Christmas sales brighten holiday

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

A survey of local businessmen shows sales are being boosted by the Yuletide season despite the current recession.

Of the business contacted, most are performing above or at least even with last year's sales figures. And the stores experiencing their first Christmas in the Big Spring Mall are doing well also, according to reports.

This pleasant gift is part of a nationwide trend that has consumers spending more this Christmas and brightening the future of the sluggish U.S. economy.

"Morn and Pop" of the corner drugstore right on up to President Reagan have been hoping for signs of a healthy business scene at Christmas and it appears they got their wish.

"Our business is up 30-35 percent over last year," said Ed McCauley, manager of the remodeled Gibson's Discount Center.

"It's surprising with the way the economy is, we're doing more business than what we expected," he said.

J.F. Truitt, manager of K-Mart, said his store's business was running "about the same" as last year.

Truitt said shoppers were more selective this year in their purchases.

"People are looking for marked down items and bargains," Truitt said. "They're trying to make their dollars stretch as far as possible."

He said K-Mart had lower-priced items in its inventory this Christmas which seemed to agree with customer's shopping habits.

Truitt said business "had broken loose" last week and the furious pace of buying is expected to continue right up to Christmas Eve.

Gene Madsen, manager of Beall's in the Big Spring Mall, reported business was exceeding projected estimates for the store's first Christmas.

Local jobless rate falls

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Big Spring recorded a slight decrease in unemployment for November as the jobless rate dipped to 5.9 percent from 6.3 percent in October.

The November figures reflected both a growth in the civilian labor force and the number of persons employed, according to figures released today by the Texas Employment Commission.

"I think the decrease in unemployment can be attributed to an increase in oilfield activity and the hiring of holiday help," said Gerald Damm, local TEC office manager.

Damm also said there has been increased hiring in the agricultural job field because of the cotton stripping and

Out of gas: Bill stuck in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has gone home for Christmas, leaving behind an exhausted Senate held hostage by a test of wills over a proposed nickel-a-gallon boost in the federal gasoline tax.

The House completed its last major act of the year Tuesday night — voting 180-87 to send the compromise jobs-creating gasoline tax hike to the Senate. Then it quit for the year.

But in the Senate, which has been haunted by the tax legislation throughout the lame-duck session, conservative Republicans immediately mounted their third filibuster against the tax increase they oppose, forcing another post-midnight session.

Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., vowed to bring the measure to a final vote, but Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was just as steadfast in his determination to prevent that.

It was nearly 1 a.m. today when Baker and Helms agreed to take a vote Thursday on choking off debate, which would clear the way for final congressional action on the measure. The Senate then recessed, until later today when a pro forma session will be held.

Congressional aides said Baker was pressing senators anxious to go home for Christmas to stay in town to maintain a quorum when the vote to cut of debate is taken Thursday. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan would make telephone calls today to senators to seek support for the gas tax increase.

Because 60 votes are needed to break the filibuster, the president "will appeal for bipartisan support," Speakes said.

He said Reagan had not spoken for at least a week with Sen. Jesse Helms, who is conducting the filibuster with his fellow North HERO GETS A JOB — Reginald Andrews, center, stands with his new employers after his heroic rescue efforts saved a blind man from being killed in the subway. Andrews, 29, who has been unemployed for over a year, received a job reference from President Reagan.

Man who saved blind man gets call from Reagan, thinks it's Rich Little

NEW YORK (AP) — A job reference from President Reagan and a new job arrived in quick succession for an unemployed father of eight who risked his life to save a blind man from being crushed by a subway train.

President Reagan called Reginald Andrews on Tuesday, but it took awhile for Andrews to believe it.

"I thought it was (comic impersonator) Rich Little at first. I didn't know if it was a crank or for real. The more he talked, the more I realized it was him."

The president called to congratulate Andrews for saving 75-year-old David Schnair, a blind man who mistook the space between cars for a train doorway and fell to the tracks at a Manhattan subway station.

"I wasn't thinking about the danger, just that somebody needs help," Andrews said of Monday's rescue.

Andrews, 29, who had been unemployed for about a year, rescued Schnair while on his way home from a job interview at a Manhattan meat packer, where he was competing with nine other men.

Reagan also called Ed Marbach, vice president of Jamac Frozen Food, the meat-packer, to put in a good word for the unemployed man.

"Bless you, Mr. Marbach. Bless you," Marbach quoted the president as saying.

Marbach then called Andrews and told him the job was his and that he could start work in two weeks, when torn knee ligaments Andrews suffered in the rescue are healed.

Andrews said that the president "asked how I was doing. He said he knew how knee injuries are — when he played football — and he advised me to take care of it. Then he wished me a merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous new year and I wished him the same. We didn't talk politics."

Estes denied early parole

From staff and wire reports
Convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes has lost his bid for early release from Big Spring Federal Prison Camp, where he is serving two five-year terms for mail fraud and concealing assets.

The U.S. Parole Commission on Tuesday rejected Estes' contentions that he should be paroled immediately because of ill health.

Estes' parole from the minimum security prison is now set for next Dec. 15, officials said.

On Oct. 16, the 58-year-old Estes of Abilene went before the commission seeking early release because of failing health.

His daughter, Pam Estes, said at the time that her father may suffer from anorexia nervosa, a life-threatening disorder characterized by loss of appetite and weight. The condition is most common among adolescent girls.

Estes' financial empire in West Texas crumbled in the 1960s because of federal fraud charges in a scheme involving non-existent fertilizer tanks. He was convicted in 1963 and sentenced to 15 years in prison. He won parole in 1971, with one of the conditions being that he not engage in any promotional activities.

He was convicted in 1979 of mail fraud and concealing his assets from the government, and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Estes was found guilty, in part, for hiding assets from the Internal Revenue Service to avoid paying off a back-tax liability of $10 million. He also was convicted of scheming to bilk a farmer out of $30,000.

The U.S. Supreme Court upheld Estes' conviction on Jan. 25, rejecting the convicted swindler's claim that he was the victim of "prosecutorial vindictiveness or bad faith on the part of the government."

Estes' ex-attorney killed

JEFFERSON, Texas (AP) — G. Brockette Irwin, a criminal defense attorney who represented convicted swindler Billie Sol Estes, is dead following a boating accident at Lake O' The Pines, authorities said. Irwin died Tuesday when the mast of his sailboat struck a high-voltage power line crossing the lake, according to Justice of the Peace Nadine Ridgeway.

The attorney also represented Denton rancher-banker Rex Cauble, who was convicted Jan. 28 on federal charges of financing a marijuana smuggling ring known as the "Cowboy Mafia." Cauble was sentenced to five years in prison.

State hospital studies drug treatment ruling

From staff and wire reports
A federal judge's order last week for officials at eight state mental hospitals to adopt more stringent standards for using behavior-altering drugs in treating patients is being examined and has not yet been implemented at Big Spring State Hospital, officials say.

Hospital Superintendent A.K. Smith said he has not received any orders concerning the ruling. Kent Johnson, director of legal services for the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, said his office may challenge the ruling before any changes in hospital practices are brought about.

The standards, which will set maximum dosages for psychotropic drugs, must be in use by Jan. 5, U.S.

District Judge Barefoot Sanders said in his Dec. 13 ruling.

However, Johnson said TDMHMR had 15 days to file objections to the judge's order. He said the department was "examining alternatives" and had not reached an agreement yet.

Johnson said the judge's order was "somewhat unusual" since it did not spell out what effects

TDMHMR's objections would have on the Jan. 5 deadline. The TDMHMR official said he was not sure if the state hospitals would still have to follow the decree despite the department's objections.

Sanders' order stems from a 1974 class-action lawsuit filed against the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation and against the eight mental hospitals it controls.

Parents of some patients charged in the suit that their children had been mistreated, particularly through the use of psychotropic drugs.

In a settlement reached in 1981, department officials agreed to "ensure that patients are protected against improper, excessive or in-

Three die in tank blast

Welding gun ignites, killing oilfield workers

LOOKING OVER WRECKAGE — An Exxon Corp. official looks over the wreckage of an oil tank battery that exploded Tuesday killing three people. Three tanks, containing oil were thrown up to 250 feet by the blast.

BLEIBERVILLE, Texas (AP) — Three oilfield workers were killed and two critically burned when a welding gun ignited a small natural gas tank that blasted other nearby tanks from their foundations, officials say.

Witnesses said the explosion Tuesday morning scorched the pastureland around the tank and billowed a cloud of black smoke visible more than 10 miles away.

"It looked like all of Austin County was on fire," said Keith Webb, a Brenham paramedic.

Joe Tonorio Jr., 39, of Cleveland, Texas, and another unidentified man were dead at the scene, Austin County Peace Justice Tom Richter said. Jose Martinez, 21, was burned over all of his body and died at Hermann Hospital in Houston six hours later, officials said.

Bleiberville, in Southeast Texas, is 50 miles west of Houston.

Two men were listed in critical condition Tuesday night in John Sealy Hospital in Galveston.

Both B.M. Burns Jr., 23, a construction supervisor for Exxon, and Don Rutherford, 51, of Magnolia, Texas, suffered burns over more than half of their bodies.

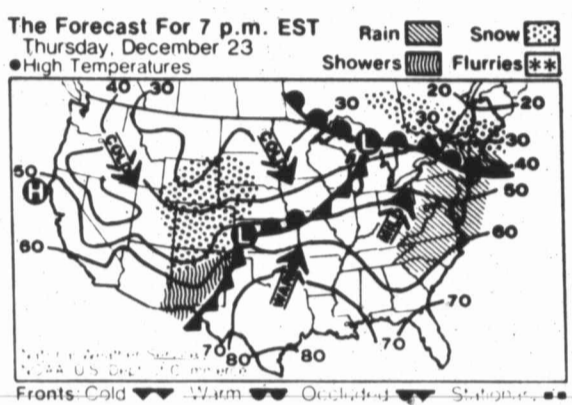

The workers were connecting the tank to a well about 11:15 a.m. when a spark ignited the vapors from the small amount of natural gas condensate inside, said Les Rogers, a spokesman for the Exxon Corp.

Exxon leases the three 400-barrel tanks adjacent to the well, Rogers said. The thin 20-foot-tall tanks are smaller than those carried by tanker trucks. The blast knocked two other tanks from their moorings, Rogers said.

The heat from the blaze was so intense that rescuers had to wait more than an hour for the tank to burn out before they could get close enough to look for the missing men, said Brenham Emergency Medical Service director John Haussecker. He was one of the first rescue officials on the scene.

Weather

Expect cooler Christmas weather

By The Associated Press

Mild temperatures dominated the first full day of winter across Texas and forecasters looked for unseasonably warm temperatures to continue into the Christmas weekend.

Fog and low clouds formed over the Coastal Plains, South Central and East Texas before dawn, prompting travelers advisories as visibilities dropped to near zero in some areas.

A few showers dotted the upper coast and the northern Gulf of Mexico. Otherwise, skies were mostly fair.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 26 at Amarillo to 66 at Brownsville. Pre-dawn temperatures were mostly in the 30s and 40s across West Texas, while readings in the 50s and 60s were noted over the eastern half.

Winds were from the southwest across West Texas and southerly and southeasterly over the rest of the state. Wind speeds were generally less than 10 mph.

The forecast called for widely scattered showers across Southeast Texas through tonight and in far West Texas late Thursday. Otherwise, skies were expected to be partly cloudy.

A STORM that dropped heavy rain and snow on Northern California, causing at least one death, continued early today over the Sierra Nevada.

A rain-swollen stream overturned a pickup truck near Red Bluff on Tuesday, drowning an unidentified ranch hand, the California Highway Patrol said.

Officials said the government would guarantee a price of $67 a barrel — about twice what crude is currently selling for and the $67 would rise with the general level of inflation.

Lewis expected to resume his career

By ROBERT MACY

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Comedian Jerry Lewis, recovering from open-heart surgery, will be able to resume working for his "kids" with muscular dystrophy, and already is exhibiting a "good grip," according to family and friends.

"He's going to be great," said his manager, Joe Stabile. "He's going to be himself again."

The comedian was reported in good condition this morning, 24 hours after he underwent the operation.

Telephone operators at Desert Springs Hospital said the switchboard was flooded with calls from well-wishers.

"Our prayers are with him and his family," long-time friend Sammy Davis Jr. said from Los Angeles.

Lewis, 56, entered the hospital Monday with chest pains. Tests revealed a blockage in arteries leading to his heart and he underwent two hours of double-bypass surgery that began before dawn

Tuesday.

His recovery has been "excellent" and there were no complications from surgery, hospital spokeswoman Barbara Scarantino said. "The prognosis is good and under normal circumstances he would be hospitalized seven to 10 days."

Four of his six sons visited their father later in the day. One of them, Chris, said Lewis had a "good grip and his eyes were wide open."

Stabile said Lewis' fiancée, whom he identified only as Sandee, was at the comedian's side before he was taken to surgery. He said the two were to be married after the first of the year.

Stabile said Lewis often works 20-hour days on his films and appearances for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, and recently has been "going heavy at it." He said he was told the only restriction will be that the entertainer quit smoking.

"He had just returned from Germany where he was doing a tour to publicize his new film, 'Smorgasbord,' and was working very hard on that project," Stabile said. The comedy, written by, directed by and featuring Lewis, is scheduled for release in May.

Stabile said Lewis had planned to go to Los Angeles on Monday morning to work on that movie, but instead went to the hospital after suffering chest pains.

Craig Wood, an Muscular Dystrophy Association spokesman in New York, said he assumed Lewis' Labor Day telethons for the association would continue.

"Knowing his style as I do, he's a tough guy to hold down," Wood said. "He's a real fighter. We think he will recover beautifully."

Wood said Lewis has raised more than $300 million for the association, including $275 million from his 17 Labor Day Weekend telethons.

Synfuels agency offers money for oil shale plant

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The government agency charged with getting a synthetic fuels program underway has taken its boldest action yet to lure private industry to build the giant plants.

The Synthetic Fuels Corp. said Tuesday it was willing to offer up to $1.6 billion to get a 10,000 barrel-a-day oil shale plant built in Colorado or Utah.

The corporation said it expected much of the money would be spent for price guarantees on the synthetic crude produced. Officials said the government would guarantee a price of $67 a barrel — about twice what crude is currently selling for and the $67 would rise with the general level of inflation.

The promises marked the first time the corporation has spelled out in such detail how much aid it would provide. Corporation officials said the $1.6 billion was the most the government would pay out and the price would likely be driven lower as companies competed for the award.

Another step toward an award came with the announcement that an energy consortium had accepted a "letter of intent" signed by Edward Noble, chairman of the corporation.

That letter made a non-binding promise of $465 million in loan guarantees and price supports toward the cost of a $576 million plant in North Carolina to produce methanol from peat found in coastal swamps.

The project would get $1.02 a gallon, rising 2 percentage points above the inflation rate, even though methanol costs about 50 cents to 75 cents a gallon in bulk.

The project, known as Peat Methanol Associated, is a venture of Energy Transition Corp. — Etcó — and First Colony Farms.

First Colony is owned by shipping magnate Malcolm MacLean, whose land contains the peat, while Etcó, which has a 9 percent interest, has as stockholders several prominent officials of the Ford administration as well as William Casey, current chief of the CIA.

Corporation officials hope, by being specific about what the government is willing to do, they will be able to drum up more interest among oil companies to build synfuel plants.

Created by Congress in 1980, the corporation has yet to make a single award from the $15 billion it was given to spur development of plants to convert America's abundant reserves of shale and coal into liquid and gaseous fuels.

Some members of Congress, unhappy with the pace, have threatened to abolish the agency and take back the money unless they start to see results. Supporters say the industry, buffeted by slumping oil prices and high interest rates, is in dire need of government help.

In May, Exxon Corp. announced it was writing off $1 billion it had invested in the Colony oil shale project in Colorado, the largest synthetic fuels undertaking in the nation.

Since then, two other frontrunners for government assistance have announced they were abandoning plants to convert coal into liquid fuels in Kentucky and Wyoming.

Officials said they hoped the lucrative terms being offered for the oil shale project would finally overcome industry hesitance.

"There has been a lot of rhetoric that industry will enter the oil shale business if substantial premiums are offered. We are offering the substantial premiums so now we will see if that is true," said corporation vice president J.R. Bowden.

Police get pat on back

Dear Editor,
I have been a tax-paying citizen in Big Spring for approximately 30 years. I consider it a very good place to live and rear a family. I have many friends in Big Spring including our police officers and detectives. These men are my personal friends and I admire them for their service to our community.

Now, to get to the point. The police officer does not have a soft job, and at times I am sure he is faced with a fast decision that could mean his life or death. When he is forced to deal with a rough situation and forced to get rough in order to survive both mentally and physically, let's give him a big pat on the back and consider the job well done. This pat on the back should come from each and every citizen including our Police Chief and all in authority.

The suspension of our two police officers for one to three days is a disgusting situation, and as a tax-paying citizen, I resent it. One of the reasons for the kind of disturbance that led to the suspension of the two officers is the kid glove treatment that is common in our land today.

Grandmother upset at Santa

Dear Editor,

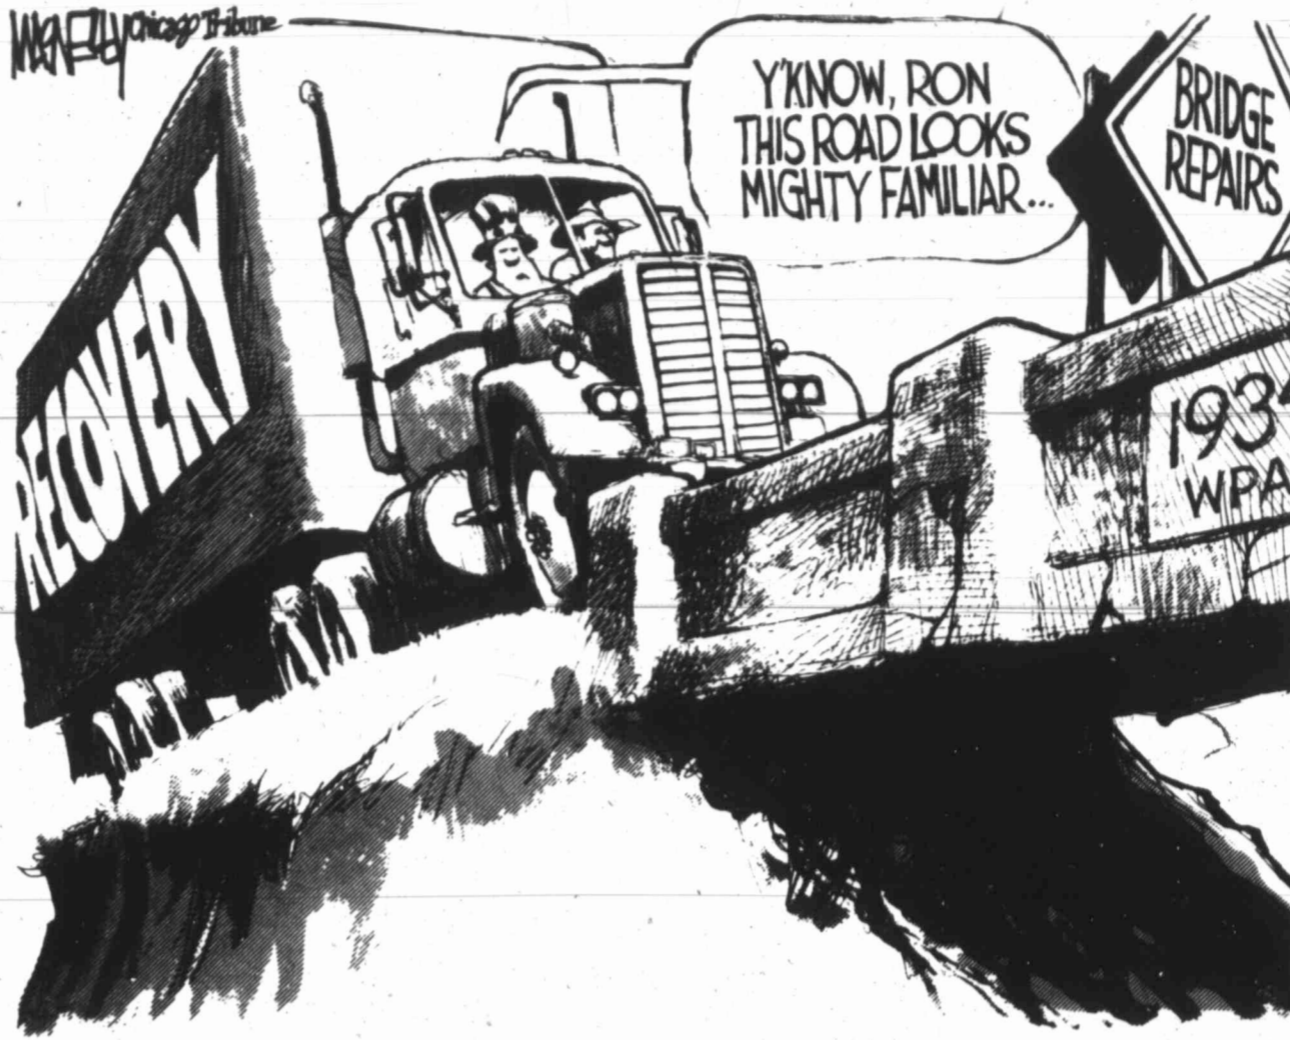

I hope you don't trash this, passing it off as just an overprotective grandma story.

I'm writing in regard to the Santa Claus in the Highland Mall a week or two ago. My little granddaughter attempted several times to talk to him. He totally ignored her to continue to talk to a little boy he had already spent more than plenty of time with.

My granddaughter was very hurt. My daughter told her he was just a helper and not the real Santa.

This man was a poor excuse even for a Santa's helper.

New wave in Europe

PARIS—Recent talks with President Francois Mitterrand and Chancellor Helmut Kohl suggest that a new chapter in a happy story is about to unfold. It is the story of Franco-German amity that has come to the fore since the success of postwar Western Europe. What lies ahead could be a tonic for the U.S., Russia and Eastern Europe as well.

Economic co-operation during the 1950s — first in the Coal and Steel Community, and then in the European Economic Community launched in 1957 — was the starting point of Franco-German reconciliation. In 1958, the advent of General De Gaulle raised the specter of nationalism on an anti-American bias. When De Gaulle and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer signed a security treaty in 1963, the U.S. worked, successfully, to make it a dead letter.

President Mitterrand, a Socialist, brought to power in 1981 the first French regime in 20 years that eschewed Gaullism and unmistakably aligned itself with the U.S. on East-West security issues. But at that time the Socialist chancellor, Helmut Schmidt, was keen to balance between Washington and Moscow on security issues, and quite hostile to Mitterrand's emphasis on stimulating the French economy.

The replacement of Schmidt by Kohl, in October, created the condition for a new wave of Franco-German harmony. Herr Kohl shared Mitterrand's anti-Soviet bias on security issues. Though Kohl is a Christian Democrat, the two are close together on economic matters, for Mitterrand has had to scrap stimulus in favor of a fight against inflation.

Temperamentally, Kohl is much more at ease with France than was Schmidt. He comes from a part of Germany, the Palatinat, that used to be French. He is a Roman Catholic, and jokes easily about France being at once "anti-clerical and the oldest daughter of the Church." To sustain himself in power in the elections scheduled for March 6, moreover, Kohl must show German voters that he can work well with the French Socialists. So he and Mitterrand have broken important new ground together.

The 1963 security treaty has finally been activated. French officials are now talking to German officials about common defense problems, even in the realm of nuclear weapons, which Bonn does not possess. Mitterrand sees these discussions as a way for the Germans to have a say in their own destiny. Defense co-operation with France, he believes, is a tangible asset that asserts a pull on that passionate wanderer, the German soul. The West Germans have, in joint defense with France, a stake to balance against a tendency to look eastward toward unification with the East Germans.

In return, the French are deriving new economic benefits. Kohl has supported Mitterrand in moves to give the European Community additional protection against goods from Japan and the U.S. He has turned a friendly eye on a bid by a nationalized French electronics company, Thomson, to acquire a major German firm, Grundig. The two leaders are working together to keep their currencies in line. They are both supporting Saudi Arabia in its effort to introduce a long-term contractual element into oil-pricing practices.

While the Kohl-Mitterrand axis is just beginning, the implications are large. Western Europe can move beyond the economic power it now enjoys. It can acquire a respectable defense capacity. It also can begin to assert independent influence on international questions.

The U.S. would surely experience difficulties, particularly respecting trade, in such a Europe. But the Reagan administration, perhaps because it never entertained high hopes for Europe, seems to care much less than any of its predecessors. Certainly it recognizes, as some previous administrations did not, that there is very little the West Europeans can do to hurt the U.S. in a big way. It is even prepared, provided the Europeans want it, to thin out the American military presence on the Continent.

The Russians, of course, would love that. And, indeed, a hasty American withdrawal could put Western Europe at the mercy of Moscow. But if the U.S. moves carefully, if it maintains some military presence on the ground and a strong deterrent capability, it can leave much of the conventional defense of Europe to the Europeans. As a price for a certain self-effacement, Washington could then bring on stage some players largely confined to the wings — the East Europeans.

Since World War II, the U.S. and its allies have accepted the principle that Soviet security justified a military presence in Eastern Europe. In effect, the NATO countries have assured the freedom of West Berlin by acquiescing in the enslavement of Prague, Warsaw and Budapest.

But the Soviet Union, as its leaders keep insisting, is a superpower, on a par with the U.S. in missiles, and with a mighty army and a foothold in space. It is preposterous to suppose that the security of such a superpower depends on having Communist officials hold down every office in Gdansk, and Bratislava, and every other town from the Baltic to the Black Sea.

Once the U.S. accepts that nothing terribly bad can happen to American interests in Western Europe, it acquires the right to insist that the Russians grow up about Eastern Europe. It is in that prospect, in the possible emergency of a European Europe, that there lies the true meaning of the famous term "detente."

(This is the second of two columns based on interviews with French President Francois Mitterrand and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.)

The Wilde one

"Life is far too important a thing ever to talk seriously about." — Oscar Wilde.

If one fine art has been abandoned — at least neglected — it must be the skill of wit. Not merely the craft of being funny, wit is that precious talent that melds humor, satire, intelligence and artifice into a dazzling revelation of reality.

Possibly the unassailable master of this particular skill was Oscar Wilde. The 82nd anniversary of this British artist's death went unnoticed last month, but no matter. Luckily, many of his greatest writings remain to demonstrate his wicked ability to mock the basic deceptions of life and deflate the pompous pretenders.

"The world is a stage, but the play is badly cast."

Ever wonder what reason or purpose some individuals are supposed to represent? Haven't you ever wondered why certain people just have to be in your life?

Speaking of lives, Wilde was born in Ireland in 1854. By age 25, he began to jolt London's complacency with his astounding ability to couch amazing epigrams, his startling dress and personality and some remarkable literature.

"Your brother Ernest dead? 'Quite dead.' 'What a lesson for him! I trust he will profit by it.'"

These lines, and the others, are from Wilde's 1895 play "The Importance of Being Ernest," possibly the funniest play in the English language, and two others. The plays of Wilde and his decadent novel "The Portrait of Dorian Gray" demonstrated his talent to unerringly undercut the fabric of "civilization."

"20 years of romance make a woman look like a ruin, but 20 years of marriage make her something like a public building."

Now something is there in those lines. One might laugh or frown at first, but further analysis only sends them scuttling away. Like the artificiality he attacks, Wilde can have no substance as well.

Anyway, what is most important is the moment, the instant, when the impact of the words first strike.

Some used to consider it bad luck for women to look at trumpets.

"A well-tied tie is the first serious step in life."

Yet sometimes Wilde's casually-wry statements portray a surprising seriousness. To many people today, the look is more important than substance. And is that less important than striving for material goods over all other considerations? Perhaps.

"In matters of grave importance, style, not sincerity, is the vital thing."

On the other hand, Wilde may just be poking fun at the pompous and the pretentious. He may merely reflect his own desires to raise that unique moment, that singular sensation.

"I know nothing. Lady Bracknell." "I am pleased to hear it. I don't approve of anything that tampers with natural ignorance." "I have lost both my parents." "Both? ... That seems like carelessness."

Wilde allowed little to escape his scrutiny although one never could be sure if he was completely serious or not.

"Are all men bad?" "Oh, all of them and they never grow any better. Men become old, but they never become good."

Knowing the intent behind an artist's work is never that important anyway — what is significant is one's perception of that work.

"My dear boy, when I was your age — 'But you never were and you never will be.'"

Humor is an important tool for pointing out serious flaws, but often the laughter overrides the thinking. Woody Allen had been suffering that for years.

Finally, this last exchange between two of Wilde's characters could be Wilde himself as Lane, shedding light on his purpose in art. Whatever perception one has of life, Wilde always has the last word.

Algernon: "I hope tomorrow will be a fine day, Lane."

Lane: "It never is, sir."

Algernon: "Lane, you're a perfect pessimist."

Lane: "I do my best to give satisfaction."

Didn't Jesus teach love?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: It seems to me the important thing in religion is to love other people. Isn't that really what Jesus taught? — E.O.

DEAR E.O.: Jesus did command us to love others, but it would be a mistake to reduce the Gospel to that one thought. Look carefully at what Jesus actually said about love.

The first thing Jesus said about love is that we are to love God above all else. When asked what the greatest commandment was, Jesus replied, "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind" (Matthew 22:37). What does it mean to love God? It means to love his truth, and to love him for what he has done for you.

But more than that, if we love God it also means we will love Jesus Christ, because he is God's only Son. And why should you love God and love his Son? Because he loves you! The proof of his love for you is that Jesus Christ was willing to lay down his life for you by dying on the cross for your sins. "Greater love has no one than this, than one lay down his life for his friends" (John 15:13).

There is something else that the Bible tells us which is very important about love, and that is that we cannot really love fully without God's help. By nature we are selfish, concerned about our own things more than the problems of other people. But God can give us a new ability to love. When we come to Christ, the Holy Spirit comes to dwell within us, and the first fruit of the Spirit is love (see Galatians 5:22). The Bible says, "We love because he first loved us" (1 John 4:19).

Do you love God as you should, and do you love others? If you want to know what true love is, look at Jesus Christ. Look at the way he was willing to go to the cross for you. "This is how we know what love is: Jesus Christ laid down his life for us" (1 John 3:16).

Hussein plays cat and mouse

WASHINGTON — Jordan's King Hussein is playing a cat-and-mouse game with President Reagan, except Hussein is the mouse — or more precisely, the "Mouse That Roared."

The doughty little monarch, as usual, has worked his way into position to have a U.S. president eating out of his hand. This is all the more astonishing, since the king has bombarded Reagan with bizarre, lengthy, personal letters. One was so rude that no response was made. Yet Hussein is now the president's pampered guest in Washington. For his stark little Bedouin kingdom is situated strategically right at the center of Reagan's Middle East peace plan. Without Hussein, Reagan would have a peace table with no one sitting at it.

Reagan sees the king as a possible strategic partner and is ready to offer him a generous gift of arms. But intelligence reports describe Hussein as "uncomfortable" with this role and hesitant to sit down at the bargaining table. He would like the military aid without the strategic honor.

The last four presidents have learned that Hussein is an erratic but wily ruler, who knows how to play diplomatic hard ball. His public image is polished, meticulously polite and controlled. But a turbulent personality seethes behind this disciplined royal image.

According to intelligence sources, he has severe mood swings and may even be a manic-depressive. He likes to vent his spleen in personal letters that would quiver the stripes on a diplomat's trousers.

HE ONCE WROTE a secret letter to President Nixon threatening to go on a "ghazou" unless he got U.S. aid. A ghazou is a Bedouin raid on a neighboring tribe. "We might have to go on a ghazou, an old Arab tribal custom, and get it, Sir, from some quarter or other in this neighborhood," he wrote, "possibly causing you a problem which may be even more serious than the one I am now posing."

Hussein fired off an equally blunt letter to President Ford. If the United States didn't provide Jordan with $350 million worth of anti-aircraft missiles, he told the president, Jordan would buy them from the Soviet Union. And he pointedly noted that the Soviets had offered him a complete air defense system, which he eventually bought.

Sources told my reporters Lucette Lagnado and Andrea Siegle that Hussein has continued to write blistering, at times offensive, letters to President Reagan. Administration irritation reached a new high last year when the King released the contents of one letter to the Jordanian press before Reagan had even received it.

But Reagan and his aides are not likely to reveal their pique to the King this week. Not only is Hussein crucial to the success of the president's Middle East peace plan, but he has once again begun blowing kissing at the Kremlin.

Last year, Hussein raised hackles when he visited Moscow and heaped praise on the Soviets. At a May 26, 1981 dinner in the Kremlin, the King repeatedly referred to the late Leonid Brezhnev as a "dear friend" and expressed "Profound satisfaction ... in developing and consolidating the relations between our countries."

Even more distressing to the Reagan administration was Hussein's praise of the Soviet peace plan for the Middle East. The King told the Russians that Jordan welcomed their "proposal to convene an international conference on the Near East with the PLO taking part on an equal basis with the other sides." Hussein then proceeded to issue a Joint Communique with the Soviets that made repeated favorable references to the "international conference."

U.S. officials remain confident that Hussein will not switch allegiances, but the administration is hedging its bet by attempting to negotiate a new arms deal for Jordan. The package includes advanced U.S. fighter-bombers and is expected to trigger a fight in Congress. Some members are already circulating letters of opposition.

Clint Holloman, owner-operator of The Medicine Shoppe, 1001 Gregg, has received the "Chairman's Club Award" from Medicine Shoppe International in recognition of his outstanding contribution to the health care delivery system. He was also recently given the International Franchise Association's Distinguished Achievement Award. Holloman was presented with a custom-designed spinal ring along with appropriate plaques at a ceremony that took place recently at a convention in Denver.

Some interesting things are happening at the United Health Center facility, 901 Goliad. A new professional manager, Raymond Junker, took over in October, moving here from Lubbock. Several immediate changes were instituted that improved their ratings in patient care according to the last inspection report. Junker said that everything looks bright for that institution for 1983 including the opening of the unit on Jan. 1 with 50 beds for custodial care. This is a new opportunity in Big Spring, according to Junker, as the only facility with custodial care. He and Director of Nurses Jane Forney have been working on this new service for several months. They invite the public to go by and see the changes and new services available.

Craig Knocke became the first recipient of a ticket to the Chamber of Commerce annual dinner to be held in February featuring Roger Staubach. Craig, a local teenager, received Ticket No. 1, from his aunt, Kathy Viccinelli, for his birthday last week. What a terrific idea! Give the teenagers on your Christmas or birthday lists a ticket to the banquet to see and hear everyone's hero, Roger Staubach, while giving them the opportunity to be exposed to the annual community leadership event. Call the Chamber office today to buy tickets.

Aubrey Moody recently moved here from Dallas to open a beauty and barber shop at 2604 Wasson Road. His wife opened the new K & M Beauty Supply on Gregg Street. Two more new businesses that will provide jobs and services or products for Big Spring!

Nationally prominent lawyer F. Lee Bailey has suggested that the government require permits for all cash dealings over $500 because he says most people who use large sums of cash to buy luxury items are probably linked to narcotics or other criminal activity. Besides, he says, the surest way to cut down on people stealing cash money is to cut down on cash.

An interesting note from American Business: Now that the mechanical bull has gone down the chute, the man who invented it says he has a better idea — racing armadillos. Entrepreneur Sam Reeves says his four-foot high, 80-pound creations are just as enjoyable as the bucking barroom contraptions popularized by the film "Urban Cowboy" but this time around, Reeves plans to alter his marketing strategy. A born-again Christian, he vows his racing armadillos will never make their way into saloons.

DRUNK DRIVING FACTS to review as we face the long holiday period: The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and National Safety Council statistics show:

- 26,000 are killed yearly in drunk driving accidents.
- 100,000 plus suffer serious or crippling injuries yearly.
- $5,000,000 is the yearly cost of drunk driving.
- One of every ten weekend evening drivers is drunk.
- 80% of fatal alcohol-related crashes occur between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m.
- 65% of single car fatal wrecks are caused by drunk drivers.
- Only one out of every 2,000 drunk drivers is arrested.
- 50% of all Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related crash.
- 44% of all nighttime fatal alcohol-related crashes are caused by 18-24 year olds (22% of all drivers).
- The leading cause of death for Americans under 35 is automobile accidents.

As this year winds down, Murray L. Weidenbaum, news analyst for Washington Report, has given his analysis of the economy and cites some positive trends that should make us feel better about leaving this year and starting the next one:

- Throughout 1982 people's incomes in "real" terms — even after boiling out the effects of inflation, continued to rise, even when the economy was declining or standing still.
- "Real" consumer spending moved up through the year; thus, the bottom did not fall out of the economy.
- All of this occurred while the American economic system was making that badly needed and long-awaited move away from escalating double-digit inflation.
- Far less dramatic but potentially far more important occurred in 1982 when a new sense of realism began to take over in business decision making. Companies are becoming more cost-conscious. Employees are learning that their wages, salaries and fringe benefits are vitally dependent on the future success of their company. Workers are increasingly, yet not enthusiastically, willing to accept changes in work rules and job practices necessary to ensure their company's future.
- A formidable array of leading economic indicators are now on the rise again. That usually foreshadows an economic upturn.
- The biggest economic plus is that the modest growth rate in the offing is most unlikely to stir up another round of inflation. Thus, the 1983 recovery may turn out to be far longer-lasting than the short-lived upturns in the last few years.

Water import study proposed

AUSTIN (AP) — Water importation — considered too expensive by some and absolutely necessary by others — should be dealt with by a special state agency, energy advisers say.

A 61-member committee Tuesday recommended setting up a three-member agency to work with neighboring states and the federal government on importing water into Texas.

The proposed Multistate Water Resources Planning Commission would be appointed by the governor. The committee of the Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council — TENRAC — recommended Texans pay for the use of surface water and for pumping ground water in certain areas.

The council said the Legislature also should give underground water conservation districts the option of assessing fees for the withdrawal of ground water.

Louis Beecher, committee chairman, said it was the first time a surface water fee had been proposed.

Other recommendations included issuing an additional $250 million in water development bonds and creating a fund to guarantee state water bonds.

Beecher's committee proposed public policy that would allow interbasin transfers of water "provided the water supply requirements of the basin of origin will be satisfied."

The council of high statewide elected officials postponed a vote on the committee's recommendations until its next meeting.

"These proposals are so broad-based and complex as to require public understanding of some nature," said Gov. Bill Clements.

TENRAC, however, approved another committee's recommendations to develop statewide energy conservation standards for new construction and to establish an interest-free loan fund for county and city energy management programs.

Council member Ed Vetter said, "I get very nervous when I see these things that involve state expenditures."

Around the County

The new year is almost here and it is time to start getting ready for the coming events.

The Shooting Sports Club will be showing two films entitled "Trap Shooting" and "Skeet Shooting" on Tuesday and Thursday at 7 p.m. at the County Extension Office in the courthouse. All club members are encouraged to attend. Others interested in joining the Sports Club or seeing the films are invited to attend.

Rescheduling of the Teen Retreat for Jan. 7-9 at the Texas 4-H Center in Brownwood for "A 4-H Recreation Celebration" has eight Howard County teens registered to attend. Teens attending will be Francis Camp, Greg Miller, John Guitar, Janet Anderson, Jay Anderson, Jeanie Robertson, Jana Parker and Ken Hunt. Naomi and Peggy Kalina will be attending with the group.

The 4-H Teen Retreat will be devoted to recreation, focusing on skills in leading recreation, helping 4-H'ers learn several forms of recreation, and making recreation a part of 4-H events and meetings. Ideas for the workshop came from the Texas Longhorn Recreation Lab, one of the best recreation workshops in the country. Also, at this workshop, there will be a 4-H birthday party to celebrate the 75th anniversary of 4-H in Texas.

There will be a Creative Clothing Training for Clothing Project Leaders on Jan. 22-23 at the Texas 4-H Center in Brownwood.

The Howard County Junior Livestock Show will be Jan. 28-29. There will be six major stock shows Jan. 3-March 13, 1983. These are as follows: Jan. 3-7-Sand Hills Hereford and Quarter Horse Show, Odessa; Jan. 27-Feb. 6-Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show, Ft. Worth; Feb. 4-10-Southwestern International Livestock Show, El Paso; Feb. 11-20-San Antonio Livestock Show, San Antonio; Feb. 23-March 6-Houston Livestock Show, Houston; and March 9-13-San Angelo Livestock Show, San Angelo.

The County Food Show will be held at the First Methodist Church on March 19. The judging will begin at 1 p.m.

A great opportunity for senior 4-H members is the National 4-H Citizenship Short Course and Heritage Tour at Washington, D.C., June 21-July 5. The Citizenship Short Course and Heritage Tour is designed to supplement the citizenship education and leadership development training you receive through home, school, church and other organizations. Any 4-H member who is entering his junior or senior year in high school is eligible to go. Seniors who have just graduated in the spring of 1983 will also be accepted. This is an excellent opportunity for all senior members.

All 4-H'ers are reminded to keep collecting aluminum cans to sell for the Scholarship Fund. Bring the cans to the Extension Office.

All educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages, regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex religion or national origin.

Henley convictions affirmed

AUSTIN (AP) — Elmer Wayne Henley, sentenced to six life sentences for his part in a 172 Houston murder and torture spree, today lost his appeal in the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The Court of Criminal Appeals, without writing an opinion, refused to review the Corpus Christi Court of Appeals decision in September to affirm the six murder convictions.

Henley, at his second trial, was convicted in Corpus Christi on June 27, 1979. His first conviction was thrown out by the Court of Criminal Appeals because of errors in the change of venue process.

Civitan Club, TARS host party

The Big Spring Civitan Club threw a Christmas party for the community's mentally retarded citizens Saturday. The local chapter of Teens Aid the Retarded (TARS) assisted with the festivities.

Guests were picked up by Santa Claus's bus, driven by Santa himself, and brought to the Student Union Building at Howard College where the party was in progress. Guests and Civitans sang carols, viewed cartoons, ate refreshments, played video games and opened gifts. Gifts and quarters for video games were donated by area merchants: Furr's, Winn Dixie, Johansen Nursery and Stevens Vending Co. An ongoing project of Civitan is the support of the retarded and handicapped. The party was in keeping with the Civitan interests.

Dr. Donohue

Vitreous detachment of eye

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Please comment on the cause and possible treatment of vitreous detachment of the eye. — Mrs. A.A.

You will need just a bit of eye anatomy to understand what occurs with vitreous detachment.

The eye is an egg-shaped container. It is separated into two inner compartments by the eye's lens. The front section (in front of the lens) is smaller and is called the anterior chamber. It contains fluid that nourishes the eye tissue. (It is a rise in this fluid that causes glaucoma, a buildup of pressure inside the eye.) The rear chamber is the larger one and it contains a clear, gel-like substance resembling egg white in consistency. That is the vitreous, and its chief role is to give the eye inner-support — to keep it from collapsing.

This vitreous is actually attached within the eye, the area of attachment being the retina, at the back of the rear chamber. It can become detached at that point.

While I can't give you all the causes for vitreous detachment, a common one is aging. With age, the vitreous gel may collapse slightly. These collapsed parts can cast shadows on the retina, and that is what causes the vision impairment associated with it.

A worse event would be detachment of the retina itself during the vitreous detachment. And that can happen. Another cause of vision loss from vitreous detachment is the scarring that occurs between it and the retina.

So you can see why I cannot be very specific for you about vitreous detachment without knowing more about just what has happened in your specific case. In the past decade many new techniques have been developed to treat such problems.

For example, the laser beam can be used to break up scar sheets, and a tiny freezing probe has also been used to repair vitreous detachments. If necessary the entire vitreous can be removed and replaced with a salt solution. Those techniques were not available a few short years ago.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Tech honors nursing students

Sue A. Easterling and Annette Gary were among twenty upper division students honored Thursday at the second annual convocation of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Nursing.

The convocation marks the progression through the upper division level of the undergraduate nursing program. "We are a new school, and many of these students were among the first classes enrolled when we opened last year," said Teddy L. Langford, R.N., Ph.D., dean. "They have set high standards for future classes to follow as they have progressed to the upper division. The educational significance of this convocation is second only to graduation in their careers."

Dear Abby Unhappy wife

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell your daughter-in-law not to call you up and tell you what a terrible son you have?

I have told her countless times that I don't want to hear about their fights and misunderstandings, but she still calls me. It starts out with, "Hi, How was your day?" And before I can get the words out, she proceeds to tell me about the argument she and my son just had. She never calls to tell me anything nice he did — only the bad things. They have been married for a short time and I see little hope for a first anniversary.

She has even called me up at 11 p.m. just before I go to bed, to tell me about this terrible fight they just had, saying he stormed out of the house, slammed the door and raced off in the car. She never calls back to tell me he came home and everything's fine. So I lie there all night worrying that he's out drinking and driving when all the while they have already kissed and made up.

Any suggestions besides telling her not to call? I've tried that and it hasn't worked.

UNNERVED MOTHER-IN-LAW
DEAR UNNERVED: The poor girl probably has no one else to dump on. She sounds like an immature, angry child frantically crying for help. And to compound the problems, she's punishing you. (Look what your rotten son did to me!) Insist that both she and your son get professional help from a marriage counselor. It's a matter of survival for their marriage, and your nerves.

Judge fights crime with no mercy

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Justice for the guilty, believes Houston Judge Ted Poe, is a strong diet of punishment, with side dishes of restitution and rehabilitation — and only a carefully measured dash of mercy.

Do the crime, buster, and Judge Ted ("Just Ted, not Theodore") will make you pay. One way or another.

"You can't call him a hanging judge," said a Harris County prosecutor, "because he's very fair. But he certainly believes in punishment."

Adds the prosecutor: "He's tough as nails. He does not like crime AT ALL."

Poe, 34, is a former prosecutor who never lost a case. He's a Church of Christ deacon who believes as a state district court judge he's doing "God's work." He's a tall man with a round face. His voice rumbles with golden-throated thunder and his deep-set eyes can peel a criminal transgressor like an onion — layer by layer to the very soul.

"We called him 'America's Judge' around here," said R. J. Hansen, a prosecutor. "He epitomizes what America wants in a judge."

Of the 18 Harris County district judges, Poe awards the fewest probated sentences. And when he does grant probation, some criminals find they prefer prison.

"Those folks that get probation in my court are rare," he says. It's never granted lightly, adds Poe, and he makes sure they follow the rules.

"I make probation tough," he said. "They're not going to leave out of here laughing at the system."

Poe lectures and scolds and preaches at his criminal charges. He tells them to do right or, by golly, they're going to regret it.

"He preaches to the defendants," said Hansen. "When they leave the courtroom, there's no doubt in their mind what they have to do."

First, says Poe, there's the letter of apology. Every person receiving probation must write a letter explaining why he did what he did and how much he regrets it. The letter is sent to Poe and he evaluates it. Often, he sends the letter back to be done over.

"Some of them find it very difficult to say they are sorry for what they did, but it's a first step in their rehabilitation," said the judge.

JUDGE TED POE
...doing God's work

Then there's restitution. If a burglar smashes in a door, he's going to pay for it — dollar by dollar, week by week, until every cent is reimbursed. No excuses.

After that there's community service. Poe has assigned a carpenter convicted of a crime to spend 20 hours a month building projects for the city or county. An electrician helps on county construction.

A man convicted of drunken driving was sentenced to help in a hospital emergency room, where the bodies broken and mangled by intoxicated drivers are brought in for repairs.

Probationers who enjoyed the services of a court-appointed attorney are required to pay the county for the lawyer's fee.

"They should pay for the system that they've created," explains Poe.

The judge has even assigned some probationers to make regular, monthly contributions to Crime Stoppers, a citizens group that gives rewards to tipsters.

To make sure drug offenders stay "clean", or free of drugs, Poe instructs his probation officers to spring surprise urine tests. The chemistry of the urine betrays any dabbling in narcotics.

Some defendants pale when they learn what a Judge Poe probation means. At least one has chosen prison instead.

After hearing the terms of his probation, said Hansen, one defendant just shook his head.

"Judge," said the man, "I'll never make it." And moments later he was led away in handcuffs to the safety of jail.

A Judge Poe probation for one man was banishment from Texas.

The man had arrived from Michigan only three days before he was arrested for carrying a pistol in a bar.

"He was living out of his car and he had no job or means of support," said Poe. "I thought the best thing for him was to go back where he came from, support his six kids and get his life together."

"He would be better off and the state of Texas would be better off not having to support him," the judge added.

The man was told not to return to Texas for two years. But only a few months later he was picked up on a misdemeanor in a Houston suburb.

Said Poe: "Now he's seeing a part of Texas he's never seen before — the cotton fields in Huntsville (where prison inmates chop weeds and do farm labor)."

Early in December, 19-year-old Richard Sanchez, an auto repairman, pleaded guilty through an interpreter to attempted burglary.

The man's lawyer explained that although Sanchez went through the ninth grade in the Brownsville, Texas, school system, he was unable to speak English.

Poe granted Sanchez a two-year probation with one addition to the usual requirements.

Sanchez, said the judge, also was sentenced to learn to speak English.

"I required him to learn English because communications is very important," said Poe. "We'll all be better off if we can talk to each other."

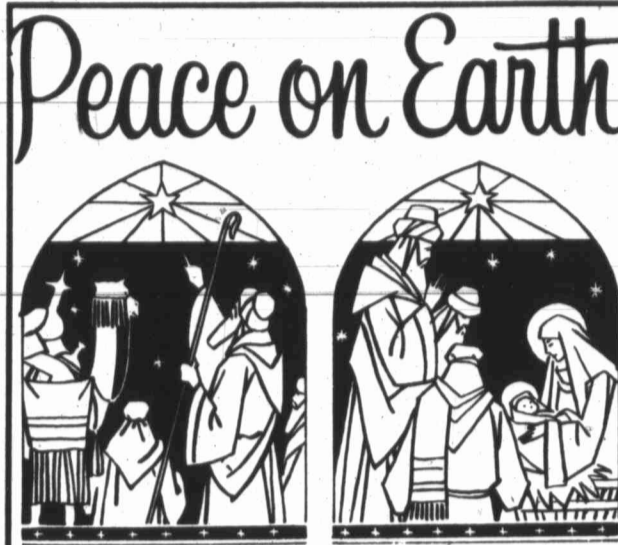

"Besides, if he learns English he may be able to get a better job," the judge added.

2 named to Glasscock panel

GARDEN CITY — Two new members were elected to the Glasscock County Community Committee this month, according to Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Manager Joe Esparza.

Joe Schwartz was elected vice-chairman of the committee, replacing six-year member Denis Calverley. Cecil Halfmann was selected as the regular member to serve a two-year term. Dale Hillger remains as the committee chairman.

The committee members are responsible for agriculturally-related programs through the county ASCS office, Esparza said. The committee handles the administration conservation programs among other responsibilities, he added.

A message of thanks to our wonderful patrons. We want to wish you the warmest wishes for the holiday season.

Railroad Commission adopts rules favoring gas ratepayers

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission has adopted rules that would give customers five working days before gas utility service could be terminated, and require gas utilities to tell customers how to register complaints and resolve billing disputes.

Also adopted on an emergency basis, effective immediately, was a rule to require gas utilities to provide customers with a statement of their rights in both English and Spanish.

One rule proposed Monday would require gas utilities to postpone termination of gas service if it would endanger the health of a resident. Another proposed rule would permit customers to delay paying disputed portions of their bills that exceed their monthly average until the dispute is resolved.

The proposed rules will be published in the Texas Register, and comments will be received for 30 days following publication.

A commission statement said since "all interested persons" will be able to suggest changes in the proposed rules, the commission had denied a petition for rulemaking on the same subject filed by the Consumers Union, Texas Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now and the Grey Panthers.

The statement added that a commission examiner had said granting the petition would duplicate efforts and could delay adoption of the proposed changes.

U.S. offers Soviets counter plan on missiles

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union's offer to reduce the number of SS-20 mobile missiles aimed at Europe is unacceptable, say U.S. officials who want Moscow's most potent medium-range nuclear weapon eliminated altogether.

Key U.S. arms control officials contend the proposal made Tuesday by Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov to reduce the number of SS-20s to the level of French and British nuclear forces would in fact give the Soviets an enduring military monopoly in such weapons in exchange for "a big fat zero" for the United States.

There are no U.S. medium-range missiles in Europe and John Hughes, the State Department's chief spokesman, said, "The Soviet proposal contained in Mr. Andropov's speech is unacceptable because it would leave the Soviets with several hundred warheads on SS-20s, while denying us the means to deter that threat."

"We cannot accept that the United States should agree to allow the Soviets superiority over us because the British and French maintain their own national deterrent force," he said.

Hughes said it is not enough for the Soviets to promise to reduce the SS-20s to the level of the 162 medium-range missiles maintained by France and Britain while the Soviets maintain about 100 of the mobile weapons in Soviet Asia.

"This would leave the Soviets free to threaten our Asian friends as well as to maintain a highly mobile missile force that can be moved at any time into position to threaten NATO," Hughes said.

"In sum, we hope the Soviets will now come to realize that we cannot give up the means to counter the nuclear threat they pose to NATO unless the threat is eliminated altogether," Hughes said.

A Pentagon official, who spoke with reporters on the condition he not be quoted by name, said the intent of the Soviet proposal appears to be to move the negotiations on curbing the SS-20 missile from the conference room in Geneva "to the editorial pages of newspapers in Europe and the United States."

A State Department official, who spoke on the same understanding, said the Andropov plan would leave the Soviet Union with 260 SS-20s, each of them armed with three warheads.

These officials said even if the weapons remain in Asia, their warheads could still strike targets in such NATO nations as Turkey and Norway.

The officials contended there is "total support" in European capitals for President Reagan's plan to move ahead with the deployment of a new force of 572 U.S. Pershing II and cruise missiles while seeking Soviet agreement in Geneva to eliminate the SS-20 force entirely.

Talks in the Swiss city on reducing U.S. and Soviet missiles are due to resume in early February.

Reagan has promised to cancel deployment of the U.S. missiles if the SS-20s are dismantled and destroyed.

Andropov's proposal came in an hour-long speech at a Kremlin celebration Tuesday, marking the 60th anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet state.

Lebanon talks reaching final stages today

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. mediators today were expected to finalize the date and place for American-sponsored talks between Israel and Lebanon on withdrawal of foreign armies from Lebanese land, a senior official said.

"I believe the talks will begin before Christmas," said Ghassan Tuani, Lebanon's former U.N. ambassador who has been appointed by President Amin Gemayel as "coordinator of withdrawal talks."

Tuani said he personally believed the first session would be held at the Lebanon Beach Hotel in the seaside suburban neighborhood of Khalde, 7.5 miles south of central Beirut.

Tuani spoke in an interview with Lebanon's state television Tuesday night, a few hours after Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan announced that U.S. special envoy Morris Draper had reported Israel was willing to begin the withdrawal talks "soon, possibly before Christmas."

Officials here also reported Tuesday night that Lebanon had completed a "working paper" for submission at the opening session of talks. The paper envisages a simultaneous and complete withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces in two stages by mid-February.

Israel invaded Lebanon on June 6 to rout the Palestine Liberation Organization's guerrilla army. Thousands of PLO guerrillas evacuated Israeli-ringed Beirut in August and September for sanctuary in other Arab nations, but 6,000 to 8,000 remain in north and east Lebanon behind Syrian lines.

Syrian forces have been in Lebanon for six years, originally sent to police the mid-1970s Moslem-Christian civil war.

Tuani said contacts already were under way with Syria on arrangements for the withdrawal of Syrian forces stationed in northern Lebanon and the eastern Bekaa Valley.

He said a two-man Lebanese delegation would discuss with PLO chairman Yasser Arafat in Tunis the question of Palestinian forces withdrawing from north and east Lebanon.

"Lebanon is keen on leaving no Palestinian military presence on its soil," Tuani said. "There is a positive Palestinian response and preparedness to respect Lebanon's will."

Tuani said the Lebanese would seek in the talks with U.S. and Israeli negotiators to concentrate on military withdrawals and security arrangements, "but not a peace treaty or normalization of relations."

"Future relations (between Lebanon and Israel) will be shaped within the framework of the general (peace) process in the Middle East," Tuani said.

"I want to emphasize in this regard that Lebanon is extremely keen that its moves in the Middle East (conflict) be balanced and simultaneous with the general Arab movement," he said.

"Security arrangements should be the crux of the negotiations," Tuani said. "Lebanon wants protection against new wars and new invasions. Israel wants to make sure that Lebanon would not be a base for military operations against Israel. How to reconcile the two demands will be the main point of discussion in the negotiations."

Efforts to get talks started had been deadlocked by Israel's insistence on holding sessions in Jerusalem. Lebanon rejected the holy city as a negotiating site because of the Arab world's refusal to recognize Israeli sovereignty over Arab East Jerusalem, seized by Israeli forces in the 1967 Middle East war.

The Israeli Cabinet dropped the demand on Sunday, clearing the way for negotiations to start.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon told Israel's parliamentary Foreign Affairs Committee on Tuesday that Israel and Lebanon have agreed on an explicit clause of non-belligerency and on a pullback of forces from Lebanon's central mountains, Israel's state radio said.

Government lists 418 deadly chemical dumps

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON — Love Canal may have grabbed the headlines, but the government's final ranking of the worst chemical dumps in the country lists 115 that are considered more dangerous.

In all, the Environmental Protection Agency on Monday listed 418 dumps as serious threats, making them eligible for cleanup money under the $1.6 billion Superfund program.

New York's Love Canal, which ranked 116th on the list, is the infamous Niagara Falls dump where hundreds of people were forced to move from their homes because of chemical contamination.

The Superfund was passed by Congress in December 1980 to correct decades of improper chemical disposal that left America dotted with thousands of abandoned waste dumps leaking poisons into the environment.

CONGRESS DIRECTED the EPA to establish a list of at least 400 top priority sites which will be eligible for money being raised by a tax on the chemical and petroleum industries.

Dumps on the list were located in 45 states and five territories, with the largest concentration occurring in the industrial areas of the East and Midwest. New Jersey had the most dumps, 65, in part because the state has been aggressive in locating abandoned dumps for listing, EPA officials said. Michigan was second with 46 sites followed by Pennsylvania with 30, New York with 26 and Florida, which has a high ground water table, with 25.

A dump in the small Minnesota town of Fridley was ranked as the worst in the country. Officials said it had a score of 74.16 out of a possible 100 on a computer model designed to evaluate relative risks to public health and the environment from each site.

Officials said it ranked high because of severe underground water contamination which was flowing into the Mississippi River near where Minneapolis gets its water supplies.

AFTER FRIDLEY, the other top-rated dumps were in New Castle County, Del.; Butler County, Penn.; Woburn, Mass., and Pittman, N.J.

"We have now defined the nation's first five-year agenda for ending decades of neglect of our hazardous waste problem," said EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch in announcing the list.

While the EPA is not bound to clean up the dumps in the exact order they are listed, the ranking will serve as a guideline in deciding how the money is spent, officials said. Other factors playing a part will be the willingness of private parties to come up with cleanup funds and the states to provide the 10 percent in matching money they must furnish.

The $1.6 billion fund is expected to provide enough money to clean up only about half the sites. The EPA says it plans to get the rest of the money by forcing private companies to pay up. The law allows the government to get triple damages from companies who refuse to cooperate in the cleanup.

EPA OFFICIALS say companies have contributed about 40 percent of the $310 million spent so far on cleanup activities. But critics have charged that the EPA is being too lenient with the companies, allowing them to pay for minimal surface removal and exempting them from any liability for the much more expensive costs of cleaning contaminated underground aquifers.

But Mrs. Gorsuch said her agency had a good record both in forcing companies to pay and in spending the money appropriated, despite charges by critics that the agency has been slow to spend appropriated funds.

Most Dangerous Waste Sites

TEXAS HAS 8 DANGEROUS DUMPS — This map locates the 418 most dangerous waste sites in the country according to a list provided by the Environmental Protection Agency Monday. Forty-five states and five territories placed dumps on the list with New Jersey leading the way with 65 sites. Michigan followed with 46 and then Pennsylvania with 30.

The list of 418 sites replaces an interim list of 160 sites announced earlier.

ONLY FIVE states do not have any sites on the list. Wisconsin did not nominate any sites, a Georgia site which made the first list has already been cleaned up and Nevada's site did not score high enough to be ranked, officials said. Alaska and Hawaii nominated sites on federal property, which EPA officials say is not covered by the Superfund law.

That claim was disputed by critics, however, who said the Reagan administration had simply made a decision not to use Superfund to deal with some 650 federal sites, many of which are located on military bases.

"Many of the federal sites are worse than the ones that were listed, but they just don't want to force the Defense Department to clean them up," said Hugh Kaufman, a civil service employee at the EPA who has been a frequent critic of the administration.

EPA accepting high cancer risks from chemicals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The acceptable risk level for potentially cancer-causing chemicals has increased as much as 100 times since the Reagan administration took office, according to a House subcommittee staff investigation.

"The actual effect of these changes on public health simply cannot reliably be evaluated and may indeed be, as the (Environmental Protection) Agency claims, very minor," the draft report on the investigation said.

But, it said, "When balancing risks and benefits, EPA has decided to accept as tolerable a level of risk 10 to 100 times higher than routinely accepted in the past."

EPA officials are withholding comment on the report, said spokesman Al Heier, but they have privately lodged their disagreement over several of the allegations with members of the House Agriculture subcommittee on department operations, research and foreign agriculture.

But, Heier maintained, "We haven't expressed a new carcinogen policy."

In a summary of the report, the investigators also question the scientific methods EPA uses to evaluate the potential cancer hazard of pesticides, suggesting "less stringent regulatory treatment of suspect human carcinogens."

The subcommittee, however, has not adopted the staff report. Several members said they had not had enough time to review its conclusions or provide comments. Some also complained that the report eliminated specific examples.

Rep. George Brown, D-Calif., subcommittee chairman, said he plans to hold hearings on the issue early next year, based on the report and comments from the agency and panel members.

The report recommended that EPA "clearly articulate the cancer policy principles which now guide agency decisions" to clear up any misunderstanding about pesticide regulation, which is conducted through the Office of Pesticide Programs.

While giving the agency good marks for improving the scientific quality and sensitivity of pesticide evaluation, the staff report cited EPA's failure to improve its procedure for setting acceptable levels of pesticide residues in food and feed crops.

HER FUTURE DEPENDS ON MEDICINE — Mrs. Sandy Tamayo holds her 4 1/2-month-old daughter Melissa, suffering from a severe immunity deficiency that requires complete blood exchanges every two weeks. Melissa, born without natural immunity to diseases depends on the success of a new bone marrow transplant procedure done at Boston Children's Hospital.

New transplant procedure could help save infant's life

KERRVILLE (AP) — Doctors think an experimental bone marrow transplant could save the precious life of an infant girl who has no immunity to infection and needs her blood exchanged every two weeks.

The girl, 4 1/2-month-old Melissa Tamayo, suffers from severe combined immune deficiency, the same disorder that has forced an 11-year-old Houston boy to spend his life in a plastic bubble.

Her brother and sister cannot leave the family's one-bedroom apartment for fear that Melissa could contract a fatal infection from them, the girl's mother said.

But doctors at Boston's Children's Hospital have developed an experimental way of transplanting the bone marrow Melissa needs, said Dr. Ted Knicker of the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio.

Dr. Clarence Donald, a Kerrville pediatrician, said the girl's future depends on the success of the transplant procedure.

"Without treatment, I fear Melissa will eventually die from an infection," he said.

Bone marrow transplants have become increasingly reliable, if good tissue matches can be found, but no one in Melissa's family has the suitable marrow, Knicker said.

While waiting to learn if Melissa can be treated in Boston, doctors in San Antonio have completely exchanged her blood twice in a "stop-gap" effort to give the girl some immunity, he said.

The girl's condition was diagnosed in November and since then she has had to have the blood exchanged every two weeks, Donald said.

Her parents, Tommy and Sandy Tamayo, said they hope to take Melissa to Boston on Dec. 30 for a bone marrow transplant from her father.

"We know that it is a dangerous procedure and we will have to stay there for a while, but we know that is what we have to do," said Mrs. Tamayo. "But even with any risk, what choice do we have? Our little girl could die from a cold and we must try to protect her with what we have."

The girl suffers from the same ailment that has forced the Houston boy, known only as David, to live his entire life inside a sterile environment.

"The answer of putting someone in a bubble is not the answer. That is why he is the one and only," said Knicker.

Energy panel's contract decision no bother to pipelines, producers

States News Service
WASHINGTON —

Natural gas pipelines had already begun shying away from controversial "take or pay" contracts before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission criticized such contracts last week, according to oil and gas industry sources.

Those contracts force pipelines to purchase certain percentages of gas, even if they cannot sell the gas because of a glutted market.

FERC made the criticism in the form of an advisory policy statement that will not bind producers and pipelines to renegotiation of any current contracts.

The commission said that future contracts should not require a pipeline to pay for more than 75 percent of the gas that has been bought from a supplier if demand drops. Contracts now in effect bind pipelines to buy up to 90 percent of the contracted gas, whether or not there is any demand.

"This policy statement represents their response to heavy pressure from Congress and the public," said Stewart Macdonald of the Interstate Natural Gas Association, a pipeline industry lobby in Washington. "But we are already moving in this direction in new contracts."

"The Senate killed legislation in the lame-duck session of Congress that would have changed the current contract structure for the natural gas industry, abolishing current take or pay provisions and freezing gas prices at their current levels. After killing the legislation, sponsored by Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., the Senate last week passed a resolution that directed the commission to take what action it could to hold down gas prices."

A spokesman for the Natural Gas Supply Association, representing producers of natural gas, said sagging market conditions have made the take-or-pay contracts unattractive. Most of the contracts were negotiated in the 1970s, when the market was in a reverse situation and natural gas pipeline companies were struggling to tie down future reserves.

They are just catching up with things that have been happening for the last several months," said Stanley Wallace, a spokesman for Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co., a Houston company that supplies gas to utilities in the upper Midwest.

Wallace said the furor over take-or-pay contracts has obscured the real reasons why prices have gone up. He said government regulations are the real culprits. "The regulations as they exist prevent market forces from having effects on old contracts," Wallace said. Macdonald said federal law requires prices to go up, but makes it hard for them to drop.

The Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 placed regular price increases into effect. As more newly found gas gets into the system, prices will continue to rise since new gas is scheduled under the act to be fully decontrolled on Jan. 1, 1985.

Pipeline companies also worry that their contracts have provisions that will push prices up to the level of fuel oil by 1985. The "indefinite pricing clauses" were also accepted by the pipelines in the late-1970s when gas supplies were tight.

Merry Christmas, Padres

Birthday boy Garvey signs for big bucks

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Steve Garvey, his 34th birthday brightened by a five-year contract worth a possible $2 million a year, wants to repay the San Diego Padres with a pennant in 1983.

Shortly after signing the guaranteed $6.6 million contract, the former Los Angeles Dodger first baseman predicted a National League Western Division title for the rising Padres in the "very, very near future."

During the news conference Tuesday, club President Ballard Smith said the Padres paid a heavy price for the eight-time all-star, but called it "a case of desperately wanting Steve to play for us."

Part of Garvey's lucrative package is reportedly being underwritten by Ray Kroc, the ailing 80-year-old owner and founder of McDonald's fast-food empire.

"We desperately wanted to provide a ballclub that Ray could be proud of," said Smith, Kroc's son-in-law.

Calling it "the most difficult decision" of his career, Garvey, who has admitted having political plans after baseball, said staying in California was a major consideration.

"My heart is here in Southern California," said Garvey, who became a free agent at the end of the season after 12 years with the Dodgers.

He chose San Diego over the Chicago Cubs, San Francisco Giants, New York Yankees and Houston Astros — with the Cubs and Giants going down to the wire in the bidding war.

Garvey, a lifetime .301 hitter in 12 big league seasons, declined to say if the Padres' offer was the best one he received.

Manager Dick Williams, who directed the Padres to a fourth-place finish in 1982, said the acquisition of Garvey automatically moves San Diego a notch higher and "throws us right into a contender's role."

Williams said he tentatively plans to bat Garvey "third or fourth" in the lineup, between Sixto Lezcano and Terry Kennedy, the Padres two top power hitters.

He said the Padres were "in dire need" of a slugging first baseman. Garvey has averaged 21 home runs and 98 runs batted in the last nine seasons.

At one point during the press conference, Garvey drew cheers when he said San Diego would have a title by next fall.

Closing the book on his Dodger days, he said Los Angeles represented "a long chapter in my life. Now that chapter has closed."

If his consecutive game streak of 1,107 games stays intact, he would break the National League record held by Billy Williams on April 15 at Dodger Stadium. That meeting, his first against his former teammates, would be "an emotional series," he said.

The guaranteed portion of Garvey's contract is for $6.6 million, but The Associated Press learned that the deal includes individual and attendant bonuses of $575,000 per year.

If Garvey were to collect on all of the bonuses, the contract's value would balloon to $9.475 million over the life of the contract.

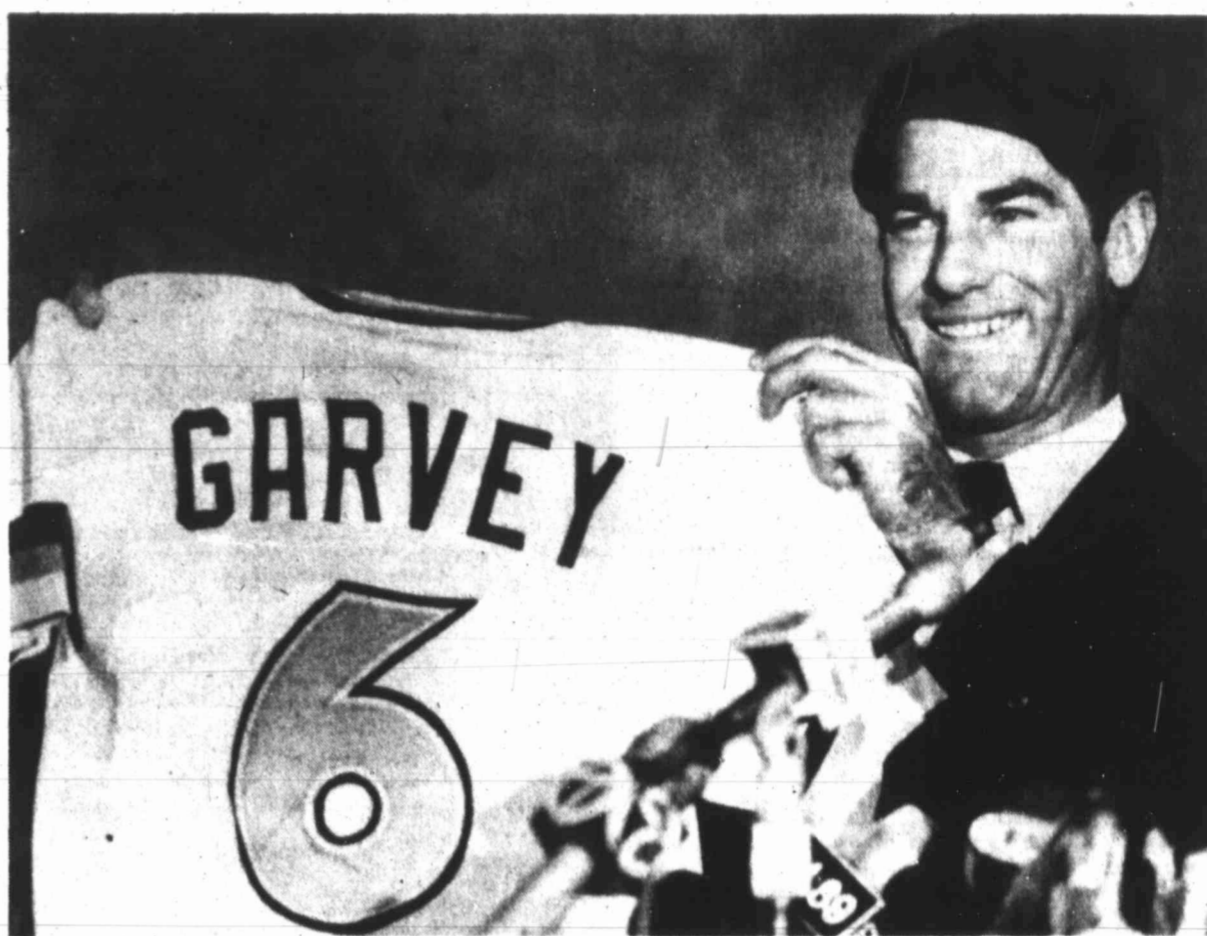

His agent, Jerry Kapstein, would not comment on details, but a source close to the negotiations said Garvey would earn no less than $1.5 million per year.

The Dodgers had offered a four-year contract for $5 million. Garvey earned $361,000 last year in the final season of six-year, $1.97-million contract.

Smith said the Padres initially wondered "whether we could afford him," but changed their minds after meeting Garvey and reviewing the club's needs.

"We're signing him because the potential rewards are great," he said, adding that with Garvey the club expects to draw two million fans in 1983. The club attendance mark is 1.6 million, set in 1978 when the Padres went over the .500 mark for the only time in their history.

Garvey, who began his baseball career as a batboy for the Dodgers at spring training in Florida, has not missed a game since Sept. 1, 1975. His consecutive streak is the fourth longest in major league history.

He enters the 1983 season with 211 home runs and 992 runs batted in, six 200-hit seasons, seven .300 seasons and career highs of 33 home runs and 115 RBI, both in 1977.

Padres' reserve second baseman Tim Flannery gave up his uniform number in order that Garvey get his familiar No. 6.

The addition of Garvey was welcomed by his new teammates.

"It's a great Christmas present," said veteran utilityman Kurt

Bevacqua. "It's like finding the missing piece of a puzzle. He fits. I'm not saying we're going to win a pennant next year, but this is a major step to put in position to do it."

Shortstop Garry Templeton said Garvey brings leadership to the Padres and solidifies an already outstanding defensive infield.

ROLE AS THE ENFORCER — Marcia Morey, the National Collegiate Athletic Association's first women enforcement officer, stands beside the NCAA emblem in the NCAA headquarters building in Mission, Kan. Once an olympic class swimmer, Marcia now has a law degree and in her new job will help oversee the transition of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

NCAA's first female enforcer shows there's life after sport

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Marcia Morey says the disillusionment that followed the end of her athletic career is one reason she became the first woman investigator in the cloak-and-dagger world of NCAA enforcement.

"After I was finished athletically, it was a tremendous disappointment to realize my value as a human being was not what I thought it was," she said. "My value was pretty much athletically related."

Eventually, she realized it was not a unique experience among athletes. And, after completing work on a law degree at the University of Illinois, she was hired in September as the first woman on the NCAA's investigative staff.

"I feel the NCAA works for ideals," the 27-year-old native of Decatur, Ill., said in an interview.

"We're all concerned with people. We're concerned about life after the competition is over, and seeing that they're well-rounded people who are able to pursue their academic talents to the utmost as well as their athletic talents.

"The job just fell from heaven, almost literally. Another woman law student had just returned from an interview and I happened to overhear her conversation. I immediately went to a pay phone and applied for the job."

A summa cum laude graduate of Millikin University in Decatur, she holds a master's degree as well as a law degree.

Competing in the 100 and 200-meter breaststroke, she won silver and bronze medals at the world swimming championships in Cali, Colombia in 1975 and the following year co-captained the American women's team in the Montreal Olympics.

She's already begun work on about a dozen cases, mostly involving women's programs.

"She's not limited to women's issues, but that's her main priority right now," said Bill Hunt, head of the NCAA enforcement division. "I think she would like to just come in and do the job and not be singled out as our first female investigator. She's a very idealistic person. She's putting a lot of enthusiasm and energy into her job." One of the first things Ms. Morey learned is that people seldom have a warm greeting for NCAA investigators, no matter what their sex.

"I say, 'I'm with the NCAA enforcement staff,' and suddenly it's like I have leprosy, or I'm a tax auditor," she said. "I'm not used to that kind of reaction from people, not at all. They're sometimes very reticent, and very suspicious. I have a business card that says 'Enforcement Representative,' and before I give it to people I usually scratch in with pencil, 'Friendly Enforcement Representative.'"

She says she's encountered no problems being the lone woman in a male-dominated arena.

"I was the only girl on my block growing up, playing army, and I learned all about male language as the only female on an all-male swimming team," she said with a laugh. "I don't believe there will be any problems. We're all human beings. And human-to-human is the only way I deal with people. And I hope they will reciprocate that."

'Cats, Hoosiers: physical hoop

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — The Indiana-Kentucky basketball game used to be a high-scoring, physical matchup. That was in the early years of coaches Bob Knight and Joe B. Hall.

Now it's just physical. "It's always a tough game," says Hall, who brings his second-ranked Wildcats into Assembly Hall to face No. 5 Hoosiers tonight. "This will be another tough one."

Knight, hoping to break a three-game losing string against Kentucky, says the Wildcats have "an excellent team ... the best team at this point that we've played."

Only one time since 1975 has a team scored more than 80 points in the Kentucky-Indiana showdown. That was last year, when the Wildcats beat the Hoosiers 85-69 at Rupp Arena in Lexington. Overall, Indiana has a 13-11 advantage in the series that began in 1925 and has been waged annually since 1970.

"It'll be another tough, physical game," says Wildcat senior Derrick Hord, a 6-foot-6 forward who leads the team in scoring at 13.9 points a game. Right behind Hord is 6-5 junior guard Jim Master, averaging 13 points a game.

The Wildcats, as a team, are shooting 61.1 percent from the field, and the defense is holding the opposition to 38.3 percent shooting.

Indiana's leading scorer is 6-6 senior swingman Randy Wittman at about 20 points a game. But most of the other Hoosiers have been inconsistent, including 6-8 senior forward Ted Kitchel, the team's top scorer a year ago. "We're not a great basketball team," says Knight. "We have to scratch, scramble and scrape. Our whole key is being smart. We have to be smart, and we really should be a smarter team than we are."

Knight is expected to start an all-senior lineup of Kitchel and Wittman at forward, 6-8 Steve Bouchie at center and 6-3 Jim Thomas and 6-2 Tony Brown at guard.

Kentucky is without injured 7-1 Sam Bowie, but the Wildcats figure to start 6-11 Melvin Turpin at center, Hord and 6-6 Charles Hurt at forward, and Master and 6-3 Dirk Minniefield at guard. The Wildcats also are missing 6-8 freshman Todd May, Kentucky's high school Mr. Basketball last season, who quit the squad last week.

College game boosts NFL offenses

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Coach Ray Malavasi of the Los Angeles Rams sees the high-scoring, record-setting San Diego-Cincinnati game as the result of a football evolution that started 10 to 15 years ago.

The Chargers won 50-34 with the teams combining for 1,102 total yards in offense. Dan Fouts, San Diego's quarterback, passed for 435 yards and the two teams' completions added up to 66.

Malavasi, the man under fire because of his team's 1-6 National Football League record, watched the Monday night telecast and observed philosophically: "More than a decade ago, the college coaches liked the professional game with a lot of passing. So they began emulating it."

"The result was that more good quarterbacks and wide receivers came out of the colleges. Also more offensive linemen. Even in our (pro) game, 15 passes used to be a lot. Now a team is passing 40 times in a game."

"The philosophy used to be that three things, all bad, could happen to you when you went to passing — a sack, an interception or an incompleting. It's been proven now that you can win throwing the ball. Teams are using multiple formations — the shotgun, three or four wide receivers and others. Backs are more able to catch the ball. And there have been rule changes making it more difficult for the defense.

"It used to be that as a season progressed," Malavasi said, "the defense caught up with the offense. Now it doesn't. It used to be the nickel defense (five defensive backs) worked well in obvious passing situations. Now you sometimes need six and the Chicago Bears have different versions of the nickel."

"I think we need rule changes again to make it more even between the offense and the defense. The evolution is great for the fans but tough on defenses."

The Rams play Chicago on Sunday at Anaheim Stadium, most likely the next-to-last game for each team since the Bears are 2-5 and the Rams below them in the NFC standings with only two weeks remaining in the strike-shortened regular season. However, both teams do retain a longshot hope of making the 16-team postseason playoff.

Cool Mavs tip Clippers

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Making few mistakes and not getting carried away with fancy-footwork are the keys to success, according to Dallas Mavericks coach Dick Motta.

"We only had 13 turnovers," Motta said Tuesday night following the Mavericks' 121-118 National Basketball Association victory over the San Diego Clippers.

"We would have beaten a lot of teams this game," Motta said. "At the end, we tried to get the ball down low where you get fouled. It still works. You don't mess with that fancy stuff, just go down the middle."

Mark Aguirre led the Mavericks' attack with 28 points and Jay Vincent scored 11 of his 25 points in the decisive fourth quarter to pace the victory as Dallas boosted its record to 12-13.

"When we run our stuff we're a good team," said Aguirre. "When we don't run our offense, we break down. We've been playing better and better."

NBA

Although the Mavericks maintained their advantage down the stretch, the victory wasn't secure until the final moment. Clipper guard Craig Hodges hit what would have been a three-point field goal. But the shot was launched just after time expired.

Brad Davis, who put Dallas up by four with a minute left when he made a jumpshot from 20 feet, contributed a season-high 20 points.

"I was open and loated to the corner. He (Aguirre) made a good pass and picked off my man a little bit," Davis said of the shot.

The Clippers, losers of seven straight, dropped to 4-22.

"We got our shot at the end," San Diego Coach Paul Silas said. "But Hodges shot was after the buzzer."

Forward Tom Chambers led the Clippers with 28 points before fouling out with 4:02 left in the game. Rookies Terry Cummings and Richard Anderson added 17 and 14 points, respectively, for San Diego.

The Clippers led at halftime 65-61. Chambers scored San Diego's first 13 points of the third quarter, but the Mavericks took a 90-87 lead into the final period.

Suns 114, Spurs 113

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Like the "good pressure player" his coach says he is, Kyle Macy responded with the crucial points Phoenix needed when San Antonio opened a 10-point fourth-quarter lead.

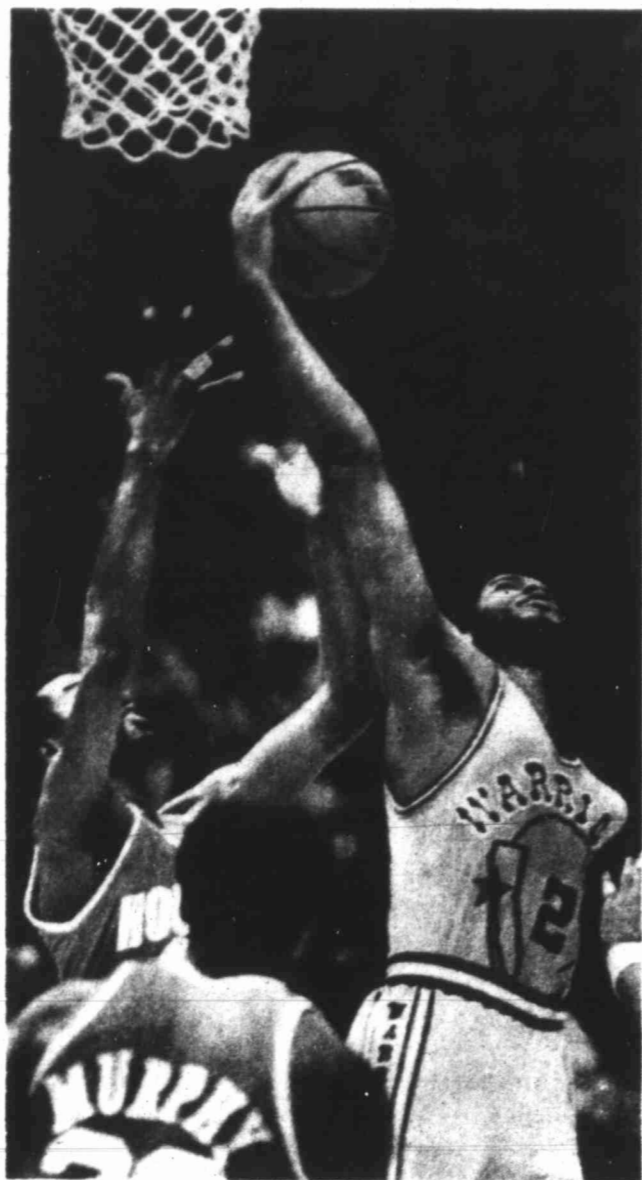

Macy hit a 15-foot jump shot with 39 seconds left, hit a three-point shot, and scored all of his eight points in the fourth period as Phoenix came from behind Tuesday night to beat San Antonio 114-113 in a National Basketball Association game.

San Antonio led 100-90 with just under nine minutes to play when Macy hit his three-point shot. The Suns then outscored the Spurs 9-1 to take a 102-101 lead.

"Coming back from 10 points down in the fourth quarter makes this a tremendous win for us," Phoenix Coach John MacCleod said.

"Kyle Macy is a good pressure player," he said. "His three-point shot was planned. Our back court really gave us a big boost tonight in scoring."

George Gervin, the Spurs' leading scorer with 20 points, had a chance to win the game with 11 seconds remaining, but missed a running hook shot. He averages 28.8 a game, making him the NBA's third leading scorer.

Warriors 92, Rockets 85

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The arrival of Ron Brewer has signaled more than just a routine changing of guards for the Golden State Warriors.

Brewer, 6-4, has joined 6-5 Michael Ray Richardson in the backcourt to give the Warriors a sleek new look — tall, fast and dangerous on defense.

The guards complemented high-scoring forward Purvis Short, tough rebounder Larry Smith and 7-foot center J.B. Carroll to rip the Houston Rockets 92-85 Tuesday night and notch Golden State's seventh victory in its last 10 games.

Brewer, playing for only the third time as a Warrior since his trade last week from Cleveland for World Free, entered the game after three minutes with Houston ahead 3-0. Both teams seemed in a daze trying to figure out what to do.

Brewer and Richardson made things happen. They forced turnovers and steals and led the team on a 25-6 tear before the quarter ended, the best defensive period of the season for the Warriors.

Houston, paced by Joe Bryant's 23 points and Allen Leavell's 20 points, fought back in the second quarter and took a brief lead in the third period. But the defense and speed of Brewer and Richardson, plus Short's scoring and Smith's rebounding, helped Golden State recover and pull away for an easy victory.

Area Hoop

Late hoop nips Lamesa, 55-53

MONAHANS — Ricky Boysaw tipped in a teammate's miss at the buzzer to lift Monahans to a 55-53 upset victory over Lamesa in a District 2-AAAA game here Tuesday night.

The loss drops Lamesa to 9-4 and 1-1 in league play, snapping the Golden Tors' eight-game winning streak in the process also. Monahans improves to 9-4 with the win but more importantly, goes to 2-0 in 2-4A play.

Trailing the entire game, Lamesa battled back to tie the game 49-49 with three minutes to go. The contest was tied twice more, the last time at 53 with Lamesa working for the last shot. A traveling violation with 21 seconds left gave the Lobos a final chance.

Monahans worked for the final shot also but the game appeared headed into overtime when Greg Winder missed from the key with four seconds left. Boysaw was open on the off-side, however, and put in Winder's miss for the game-winner.

The victory avenged an earlier 60-48 loss to the Tors in the finals of the Denver City Tournament.

Victory Spencer led all scorers in the game with 21 points for Lamesa but scored just six in the final half. Sophomore Chris Mason, recently called up from the junior varsity, used his 6-1 size to toss in 13 more.

Boysaw and Jeff Stevenson each finished with 16 while David Qualls had 10 for the Lobos.

Lamesa was coming off an 80-77 victory over 4-AAAA favorite San Angelo Central Friday. In that game, Spencer scored 33 points but lost a scoring battle with Central's all-district post Lorand White who had 36 points.

The Golden Tornadoes rest until Dec. 28 when they enter the Brownwood Basketball Tournament, meeting Brady Tuesday afternoon.

In the girls game, Monahans won 60-41, dropping Lamesa to 4-9 and 2-2 in league play.

Emotion on for Pokes, Eagles

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Some of the fizz has gone out of the Dallas-Philadelphia rivalry but there should still be some leftover emotion when these two teams collide Sunday in a National Football League game.

"Sure, there will be something missing," said Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil. "The last four years we were competitive and battling for a playoff berth and a division title."

"We're out of the picture now. But it will still be a good game."

Dallas is 6-1 and tied atop the National Conference standings with Washington while the Eagles are 2-5 and virtually out of the Super Bowl "tournament."

Vermeil said Dallas, which has clinched its 16th playoff appearance in 17 years, "always looks better than the year before."

He added "the secondary has matured, the pass rush looks good, and their quarterback (Danny White) is the best we've faced...Dallas is every bit as good as Cincinnati."

The Eagles lost 18-14 to the Bengals earlier in the year.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said "there would be more emotion if we were both going for a title...but the feeling is always there when we play the Eagles...they are the best talented club we play."

Landry said the Eagles were victimized by the strike perhaps more than any other National Football League team.

"They came off the venue and weren't ready," said Landry. "Washington was the best team coming out of the strike and Philadelphia had to play them twice and lost twice."

Dallas owns a 29-15 series edge over the Eagles.

Cards hang on; Stetson upsets

By The Associated Press
 Bill Thompson is the most heralded of Louisville's freshman, but it was another frosh, Jeff Hall, who sparked the 14th-ranked Cardinals to victory over No. 15 North Carolina State.

Thompson, 6-foot-8 freshman from Camden, N.J., scored only two points, while Hall, 6-4 from Fairview, Ky., came off the bench Tuesday night to spark Louisville to a homecourt 57-52 triumph, its eighth in nine college basketball games this season.

Hall, who was the second schoolboy to announce his attentions to attend Louisville after Thompson, scored eight points — hitting all four shots from the field — in the second half and helped key the Cardinals' defense which shut down the Wolfpack in the second half.

In other games involving the Top Twenty, No. 12 Arkansas rallied to edge Southern Mississippi 64-62; unbeaten Stetson upset No. 16 West Virginia 79-69, and No. 17 Las Vegas-Nevada advanced the final of the Rebel Roundup in Las Vegas against Baylor by ripping Long Island University 101-78.

Louisville needed help because Lancaster Gordon, its leading scorer, hit only one of five shots and finished with five points. The teams were tied at halftime 33-33 as North Carolina State shot 56 percent from the field before intermission.

Arkansas boosted its record to 7-0 as Darrell Walker scored 18 points, including the go-ahead goal, against visiting Southern Mississippi, 6-2.

The Razorbacks tied the score at 52 on John Snively's 20-footer. Snively then stole a pass which led to Walker's go-ahead basket.

Frank Burnell scored 21 points and Glynn Myrick 19 as host Stetson, 7-0, never trailed and dealt West Virginia its first setback in nine games. Greg Jones led the Mountaineers with 22 points.

SURVIVORS OF MASSACRE SPEAK — Ektefa Shallas, right, and her 16-year-old daughter Jamila are shown in the Palestinian refugee camp of Chatilla where they survived September's massacre. They said Israeli soldiers were present during the slaughter.

Survivors say Israelis present at massacre

By SCIEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT — Contradicting official testimony in Israel, survivors of the September Palestinian massacres say Israeli soldiers were in the Chatilla refugee camp during the killings.

Three Palestinian women — Ektefa Shallas, her 16-year-old daughter, Jamila, and their neighbor, Amenah Khalifa — said the Israelis tried to protect women and children during the Sept. 16-18 slaughter by Lebanese Christian militiamen.

The women told The Associated Press they talked to an Israeli soldier in front of their houses about 6 p.m. on the day the massacre began, Thursday, Sept. 16, and later that night saw up to 10 Israeli soldiers periodically coming and going just inside the western edge of the camp.

The Israelis talked on radios in Hebrew, they said, and conversed in heavily accented Arabic with Lebanese militiamen.

Two Associated Press reporters interviewed more than a dozen survivors of the massacre, and Mrs. Khalifa, Mrs. Shallas and her daughter were the only ones who said they saw Israelis inside the Chatilla camp. The others said they saw Israelis outside the camp Sept. 17 and 18 but none inside.

Informed of the women's statements, an Israeli military command spokesman in Tel Aviv reiterated the Israelis' previous statements that no Israeli soldiers were present in the Chatilla and Sabra camps before, during or after the massacre. Israeli government policy forbids identification of the spokesman.

A foreign diplomat in Beirut, who declined use of his name, said Lebanese Prosecutor General Assad Germanos' investigation of the massacre has uncovered claims that Israelis were in the camps Sept. 16-18. But the diplomat said the findings might be suspect because authorities might want to deflect attention from the alleged involvement of militiamen of the Christian Phalangists, the party of President Amin Gemayel.

Germanos, when contacted by a reporter, refused to comment.

IMMEDIATELY AFTER the killings came to light, some survivors from the camps said they thought they saw Israelis inside the Palestinian enclaves. But their reports were not as specific as the statements by the three women.

An Israeli inquiry commission is seeking to determine when Israelis knew that a massacre was under way, and whether they acted properly.

The final death toll in the Chatilla-Sabra slaughter remains uncertain. Germanos has said 328 bodies were found and 991 people are listed as missing.

During an interview about the events of Sept. 16-18, Mrs. Shallas volunteered that "an Israeli" had talked to her outside her house in Chatilla the night the massacre began.

Mrs. Shallas, 44, said she first saw an Israeli soldier with a Phalangist militiaman in a narrow passageway outside her concrete-block house 175 yards from the western edge of Chatilla and 400 yards from the camp's southern entrance. Mrs. Shallas and her neighbor said that a few minutes later Mrs. Khalifa's husband, two teen-age sons and three other men were lined up against a wall and killed by Lebanese militiamen.

Mrs. Shallas said the Israeli was with her at the entrance of a bomb shelter two houses away while the six men were shot.

She said he told a Lebanese militiaman, "Don't kill madam and baby, it is not their fault. They are leaving." The man she identified as Israeli spoke in heavily accented Arabic but said "madam" and "baby" in English, she said.

"The other one (Phalangist militiaman) wanted to kill me. He (militiaman) killed the children standing behind me. He cut a woman's stomach and took the baby out," Mrs. Shallas said, speaking in Arabic.

MRS. SHALLAS said she spent the first 10 years of her life in Tel Aviv and Haifa, where she spoke Hebrew with her Jewish neighbors. Asked how she knew the man was an Israeli, she said she could tell by the way he spoke Hebrew and Arabic and because she recognized him the next day near an Israeli armored personnel carrier outside the camp.

She said he was about 25, with green eyes and blond hair and beard, "healthy-looking and stout." She said the Phalangist was "dark and skinny" and wore a plain green uniform, while the man she believed was an Israeli wore camouflage.

Mrs. Shallas said her husband was later shot to death in Chatilla's main street.

Mrs. Khalifa, who speaks only Arabic, said she later saw two or three other Israeli soldiers near her house inside Chatilla. She said the Israelis wore short-sleeve fatigue shirts, while the Christian militiamen wore long sleeves.

After her husband and two sons were killed outside her house, she said, the Christian militiamen "with some Jews among them" herded people from her area to an open space just inside the earthen ridge that marks Chatilla's western boundary.

"They were all shooting together. The Jews were shooting in the air to scare people," said Mrs. Khalifa, 37.

"We were put next to about 30 corpses," she said. "In front of me, a two-month-old baby was wrested from his mother's lap... Those who were shooting (to kill) were Phalangists, but there were Jews among them. I saw them with these eyes. I am not lying."

S.African police not blamed for prison suicide

By TOM BALDWIN
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Security police were not responsible for the suicide of Dr. Neil Aggett, the first white to die in detention under the white-minority government's security laws, magistrate Pieter Kotze ruled today.

Kotze, whose decision was immediately attacked as giving police virtual immunity from prosecution, also rejected claims of widespread torture made by former political detainees and lawyers for Aggett's family.

"I cannot find beyond a reasonable doubt or the preponderance of probabilities ... any unlawful or negligent action constituted the cause for Dr. Aggett's death," Kotze said.

Aggett, an organizer of black unions, was found hanged Feb. 4 in Johannesburg's main police station. He was the first white to die in detention under South Africa's wide-ranging security laws, which permit police to hold people indefinitely without charge.

At least 45 blacks have died in detention in the past 20 years for alleged offenses under the nation's apartheid racial separation system.

"The death was not brought about by any act or omission involving or accounting to a criminal offense by any other person," Kotze said.

Aggett's family and critics of the government's detention policies said Aggett was driven to suicide through physical and mental torture.

The ruling favoring the police was the same as in the controversial death of black leader Steve Biko in 1977, when a magistrate held no one criminally responsible for Biko's death from head injuries.

But unlike the Biko case, in which the magistrate's verdict took only three minutes to read, Kotze's decision covered more than three thousand pages and took more than a day and a half to read. Kotze had allowed former detainees to testify, which turned the inquest into a forum for allegations of widespread mistreatment and torture of detainees opposed to white-minority rule.

But Kotze rejected the torture claims as unreliable when tested.

Aggett's father, Aubrey, 70, said, "I feel very, very strongly and I am very disappointed. I can't accept the verdict as true."

One person close to the family, who asked not to be named, said the decision gave the police virtual immunity from prosecution for the mistreatment of political prisoners.

Ships' collision investigated

HARWICH, England (AP) — The government and two ship companies began inquiries Tuesday into the collision of two British ferries in the gale-whipped North Sea that left six people dead.

Rescue teams in boats and helicopters called off their search for the sixth victim, who had been missing since the Sunday night accident in shallow waters two miles off the coast of southeast England.

The government launched an official investigation into how the 4,263-ton Europort Gateway and the 3,514-ton Speedlink Vanguard hit each other in good visibility.

In addition, the owners of the two vessels — Townsend Thoreson and Sealink, a subsidiary of British Rail — began separate inquiries to determine which ship was responsible for the first collision in modern times in the world's busiest waterway after Dover Straits.

The most significant of the three inquiries is the one by the Department of Transport, which will attempt to determine what was at fault and whether any charges could be brought.

The preliminary phase is expected to be completed near the end of January. At that point, the department will decide whether to hold a public inquiry, which could take several more weeks.

Each inquiry was expected to look into complaints by some of the rescued passengers from the Gateway of an alleged lack of lifejackets and criticism that lifeboats were not released quickly enough after the smash.

Christmas '82 a kaleidoscope of sights

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

With the longing only a small boy can muster, he looks at a yellow car with a Snoopy doll at the wheel. The car, like the boy, is a magnificent miniature. It has a fiberglass body, a working 8-horsepower engine, and a price tag of $2,200.

"I want that car," says the boy.

"No, no," says mom. "That's Snoopy's car."

In a rented house near Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh, the Petersen family waits for a gift so grand that it is beyond price. Without a new liver, Susan Petersen won't make it to her third Christmas next year. Despite her fears, Susan's mother says: "Christmas is your family. We're all together, and we still have Susan. It's going to be a real nice Christmas."

In the prosperous place called America, new stresses in a time tougher than many can remember.

This is a land where poverty has always been just around the corner from prosperity, where poignancy co-exists with commercialism, where the message of Christmas is trampled, ignored, perverted and somehow manages to survive.

Christmas, 1982: a kaleidoscope of sights and sounds.

In Miami, Maria Valles wraps medicine and gifts to send to her family in Cuba; in Kansas City, anti-nuclear demonstrators carry a coffin among shoppers; in a home for the elderly in Concord, N.H., widow Bertha McNeal has to force herself into the Christmas spirit. But in Salt Lake City, a child is born and isn't that what it's all about?

In New York, a child in a yellow parka evokes the continuing wonder of Christmas. She reaches a gloved hand toward the tree in Rockefeller Center and says, "So big!"

Wonder is in short supply in New York; the clamor for attention is not. Nearby, their cries competing: a Jew-for-Jesus, a Santa Claus, a Salvation Army solicitor who asks "Is there somebody out there who cares about New York City like I do?" and a Bible-waving man proclaiming "the only answer is Jesus, Jesus, Jesus." It comes out GEE-sis.

A tall man in tattered black coat and green and red scarf swings his blind man's cane along 42nd street. "Thank you, thank you," he mumbles as coins clink into his plastic cup. A well-dressed man hurries past. The "blind man" wheels around and shouts: "You give me nothing."

And at the F.A.O. Schwarz toy store, a child's heaven on Earth, an elderly couple watches a robot. It marches forward, stops. Its chest pops open, guns flip out and the chest assembly spins, flashing and popping. The couple recoils. "I don't think so," says she. "No," says he.

Bourbon Street, New Orleans. Girls in G-strings disco under a string of Christmas bulbs. In the Absinthe House, manager Bill Standfield speaks, not at all fondly, of Christmas: "This place falls apart. It just dies. It's the worst time of the year."

The holiday spirit, however, is alive on the sleazy "Block" in Baltimore, where red ribbons adorn X-rated videotapes at the Troc Pleasure Palace. The tape that sells best is "Talk Dirty To Me, Part II" for $79.95. Come Christmas Eve, strippers at the Stage Door will give themselves a Christmas party. "The bartender dresses up like Santa Claus, all the girls bring their boyfriends or their husbands," says a stripper named Sharon. "Then you get to see the little kids up on the stage dancing."

It's Christmas.

At the Omni shopping mall, downtown Miami, the only Santa is a Cuban who speaks no English. But then, Oscar Ramos points out, neither do his young clients.

The air has the raw smell of wood smoke in Crested Butte, Mont. Snow crunches underfoot. At dusk, a bearded young man pedals home with a big blue spruce strapped across the handlebars of his bicycle.

Gambling knows no hours and no season. In Atlantic City, N.J. the gaudy casinos do not welcome Saint Nick. There are no decorations anywhere, but some cashiers in money cages are wearing holiday red and white blouses. Baptist pastor Samuel Jeanes, a critic of the gambling scene, explains the casinos want "nothing that would make a gambler say, 'hey, I got to go home and buy some toys for the kids.'"

For years the great aunt of an asthmatic girl, now 14, has given her the same present: a reprieve from the hospital in New York state. The aunt skipped to provide air fare and to rent a breathing device. This year she was short $60. Ellen Trivers, a Pan-Am ticket clerk, took up a collection among her colleagues and the child will have her trip.

In the pristine whiteness of a maternity ward at the Latter Day Saints Hospital in Salt Lake City, David Hulbert is at his wife's bedside repeating once more, to a stranger, his litany of the morning: A boy. 7:26 a.m. Seven pounds, 8 ounces; 21 inches. No name yet. His dad's blue eyes. "It's the best thing that has happened in my life. And at Christmas time, it's special too."

In Middletown, Conn., the Rev. William O. Roberts Jr., tells his First Church of Christ that mothers "pregnant with new life," have always shared a vision of what their child's world should be:

"Peace and Justice will reign forevermore, war and injustice will be no more...the hungry He fills with good things and the rich He sends away empty." But this may not be the year.

Texas Crime Stoppers praised

AUSTIN (AP) — Chairman Maurice Acers of the Crime Stoppers Advisory Council said Monday that Texas leads the country in local anti-crime organizations and "is being pointed out as a model for the entire nation."

"Crime Stoppers U.S.A. is passing out the information (to other states) that we can tell them how to do it," Acers told the council.

He said Texas has 89 local crime stopper groups, and six more are being organized for a total of 95.

He said the state Crime Stoppers organization has paid out $5,600 in rewards for tips, which have led to 78 arrests and the recovery of $2.8 million in narcotics. Those figures do not include the local groups.

To have a successful crime stoppers program, Acers said, "you must have total cooperation of law enforcement, a citizens advisory group and, above all, the media."

He praised the Austin American-Statesman for printing the names of people arrested for driving while intoxicated.

Nativity scene allowed

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A federal judge says a nativity scene may remain on the steps of City Hall while he decides whether the American Civil Liberties Union has legal standing to sue for its removal.

U.S. District Judge Raymond J. Pettine on Monday denied a request from the ACLU's Rhode Island chapter for a temporary restraining order removing the tableau depicting the birth of Jesus, which was set up by the Knights of Columbus.

The ACLU filed suit Friday, saying the city had violated the constitutional separation of church and state by allowing the privately owned creche to be incorporated in the city's Christmas decorations.

The ACLU suit also seeks $500,000 in punitive damages from Mayor Vincent A. Cianci Jr., arguing he flouted a recent ruling by the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals barring neighboring Pawtucket from putting a city-owned creche in a private park.

Pettine said there is a question whether the ACLU suit on behalf of local taxpayers and two Unitarian ministers can be brought at all.

"This court's decision in Donnelly vs. Lynch ... concerning the Pawtucket nativity scene, found that the plaintiffs had standing because of their status as municipal taxpayers," Pettine wrote. "In this case, however, it is debatable whether municipal tax monies are being spent on the nativity scene."

Cianci has said the city spent no money or time setting up the manger scene, but merely allowed a local group to use city property.

"I wonder if the ACLU is going to ask next for a temporary restraining order against a white Christmas," City Solicitor Gerard DeCelles said Monday as he stood on the steps of the federal courthouse with snow falling around him.

Historic militia maintains its old castle-like armory

By M.R. KROPKO
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND — As whole blocks of the city are cleared for new, metal-and-glass skyscrapers, the Cleveland Grays, a 145-year-old urban militia, maintains its antique stone and brick fortress with an uncommon pride.

"This is a historian's dream," said George Vourlojanis, a history buff who has made the Grays and their home his avocation.

The Cleveland Grays Armory, built in 1893 in an area next to what is now known as Playhouse Square, is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Grays were founded on George Washington's 105th birthday, Feb. 22, 1837. The name came from the color chosen for their uniforms.

The Grays were the National Guard of their day, made up of civic leaders who regarded service in the militia as a duty of the elite to the masses, Vourlojanis said.

The Grays is now a fraternal, non-profit organization, made up of 230 men who feel some kinship with their counterparts of the past. Wearing their old gray uniforms, members march in about a half dozen parades a year.

Each Feb. 22, they honor their founding by marching from Public Square along the city's major street, Euclid Avenue.

On the eve of each of Washington's birthdays, they have a party in the building that can't help but catch the eye of passersby.

"It's sort of a combination Gothic and Romanesque, with a castle-like appearance," Vourlojanis said of the 89-year-old structure with a slotted tower and arched entrance. "The building has definitely been important in keeping the Grays together."

The organization claims to be the oldest militia west of the Allegheny Mountains.

Vourlojanis, 34, a member of the Grays for 10 years, has made the militia the subject of his Kent State University doctoral dissertation in history, which he says he will soon complete.

For his research, he went into the dusty storage rooms in the basement of the Grays Armory.

"I didn't expect to find all the records I did find," he said. "We have the original minutes and bylaws of the organization dating back to 1837. There are only about 10 years lost, from 1850 to 1862, but after 1863 we have an unbroken chain" of records and documents.

His findings included unpublished photographs of the Grays' participation in President James A. Garfield's 1881 funeral.

Doctors added to future space flights

CONTROVERSIAL STATUE — An 105-year-old statue of Abraham Lincoln and a freed slave, shown in Boston's Park Square, may be moved because it has offended some blacks. The bronze statue, called "Emancipation," shows Lincoln with his hand over a slave whose chains are cut. Some think the slave is shining Lincoln's shoes.

Stock market rallies

By The Associated Press

The stock market resumed its rally in early trading today, extending gains from a buying spree that erupted despite government estimates that the economy has reversed course and is declining after six months of meager growth.

Two stocks rose in price for every one that fell in the first 90 minutes of trading today on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 1.01 points at the end of the first half hour, was up 6.90 points at 1:07.16 at 10:30 a.m. CST.

In a surge during the final hour of trading Tuesday, the blue-chip average was propelled from a gain of about 2 points to a closing of 1,030.26, up 25.75 points.

Earlier Tuesday, Commerce Department economists estimated the economy was contracting in the current fourth quarter, while other government reports said consumer prices barely edged higher and orders for durable goods rose 1.9 percent in November.

Analysts said traders took their cue from the credit markets, where prices of long-term government bonds jumped about $25 for every $1,000 in face value on Tuesday. Rumors and speculation began to make the rounds on Wall Street that another cut in the Federal Reserve's main lending rate, now at 8.5 percent, might be in the offing.

On the surface, much of the day's economic news did not appear favorable, and Robert Ortner, the Commerce Department's chief economist, said the economy "is still on its back."

But other economists said the estimated fourth-quarter drop in the economy in part reflected shrinking inventories of many goods, especially autos. As inventories fall more in line with sales and orders, that could set the stage for increased production and economic recovery in the months ahead, they said. Auto stocks were big gainers Tuesday.

An increase in retail sales and orders for more goods also is necessary to spark a substantial recovery, economists say. The November increase in orders for durable goods — items like cars, furniture and other products expected to last three years or more — erased some of the 5 percent drop in such orders in October.

ESPN going into sportswear

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK — ESPN, the 24-hour sports cable network, is getting into the sportswear business.

By next month, ESPN hopes to have its own line of products from jogging suits and gym shorts to bats and balls. "If they can sell clothing with 'Gloria Vanderbilt' on it, why not 'ESPN'?" asked Fred Schwartzfarb, manager of ESPN's direct-response advertising.

The ESPN Fashion Line is a logical extension of the successful direct-response commercials, a staple of the advertiser-supported cable networks, of which ESPN and Cable News Network are the two most popular.

Since these networks reach significantly fewer households than ABC, CBS and NBC, new commercial sources had to be found, particularly for programs with small, select audiences. ESPN viewers know they'll be inundated by direct-response advertising during horshow jumping, rodeos and motorcycle racing.

Direct-response advertising sells products on TV that are not available in the stores. These products, ranging from Ginzu knives, oriental steamers, special wrist watch for kids. "The idea was to save shopping time," Schwartzfarb said. Neither, however, sold like hotcakes.

ESPN's direct-response appeal is with sportsmen. On the first day that ESPN offered Fish Formula 1, designed as a better fishing lure, 850 bottles were sold.

Television

records, magazines and paintings, used to be the exclusive province of late-night local TV stations. Now, they're all over the cable dial, reaching a wealthier, better educated viewer. According to the Simmons Research Bureau, viewers in 12.2 percent of ESPN's households make more than $30,000 and 20.8 percent have professional or technical jobs.

On ESPN, however, you won't see a knife slicing a tin can, nor will you hear such spiels as "Order now and every country-and-western hit ever written will be yours!"

"We had a Mickey Gilley record offer and it just died," Schwartzfarb said. "The meter didn't jump at all, even though we put it on during rodeos and what I call redneck racing. Our public doesn't want cheap records. Those things don't even have jackets. They come in paper."

ESPN, which now has a potential reach of 22.5 million households, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., used to be less selective about its direct-response commercials.

"Sometimes, it looked like we were hawking on the Boardwalk in Atlantic City," Schwartzfarb said. "My charge was to weed out the commercials that had a bad look. We didn't want Anheuser-Busch and our other top sponsors sharing time with cheaps."

Gone are the liquid eraser, inexpensive watches and "the hot one," an illegal golf ball that traveled twice as far. "In good conscious, we couldn't carry golf events and be an all-sports network, while promoting some phony ball," Schwartzfarb said.

Generally, ESPN stays away from women's products, except for direct-mail Christmas gifts. "We runs those as a service for men guilty about watching 24 hours of sports," Schwartzfarb said. ESPN ran Christmas ads for women's jewelry and a Pac-Man

'Dallas,' '60 Minutes' boosts CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS won the networks' prime-time ratings race for the third week in a row with seven of the week's 10 highest-rated programs, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

"Dallas" finished in first place and another CBS program, "60 Minutes," was second.

In winning the three-way competition for the ninth time in the 12 weeks of the current TV season, the network recorded an average rating of 18.9 to 16.4 for ABC and 14.7 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average minute of prime time, 18.9 percent of the TV-equipped homes in the country were tuned to CBS.

For "Dallas" and "60 Minutes," the competition in the week ending Dec. 19 was another installment in their continuing battle for dominance.

"Dallas" now has been No. 1 two consecutive weeks and four times in the current season, while "60 Minutes" has been first five times since the season began.

The rating for "Dallas" was 26.2. Nielsen says that means of the nation's homes with TV, 26.2 percent saw at least part of the top-rated program.

CBS' Top 10 shows included a special, "E.T. and Friends" in third place, and a movie, "I Was a Mail Order Bride," in ninth place. "Newhart" on CBS was the week's highest-rated new show, tied for 12th place with "Dynasty" on ABC.

Smelly cheese accidental

VAN WERT, Ohio (AP) — It was discovered by mistake for people who crave an acrid aroma and a lingering taste.

And nowhere on earth but here, in a spotless and sealed room, is Liederkranz cheese made. And it stinks.

"I admit the smell is awful," says Gordon Learish, plant manager for Fisher Cheese Co. "If this stuff stays in your refrigerator for six weeks, you can plan on buying a new refrigerator."

And yet, Learish says, "people just get hooked on it. At first, the taste doesn't appeal to you. But it grows on you. When people like this cheese, they really like it."

Learish recently received a telephone call from an Army colonel at the Pentagon who demanded to know where to find Liederkranz in suburban Washington. That's how loyal Liederkranz lovers are.

Liederkranz takes about two weeks to make. It is delicate, fragile to ship and has a shelf life of only 60 days. It is hard to locate in the United States and impossible to find elsewhere in the world.

Van Wert is the only place the soft-ripened cheese is produced. Like its cousin, Limburger, Liederkranz ripens from the outside crust in toward the core as the prized bacteria which make the cheese unique add a certain spike to the taste.

The plant only produces 6,000 pounds of Liederkranz a year, tiny in comparison to the firm's other soft-ripened types, such as Camembert, Brie and American processed cheese.

The cheese was invented by Emil Frey, who came to Van Wert after discovering Liederkranz in Monroe, N.Y., in 1898. As a cheesemaker, Frey was approached by a delicatessen owner in trouble. His customers, mostly German immigrants, were panting for a cheese called Bismark schlosskaese, but the deli owner couldn't find it in the United States. Could Frey make some?

Frey experimented for two years and finally came up with a cheese he was happy with. The deli owner's customers cheered. Frey named the cheese after the Liederkranz choir. The name means "wreath of songs."

Frey moved to Van Wert in 1926 because of the high quality of milk available in the rural region.

For a time last year, the cheese wasn't produced. That was during the period when Fisher was acquiring the plant from Borden, Inc. Loyal customers grew frantic.

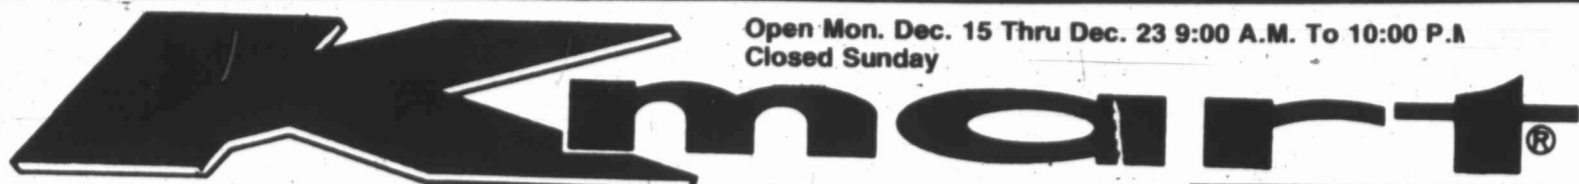

"The hue and cry was loud," Learish recalled. "People were getting irate. The people who crave Liederkranz will die to get it."

Spreading the word about Liederkranz has been a problem, Learish admits.

"There's probably a good market in Europe, because they have a more sophisticated taste for this kind of cheese there, but we can't ship it overseas because of the shelf-life," Learish said.

The cost of the cheese — about $1.70 to $1.80 for a four-ounce package — is immaterial to buyers, Learish said. "They don't care what it costs."

It takes about 15 people to produce the cheese, beginning with 1,750 pounds of milk poured into gleaming stainless steel curdling tanks. The milk curds and the whey is separated.

Christmas turkey is cinch when cooked in a bag

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor
and
CAROL HART
Lifestyle Writer
Christmas is already here. Can you believe it. Lea Whitehead has a recipe for roasting a turkey in a paper sack she wants to share. Her recipe came from the Houston Post newspaper a few years ago.

Apparently this recipe is a Houston favorite as it appears annually in the Post. The Post describes it as "the cooking classic of any season."

Also in this week's Recipe Exchange, Zula Rhodes has shared her recipe for Funnel Cakes. You remember seeing those funny-looking stringy fried cakes at the fair. Apparently someone asked her if the recipe was in the fair cookbook. It wasn't, but she found the recipe in another cookbook and decided to share it with us.

Almost two months ago, Mrs. Claude Kendall of Ingram requested a recipe for Sour Cream Cake. Madeline Trees sent some recipes for the cake in this week.

We are still looking for recipes for Petit Fours and Green Enchilada Sauce. In addition to those, Wilma Clark's husband wants a recipe for cooking a roast underneath rock salt.

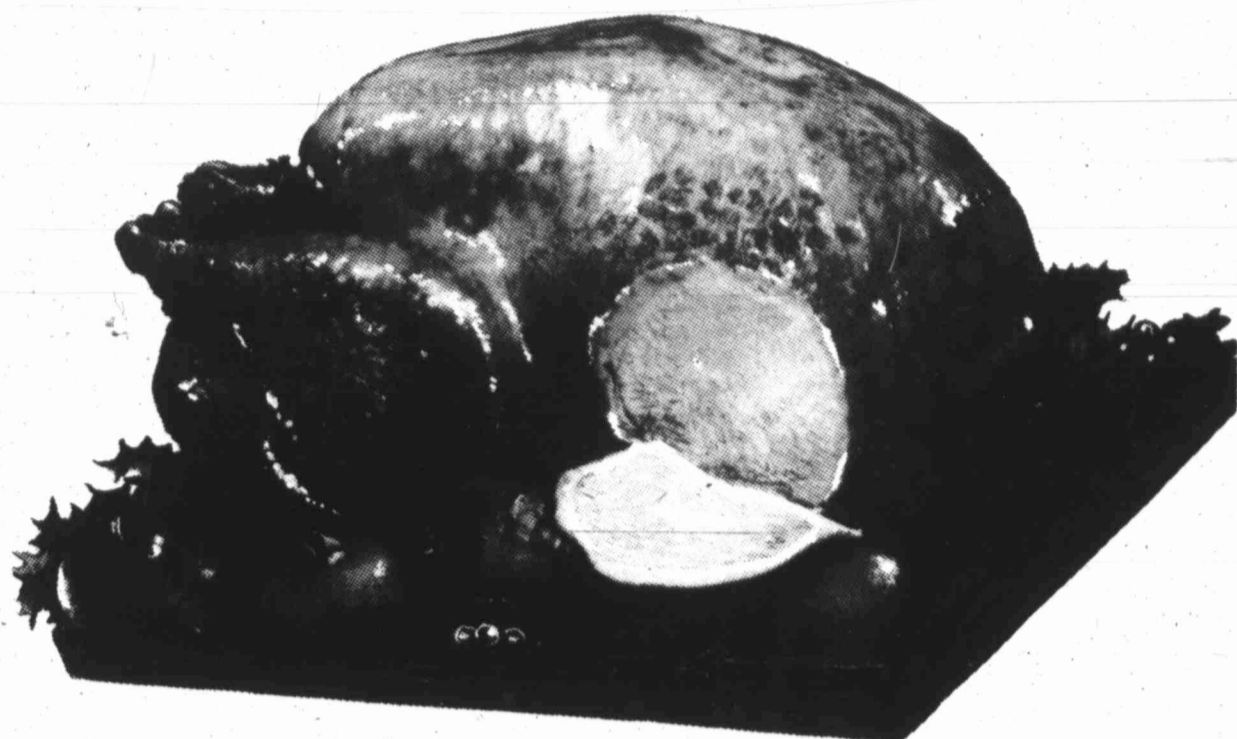

Mrs. C.T. Carrillo is looking for a recipe for Seven-Minute Icing for cakes. She said the recipe used to be found on the Baker's Coconut cans and packages. It has been a while since she made it. Her husband wants her to bake a certain cake with that type of icing.

If you have the requested recipes or any requests of your own, please send them to Herald Recipe Exchange, c/o Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, Texas 79720.

Read the turkey recipe and tips before starting to cook.

TURKEY IN A BAG

Lea Whitehead
Two paper sacks, one inside the other
Fully thawed turkey
Oil, butter or shortening
Use ordinary paper

IT'S A CINCH — Roasting a turkey for the holidays or anytime can be a cinch when using the grocery sack method. The recipe, a favorite in Houston, is included in today's Recipe Exchange.

sacks like the ones used for bagging groceries, and double layer the sacks by placing one sack inside the other.

There is no mystique in the method of preparing your bird in the bag. But you must follow the rules to the letter to get the miraculous results; a perfectly browned bird that is moist and tender every time. You must also observe the no peek clause in this fool-proof recipe. Not once during the cooking time are you allowed to take a look-see at how your bird is baking. This method works without the assistance of a curious cook.

You must start with a fully thawed turkey. Then set your oven at slow (325 degrees). Note the weight of your bird. Then figure the cooking mathematics thusly:

Figure 25 minutes per pound for birds 12 pounds and under. For turkeys over 12 pounds the timetable calls for exactly 20 minutes per pound. Calculate the exact length of baking time for your bird.

Prepare the bird as you traditionally do. (The Post staff's personal preference is to cook the stuffing in a separate casserole rather than in the bird.) But if your tradition is to stuff the bird now is the time to do it. Rub or brush the bird with oil, butter or any other shortening — take care to brush inside the wings well. Then slide your turkey into a large double brown sack.

Twist the sack shut and tie with strong string. Make sure the sack has no holes. Do not put your turkey in a roaster. Put it instead on a rack placed in your biggest broiler pan.

Put your turkey in the oven and close the door. You don't have to peek because you can rest assured that the paper will not burn.

Consult your timetable and take your turkey out at the exact time you have calculated it will be done. Lift your turkey rack and all put in roaster pan on stove top. Poke a few holes in the sack to let the juices run out into the roaster pan. When it has cooled a tiny bit tear the rest of the paper away and slide your turkey onto your carving board or platter. Lift rack out of pan and the drippings for your gravy will be ready in the roaster pan.

Let your turkey cool for about 20 minutes before slicing.

FUNNEL CAKES

Zula Rhodes

2 cups unsifted flour
1/4 tsp. salt
1 Tbsp. sugar
1 tsp. baking powder
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 to 1 1/4 cups milk (batter should pour easily)
Maple syrup or molasses for serving

Preheat oven to lowest setting. Line two large baking sheets with paper towels; place in center of oven. Pour 1 1/2 to 2 inches vegetable oil into a heavy skillet. Heat oil to approximately 375 degrees F., hot but not smoking. Combine flour, sugar, baking powder and salt; sift together into a deep bowl.

Blend eggs with one cup milk; make a well in center of dry ingredients; add egg and milk. Gradually add the dry ingredient; stir until batter is smooth. To make the cakes, use a funnel with top 1/2" in diameter. Keep spout closed as 1/2 cup of batter is poured into the funnel. Dribble the batter into hot oil; move funnel in a circle to build a snail-like coil of 3 or 4 rings about 6 inches in diameter. Form 2 or 3 cakes; fry approximately 2 minutes on each side; turn once with a slotted spoon. When cakes are brown, arrange side by side on paper-lined pans; keep warm in oven. Repeat procedure 4 to 5 times, using 1/2 cup batter for each batch. If batter becomes stiff, add up to 1/4 cup more milk, 1 Tbsp. at a time. Serve the cakes warm with molasses or maple syrup.

1 tsp. baking powder
Cream butter and sugar. Add eggs, one at a time. Add vanilla. Mix salt, baking powder and flour together and add alternately with sour cream. Pour 1/2 of mixture into greased and floured tube pan and sprinkle on 1/2 of struesel filling. Pour in remaining batter and sprinkle with remainder of struesel filling. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour.

STRUESSEL FILLING

2 Tbsp. brown sugar
1/2 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 cup pecans, chopped

SOUR CREAM CAKE

Madeline Trees
1 box white cake mix
3/4 cup cooking oil
1/2 cup sugar
1 cup sour cream
4 eggs
Cinnamon mix:
2 Tbsp. brown sugar
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/4 cup finely chopped pecans

Mix first four ingredients well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Pour 1/2 of batter into greased and floured tube pan. Spread the cinnamon mixture over it, then, pour remaining batter on that. Bake 60 minutes at 300 F. Cool in pan for 40 minutes.

SOUR CREAM CAKE

Madeline Trees
1 box butter cake mix
4 eggs
1 carton sour cream

(small size)
1/2 cup sugar
3/4 cup cooking oil
3 Tbps. brown sugar
2 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 cup chopped nuts

Cream sugar, cake mix and oil. Add eggs, one at a time, heating after each addition. Add sour cream and mix well. Pour 1/2 to 3/4 of batter into tube pan (greased and floured.) Mix brown sugar, cinnamon and chopped nuts and sprinkle over batter in pan. Add remaining batter. Cook one hour at 325 degrees F. (I cook mine a little slower, about 300 degrees F.) Let cool for 15 minutes.

ICING FOR SOUR CREAM CAKE

Heat 1/2 cup sugar and 1/4 cup water until it comes to a fast boil. Remove from heat and flavor anyway you desire (I use orange flavoring.) Add one tablespoon butter and pour over hot cake.

This icing makes more than necessary just to pour over cake, so you can make less or punch holes in the cake.

Institute on Man thinks small about big issues

By ANDREA PEYSER
Associated Press Writer

RENSSELAERVILLE, N.Y. — On any given day, this town in the northern Catskill mountains might see corporate executives discussing new strategies, famous scientists hashing out theories, or resident "thinkers" devising schemes to revitalize a dying community — or build a new one from scratch.

The cloistered setting of the Institute on Man and Science seems far removed from world problems. That may be why for nearly 20 years leaders from U Thant to Jimmy Carter, and groups from the United Nations to General Electric, have sought it out.

But what has come out of the Institute may be just as interesting as who has come in. One decaying Pennsylvania mine town owes its life to programs developed here. And theories of self-help, put into practice, may improve the quality of life in the Oklahoma Indian nation and a decaying Cleveland neighborhood.

"We have our foot in two worlds," says Institute President Martin Sullivan. "We are involved in the development of alternate ideas — and we also test that out by going out and getting our feet muddy."

Chartered by the State University of New York in 1963, the Institute began as a sort of non-profit "think tank" geared toward finding ways for modern technology and science to improve everyday life.

Now approaching its 20th year, the Institute has moved away from its passive function. With varying degrees of success, the world-saving ideas hammered out by social theorists are being put to the test.

THE FORERUNNER of the Institute actually began 60 years ago down the road from the Institute's present campus, among the 18th century houses in the hamlet of Rensselaerville.

In the 1920s, such controversial celebrities as birth control advocate Margaret Sanger and socialist Norman Thomas would meet in the town hall for summer "country forums." Politicians, scientists and artists from around the world were invited by Laura Huyck, whose family fortune came from the felt factory once powered by the Rensselaerville Falls.

The informal sessions sparked the imagination of the next generation. One hundred acres of the Huyck property was deeded to the Institute at its inception.

In its first decade, the Institute gained a reputation from its relationship with the United Nations.

"The U.N. Conference on the Environment in Stockholm in the early '70s was planned here in Rensselaerville," Sullivan says. "The Institute became well known for its continuing partnership with the United Nations to look at global issues."

Former U.N. Secretary-General U Thant held a seminar here in the mid-1960s. And a conference on nuclear proliferation drew the likes of Jimmy Carter and Jacques Cousteau. Scientist and author Isaac Asimov is an annual fixture in the Institute's lecture hall.

By the late '60s, the Institute's sights shifted from a world view to closer to home. The goal was to take global ideas and test them out on a small scale.

SULLIVAN CREDITS former Institute President Harold Williams, who stepped down from the post last year, as the driving force behind the Institute's change of direction.

In contrast to the Institute's mystique of academic elitism, Williams presented a casual image, rushing about the campus in the plaid shirt and jeans that seems the unofficial uniform of the 22 staff members. At Williams' direction, the Institute in 1973 bought Stump Creek, a community in Jefferson County, Pa.

Armed with private contributions and a small amount of federal money, the Institute's attempt was not to rebuild the community, but to encourage the people to rebuild it themselves.

"We wanted the maximum use of self-help, rather than government subsidies," Sullivan says. "They put in a water line and improved the sewer systems. Thanks to that, they were able to realize enough of a savings so the banks gave 100 percent mortgages when it came time to buy their homes," he says.

Stump Creek was left high and dry when its mine closed, and the Institute found a disillusioned population of 145, most of whom planned to abandon the place.

The Institute bought the 95 homes from the real estate company that had acquired them when the mine folded, and its aim was to help enable the residents to keep the community alive — "to get the capital to buy their own homes," Sullivan says. Today the town's still there, with resident-owners, new sewer and water lines, and the population about the same.

The Institute failed, however, to generate a self-sustaining economy in Stump Creek; most people there are retirees or work elsewhere.

IT WAS more successful with a similar project in Corbett, N.Y., another disheveled community that had lost much of its economic base.

"We learned to be explicit and forward in the concept of self-help," Sullivan says. "We wanted to create incentives so people would want to pitch in, so people who worked wouldn't carry on their backs the burden of others."

In the end, Sullivan says the Institute was repaid on its investment from the proceeds from sales of Corbett's houses.

If successful, community renewal not only can rebuild a town, but does it in a cost-efficient way because outside services are rarely contracted for.

Perhaps cost savings is the biggest reason the Institute has survived — and grown — at a time when many social institutions are facing retrenchment.

Graham praises Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham, who has been acquainted with U.S. presidents for the past 3 years, says President Reagan "acted like he didn't have a care in the world" during a recent visit.

Graham and his wife, Ruth, were overnight guests at the White House last week. The evangelist said Monday that they had a private, three-hour conversation with Reagan and his wife, Nancy.

"We mostly discussed spiritual things," Graham said.

"We laughed, talked, told jokes and he acted like a man without a care in the world," Graham said. "He's an amazing man, whether you agree with his politics or not."

Haley takes Tennessee

NORRIS, Tenn. (AP) — Author Alex Haley, seeking to put down roots while writing a book about Appalachia, has begun building a home in the mountains of northeast Tennessee.

Haley, who won a Pulitzer Prize for "Roots," a book about his African ancestry, is building a wood-and-stone retreat overlooking Buffalo Creek near Norris.

Haley said he hopes to have the home finished in April and plans to live there three or four months each year.

Haley said he hasn't decided on a name or plot for his book about Appalachia, but said it will include "the trees, the people, their music and their past in the woods of Tennessee."

Haley grew up in Henning, a west Tennessee town of about 700 people.

Diana doesn't swing well

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — An uncooperative champagne bottle at a ship christening made Princess Diana a damsel in distress. But her Prince Charming sprang quickly to the rescue.

Princess Diana twice Monday swung a bottle of champagne at the bow of the 60-foot Pride of Sefton, built to carry handicapped children through inland canals. But twice the bottle failed to break.

The 21-year-old princess blushed and turned away as crowds of onlookers cheered.

But her husband, Prince Charles, the 34-year-old heir to the British throne, stepped to her side and persuaded her to try once more.

With his help, the third time proved to be the charm and she was successful in christening the vessel.

Fox president escapes

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Former model Sherry Lansing, whose departure had been rumored for several months, is ending her tenure as the president of 20th Century-Fox Productions.

Her departure had been rumored for several months, primarily because the studio had been doing poorly at the box office with such films as "Author! Author!" and "Monsignor."

Fox chairman Alan J. Hirschfeld, who did not name Miss Lansing's successor as president of 20th Century-Fox Productions, said she would announce her new job later. In the meantime, she will remain with Fox for up to 30 days to help the transition, he said.

Miss Lansing two years ago became the first woman production boss of a major film studio. The studio was bought by oilman Marvin Davis in June 1981 for $700 million.

Composer commits to Pops

BOSTON (AP) — Composer John Williams says he has made a long-term commitment to the Boston Pops Orchestra, signing a contract that will retain him as conductor through 1987.

"It seems appropriate that after three happy years of getting to know this great orchestra, and their getting to know me, that we look at this as a long-term commitment," Williams said Monday.

Williams, who joined the Pops in January 1980 succeeding the late Arthur Fiedler, has composed music for more than 65 motion pictures, including "Star Wars," "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "E.T. — The Extra-Terrestrial."

Glittering Vegas offers escape from mundane

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Debbie Lee bakes cookies and drives in the carpool for 9-year-old daughter Jennifer. Ellen Ross wrestles with real estate deals, where she hopes to make big money. And Debbie Bruckner goes to college.

Some might say they're classic examples life of in the mundane lane.

But when the sun retreats behind the Spring Mountains and they flick the switch that makes the Vegas Strip glitter, Debbie, Ellen and Debbie shift gears, to move into what many would call "the fast lane."

Theirs is the double life of the Las Vegas showgirl. Mothers, coeds and workaday women by day, they are transformed in the wee hours into flights of fancy and fantasy — beautiful female forms adorned in opulent headgear, and often little else.

They came to their profession from unlikely roots. Mrs. Lee's father was a devout Mormon. Mrs. Ross grew up in conservative New England. Ms. Bruckner is Detroit-born, and alone among them came to Vegas with dreams of being a showgirl.

So how do they feel about their work? A song from the Broadway hit "Showboat" probably says it best: "Life upon the wicked stage ain't never what a girl supposes."

Mrs. Lee, a 32-year-old Las Vegas native, has been dancing for 14 years, ever since her mother dragged her to an audition at the Tropicana. Today she's one of the two principal dancers in the "Folies Bergere" show. But she still has nightmares about the first time she appeared topless.

"I was raised in a very religious setting but I guess I just blew it," she says. "I want my daughter to be baptized; I would never want her doing what I do."

But there are ways to deal with the anxieties behind a $26,000-a-year job. "I tell myself I'm just another body going by," she says.

Ellen Ross deals with her own doubts another way. When she finds herself on stage wondering, "What am I doing here," she simply turns her thoughts to other matters, like the grocery list or a real estate deal.

"That's the nice thing about the job," she says. "Your mind is your own as long as you smile and hold your tummy in."

Mrs. Ross, 33, is a native of Cape Cod and has a degree in humanities from Claremont College in California. She was teaching dance classes for children in Boston when she saw an advertisement for traveling showgirls and auditioned for burlesque czar Harold Minsky. In 1975, she wound up in Vegas, and today she's dancing at the Stardust from 5:30 p.m. to 2 a.m.

"I love being an exhibitionist," she says. "It does wonders for your self-confidence. It's been a very positive experience in my life."

She plans to bare her, uh, soul for one more year, then call it quits.

Mrs. Ross earns $500 a week dancing. She supplements that with $8,000 to $10,000 a year from selling real estate part time, sometimes taking showgirls househunting with a flashlight on dark desert nights between shows.

Although she'll miss the security of a regular paycheck, she thinks she can double or triple her real estate earnings if she goes at it full time. And she and husband Joe, a drummer, also want children.

"I've had a good run, now it's time to go on to something else," she says.

Age is one common enemy for showgirls; few are over 40. But there are other hardships lurking. The work is rigorous — some costumes weigh 30 pounds and there are always plenty of stairs to climb. The hours are rotten.

Also, sometimes on the street show girls with all their makeup are mistaken for prostitutes. Mrs. Lee says she dreads the nights when she has to shop for groceries between acts, only to hear hushed whispers about "hookers."

JOYFUL REUNION — Howard Craig of Durango, Colo. hugs his son and the boy's Vietnamese mother as the family was reunited Monday night at the Almosa airport. Craig last saw Thu Vi 10 years ago while working for the U.S. government in South Vietnam.

Amerasian children home for the holidays

By The Associated Press
A separation of more than a decade and half the world has ended for the families of 22 children fathered by U.S. servicemen and civilians during the Vietnam War.

"I think it's a great Christmas present for me," said Howard Craig, of Durango, Colo., after embracing his 10-year-old son and the boy's Vietnamese mother at an airport near Alamosa, Colo. Bui Thu Vi wept as she and her son, Bui Ngoc Son, were greeted by the 46-year-old artist Monday night.

The 22 children, known as Amerasians because of their mixed parentage, arrived Monday in Seattle accompanied by 14 adults. After clearing customs, many of them left for other U.S. cities to be united with families they had never seen, in time for a holiday they didn't know.

The children were the third group flown from Vietnam in recent months under a U.S.-Vietnam agreement. The next such flight is scheduled for January.

Figures on the number of Amerasians still in Vietnam vary. Some estimates put the figure at 50,000. Craig and Vi last had seen one another in 1972 in the small Vietnamese village of Can Tho where they worked together in a propaganda program. Vi was pregnant when Craig left his U.S. Information Agency job in Vietnam. Craig said he and Vi will be married soon. He is divorced and his three teen-age daughters live with him on a ranch outside Durango.

After Craig left Vietnam, he remained in contact with Vi until 1975, when Saigon fell. Craig said he re-established contact with her in 1977 and has been working since then to the United States.

The three probably will celebrate the lunar new year instead of Christmas, Craig said. It falls between Jan. 21 and Feb. 19 and marks the start of the Vietnamese New Year, Tet.

In Boston, a boy who had to be left behind in Vietnam 8½ years ago was reunited Monday night with his mother and stepfather in time to do some Christmas shopping.

"I feel a lot better. Finally he's here now, you know," said Lan Grady after greeting her son, Le Minh Tuan, 11.

The boy's stepfather, Coast Guard Yeoman 1st Class Gary Grady, said it was an impossible dream.

Grady, 39, married Lan while stationed in Saigon, now Ho Chi Minh City. A daughter, Yvette, 9, was born in Vietnam. Another daughter, Lena, 7, was born in California.

"His father was an American," Grady said of Tuan, "but we have no idea where he is or whether he's living or dead."

Grady said he returned to Vietnam in 1974 to bring his wife, Yvette and Tuan back to the United States. A great deal of paperwork had to be done to get them out and he ran out of time and money, Grady said. "I had to leave someone behind," he said.

Tuan was left with his grandparents in a farming village about 30 miles from Saigon, "which we thought would be a safe bet," he said.

Grady said that after the government fell, he lost all contact with the boy until 1978 when he renewed his efforts to bring him to the United States.

Mike Maxwell, of Atlanta, who works with a construction company in Indonesia, arrived from Bangkok with his fiancée, two daughters and a son.

Tour guides hold memories of poet

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — James Whitcomb Riley, famous for children's poems such as "The Raggedy Man" and "Little Orphant Annie," was a bachelor with no children of his own.

But Agnes Bridgford, 77, and Ruth Trabue, 75, who now give tours at Riley's historic Indianapolis residence, retain their childhood memories of the Hoosier poet who used to offer them pennies or candy.

Riley was born Oct. 7, 1849. In later life, he maintained two residences — his boyhood home in Greenfield, and the house where he boarded in Indianapolis, about 25 miles away, where he lived with Maj. Charles Holstein and his wife.

Mrs. Bridgford knew Riley as a neighbor in Indianapolis who bought cigars at her father's store.

"He'd buy this little 'Kiss Me' gum, with a rubber band around. When he'd come across the street, he'd drop those little pieces of gum and tell us they were growing there. We didn't believe him but we'd always look and see if he dropped the gum," Mrs. Bridgford said.

"He gave us a feeling of awesomeness because he was a person of dignity. He wore pinched glasses and carried a cane," she recalled.

Mrs. Trabue has been official hostess of the Indianapolis residence for the last 20 years. "I lived here for 13 years," she said, explaining she moved out once a burglar alarm system was installed in 1975.

She used to live in what is now publicly displayed as the kitchen and dining room. Mrs. Trabue, who now lives nearby, still shows visitors the Victorian home of her famous former neighbor who used to let her play in his yard with her brother and sister.

"In 1913, we lived in Greenfield, directly in back of his boyhood home. We lived there two years," she said, reminiscing that "he tossed pennies down" for the children.

The Indianapolis house was opened in 1921 as a museum. Fifty years later, it had 12,000 visitors from 50 states and 15 foreign countries in one year, Mrs. Trabue said.

Since the mid 1970s, Mrs. Bridgford has been a member of the Riley Alliance, a group of volunteers who show and publicize the home, which is on the national register of historic places.

Posted in the house is a photo of Riley with a group of children. Mrs. Bridgford, who was 10 when Riley died on July 22, 1916, is one of the group.

Save energy with a heat pump.

If you're planning to install a new heating or cooling system, consider a high-efficiency heat pump. It's an energy-saving, year-round alternative.

The heat pump provides year-round heating and cooling, using only electricity. During the winter, it extracts heat from the outside air (even very cold air contains heat) and brings that heat inside where it's needed. In the summer, the heat pump is a regular air conditioner, removing unwanted heat from the inside air.

The heat pump is the most efficient combination heating and cooling system that can be installed in your home today.

To learn more about the heat pump, call your air conditioning contractor. And when you call, ask about the year-round heat pump that qualifies for a bonus check from Texas Electric.
