BLOCKING — Trudy Blankenship, one of only two women enrolled in Leo Gaje's Arnis instructors' training course practices blocking moves with a partner during a workout this week. "I think it's great," she said. "You learn more useful stuff quicker and it could be very effective for women."

Learning from the masters

Arnis attracts varied students

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

They all came to Big Spring to learn about Arnis, the Filipino martial art. But the reasons they came are as diverse as they are.

Raymond Zwicker came to further his 19-year education in the martial arts. Gary Goldstein came to learn a martial art he could practice as he grows older. Trudy Blankenship came to help out her brother.

And they all came here to study Arnis and Pencak Silat under masters Leo Gaje, Dan Inosanto, Suryadi Jafri and Fred Degerberg at a seminar this week at the Dora Roberts Coliseum.

The seminar ended last night with a graduation ceremony and dance for the 50 newly-certified instructors, their guests and assorted dignitaries at the center.

Zwicker, administrative assistant of security and personnel for the Canadian consulate general in New York City, said he had been "looking for a good stick and knife art" for about 10 years.

"Arnis was like a dream come true," he said.

"I was looking for an art I could use as I grew older," said Goldstein, a plastic surgeon at the Medical Center of Virginia in Richmond. "The other arts are basically young men's arts. Take Tae Kwon Do, for instance. It gets kind of hard to do a spinning, flying, upside-down back kick after you get much past 30."

Goldstein also had a more practical reason to learn Arnis (his first martial art).

"I work in a lot of prisons, doing rehabilitative or reconstructive work on prisoners," he said. "A lot of times I'll be carrying quite a bit of drugs for anesthesia — like cocaine — and that's a set-up situation if I've ever seen one. I wanted, if nothing else, to develop some sense of awareness of what is a bad situation and how close is too close."

Trudy Blankenship from Corbin, Ky., came to learn a martial art so she could help her brother instruct at a health club they plan to open in the future.

"He wants to start a martial areobics class, and he thought it would bring in more women if they had a female instructor," she said.

The students had nothing but praise for the instructors.

"It's beautiful to watch Eddie (Jafri) or Leo," said Ms. Blankenship. "They're so good. I've picked up a lot in the last couple of days."

"When you go to many schools," said Goldstein, "you're learning from somebody who learned from somebody who learned from somebody who's still in Japan. If you ask for an explanation as to why you do something — by the time it gets back to you, it's 'we do it this way because the master said to.'"

"That may be all right for the oriental mind," he said, "but the Western mind keeps asking why. These guys, if you ask them why you do things in a certain way, they have an answer."

Kevin Jodoi of Big Spring agreed.

"He (Gaje) takes the time to show you how to do techniques slowly," Jodoi said, "and it's so easy for him, it makes it look simple. In Tae Kwon Do, I never had the master teach me anything practical that I could use on the street."

All the students compare Arnis favorably with other martial arts.

Trucker shot by gunman in C-City

COLORADO CITY — Gunfire erupted just before dawn yesterday at the El Toro Truck Stop on Interstate 20 leaving one man wounded and another barricaded in the facility threatening to "pull the hearts" out of police officers attempting to arrest him.

Police Chief Ed Wheat pieced together the following scenario of the incident.

Daniel A. Velazquez, 24, a California truck driver, along with his 11-year-old stepson, Brandon, and driving partner, Bruce Parks, picked up a stranded motorist, apparently out of gas about a mile from the truck stop about 6 a.m. yesterday.

Upon arriving at the truck stop, the motorist refused to get out of the truck. Velazquez then tried to physically eject the man from the cab, whereupon the suspect pulled a revolver from his coat and fired six shots at the trucker.

Velazquez was hit once with a slug that lodged an inch from his spine. Parks and the young boy were unharmed in the melee.

The suspect then ran into the truck stop and hid in the bunk room of the facility, according to eyewitnesses.

According to Wheat, he and officers Tommy Headrick, Pat Taylor, Steve Collier and Reserve Officer Ray Dillard arrived on the scene and secured the building.

Then Wheat and all the officers smashed through the suspect's door and disarmed him after a scuffle. Wheat said the man made repeated threats on the officers saying he was going to pull out the officers' hearts and kill them.

The police arrested a 36-year-old Colorado City with a history of run-ins with local police, Wheat said. The man remains in Mitchell County jail today with a charge of attempted murder expected to be filed today, he said.

Velazquez remains in stable condition today at Root Memorial Hospital.

Contractors cited in probe

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The U.S. Justice Department on Monday resumed its probe into alleged bid-rigging on state highway construction projects, and an Austin newspaper quoted unidentified sources saying contractors in Abilene and Big Spring are among the likely targets.

The Austin American-Statesman did not name the contractors in the story carried in its Monday editions.

Leonard Senerote, a spokesman for the U.S. Justice Department's anti-trust division heading the federal investigation, confirmed late Monday morning that a grand jury has resumed hearing testimony in connection with the bid-rigging probe. But he refused to tell the Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau what companies currently are being scrutinized.

Senerote said it is unlikely any indictments will be issued by the panel this month.

"December is a bad time to indict anybody," he said.

He declined to release a list bearing the names of individuals or company officials who have been subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury.

More than 20 Texas highway contractors already have been charged with anti-trust violations as a result of previous grand jury investigations.

The American-Statesman report quoted the unnamed sources as saying between 10 and 20 state highway contractors are being targeted during the current phase of the investigation. Other likely targets include contractors in Amarillo and San Angelo.

Under federal law, corporations convicted of bid rigging can be fined up to $1 million. Individuals can be sentenced to a maximum of three years in prison and fined $100,000. The top penalty for mail fraud, sometimes charged in bid-rigging cases, is a year in prison and a $10,000 fine.

More than $1.4 million in federal fines already have been collected from Texas contractors since the investigation, part of a nation wide probe began in the state two years ago.

Poland suspends martial law restrictions

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government today asked Parliament to ratify its decision to suspend most of the martial law restrictions imposed exactly one year ago, and a press spokesman indicated the easing of military rule would begin Dec. 31.

Solidarity's foreign branch in Brussels charged the move was only "cosmetic." The U.S. reaction was cool and indicated the Reagan administration was not ready to lift its economic sanctions against Poland.

Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the premier, Communist Party Chief and head of the ruling military council, warned the regime would not tolerate any social unrest after martial law is eased — and that the council would retain some of its sweeping powers to control workplaces and public life.

Officials also made it clear Jaruzelski's promise of a limited amnesty, made in a speech Sunday night, would not apply to the most radical opponents of martial law.

In Brussels, Belgium, the foreign office of the outlawed Solidarity trade union dismissed the promised easing of martial law as an effort to placate Western public opinion and bankers who have been reluctant to lend Poland any more money.

It said the move solved "none of the burning political, social and economic problems" in Poland.

The 84-million-member International Confederation of Free Trade Unions also issued a statement in Brussels saying a partial lifting of martial law is insufficient. It demanded that Solidarity be reinstated as the only independent labor union in the Soviet bloc.

UIL to rule on camps

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The first meeting of the University Interscholastic League's study committee on private schools and summer athletic camps has been scheduled for Wednesday.

Other meetings will be held in Houston, Lubbock, San Antonio and the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The special committee of school board members and administrators will consider these topics:

- Allowing private and parochial schools to join the UIL.

- Reclassifying schools.

- Reducing UIL activities during the academic day so students and staff will not have to miss school.

- Restricting summer football, basketball and volleyball camps.

- Placing limitations on band, orchestra and choir participation in non-UIL music activities.

"Due in part to litigation as well as a growing sense of accountability of the school systems by taxpayers, the public is concerned with the state of high school extracurricular activities, and we want to hear those concerns," said Superintendent James McClesky of the Slaton Independent School District.

Council to consider zoning changes, ambulance rates

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

The Big Spring City Council will hold a public hearing Tuesday night concerning two zone change requests on Austin and Goliad streets. Council members also will consider Shaffer Ambulance Service's request for an increase in monthly contract fees.

Oregon, Inc. of Dallas requests two lots at 501 and 503 Austin be zoned light commercial, allowing them to construct a small office and warehouse for a cabinet making operation, Public Works Director Tom Decell said. The lots currently are zoned for two-family homes.

Pierce, Pace and Associates of Midland requests lots on the 2300 block of Goliad be zoned light commercial, allowing them to build a franchised family steak house, Decell said. The lots currently are zoned multi-family and neighborhood service.

Also, Shaffer Ambulance Service, Inc. President John Korell proposes that the city increase their monthly payments from $3,000 to $4,000 to help fund a more costly Advanced Life Support (ALS) service. Currently the service offers a basic life support system.

Korell also proposes that the county increase their payments from $1,500 to $2,000. Korell's proposal says that ALS reduces the number of deaths related to heart attack and major trauma. Shaffer also needs two new ambulance vehicles to replace aging vehicles now in service, Korell said.

City Manager Don Davis said the city's budget would cover the requested increase.

In another matter, the council will award an employee benefit service contract to Great-West Life, Public Employees Benefit Services Corp. City employees previously had voted to withdraw from social security effective Dec. 31.

The council meets at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow in Big Spring City Hall, Fourth and Nolan. The meeting is open to the public.

Jury hears Harrelson jail tapes

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Jurors deciding if Charles V. Harrelson Jr. assassinated a federal judge today began rehearsing some of the secretly taped jailhouse conversations of the defendant.

The panel, which deliberated for about 9½ hours Saturday and Sunday without returning a verdict, asked to hear again four tapes of conversations between Harrelson and his wife, co-defendant Jo Ann Starr Harrelson.

Presiding U.S. District Judge William Sessions instructed his clerk, Art Nicholson, to play the hour-long recordings for jurors at 8:45 a.m. in a closed courtroom.

The tapes were made by inmate John Lee Spinelli from April to June 1981 while Spinelli — termed a "walking bug" by defense attorneys — occupied a cell next to Harrelson's at the Harris County Jail in Houston.

Harrelson, a previously convicted contract killer, is accused of killing U.S. District Judge John H. Wood

Fair to partly cloudy and warmer today and Tuesday. High today in the upper 50s with variable winds at 5-10 miles per hour. Tuesday's forecast calls for a high near 60.

Hot check figures top previous mark

After another record month of collection by the Howard County Hot Check Department, the county attorney is urging caution for merchants and warning hot check writers to attend school.

Melba Soles, director of the county attorney's hot check investigations, said the office collected $20,853.08 in bad checks and fees for November, surpassing October's record by nearly $600.

"Merchants need to get proper identification on all checks," Mrs. Soles said. Drivers' license numbers and date of birth were helpful in tracing hot check writers, Mrs. Soles said.

"Even a car license number would be useful," she added.

Mrs. Soles suggested merchants avoid two-party checks and out-of-town payroll checks.

County hot check writers are required to attend a school designed to cure them of writing hot checks, according to Mrs. Soles. The school, run by the National Corrective Training Institute in Austin, is an eight-hour course that allows hot check writers to avoid arrest.

Attendance is necessary to avoid arrest warrants being filed, according to Mary Owens of the hot check department. Mrs. Owens said at least 41 warrants had been issued for persons who did not attend classes as required.

Jane Overman, legal assistant to County Attorney Bob Miller, added that the school has shown to be "beneficial to those attending." Mrs. Overman and County Court Coordinator Mike Barton also assist in the hot check department.

Nursing program to expand

Howard College's nursing program will be expanded soon by the addition of another "extended campus" program, said Barbara Holdampf, director of the HC associate degree in nursing program.

The extended campus program, approved recently by the Coordinating Board, Texas Colleges and Universities, will incorporate a similar program at Western Texas College in Snyder, said Ms. Holdampf. Under the new program, 31 hours of academic courses will be taught by WTC teachers and 40 hours of nursing training will be offered by HC on the Snyder campus.

The academic courses will include subjects such as anatomy and chemistry. Nursing studies will be in fields such as fundamentals of nursing, medical and surgical nursing, psychiatric nursing, obstetrical nursing and pediatric nursing.

Snyder students will commute to Big Spring for a portion of their studies in psychiatric nursing at the Big Spring State Hospital, Ms. Holdampf said.

Most of the major lectures in nursing subjects will be taught by video cassettes recorded in Howard College classrooms.

"They (the students) will be taught essentially the same thing," Ms. Holdampf said. "It will be the same type of program as we have with Southwest Texas Junior College out of Uvalde at Del Rio."

That program was opened in August and is "going very well," she said.

HCCTAD approves 2-year reappraisal by slim margin

The Howard County Consolidated Tax Appraisal District board of directors approved by a 3-2 margin a reappraisal every two years for the county over the state-required reappraisal every four years.

Despite objections from Board Members Clay Reid and Jack Watkins, the board moved to appraise property values every two years. Reid protested the move, saying "The law requires only every four years; why double it? We ought to hold the line on the amount of money we spend."

Chief Appraiser Gene Pereira said the two-year schedule would save the taxpayers money.

"If you put it on nursekeeping, you're wasting money," Pereira said. The chief appraiser said keeping the records up-to-date would save money in the long run.

Board Member Jack Watkins protested the two-year schedule since it would require extra employees and extra costs. Watkins presented a state-wide study he had initiated comparing Howard County to other districts.

"I question the necessity of 11 people," Watkins said. The 1983 budget shows only four persons being removed from the staff which just completed a massive reappraisal in Howard County, he said.

Board Member Billy T. Smith made the motion for the two-year schedule, saying "It's good business to keep constant records." Lila Estes of the board seconded the motion. Mrs. Estes said the move would save money. Board Chairman Roy Watkins broke the tie by voting for the measure.

In other action, the board approved a $319,818 1983 budget which included the line items not approved at the last meeting. The budget is a reduction from last year's $330,672, according to Pereira.

"To watch it," said Goldstein, "Arnis is the most organized, most systemized method of defense I've ever seen."

Tracy Pruitt of Big Spring agreed, and added, "These techniques will work on the street. It's not like Kung Fu or some other arts where you can train for years and you don't know it well enough to use it."

"It's much quicker," Pruitt continued. "Instead of meeting his (your opponent's) attack with a block and then beginning your attack, your block is actually a counterattack. It's the most effective style I've seen."

"It's got beauty," said Wes Teal of Big Spring. "But you can bring out the beast — you can be as aggressive as you want."

"It's always practical," said Ronnie Bautista, a 15-time black belt from Big Spring.

The training begins with bastons (sticks) and progresses to empty hands, he said, and "when we leave here, we will have learned 64 attacks in one week. In a regular school, you'd have to study at least two or three years to learn that many."

The students predict a bright future for the Filipino and Indonesian martial arts.

"Leo said that he wants to have one instructor in each of the 50 states if they're really hard-core," said Zwicker. "And you can bet that he'll come to each school to do seminars. That makes good business sense to me and it will also keep the art pure."

"You can bet that he (Leo) will be checking up on the instructor to see what he's teaching and see what the students are learning. If it's wrong, he'll be able to tell you in simple language what's wrong and how to correct it. He'll make sure you live up to his standards."

Poland

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Poland should lift martial law entirely, release all political prisoners and allow a resumption of the free trade union movement.

President Reagan has said offered to lift economic sanctions against Poland if such steps were taken.

"We'll be watching and waiting to see what the Polish government does," Speakes said. Asked if the White House was encouraged by developments in Poland, he replied, "I wouldn't say that."

On Sunday, Jaruzelski said the military council had decided that martial law could be eased by the end of the year. The Parliament, or Sejm, was asked today to approve the necessary legislation — a move that was assured since the body acts as a rubber stamp to council decisions.

Asked if Walesa would be allowed to speak, Gornicki said, "If he just goes out on the sidewalk and makes a speech, he does that as a private citizen. He doesn't need government permission for that."

Gornicki also was asked if Walesa could be prosecuted if he makes statements the government considers provocative, and replied, "His remarks will be treated like those of any other Polish citizen."

In his nationally televised speech Sunday, Jaruzelski declared:

"The year which has passed was a great test. We have passed it. We have got the worst behind us," Jaruzelski said.

The general — using the same clipped, precise language with which he declared martial law — said the "basic rigors" of military rule "will cease to function by the end of this year."

"This will be a weighty step towards complete lifting of martial law," Jaruzelski said. "It is simply impossible to jump into full normalization."

"I do promise one thing," Jaruzelski declared. "Anarchy will not be allowed into Poland."

In a reference to the Solidarity underground organization, Jaruzelski said, "The enemy's actions have not stopped ... So we cannot afford yet to renounce all the extraordinary measures."

"No one in Poland or abroad should labor under any illusion that the current decisions will allow a further round" of social and labor unrest, he said.

Without providing details, the martial law chief said some measures to protect state security would remain in effect, and army officers would remain in major factories to prevent sit-down strikes.

Some martial-law restrictions have been lifted, including a curfew, restrictions on telephone communication, bans on domestic travel and censorship of foreign news dispatches.

Without giving a timetable, Jaruzelski said amnesty for interned Solidarity activists and martial-law offenders will be considered and that "internment will cease to be applied."

The government said 10,131 Poles were interned during the year of martial law; and as of Thursday more than 300 people remained in detention.

Jaruzelski made no mention of a letter sent to him Dec. 4 by Solidarity union leader Walesa, released from internment a month ago.

Jaruzelski's harshest language was directed at the United States for the sanctions it imposed in response to martial law.

Sheriffs Log

3 arrested on DWI charges

Three persons were released on separate $1,000 bonds after being transferred to the Howard County sheriff's office on suspicion of driving while intoxicated.

Jesus M. Brito, 48, Route 2, was arrested by Department of Public Safety troopers and released on bond set by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin. Joe Ramiro Rodriguez, 21, of Coahoma and Hector Morales Medrano, 22, of the Sandra Gale Apartments, were arrested by city police with bonds set by Municipal Judge Melvin Daratt.

• Tomas S. Uranga, 49, Route 2, posted $200 bond to be released after his arrest by DPS troopers for suspicion of public intoxication. Bond was set by Heflin.

• Chester Austin, 52, 1701 S. Lancaster, posted $200 bond following his transfer from city custody after his arrest for suspicion of theft over $20 and under $200. Bond was set by Heflin.

• Kenneth Wayne Martindale, 27, November Circle, posted $2,500 bond through the sheriff's office to be released on a city charge of DWI. Records show he was not transferred to the county.

Local fuel business announces merger

The propane gas division of McCann Corp. was purchased last month by Charles Dunnam, owner of Dunnam Tire & Supply and Ackerly Oil Co.

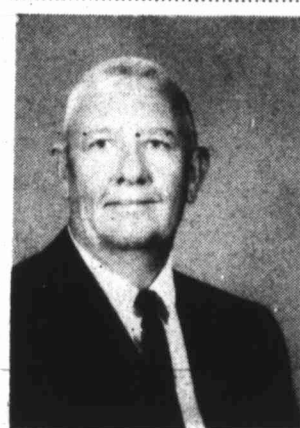

Dunnam said he has plans to merge the division with Ackerly Oil to form Trio Fuels. The business will continue to operate from offices located on the Lamesa Highway, Dunnam said.

There will be no management changes accompanying the merger, he said.

Dunnam was specific in saying he had purchased only the propane division of McCann Corp., which is an oil and gas exploration and production business.

"The largest part of McCann Corp. still continues," he said.

Deaths

... died today

Gene Haston

Gene Haston, 67, died at 3:15 a.m. today in Midland following a long illness.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in Nalley-Pickle Rosewood Chapel with Dr. Carl Powers, pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene, officiating.

Burial will be in Trinity Memorial park.

He was born June 29, 1915 in Hillsboro. He came to Big Spring in 1937. He had worked here as an electrician for many years.

He became a master electrician and opened his own shop in 1960. He semi-retired in 1980 when he sold the business. He was office manager at Pettus-Haston Electric at the time of his death. He had lived at Knott 1951 to 1966 and had been active in the Knott Baptist Church. He married Willene Irwin April 12, 1940 in Colorado City.

She died Jan. 15, 1966. He then married Zennia Hare Nov. 4, 1966 in Big Spring. She died Feb. 2, 1982. He was a member of the First Church of the Nazarene and was serving on the church's board at the time of his death. He had been a member of the Masonic Lodge and Optimists Club. He was a Navy veteran of World War II.

Survivors include two sons, James Robert Haston of Tulsa, Okla., and Jackie Thomas of Richardson; two daughters, Joyce Flinchbaugh of Big Spring and Mrs. Pat (Janet) Fortune of Midland; his mother, Mrs. Roxie Haston of Big Spring; two sisters, Mrs. Barbara Baile of Alamogordo N.M. and Sue Haston Richardson of Tulsa.

Reagan quits 'dense pack' to save MX

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Reagan has all but formally abandoned the "dense pack" basing plan for the MX missile as he fights to win congressional approval to build the first of the new nuclear weapons.

White House and Pentagon officials met with Senate Republican officials to try to come up with a compromise and head off a vote against buying the missile when the Senate takes up the defense spending bill today.

The House last week voted down, 245-176, Reagan's proposal to spend $988 million to buy five of the giant weapons Reagan has named the "Peacekeeper."

But the House left nearly $2.5 billion in the measure to study the missile that is central to Reagan's plan to modernize America's nuclear forces.

House members made clear they didn't like dense pack, which would bunch the missiles in a 20-mile-square area near Cheyenne, Wyo., on the theory that incoming Soviet missiles would knock each other out.

Dense pack also has numerous Senate critics, who say they have the votes to defeat the procurement money. But Reagan, seeking a compromise, last Friday urged production approval and said he was willing to look at other basing plans.

"Next year as we have more time, I'd welcome a vigorous debate on the best way to base the missile," the President during a brief Oval Office news conference. "If the Congress wants to debate and discuss and see if there are possible other options that could conceivably be improvements over this, we're willing for that."

"There's plenty of time to decide" on a basing plan, Reagan said in his weekly radio broadcast Saturday. "What we need now is a clear, positive vote on the missile itself, to go forward on production of the missile."

The president says the missile is needed to make the Soviets bargain for arms control. If Congress refuses to buy the weapon, "we move a major incentive for the Soviets to stay at the (bargaining) table and agree to (weapons) reductions."

Reagan's case for dense pack was damaged last week when Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, revealed that three of the five chiefs opposed the plan because of technical disagreements.

Although Reagan later said the chiefs agreed to support whatever plan he picked, congressional officials late last week said Vessey's statement had all but buried dense pack. It is extremely unusual for Congress to approve a military expenditure opposed by the Joint Chiefs, said the sources, who declined to be named.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., after talks with Reagan, said he supports a proposed compromise under which the production money would be voted but could not be spent until Congress approves a basing plan.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., a leader of the anti-MX forces, forecast approval of a plan similar to the one espoused by Jackson. "We're not looking for a confrontation," he said.

If the Senate does approve buying the weapon, the defense bill would have to be sent back to the House for another vote.

CONTRACT APPROVED — Members of the United Auto Workers union are shown voting at the Windsor Raceway after a Sunday meeting which explained new contract terms with Chrysler Canada Ltd. The new agreement ends a 38-day-old strike by Chrysler's 10,000 Canadian auto workers.

UAW okays Chrysler contract

TORONTO (AP)— Chrysler's 10,000 Canadian workers began returning to work today with a new, richer contract won by a five-week strike that cost the beleaguered automaker $100 million.

"It's sure good to have it behind us and get back to work," Chrysler Canada spokesman Walter McCall said.

McCall said some maintenance workers were called in late Sunday night to get assembly lines ready for the morning shift at all six Canadian plants.

The new pact was ratified Sunday by an overwhelming vote margin of 7,753 to 787. Each of three categories of workers voted "yes" by at least 85 percent, United Auto Workers union spokeswoman Wendy Cuthbertson reported.

U.S. Chrysler workers are scheduled to vote Thursday and Friday on their new contract, negotiated along with the Canadian agreement. The 42,300 American workers did not strike.

Chrysler Canada's two biggest plants — both in Windsor, Ontario, just across the Detroit River from Detroit — produce 688 cars and 432 trucks a day, McCall said. The auto plant is the only source of such large cars as the Chrysler New Yorker and Dodge Diplomat.

McCall said he did not have a figure for Chrysler's losses from the strike. Some industry analysts have estimated the loss at about $15 million a week for the No. 3 automaker, and Iacocca was quoted over the weekend as saying the shutdown cost about $100 million.

The impact of the strike was felt most powerfully in Windsor, where 80 percent of Chrysler Canada workers live. The payroll loss to the community was estimated at $3.5 million per week in a city already hurt by the auto industry's recent troubles.

Chrysler officials said all 4,600 U.S. workers laid off because of the strike in Canada would be recalled within a few days.

The new contract raises a Chrysler assembler's pay immediately from 9.07 Canadian dollars to 10.21. Because the Canadian dollar is worth about 81 cents at current exchange rates, the new wage is equivalent to about $8.27 in U.S. currency.

Skilled workers get a slightly higher raise, so the average increase for all Chrysler Canada workers is $1.15. In addition, they will get four cost-of-living adjustments next year, expected to yield 64 cents.

The new U.S. contract would raise an assembler's pay from $9.07 to $9.81. Until now, Canadian and U.S. workers have been on the same scale, but the new contracts recognize differences in the inflation rates, currency values and general economic conditions in the two countries.

U.S. American workers will get the same quarterly cost-of-living adjustments as the Canadians.

Both contracts expire on Jan. 14, 1984, so Chrysler will be back in negotiations before its two biggest competitors, Ford and General Motors agreements in both Canada and the United States extend to Sept. 14, 1984.

The Chrysler workers, especially in Canada where the union is more militant, are adamant about regaining "parity" with Ford and GM workers, who have been paid more since the UAW made concessions in 1980 and 1981 to help Chrysler avert bankruptcy.

New contracts earlier this year put Chrysler workers $3 behind their counterparts at Ford and GM in Canada, about $2.65 behind in the United States. The new Chrysler pact closes the gap to about $2 in each country, and union leaders say they want to catch up more in the next round of bargaining at Chrysler.

Chrysler says it has barely regained the break-even point and cannot afford to pay as much as its rivals.

Factions fight as Lebanese violence erupts

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Factional fighting escalated in Lebanon today, claiming 29 more lives in nightlong combat between Christian and Moslem militiamen southeast of Beirut and rival Moslem sects in the northern port of Tripoli, police said.

Reports of new fighting emerged as U.S. presidential envoys Philip C. Habib and Morris Draper prepared to return to the Middle East in attempts to arrange a withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon.

The leftist Beirut newspaper Al-Liwa quoted unidentified Lebanese government sources as saying Habib would try as a first step to arrange a partial Israeli pullback from Lebanon's embattled central mountains.

Israeli forces have controlled the central mountains since the early days of their June 6 invasion to crush the Palestine Liberation Organization. The Syrians and elements of the PLO's guerrilla army are deployed in eastern and northern Lebanon, facing Israeli positions.

Rightist Christian and leftist Druse Moslem warriors battled with artillery, rockets and machineguns in the central mountain town of Aley and five neighboring villages Sunday night and early today, killing 19 people and wounding 27, police said.

State radio said the mountain pass stretch of the Beirut-Damascus highway was closed because of the fighting.

Pro-Syrian Alawite militiamen of the Arab Democratic Party and Palestinian-backed irregulars of a Sunni Moslem coalition called the "Popular Resistance Movement" traded artillery, rocket and mortar fire during the night in Tripoli's slums, killing 10 people and wounding 35, police reported.

By police count, this brought to 46 dead and 141 wounded the total casualties in the week-old war for dominance of Tripoli, Lebanon's second-largest city 50 miles north of Beirut.

The overall casualty toll in seven weeks of Christian-Druse war in the Israeli-occupied central mountains stood at more than 130 killed and 300 wounded, police said.

The Aley violence started after an agreement was reached Sunday between Christian and Druse leaders to bring peace to the neighboring Chouf province. Warring militiamen were ordered off all roads and towns in the region and arrangements were under way to free hostages abducted by both sides during earlier fighting.

Police said there were no reports of violence in the Chouf following the peace agreement, concluded after three days of negotiations among various militia leaders in the town of Beit Eddin, 14 miles southeast of Beirut.

Rival militiamen of the rightist Christian Phalange Party and the Druse Socialist Progressive Party were locked in fierce artillery duels in Aley, 7.5 miles southeast of the capital, when the Chouf agreement was announced over Lebanese radio.

Clear skies prevail

By The Associated Press

Clear skies prevailed over most of Texas today as slightly warmer temperatures were in store following a weekend of drizzle and freezing temperatures. The only clouds reported before dawn were over the Lower Rio Grande Valley and the El Paso area. Temperatures dipped below or close to the freezing mark overnight in most sections. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 26 at Temple and Junction to 44 at McAllen.

West Texas — Mostly clear and a warmer through tonight. Increasing cloudiness and turning cooler Panhandle and mostly fair south Tuesday. Highs 55 to 65. Lows 27 to 38. Highs Tuesday 59 to 68.

Billboard proposal accepted

HOUSTON (AP) — Bruce Capers finally decided to spell out his love for Candace Coley and, as promised, he proposed marriage in a big way.

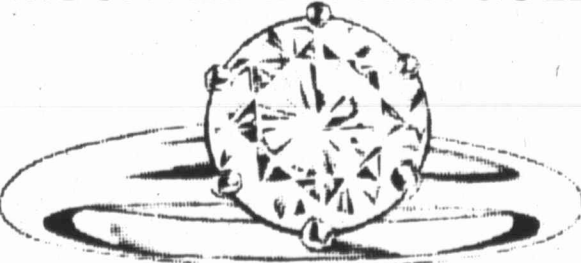

"I told her, 'When I'm ready, I'll be ready and you'll know it,'" Capers said. "I promised her that when I did ask her it would be in a big way."

Ms. Coley may not have anticipated Capers' proposal however—recorded on a 10 by 40-foot billboard on a busy Houston freeway. It reads "Candy, Will You Marry Me? Bruce."

Capers said he wanted to reassure Ms. Coley of his intentions because he had proposed twice previously and bowed out ungracefully due to cold feet.

Ms. Coley said she couldn't talk for 10 minutes after seeing the billboard. But when she could speak, she accepted.

First a friend — then a host

The sound advice, "If you drink, don't drive," is familiar. But for many, drinking and driving become difficult to avoid as holiday season parties get underway. We urge that people put acts of true friendship one notch ahead of the effort to become a lavish party-giver.

The host must exercise responsibility toward guests when planning a party. There are friendly, low-key ways to draw attention away from the bar without dampening the holiday spirit. The following are some suggestions:

- Push food instead of liquor. A tempting and lavish display of rich and starchy snacks and main dishes will not only maintain your "great partygiver" image, but will help slow down the absorption of alcohol into the bloodstream. A buffet arrangement will insure that all have plenty to eat.

- Many people tend to drink less and mix less potent drinks when serving themselves, so set up a self-serve bar.

- Don't rush refills. Wait until the glass is empty before you offer another drink. And then don't be in a hurry...especially if someone seems to be coming up empty too fast.

- Include a variety of low and non-alcoholic beverages for those choosing not to drink. One-third of the adult population chooses not to drink at all. And many others who drink socially sometimes prefer not to. There are nine million Americans for whom even one drink is too many — so don't push.

- Keep guests circulating with dancing or games, diverting attention from the bar.

- Set an example yourself, and don't overindulge.

- About an hour before the party ends, tactfully store the liquor and bring out plenty of hot coffee and perhaps a rich dessert. Neither will sober anyone up, but they are valuable time gainers, and time is the only factor that overcomes alcohol's effects.

- Have a plan just in case someone overindulges. Suggest guests carpool, call a cab, or let the friend "sleep it off" at your home.

- These tips should help Texans celebrate safely during the holidays.

The difference

If a person does much shopping he begins to see a great deal of difference between men and women shoppers.

These differences are not necessarily good or bad, but the two sexes do have their particular buying quirks.

The first difference is that men pay no attention to what's on sale, whereas women always know what's on sale.

And because they know where a bargain can be found, women are much more thrifty shoppers than men. If a man wants a certain item, he'll usually just go down a buy it without giving the expense much thought.

However, a woman, when feeling the need for a particular good, will wait until the item is on sale before buying it. Thus, she has the item plus the satisfaction of knowing she got it on sale.

Then when a friend or visitor remarks about a certain item she has, the woman can say "I got it on sale for only $3.99." And then everybody oohs and aahs at what a good deal she got, while the woman basks in the glow of thriftiness.

THE SECOND difference is that men are much more impulsive when out shopping. Almost any wife will tell you that when her husband accompanies her to the grocery store, the bill will be higher.

If a couple's bill is normally $30 for a trip the wife makes to the grocery store, it will be $132 if the husband goes along and is allowed to put things in the basket.

The third difference is that women have much more shopping stamina than men. With all the shopping women have done in the past the department store stamina has been inherited from several generations. Shopping is an inspiration to women and drudgery to men. A woman can stay in a shopping mall five hours and be gaining momentum, while the man will be passed out on a bench somewhere by a fountain.

ANOTHER difference that goes along with this is that men are much faster shoppers than women. This is the only difference that is favorable toward the male.

If a man wants something, he goes to the store, buys it, and then goes back home.

Women go to the store and browse, compare brands and check prices before buying anything.

Women may save more money when shopping, but men wind up with much more time to enjoy their purchases.

Something else that's different between men and women is that men will not ask sales clerks for assistance and women will.

If a particular item is not out on the shelf a man won't ask for it. He figures the store must not want to sell the item very badly or the clerks would have it out. He'll go someplace else that has the item out in plain sight.

A woman will ask the clerk if there are anymore of the item in the store room. And she will ask about color, size and design. Women are thorough shoppers and hard to discourage. Stores that have poor stocking habits should be thankful that women have this trait. Men would let the store go out of business.

These differences should make man forget about being the stronger sex. If shopping is any indication, the woman is Charles Atlas and the man is the 98-pound weakling.

Some say if a ladybug lights on your hand, you will receive new gloves.

Shopping scene

NEW YORK — Consumers are supposed to lead the way to recovery. So a visit to New York offers a chance to check out the shopping scene. Here is a report on the greatest PX in the world, less than 20 days before Christmas.

Prosperous-looking buyers crowd the shops all over midtown Manhattan. Traffic is heavy, and buses and subways jammed. Still, signs of recession intrude themselves. Potholes on Fifth Avenue and uncollected garbage on Park announce a decline in city services. On Lexington Avenue in the mid-50's there is a deserted construction site — a projected office building abandoned by a Canadian realtor at a cost of over 120 million. It expresses a continuing squeeze in real estate and — since the site was mortgaged by Citicorp — in banking.

An upside-down condition prevails in the major department stores. While the most exclusive ones seem to be hawking wares cut-rate, the mass merchandisers are emphasizing high quality.

Macy's, for example, features high-fashion clothing by the best French, Italian and American designers. It has installed in the cellar a branch of the Third Avenue saloon famous for its appeal to young professionals with lots of money — P.J. Clarke's. It comes very close to being the biggest single advertiser in the paper read by the top people, The New York Times.

Elite stores, in contrast, are moving to broaden their appeal. Bergdorf Goodman has practically the whole store on sale. Lord & Taylor stays open on Sundays. Bloomingdale's is now a big advertiser in the paper that most caters to blue-collar New York, the Daily News.

Custom-made tax break

WASHINGTON — Washington lobbyists could take a lesson from Steven Jobs, the multimillionaire striping who heads Apple Computers Inc. Though he is a mere 27 years old and totally naive in the way legislation is made in Washington, the whiz kid from Silicon Valley has come within drooling distance of the most lucrative individual tax break in memory.

Jobs wants to donate Apple computers to all 83,000 public elementary and high schools in the country — if the Treasury will give his company double the normal tax break for such contributions. But this philanthropy, it turns out, would net Apple as much as $60 million just in short-term tax advantages alone.

In fact, the double tax break would mean that the government — more precisely, the rest of us taxpayers — would be picking up all but 8 percent of the computers' cost. "There's no element of giving here," said one Capitol Hill opponent. "We're buying the things."

The long-range benefits to Apple could dwarf even the immediate tax break. Not only would the company get paid for spare parts, improvements and maintenance for the 83,000 computers, its "donation" would effectively freeze competitors out of the school market.

SPECIALTY FOOD shops drive a brisk trade. Half a dozen relatively new chocolatiers have opened on Madison Avenue. One of the busiest is Kron, an inauspicious-looking place on the second floor of a building in the mid-60's. The front part of the shop is the selling area — a counter with various wares on display. Among the items available are signs in chocolate that say "Diet" and "Think Thin." Particularly popular are chocolate replicas of records, with grooves and holes in the middle. They bear, where the title of the song and the name of the performer usually go, legends that say things like: "For the Record — You're the Greatest."

The back part of the place looks like a set for Santa's workshop in S.J. Perelman's famous parody of the Clifford Odets' play, "Waiting for Lefty." Half a dozen employees bustle about furiously. They collect various goodies, pack them in boxes and send them out in response to incoming orders. Stacked boxes, ready for shipment, line the walls from floor to ceiling. The addresses suggest that a lot of rich people all over the country are going to get chocolate for Christmas.

But it is not only the carriage trade that goes in for fancy foods. The Grand Union supermarket chain has one of its two stores in Manhattan at 86th Street between First and Second avenues. At first glance it looks like just another supermarket. The patrons are not particularly well dressed, or especially polite. There are blacks and Hispanics as well as whites. The shelves in the center counters are filled with the usual products put out by firms with nationally known names. There is Campbell's soup, and Colgate tooth paste, and Coca-Cola.

BUT THERE IS free coffee available at the entrance. The layout, planned by the magazine designer Milton Glaser, features unusually wide aisles and an attractive glass facade. Around the edges of the store are high-quality foods sold at relatively modest prices. Live lobsters are available, and quail, and pheasant. There are 20 different kinds of coffee, including beans from Hawaii as well as Brazil and Colombia. Fresh croissants are delivered daily.

Jimmy Goldsmith, a friend who owns Grand Union, claims a "culinary revolution" is under way in the U.S. He says ordinary people are fed up with homogenized, prepackaged food that is short on taste and long on chemicals with dubious health effects. He believes supermarkets can clean up by selling high-quality foods at their customary low profit margins.

If so, the upside-down trend in merchandising could presage a future economic boom. The flush times of the postwar era found their motor force in the sale of what used to be middle-class products and services to working people. A similar thrust, good for perhaps the rest of the century, could be achieved if it became economical to sell luxury goods to middle-class patrons.

To be sure, it is early to be proclaiming any kind of economic rebound. Nobody can yet tell how much buying is being done by today's shoppers. The appearance of brisk business may add only one more unknown to the many other mysteries that now dominate the economy. For many shoppers case the merchandise and turn away without buying. At the famous Fifth Avenue jewelry store, I overheard one woman say to another: "This year, Tiffany's doesn't say much to me."

And in addition to the obvious publicity advantages, the training of thousands of young people on Apple computers would presumably predispose them to that brand name when they buy their own.

In short, as Apple's critics have tried to point out, the special tax-break legislation would bring incalculable advantages to Jobs' company. "It's a gold mine," one congressional observer told my associate Peter Grant.

YET DESPITE the obvious special-interest status of the legislation, it sailed through the House and is expected to pass the Senate without much trouble. Considering Jobs' complete lack of experience in the legislative process, this is a truly remarkable achievement. On his first ride on the Washington merry-go-round, he appears to have grabbed the brass ring.

When Jobs arrived in town last summer to promote his scheme, few Capitol Hill insiders gave him much chance of success. What with rising deficits, tax increases and budget cuts, it hardly seemed the right time for a highly successful company to ask for a tax break.

Nor did Jobs' lobbying effort appear all that impressive. Though he had traded in the jeans and cowboy boots he wears at Apple headquarters in Cupertino, Calif., for a business suit, he tended to flood members of Congress with long-winded documents instead of easy-to-read two-page summaries. And despite a black mustache and an adult intensity, Jobs still looked more like a summer intern than the head of a $600-million-a-year corporation.

But Jobs, who designed the first Apple computer in his parents' garage and went on to dominate the home-computer field, is not a slow learner. And he had willing teachers.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., not only agreed to co-sponsor the Apple bill, but gave Jobs a cram course in legislative strategy and tactics. The staff of Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., explained to Jobs the importance of enlisting the support of the education lobby. Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., carried the ball for Apple in committee hearings.

Even the White House lent Jobs a hand in the person of Lee Atwater, a presidential political aide. After Jobs made his pitch to the top brass at the White House, the Treasury Department's initial opposition to the tax break was overruled.

Christian feels all alone

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: My parents have just moved to a new city and I feel all alone. I am a Christian, but the only friends I have been able to make have no interest in spiritual things. What should I do? — A.N.

DEAR A.N.: First of all, this can be a very important time for you spiritually, because it can cause you to turn to Christ in a fresh way and depend on him more than you have ever done before in your life. You need to review his promises to you concerning his presence with you; and walk in faith every day that those promises are true. He has said, "Never will I leave you; never will I forsake you" (Hebrews 13:5). He also has promised, "Add surely I will be with you always, to the very end of the age" (Matthew 28). What am I saying? Simply this: even when you feel very lonely, Christ is with you. You can pray to him at any time, and you can trust every situation into his hands.

Let me make several practical suggestions, however. First, if at all possible, you should seek out others who are Christians with whom you can have fellowship, because we need other Christians to help us grow spiritually (and they need us). Pray that God will lead you to others — I am sure there are probably many young people in your city and your school who are living for Christ. Find a church where Christ is preached. Inquire if there are any inter-denominational Christian groups (like Campus Life or Young Life) that are active among young people in your city.

Then realize that God may have sent you as a Christian witness to a new circle of friends. They need to know Christ, and you should be praying for them and asking God to help you share with them what Christ means to you.

There are two extremes to avoid. First, avoid compromising your convictions in the hopes it will win you friends. Second, avoid cutting yourself off from others just because they don't share your interest in spiritual things. Make it your goal to live for Christ and grow closer to him, and he will bless you.

Some experts estimate that the first dogs were tamed over 12,000 years ago.

Pot arrest ruins yule for granny

CARNESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A grandmotherly 81-year-old says sheriff's deputies "just ruined my Christmas" by charging her with selling marijuana to an undercover agent.

Maybell Cawthon's great-nephew even had to come bail her out of jail.

Mrs. Cawthon, who insists she is innocent, was charged with selling about an ounce of marijuana for $25 to an undercover agent of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. She was one of 32 people arrested after a five-month investigation in Franklin County.

"This has got me all tore up," Mrs. Cawthon said in an interview Thursday discussing the arrest at her rural home.

She said she worries that if she goes to jail, there will be no one to look after her house, her two dogs and her seven cats.

"It has just ruined my Christmas," she said.

"These two fellows (deputies) came out here ... and said they had a warrant for me," she said. "I said 'What for?' And they says, 'For selling marijuana.'"

"I says, 'What? I don't know nothing about no marijuana.' But they says I sold some to this fellow back about the 14th day of October. So then they took me down to the jail and showed me this fellow, and I told them I had never seen him before. After I looked him over good last night, though, I'll know him if I see him again."

"I never have violated no laws or nothing," Mrs. Cawthon said.

But Franklin County Sheriff Joe Foster, who said has known Mrs. Cawthon for 30 years, said, "The rumors about her had been coming in for a long time."

If convicted, she could be sentenced to five years in jail.

Deputies booked and fingerprinted Mrs. Cawthon on Wednesday at the county jail. She was released after her great-nephew, Toy Lee Fowler of Lavonia, posted a $5,000 property bond.

"She wasn't too happy about being here and she let us know about it," said Foster.

Mrs. Cawthon said she has no sympathy for lawbreakers, especially those who use drugs.

"It's killing the younger generation," she said. "If we ever have another war we won't have any men able to get up and fight because of it."

IN TUNE — Maybell Cawthon, 81, of Carnesville, Ga., plays her banjo on the porch of her home. She was arrested last week and charged with selling marijuana to an undercover agent of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

Painting not libelous, court rules

NEW YORK (AP) — A artist who used his painting to criticize two fellow artist by portraying them as "muggers" of art did not commit libel, a state appeals court has ruled.

The painting, "The Mugging of the Muse," was "obviously allegorical and symbolic" but not libelous, the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court in Manhattan said Friday.

In the painting, artist Paul Georges put the faces of two fellow artists on masks of muggers attacking a partially nude woman he called "the muse of art."

The artists, Jacob Silberman and Anthony Siani, sued and won a judgment of $30,000 each after a civil jury in State Supreme Court in Manhattan found the painting libelous.

In overturning the verdict, the appeals court said Georges was merely expressing his opinion that the artistic beliefs of the other two were "destructive of the arts."

"It says nothing more. Far worse commentary is written almost daily by newspaper and magazine critics of every aspect of the arts..." the court said.

AMC recalls 23,000 cars

DETROIT (AP) — Some 23,000 American Motors Corp. vehicles from the 1982 model year are being recalled because faulty transmission fluid could wreck transmissions and lead to accidents, the automaker says.

In a statement last week, AMC said vehicles involved include Eagles and Jeeps with four- or five-speed manual transmissions built early in the model year.

The problem stems from transmission fluid that is too thin to lubricate the parts sufficiently, causing transmissions to be damaged or wrecked, said spokesman Ben Dunn.

Two related accidents where occupants suffered a broken arm and fractured ribs have been reported, Dunn added.

The problem was discovered through "internal evaluations," he said.

Owners of the vehicles will receive letters soon advising them to bring vehicles to dealers for free replacement of the lubricant, the statement said.

Blood calcium causes problems

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband has high blood calcium, also a high level of parathyroid hormone, according to his doctor. He has also been treated for a gastric ulcer and has osteoarthritis on the back. Can you explain to me about the operation on the parathyroid glands? I understand they are difficult to locate and that there is only a 95 percent chance that the problem can be resolved. So far, he has no kidney stones. I understand also that his kidney function is slightly impaired. — Mrs. F.D.B.

Your husband has overactive parathyroid glands. Those are four small glands in the neck directly behind the thyroid.

The gland is making too much parathyroid hormone, and the results of that can be two-fold — leeching of calcium out of his bones and a rise in blood calcium levels. The second possible cause of the high blood level is a decreased ability of the kidneys to filter calcium out into the urine. As the blood levels rise, some of the hormone may be deposited in the kidneys as stones.

The consequences of such a situation are varied. Mental function may be impaired, bones may become weakened; even peptic ulcer may be associated with the problem. I cannot say whether or not your husband's ulcers or osteoarthritis stemmed from this situation, but either may have.

If his health is otherwise good (and I'm happy to hear he doesn't have the kidney-stone problem as yet), the best treatment is removal of the parathyroid glands. You are correct in saying that those glands are difficult to find (because of their smallness), but the 95 percent success rate you mention sounds like a pretty good bet in my book. Those odds are pretty attractive, especially since the surgery represents the only good way to control the problem.

He should, in the meantime, keep well-hydrated so that his extra blood calcium does not deposit in his kidneys. And he should avoid staying in bed for long periods since more calcium comes out of bones with prolonged bed rest. If you feel uneasy about surgery, a second opinion might help, and I am fairly sure that would come down in favor of the operation.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband has recently been diagnosed as having McArdle's disease. Would you please explain the disease, treatment and prognosis? Thanks. — M.W.

McArdle's disease is a very rare inherited condition in which an enzyme is missing in muscle tissue. And without that enzyme the person tires easily and may have severe muscle cramping. Unfortunately, there is no way to replace the missing enzyme, so people must learn to limit their exercise and to avoid vigorous exertion as much as possible.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

DEAR READERS: In my column for Nov. 5, a well-to-do widow wrote: On my demise, I would like to use my estate to better humanity. What are your recommendations?"

My reply in part: "In my opinion, the most rewarding gift is helping people to help themselves. ('Give a man a fish and he can eat for a day. Teach him to fish and he can eat for a lifetime.') Support scholarship programs and make education available for students who are eager to learn and qualify scholastically but lack the funds."

On the very same day, Ann Landers, in response to a reader, wrote: "Your letter brings to mind an old Chinese saying, 'If you teach him how to fish, he will eat for the rest of his life.'"

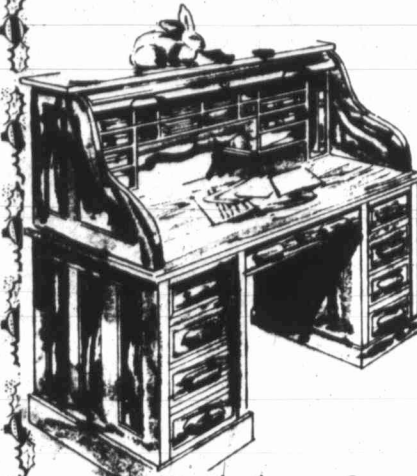

Of said coincidence, San Francisco Chronicle columnist Herb Caen chronicled: "Caenfucis say: 'Do not wish to carp, but something fishy here.'"

Nothing fishy. Mental telepathy is not unheard of in the case of identical twins.

REAL EGGNOG JUST LIKE YOU LIKE IT.

Quality Chekd thick, rich egg nog is extra special. Brimming with real eggs, country fresh milk and a sprinkling of spices, it's a holiday delight. And, this recipe for our Easy Holiday Egg Nog Cream Pie is something special, too.

Egg Nog Cream Pie

Graham Cracker Crust

- 1-1/2 cups graham cracker crumbs (about 20 crackers)
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1/3 cup melted Quality Chekd butter

Mix crumbs, sugar and butter. Press mixture firmly into 9-inch pie pan covering bottom and side. Bake 10 minutes in 350° oven. Cool.

Holiday Cream Pie Filling

- 4 cups Quality Chekd Eggnog
- 1/4 cup cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons Quality Chekd butter, softened

Blend eggnog and cornstarch in saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and boils. Boil and stir 1 minute. Remove from heat, blend in butter. Immediately pour into baked pie shell; press plastic wrap onto filling. Chill pie thoroughly, at least 2 hours. Serve pie with whipped cream or sprinkle with shaved dark chocolate.

Fresh and Friendly. Right here at home.

RKO pulls plug on Ed Bush

DALLAS (AP) — Times are tough — even for radio talk show hosts. Just ask Ed Bush.

The 38-year-old broadcast veteran, who's been in the business since he was 17, has been host, and one-third owner, of "America Overnight," a six-night-a-week talkfest on the RKO Radio Network.

Now Bush is looking in the "help wanted" ads.

RKO gave Bush his walking papers Sept. 30. His last show is Dec. 31.

"America Overnight" — or "AO" as it's known in the industry — debuted Aug. 1, 1981 with a two-host, two-city format. Bush did the first three hours from Dallas, and Eric Tracy followed up with a similar stint from Los Angeles.

Now, the entire six-hour run comes from a production studio Bush owns in North Dallas. Tracy — along with the Los Angeles-based segment — disappeared last summer and Mitch Carr, a Dallas radio veteran, now is host for the second half.

The problem is threefold — money, money and money.

"America Overnight" is offered by the RKO II network. The network's sister — RKO I — offers affiliates an all-night rock music show "Nighttime America," from in New York.

But, according to Bush, most of RKO's affiliates, even on his circuit, are music-oriented — and not interested in talk shows.

The satellite-transmitted program is available to about 80 stations nationwide but only about half run his show, Bush said.

Pam Hamilton, vice president and director of creative services for the RKO Radio Network in New York, said cancellation was due to extraordinary competition in the talk show field. She cited "The Larry King Show" on Mutual Radio and ABC's new all-talk network.

"We just decided to stick to an area where we did a better job — music," she said.

Ms. Hamilton pointed out that most of RKO affiliates are music-oriented. She also said that the network would offer in Bush's place "Nighttime America," a musically oriented show.

Asked if RKO might try another talk show, she replied, "I don't see it in the plans right now."

Bush said "a number" of stations carrying "AO" have been in touch with him. And that's led him to think of a possible new venture — a weekend daytime talk show.

"Weekends are a tremendous open sewer," Bush said. "People (advertisers) spend all their money on Monday through Fridays. ... A lot of stations program sports in the afternoons and evenings. I detect there's a hole in there that could be filled."

CANCELLED — Ed Bush, a 38-year-old broadcast veteran, has had his national talk show "America Overnight" cancelled by the RKO network. Lack of money reportedly forced the show off the air.

At any rate, Bush said he plans to remain in Dallas, where his new company, Ed Bush Productions, is trying to break into the commercial production business. He also hopes to use his fully equipped studio to broadcast a new talk show.

The bearded Bush began his radio career at age 17 in Detroit, where he grew up and progressed through a number of jobs in radio and TV until he moved to a talk show at radio station WERE in Cleveland in 1972.

Bush quickly overcame his reservations about moving from the world of music and records into politics, authors and other topics that make up the talk show business.

"Instead of Herman's Hermits and Motown acts, I was meeting senators, congressmen ... people making news. I had a ball," he said.

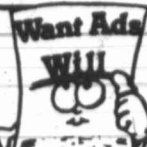

Bush moved to Dallas' WFAA in 1975 and built up a large following — "the most successful part of the station" — with a late evening talk show on an otherwise music-oriented outlet.

In 1976, Bush, thinking he had made a better deal, moved on to KNBR in San Francisco where a "great three-year contract" came to an end after one year when the station decided to run the Oakland A's baseball games during his time slot.

Bush returned to WFAA — which had then switched to a news-talk format — and remained until 1980. After that he served as a consultant to a short-lived news-talk station in Fort Worth, before putting together "America Overnight."

"Tracy did a phenomenal job," Bush said. "It was like 'let's go do a show at your house' and it comes out on Radio Free Europe."

Waldensians retain culture

VALDESE, N.C. (AP) — A small band of Waldensians looking for a place to settle in America a century ago selected the Burke County village of Valdeese because of its likeness to their native land in the French-Italian Alps.

In 1893, a group of 15 to 12 Waldensian families fled to America, bringing their religion and culture to the North Carolina mountains. Their influence on the town remains obvious.

Its neat, tree-lined streets have names like St. Germaine, Jaubert and Martinat. Some of the most common names in the telephone book are Garrou, Perrou and Pons — all names of some of the area's first settlers. Grocery stores advertise fresh sausage, or Italian sausage. The area's only outdoor drama, "From This Day Forward," tells of the story of the Waldensians' struggles.

The roads around the village of Valdeese are steep and winding like the trails in the French-Italian Alps. Towering mountains ring the small town in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The French-speaking Waldensians, who left Italy to escape religious persecution, used their farming skills to tame the land, constructed sturdy, stone houses for their families and founded the town.

Waldensians were farmers in Europe, but the North Carolina settlers were forced to make their living in industry because the soil around Valdeese proved to be poor and rocky. The Garrou family founded the first Waldensian textile mill in 1901. Another Waldensian family started Waldensian Baking Co. in 1915.

Today there are about a dozen Waldensian mills with outlets in Valdeese and the bakery is one of the largest in the Southeast.

Valdeese has grown into a thriving industrial community of about 3,000 residents. But the several hundred descendants of the Waldensian settlers say they haven't forgotten their heritage.

Valdeese celebrated its founding recently with a Waldensian festival, complete with downtown booths offering authentic Italian food and a day-long bocci, or lawn bowling, tournament on the town-square lawn.

"My father and mother were some of the first Waldensians here, and I've lived here all my life. I was born here," said Oscar Pascal, 64, the town's police chief. "All my ties are here. I feel like this area is a part of me and my life."

The Waldensian Presbyterian Church, a gray stucco Romanesque structure built in 1896, dominates one end of Main Street. The Waldensian Museum, with its rare collection of handmade 19th-century clothes, furniture and china, is across the street from the church. The museum is the only one of its kind outside Italy and is a source of pride for the Historic Valdeese Foundation.

"We feel very proud of the museum because of its collection of so many rare and beautiful artifacts," said foundation member Catherine Dalmas, 73, whose mother and father came from Italy to Valdeese in 1915. "It gives us an opportunity to look back into our past and see how our parents and grandparents lived."

"We have a unique community here, something you will find nowhere else in America," Ms. Dalmas said. "We have a proud heritage and we Waldensians want to keep that heritage alive."

Texas-size Shootout

Playoff-bound Pokes test makeshift Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers enter David Carter faces a tough dual responsibility tonight when the Oilers host the Dallas Cowboys in the Astrodome.

He must try to protect quarterback Archie Manning from what he calls the best defensive line in the business.

And in his spare time, Carter has to carry on the "hate Dallas" tradition left by former starting center Carl Mauck, who snarled when he said Cowboys and invited any Houstonians who cheered Dallas to move there.

Carter smiles when recalling his former teammate's antics, but he's deadly serious about tonight's foe.

"They've probably got the strongest front four in the National Football League," Carter said. "They put pressure on a passer and that makes the secondary look good. Of course, their secondary is coming along too, but that front four makes it go."

Carter will try to shepherd the patchwork Oilers' offensive line against the likes of Ed "Too Tall" Jones, John Dutton, Randy White and Harvey Martin in a series of matchups that could be the determining factor in the game.

"Offensively, we've got to do a good job with their defensive line," Coach Ed Biles said. "They love to get you in third and long situation because now the defensive line can ignore everything else and come right at you. It's the toughest time to pass block."

The Oilers will counter with Mo Towns against Jones, Ed Fisher against Dutton, Ralph Williams against White and John Schuhmacher against Martin.

Williams is the third starting left guard for the Oilers this season. Williams, a free agent signee in 1981, spent last season on injured reserve and started his first game last week against the New York Giants. He will be expected to challenge White, regarded by many as the premier defensive tackle in the NFL.

"Maybe he won't show up," Williams said.

Schuhmacher at least has had the benefit of facing Martin in a preseason game — Schuhmacher's first as a tackle. Schuhmacher received the position when Leon Gray was traded to New Orleans.

"My attitude has improved about 370 percent since that first time," Schuhmacher said. "It was my first game at tackle and my techniques were sloppy. Everything I did was wrong. I've corrected most of those errors now and I'm ready."

As for carrying on in Mauck's footsteps as a Cowboys hater, Carter said, "I've never been a Cowboy fan. But you've got to give them a lot of respect. They've been a great football team for a lot of years. As far as hating them, the whole team hates them."

The Cowboys could make it 17 straight winning seasons by beating the Oilers, who trail 2-1 in the regular season series. Houston's lone regular season victory came Thanksgiving Day in 1979 when the Oilers were in the midst of three straight playoff seasons.

The Oilers take a 1-4 record into tonight's game while the Cowboys are 4-1 and on the brink of making the playoffs for the 16th time in 17 years.

Multitude of honors, awards rules martial arts ceremonies

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

The number of dignitaries present read like Santa's shopping list. Newly certified instructors were smiling like kids with a shiny new quarter. And Miss Texas (Lisa Allred) was the most popular dance partner since Ginger Rogers.

Those are just a few observations from the graduation ceremony for the First Certified Instructors Candidate Course in the Majapahit Martial Arts Sunday night at the Dora Roberts Community Center.

Amidst all the speeches, awards presentations and post-graduation celebration, the main order of business was the certification of 50 students to teach and continue the tradition of the martial arts of kali, arnis, eskrima and pencak silat.

Diplomas were awarded to 30 men and one woman from 12 states and the countries of Mexico and Canada present at the evening ceremonies (the other 19 certification winners were already on their way home).

Commencement speaker for the event was Ambassador Rodolfo Severino of the Philippines. Other dignitaries on hand to express their appreciation for Texas hospitality and congratulate the successful candidates were General Angel Kanapi of the Philippines, Vice Consul Masdur Kasdana of Indonesia and attache Sambas Wirakusumah of Indonesia, representing his country's ambassador to the United States, Ambassador A. Hasnan Habib.

Big Spring Mayor Clyde Angel extended to a greeting to the honored guest, saying, "I never expected to see some of the things I have or to meet so many nice people. I want you to know how much we appreciate you. It's been a real joy and a pleasure to have you here with us."

"This has been a most impressive event. We are sincerely grateful for your coming to Big Spring," he said.

Attache Wirakusumah — apologizing for his broken English — said his nation's forefathers would never have dreamed their children would be in Big Spring in this day and age promoting their martial arts.

"It is not so much a sport, but a culture to us," he told the graduates. "I hope you all understand this value transmitted by our forefathers to us. It has a deep meaning. I congratulate those that have passed. I hope what you get tonight is transmitted with the deep meaning of this martial art."

The speakers were quick to acknowledge the work done here by their representative, master Leo Gaje. "Thanks to Leo Gaje who is the catalyst of this seminar. He is one who can best pass to Americans the skills and discipline in the learning of the martial arts of the Philippines and Southeast Asia," said General Kanapi.

Ambassador Severino — who attained his lofty post in 1977, culminating years of service to his country — gave his hosts a warm (See 'Students' on page 2-B)

Pats, Bills gain upsets

By The Associated Press

Mark Henderson cleared a path for the game's only score, but you won't find his name listed in the New England Patriots' program.

The 24-year-old Henderson became an unusual hero for the Patriots Sunday when he drove a tractor onto the field with less than five minutes remaining and cleared snow from a small area during a New England timeout.

John Smith then kicked a 33-yard field goal from the cleared spot, lifting the Patriots a 3-0 upset victory over the Miami Dolphins.

"I saw arms waving me out," said Henderson, a member of the Schaefer Stadium maintenance crew.

Henderson, of North Attleboro, Mass., told reporters he couldn't stick around for post-game interviews because he was due back at Norfolk State Prison. He said he's serving a 15-year sentence for burglary, but is on a pre-release program that lets him out for school and work assignments.

New England Coach Ron Meyer later admitted he waved Henderson onto the field to clear off the snow, but insisted he would have done the same in a similar situation for the Dolphins.

Miami Coach Don Shula, who watched in dismay as the path was cleared for Smith, was distressed with the situation.

NFL

"The officials shouldn't have let it happen," said Shula. "The official nearest me said he didn't see the guy come out before it was too late. Certainly the officials shouldn't have let it happen but we have no recourse so let's forget it. I don't plan a protest."

Smith missed on an 18-yard field goal attempt in the second period, but made amends with his kick against the wind at 10:20 of the fourth period. The Dolphins then drove from their 34 to a first down at the New England 20 with 1:17 remaining. But on the third play, linebacker Don Blackmon intercepted a pass by David Woodley at the 10 with just 30 seconds left to kill the comeback.

Redskins 12, Cardinals 7

Mark Moseley kicked field goals of 32, 30, 20 and 24 yards to lift Washington over St. Louis. Moseley's kicks, set up by Joe Theismann's passing, brought the 34-year-old kicker within two of the NFL's record. He now has a string of 18 in a row, two fewer than kicked by Garo Yepremian, for the Miami Dolphins and New Orleans Saints.

Moseley missed from the Cardinals' 27 on his first try of the day in the opening period but got a second chance because St. Louis was offside on the play. He capitalized on the opportunity, putting Washington up 3-0 with his boot from the St. Louis 22.

Raiders 21, Chiefs 16

Jim Plunkett threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Calvin Muhammad with 25 seconds left, capping a furious fourth quarter that lifted Los Angeles over

Kansas City.

The Raiders moved 80 yards in seven plays after the Chiefs had soared 85 yards in seven plays to take a 16-14 lead on Billy Jackson's 1-yard touchdown plunge with 1:55 left.

Jets 32, Bucs 17

Freeman McNeil rushed for two touchdowns and Richard Todd passed for another to lead the Jets over the Bucs. The victory was New York's fifth straight since an opening-day loss to Miami.

McNeil's first touchdown came on the Jets' first possession of the game, when he followed a Marvin Powell block on a 4-yard run with 8:40 left in the first quarter. McNeil's second TD came on a 5-yard run 53 seconds later that gave New York a 14-0 lead.

The Jets iced the game with 13 seconds left in the third quarter when Todd lobbed a 1-yard pass to Mickey Shuler.

Bengals 23, Browns 10

Pete Johnson and Ken Anderson ran for second-quarter touchdowns and Jim Breech booted three second-half field goals as Cincinnati defeated Cleveland.

Browns safety Clinton Burrell returned an interception 14 yards for a third-quarter touchdown as Cleveland pulled to within 14-10. But Breech kicked field goals of 44, 21 and 36 yards to seal Cincinnati's victory.

Broncos 27, Rams 24

Steve DeBerg equaled an NFL record for consecutive pass completions in rallying Denver from a 21-0 deficit over the Rams. DeBerg completed his last 17 passes to tie the standard set by Bert Jones, then of the Baltimore Colts, in 1974. Overall, DeBerg hit on 23 of his 31 throws for 307 yards and two touchdowns.

"I knew I had a string going, but I didn't know I had any record," said DeBerg. "I almost called an audible in that last series of plays. I am more interested in winning a decision than in setting any records. I had a bad start but we didn't give up."

DeBerg was only 6-of-14 at one stage of the game.

Bills 13, Steelers 0

Buffalo slammed the door on Terry Bradshaw and Joe Cribbs rushed for 143 yards as the Bills whipped Pittsburgh.

The Steelers didn't get into Buffalo territory until 16:29 remained in the game, and that was the result of a shanked 26-yard punt by Greg Carter to the Buffalo 43. By then, Bradshaw had been taken out of the game after completing only two of 13 passes for 3 yards. He was intercepted twice and sacked four times.

Lions 30, Packers 10

Billy Sims rushed for 109 yards and a touchdown and Detroit's defense smothered Green Bay with nine sacks and five pass interceptions as the Lions rolled over the Packers.

Alvin Hall returned the second half kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown and Eddie Murray kicked three field goals, while tackle Doug English led the defensive charge with four sacks for 24 yards in losses to help the Lions break a three-game losing streak.

Falcons 35, Saints 0

Gerald Riggs and Lynn Cain each scored two touchdowns and a swarming defense produced six turnovers and seven quarterback sacks as Atlanta crushed the Saints.

Most of the defensive highlights came at the expense of 36-year-old Kenny Stabler, who lost two fumbles, was intercepted three times and sacked five times for 33 yards in losses, once when he stumbled and fell in an open field.

Vikings 13, Colts 10

Minnesota's Rick Danmeier kicked two second-half field goals to boost the Vikings over the winless Colts, who lost their sixth straight game.

Danmeier's decisive field goal came at 9:09 of the final period after a Viking drive stalled at the Colt 22. After missing two from 40 yards in the first half, Danmeier put this one through from the same distance.

Seahawks 20, Bears 14

Jim Zorn passed for one touchdown and ran for another to lead Seattle over Chicago. Zorn scored on a 15-yard run and hit Byron Walker on a 7-yard pass for scores in the second quarter for a 17-7 Seattle halftime lead.

The only touchdown in the second half was scored by the Bears on a 2-yard run by Matt Suhey early in the fourth quarter to cap a 99-yard, 17-play drive that consumed 8:43.

Students urged to live traditions

message.

"You have given us — deep in the heart of Texas — a taste of the proverbial hospitality of the people of Texas," the Consul General of the Philippines to Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico said. While Mayor Angel's gift of the key to the city honored Ambassador Severino, he cherished the thought of receiving "the key to your hearts."

"We came here mainly to participate in this event," he said. "Here in Big Spring, I am seeing arnis practiced for the first time in a fully-developed form, performed mostly by Americans under the direction of a Filipino master. When I was a student, it was not taught in the schools. Only in recent years arnis has emerged."

The ambassador is not surprised in the renaissance of the martial arts — shrouded for many years in secrecy in his country — because of the rich history associated with the art. "Arnis reflects the engagement of the Filipino's total faculties — body, mind and spirit." He called arnis a sport and a dance, a "ballet with grace and expression."

The seminar serves as "another bond in the historic ties between the Philippines and the United States," Ambassador Servino continued. "In this spirit, I congratulate the graduates of this course. We will make Big Spring the martial arts capital of the world."

He invited the audience to visit the consulate in Houston, drawing a hearty laugh with his closing, "Yall Texans, come see us, you hear."

Master Gaje addressed the group briefly and his smile bore out the success of the week-long training event. "The success of this affair is immeasurable. The great input we had was beyond our expectations. We are fulfilling a dream tonight. Our technical staff — Dan Inosanto, Suryadi Jafri, Fred Degerberg — has shown great professionalism in carrying on these martial arts."

Diplomas were then awarded by Gaje and his two special guests from the Philippines and Indonesia. New officers for NARUSA — The National Arnis Association of the United States of America — were named, forming the top level of organization for the association headed by Master Gaje himself.

State representatives were named and installed. Jafri was named a guest officer and director to NARUSA, presenting his own National Silat Association (NASA).

In a final ceremony, the new officers for the Filipino American Association of Greater West Texas were named and sworn in to office.

"Tonight makes us a more vibrant arnis organization," Gaje added. "We are deeply united to the sport."

BASKETBALL

• The Big Spring Lady Steers open District 4-AAAAA play tonight against Midland High in the BSHS gym. The Lady Steers enter the first league game for both teams with a 6-6 mark after winning one of three games this past weekend at the Tall City Classic in Midland. Midland High is 7-5 for the year with Sheila Christian the top scorer averaging 13 points each game. Orvetta Johnson and Penny Griffin are chipping in eight points a game. Shell Rutledge, Paula Spears and Sylvia Randle are scoring in double figures for the Lady Steers. Ballhandler Monette Wise is another good scoring threat for first-year coach Annette Fowler's team.

Lybberg best in Finals

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Calf roper and steer wrestler Chris Lybberg didn't win a world championship in either event but the combination was good for a gold buckle and the title of All-Around Cowboy at the National Finals Rodeo.

Lybberg's below-average time of 11.1 seconds in his final steer wrestling attempt lost him the round but won him the title by giving him the best average in the event. He placed third for the year in both events.

He has won a record $123,709 to gain the honorary title, which goes to the cowboy who annually wins the most money. Lybberg, of Coyote, Calif., was trailed by Bruce Ford, Kersey, Colo., who had $113,715.

Immigrant's book on Lebanon stirs passions in Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The case of Jacobo Timerman is taking on the dimensions of a classic family feud — rage, mutual disappointment and hurt feelings.

"Ingrate," Israelis shout at Timerman. "Neurotics," Timerman responds.

Since his release from an Argentine prison and his arrival here in September 1979, Timerman has generated controversy. First it was human rights under Argentina's generals. Now it is Israel's war in Lebanon.

Timerman has just published a book which harshly criticizes Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the Lebanon invasion.

To many Israelis, it is an act of ingratitude. They claim much of the credit for winning Timerman's freedom and giving him a new home.

Timerman was a successful newspaper publisher in Argentina until 1977, when his dissenting opinions got him in trouble with the military government. He spent 29 months in prison before being stripped of his citizenship and deported to Israel.

Here he received a hero's welcome, but he quickly plunged into controversy.

First, he became something of an embarrassment with his loudly expressed criticism of the Argentine regime. Israel has close ties with Buenos Aires, and also fears repercussions against Argentine Jews.

The furor spread to the United States, where his supporters made him a rallying point for opposing American aid to Argentina.

Just as that controversy ebbed, the Lebanon war broke out, and Timerman sat down to record his reflections, now published as "The Longest War — Israel in Lebanon" by Alfred Knopf.

Timerman labels Israel an aggressor, insensitive to Palestinian suffering, led by an anti-democratic government that has terrorized its citizens into silence with horror stories about the Arab threat.

Timerman accuses Israel of perverting Jewish morality by razing Palestinian homes, bombing Lebanese cities and sending Israeli soldiers to a supposedly needless death.

"I'm infuriated," he wrote, "with us, the Israelis, who by exploiting, oppressing and victimizing the Palestinians, have made the Jewish people lose their moral tradition, their proper place in history."

He sees Israeli society becoming "more closed, more intolerant, more fundamentalist."

Its occupation of the West Bank, he warns,

"demands a social and economic effort that is not only bleeding the country but chaining future Israeli generations to its defense."

He believes most Israelis "want the Palestinians to vanish physically from this region..."

But all that remains is that "after more than 30 years, after several wars, after so many alliances, so many unutterable sufferings, so many political shifts, the actors remain the same... We have beaten, persecuted and murdered each other, but we remain the same and we are stuck in the same place."

That last assessment is shared by many liberal Israelis who would like an accommodation with the Palestinians. But coming from a man who has been here only three years, and who is seen as having been rescued by Israel, such opinions have aroused the anger of some moderates too.

One of them, Yoel Marcus, wrote in the daily Haaretz: "If there's one reason why I resent types like Mr. Jacobo Timerman, it is that their words and behavior automatically turn me into a fan of Menachem Begin."

Marcus was especially annoyed at Timerman's criticism of Israeli democracy. He believes it is strong and safe. Timerman doesn't. He likens Begin to the late Argentine dictator Juan Peron — "reactionary and anti-democratic."

Israeli reactions have ranged from threatening phone calls to expressions of hurt to denunciation and ridicule.

"He is kicking the very country but for whose efforts he would still be rotting in an Argentinean jail," charges Shlomo Nakdimon, a journalist for the daily Yedioth Ahronoth who was Begin's spokesman during the efforts to free Timerman.

Sioux Indians, government dispute ownership of Black Hills

YELLOW THUNDER CAMP, S.D. (AP) — Perspiration pouring down his naked body, Indian occupation leader Russell Means prayed softly in the holy sweat lodge. At Yellow Thunder Camp, he said, religion is a way of life.

Indians who have spent 20 months in this scenic Black Hills valley say their belief in the traditional Sioux religion is the reason for their occupation of land in the Black Hills National Forest. They consider the Black Hills, which they call the Paha Sapa, a holy land.

Twelve miles away in Rapid City, a legal battle is now being waged in U.S. District Court to determine if the government can close the camp and evict its 35 residents. A countersuit by the Indians seeks permission to turn Yellow Thunder into a permanent, religion-based community.

The Sioux need a place to pray in the Black Hills because "This is our birth place, the graveyard of our ancestors and the center of the Universe," said Means, a 43-year-old American Indian Movement leader. He said the Lakota Sioux believe they emerged from the underground spirit world into the Black Hills millions of years ago.

"Grandfather, Great Mystery, we beg you to stop the wasicu (Lakota for white man) from raping the sacred Mother Earth and raping her children," Means prayed, alternating between English and the Lakota Sioux language. "Give us strength to battle the wasicu."

Forty stones taken from an outside fire radiated intense heat in the sweat lodge, and Means splashed water on the stones every few minutes to fill the small round tent with steam that stung the naked flesh of its three occupants.

Some of Means' prayers were given in a rhythmic chant in the darkness of the tightly sealed sweat lodge, which stood opposite a circle of four buffalo skulls.

Means, who was raised as a Christian but became disillusioned with it in college, prayed in English for the future of the Indian people, for Yellow Thunder Camp and for whites and Indians to live together in peace and understanding.

Prayers were offered to "our Grandmother the Mother Earth," and to all living things, which Means called "all our relatives, the winged, the four-legged, our green relatives."

These prayers are said almost every day at Yellow Thunder, where the small population, living in teepees, fluctuates from week to week, said Means who took up the Lakota Sioux religion after joining AIM in 1969.

Means criticized recent court testimony by James

Hanson, a white historian who said tourism promoters after World War I invented the story about the area's special meaning to the Indians.

Hanson testified Thursday in U.S. District Court that the Lakota Sioux migrated to the Black Hills about 1776, and the traditional Sioux religion never considered the Hills sacred.

"Every Indian nation has hills or mountains that are sacred, because they represent the breasts of our Mother Earth. They give us spiritual nourishment," Means said. "The Black Hills means to us what Jerusalem means to Christians, Jews and Moslems, what the Vatican means to Catholics, and what Bethlehem means to Christianity."

The sweat lodge symbolizes the womb of Mother Earth, Means said.

SITTING IT OUT — For 6-year-old Jiann-Ming Su, the Christmas spirit just wasn't there as he decided to sit out a performance by his classmates at a Lubbock grade school. His boredom didn't seem to phase the performance or the audience.

Operator just not human

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Telephone users who don't let their fingers do the walking can hear a computer do the talking when they call directory assistance here.

Northwestern Bell's new system lets a human operator take a call, search a computer for the number requested and then hit a button, putting the computer on line to read the area code and number in a slow, female voice.

The electronic voice will then repeat the number and advise callers to stay on the line if they have a question or need more assistance.

Bell officials say the system, now handling 70 percent of the information requests in Iowa, Nebraska and Indiana, saves about 5 seconds a call. In Iowa alone, Bell averages 150,000 directory-assistance calls a day.

Operators, who continue to handle emergency requests, say it saves their voices.

"I like it," one operator in Iowa, where the system has been used since Sept. 1, said Monday.

"I think it's all right myself," said another. "It's no extra work." The operators said they were not allowed to give their names while on duty.

A supervisor, Joyce Lutz of Des Moines, said the system helps operators because they "don't have to talk quite as much. It's a lot speedier."

The computer voice, more formally known as the Audio Response System, will be used in other states as soon as the equipment can be installed, said Ed Mattix, Northwestern Bell's media relations manager.

"Only a very few have complained they can't understand the voice," he said. "Some people say they'd rather talk to a live operator rather than a computer and I guess that's to be expected."

'Farmers' cultivate tax laws

DALLAS (AP) — The cows that graze in the fields of Dallas must wonder why they live in an alien world of teeming traffic and towering skyscrapers.

But to the owners of those fields, there's no question about it: The cows' presence provides tax savings that far exceed the profits their beef could bring.

Landowners ranging from real estate giants to a local church are keeping their extra land in agriculture to knock millions of dollars off their property tax bills, the Dallas Times Herald reported Sunday.

Many of these qualified "farmers" never set foot on the land, but lease it out for farming or ranching while they tend to other business.

Under state property tax laws designed to protect family farmers, land that qualifies as open agricultural space is taxed on the value of the food or fiber it can produce, not on its market value.

Records show that in Dallas County, property that would sell for more than $600 million can be taxed only at its $7.5 million production value, the newspaper said.

With 98 percent of the value of the qualified land removed from its tax rolls, Dallas County will lose $1 million in tax revenue this year. The City of Dallas and other taxing districts also will lose income, the Times Herald said.

"They plant hay on it or run a few cows on it and it qualifies," said Dallas County Tax Collector John Childs. "The law is very loose on it. I think the intent was to protect family farmers. It just didn't work out that way."

Last week, the Dallas County Appraisal Review Board rejected an appeal by the city and reaffirmed its decision that 55 acres located at one of North Dallas' busiest corners qualifies as open agricultural land.

Developer Ray Nasher leases the land — in the shadow of a skyscraper and across a highway from a shopping mall — to a farmer who bales hay on it once a year.

Because of the hay, Nasher's city property tax bill will drop from $87,000 to $56 this year. When the land is developed, he will have to pay five years of back taxes on it plus 7 percent interest. Until then, he can invest the money elsewhere.

"The fact that Mr. Nasher is a man of means of no consequence," said Alvin Badger, the developer's attorney. "It's just like every homestead exemption in the state of Texas. If you have a homestead, you qualify."

Big-time developers like Nasher aren't the only people qualifying for the tax break. Included among Dallas County's "farmers" are hundreds of individuals and small companies ranging from the Dallas Gun Club and a Grand Prairie car dealer to a floor company and a church.

The Christian Tabernacle Church acquired 15 acres in Cedar Hill two years ago and lets a neighbor graze his cattle on the property, reducing the land's taxable value from $86,000 to less than $100.

"I don't want to beat the law, but I do want to take advantage of what we're legally entitled to," said Pastor Warren Green.

The law, which was passed as part of a tax reform package in 1979, allows land within a city to qualify for an open-space designation if it has been farmed for the past five years "to the degree of intensity generally accepted in the area."

State Rep. Wayne Peveto of Beaumont, sponsor of the package, said the law was intended to help family farmers, especially those on the fringes of growing cities whose land values were rising.

SIX-FIGURE COWBOY — Bruce Ford of Kersey, Colo., became the first cowboy to build up winnings in six figures for one event by placing fourth in the bare back competition of the National Finals Rodeo last week in Oklahoma City. The fourth-place win boosted Ford's earnings on the pro rodeo tour to $100,234.

Country singer Lynn Anderson out of hospital

DALLAS (AP) — Country singer Lynn Anderson was released from Baylor University Medical Center Friday where she was treated for an allergic reaction to prescription drugs, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The 35-year-old singer was in Dallas to record a single on the new Permian Records label.

She was admitted to the hospital Thursday after she complained of respiratory problems, said hospital spokeswoman Melissa Long.

The condition was diagnosed as an allergic reaction to medicine she was taking for a kidney ailment, said her father, Casey Anderson, in Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Anderson stayed in the hospital overnight for observation, Ms. Long said.

The singer's first single on the Permian label is scheduled for release in February.

Miss Anderson won a Grammy Award in 1970 for her hit "I Never Promised You a Rose Garden."

Promoter shelves professional team rodeo

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Professional Team Rodeo, a concept that has struggled for recognition in the Southwest for five years, "is shelved" for 1983, promoter Bill Poulos says.

Poulos, a champion rodeo cowboy, founded the Tulsa Twisters in 1977. The team played clubs from other cities and sometimes drew large crowds.

But Poulos said Friday that the decline of the "urban cowboy" trend apparently has led to the demise of the sport.

Team Rodeo featured performers from two teams matching scores in seven standard rodeo events.

The 440 Ranches company of Aubrey, Texas, which purchased Professional Team Rodeo last year, has elected to put the concept on hold.

"I'm sad. We had great games and great teams here," Poulos said.
