorphic effect.

"We didn't want an imitation of human beings," Kurtz said.

ABC seeking New York talent

NEW YORK (AP) — The job applicants were told to be themselves, so one guy tried the old chair trick, yanking it away just as the girl started to sit down. It was not your typical briefcase, button-down collar interview.

The eager actors and actresses who responded to ABC-TV's annual talent search were given four minutes on stage, each hoping to do or say or act something so memorable that they would linger in the mind of directors who will be casting ABC's pilots and television movies for next season.

The auditions began Nov. 8 and end this Thursday. In all, ABC expects to see about 1,000 performers wishing upon a star, and hoping to become one.

Inviting prospects to mass auditions and scouting the New York theaters is a procedure born to help feed the great maw of modern television. "With cable and more made-for-TV movies, we need actors," said Randall James, ABC's East Coast casting manager. "We must start cultivating ways for talent to get to us."

He also noted, however, "It takes a lot of guts to come here. These people have to live with rejection day in and day out."

But for every 100 or so rejections, James expects one winner.

That's why Kathleen Salamone of Schenectady, N.Y., took a pratfall when her audition partner gave her chair the old heave-ho. They were doing a scene from "Beyond Therapy," a recent play that was yanked from Broadway as quickly as the chair.

"We picked a crazy, slapstick piece to get noticed," said Miss Salamone, whose last TV role was in the movie "For Lovers Only," in which she played a newlywed whose husband ignored her for Pac-Man. "In the small amount of time we have, the best we can do is pick a light, quick piece and have fun."

Mark McConnell, a fledgling actor from Seattle who's earning his daily bread in a cheese shop, took the opposite approach. He and his partner, Leah Joki of Butte, Mont., did a softer scene from the movie "Carnal Knowledge."

"We thought we could make as big a splash by not moving at all," said McConnell.

James' advice to actors was to pick something that displayed their strengths. "If they're great with physical comedy, they should show that off," he said. "Some try to reach too much."

Another aspirant did his own material, racing from one dialect to another. "He went from a Brooklyn taxi driver to an Irish cop to a priest," said James. "We were looking for acting and emoting, and he was doing characterizations."

When ABC auditions in New York, James said, a different type of acting talent is on display.

"The actors in Los Angeles are not as concerned with being great actors, they just want to be discovered," he explained. "At a casting call in Los Angeles, you'll see a lot more physicality."
