Explosion rips chemical plant

TAFT, La. (AP) — A tank of chemicals exploded into flames at a Union Carbide Corp. plant Saturday, releasing poisonous gas and forcing the evacuation of 20,000 residents in a five-mile radius, authorities said.

No injuries were reported. The fire burned itself out shortly after dark, but residents were not allowed back into their homes, a spokeswoman for the St. Charles Parish sheriff's office said.

20,000 evacuated in Louisiana

"The situation is not yet safe," said spokeswoman Glenda Clement. "No one at this point is going to be allowed back to his home except in cases of dire emergency.'

Traffic along the Mississippi River was closed along a 10-mile stretch.

The blaze began when a 40-foot underground tank holding 20,000 gallons of the chemical acrolein exploded at about 12:30 a.m., and it spread to a 65,000-gallon tank.

Acrolein is a chemical used to make animal food supplements and products which kill algae, plant officials said. The vellowish or colorless liquid, which has a choking odor, is also an irritant and is used in tear gas.

When heated, the liquid chemical releases a gas which can be fatal if inhaled, said Union Carbide spokesman Bill Deigan.

Officials decided not to extinguish the fire because the flames were devouring the dangerous chemical fumes, police said.

Mrs. Clement said Union Carbide officials inspected the tank site Saturday night after the fire was out. There was no immediate

Asked when the evacuation would end, she said, "Anything we might say would be purely speculation, and we don't want to do that."

Six-week UFO vigil

Woman died waiting for flying saucer

By MARTHA MALAN

Associated Press Writer GRAND MARAIS, Minn. - From Oct. 5 to Nov. 15, Gerald Flach and LaVerne Landis sat in the bucket seats of his 1979 Chevrolet Monza and waited, deep in the northern Minnesota wilderness, for visitors from outer space.

The autumn leaves, already faded past their prime, fell from the trees. Crisp days gave way to blowing snow and temperatures that sometimes dropped to 10 degrees

The visitors never came. The couple might have waited longer — Flach later said his companion insisted "spirits" had reassured her a UFO would arrive - but after weeks without food and days without water, Mrs. Landis, 50, perished of starvation, dehydration and hypothermia.

Flach stumbled and crawled the quarter mile to the main road and was found by a passing construction contractor.

"She was in contact with them (the spirits) just about every night," Flach told Deputy Frank Redfield of the Cook County "They kept telling us they would be picking us up. It never happened. Every time it never happened." What drove them to abandon their families and roam through the Northern Plains for six months, searching for unidentified flying objects, then maintain a six-week vigil group called Search and Prove. to which Flach and Mrs. Landis belonged?

Flach, who may hold the answers, has been hospitalized for psychiatric treatment and reporters' telephone messages asking for an interview have gone unanswered.

Part of their story is now known deputies who talked to Flach, people who saw Flach and Mrs. Landis at the remote lake and with sources close to the family who asked not to be identified.

Friends and relatives described Mrs. Landis, a registered nurse who worked at St. Joseph's Hospital in St. Paul, Minn., as always seeking to learn more about people. She once commented that much was known about the body, "but we know so little about the mind," according to a friend.

People said she was extremely stable, a person who, "if you were down, would always say look at the bright side." They also said she had a longstanding interest in psychic phenomena that approached obsession after her husband died in 1975.

In 1978, she joined Search and workshops on astral projection and psychic development. There she met Flach, 39, a founding member of the group. Flach's interest in UFOs preceded his involvement with Search and Prove, but had not appeared excessive, friends said.

Search and Prove members believe in contacting spirits through meditation and astral projection, the phenomenon in which a person's See UFO, page 2-A

The Big Spring Chamber of Commerce's Christmas Parade Saturday had it all.

And a sizeable crowd that braved an early morning cold front was treated to a myriad of sights that included E.T., rousing band music, likenesses of three former U.S. presidents singing like the Chip-munks, Miss Texas, foreign dignitaries, Mary and Joseph and martial arts experts. The parade, which stretched as far as a spectator's eye could see, included over 90 pieces and kept heads swiveling about as people strained to see each new float come into view.

Many of the spectators watched from the warmth of automobiles; however, a fair number of persons ventured forth into the cold to get a closer view of the procession.

They were treated to finesounding music from the 2nd Armored Division Band from Fort Hood, the Hardin-Simmons Cowboy Band, the Runnels Junior High Band and the Big Spring High School Band.

Marching songs, Christmas carols and fight songs resounded up and down Gregg Street much to the crowd's delight.

Insanity plea: a case study

By MIKE DOWNEY Staff Writer

Big Spring attorneys and a Lubbock professor of criminal law are divided concerning the need for an insanity plea in the criminal justice system, and at least one local psychiatrist would like to eliminate it.

The insanity plea became the focus of public outcry following the not-guilty verdict last June in the case of John Hinckley, accused of shooting President Reagan. Locally, a Howard County jury rejected an insanity plea recently in the case of Raymond L. Kennedy, found guilty of murder Dec. 3 and assessed punishment at 25 years in prison.

Attorney Wayne Basden, who defended Kennedy, said part of the problem in using the insanity plea is the "natural bias that people have ... the preconceived ideas that people have about insanity.'

However, Basden said the law was necessary due to the nature of mental illness and the responsibility of

"Is a person a criminal if he can't formulate the intent to commit a crime?" Basden said. "If he cannot formulate right from wrong, what are we punishing?" Basden said another difficulty with the insanity plea is the consideration of the crime the person committed while insane. Kennedy was charged with the shooting death of his wife.

"If he had stolen a bicycle, I have no doubt ... they'd have him insane," Basden said.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY Rick Hamby, who prosecuted Kennedy, doesn't want to eliminate the insani-ty plea, but sees certain problems arising when it is

"I don't see any problem with the plea itself, " Hamby said. "The problem I see is the overall inability of psychologists and psychiatrists to agree as to what constitutes legal insanity." Hamby, who said he had great respect for mental health professionals, pointed to the wide variance of opinions concerning insanity.

"I don't know if they can ever settle on insanity." the district attorney said. The use of the insanity plea is "definitely a big problem" for prosecutors and defense attorneys, Hamby said. Placing the responsibility of proving insanity on the defense is important, however, he said "The fact the defense has to prove he's insane is absolutely essential," Hamby said.

Texas law places the burden of proof of insanity on the defense, according to Dr. Charles P. Bubany, professor of criminal law at the University of Texas Tech School of Law Bubany said the defense, in considering an insanity plea, "literally has to prove complete impairment. The law professor, who has taught for 11 years, said the defense is under a "double burden" when using the "Texas law, unlike the law Hinckley was tried under, makes a successful defense much more difficult," Bubany said. "Jurors are suspicious.

A juror also may be predisposed in his opinion concerning insanity, Bubany said.

"Obviously it's going to affect his interpretation of a defendant's conduct," Bubany said. "Some jurors are also suspicious of expert testimony.'

ANOTHER AREA of difficulty with the plea is the definition of insanity itself, Bubany said.

"There's no such thing as an average insane person," Bubany said. "It's difficult for the court to instruct juries for a frame of reference."

A new storm capping a week of fierce floods spread rain and snow from Texas to Maine, and the light freezing rainfall slowed the decline Saturday of bulging rivers in the waterlogged lower Mississippi Valley.

Up to 5 inches of snow fell in Ohio, where five people died in traffic accidents on snow-slick roads.

Illinois Gov. James Thompson, who already has designated 27 counties state disaster areas, on Saturday asked President Reagan to declare 22 of them federal disaster areas

"This is a request for help on behalf of thousands of Illinois citizens whose lives have been disrupted," he said. An estimated 4,500 people remained homeless in Illinois

The week-long flooding caused an estimated $600 million damage in Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas. At one point, up to 35,000 people were homeless. The storms killed 20 people and left three

About 80 miles of the Illinois River, from Grafton to Beardstown, will be closed to navigation indefinitely because of high water, Thompson said. He also said 30 levees had been destroyed.

declared 15 Missouri counties federal disaster areas, making merchants and homeowners eligible for low-interest loans. Twenty-two Missouri counties already had been declared state disaster areas.

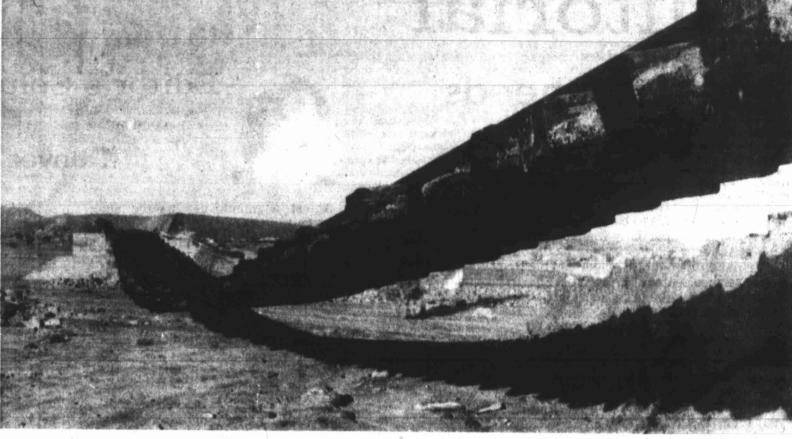

In Arkansas, a National Weather Service spokesman said Saturday's 1 to 2 inches of rainfall would only slow the receding of the Black and the White rivers, which had forced hundreds of people from their homes.

In Clinton, Ark., population 1,284, merchants made the best of the situation by holding flood sales Friday.

'Almost every store has a sale,' said Thomas Love, Van Buren County sheriff's dispatcher in Clinton. Merchants were cutting prices on "everything that was in town that didn't get washed away," he said.

Muddied stereos and shotguns were going for half price, and jeans that normally go for up to $18 were on sale at $10. "Clothes ... have been going pretty good," he said. "People can wash them.

Tab calls Di monster

LONDON (AP) - Buckingham Palace dismissed as "rubbish" Saturday a gossip columnist's claim that Princess Diana had become a spoiled and bossy "little monster" who was making Prince Charles miserable

The accusations by Nigel Dempster, gossip columnist of the Daily Mail, were broadcast on Britain's commercial TV network during a London Weekend Television talk show in which Dempster appeared as a guest.

Dempster's remarks were a tape-recorded version of an interview he gave earlier this month in New York to ABC-TV's "Good Morning America."

The gossip columnist said of Prince Charles's 21-year-old wife: "Diana is very much ruling the roost. She has banished all Charles's friends.

"There is a 13-year age gap (Charles is 34) and now Charles is only able to see her friends who are all in their early 20s.

ANOTHER NEW TAX BILL (Sub-Chapter S Revision Act)

On October 19, 1982, President Reagan signed into law the Sub-Chapter S Revision Act of 1982. Under the new law, small businesses choosing to operate in corporate form for such reasons as limiting liability can now elect to be taxed, for the most part, as a partnership. If you operate your business as a Sub-Chapter S corporation or you are considering making such an election, review the new law with

Some of the changes in the new law include:

1. The permissible number of shareholders is increased from 25 to 35, and while Sub-Chapter S corporations must still have only one class of stock, variations in voting rights are permitted.

2. Under prior law, businesses that had sizeable "passive" income from rents, royalties, dividends, interest, etc. could not elect Sub-S status. Effective for the tax years beginning after 1981, this passive income restriction is eliminated except for those corporations that have earnings that were accumulated during years when the Sub-S election was not in effect. Even for corporations with such accumulated earnings, the passive income rules have been eased considerably.

3. New Sub-Chapter S corporations may elect only a calendar year end unless they can establish a business purpose for selecting a different tax year. This restriction prevents the shareholder from deferring the tax on income from the corporation by electing a corporate year end that differs from his personal year end.

4. Losses that the shareholder cannot deduct in the current tax year because his basis in the corporate stock is too low may now be carried forward to the tax year in which his basis is restored and deducted at that time. Under prior law, losses exceeding basis could not be deducted nor could they be carried

Unless otherwise specified, provisions in the Act will be effective for the tax years beginning after December 31, 1982.

Red Cross needs funds to carry on

The Howard-Glasscock chapter of the American Red Cross is in dire need of funds to carry on its work.

The chapter is partially funded by the United Way, but the amount falls far short of sustaining the chapter enough to meet the demands upon it. No longer can the Red Cross afford an office or service center of its own, but Sharon Nuckolls, executive secretary, is available 24 hours a day to handle any and all emergency calls.

PERHAPS THE PRIME function of the chapter is to serve as go-between for families of people in the service and the various branches of the military. The chapter constantly delivers emergency calls to help service-personnel.

The chapter also is called upon for local disaster work — last year it handled 78 emergency cases, primarily in the Coahoma-Sand Springs area after devastating storms. But the chapter's work doesn't stop at the local level; the chapter also is asked to respond to national disasters such as the recent floods in the midwest. Red Cross aids families who have been forced out of their homes by fire or storm, giving temporary housing, food, clothing, and furnishings.

RED CROSS STILL is a prime trainer in CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation), first aid and water safety. Five veteran teachers are available locally, and more can be furnished if needed.

Red Cross also is a close companion of the Veterans Administration Medical Center, although more volunteers are needed to help the men and women who have given so much to

Mrs. Martha Moody, a Gold Star mother, has helped the VA Hospital for years. She says, "It has been my privilege to work for 27 years as a volunteer for our chapter, and I know of the chapter's urgent need for help. In fact, as a young woman, I got to help Red Cross during World War I and again in World War II. I hope that in closing your giving for the year, you'll send a generous check to Red Cross, Box 1970, Big Spring, Texas 79720."

Around the Rim

By CAROL DANIEL

Sometimes I wonder how all ferent my life would be if I'd attended college in the 60s. It seemed that being in your 20s then meant being able to experiment, explore fantasies and try out new roles.

Becoming a successful doctor or teacher was not nearly so important as "doing your own thing" - chopping wood in Oregon, becoming a puppeteer, baking bread. Young people worked at what they wanted to do rather than shaping themselves to compete for the career slots already available.

Although some people who reected the normal routes got lost in their trails, many eventually returned to graduate school or traditional jobs. And they returned richer for their detours. They often excelled in their chosen fields because they knew what they wanted. They had had the time to try different dreams and decide which ones to pursue.

TODAY LIFE is very different. Young women and men dressed in conservative gray suits devour books on success and how to attain it. Their consuming desire is to take hold of the adult world, to Get In. And pursuing a traditional career with a well defined success structure often seems a sure way to fill

I've occasionally yearned to have my life programmed ahead of time. And the current tight economy makes this desire seem even more imperative since studies show that the glut of talented young professionals will make it more difficult than ever to advance to top posi-tions. The competition is so intense it no longer seems practical to flounder, to test different visions, to revise plans and start again.

Though getting ahead — the faster the better — may sound practical, it may not be. In pushing so hard, some may be strait-jacketing themselves into a conventional life while their dreams and talents lie elsewhere. They may also risk never developing the most important thing they'll need for success: flexibility.

AT A TIME when technological change renders jobs obsolete, when many face career burnout and when our personal lives are more unpredictable than ever, we need to know the range of our talents.

And, if you want only certainty leaving nothing to serendipity, luck or the gradual evolution of purpose through experience - you may ironically sabotage your own ambitions.

After all, if the artist Paul Gauguin had stuck to his first career choice — a stock broker the world would have lost several Tahitian landscapes. If the British writer George Bernard Shaw had stayed in business, the world would have lost a major playwright. Some of the greatest achievements have come about because the creators abandoned their original life plans and explored new territory. We all need to take time to test our dreams and explore our fantasies, or at least leave ourselves open to new options that may come

Denver Pettitt on my mind

Amost a month has passed since Denver Pettitt died. I hardly knew the gentleman, and yet I felt I knew him

I had assigned and edited stories about him when I worked at The Abilene Reporter-News. And when I came to Big Spring, I had inquired about him and learned that he was still making his famous violins.

But it was by accident that I met him.

ONE DAY LAST YEAR. Giles Padel of San Antonio, training director for Harte-Hanks Communications, was at the Herald to conduct a supervisory development course.

When the session broke up at noon, Giles invited me to lunch so we could discuss a new corporate project. We went to eat at Herman's, which was so crowded we had to sit at the lunch counter.

E VETROIT FREE PRESS

PLAINS.GEORGIA

EXT PRESIDENT

Then Giles and I plunged into a discussion, but after about two minutes, we were interrupted by a man sitting next to us.

"Who are you?"

Giles told him, and introductions were made. The man was Mr. Pettitt.

"What do you do?" he asked. Giles told him and then responded in kind, "What do you do?

That was the last I ever heard of the corporate project, because for the next hour Mr. Pettitt held us spellbound with his life story.

He said he could make a violin out of any type of wood, even mesquite stump. And he said he could make a violin very quickly, but he had learned it was best to stretch out an order for several weeks or months, because people might not think it was a very good violin if it could be made very quickly.

He seemed to be a very wise old man, and yet he also seemed young and hip. He was definitely my kind of person. He had character.

I HAVE A STUNNING POLITICAL BOMBSHELL. I'D LIKE TO DROP, YALL.

He's the one who said, on learning that I was taking Tommy Hart's place at the paper, "No sir. She'll make her own place, and she'll do well, but she'll never take Tommy Hart's place."

IN ONE OF LIFE'S never-ending ironies, Mr. Pettitt died the same week his granddaughter Toni was to be married. At the Herald office, the task fell to Carol Hart to call the family to see if the wedding announcement should still be run in Sunday's paper.

Patsy Pettitt, her voice cracking with emotion, told Carol that her daughter's wedding was still on. "That was one of the last things that Pop said, that he wanted the wedding to go on."

Yes, that was the way he was. May he rest in peace.

Billy Graham

Why shouldn't I kill myself?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My life is a shambles, and I'm about ready to take my own life. Why shouldn't I, when there seems to be no hope? - hope you will take them both very seriously. In the first place, your letter suggests to me that you have never given much thought to your relationship with God. I must warn you very frankly that if you were to take your own life right now it would not be the end of your problems. Instead, you would go out into eternity without God and without hope. Although many jokes are made about hell, it is a reality that is terrible and it would grieve me for you to do something which would affect you for all eternity in

But the second thing I want to say is that there can be hope for the future with God. I know you feel there is no hope — and there may not be, humanly speaking. But with God things can be different. God is deeply concerned about you, and he wants to help you deal with the problems you face. I suspect your life is a shambles because you have turned your back on God and chosen to set your own course in life. Keeping on that same path won't solve anything — but turning to God can.

How will God help you? First, he can take away the burden of guilt and shame that I suspect is weighing upon you. How much does God love you and want to forgive you? He loves you so much that he sent his Son to die on the cross for our sins. Open your heart to him and let him cleanse you and make you his child by faith.

Then God can help you by showing you that there is hope for the future. There is hope now, and there is hope in eternity when those who know Christ have the joy of Heaven. This doesn't mean that all problems will vanish all at once, but it does mean God will give you a new strength and a new courage to face each day walking with him.

Make a new start today - not by just turning over a new leaf or somehow hoping things will get better, but by turning your life over to Christ. "Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; the old has gone, the new has come!" (2 Corinthians 5:17). This can be your experience as you come to know Christ in a personal way.

MX today, ABM tomorrow?

President Reagan's decision to deploy the MX missile in a "densepack" basing scheme has opened the latest and, we might hope, last chapter in the story of a misbegotten missile. The plan is bad enough on its own merits, requiring huge expenditures that will probably solve nothing. But even worse is that just beyond the MX looms the prospect of the ABM. The United States scrapped the ABM - anti-ballistic missile after signing a 1972 treaty with the Soviets. That followed years of fruitless effort to produce one that would do what it was supposed to, namely shoot down attacking ICBMs. The ABM was originally designed to protect American cities from a nuclear attack by China (yes, China), but later was given the task of defending our land-based missiles from a Soviet first strike. The treaty signed by President Nixon killed development of the new weapon by either side, though each was allowed to defend one site with an ABM. It is one Soviet-American treaty that has worked. The administration apparently concedes as much: Reagan reportedly has decided to renew it for another five years.

But if he gets his way, this will most likely be the last renewal. Reagan had already asked for a big increase in spending for ABM research and development. His defense secretary had barely taken office before he raised the idea of junking the treaty.

THE DENSE-PACK scheme, which relies on Soviet missiles blowing each other up, is only a stopgap. The administration worries the Soviets will be able to counter it by any number of means, such as using warheads that penetrate the earth before detonating. Last week Reagan also asked for $2.5 billion to speed search on the ABM. A Pentagon official told the influential magazine Aviation Week & Space Technology that an ABM to proect the MX will be needed sometime in the 1990s.

But the arguments against the ABM (or BMD, for ballistic missile defense) are as persuasive now as they were in 1972. The strongest is that it won't work. The technology required to do what amounts to shooting down a bullet with a bullet is still nowhere in sight.

As Fred Kaplan, a former defense aide to Rep. Les Aspin (D-Wis.), noted in the Atlantic magazine last year, there are several ways for the Soviets to neutralize a ballistic missile defense. They could launch thousands of decoy warheads, explode a large nuclear weapon in space, or fly missiles on crossing trajectories - any of which would hopelessly confuse the tracking

Another Soviet option is to use sea-launched missiles, which the ABM radar couldn't detect. Or they could simply saturate the defenses by adding more warheads. "As long as the Soviets keep competing, as long as they try to befuddle our efforts (just as we try to befuddle theirs), the chances of a 'satisfactory' ballistic missile defense re-main very slim,'' concluded

It may be that the ABM, with all its flaws, would still increase Soviet doubts about their ability to knock out our ICBMs. And deterrence is based on that kind of uncertainty. But the cost is very high for a small improvement. In addition to the $26 billion required to deploy the MX in the dense-pack, a ballistic missile defense would cost an estimated $9 billion to $12 billion.

Did victory spoil Texas Democrats?

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - It seems reasonable that the Democratic sweep of the November election would portend great unity of purpose in Texas politics in general and in the 1983 Legislature in particular. But remember that reason seldom touches our state's political process.

United as seldom seen in recent years, the Democrats last month ousted a rich and smart Republican incumbent governor, dashed the over-ambitious dreams of other GOP statewide candidates and reduced the number of Republicans in the Texas Legislature despite a GOPsupported 1981 redistricting plan.

So, now will the victors settle down to running state government in harmony? Don't count on it.

For one thing, except during elections, party labels mean little in Texas. Goodol'-boy friendships and loyalty to a common philosophical or special-interest cause count for much more.

Conservatives and liberals in the majority party hung together in the general election because they needed each other, and such alliances of convenience seldom last

Despite sounding like a populist during the campaign, Mark White basically is an establishment conservative. Since his Republican opponent sewed up much of the money and power of the traditional conservative establishment, White had to broaden his appeal to win.

Thus, he and several clearly liberal statewide Democratic candidates marched through the campaign arm-in-arm.

But now White is being openly courted by those same conservatives who unwisely put their money on Clements. They have lots of money left, and White has a huge campaign debt. Thus are old friendships quickly renewed.

Now those old liberal ballot-mates are potential challengers in future Democratic primaries. Thus are new friendships quickly dissolved.

In the Texas Legislature, party labels mean even less. The test in the House is whether you're on the speaker's team.

During the fall campaign, for example, Rep. Gib Lewis, the Fort Worth Democrat who already has enough pledges to win the speakership in January, was special guest at an appreciation gala in Big Spring for Rep. Jerry Cockerham of Monahans.

Not only is Cockerham a Republican, but Big Spring is the hometown of his Democratic opponent, Rep. Larry Don

Cockerham, like Lewis, has been a loyal player on the team of current Speaker Bill Clayton.

Shaw has been so independent that every redistricting plan the team devised 'ast year paired him with a House incumbent in hopes of defeating him. It didn't work. In the 1983 session, Shaw will continue his independent course and Cockerham will be back home in Monahans.

The really interesting partisan situation will be in the Texas Senate, where Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby presides.

Hobby, like Clayton, has usually paid more attention to personal loyalty than to party label when exercising his vast powers, such as committee appointments.

The over-confident and cocky Republicans pushed him around in the Redistricting process last year, or, rather, he let them apparently in hopes of heading off a strong GOP challenge to another fouryear term. But Clements' secretary of state, George Strake, filed against Hobby and took a significant amount of conservative support with him.

In a joint appearance before Houston business leaders last summer, Hobby suddenly found former hometown friends cheering for the challenger. Even though Hobby easily won re-election, he still may find it difficult to crawl in bed with the Republican-conservative Democrat coalition when redistricting and other key partisan issues come up in the 1983 session.

GOP takes aim at Rep. Coleman

Republican Executive Committee decided Saturday to pursue criminal charges against Ron Coleman, an El Paso Democrat elected to the U.S. House in November.

Coleman defeated Republican Pat Hag-gerty to succeed U.S. Rep. Richard White, D-El Paso. The day before the election, 41,581 copies of a letter - on White's letterhead, purportedly signed by White endorsing Coleman — went out to potential voters. White endorsed Coleman and had

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The State authorized him to use his name in his campaign, but said he wrote no letter. Coleman has said he knew nothing about the letter.

Chet Upham, state GOP chairman. recommended Saturday that lawyers for the party ask the El Paso district attorney's office to look into the matter as a possible violation of state election law.

Gene Hightower, an SREC member from Van, said the committee approved Upham's recommendation during a closed-door session Saturday

Cockerham spent $65,000 in loss to Shaw

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In the battle between legislative incumbents Jerry Cockerham and Larry Don Shaw, Cockerham won a financial victory, but not the House District 69 seat both coveted.

Cockerham, R-Monahans, reported in his final campaign finance statement filed with the secretary of state raising $67,084 and spending $65,097 during the election year.

Shaw, the Big Spring Democrat who garnered more votes in the November election, reported election year contributions of $64,767 with expenses of $62,342.

Cockerham and Shaw, both freshman legislators during the 1981 Legislature, were paired in the same legislative district during redistricting.

In Cockerham's final report, which covered the period between Oct. 24 and Dec. 2, he reported contributions of $13,236 and expenses of $19,355. Almost half Cockerham's contribution total, $6,984, were the result of personal loans from himself to the campaign. In earlier reports, Cockerham lent his campaign $12,450, all but $4,052 of which has since been repaid.

Cockerham's largest contributions came from Republican sources. He reported receiving $1,000 contributions from the Texas Republican Campaign Committee and the Associated Republicans of Texas, both Austin-

Other contributions reported by Cockerham included: $500 from a life underwriters political action committee (PAC); $300 each from Curley Beard and Mr. and Mrs. B.R. Watson, both of Monahans, and PACs representing mortgage bankers and insurance representatives. His largest expenditures during the reporting period, a total $7,026, went for advertising expenses.

Shaw, in his final report covering the period between Oct. 24 and Nov. 27, reported contributions of $18,589 and expenses of $19,633.

He also reported a total of $8,900 in loans--$5,000 from himself, $3,000 from Tom Roden of Odessa and $900 from Thomas F. Kennedy of Cypress.

Shaw's list of contributors was peppered with PAC contributions, including: $1,300 from the AFL-CIO's state political fund; $1,000 from the Transportation Political Education League of Cleveland, Ohio; $750 from the Communications Workers of America; $500 each from the Texas Political Legislative Committee, United Food and Commercial Workers Active Ballot Club of Washington, D.C., engineers, trial lawyers and truckers; $300 each from manufactured homes representatives, private schools, railroad engineers; and $250 each from mortgage bankers, consulting engineers, a pro-horse raising lobby and a PAC identified as Tex-Aid of Austin.

White raises over $1 million to cover debt

DALLAS (AP) Gov.-elect Mark White capped a five-city fundraising tour with a $1,000-per-plate gala here that filled the Democrat's campaign coffers with enough to cover most of what remained from his $3 million debt.

Jess Hay, who organized the Dallas affair Friday night at the Apparel Mart, said at least $1.3 million was collected from the "pre-Inaugural Ball" enough to retire most, if not all, of White's campaign debt. The 1,300 people attending the Dallas affair, many draped in minks or sporting Stetsons, heard White pledge to make public education his highest priority.

'I haven't seen so many minks since my wife and I went to New York," White quipped.

14 questions about gas tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are some frequently asked questions about the motor fuel tax legislation expected to be approved by Congress next week: Q: What taxes are being increased and by how

A: Federal taxes on gasoline and diesel fuel will increase by 5 cents to 9 cents a gallon. It has been at 4 cents a gallon since 1959

Q: Will anything esle be increased?

A: Highway use fees will increase sharply for operators of heavy over-the-road tractor trailers. Excise taxes on new trucks also will increase from 10 to 12

Q: Must everyone pay the additional fuel tax? A: Almost everyone. Bus operators, including intercity bus lines and school buses, are exempt. Taxicab operators, who are exempt from the current 4 cent tax, will have the pay the new 5-cent tax.

The users of gasohol also will get a break. The Senate wants to exempt them altogether, but the House version of the legislation limits their tax to 5 cents a gallon. Q: When will the new taxes and fees go into effect?

A: April 1, 1983 for the new gasoline and diesel fuel tax. The new fees on heavy trucks would begin Jan. 1, 1984 with the Senate calling for a gradual rise and the House calling for an immediate boost. Q: What will the new taxes cost motorists? A: The Transportation Department estimates the annual gasoline costs for a typical automobile driver will increase by $30. The trucking industry says various tax and fee increase the costs of operating a typical 18-wheel tractor-trailer from about $1,700 to

Q: What road taxes will truckers have to pay? A: The current $210 a year highway use fee for heavy trucks increase sharply - to a maximum of $2,000 in the House version to $1,600 in the Senate bill.

Q: Does this apply to all trucks?

A: It applies to most trucks weighing 33,000 pounds or more, with the amounts increasing with weight. Trucks that travel less than 2,500 highway miles (5,000 in the Senate version) are exempt. That would apply to most farm vehicles, logging trucks and mining vehicles

What does the trucking industry get in return? A: The right to use larger, heavier trucks nationwide. The legislation requires states to allow twin trailers, although 14 states, primarily in the Northeast, now prohibit them.

It also requires that truck widths be increased from 96 to 102 inches. Minimum weight ceilings would be increased to 80,000 pounds nationwide, meaning the elimination of lower weight ceilings in three so-called "barrier states" -- Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas.

Q: How much revenue will be produced and where will it go? A: The Transportation Department estimates the new tax will produce $5.5 billion a year. By law, 80 percent of the money must be used for highway and bridge repair and construction. The rest will go for capital improvements for mass transit systems.

Q: How will the money be distributed?
A: The amount going to each state will be based on formulas established by Congress. The distribution will depend on a variety of factors including highway miles, population, and volume of highway travel.

Congress is divided on what factors should be given greatest emphasis. The House tends to emphasize benefitting the East and Midwest. The Senate would give greater emphasis to highway miles, which would benefit rural areas, particularly the West. Final formulas will be worked out in a House-Senate conference committee, but probably will follow the pattern now used by the government. Q: How quickly could funds begin to be distributed?

A: The Transportation Department says project money could be made available almost immediately since the Highway Trust Fund has money available that later would be replaced by the new taxes. The department says $3 billion could be obligated to new projects within 90 days.

Q: Will some states pay more taxes than they receive in federal money

A: Most states will collect more highway money than they pay in fuel taxes, a few break even and the rest - those with large populations and a wellestablished Interstate system — will pay more taxes than they get back.

To blunt criticism from the states that pay more than they receive, Congress has agreed to require that every state get back at least 85 percent of its tax contribution.

Q: How serious are the highway and bridge repair and mass transit problems?

A: The government estimates 10 percent of the Interstate system needs immediate resurfacing and twothirds will need major work in the next 12 years. About 40 percent of the bridges are approaching their useful design life and 68,000 are considered structurally unsound or obsolete, including some in major cities. Highway and bridge repair costs have been estimated as high was $225 billion over the next dozen years.

Urban rail and bus transit systems will need $50 billion over the next 10 years for upkeep and repair. One of every five mass transit rail cars is more than 25 years old and two-thirds of the tracks need renovation. Q: Are there assurances that money will be directed to the areas of greatest need?

A: Except in the case of bridges, the distribution formulas do not directly take into account repair needs. However, whatever tends to direct larger amounts of money toward cities and states that have the oldest highway and mass transit systems would generally help those generally in greatest need of repair.

Federal officials say priorities on construction proects will be set by the states except in the case of the Interstate system.

Reagan urges Senate approval of MX

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan urged the Senate on Saturday to vote for production funds for the MX missile and worry later about the "basing mode" for the nuclear weapons — how and where they will be based. Sounding conciliatory as he faces a crucial Senate vote this week, the president used his weekly radio broadcast to lobby for a "clear, positive" outcome and to accuse the House of cutting MX production funds last week without really considering the facts." "The basing mode is not an issue," Reagan said in the five-minute broadcast from his mountaintop retreat at Camp David, Md.

"There's plenty of time to decide on that," he said. "What we need now is a clear, positive vote on the missile itself, to go forward on production of the missile.

In a Democratic Party response broadcast later, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina, accused the president of pushing for an "unconscionable" increase in military spending while cutting funds for social programs.

"You may prefer to buy MX missiles with red ink rather than school lunches with red ink - but the ink is just as red," Hollings said. The president is mounting an all-out campaign to convince the Senate to vote his way. On Friday, during an Oval Office news conference, Reagan accused House opponents of the MX of "unfairly" building their arguments around the basing mode instead of discussing the need for the missile itself.

By a surprisingly large 69-vote margin, the House deleted money from a defense spending bill Tuesday to build the first five MX missiles. Reagan hopes to convince the House to reverse its vote after the Senate acts.

The controversial dense-pack plan Reagan favors calls for missiles to be deployed in silos spaced closely together in Wyoming. It was initially opposed by most of the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and is the target of widespread skepticism in Congress

Recognizing this, Reagan said he was willing to review the basing mode with Congress

But in the meantime, the president insisted production of the MX — which he has named the Peacekeeper — is necessary to modernize the U.S. land-based nuclear forces and to induce the Soviets to negotiate nuclear arms

Cataloguer Last week in my article I wrote about some of the mysteries we've received. We at The Howard County Library don't want you Western fans to feel left out, so this time I'll report on some of the new Westerns we have.

Terrell L. Bowers has written "Banyon's Law." After Mace Banyon is fired from his job as deputy U.S. Marshall, he moves to Oasis, Calif., where he has a new peaceful job managing a group of tenant farmers. What he doesn't know till he rides into town is the sharedcroppers are Chinese, and they are resented by their unfriendly neighbors.

Mace finds himself caught between the hostile townsmen, led by a land-grabbing banker, and the almost defenseless Chinese. A drought and an approaching crop failure add to Mace Banyon's troubles.

Ray Hogan, who has written over 100 books, has just finished another one titled, "The Renegade Gun." John Cameron was sent to prison unjustly and after he's released on parole he decides to come back to Wolf Springs to regain his land, girl and cattle. The townsfolk were not very pleased to see him return because they were under Sid Mason's

Sid has plans to make the whole valley his own private domain, no matter how he has to do it. Cameron hopes that some of the independent ranchers will throw in with him to stop Sid Mason. Regardless of what help he gets, Cameron's purpose is clear, he has a score to settle and he will see it through — to the bloody end.

Another new Western is "Match Race" by Fred Grove. Quarter horse racing was a great challenge that few men in the Old West could resist. Dude McQuinn, Coyete Walker and Uncle Billy Lockhart were no exception as they rode from town to town matching and trading racehorses. Uncle Billy is very pleased with himself when he cunningly trades a horse with the heaves for one that is in good shape.

Cleaver) and Jerry Mathers (as The Beaver) pose during filming of an upcoming TV special "Still The Beaver" in Los Angeles Friday.

The show is scheduled to air early next year.

There's just one problem, which Uncle Billy finds out after it's too late: The horse is blind. This is quite a disgrace since Uncle Billy is such a great horsetrader. Dude figures the only way to restore Uncle Billy's pride and spirits is to match a race.

But there is something else on his mind, which might have something to do with the man in the black bowler hat who keeps showing up at every town the trio rides into. Does he have something to do with Uncle Billy's past that he doesn't want revealed? You'll have to read the bookd to find out.

We've also received a number of paperbacks in a series called "Longarm" written by Tabor Evans. Longarm is a marshall in Wyoming and every gunman there fears him.

Seniors hold Civics Debate

Politics was the name of the game this week (and we have not even had class favorite elections yet). Nonetheless, the seniors held the long awaited Civics Debate before the high school audience. The topic was the ever so crucial issue of nuclear weapons. Heading up the con side of the issue was none other than that war loving militarist Staci Wilkerson. Aside from the scattered shooting incidents and the obscene name calling, most members of the captive audience agreed it was an overwhelming success.

In a related story, well it's sorta related...don't bother asking how, the ag class took a field trip to San Angelo. We would gladly inform you of the trip but we do not know why they went, when they went or for that matter if they even came back. No, Mrs. Greenwood d not sponsor this trip, lucky for her! Any chance the Seniors had of reaching their financial goal was shot to pieces at the Garden City basketball tournament. No, this does not mean there was a poor fan turn out, but instead sounds of crunching were audible from behind the concession stand counter as seniors made every effort to eat their profits. Bills for the seniors were run so high, that sponsor Thom Vines has outlined a lay-a-way plan for the indebted (and overweight) class of 83. At least some of the girls got a chance to run off some of the excess weight as the Bearkat women secured a second place showing on Saturday night the 4th.

If the news of obese seniors is not bad enough, campus life was further uprooted when the depressing news was revealed that the library was closed. Librarian, Emma Schafer, found herself in the midst of throngs of mourning students who were pleading for a chance at enhancement of education over the Christmas holidays. Aside from the many tears, heartaches, and hunger strikes, several violent 7th grade students laid siege upon the library. At present, they have yet to issue their list of demands which is sure to include reduced library fines. Regardless, Mrs. Schafer has barred the doors until school reopens in January. Until next time, remember, We Shall Overcome!

Keeping up with the Joneses is thing of past for consumers

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Don't just catch up with the Joneses, the automobile ad said, "pass them." The ad seemed to be from another decade, because many Americans now seem happy to just keep pace with the other guy. Consumers in the 1980s have learned to understand limitations, and anyone with a pencil in his or her hand can immediately draw up a list of them Big, heavier, more luxurious cars became unaffordable, especially after OPEC raised oil prices, so cars shrank. New houses, which had been growing in square footage and rooms in the 1970s, have followed the exact same course. The eating of lean red meat, attendance at Ivy League colleges, the power of the bureaucracy, the spending ability of the federal government, wage and profit increases, fringe benefits, Social Security - all reached limits. With all this happening, there is little question that the American dream might also have reached its limits, temporarily however, because U.S. history shows that while imagination can be depressed for a while it cannot be killed. But quickly advancing on Americans is a limitation they may not be prepared to accept, individually or collectively. It is the limitation on health care that seems to be ordained by the inability to keep health

If there is any area in which people are inclined to say damn the costs, spend whatever is needed, this may be it. Life itself is involved. How do you tell a family that mother can be saved but that it isn't worth

"We're at a crossroads in this country," says Dr. William R. Fifer, University of Minnesota professor of medicine and public health. "What we're able to do medically exceeds what we're able to afford.'

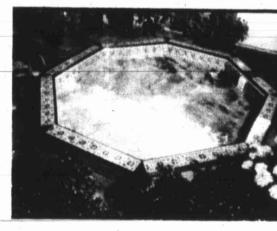

Others in medicine, including a former head of the American Hospital Association, have said essentially the same thing before. In fact, discussion of the subject is frequent in medical and hospital circles

The answer to high costs was relatively easy when it involved outer space and the knowledge that technology and curiosity could carry the nation much further into that realm. With great disappointment, the nation said no.

It has never been able to give a sustained "no" to health care spending.

By 1970 the health care percentage of gross national product had risen to 7.5 percent. By 1980 it was up to 9.5 percent, based on expenditures of $249 billion.

CHICAGO (AP) — Jurors on Saturday began deliberating charges that Teamsters President Roy L. Williams, head of the nation's largest labor union, conspired with four other men to bribe a U.S. senator.

The six men and six women listened for more than an hour to U.S. District Judge Prentice Marshall read 49 pages of instructions.

In his order, Marshall told the jurors they can replay any of the FBI-intercepted conversations presented during the trial. Defense attorneys had objected to allowing the jury to have the tapes during deliberations, arguing it would create undue emphasis on the tapes as evidence.

The 50 conversations, culled from 14 months of FBI surveillance — the longest court-approved action in government history - are the heart of the government's case against the five defendants.

Williams and the four others were accused of conspiring to bribe U.S. Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., by offering him exclusive rights to buy a choice piece of Teamster-owned property in Las Vegas at a bargain price in return for the senator's help in defeating trucking deregulation legislation.

Defense attorneys argued that the union simply had attempted to give Cannon "a fair shot" at purchasing the land. They said the defendants acted to assure that the senator was "treated fairly and properly," but that there was no attempt to bribe him.

Cannon, who was not charged in the case, testified as a defense witness and denied he had been offered or accepted any bribe

The deregulation bill passed in 1980 with Cannon's support. He was defeated for re-election last month. The other defendants are Alan Dorfman, former consultant to the Teamsters Central States Pension Fund; Thomas O'Malley, a trustee to the pension fund; Andrew Massa, a former trustee; and Joseph Lombardo, reputed Chicago crime syndicate figure. The 11-count indictments handed down in May 1981 charged the five wire fraud, conspiracy and interstate travel to further bribery.

On one of the tapes, William Webbe, an unindicted co-conspirator testifying under a grant of immunity, was heard talking about a Jan. 10, 1979, meeting attended by Williams, Dorfman and Cannon. Prosecutors alleged that Dorfman and Williams believed they had cut a deal with the senator at that meeting.

In that wiretapped conversation, Webbe said he recalled Williams telling Cannon "you take care of your end and we'll take care of ours" at that meeting. Webbe testified, however, that he was lying in that conversation and was only trying to impress his boss, Webbe's trial testimony contradicted his grand jury statement, and prompted a stern warning from Marshall that he could face possible perjury charges.

Williams was the only defendant to take the stand in his own defense and his testimony was highlighted by what Marshall later described as an "incredible lack

HIGH LEVEL DISCUSSIONS — United Auto Workers another UAW vice president, prepares to address the President Douglas Fraser talks with Owen Bieber Chrysler Council Saturday morning

UAW: Chrysler contract okay

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Union leaders from Chrysler Corp. plants in the United States and Canada voted overwhelmingly Saturday to recommend ratification of contracts that would raise production workers' annual wages more than $2,000.

"I'm very, very confident the agreement will be ratified ... by a comfortable margin," said United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser.

Ten thousand Canadian autoworkers went on strike Nov. 5 after Chrysler refused their demand for an immediate pay raise. About 43,200 U.S. autoworkers had rejected a similar tentative contract, but voted to remain on the job and resume negotiations.

Fraser said all but three members of the 140-member U.S. Chrysler Council voted to recommend that autoworkers ratify their contract. Hours earlier, Canadian UAW leaders voted unanimously to recommend that striking Canadian workers ratify

Work on the new tentative contracts was completed Friday after economic agreements were reached a

The pacts offer Canadian and U.S. workers their first pay raises and cost-of-living allowances since the workers gave up both in 1979 contracts to help the company stave off bankruptcy.

U.S. workers will get 75 cents more per hour immediately, with cost of living boosts in 1983 estimated to add another 64 cents an hour

That will increase worker wages by $1.39 an hour, or $2,270 by the time the U.S. pact expires Jan. 14, 1984. The Canadian pact expires on the same date. However, Canadians, who are living with a 10 percent inflation rate versus about 5 percent in the United States, will get an immediate pay raise of about $1.15 in Canadian currency

That will boost Canadian autoworkers' average wage to $10.21 per hour in Canadian currency, equivalent to about $8.27 in U.S. money

Canadian workers also will receive 64 cents in cost of-living payments over the next year. Two ratification votes in Canada were held Saturday with the largest locals to vote Sunday. UAW officials said results would be released Sunday and they expected the strikers back at work Monday

"We couldn't be more pleased," said Joan McLellan, who has worked at Chrysler's Ajax, Ontario, trim plant for 21 years. She voted yes.

"We wouldn't have got what we got if we didn't strike," she said. Steve Czypyha, an office worker at the Ajax plant for 11 years, said: "I think it's a very good contract. It's a little more than I expected.

U.S. workers, including 42,200 on indefinite layoff, will be able to vote Friday and office and clerical workers may vote Thursday. Chrysler gains language allowing frequently absent autoworkers to be penalized.

Rule changes could benefit O'Neill's pull

WASHINGTON (AP) - When the new Congress convenes in January, rule changes pushed by Democrats could make House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. the most powerful congressional leader in years. Republicans are objecting but are probably powerless to do much about it.

A GOP statement says the proposed rules would "muzzle" the House, but the Democrats - with 269 members in the 435-seat House - are confident that come January the changes will be adopted pretty much along party lines. The new rules, agreed to by the House Democratic Caucus in four days of closed-door meetings last week,

 Restrict the use of major spending bills as vehicles for amendments that withhold public funds for specific purposes, such as government-financed abortions or enforcement of school busing orders.

• Enable leaders to keep controversial constitutional amendements bottled up in committee, by increasing from 218 to 290 the number of signatures needed on a "discharge petition" for bringing such proposals directly to the floor.

• Allow the speaker to deny members the right to demand time-consuming roll call votes - often used as a parlimentary delaying tactic — on certain routine housekeeping measures like approval of the previous day's journal • Impose stricter rules of party loyalty, including banning Democrats from campaigning for Republicans and subjecting members who contemplate a party switch to loss of committee seats. The net effect of these and other rules changes approved by the Democrats would be to conslidate far more power in the office of the speaker, closing off or restricting routes that the minority Republicans now have in influencing floor debate. The caucus is also expected to vote next month to expel Rep. Phil Gramm, D-Texas, from the House

Budget Committee for his outspoken advocacy of President Reagan's economic programs — a move Gramm claims could have a chilling effect on all other party conservatives as well. The chairman of the caucus, Rep. Gillis Long of Lousiana, said of the proposed changes: "All we are trying to do is to make the institution operate a little more

Republicans, however, don't see it that way. The new rules "muzzle the membership," House GOP leaders protested in a joint statement issued by the office of Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill. 'These new rules extend years of steady and systematic assaults on free and open debate and the right of the minority in the House," the statement said. The rules changes adopted by the Democratic caucus must be approved by the full 435-member

House in January.

Attiticial heart section and spurs controversy

By The Associated Press

A week after the first permanent implant of an artificial heart into the chest of a human, a medical debate has erupted about using such a device on anything but a temporary basis.

Dr. Denton Cooley, the surgeon who first placed an artificial heart in a patient in 1968, said Friday at a news conference in Houston that the mechanical device is impractical for permanent use until it can contain its own power source: Cooley, of the Texas Heart Institute, pointed to a four-foot console and identified it as the unit needed to drive the pneumatically powered artificial heart. "You can tell by that the impractical nature of long-term support on a totally artificial heart," he said. "It remains to be seen whether he's correct or we're correct," responded Dr. Chase Peterson, vice president for health sciences at the University of Utah, where patient Barney B. Clark has entered his second week of life on a mechanical heart.

Cooley said technology is not far enough advanced to justify permanent mechanical heart transplants. He compared it to putting "John Glenn in a rocket in 1950 and aiming him at the moon. Responded Peterson: "He's said that on certain programs since this procedure and before. And that's an honorable position; people differ on these proposals.' Doctors at the University of Utah have defended the use of the Jarvik-7 mechanical heart for patients such as Clark, who suffer from terminal diseases and for whom a human transplant is impractical. Clark is too old for the leading anti-rejection drug, cyclosporine, which federal guidelines say can only be given to patients under 50.

Nobel prize winner blasts superpower cult of violence

Prize winner Alva Myrdal bitterly attacked the United States and the Soviet Union Saturday, saying they have created a "cult of violence" that threatens global war and breeds urban crime.

In an impassioned address, the 80-yearold veteran disarmament campaigner also called for an international peace conference in 1983.

"There is no doubt that what the superpowers are now planning, and in which they are investing billions, is precisely the preparation for waging war," Mrs. Myrdal said in her Nobel lecture.

'The age in which we live can only be described as one of barbarism," she said. "Our civilization is in the process not only of being militarized, but also being brutalized.

NATO facing decisive year

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization is gearing up for a crucial year which could lead to heavy rearming in Western Europe with modern American missiles, or in the best of worlds, none of these missiles and a sharp cutback in Soviet nuclear forces.

The United States is attempting to keep its nervous European allies on a firm course toward deployment of the American rockets as the only effective way to force the Soviets to dismantle their missiles aimed at Western Europe.

This brinkmanship tactic is centered on President Reagan's so-called "zero-zero option" which says if the Russians pull down their sophisticated SS-20 missiles and two other types, NATO will scrap plans to install 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles by the end of

Reagan's option is on the table at Geneva but so far has not been picked up by Soviet arms reduction America is attempting to assure its allies that they must remain determined to accept the missiles, despite new stirrings of the peace movement which fears the American rockets would attract Soviet retaliation like a cataclysmic lightning rod.

In recent weeks there have been renewed signs that Western Europe may be blinking at the crucial choice. The Parliament in Denmark, which is not one of the countries designated to receive the American missiles, voted to delay payments into a NATO fund for setting up the rockets

And the Parliament in Norway, which had been asked only to help with the installation costs, passed with just a one-vote margin a government bill to go ahead with the funding.

Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands are the countries where the cruise and Pershing missiles are to be deployed.

These governments, at the NATO foreign ministers' meeting here this week, reaffirmed the decision to accept the American missiles, but whether all of them will hold fast during the coming year may be in doubt.

An added factor which may add to the difficulties is the House of Representatives vote on Tuesday refusing $988 million in funds for production of the first five MX intercontinental nuclear missiles.

appeals court in Washington, D.C., denied a request from three other railroads to delay the consolidation on the grounds that it would hurt competition in the West, but continued the stay to allow the opponents to appeal to the Supreme Court. Five railroads also have appealed to the Interstate Commerce

The venture has been described as 'a fundamental reordering and modernization of the rail industry'

It has won government permission to merge with two other Western railroads in a union that would create a 22,800-mile system serving 21 states from Puget Sound to the Gulf Coast.

The consolidation of the Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific and Western Pacific would be the third largest railroad in the nation by track mileage and the second largest by revenue. In 1981, the three railroads had combined revenues of $4.2 billion and a total profit of $345 million.

Under the proposal, the Western Pacific is to become a division of the Union Pacific. The three will be managed by a new entity, Pacific Rail Systems Inc., to be headed by Union Pacific President John

THIS PAST Thursday, a federal Commission to reverse its approval of the merger.

The venture has been described by Reginald E. Gilliam Jr., vice chairman of the commission, as "a fundamental reordering and modernization of the railroad industry."

The ICC approved the merger Sept. 13 on a 5-1 vote and gave final approval Oct. 20.

"This merger is an affirmation of the national consensus for reduced railroad regulation and increased private seector initiative," Gilliam wrote in the commission's decision. "The clear message of this decision is that the transportation industry is undergoing a fundamental change and the era of total coordinated transportation networks has arrived."

THE NEW ROAD, which likely will be headquartered in Omaha, will create 237 new jobs.

"Eventually this will all fall into place," Kenefick predicts. "We believe the ICC decision is a good decision. We have responded to the challenges and are pretty optimistic nothing significant will

Approval of the proposed merger was announced almost exactly two years from the initial filing by the three railroads.

The ICC was applauded by industry leaders for its quick handling of the 819-page decision that came from an application of 5,000 pages. It took a boxcar-and-a-half of paper to print 700 copies of the application. More than 800 exhibits were presented at ICC hearings, recorded on 26,000 pages of transcript.

The ICC's speedy decision was a contrast to the agonizing deliberations in the 1960s over a proposed merger of the Union Pacific and the Rock Island Line that led, in part, to a change in the ICC's review

Energy price rise to slow

AP Business Writer

Inflation at the wholesale level picked up speed in November, but the main catalyst - a rise in energy prices - is expected to moderate in the months ahead, analysts

The Labor Department said Friday its wholesale price index rose 0.6 percent last month, translating to an annual inflation rate of 7.9 percent. Energy prices jumped 2.9 percent, accounting for about half the index's overall increase

Gasoline prices rose 1.1 percent, natural gas prices were up 5 percent and fuel oil prices jumped 6.4 percent — the biggest increase for fuel oil since June.

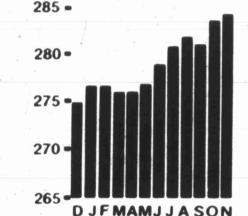

The increases in gasoline and fuel oil prices reflected a brief strengthening of the world oil market in October, a trend that quickly reversed and led to sizeable declines in oil product prices in late November and early December. The government's index of wholesale prices lags behind such trends because the gasoline price changes it reports actually are from the month before.

Bruce Lazier, an energy analyst at the investment firm of Paine Webber in New York, said Friday he expects prices for crude oil and refined products to hold steady or possibly decline further in the weeks ahead, mainly because of excess

The downward trend of fuel prices was underscored Friday with Sun Co.'s announcement that it had reduced the wholesale price of its No. 2 fuel oil by 3 cents a gallon. Earlier this week several oil

Best of the banquet

The unexpected — an appropriate theme for Big Spring High sports this past fall — ruled at the school's annual honors banquet Friday night.

Signaling this would be no ordinary banquet was the pre-speech meal itself. Instead of the traditional cold ham or roast beef - which even guest speaker Charley Johnson had expected, a char-broiled steak appeared on each plate. Perhaps the cooks had taken a hint from "Thursday Notes" which had suggested such a course for the event.

Johnson gave an emotional address, the memories almost overcoming a man who hurdled many obstacles in his career. The former Steer, standout player at New Mexico A&M and pro quarterback with St. Louis, Houston and Denver, tossed his passes during a winning era at Big Spring High and sees good times returning as soon as next year.

"I like the new playoff system. It's like the NFL now...they're tyring to get everyone in there," he joked. With two district reps in the playoffs now, Johnson said in the future it will be hard to keep Big Spring out of post-season play.

He reminisced back to the days he was playing football in Sixth Street. "The first pass they threw to me knocked me down. I knew then I wouldn't last as a receiver. But they let me throw ! a few."

Steer coach Quinn Eudy unleashed his increasingly famous "Eudyisms" on the audience. Destined to become a cross between Yogi Berra and Bum Phillips, Eudy makes no apologies for his "good ole boy" approach to public speaking.

The rookie head coach was greeted by a standing ovation to which he responded, "My mother would never believe it. If she saw a picture, she would think it's a bunch of spastics or people were throwing things at me."

He said the Steers' success came when the players became a team. "Usually on a team, you have two or three kids that want to be the studs. When it comes to picture-taking time, they're on the front row with these big smiles. We got away from that this year. We didn't have a hero...we had a bunch of them.

He said his players learned to like each, even love each other. "It's hard sometimes to do that. Like in the Lee game. I'm still trying to tell myself I love that guy that made that call," he

Talking about next season, Eudy said if the Steers beat the competition in 4-AAAAA, they would be beating the best in the state. "I shouldn't put 'if' in there," he apologized. "We're going to be fanatical and kill the suckers...or die trying."

The assistant coaches made the football awards. Robin Wall said being fed burritos by the Rodriguez family was no factor in son Adam's selection as Outstanding Back. Knowing coach Wall's appetite, he didn't have many believers in the audience.

Coach Alan Bollig gave a long-winded speech before naming his award winners and made the fatal mistake of saying "up in Oregon" and "down in Texas." Master of ceremonies Ron Logback corrected him, saying it is really "up in Texas" and "down in Oregon."

After the coaches had their say, Steer linebacker George Bancroft — a player never at loss for words — had his turn at the mic.

"We have a gift for the coaches for their hard work and dedication. That's what it says on these plaques...'Thanks for your hard work and dedication," he began. In handing out the gifts, he had these quotes:

• Coach Wall was "one of the pretty boys. I can say things like that now since I'm out of the

• Coach Frank Ibarra called them the "jelly roll defense because he didn't want to call us scrubs." • Coach Bollig "got his pleasure beating up on Pat Burke all year" in their famous wrestling matches. "He's not really an Oregonian. He's a Californian. I don't know if that is worse." Coach Jack Dorsett was not cut down. "I'm not going to say anything back about him because I like him." • Coach Mike Sharp got the worst of the words. "We had a nickname for him," Bancroft said, relating how the Sharp had beaned a fellow coach in the head with a pass. "After that, we called him 'Not So."

• And for Eudy, "We got a special plague for the boss. I think it's real nice...because I picked it out myself."

For all his comments, Logback said senior linebacker could serve as MC at next year's program.

And finally, one last Eudyism.

"I'd tell you that I prayed for these guys every night but I know a lot of you out there wouldn't believe. So I'll just say my wife did. I'd get home Thursday night and ask her how we were supposed to do.'

ALALETES THAT MADE GOOD THINGS HAPPEN Almost 130 student-athletes were honored at the Big Spring High Falls Sports Banquet Friday night. Banquet honors top local athletes

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

The 1982 Big Spring High Fall Sports Banquet was not a somber occasion by any means. But then again, these things are supposed to be fun.

Recognizing the accomplishments of 127 football, volleyball and cross country athletes, hearing former Steer and pro quarterback Charley Johnson encourage the BSHS students to "keep the tradition going" and awarding special honors to athletes in each of the three sports provided by the more serious moments of the

But in between came the one-of-a-kind "Eudyisms" of head football coach Quinn Eudy, humorous barbs between players and coaches and a sense of a bright future for all sports at Big Spring High.

The strongest ideas presented at the two and a half hour event were teamwork, positive attitude and dedication. The basic ingredients of winners, the athletes learned, have not changed through the years. Johnson told his audience they existed in his playing days at BSHS and Eudy pointed to them as the backbone by his team's resurgance this past fall.

'The athletes I knew who had a dream had to meet the responsibility," Johnson said. "The three things that they had were dedication, integrity and faith. You need all three."

'Dedication doesn't so much mean being the best but being as good as you can be. Integrity means being honest with your teammates, with yourself and with your God. And that takes faith in your judgement." In the many banquets he has attended through the years, Johnson said, "no speaker got very far without bringing up these three points in some way.

"I hope you'll remember them and have the chance to live that dream," he concluded.

A standing ovation greeted Eudy who responded, 'My mother would never believe it. If she saw a picture, she would think the people were throwing things

The first-year head coach explained the turnaround in the Steer football this year as a change in attitude.

"I believe in kids...they makes things go, they are our future," he began. "We need to send them in the right direction and I think we made strides in that direction this year.

"Our biggest asset was our ability to play together as a team," he continued. "Usually on a team, you have two or three kids that want to be the studs. When it comes to picture-taking time, they're on the front row with these big smiles. We basically got away from that this year. We didn't have a hero...we had a bunch of them...32 of them.

Eudy wasn't surprised at the results when his players got together as a team but he still isn't 'Don't get me wrong. Four and six isn't my idea of a Super Bowl season," he smiled. "But four and six where we are now, from where we came to where we are going is a super deal.'

A lot of the credit, Eudy continued, went to the seniors on the team.

"I never felt better about a group of seniors in all my years of coaching," he praised. "These guys really got together this year. They had a belief in themselves and in the team:

The highlights of the evening were the awarding of plaques and trophies to special students in the Big Spr ing High sports program.

Beginning with cross country, coach Randy Britton honored sophomores LeAnne White and Lupe Garza as the sport's Outstanding Runners. Anita Flores, cited for great improvement in just one year of running, was honored with one Coaches Award. Brent Crenwelge received a second Coaches Award, recognized for his athletic ability and citizenship in the community.

Britton said his young varsity and junior varsity teams struggled against older and stronger competition this year but the experience gained in their youth would pay off in the immediate future. Of 36 runners. only three are seniors this year.

Coach Becky Holliday honored 10 varsity and 13 junior varsity volleyball players. Special awards went to Leslye Overman, Scholastic Athlete Award: Overman and Sharon McCalister, Volleyball Award for hustle and aggressiveness; Shell Rutledge, Coaches Award for leadership on the court; and Sylvia Randle, Outstanding Volleyball Award for her skills that led to all-district honors

Degerberg: a striking man

Sports Editor's Note: The week-long Certified Instructors Candiate Course in Majajpahit Martial Arts concludes tonight at 7:30 p.m. with graduation ceremonies at the Dora Robert Community Center. Big Spring Master Leo Gaje — National Chairman of the National Arnis Association of the United States hosts the event which honors students completing the course in the Filipino and Indonesian arts of kai, arnis, eskrima and pencak silat.

By CLIFF COAN Staff Writer

Fred Degerberg is a striking man - if his appearance doesn't strike you, his fists certainly could. Degerberg, one of the instructors in town for the martial arts instructors' seminar, stands over six feet tall, is powerfully built and sports a shaven head and flowing goatee. He's in Big Spring to "teach boxing as related to Arnis-Kali-Escrima" to students enrolled in the martial arts seminar taught by Leo Gaje.

"Western boxing enables the Arnis practitioner to actually engage in actually blocking a punch," he says, noting that gloves and head gear protect the student. "This way, it's not just a theoretical art. He gets a chance at a practical application. At least one phase (of his training) is accentuated with the reality of fullcontact blows.

Training in a boxing situation reinforces the martial arts training a student recieves, Degerberg said. "If you know you're going to get hit, you have to move faster. That's crucial in a real-life situation - fractions of a split second can mean the difference between success and failure."

The boxing training also "conditions the temper." Degerberg said, and instills an amount of confidence in the students.

Degerberg is no stranger to the worlds of martial arts and boxing. He has 15 years of boxing experience, something that is "rare for a martial artist.

He's also the head instructor of the Degerberg

Academy in Chicago, one of the largest martial arts schools in the Chicago area. Students there learn karate, wing chung, judo, and arnis in a system that is Boxing in the Degerberg school is "utilized in the arts as a tool, not a master. Western boxers utilize box ing as a master. If you and I step into the ring, we just box. The one left standing is the winner. In the arts, we box to get the skills of a boxer.'

Most martial artists go through their training "never actually getting a chance to hit - they 'pat' (pull their punches)," Degerberg said. Following that

"That's what is so beautiful," he said. "It's so simple a beginner can learn it quickly, but so complex that you could spend your whole life researching it."

Dokes pokes No. 1 Weaver

WBA champ falls in first round, calls title fight a "fix" removed from the chaos that erupted in the ring following his knockout of Mike Weaver, newly-crowned World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Michael Dokes savored the controversial victory with a champagne bath in his room.

"I was destined and just obsessed with getting the title," Dokes said in an impromptu press conference in the hallway outside his room Friday night.

But a subdued Weaver, his title wrested from him after referee Joey Curtis stopped the fight at 1:03 of the first round, claimed Curtis was involved in a conspiracy to fix the

"Yes, I'm saying that," Weaver said. "I think the referee, judges and the WBA were against me."

Dokes came out firing from the beginning against the usually slow-starting Weaver, and decked him with a left hook about 30 seconds

Weaver was up quickly, but Dokes swarmed on him, throwing punches non-stop while Weaver tried to cover up. With Weaver seemingly unable to counter the onslaught, Curtis moved in and stopped the bout — a decision that had the capacity crowd at Caesars Palace on their seats yelling

"I wasn't going to have another Duk Koo Kim," said Curtis, referring to the South Korean fighter who died after being knocked out by WBA lightweight champion Ray 'Boom Boom' Mancini Nov. 13 at Caesars

Curtis was forced to flee the sports arena as the crowd of about 4,500 screamed obscenities and threw cups of beer at him.

Pandemonium erupted in the ring following the knockout and one Weaver assistant took a swing at Dokes when the new champion asked for the title belt. Dokes took a swing back as

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A half-hour security guards tried vainly to restore order. Dokes then collapsed on his back in the center of the ring, holding his gloves over his eyes, seemingly oblivious to the chaos around

> "I wanted to lay there and go over the 12 years of trauma and trials and tribulations,' said Dokes. "That was just pure jubilation." Dokes rejected claims by Weaver and his manager, Don Manuel, that the outcome of > the fight was somehow fixed. "If he was injured or put in a coma or something it would have been different. I would have been the bad guy," he said.

'They can't blame me. I'm the fighter, not the referee.

Weaver, who lost the WBA version of the heavyweight crown in his third defense since taking the title with a 15th-round knockout of John Tate on March 31, 1980, called for the fight purses to be held up and another fight scheduled within 30 days.

"I'm not going to scream rematch, I'm going to scream no contest. They should have never stopped the fight," he said.

But stop it Curtis did, even though Weaver claimed he was never hurt.

"He knocked me down, but so what. I've been knocked down many times," Weaver said. "I wasn't hurt in the slightest way. This was a conspiracy.' Weaver even claimed he hurt Dokes with one of the few punches he threw during the brief bout. "I hit Dokes about the time the referee stopped it. I knew I hurt him.' Sig Rogich, chairman of the Nevada Athletic Commission, said he doubted Weaver's protest to the commission and the WBA would have any effect. "It was the referee's decision," said Rogich. "I don't think it's our place to second-

The 24-year-old Dokes, who ran his record to 26-0-1 with 15 knockouts, said he couldn't understand the uproar over the decision.

"Why should we go on like that when there can always be another fight," he asked. "I'll give him a rematch. All he has to do is come up with the same figures as I came out with Dokes chastised Weaver and Manuel for their claims that the fight was fixed.

"Was the knockdown fixed?" he asked. "I think I have more integrity than that and more class than to try and make an excuse

Weaver, 30, was knocked out for the sixth time in his professional career and suffered his 10th defeat in 34 fights.

But the Diamond Bar, Calif., fighter, who was guaranteed $1.2 million plus 75 percent of the live gate for the fight, said he will come

'Maybe there's a reason for this and I'll find it out some day," he said. "But I definitely will fight again. I want another fight with

The new champion, who outweighed Weaver 216 pounds to 2093/4, received his biggest payday in his six-year professional career - reportedly $400,000

Although the Lauderhill, Fla., fighter has talked about meeting World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes to unify the crown, he says he has some living to do

"That's the last thing on my mind," he said. "I've been eating, living and sleeping this one moment. All I want to do now is relax and enjoy some of the finer things in life.

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders are heading toward another trial and perhaps back to Oakland for the 1983 National Footall League season

"I really don't know what it means," said Al Davis, the team's managing general partner, after a Monterey County Superior Court judge ruled Friday that the Raiders must move back to Oakland under a preliminary injunction which he reinstated.

"The trial decision in Los Angeles said we could move, but this injunction says we can't," said Davis, whose team has played its 1982 home games in the Los Angeles Coliseum but still uses its old Oakland practice field.

The Raiders are 4-1, tied for the American Football Conference lead, and have two regular-season home games remaining. The move back to Oakland won't have to be

SNYDER - Despite winning three of four battle immediately in their Saturday morning games at the Canyon Reef Tournament, the Big Spring Steers had to settle for fifth place in the tournament here Saturday.

Boxing is Degerberg specialty

many Filipino martial arts schools as you do regular ones now," he said. "It's going to just take off. The reason is Filipino reliance on weapons, he said. Things are becoming more violent on the streets, he said, and arnis bridges the gap from unarmed defenses

"There are times when you would not use a gun," he said. "and there are times when you can not use a

"And the other art — pencak silat — is truly unique," Degerberg said. "It's really a mind-blowing art. Eddie (Suryadi Jafri) has some things in his art that are almost non-existent in other arts.

Jafri a master at Indonesian martial art

Suryadi Jafri takes his business seriously As official representative of the Indonesian Pencak Silat Association, he has "150 million people in Indonesia right here," he says, patting his shoulder. The reason Jafri (who insists you call him Eddie) is so serious about his art, he says, is because the martial art of Indonesia is merely an extension of his country's culture.

Pencak Silat is a general term for the Indonesian national martial art or fighting system.

"Pencak means the main movement of the martial art which is restricted by regulations in the teachings, exercises and demonstrations," Jafri says. "Silat means the perfect martial art movement which is holy and pure as a spiritual resource for one's on safety.'

There are only five situations in which Eddie will use his deadly art, he says.

To protect his name.

 To protect his family. To protect his property.

• To protect the name of Pencak-Silat (this is because Pencak-Silat is a manifestation of his culture. Or to help the weak.

Despite its potential deadliness, Jafri says Pencak Silat is "a non-aggressive art. If someone attacks me, the first time, I sidestep and forgive him," he says. "I don't know all the situations behind his action. The second time, I also forgive and say 'let's talk about this.' The third time, that's it. I never stop.'

"It's easy to kill, but hard to create." Jafri says. "I can kill you in one second, but I can never make one hair on your head."

"We believe in life," Jafri says, "that's why we study martial arts. We have to be in good shape, physically and spiritually, for the inside to take care of the outside and the outside to take care of the inside.' Jafri sees the Indonesian and Filipino martial arts as being the wave of the future in martial arts.

"Today," he says, "most people want to see which art is most effective. We are not using muscle, but we are using the brain — we don't care how big he (the opponent) is. Pencak-Silat is designed for more than one enemy. It's more than an art or a sport - It's life or Jafri is the official representative of the Indonesian Pencak Silat Association from Jakarta. He began training at the age of 10 in the jungle of Sumatra under the most original system of Silat-Pangyan and other Silat systems. These systems have been handed down since 2000 B.C., and were used in driving the Dutch and Chinese, among others, from the home islands.

Jafri has trained several show business celebrities and security and law enforcement officers in New York City. He is a master instructor of the Pencak Silat Organization of America, Baruch College, New York City.

But just how good is he? Jafri just smiles and says, "We never say we are good. When you say you are good, you destroy yourself because there is always somebody better. We believe the only good one is God. The more knowledge we possess, the more humble we become. Like the rice plant — the more the plant contains, the more it faces the earth. That means the smarter somebody becomes, the humbler he should be.

Wisconsin zips Kansas

BATON ROUGE, La. - Junior quarterback Randy Wright threw for two touchdowns, one good for 87 yards, to lead Wisconsin to its first-ever postseason victory as the Badgers beat Kansas State 14-3 in the seventh annual Independence Bowl on Saturday night.

Wright hit on 10 of 24 pass attempts for 183 yards, mustering the only real offense of the night. Neither team could get a rushing game going.

The Badgers' first score came on a 16-yard Wright pass to Mike Jones in the second quarter and, in the third quarter, with Wisconsin at its own 13-yard line, Wright tossed a short pass to wide receiver Tim Stracka, who raced all the way to the end zone.

S'west captures NCAA II title

McALLEN, Texas (AP) Southwest Texas State recovered four fumbles and quarterback Ron Jacoby turned three into touchdowns Saturday as the Bobcats banged out a brutal 34-9 Palm Bowl victory over California-Davis to secure a second straight NCAA Division II championship.

Eric Cobble and Ricky Sanders cracked in for two touchdowns and Jacoby lobbed a short TD shot to Dale Posey for another as the Lone Star Conference champions bade a rousing farewell to departing head coach Jim Wacker.

Wacker, whose 1982 unbeaten Bobcats are 42-8 under his four-year reign, accepted the head coaching job at Texas Christian University.

The lopsided triumph extended the San Marcos school's current winning streak to 17 and ended the Aggies' own string at 17, including 12 this year

The Aggies were champions of the Northern California Athletic Conference.

The Bobcats, trailing 3-0, struck for two second-quarter touchdowns and led 13-3 at halftime, using fumble recoveries by Rob Clark and Ken Huewitt to launch the scoring

Clark snapped up a Cal-Davis bobble at the Aggie 25 and Jacoby guided the ground-gobbling Texans across in seven plays.

Facing fourth and two and with a blustery wind at their backs, Cobble cracked into the end zone to stake Southwest Texas to a lead it never surrendered.

Huewett's fumble recovery came at the Southwest Texas 47 and Jacoby, with the aid of a tricky fake punt, took the Bobcats to the lip of the end zone in 14 plays.

He flipped the fourth-and-goal TD toss to Posey over the middle.

Sports Shorts Giants zap Eagles from playoffs

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Rookie Floyd Eddings' pass receptions set up Scott Brunner's second-quarter touchdown tosses to Butch Woolfolk and Ernest Gray that propelled the New York Giants to a 23-7 victory over Philadelphia Saturday. The loss virtually killed the Eagles' chances of reaching the National Football League playoffs.

Eddings, a free agent out of the University of California, caught five passes for 148 yards. He hauled in a 41-yarder at the Philadelphia 6-yard line to open the se-cond quarter, three plays before Brunner found Woolfolk on a 5-yard strike.

On New York's next possession, on the first play after Leon Bright returned a punt 29 yards to the Eagles' 39, Brunner found Eddings for 24 yards. Two plays later, Brunner hit Gray in the end zone for a 16-yard TD pass.

The Giants defense sacked Philadelphia quarterback Ron Jaworksi eight times for 61 yards and New York cornerback Terry Jackson intercepted two

The Eagles, two years removed from the their only Super Bowl appearance, dropped to 1-5 with their fourth consecutive loss since the end of the players' strike. With only three games left, they will finish with their first losing season since going 5-9 in 1977, Dick Vermeil's second year as their head coach. The Giants have won three in a row and are 3-3.

Brunner's scoring passes wiped out Philadelphia's 7-3 lead built on Jaworski's 23-yard touchdown pass to Harold Carmichael with 1:50 remaining in the first quarter. The TD came three plays after Jaworski and John Spagnola hooked up on a 57-yard pass play to the Joe Danelo of the Giants opened the scoring with a 37-yard field goal and had a 34-yarder in the third quarter and a 29-yarder in the fourth. The game, which began in a light snowfall, attracted 66,053 fans. There were 10,808 no-shows.

Fouts outduels Montana in Saturday air war

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dan Fouts won a wild passing duel with Joe Montana by throwing for five touchowns and a personal-high 450 yards as the San Diego Chargers edged the San Francisco 49ers 41-37

Montana broke one of Fouts' National Football League records with a fifth straight 300-yard passing game, totaling 356. But Fouts' 3-yard touchdown pass to running back Chuck Muncie with 3:22 remaining settled the record-producing quarterback matchup.

The teams combined for an NFL-record 65 comple-

Montana fired his third touchdown pass of the game, 7 yards to Dwight Clark, with 6:41 left to send the 49ers into a 37-34 lead. • "AIRPLANE II: The Sequel" - Starring Robert Hays, Julie Haggerty, Lloyd Bridges and William Shatner. Written and directed by Ken Finkleman. Rated PG at the Ritz Twin.

Here's a Christmas miracle: This sequel to 1980's wildly successful comedy of anarchy uses much of the same cast and many of the same style jokes, and it comes out almost as funny as the original.

That means if you enjoyed "Airplane" and the comedy offering for TV, "Police Squad," then you will not be disappointed at this year's farce.

None of the three writers behind "Airplane" were involved in the new production, but their style of humor is all over the screen.

Like the original, the jokes are so bad and so obvious Prosecution to psychiatrist on the witness stand: Would you give us your impression of the defendant, doctor?" Psychiatrist: "I'm afraid I'm not very good at doing impressions. I'm a doctor.") and told with such straight-faced sincerity that you can't help but Writer-director Ken Finkleman has the style down perfect. When Hays leaves the Ronald Reagan Hospital for the Mentally Ill ("We cure people the oldfashioned way"), he passes a tuxedoed gent standing in a spotlight inexplicably singing the theme from The Love Boat."

The only thing different from the first movie is the setting. This is the future and we are not aboard a 747. We are in a space shuttle on our way to the moon.

But familiar faces are there: Robert Hays is back as the neurotic would-be pilot, chasing his true-love Julie Haggerty who has been promoted from stewardess to shuttle navigator.

Lloyd Bridges again plays the tough-acting chief airtraffic controller who turns into a chain-smoking, boozing pill-popper under pressure. Also returning is Peter Graves as Captain Over. Graves this time is given the opportunity to parody his "Mission Impossible" role. Leslie Nielsen and Robert Stack are missing and their absence is felt. Chuck Conners and Chad Everett attempt to fill the gap but they are not given much to All praise goes to William Shatner, who plays lunar base commander Buck Murdock to the hilt. His character is Captain Kirk gone mad, getting everything wrong and blaming everyone else for it. He's totally in the spirit of "Airplane II," which asks nothing more than that you to sit back and watch our television and movie cliches — and the everyday prattle of normal conversation — be thoroughly blasted. - By RICHARD HORN

Hispanics call immigration reform bill racist

WASHINGTON — A major immigration reform bill that could be voted on by the House as early as next week is "racist and discriminatory," Hispanic Thursday.

The House Rules Committee had voted Wednesday to allow the chamber to consider the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1982 during the lameduck session. The Senate passed the bill last summer.

But the bill's opponents plan to force votes on more than 100 amendments in an attempt to kill the bill until after the lame-duck session, said Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., chairman of the Subcommittee on Census and Population.

LIVING CHRISTMAS TREE - It takes 85 people, freshly cut evergreen branches from New Mexico, and a number of lights and decorations to make the Living Christmas Tree, the centerpiece of a program slated Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the First United Methodist Church. Charles Parham, the church's minister of music, said church members worked on the program for one year. Free tickets for the program are available at First United Methodist Church.

Lifestyle Writer Charles Parham likes to think of the Living Christmas Tree as "our Christmas present to Big Spring." The production is slated at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Monday in the sanctuary of the First United Methodist Church, and is free of Parham is choir director at First United Methodist Church, and is one of the coordinators of the annual production.

People who wish to see the Living Christmas Tree can obtain tickets though, Parham stressed. They are available at the First United Methodist Church. For tickets, address a self-addressed stamped envelope and send it to the First United Methodist Church, P.O. Box 1229, Big Spring, Texas, 79720. Be sure to include what night you wish to see the performance and give second and third choices.

Saturday night's performance will be interpreted for the deaf by Carla Relaford and Debbie Jones. The sanctuary will seat 1,000 people a night. The tickets will help avoid overcrowding.

"This is our fourth year to present the Living Christmas Tree," Parham said. "We try to make it as interesting as possible. The first year, the tree held 60 people. We have since added another tier, and it now holds 85.

Providing the background music for the singers will be a 35-piece orchestra featuring members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and other area professionals, Parham Harlen Thornton of the Howard College department of music "is our accompanist. That is a big undertaking because he has to play a lot of really tough music. Members of First Methodist Church have "literally worked on the program for one solid year,' Parham said. This year's show will be using "several features" not seen in previous years. In a section of the performance focusing on the book of Job, performers will be clad in "mosaic costumes, which are not really costumes but are artistic creations.

The mosaics are the result of extensive research by Irene Corey, a READY FOR SHOW - Charles Parham, minister of music at the First United Methodist Church, says the Living Christmas Tree, which will be presented Saturday, Sunday and Monday, has taken a year of preparation. The tree will feature 85-singers arranged in the shape of a tree. Members of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Orchestra will also be on hand, as will other area music professionals. The show is free to the public, but tickets must be obtained at First United Methodist Church.

woman who recieved a grant to study the design of the master's of mosaic in Europe. As a result of the study Mrs. Corey published a book of costumes. Parham said the costumes come from those designs.

"The show will open with an elaborate puppet presentation of 'Twas the Night Before Christmas.' Kelley Draper designed the muppet-type puppets for the puppet show. He also designed the scenery and special effects, which are really cute," Parham said.

The stage also will feature giant Christmas cards that will come to life at various times to reveal big shadow boxes with characters standing inside.

The program will feature music from the Nutcracker suite. Several contemporary figures such at E.T., Little Orphan Annie and her dog Sandy are slated to appear. The program will cover a transition through the old Testament, feature the new Testament prophets, move into the Living Tree itself, then tell the Christmas story of Christ's

"I like to think of it as a variety show" Parham said with a smile, "not as a play.

Members of the First United Methodist Church "literally spent the last year" preparing for the production. Much of the time was spent writing the script. Parham wrote much of the music.

'We don't go out and buy books and pass out parts," he explained. 'We create our own presentations.'

Members of the Handbell Choin and the orchestra will also be situated around the base of the tree.

'We will use the traditional Hallelujah Chorus as our standard closing," Parham said.

The stand for the tree was purchased several years ago from Denton, and takes a committee two days to bolt together. Another committee is in charge of gathering greenery, lights and decorations for the tree.

Another committee goes to New Mexico to cut live greenery from a forest to place upon the tree. The committee was scheduled to go this weekend.

The greenery "is brought back and fireproofed before it is placed on the tree," Parham said. At all times the choir is on the tree, there are three people watching with fire extinguishers and smelling salts, just in case of an accident." He added that, happily, no mishaps have ever occured with the tree.

"But we don't want one to happen," he says, explaining the reasons for the precautions.

"We are very excited about this," Parham said. "We hope the public responds. We are anticipating as fine a presentation as we can do.

Members of the production held an all-day rehearsal Dec. 4, and will practice every night this week. The show is produced entirely at the expense of First United Methodist Church. "Members have voluntarily contributed to make this presentation a reality. We want to share this with Big Spring.'

Big Springer expresses feelings in her poetry

By TINA STEFFEN Lifestyle Editor

RETIRED No alarm clock is ringing At the crack of dawn. No work needs doing, The morning is calm. The birds are singing, But what does it matter: They don't know how it feels To be put out to pasture.

Maurine Terrell Maurine Terrell's poetry reveals what makes her tick. An elderly Big Spring woman, her life, feelings and thoughts are expressed in her simple poetry.

Recently Mrs. Terrell published a book, "My Offering." The book features 30 poems, half are of a spiritual nature and the others are an assortment of themes. The book was published just before Easter by Doris Letter Shop here in Big Spring.

"This (book) is not a moneymaking thing for me - it's my offering. I enjoy giving them away," she

"I had been writing for several years ever since I went to the Writer's Guild workshop in Abilene. I got a great deal of inspiration there. A Young Baptist minister said, 'Write from depths and let it go where it will.' So I took his advice. He was one of the speakers" at the workshop.

"I had been writing a year before that. I wrote my daughter from Dallas a letter telling her of a childhood friend and called it "A Letter To My Daughter." Mrs. Terrell followed the first letter with two more similar to it.

From that time on, she wrote poetry daily. Being new to Big Spring and living alone, she didn't have friends close enough to express her feelings to. So she put them on

"I showed them (poems) to Walt Finley (former city editor of The Big Spring Herald) and he said 'Why you're a writer.' That surprised me. I didn't know it. He inspired me and encouraged me. He wanted me to go ahead and finish my autobiography. But I never did.

"Then I wrote Discourse on Cats.' Walt suggested I send them (the poems) around to different newspapers and I did.

"They liked them and were very kind. The editors wrote at length and said they (the poems) weren't appropriate for newspapers and were lengthy. So that was the end of that chapter.'

Since then, "I've written book reviews and sent poems out all over the United States and they came back. I did not intend to write a book. I just wanted to leave something for posterity. I have a Getting her poems back, un-published, was a learning experience for Mrs. Terrell. "It used to disturb me to get things back, but I learned that the editors get so many good things they have to pick only the best. They have guidelines on what they want. I can't do that. I can't write what they want. I have to write what I feel and have an inspiration to write. So it doesn't bother me anymore.

Her poem entitled "The Writer" describes her anxiousness to hear from editors about her poems. THE WRITER know. I guess I just decided it was my thing to do...maybe I should have been a writer. I was told many years ago in Abilene that if I'd just keep on I'd have a future.

'Then I moved to Big Spring and I didn't have anyone to share my thoughts with or any enthusiasm to. I wrote everyday for awhile and then I quit. I don't know why I quit...partly because I wasn't encouraged by my family.

Mrs. Terrell said contemporary poetry is obscure. She doesn't like obscurity and prefers simplicity.

"According to T.S. Pierce, outstanding literary critic, the charge leveled at contemporary poetry is that it does not communicate.

"In his book, "T.S. Elliot," he writes that we scrutinize poetry scientifically, to see how it works, in the same manner that we describe how a machine works. 'It is with such men as Darwin, Einstein and Freud that the scientific attitude begins to invade all our thinking in religion, philosophy and the arts. Mr. Pearce says, and that we have even attempted to analyze the mystery of human beings scientifically

"Shortly after cubism in painting was developed in 1906, T.S. Elliot began to develop a new style in poetry, startling and obscure in meaning. He was 'hailed, reviled, misunderstood and imitated.'

"Obscurity in poetry has been 'in' now for some time, is considered

'chic,' but his imitators lack the quality of greatness of Elliot, who was searching for inner peace in a confused society. I think his poetry reflects his trying to resolve his conflicts in this society. He had something to communicate and that makes a big difference.'

Mrs. Terrell developed her own style of poetry - "simple expression." "I think it has better impact especially for the people here in Big

Being a person who loves the outdoors, she enjoys working in her yard. She says she has to be in the mood to write poetry when something (an inspiration or idea) comes to her. "There's always something to be done and I have to be relaxed. The workshop sparked her interest in writing, and now writing is her main hobby. "I'd like to have more time to give to it. The wintertime is my best time to write. It's too cold to do anything else. I'm always reading so I haven't wasted time and have improved my

"I have a protege in the prison (in Furgeson unit in Midway, Madison county) He is a natural-born poet, he just got in trouble. It gives me a great deal of happiness that I have him for a friend. I think he will be quite a poet someday.

Maurine began her writing hobby approximately five years ago after attending a Writers Guild workshop in Abilene. She was a newcomer to Big Spring then. How today's young widows pick up the pieces of their life

Widowhood is not like childhood, when one can predict with fair amount of certainty the first tooth, the first step, the first word. At some point during or after the period of deep grief, a widow will pick up her life again.

The problems that face the two million widows in the United States who are under 55 - loneliness, finances, childrearing - can't be dealt with at one time. The assault from all directions is so bewildering that many younger widows fall prey to The First Year Crazies, more properly described by psychologists "regressive or delinquent behavior.'

Some widows run off with the first available man, suddenly become promiscuous, or make ill-advised financial decisions. One young widow went on a painting binge, while another widow's crazies involved becoming her parent's child again. A young woman who became widowed at 39 advises, "Don't make any major changes in your life. Don't get married, don't sell the house, don't do anything drastic for at least a year.'

Little money and few jobs are just some of the problems facing young widows. A booklet published by Corporate Assistance of Phoenix details some of the hard facts:

• On an average, a family's income after a husband's death is reduced by 44%, even including the income and benefits of the widow who already has a job. In families with previous incomes of $15,000 or more, the decrease jumps to 57%. Of 56% of the widows working two years after their husbands deaths. 93% reported needing the income but two-thirds would work even if there were no financial need.

Although many of these women do remarry, the odds that a widow will remarry are not good. "For all widows, the figures are 7.1 in 1,000; for widows aged 45 to 64, the chances are about 13.6 in 1,000. The odds increase only slightly in vounger widows favor.

Rebuilding their lives seems to be the challenge and reward for these women. As one widow explained, "It's a real testing process. You finally learn what it is to rely on yourself.

Dr. Donohue

Dear Dr. Donohue: My brother-in-law, who is into marathoning and does an inordinate, I think, amount of training, came up with anemia. At least that's what he told me. He didn't seem worried. The doctor he went to is quite familiar with sports illnesses, etc. and told him it was a false anemia. I believe that all anemia is bad, or why would they call it that. Yet. he is continuing his activity. Shouldn't his wife start worrying about becoming a widow? - Mrs. D.D. Anemia in a fitness buff? Tell me it isn't true. I know, Mrs. D., that we consider anemia to be the antithesis of good health, but your brother-in-law's situation is easily explained.

He has what is called psuedo-anemia, and it is not harmful. It's also called sports anemia, and is particularly common among marathon runners. But why would the longdistance runner develop a condition where there are fewer red blood cells in his blood? That's the definition of anemia.

Studies have shown that the reason for this in marathoners is that the fluid portion of the blood (plasma) rises in comparison to the solid parts, the red and white blood cells. They have more fluid in their vessels than normal, so the red blood cells are more "diluted," so to speak. The raw number of red cells is fine, but when it is tested it seems low in comparison to the total blood volume, including the plasma.

This increase in fluid makes the runner's blood less viscous, thinner. It can be pumped around the body more efficiently. It's as though he changed to a thinner motor oil.

And it has been found that sports anemia has no bad effect on performance. Marathoners do just as well as if they had normal blood values.

Just a word of caution here, however. The diagnosis of sports anemia is made after a very thorough investigation into all the many kinds of anemia. When that is done, then it's safe to say that it's another case of a healthy athlete exhibiting false signs of an illness. Doctors who specialize in sports medicine have learned to recognize these little quirks false signs of an illness. They can be grouped under the general heading of "normal abnormalities." Another example of this would be the fitness enthusiast who might have an "abnormal" EKG — abnormal, that is, measured against the norms of the entire population.

A night on the town in the Big Apple

JAN DUNAGAN sure had a happy holiday last month. She spent the Thanksgiving holidays in New York City with her cousin CASTLE CAMBELL. She enjoyed a beautiful view of the city from Castle's Loew's Hotel office, plus a personally escorted tour of the Big Apple and Long Island. Thanksgiving day was spent with friends MALCOLM CRAWFORD and BATES WESTERBERG in the Crawford home on Long Island.

Castle was born and reared in Big Spring and is the son of the late MR. AND MRS. JAMES CASTLE.

From what I understand, Jan, Castle and friend SUMNER ELLIOTT spent an evening at Sardis. Elliott is Australian born and resides in New York. His first book "Careful He Might Hear You" is being filmed in Australia and should be completed next year. Elliott also visited Jan in 1975.

Jan and Castle dined with HELEN BLOUNT KESTERBERG before going to the Palace Theater to see Helen in "Woman of the Year" with RAQUEL WELCH. Helen is the chairperson and does the introduction of the woman of the year, which is Raquel Welch. She also has a singing part with Ms. Welch. According to Jan, Helen said, "Can you believe I paid all those dollars to NELL FRAZIER to learn to sing Do-Da on Helen recently had a part on the daytime soap "All My Children." Jan says, "Helen looks great and still has that warm and friendly Blount personality. She sends her regards to any that might still remember her or the Blount family. Helen still considers Big Spring home.

Needless to say, Jan will not forget her visit to New York City with Castle and friends.

I called the CAPROCK CHAPTER OF THE MARCH OF DIMES the other day about Herald business when I heard DR. AND MRS. B. ZILBERG'S son, NEIL, is home for a holiday. Neil is a medical student in his final year at Cape Town Medical School in Cape Town, South Africa. Sounds like he's following his father's footsteps. Dr. Zilberg is one of our local pediatricians. Mrs. (Dorene) Zilberg is the executive director of the Caprock Chapter of March of Dimes.

The Zilberg's aren't the only ones in town with their son visiting them. MARY ANN DAVIS of Skipper Travel received a call from her son in Germany the other day saying he was coming home and asking her to arrange his flight. At first she thought he was going A.W.O.L. from his military until he put her mind at ease. He arrived Wednesday for a two-week stay.

Seaman Recruit BILLY CHRISTOPHER BATCHELOR, son of MR. AND MRS. DON FITE of Gail Rt., and BILLY BATCHELOR of Fort Worth, plans to visit his family for the holidays. He will arrive home Dec. 18.

Like any child who has flown the nest for the first time, Billy writes his family often. However, his letters are quite unique. They contain humorous cartoon drawings about "Bobby Bolt in Bobby Bolt Goes To Boot Camp'" and dialogues of Billy's experiences at boot camp. For example, here is an excerpt from one of his letters:

"Anyway, about all we do is march and fold clothes, march and fold clothes, march and fold clothes.

"JOB APPLICATION

"Qualifications: Marching and folding clothes.

"Is that all? 'Qualifications: Marching, folding clothes and eating bad food at a very fast rate of 'Anything else? "Yes. Standing ridiculously still."

Later on in the letter: "It's September 4th now. You poor slobs have been sitting around eating junk food and watching TV (probably) for the last couple of hours while I've been marching and folding I can just imagine that while Billy is at home, he will enjoy his mother's home cooking, dressing in civilian clothes and sleeping

Don't forget to make plans to attending the 'CHRISTMAS POPS" concert Dec. 17 in the Big Spring High School Auditorium. The MIDLAND-ODESSA SYMPHONY and CHORALE will present the concert beginning at 8 p.m. BIG SPRING SYMPHONY ASSOCIATION and GUILD is sponsoring the event. JANICE ROSSON of the Guild says it is promised to be a good production. Tickets are available at the door and the Chamber of Commerce.

Until next week.

AP Newsfeatures There's a superstar this Christmas, a big poinsettia the favorite Yuletide plant. Growers may call them "big branched" plants. At the Paul Ecke Ranch in Encinitas, Calif., where many poinsettias are grown for florists and markets, they're called "tubs," for their containers holding plants of a variety of sizes, shape and colors.

This holiday season you may see poinsettias 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 feet tall with 20 to 30 blooms in florist shops or displayed at malls and supermarkets as holiday attractions.

According to Paul Ecke Jr., although they're grown in individual ways by regional producers, the display poinsettias are usually sold in big containers. The pots can contain anywhere from 6 to 12 plants, which are pinched (branched) so there are several stems on each

The two principal families of poinsettias used for this purpose are Eckespoint and Annette Hegg, of which there are about 10 varieties.

The legend of the poinsettia is that on a Christmas Eve long ago, a poor little Mexican girl en route to church with no gift for the Christ Child gathered a bunch of roadside weeds, which burst into brilliant red blooms as she approached the altar. They were called Flores de Noche Buena, Flowers of the Holy Night.

You probably won't be bringing home one of the super poinsettias, but if you receive a poinsettia in bloom here's how the Eckes advise you to tend it for

Keep it near a window or where there is much natural light. When the soil surface feels dry, soak thoroughly or add water daily as needed. Don't keep the soil too wet and don't let it get bone dry.

Poinsettias in bloom prefer a fairly cool temperature. Above 72 F daytime or above 60 degrees at night will cause the bright flower color to fade early. Below 50 degrees is dangerous.

Poinsettias don't like dry air and drafts. Modern heating systems tend to dehydrate poinsettias. If this happens, spray the entire plant with water, soak the soil and relocate the plant. Keep the poinsettia away from heat of appliances and heating registers.

Your poinsettia won't require feeding during the holidays. If you plan to keep it going, use a houseplant food fairly high in nitrogen or a 5-2-2 liquid fertilizer at the rate of one tablespoon per gallon or three-fourths teaspoon per quart of water once weekly.

During winter reduce feeding by about one-half. If your poinsettia looks good after the holidays, place it near a window or an area with good natural light and keep it moist. As the weather warms, it will put out new growth. As flowers fade, cut them back to accommodate new growth.

If the plant has deteriorated after the holidays, prune it back two or three nodes per stem, set it near a window and keep it moist, but not too wet.

You can pinch or prune back the poinsettia during the growing season to control size and symmetry.

'Mistral's Daughter' said fun novel to read

M I S T R A L ' S as "Mistral's daughter." DAUGHTER. By Judith Krantz. Cron. 531 pages.

"Mistral's Daughter," the latest novel by Judith Krantz, is an elaborate confection - intricately designed and detailed, but containing little of real substance.

It is the story of three women — Maggy Lunel, an artist's model in Paris in the 1920s; her daughter. Teddy, and Teddy's daughter, Fauve. All three women were born from romantic alliances that, for one reason or another, did not include marriage.

Maggy, rejected by the French painter Mistral, whom she had inspired to do his earliest, best work. becomes the mistress of a rich, but married, American businessman who spends much of his time in Paris.

Maggy moves from France to the United States to be closer to her lover, whom she hopes to marry some day. But upon her arrival in New York City, she learns he is dead, the victim of a heart attack.

Maggy has no financial resources of her own, and she has a young daughter his daughter — to support. There is no hope her lover's family will give her financial help, so she goes to work, first as a model, and then as the head of her own New York modeling Maggy's daughter. Theodora, nicknamed Teddy, grows up to be a beautiful young woman and one of the world's greatest fashion models. While on an assignment in France, she meets the famous Mistral. Teddy and Mistral fall madly in love. He abandons his wife and child, she gives up her modeling career. Teddy becomes pregnant and has a daughter, whom they call Fauve. Teddy hopes to marry Mistral, but she is killed in an accident shortly after their daughter is born. This leaves Maggy, the grandmother, to raise the child in New York City. Mistral's relationship with Teddy is known worldwide.

And Fauve becomes known

The opening chapters of "Mistral's Daughter," which describe Maggy's life in Paris, are a delight. But as Maggy grows older, the pace of the book begins to slow. Teddy, the beautiful, is also Teddy the boring. Fauve is both beautiful and wise, too wise, perhaps, for her age. Carol Deegan

LOOK! BIG SPRING HAS THE 17TH $2000° WINNER FROM COCA-COLA

A very happy and excited Christy Cox exchanges her lucky COCA-COLA cash caps that spelled the word HOMERUN for a $2000 check from Mr. Weldon Bennett, Big Spring COCA-COLA Sales Center Manager. Christy Cox purchased her 12-oz. can of COCA-COLA at the West Texas Compress in Stanton that had the letter needed to spell HOMERUN. This makes a total of $34,000.00 in top prize money paid out this year by the Texas COCA-COLA Bottling Company in the Peel-A-Fortune Game.

Ever since your local COCA-COLA bottler began the Peel-A-Fortune game early this year, many of your friends and neighbors have been collecting letters of the alphabet from bottle caps and can tabs of COCA-COLA, MR. PIBB. SPRITE, and TAB. They have been trying to spell the lucky words, HOMERUN, TOUCHDOWN, POINT or COKE in hopes of winning a prize or instant cash up to $2000.00 from their local COCA-COLA bottler. Now Christy Cox has successfully spelled the word HOMERUN in accordance with the Peel-A-Fortune rules and has become the 17th $2000.00 Texas COCA-COLA Instant Cash Winner in 1982.

You can be a winner, too. This Weekend, when you stock up on your picnic supply of soft drinks, look for bottle caps or can tabs of COCA-COLA, MR. PIBB, SPRITE, or TAB with $$$ on the top. Under each specially marked cap or tab is a letter of the alphabet. All you have to do is spell one of the lucky words on the game card and you win a prize or instant cash up to $2000.00 just like Christy. Even if you don't spell any of the winning words, you are a winner because you have provided yourself and your family delicious, refreshing COCA-COLA or its allied brands of MR. PIBB, SPRITE, or TAB. COCA-COLA ... the No. 1 selling Soft drink in Big Spring and the Permian Basin. COCA-COLA ... the one others try to challenge or compare themselves to whether they are number 2 or 27. COCA-COLA ... the one others want to be when they grow up ... The Real Thing. COCA-COLA ... the one everyone associates with a WINNER ... Just ask any of the following $2000.00 winners in this year's COCA-COLA Peel-A-Fortune. Martha Carlile and Renee Gamble of Clyde, Hope Lopez and James Rogers of Big Spring, Blas De Anda Jr., and Willard Farrar of Lamesa, Dan Stone of Gail, Patricia McDermott, Joe Sanchez, Joyce Allen, and Virginia Busbee of Midland and David Menzel of Desdemona, Arleta Shirley of Eastland, Linda McGough of Albany, Vicky Crowder of Forsan, and now Christy Cox of Stanton.

No purchase necessary. Just look for game cards and details where you shop for COCA-COLA, MR. PIBB, SPRITE and TAB. So play Peel-A-Fortune with COCA-COLA, MR. PIBB, SPRITE or TAB. Who knows ... you could be $2000.00 Instant Cash Winner ... Just like Christy Cox or any of the other $2000.00 WINNERS so far this year.

ROMAN MARRAIGE

Ancient Rome has a reputation for decadence today. But the truth is that in the early days, Roman law and ritual, including marriage, were taken extremely seriously

The word "matrimony" comes from the Latin word "matrimonium." It's based on the root word "mater," mother. In ancient Rome, marrying meant asking a woman to become a mother.

The marital union was sacred to the old Romans; it even extended beyond death. Not only was there no recognition of divorce, but a widow could not

Tradition was an important part of Roman weddings. All brides wore their hair the same way divided into six tresses. And a special knot was used to tgie the bride's belt, which was only to be untied by her husband after the wedding. Breaking any of bad luck.

DIVIDING HONOR ATTENDANT DUTIES

If you're lucky enough to have two sisters, or a sister and a best friend as your honor attendants, you may be wondering how to divide their duties so they can each feel important. We here at the ACCENT SHOPPE suggest you ask one girl to hold your bouquet during the ceremony and the other to hold the groom's ring. Then one attendant can remove your blusher veil, while the other adjust your train before the recessional. And of course you'll have two sources of moral support lest you get the lastminute jitters.

Associated Press Writer PINOLE, Calif. - Alexander Sakharov says he lives to write but could not write where he lived. There was no place in the Soviet Union for his non-Marxist views, he

So on March 17, 1981, while working as an information officer with the Soviet mission to the United Nations in New York City, Alexander Artem Sakharov defected, taking his young daughter and pregnant wife to the U.S. mission.

For Sakharov, it was the start of a 20-month nightmare. The 34-yearold defector today is unpublished, unemployed and on welfare. Baffled and suspicious because of his failure to find work, he says he would welcome a job sweeping streets.

Intense and often agitated as he leaned across a card table in a starkly furnished apartment in this little town 30 miles northeast of San Francisco, Sakharov spoke of his reasons for defecting. It was a story of what can happen to the noncelebrity defector.

Sakharov, who is no relation to dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov, said he had hoped his four-year tour of duty with the Soviet U.N. delegation would give him time to finish his Englishlanguage novel.

"My life is my writing," he said, "and I would gladly sacrifice my life for the sake of my writing, because without it, my life is worthless.

But Sakharov said he became upset by "corruption, extortion, blackmail and a most unhealthy climate" at the Soviet mission. He says officials took furniture money meant for the entire delegation, leaving others with shoddy goods that included castoffs scavenged from New York dumps. Sakharov said he received no support when he reported the matter to Moscow. "Perhaps it was a little bit early in terms of my literary plans, but still I could not stand the situation any longer," he said.

Encouraged by American acquaintances who suggested he might find work as a college lecturer or translator in the United States, he defected.

The FBI questioned him for several days, Sakharov said. On March 24, 1981, he was granted asylum and was taken to Washington for questioning by the State Department and the CIA.

The FBI was helpful, Sakharov said. But the CIA questioners "were asking me idiotic questions, absolutely idiotic," he added.

Sakharov plainly believes the CIA wanted him to work as an agent. He said some of his questioners threatened to send him back to the Soviets if he didn't cooperate and he suggested that the spy agency has scuttled his job opportunities to try

When asked about Sakharov's allegations, State Department spokesman Joe Reap and CIA spokesman Dale Peterson refused to discuss the case. Repeated efforts to get government comment failed.

Sakharov said he had hoped to stay and work in New York. Instead, he said, government officials told him in May 1981 that he was moving.

"They said I'll have to leave very urgently, I'm going to the West Coast, where I have been given a position at UC Berkeley, that all arrangements have been made, that people are waiting for me, that the house is rented for me and that I'm getting a job," he said. But when he and his wife, who was 81/2 months pregnant, arrived in San Francisco, be said, "There was no job. There was no medical assistance. There was nothing."

He turned to the Tolstoy Foundation, which helps resettle refugees. He said he was put up in a shabby hotel and told he would have to pay for his wife's care.

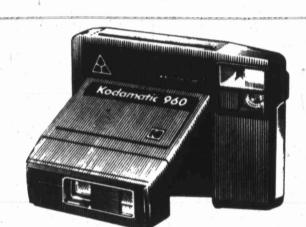

"They sent him out to San Francisco, where he didn't know a soul, to an agency which didn't even have his file," said Alan Dundes, an anthropology professor at the University of California at Berkeley who had met Sakharov in Moscow and wound up helping him off-and-on for

Some E.T. toys nothing to phone home about

By the Associated Press

E.T. toys are the Christmas season's best-sellers at some stores across the nation, but other retailers say sales of the big-eyed, spindly-fingered creatures are a mixed bag.

Spinoffs from the runaway hit movie "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial" are getting a mixed reception so far. Some stores say all E.T. products are sell-outs, some say one or two items are hot while the rest are duds, and some have cut prices in hopes of boosting dragging sales.

'It's the No. 1 selling toy for us," said John Bogle, manager of San Francisco's F.A.O. Schwartz. "We get 96 pieces on Thursday and they're gone on Saturday. ... I hope they have a sequel.'

At Kansas City's Dreams and Things, "Everything with E.T. on it is hot," said manager Mickey Coulter. All its dolls are sold out, and "pick-up items" like pens, erasers, pencils and stickers are going

"For stocking stuffers they're great," he said. But a toy store owner in Mt. Shasta, Calif., has cut prices 50 percent hoping to unload a surfeit of toys he considers overpriced and poorly made. There are 10 E.T. gifts for every kid," said John Pola of the Pola Bear toy store. At Atlanta's Lionel Play World outlets, vinyl dolls are absolutely excellent, the 21/2-inch wind-up doll that walks is fantastic, the board game is so-so and the E.T. finger is terrible," said assistant manager Duane Halpin.

With more than 250 E.T. items on the market, royalties could reach $10 million by year's end, said analyst Lee Isgur with Paine Webber in New York. But that estimate "might be low," said Martin Levy, a consultant for Merchandising Corp. of America, which has licensed about 50 companies to produce E.T. products

Parker Bros., one of the licensees, said E.T. board games are keeping pace with sales of the ever-popular Monopoly this season. And Kamar International Inc., a Torrance, Calif., company that holds the license to the stuffed E.T. dolls, has

E.T. apparel is the best-selling licensed merchandise at Sears, Roebuck and Co. this year, the Chicago-based retailer said. Toys By Roy in Dallas has sold every E.T. doll in stock. "If they look like E.T. or act like E.T., they sell," said salesman Scott Whatley.

'The E.T. doll is just unbelievable,' said Gordon Eiland, a manager at Weinstock's in Sacramento, Calif. But reported $1 million to $2 million a day in some items are "just not selling at all ...

But everybody seems to know about the place where cars go to die, and its eccentric 75-year-old owner who once operated graders for the highway department and worked the fields with horse teams. Since 1941, he steadily collected about 550 battered cars, some dating back to before the Great Depression in the 1930s.

The hulks are reached through a gate to a private lane. They are partially hidden by cornfields on what once was the 200-acre Mackay family homestead off a state road near this northy estern Illinois community.

Mackay, a roly-poly bac nelor with shoulder-length hair, lives in town with a brother and sister in an ancient, two-story brick house with a horse hitch still at

The home is filled with pieces of furniture that now have become antiques. One room, untouched since it was used as an office by Dr. Isabelle Mackay, an aunt, still has its cabinets of medicines and tools of her trade from beyond the turn of the century.

There is a modest Mackay family estate, including 85 acres of rented-out farmland around the junkyard.

"I'm livin' comfortably and haven't money worries, but I wish I had a brainy guy to tell me what to do with what I got," said Mackay, who went through high school but not on to the University of Illinois like two sisters and a brother.

"I got my start in cars while working on the roads," he said recently. "A fellow's 1935 Chev had a bad transmission and he said he would pay $25 for another one if it could be found. I was able to pick up a battered '35 Chev for $35, sold him the transmission and had the rest of the car left for profit.'

Mackay turned from horse trading to car trading, and at times years ago would buy a lot full of clunkers from dealers at a price of about $45 each. "They would be trying to get $75 each, and I took all of them off their hands at my price," he said. Through such deating, Mackay built up his business. On a good Sunday, perhaps as many as 30 people, as far away as Chicago, will be at his place looking for parts, picking at the hulks like vultures.

"About 20 percent of the cars are pre-war (World War II)." he said. "A year ago I had a run on 1930s — Nashes, Studebakers, Hudsons. That crop is pretty well picked over now

"Customers usually are looking for parts to rebuild old cars, or even buy the whole thing to restore. One fellow wanted a bumper for a 1946 Hudson and finally found one. But before he could take it off, he had to cut a tree down that had grown around it."

Mackay seldom takes off the parts himself, so his operation mainly is cash-and-carry. "If I sell an engine for $65, they have to take it out. If they want me to do it, the price is $75 or $80. No haggling," he said.

"A couple of years ago I was offered $30,000 by a crusher who would haul away the whole bunch and flatten them for the steel and iron," he said.
