Cosden says worker cutbacks needed

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. said today a cutback in employees would be needed by Jan. 21 because of a recent curtailment in petrochemical production.

"We have to reduce the staff by 35 people," said Hood Barnwell, public relations manager of Cosden. Barnwell said the reduction would have to come through either layoffs or employees leaving voluntarily through a special separation payment offer.

Layoffs may not be necessary "depending on the number of people who accept the separation allowance," Barnwell said. The allowance amounts to a lump sum payment based on an employee's years of service and earnings, he said.

"We want to give folks the opportunity to use the separation allowance," Barnwell said.

Cosden used an incentive early retirement program in March of 1982 to reduce personnel by 103 to avoid layoffs. Barnwell said the separation allowance was not like the incentive program, although in both instances the company was trying to avoid laying off employees.

"We'll know by the close of the day Friday, Jan. 21 if we're going to have layoffs," Barnwell said.

The cutback in personnel was caused by the shutdown of certain chemical units, Barnwell said. The maintenance force has to be reduced in line with overall curtailment of operations, he said.

In December, American Petrofina, the parent company of Cosden, announced a cutback of up to 98 employees at its Port Arthur refinery.

COSDEN FORCED TO CUT BACK EMPLOYEES — Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. announced today a curtailment of petrochemical production would entail a reduction of 35 personnel at the oil refinery by Jan. 21. Officials say a special separation allowance will be offered to avoid layoffs.

Another Cabinet resignation

Health and human services secretary quits; woman named successor

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Richard S. Schweiker today resigned as secretary of health and human services, and President Reagan named former Rep. Margaret Heckler of Massachusetts to succeed him.

The president made his announcement in a hurriedly arranged ceremony in the ornate East Room after news of Schweiker's resignation leaked out late Tuesday.

Mrs. Heckler, who was defeated for re-election in November after eight terms in Congress, said, "All Americans are grateful to Dick Schweiker for his performance."

She called her new job "the greatest challenge of my life" and the "hardest assignment in Washington."

She is the second woman to be nominated to the Cabinet in the last week.

The president, Schweiker and Mrs. Heckler were applauded by government employees as they entered the East Room.

Reagan's announcement was delayed 10 minutes while workers hastily put together a podium for the president and an audience was assembled from secretaries and others in a nearby government office building.

Reagan said he accepted Schweiker's resignation "with deep regret" and called him "a trusted adviser, an able administrator and a man who's done an outstanding job as secretary."

He is the fourth member of Reagan's original Cabinet to resign. Returning to private business as a lobbyist for life insurance companies, Schweiker gives up control of a $274 billion department that oversees Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid, welfare and public health programs, including those of the Food and Drug Administration.

Reagan said he has had a strong friendship with Schweiker ever since the former Pennsylvania senator became Reagan's running mate in his unsuccessful bid for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination.

"During these last two years, as head of the biggest and most costly department of the federal government, Dick Schweiker has proven himself in a job that has ground down many lesser individuals," said Reagan. "Many of our efforts to control the spiraling cost of government depended on our enterprise," Reagan added. "I can say without hesitation that we're proud of the job he has done."

The president credited Schweiker with giving the country "many years of outstanding public service."

Turning to Mrs. Heckler, Reagan said she "brings to the job extensive experience in the workings of government."

He said she has "proven herself a practical and compassionate public servant. I am confident she will prove an invaluable member of our team, and I am looking forward to working with her in the days and

The body found in a shallow grave Jan. 5 northeast of Big Spring is still without a name, although officials are "reasonably sure" of its identity, according to Howard County Sheriff A.N. Standard.

The sheriff said his office had requested dental charts of the body, presumed to be a local male. Positive identification of the body is being delayed pending examination of those charts, he said.

Standard said charges probably will be filed soon with the

Council votes down deannexation

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

The Big Spring city council settled a month-long controversy last night when they voted down a deannexation request from three local property owners.

One of those property owners, David Wilson, was granted a one-year permit which allows him to keep his mobile home parked near an $85,000 house being constructed south of the city by Ron Osborn.

In what one member has called a "no win" situation, the council said it felt a compromise was the best solution to the disagreement between the families.

The zoning will remain in the city and under city zoning laws as Osborn, Larry Tinsman and R.L. Heath requested. And despite objections from Osborn, Wilson will be allowed to keep his mobile home at its present location — in front of Osborn's picture window — until Wilson constructs a permanent residence.

David Wilson, Bob Wilson and B.W. Walker had asked the council to deannex a 30-acre tract of land near Silver Heels addition because they wanted to avoid city land development procedures.

The Osborns and Wilsons attended the meeting, but had little to say.

"I stated my position last week," Osborn said when Councilman Russ McEwen asked if he had objections to Wik's temporary mobile home permit.

"I just don't want to come back a year from now and object to the location," Osborn said. "If there's going to be a permanent structure built, I can't object."

Osborn had told the council last week he objected to the location of the mobile home, not to a temporary permit.

• In another matter, the council set a city election date for April 2. Council places held by Jack Y. Smith and Russ McEwen will be up for election. Anyone over 18 may file for the office between Jan. 31 and March 2.

Council members intend the election to be held citywide, despite recent litigation filed in federal court by the League of United Latin American citizens. The suit requests that elections be held by single member districts since they claim citywide elections dilute minority voting strength.

The council hired an Austin attorney to investigate the city's position, however the attorney's advice has not been publicly released.

Reagan: System hasn't worked for the farmers

By LAURA RICHARDSON
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — The system isn't working for Texas farmers, and something has to be done — now, says a leader of the Texas Farm Bureau.

About 6,000 delegates at the American Farm Bureau Federation convention here Tuesday heard President Reagan thank farmers for their past patience and ask for more, adding:

"Let's face it; let's not fool anybody. Until farm prices go up, you will be hurting."

It wasn't news to the Texans at the meeting, some of whom said that for years, agricultural producers have been able to make a profit only off of others' disasters.

"Take the truck farmers and citrus growers in the Winter Garden," said Uvalde rancher J.R. "Bubba" Day. "It's terrible, just terrible. They can't all make a profit at the same time. It takes somebody else, in Florida or California, going under with a freeze or something. Prices have to be high enough so we can all make a living.

"Right now we're just living off each other," he said.

"The system is not working," said Texas Farm Bureau President S.M. True, a Plainview farmer who grows cotton, feed grain, wheat and soybeans. "What are we going to do? Something. We have to do something."

True said he thought the best — in fact, the only — offer farmers now have is Reagan's payment-in-kind plan, which he announced would begin Jan. 24. The PIK plan would pay farmers not to plant by giving them commodities — cotton, wheat, corn, rice, and grain sorghum — to replace what they would have grown.

Police polish future brass

Big Spring city councilmen have authorized $2,250 to conduct management and supervisory tests within the police department.

Police Chief Rick Turner said Tuesday a two-day "assessment center process" would rank participants as potential leaders and identify strengths and weaknesses in each officer.

Turner is hiring Dr. Don Ellis, an independent management consultant, to organize the session and hire professionals from the behavioral science, management, criminal justice and other fields. The examiners will test about 18 people Jan. 22-23 for sergeant and lieutenant positions.

The program will be financed from Turner's training budget.

"You have to have strong managers to have a professional police department," Turner said. "Hopefully we'll see a very marked improvement in our management staff if we can get our horses going in the same direction. Hopefully it will solve some problems we've been having."

Teens arrested in baby's beating

COLORADO CITY (SC) — A 17-year-old girl and her 16-year-old male companion were arrested last weekend here on suspicion of "injury to a child" in connection with the beating of an infant, police said.

Police said the two were babysitting an 8-month-old child for a local man and his wife when the alleged beating of the infant occurred. The couple apparently struck the child to stop it from crying, police said.

The infant was taken to Root Memorial Hospital for treatment, police said.

The 17-year-old girl, reportedly a runaway from Arkansas, remains in jail, while the 16-year-old boy has been released to juvenile authorities, police said.

San Angelo couple faces drug charges

COLORADO CITY (SC) — A San Angelo man and woman were arrested late last week by Mitchell County authorities on charges of delivering marijuana.

Olga L. Suniga, 30, and Juan B. Losoya, 29, have been charged with delivery of over five pounds and under 50 pounds of marijuana, Sheriff Wendell Bryant said. Both have been released on $15,000 bond set by Peace Justice Charles Watlington.

"The DPS had been working the case and with backup from the sheriff's department arrested the pair in Mitchell County where they had made the deal," Bryant said.

Record lamb entries expected in show

The Howard County Junior Livestock Show will have a record number of lamb entries as well as a full complement of other livestock, according to County Extension Agent Don Richardson.

The county show will be held Jan. 28 and 29 at the county fair barn.

Richardson said 150 to 200 lambs were expected for the event. Other expected entries include 50 capons, 40 barrows and 30 steers, he added.

Weighing gets underway Thursday, Jan. 27 with the capons and hogs, Richardson said. No set time has been established, he said. Capon superintendent is Charles Phillips and Ronnie Wood is supervising the hogs.

The steer and lamb weigh-in will begin Friday, Jan. 28 at 1 p.m. Lynn Walling is the lamb superintendent and co-superintendents A.F. Lankford and Howard Armstrong will oversee the steers.

Competition will begin Jan. 28 at 3 p.m. with the capon show. The judge will be Rick Vestal from Lamesa. At 7 p.m., the hog competition will begin with Scotty Windham of Abertown judging.

The lamb show will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 29 with Kyle Smith of Seminole judging. The steer show will follow at 1 p.m. with Joe Ed Wise of Santa Anna judging.

A barbecue is scheduled for 5 p.m. under the supervision of Charles Hays. The auction will follow at 6 p.m. Saturday with auctioneer Bill Stone. Ringmen will be county Commissioners David Barr and Paul Allen.

Farmer harvests local award

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Skeet Dunn has been named the 1982 Conservation Farmer of the Year here, according to Van Mills of the local Soil and Water Conservation District.

Coke cans calories Local distributor enters diet derby

Diet Coke was unveiled yesterday in Big Spring with Coca-Cola officials calling the new soft drink "the most significant product" in the bottling company's history.

Diet Coke was introduced to take advantage of the burgeoning sugar-free drink boom, according to Raymond McDaniel, president of Texas Coca-Cola Bottling. He said diet drinks now account for 20 percent of all soft drinks sold — a figure expected to rise to 30 percent by 1990.

"The time and product is right," McDaniel said. "The market is changing and the sugar-free segment is growing. People are ready for a real sugar-free cola."

It is the first time the tradition-bound Coca-Cola Co. has extended its trademark on a new product, he said.

Accompanying Diet Coke's debut is a flood of promotional advertising aimed at television, radio and newspapers. The planned commercials are much like regular Coke advertisements with bright colors, actions and lively music.

With the heavy promotion and the theme "Diet Coke — Just for the taste of it," McDaniel said Coke believes the new product will soon be the second most popular drink right behind its big brother, Coca-Cola.

Marketed for men and women in the 18-49 age category, the Diet Coke design features the traditional red and white Coke colors reversed to create a light look, according to McDaniel. He said about 150 designs were looked at before the final packaging was approved.

The sugar-free drink should be hitting the stores about Jan. 17, according to McDaniel.

Schweiker

Schweiker thanked Reagan for letting him serve in the administration and said that, of his 22 years in Congress and the Cabinet, "the most exciting, most rewarding period of service was working with you as president."

"I'm really proud of the opportunity you gave me," he added. "When you decide to run for reelection, I want to be out there helping you."

In an exchange of letters, Reagan wrote Schweiker that "more than anyone else, you have been responsible for honoring my firm commitment that society's safety net be maintained," while ensuring that "these huge programs are prudently administered."

Schweiker, in turn, wrote Reagan that "more of your budget... is aimed at health and social services programs than any previous budget in U.S. history to meet the needs of those most in need."

While not confirming that he was resigning, Schweiker told reporters outside his McLean, Va., mansion Tuesday night, "Anything that is happening or that will happen... has nothing to do with the budget or personalities. It was an independent series of events."

His son and administration colleagues confirmed he had accepted

"Farmers operate on faith — there's not anything else out there," True said. "This gives us a little hope."

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said the plan probably would do little to solve farmers' problems.

"What we've got to have, and what the Reagan administration has refused to offer, is a long-term farm program that restricts production and raises commodity prices so farmers can make a little profit," Hightower said.

Even in the short run, the PIK plan would have little effect on prices in 1983, said U.S. Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, adding that he did not know what — if any — impact the program would have on farmers' income.

The success of the PIK plan largely depends on widespread participation in the voluntary production cut-back, and Texas farmers are not united. The Texas Farm Bureau, the nation's largest, has about 306,359 member families. The Texas Farmers' Union represents about 10,000 families, and some farmers support the activist American Agriculture Movement.

"If they can come out with a program that will work, farmers are ready and willing to support it," said Leonard Schaffner of Henrietta, a rancher and grain farmer. "The way it's been, if one farmer cuts back, another will want to plant fence-to-fence. We are in a situation now where we have to bring everyone in."

While Farm Bureau members expressed tentative enthusiasm for Reagan's plan, about 30 Central Texas farmers showed up at the convention with the AAM newspaper and placards reading, "We Want Parity, Not Charity."

"We have grain to sell," Brumbelo said. "I don't know why we need more. It won't pay the bills."

If approved by the Senate, Mrs. Heckler, 51, would become the third woman in the Reagan Cabinet, joining Elizabeth Dole, nominated secretary of transportation last week to replace Drew Lewis, and Jeane Kirkpatrick, ambassador to the United Nations.

Man taken in marijuana arrest

Police said they arrested 19-year-old David Arnulfo Garza of 507 Douglas last night on suspicion of possessing over 2 ounces of marijuana. Garza was arrested on the 800 block of West Fourth after police found a small bag with a green leafy substance inside his pocket, police reports said.

• James A. Reese told police a person who had been working for him stole $406 cash from The Other Place at 800 W. Fourth.

• Robert Reagan of 804 Johnson told police that someone stole his 1972 Chevrolet yesterday from an alley behind his residence.

• Jim Hayworth told police someone broke into Shade Western at 1733 Yale last night and burglarized three pool tables, a cigarette machine and a juke box. Hayworth estimated the loss at $200.

• Two female juveniles were arrested yesterday on suspicion of shoplifting a book of matches from Furr's Super Market.

• Police arrested 21-year-old Cathy Guzman of 1501 Stadium yesterday on a criminal mischief warrant.

A weak cold front stretched across the northeastern third of the state, but was not producing significantly cooler temperatures.

Pre-dawn temperatures were in the 20s in Southwest Texas, the 30s in North Texas and the 40s and 50s in South Texas. Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 22 at Marfa to 55 at McAllen and Brownsville.

Winds were from the north and northeast across the eastern half of the state and from the southwest over West Texas. Speeds ranged from 5 to 15 mph. The forecast called for fair skies with mild days and cool nights.

A STRONG cold front carried snow and high winds into a large portion of the eastern United States today. A snow warning was in effect for northwest Pennsylvania while a winter storm warning was posted for extreme northeastern Ohio.

Ex-Soviet president dies

MOSCOW (AP) — Former President Nikolai V. Podgorny, the last surviving member of the famous troika that supplanted Nikita Khrushchev nearly two decades ago, has died after a long illness, official sources said today. He was 79.

A spokeswoman for the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the national Parliament, would not say when the former Soviet head of state died. She said an obituary would be published in the government newspaper Izvestia that appears in the evening.

Podgorny joined Communist Party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin in the trio that replaced Khrushchev after his ouster in 1964. Podgorny served as president until he was replaced in 1977 by Brezhnev who added the presidency to his functions as Communist Party chief.

The long-time Soviet politician also lost his post on the ruling Politburo in 1977. Brezhnev died Nov. 10, after 18 years as head of the party. Kosygin died in December 1980 at age 76.

Podgorny became president in 1965, 13 months after Brezhnev and his supporters in the leadership toppled Khrushchev.

Podgorny, a former sugar plant manager, proved himself one of the Soviet Union's most durable leaders in his 38 years of public life. He survived the purges of dictator Josef Stalin and the demise of Khrushchev.

When Podgorny became president, it was widely believed that he was being put on the shelf by assuming the largely ceremonial job. Nevertheless, he maintained a high visibility in the national leadership councils and traveled widely overseas. But after 1970, both Podgorny and Kosygin were overshadowed by Brezhnev.

Podgorny was 14 at the time of the Bolshevik Revolution. He was born in Karlovka in the Ukraine and later moved to the Ukrainian capital of Kiev. He joined the Communist Party in 1930 and a year later graduated from a local food industry technological institute.

He ran sugar plants during the Stalinist purges of the early and mid-1930s and emerged in 1939 as Ukrainian deputy commissar for the food industry. He eventually moved to Moscow and directed a food institute here during World War II.

Podgorny eventually developed strong ties with Khrushchev, who also was Ukrainian, and became head of the Communist Party in the major Ukrainian city of Kharkov in 1950. He took Khrushchev's old job as party chief of the Ukraine in 1957 after Khrushchev had become the country's top leader and also joined the national Communist leadership.

Podgorny was wise enough in 1964, however, to be on the side of those opposing Khrushchev and therefore was unharmed by Khrushchev's ouster. He took over with Brezhnev and Kosygin, forming the famous troika leadership.

Women's group leader arrested in '65 murder

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — Leaders of the California chapter of the National Organization for Women said the arrest of their top officer for a 1965 murder in New Orleans is "clear harassment" and promised to stand by her "100 percent."

Ginny Eleanor Foat, 42, was arrested Tuesday on a murder warrant from Louisiana. Officials there said they had believed until recently that Ms. Foat was in a Nevada prison for another slaying.

The story of her arrest sent shock waves through Los Angeles' feminist and political circles, where Ms. Foat was admired by her peers as a forceful advocate for liberal causes. Some California NOW officials said they had long known of the allegations and did not believe them.

Law enforcement officials said Tuesday that Ms. Foat had had a number of aliases, was once known as Virginia Galluzzo and had worked as a Bourbon Street barmaid in New Orleans.

Police said her ex-husband, John Sidote, had implicated Ms. Foat in two 1965 killings: the New Orleans robbery-murder of a South American man and the Nevada killing of a San Francisco hotel executive. The Nevada charges were dismissed when Sidote refused to testify, authorities there said.

California NOW officials questioned the timing of the arrest. They said in a statement that Louisiana had twice tried to extradite Ms. Foat but had dropped the proceedings because of lack of evidence.

"We consider this arrest to be clear harassment ... and we are backing Ginny 100 percent," the NOW statement said.

Ms. Foat, a Democratic Party activist, was being held without bail pending arraignment today. California NOW leaders said they would seek to have her released on her own recognizance.

Ms. Foat was arrested at suburban Hollywood-Burbank Airport as she and a friend were waiting to board a plane, said Los Angeles Police Cmdr. William Booth.

Although the arrest warrant was for Virginia Galluzzo, the name Ginny Foat also had been mentioned in documents, and "It is well established that Ginny Foat is Virginia Galluzzo," Booth said. "I hope it's a case of mistaken identi-supervision of the state's 40 chapters with 30,000 members. She planned to enter law school this fall.

In Louisiana, Jefferson Parish Sheriff Harry Lee said Ms. Foat is wanted in the slaying of Moises Chayo, 62, of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Thatcher leaves Falklands after her triumphant visit

STANLEY, Falkland Islands (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher left the Falkland Islands today under a cloak of secrecy after a triumphal five-day visit, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported.

Correspondents traveling with Mrs. Thatcher said the prime minister was flown out of the Falklands shortly after breakfast aboard a British air force Hercules cargo plane.

She departed secretly, seen off by Falklands civil commissioner, Sir Rex Hunt and his wife, Lady Hunt, and the islands' military commissioner, Maj. Gen. David Thorne.

Before leaving, the prime minister toured Mount Tumbledown, on the outskirts of Stanley, which was the scene of some of the fiercest fighting of the 74-day war with Argentina last spring.

She walked about one-half mile along the mountain, and saw some of the Argentine defensive positions, still littered with war debris.

The British prime minister arrived in Stanley Saturday night after a secret 8,000-mile flight from England.

Her departure was reported following discussions of ways to reinforce the British garrison on the Falklands by building a new runway on the remote islands. The London Times said army engineers have been surveying possible sights for the runway, which could accommodate fully-laden VC10s and the new Tristars of the British air force.

The present runway at Stanley has been strengthened. But it still is not able to take the heaviest British air force planes. Under the wear and tear of military traffic it is not expected to last more than three more years. Soil conditions reportedly make extension difficult.

The Times said the planned new runway was expected to cost between $31.6 million and $47.4 million.

It said it would allow Britain to keep a much smaller army garrison on the islands. The cost of maintaining the garrison on the Falklands at its present strength of 4,000 is estimated at $669.9 million for 1983.

British forces retook the islands in June from Argentine invaders who captured the Falklands in April.

British opposition leaders have been saying that Mrs. Thatcher's surprise visit to the islands was a pre-election stunt.

Welfare short end

Dear editor,
This morning on KBST they had some disgusting news. It seems the Lydia Juarez family whom received the special Christmas wish "got the short end of the stick."
That was a nice gesture they tried to do, but the family getting their only source of income cut off is really sad.
I looked up the definitions for welfare which are: Health, happiness, and general well-being, work on behalf of the poor, public relief. Seems they messed up this time.

The "Christmas Wish" was to help someone who needed it. If given to someone not deserving, nothing would have come of it.
This is very unfair, maybe the people who dictate the rules should try to live as this family or others that have to. I am sure most of the people would rather help themselves, but where can they get started?

I am also writing to request the name and address of the welfare department where I can write to them.

Oops A mistake

Dear editor,
I made a mistake in the article that I put in the Howard County history book.
I stated the roping arena was west of the Luther store, should have read east of the Luther store.
Will each one scratch out west and write east.
I didn't proof read, sorry it happened.

Illegal parking

Dear Editor,
Many Big Spring residents are wondering why some vehicles can be parked illegally on streets, when others cannot. Especially east of Gregg, on 6, 11, 15, and 17.
Many residents park on both sides of a street leaving only one lane for moving traffic. Yet on a wide street, if a vehicle is hit the owner is penalized. This seems very unfair in our legal system and we feel it should apply to all two way streets in our city.

Detente: Seize the day

WASHINGTON — In 1953, Eisenhower seized the opening created by the death of Stalin to make to the American editors his famous "deeds not words" speech. Within two years he had a summit meeting with Krushchev and the treaty that ended Soviet occupation of Austria.

In 1963, Kennedy seized the opening left at the end of the Cuban missile crisis to make, at American University, a famous speech on "the most important topic on earth, world peace." Within the year he had the Test Ban Treaty that led the way to all subsequent arms control.

In 1983 Reagan faces a similar opening following the death of Leonid Brezhnev and the accession of Yuri Andropov. This President, far more than his predecessors, needs to crack through the crust of his own bureaucracy by a general speech asserting the priority of peace.

Andropov plainly wants a deal. He came to the leadership largely through the backing of the Soviet military. They have extracted promises of more vigorous defense efforts if arms control accords are not reached with the U.S. But if the new leader has to find more resources for defense, the strained Soviet economy will be that much the worse.

In addition, Andropov needs to consolidate his leadership by winning over those who backed him against Brezhnev's handpicked candidate, Konstantin Chernenko. Chernenko was a total partisan of the Brezhnev stress on detente with the West. By embracing detente, Andropov — besides easing the defense drag on resources —

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — In the backrooms of the White House, an undaunted Donna Quixote has been waging a one-woman war against the federal establishment. Her name is Annelise Anderson, and she has tried to dismantle just about every government agency that has come within her purview.

She took seriously Ronald Reagan's campaign speeches denouncing the evils of big government. Through her political zeal, Anderson would up as an associate budget director. She mounted her swivel chair in the White House complex with all the majesty of a noble knight astride a charger and began tilting with the Washington windmills.

As a deep-dyed, determined libertarian, she believes devoutly that the less government interference in people's affairs the better. This is at odds with the creed of the bureaucrats who man the bastions of government. Those familiar with her views regarded her as a Trojan horse lodged inside the federal command post itself.

Anderson proved equal, alas more than equal, to the bureaucrats' apprehensions. She blocked a proposal that would have required federal identification cards for every man, woman and child in the country — a possibility of a summit meeting. But the right wing of the Republican Party, which is the President's political base, viscerally opposes any accord with Moscow. That line is slavishly echoed in the Pentagon. The State Department, under George Shultz, has barely raised its head on behalf of arms control. Shultz has not appointed a single expert in Soviet or security affairs to a top post.

A FULL-DRESS peace offensive has, not surprisingly, already been surfaced by Andropov. It includes rapprochement with China, and an opening in Eastern Europe for a return to the fold by such mavericks as Romania and Yugoslavia. But the main dish on the menu is arms control.

Two sets of negotiations with the U.S. in Geneva have been discussed by Andropov in detail. He has advocated big reductions in the number of intermediate-range nuclear arms. He has indicated a readiness to meet with President Reagan at the summit.

While the Andropov proposals fall short of what this country needs, they clearly move in the right direction. They certainly find an appeal among this country's allies, particularly in West Germany. It is notable that the Socialist leader, Hans-Jochen Vogel, who saw President Reagan here Friday, will visit Moscow this week. He will see Andropov, and also Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who comes to Bonn on Jan. 17.

President Reagan instinctively understands the widespread hunger for peace in this country and abroad. One of his truly spontaneous acts was the letter, hinting at a meeting, which he addressed to Brezhnev after the assassination attempt in 1981. Another was the proposal he made for a meeting with Brezhnev at the United Nations Disarmament Conference last June. In his press conference Wednesday, he returned soft answers to all questions about Russia, arms control and the worldwide military commitments. As evidence, they pointed to the Falkland Islands conflict; the British commandeered 70 commercial ships, including the Queen Elizabeth II, to transport men and supplies to the South Atlantic.

But the flag waving did not impress Anderson, who set forth her views in a comprehensive treatise intended for official eyes only, but intercepted by my associate Donald Goldberg. She made these contentions:

• "Most of the major arguments advanced in support of assisting the U.S. merchant marine for national security reasons are seriously flawed."
• "There is no evidence that relying on foreign shipping poses a significant risk to the United States in times of peace or war."
• "There is no basis for believing that non-U.S. flagships would not be available in an emergency."
• "Economic justifications for federal assistance to the merchant marine industries are weak."

These dogmatic statements caused instant trauma in maritime circles. With the allocation of funds in jeopardy, the industry's powerful friends in Washington engaged Anderson in mortal combat.

Supporters of maritime subsidies argued that an American merchant marine was essential to our

FOR AN AWFUL moment, she made some progress in the backrooms, and a cruel uncertainty clouded the air for the Coast Guard careerists. But they rallied quickly — with the support of alumni and friends — and rescued the venerable service.

Supporters of maritime subsidies argued that an American merchant marine was essential to our Council headed by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige issued its own report, which buried Anderson's work and replaced it with a new report, which solemnly declared that a healthy merchant marine is vital to U.S. security and, therefore, should continue to collect its subsidies.

In a passing nod to the feisty libertarian in the budget office, footnotes to several sections of the interagency report said: "This section does not have the concurrence of the Office of Management and Budget."

HEADS UP: The towering Paul Volcker and the diminutive Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., met for the first time some months ago at Washington's fashionable, colonial F Street Club. At 6-foot-7, he was too tall for the Victorian setting and kept bumping his head on the chandelier.

Volcker is the authoritarian chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, with little patience for those who don't speak the language of high finance. He looked down from his lofty height upon Senator Hawkins, who had introduced some legislation that would affect interest rates.

Is marijuana bad if it's not mentioned in Bible?

Dear Dr. Graham: Does the Bible say anything about smoking marijuana? My boyfriend says it doesn't and it is therefore okay to smoke it, but I'm not sure.—N.P.

Dear N.P.: The Bible strictly commands us not to do anything which would dull our minds or make us lose control of our moral judgment. This is clearly seen, for example, in the statements of the Bible against drunkenness. "Do not get drunk on wine, which leads to debauchery. Instead, be filled with the Spirit" (Ephesians 5:18).

Therefore, although the Bible does not mention marijuana by name (since it was apparently unknown to the Biblical writers), the Bible makes it clear that any drug which can distort our judgment is wrong. (You should remember that alcohol is actually a type of drug.) Although the medical consequences of marijuana are still being studied, there can be no doubt that it—along with other drugs, such as cocaine—influence the mind. I know there are some people, also, who substitute their drug experiences for an experience of God, and this is tragic because it keeps them from knowing the joy and peace and forgiveness that God alone can bring to our hearts.

I hope you and your boyfriend will honestly reconsider your involvement in drugs—no matter how popular they may be with some of your friends. But more than that, my prayer is that you will both reconsider with an open mind your need of God. God created you, and he has a perfect plan for your lives. He wants you to come to know him and follow him. He wants you to learn what it means to love him and to love others for his sake.

There is no greater joy in life than having Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior, living in your heart and giving you hope for the future. No drug experience—or any other kind of experience—can really do this for you. Open your heart to Christ right now by faith and commit yourself to follow him every day as you walk with him in the light of his Word.

Pertinent news

Since we live in such busy times with big news stories breaking every minute, the danger of missing the pertinent always exists. Here are a few they may have slipped by.

WASHINGTON — Controversial Secretary of the Interior James Watt struck again today by declaring Big Bend National Park a Hefty bag and ordering massive airlifts of garbage to fill it.

In an apparently unrelated move, Watt announced he was dropping his first name to use his last name again and would henceforth be known as Watt Ajer.

INDIA — It was announced today that famed Christian evangelist Billy Graham has abandoned his Bible and become a Jain. Jainism, of course, is an Indian religion that maintains all life, even matter, is eternal. Therefore, a fly or a flower could be your grandfather.

The perfect Jains sit motionlessly for much of their lives, eating little and never bathing for fear of killing bacteria that might be Cousin Maude. Graham is rumored to have wrapped himself in one of his $300 suits and cloistered himself on a mountain.

OHIO — A Dayton newspaper boy has found Vice President George Bush working as a bait salesman near the midtown region.

The vice president, who was reported missing Christmas, had apparently wandered to Ohio after attending Brezhnev's funeral in November. Bush was not missed by White House personnel until just before Christmas when workmen were looking for the tree stand in Bush's desk.

A chagrined Secret Service spokesman said "Hey, well, you know, he's pretty quiet, keeps to himself a lot."

Mrs. Bush, also unaware of her husband's absence, could not be reached for comment although rumors connect her with rock star Mick Jagger, used car salesman Earl Sheib and an Urdu dance troupe.

NEW YORK — For no apparent reason, the city of Lackawanna, New York, declared it would be known as "Ed" from now on.

TEXAS — Infamous millionaire Cullen Davis, who recently made headlines when he destroyed $1 million worth of art because of its "pagan" power, is after Daffy Duck and Goofy now.

Disneyland officials report Davis has purchased controlling stock in Disney Products, Inc., and he intends to remove all the favorite Disney characters from the market.

As to the reason for eradicating the lovable and money-making creations, an inside source quoted Davis as saying "How many talking ducks, mice and elephants are in the Bible anyway?"

NEW GUINEA — Inhabitants of the D'Entrecasteaux Islands, fed up with lack of tourism and horrendous mispronunciations, have captured a passing American goby fishing boat and are holding the crew hostage.

The two-man crew — identified as only Skipper and First Mate Gilligan — were unharmed during the boarding, but later reports indicate the pair is being forced to watch repeated showings of a certain vapid TV show.

So far, the only demands of the D'Entrecasteaux hijackers have been to meet with alleged comedian Soupy Sales and an official name change to YankeeYa'llComeSpend.

Insiders say a compromise is being proposed with talk show host Wink Martindale and the name of Tractor-Parts.

Magazine features restorationists

In the January edition of "Texas Homes," pages 123-125, is an article entitled, "Heirlooms: A Parts Store for Antiques." This very nice article features Sarah and Howard Higgins, self-taught antiquarians and restorationists, who own Heirlooms, literally a parts store for antiques.

The last paragraph of the story reads: "The Higginses feel they'll never tire of the excitement in the faces of customers when they find the special part they need to repair a family legacy. One day, if the couple's dreams come true, collectors will be able to find any piece they need in Heirlooms shops all across Texas — parts to repair yesterday's heirlooms for tomorrow."

Some other working people in our community who need a pat on the back for jobs well done were recently recognized at the Big Spring State Hospital. Lee Nix, a therapist technician in Rehab Services, received the Charles McCall Award for outstanding service. Linda Bailey, Burl Dennis, Darrell Fellows, Cliff Stovall and Velma Talkington were presented commendation awards for loyalty and outstanding employee service. Bertie Lee Pinkard was named Psychiatric Aide of the Year.

Bill Read, incoming president of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, has called a meeting for tomorrow at 4 p.m. for all chairpersons of the various working committees for 1983. At this meeting, the final plans of action will be formulated. The Women's Division is a new committee that has great potential. Tentative ideas have already been submitted and collected ready for presentation at tomorrow's meeting of the Program of Action Steering Committee for their collective approval. These ideas include the following:

The purpose of the Women's Division will be to promote the effectiveness of women in public, corporate, and civil life; to provide input and perspective for social and political change; to use women's combined energies, wisdom, and unique qualities for the best interests of this community and area.

The Women's Division program of work will be divided into 14 task forces of administration, hostess, resource development, personal and career development, membership, public relations and public information, community service, governmental affairs, meditation and appeals, recognition and awards, network development, women at home, women in retirement. Major goals suggested for 1983 include: establishing a research and resource data bank, identification of issues, conducting bi-monthly growth opportunity meetings, holding a Working Mothers Day and Women in Business Week, sponsoring a Women's Retreat, sponsoring an annual women's conference attracting women from all over the state, awareness reports on political activities, legal issues, and human rights, formation of a mediation and appeals board, formation of a strong specialized network for women, and formulation of special programs for women at home, in retirement, and as displaced homemakers.

This is a strong appeal to all women in this area to call me immediately if there is interest in being a part of the Women's Division. This can be a significant opportunity to have a strong voice in important issues where we live, work and play.

The Big Spring Mall manager, Mark Sheedy, informed us of several events coming up in that shopping area: Jan. 13-15, a giant sidewalk sale; Jan. 20-22, photo show sponsored by Crossroads Camera Club; Jan. 29, Motorcycle Show sponsored by the Big Spring Roadriders; and Feb. 5-6, a car show sponsored by Highland Pontiac, Datsun, Chrysler. All of this precedes the Big Spring Mall's first anniversary celebration beginning Feb. 10.

Those of you who watched the Christmas parade in early December will remember the three-wheeler vehicles ridden by parade officials as they rode up and down the side, keeping the parade moving, spotting potential problems, and helping the judges with the line-up order.

The three-wheelers belonged to local dealerships which allowed their use for this community event. Jackie of A-1 Cycle said the sales of three-wheelers now account for 40 percent of their total business. In addition to the Honda dealership, we have the Big Spring Yamaha-Suzuki and the Western Kawasaki dealerships.

Most sales are to farmers and ranchers who use them for everything from herding cattle to checking fences. But these versatile little vehicles are also being snapped up by business and industry, amusement parks, airports and police departments. Of course, a prime motive many have for buying is for their own personal or family fun and entertainment. Whatever the reason, sales seem to be soaring.

Are you aware that the energy industry of Big Spring entertained visitors from Indonesia, Spain, Canada, Japan, China, Mexico, Venezuela, the Philippines, and Belgium, in addition to numerous people from across the United States as they acquainted them with the oil business and our community's unique contributions to the industry?

Upcoming events to remember:

Senators given

'83 appointments

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby had few surprises Tuesday when he named members of the Texas Senate committees, basically continuing to reward seniority and senators who are key members of his team.

SEN. JOHN MONTFORD, D-LUBBOCK, whose district includes Howard County, received seats on the Education and Jurisprudence committees, with assignment to Jurisprudence's Criminal Matters Subcommittee. Montford is a former Lubbock district attorney.

Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, a freshman whose District 25 covers most of West Texas, expressed delight with his appointment to the Natural Resources, Education and Intergovernmental Affairs committees and as vice chairman of the Energy Subcommittee.

Sims, who campaigned to protect West Texas water supplies, pointed out that Natural Affairs oversees water legislation in the Senate and said that was his priority assignment. The committee also handles oil and gas and agriculture bills.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, who ranks high in both seniority and his close working relationship with Hobby, retained his chairmanship of the powerful Senate Finance Committee. He also stays as a member of the Economic Development and Education committees.

Jones, who was unanimously elected Tuesday as president pro tem of the Senate, said he is happy with the appointments. As Finance chairman, he will be deeply involved in trying to meet the state's budgetary problems this session.

Hobby spread the coveted committee chairmanships among conservatives and moderates and among senators from various sections of the state.

But, mostly because of the retirement of veteran senator Pete Snelson of Midland, there was a slight shift from west to east in terms of chairmanships. Sims replaces Snelson in District 25.

Murder defendant missing

DALLAS (AP) — The trial of a man accused of killing someone outside a bar last April has been postponed while authorities try to find the murder defendant again.

Abacn Tovar, 42, was in court Tuesday morning, but failed to reappear for jury selection, which was scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. after a lunch break. Tovar had been free on bond since a judge reduced his bail last September from $50,000 to $35,000.

"He showed up yesterday. He showed up this morning. It may be that this was the first time he realized he was definitely going to trial," District Judge Gerry Meier said Tuesday.

Prosecutors returned after the lunch break. So did defense attorneys, witnesses and potential jurors. Everyone except Tovar.

"I guess he just got nervous," said Assistant District Attorney Janice Warder, the lead prosecutor, told the Dallas Times Herald.

Tovar, with previous convictions in 1963 for murder and 1978 for felony theft, was accused of the fatal shooting of Reginaldo Ledezma in front of a bar where Tovar was working as a bouncer. Tovar faces a maximum life sentence if convicted.

Better times still elusive, economists say

By PAUL RECER
Associated Press Writer

Hard times, Texas style, arrived in the Lone Star state in 1982, with some areas hit hard and others hardly noticing.

Unemployment along the Texas-Mexico border, already at rates among the highest in the country, was further aggravated by the devaluation of the Mexican peso and a steep decline in retail business.

Houston, the state's economic giant, is losing its reputation as a job mecca. The city is suffering from the anemia of the oil industry, in addition to a lag in shipping and a softening in big-project construction.

Mother Nature played dirty tricks on Texas farmers during the year. Wind, hail and an over-abundance of ill-timed rain wiped out millions of acres of corn, cotton and vegetables. Experts say thousands of the state's farmers are hanging on by their fingernails.

INVENTORIES, particularly in energy and heavy manufacturing, remained high as a new year was born, and economists warned that the stockpile will have to be reduced before there is a major upturn in industrial hiring.

Events and conditions far from Texas had a great impact on the state's economy in 1982. A national surplus of grain held down prices for the state's farmers. Slack demand for oil caused a cutback on drilling, energy sales and fuel transportation. Interest rates, heavily influenced by the Federal Reserve Board, stayed high most of the year and helped to hold down sales of homes and big ticket items. The strength of the U.S. dollar held down exports and some Gulf ports experienced a drop in shipping traffic.

Some measures of the economy brightened at year's end.

Unemployment statewide dropped in November to 7.6 percent, an improvement from the 8.3 of October, while the rate worsened, from 9.9 to 10.4 percent, at the national level.

A lowering of the interest rates triggered a spurt in home building starts and economists predict this will trickle down into other areas of the economy, particularly durable goods, as new home owners buy furniture, appliances and such things as lawn mowers.

Retail sales spurred in Houston, Dallas and other cities far north of the border. Noone expected a "fabulous" Christmas retail season, said one economist, but the result was better than feared. Here's a glance at specific areas:

THE BORDER:
Montezuma's revenge took economic form along the Texas-Mexican border.

The drop in value of the peso, unofficially falling to as low as 135 to the dollar, sent border merchants and real estate investors reeling.

Seven firms, heavily dependant on Mexicans crossing the border to buy, shut down in El Paso. Heavy layoffs were reported from El Paso to Brownsville, an area that was already experiencing the state's highest unemployment.

Example: A McAllen merchant who owns seven dress shops cut his employment force from 85 to 29 and reduced his prices by 50 percent, eliminating any profit.

Example: A grocer in Brownsville reported his business off by 65 percent. He laid off 25 employees and cut salaries by 15 percent just to keep his stores open.

Expand this up and down the Rio Grande and there is ample reason to despair. Even real estate prices have dropped along the border because wealthy Mexicans, trapped with deflated pesos, are not buying as they once did. The average home price in McAllen has dropped from $80,000 to $64,000. A Padre Island developer dropped his prices 20 percent.

The forecast is grim: Most expect more businesses to close and more people to be laid off. This could further aggravate serious problems in places like Laredo, with a 24.2 percent unemployment rate in November, and in McAllen, where the rate was 19.8 percent.

DALLAS:
Big D experienced a steady growth in retail sales and a small spurt in housing starts, based on September figures.

"September this year was when the interest rates began to go down and naturally sales picked up," said Carrie Boswell, a business analyst for the Dallas Chamber of Commerce.

Retail sales for September rose 10 percent, compared to a year ago.

The increase in housing starts, of all types, was dramatic for September, jumping from to 4,265 for the month, compared to 1,442 for a September, 1981.

Lawmakers compete for housing

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — The hunters have arrived, and the search is on. The winners will find cheap, clean apartments close to the Capitol.

The losers may end up like former Sen. Babe Schwartz, D-Galveston, did one session — "I lived with my mother-in-law."

Or like former Rep. Dave Allred, D-Wichita Falls — "I had to sleep on a cot in my office. I used the public restrooms and took showers in the UT gym."

The 181 lawmakers in town for the legislative session convening Tuesday must compete with lobbyists, university students — and each other — in finding living quarters in the capital for four and a half months — six weeks short of the normal six months required in most leases.

"I just come to town and look desperate," confessed Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston.

Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas, hopes to rent a room from his aide.

The best deals go to the House speaker and the lieutenant governor. They get three-bedroom apartments inside the Capitol itself, rent-free.

Outgoing Speaker Billy Clayton, who owns a house in Austin, used his Capitol apartment, located directly behind the House chambers, as office space. "I figured 16 to 18 hours a day around here was enough."

The lieutenant governor's apartment is also vacant. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby owns a duplex in town, living in one half while his daughter, a law school student, occupies the other half. His Capitol apartment is used for state functions and official overnight visitors.

For those who can afford rent of $500 to $600 a month, one-bedroom apartments are available in the luxurious Westgate Building or Cambridge Towers, both overlooking the Capitol.

"But I would say 75 to 80 percent of the lawmakers who come here are struggling as far as economics are concerned," said Clayton, who is stepping down after four terms as House speaker.

Most can't even afford to bring their families to Austin with them. "Nobody in their right mind can bring a wife and children up here unless his wife is working and making a hell of a lot more than he is," said Schwartz.

Legislators earn a salary of $600 a month and get $30 a day for living expenses during the session. "There are people who live under conditions their constituents would not believe," said Schwartz, who is now a lobbyist.

Ragsdale, who applied for food stamps in 1974 to dramatize his low salary, said his aide, who earns $1,500 a month, has a three-bedroom house and has agreed to rent Ragsdale one room. They haven't decided on a price yet, Ragsdale said, but he said it better not be too much.

Clayton said many lawmakers simply "get together and make a deal with a hotel or apartment building" and share the rent.

Reagan praises Texas food bank during Dallas visit

By PHILIP BRASHER
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Directors of a 4-month-old food bank hope President Reagan's visit to deliver them "some pats on the back" will generate new sources of donated groceries the agency can funnel to the city's poor and elderly.

Reagan toured the North Texas Food Bank's 20,000-square-foot warehouse Tuesday, and told the agency's staff and board that the privately run agency exemplifies what business can do to solve social problems.

"Food banks alone are not going to solve the problem, I know, but they make more efficient use of the existing resources," Reagan said.

Kathryn Cain, president of the food bank's board of directors and a regional official with Safeway Stores Inc., led the president past cartons of fresh produce and pallets stacked high with canned goods, all donated to the food bank by area grocery store chains and manufacturers.

"I just wanted to stop by here today and shake a few hands and deliver some pats on the back because this North Texas bank is such a wonderful story," Reagan said.

The food bank distributes 30 tons of food and household items a week to 108 community programs and charities in metropolitan Dallas and Fort Worth.

Mrs. Cain said the agency only learned Friday that Reagan had picked the food bank out for a visit after his address here to the American Farm Bureau Federation convention.

But she and General Manager Dub Nelson said after the president's visit that they were elated at the publicity the visit brought the fledgling agency. Calls already had come in from businessmen interested in making donations, Mrs. Cain said.

"It's going to help our operation locally," she said, "but it's also going to help food banks nationwide to have this publicity."

Reagan said the food bank, which was started with the help of funds from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, was a sample of effective "private sector initiative."

"We just used to call it neighborliness before the government started sticking its nose in," Reagan said. "If you want to put the government's nose out of shape, I won't be mad."

The groceries the food bank distributes, including dairy products and meat, are considered "wholesome but unsalable" because either their packaging is damaged or expiration date is passed.

About 50 more charities probably will be added to the food bank's distribution list in the next month, and the bank eventually hopes to serve the entire North Texas region, Mrs. Cain said.

Charities pay a handling fee of 10 cents a pound for the food.

Stores and manufacturers are allowed to deduct from their taxes 150 percent of their wholesale costs of the donated goods, Mrs. Cain said.

Reagan noted that a so-called "good-faith" law passed in Texas two years ago in most cases relieves the donating businesses of liability for food that might injure a recipient.

Without the law, the food bank never would have collected enough groceries to distribute, Mrs. Cain said.

"People can feel free to give their inventory because they have confidence that they won't be sued," she said.

Reagan thought the law prompted more people to give, she said.

The food bank is governed by a board composed of area business leaders and social workers, and will spend $400,000 in its first year.

Around the County

By Ricky Hope — 4-H Reporter

Capon-showing

The primary purpose of 4-H is not simply the raising of livestock, although many people think of it as being synonymous with lambs, pigs, and steers. There are over 200 projects in 4-H which range from livestock to photography, from bee-keeping to marine science.

One project which is rapidly increasing in popularity is the raising and showing of capons, or neutered roosters. This project is popular for many reasons, not the least of which is its relatively low-cost and minimum space requirements.

Kelly Hays, 10, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Hays, has been raising and showing capons for two years. She was able to tell this reporter some of the basic requirements for this unique project.

The capons are about one month old when the 4-Her receives them, and they are already caponized at the time.

Their housing needs are simple — requiring only a place out of the weather and away from the dust. (The dust will discolor the feathers.)

Kelly feeds her capons about two pounds of chicken starter every day. Besides the daily feeding, there are no other routines to follow until showtime.

A capon weighs an average of 14 pounds at show time. He is judged by the depth and width of his breast, and the circumference of his thighs. The capons are classified into three classes: light weight, medium weight, and heavy weight. There were over 100 capons in the 1982 show.

Kelly enjoys raising her capons. She believes that it is easier than the other livestock projects she has had. She recommends the project to anyone who wants experience in raising and showing animals.

If anyone is interested in feeding capons for next year's show, plan to attend the meeting on Jan. 20 at the Texas Electric Ready Room featuring Dr. James Denton, poultry specialist from Texas A & M University.

Lamb feeders need to remember that sheep shearers will be at the Fairground on Jan. 22 beginning at 9 a.m. This will also be a good time for 4-Hers to weigh their lambs and practice showmanship.

Lucky Acres 4-H Club is sponsoring the countywide meeting for January. It will be held Jan. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the County Fair Barns. Demonstrations will be given on showmanship for the Jan. 28-29 livestock show.

PERFECT BROWS — For perfect brow shape and thickness, apply eye makeup according to your own eye spacing. Different techniques are suggested for close-set eyes (top), well-spaced eyes (middle) and wide-spaced eyes (bottom).

Lovely brows can be achieved easily

The secret of beautiful, well-tended and expressive brows has long been a source of frustration to women who are otherwise adept at makeup and grooming. The effect of carefully designed and applied eye makeup can be completely lost as a result of overplucked, overgrown or neglected eyebrows, which because of their strange appearance, dominate the eye area.

A woman can achieve a perfect brow shape and thickness through a crucial understanding of her own eye spacing.

Brows for close-set eyes: Start browline slightly in from the inner corner of the eye. Arch it just beyond the center of the eye. End slightly beyond the outer corner of the eye.

Brows for well-spaced eyes: Start browline directly above inner corner of eye. Arch it over center of eye. End above outer corner of eye.

Brows for wide-spaced eyes: Start browline slightly closer to nose than the inner corner of eye. Arch slightly in front of the center of the eye. End above outer corner of eye.

Skimpy brows: Use brow pencil in short feathering strokes to fill in brows, then use a brow brush to blend in lines.

Thick brows: To thin eyebrows, tweeze a few hairs across the length of the brow. Be sure to pluck below browline, never above.

Bushy or unruly: Brush brow down, then trim the tips with small rounded scissors. Apply hairspray to brow brush before using to help tame brows.

Boyd's announce birth of second daughter

Keith and Edwina Boyd, Interstate 20, announce the birth of their second daughter, Kacie Clairetta Lois Deana, at 5:35 a.m. Jan. 5 at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

The baby weighed 9 pounds, 6 ounces at birth, and was 20 1/2 inches long.

Maternal grandmother is Mrs. Devona Trout of Dermott, Ark. Paternal grandmother is Mrs. Lois Chicknowsky of Sylmar, Cal.

Kacie was welcomed home by a sister, Amiey, 7, and a brother, Keith Jr., 5.

Name-dropping son hurts parents' pride

DEAR ABBY: Our 25-year-old son, who is graduating from law school in a few months, is being married soon. His fiancée is a college graduate, and they are both intelligent adults.

Our son just informed us that he plans to take his fiancée's name rather than have her take his name. Needless to say, we are shocked. My husband feels that our son is disgracing our family and abandoning his heritage by doing such a thing. Our name is not difficult to spell or pronounce. It is Orlikoff. Hers is Reilly.

Our son explained that he may one day pursue a career in politics and Reilly would be better than Orlikoff—because Orlikoff sounds Russian, and people would be more inclined to vote for a candidate named Reilly.

Abby, have you ever heard of a man taking his wife's name? My husband and I are so hurt over this we may not even attend the wedding. We love our son and don't want to alienate him. What should we do?

PROUD ORLIKOFFS

DEAR PROUD: Yes. I have heard of a man taking his wife's name. Please accept your son's decision with grace and attend his wedding. If you refuse, you will surely alienate him. I can understand your disappointment, but your son is an adult and free to make his own decisions.

DEAR ABBY: I have a part-time job delivering parcels to homes. Sometimes it takes a very long time to locate an address—because half the houses on a street are not numbered anywhere that's visible from the street. I keep wondering what would happen if some of these people needed the police, an ambulance or a fireman in a hurry.

I hope you think this is important enough to print.
D.H.

DEAR D.H.: I do. Readers, if your address cannot be easily read from the streets, you could lose more than a parcel!

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for you! Just keep telling people that there is no excuse for failing to write a thank-you note.

I have three children, ages 5, 8 and 10. My job as a parent is to teach my children good habits. When a gift arrives, we have a rule at our house. If it's something to wear, it is not worn until a thank-you note is written. If it's a toy, it may not be played with until a thank-you note is written. If it's a check or money, it may not be banked or spent until a thank-you note is written.

My children have been writing their own thank-you notes since they were 4. (I guided their tiny hands, but they "wrote" the notes, and I addressed the envelopes.) The older ones do it by themselves now.

The writing is not always perfect and neither is the spelling, but the gratitude is theirs, and it is sincere.

Children cannot be expected to know what they have not been taught.

When parents make excuses for their children's laziness and negligence, they are in truth trying to excuse their own failure to teach them.

Dr. Donohue

A secret: minimize the years of aging

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: You may be interested in a suggestion I feel would make your column of more general interest than discussion of specific ailments. Two areas of medical comment are needed:

1) Symptoms of aging that do not indicate disease and which should be accepted, and, 2) Care of one's body to prevent deterioration and later ailments. A proper discussion of these topics is badly needed — G.D.G.

What you suggest is worthwhile, but what are you trying to do, put me out of business? First, I grant your premise that there are changes that occur pretty inevitably in our bodies as we grow older and about which we can do nothing. When we're young, most of our organs have great resiliency, a greater capacity to function well, even when half their substance is lost. We don't have such resiliency forever. We lose reserve capacities, and ultimately it leads to our deaths. I don't really know what you mean by "accepting" such things. I'd rather turn to a discussion of your second suggested subject, to one dealing with prevention of premature deterioration, which is much closer to my field of knowledge.

As inevitable as aging is, we need to compress the years of relative disability into as few as possible. In other words, we should refuse to let ourselves age too quickly. And how we can do that has been preached about on a daily basis. Some of the ways are so simple and so widely recognized that one wonders why they are not all routine parts of all our lives.

Don't smoke. Keep your weight at ideal levels. Exercise. Reduce salt intake. Watch cholesterol and fatty foods. Keep tabs on your blood pressure. Report symptoms of illness promptly. Certainly, merely adhering to these few rules would compress the aging years for most.

The natural consequences of aging are many. Skin wrinkles and dries (partially preventable by staying out of the sun as much as possible in younger years). Bones shrink (partially preventable by a life of exercise and adequate calcium in the diet). Our brains lose nerve cells, and we do not learn as fast as we once did. We make up for that with common sense developed from a lifetime of experience.

Now that I think of it, there aren't many things I'm going to accept as part of the "aging" process. Don't you either. Many of the aging symptoms are a result of letting our bodies rust from disuse, not disease.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Can you tell me the cause and cure of styes? I had never had one until a year ago, at age 58. Now I have one on my eye. Is there a vitamin I can take to prevent them from coming back? What is the solution? — F.M.

Styes are infections of the oil glands of the eyelids. Usually, time and the use of warm compresses bring a stye to a head and it goes away once it drains. There will be times when the stye has to be opened to allow it to drain completely. If yours has been lingering, you should see a doctor to have that done.

The cause of the infection is the staph germ, which can be a very stubborn critter. A recurring stye means that the germ is lurking around between infections. So you have to wash your lids carefully. And if the styes keep coming back, you will have to use an eye ointment to get rid of the germ. You can get those ointments only with a prescription from your doctor. Vitamins don't help.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Extension Members contribute to fund

During Thursday's meeting of the Elbow Extension Homemakers Club, Mrs. L.Z. Rhodes was nominated for delegate to the district meeting of Extension Homemakers Clubs to be held in Crane County in April.

The meeting was held in Mrs. Rhodes home. Members answered roll call with "One thing I would like to accomplish this year."

The club enrolled Ella Bridge as a new member. Members were assigned to work in the concession stand at the Howard County Stock Show Jan. 28 and 29.

Members contributed $1 each to the Texas Extension Homemakers Association Fund. Some of the money from this fund is used to maintain seven college scholarships for 4-H girls in Texas.

Members were reminded to save aluminum cans for the Howard County scholarship that all extension clubs in the county are working to provide.

The next meeting will be Jan. 20 in the home of Mrs. Herman Fowler.

Computers in class: Is it just a fad?

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

GLEN HEAD, N.Y. — The newest member of Freda Klopfer's 5th grade class at Glen Head Elementary School arrived after Thanksgiving and silently regaled her new friends in a favored corner.

Classmates promptly held a contest and decided to call their new friend "Super Sally." Ms. Klopfer counts herself as one of Sally's biggest admirers, and says she performs little miracles every day. With Sally's help, youngsters who could barely write sensible paragraphs are now sacrificing lunch hours and recess time to put out a class newspaper.

Super Sally's real name is Radio Shack TSR80 — a classroom computer, much like the thousands taking their places in schools across the country from kindergarten to college.

There are now about 96,000 such computers in 24,000 American public schools — 60 percent more than last year, and three times as many as two years ago. More than 60 percent of public school districts have at least one school using a computer for instruction, according to Market Data Retrieval, which keeps annual track of the educational computer market.

If the classroom computer revolution has brought excitement to schools like Glen Head Elementary, it has also bred confusion and unresolved questions for principals and school administrators — about the cost of buying and maintaining terminals, about training teachers in computer use, about the quality of computer courseware.

"I think a great many school boards haven't had long-term planning, and teachers haven't been involved enough. The rapidity with which this is taking hold is staggering for everyone," says Michael Edwards, an official of the National Education Association, the nation's largest teacher union with 1.7 million members.

The classroom computer revolution is still young, spreading swiftly in the last couple of years when technological advances lowered prices to levels that even some economically downtrodden schools can manage.

How it happens in each school district varies, of course. But the most common script seems to be an interested teacher, or parents who see computers on TV and in stores, have heard that careers of the future depend on computer know-how, and ask why their schools don't have any.

Indianapolis, for example, has only 250 microcomputers for its 56,000 pupils, but is in the process of ordering several thousand more.

"WE ANTICIPATED community pressure to do so," says Wally Hoffman, Indianapolis's director of secondary instruction. Sure enough, calls came from parents asking for more terminals.

"Our major thrust is to help the children of a major metropolitan area to move into the high-tech field, and help the local job market. We think that is a proper role for our schools," says Hoffman.

And in the North Shore School District on Long Island, which includes Glen Head, Assistant Superintendent Murray Hoffinger says Bill Wagner, head of math instruction in the district, provided the push to persuade the school board to buy microcomputers this year.

"I think the whole public is pro-technology," says Bill Halligan, assistant director of New York State's Center for Learning Technology. "No parent ever complains when computers come to a school."

Still, there is a long way to go before American education could be called computerized, since 48 million school children must share the 96,000 computers.

And there are already equity issues. Eighty percent of the richest, largest high schools have instructional computers. Among poorer schools, the rate falls to 40 percent, the Market Data Retrieval survey found.

But classroom computers are playing to mostly rave reviews like Ms. Klopfer's, who says, "the enthusiasm of my children is absolutely overwhelming."

There are other stories — of inner city youngsters at Walbrook High School in Baltimore so turned on by computer learning that they found a way to break into their school's computer room after school to do math problems.

Berendo Junior High School, in Los Angeles, was shaken by gang wars until it leased a dozen Control Data PLATO computers two years ago. Principal Rosalyn Heyman says pupils used to lie about their addresses so they wouldn't have to attend. Now they lie about their addresses so they can get in.

Educators still debate whether computers will actually increase learning. But proponents got a lift recently from an Educational Testing Service-sponsored study of computer assisted instruction in math, reading and language at four Los Angeles schools. Youngsters in grades 1-6 showed big standardized test gains in math with computer drilling, lesser gains in reading and language.

Still, at least some educators and even a handful of computer industry officials wonder if perhaps some schools are jumping on the electronic bandwagon without much thought to where it might be leading.

Says National School Board Association executive director Thomas Shannon, who describes himself as a computer enthusiast: "There is a herd instinct. Schools that get into this have a missionary enthusiasm that's a bit surprising."

"A 'KEEP-UP-with-the-Joneses' attitude is a big factor, perhaps below the surface, but never far away," says Hoffinger.

Even Education Secretary T.H. Bell, who has often chided schools to get in step with the computer revolution, expressed a gut feeling to some New York educators recently: "It's been predicted that by 1990 we'll no longer be publishing books. They will be stored in computers. That's yukky to me, the thought of wrapping yourself around some cathode ray tube. Can you imagine bookless schools? I can't."

Edward J. Lias, an official of Sperry Univac, actually advises in an unpublished paper that schools not buy computers at all — at least not for several years until both prices and technology have had a chance to settle down.

Lias and others in the education field list a number of concerns:

- Price trends. Microcomputer prices have plummeted in the last five years because of technology and fierce competition. If a school board waits, says Lias, it "may obtain three times as many keyboards for the students — next year."

- Philosophical doubts. In short, computers are tools of logic, but even logic has its limits. Can computers help create men and women with "a well-rounded view of life and culture?"

One computer program in use in some history classes, for example, simulates a wagon train trip in the 1840s. It asks the student to plan such a journey. If too much money is spent on clothes or food, the train will run out of money. But if not enough is spent, the travelers might not be able to survive.

Some see such computer history simulations as teaching logic, or perhaps economics, but not really history.

Others, like Paul Connolly, an English professor from Yeshiva University, have voiced fear that liberal arts, already an endangered species at schools which increasingly emphasize future employment, might be further crowded out by the sudden drive to computer education.

- Maintenance, and other extra costs. Schools spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to buy computer equipment, but frequently don't plan for the cost of maintenance, says James Dunn, director of Columbia University Teachers College's microcomputer center, which advises school districts on how to buy computers.

Other extras can also add up. Hoffinger says that after his district purchased 55 Commodore PET microcomputers for $35,000, they realized that they would have to spend several thousand dollars more for security systems.

- Finally, the quality of computer course materials — the "software," in computer language — which is so uneven that some say the very survival of computer instruction may depend on improving it.

This may not be a major problem for schools which are using computers to teach writing, or are mainly teaching "computer literacy," that is, getting children familiar with computers and programming.

Two consumer-backed groups — Consumers Union, publisher of Consumer Reports, and the Educational Products Information Exchange — are teaming up to provide schools with evaluations of 200 of the most commonly used educational computer software.

LET ME SQUEEZE THROUGH HERE — Big Spring High forward Jerald Wrightsil (24) flies up and over two Odessa High defenders for a first half basket. Watching him soar to the hoop are Willie Adams (23) and Howard Harris (43). Wrightsil had just eight points in the first half but scored 23 in the final two quarters for a game-high 31. Odessa won the district contest, however, 64-54.

Steers short on last gasp rally

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

At the 2:43 mark in the fourth quarter, Jerry Wrightsil was sprawled on his back at the north end of Steer Gym. He had taken the first charging foul of the game for Big Spring High and taking cue, the Steers were about to perform up to par for the first time Tuesday evening.

Wrightsil's defensive gem began a 16-2 Steer scoring spree — ticking just 1:23 off the scoreclock — but even the late surge couldn't strip away all of Odessa High's 22-point lead as the Bronchos claimed a 64-54 win in a key District 4-AAAAA game.

The victory boosts the Bronchos to a 3-0 mark in league play and drops the Steers two games behind the leaders from Odessa with a 1-2 ledger.

Playing much more aggressively than the home team, Odessa built double figure leads in the second half, peaking at 22 points when Charles Hunter scored with 3:20 to play. Trailing 58-36, Big Spring only then realized how desperate was its situation and how little time was left to get back in the game.

Wrightsil canned both his free shots after the charging call — the first time a Steer had hit two straight all night — and Big Spring revived the comeback engines. Oddly enough, it was a miss by Wrightsil with a minute to play that burst the rally. A basket then would have brought the Steers to within six points but instead, Odessa's Thomas Taylor scored the next four points to seal his team's important road victory.

"I'm glad to get that one out of the way," Broncho coach Joe Tubb said later, wiping perspiration off his brow. "We've been winning games by playing defense all year and tonight was no exception. But it's always tough to win one over here."

Across the floor, BSHS coach Archie Myers was giving his team a stern lecture on their poor performance before a rather large and vocal crowd. One of the points he stressed was not waiting until the ship was sinking before paddling to shore.

"We waited too long to play," he said gravely. "This is district play...we haven't realized that yet."

Myers was not impressed with his team's personality in the contest. "They wanted it more...we didn't want, they did. They played like district champions, we didn't. They don't have a lot of great shooters but they have a lot of good hustlers. They were aggressive and we weren't."

Hurting Big Spring the most when Odessa transformed a six-point halftime spread into as large as 22-point advantages was an acute lack of defense. Whether it was getting back downcourt after an offensive failure or fronting the big man under and around the hoop, the Steers failed miserably.

"We weren't getting back on defense, that was our main problem," forward Jinx Valenzuela, who failed to hit a field goal at the other end. Myers said his players "were a little too nice around the goal. When people get physical with us, the guys are used to having fouls called. They weren't tonight and we didn't adjust," he said.

Neither team looked exceptionally sharp in the first half but the Odessa defense was in control of the situation. Big Spring hit just six of 19 shots (32 per cent) and missed nine of 16 free throws. For the game, the Steers connected on just 14 of 39 field tries, their second straight game below the 50 per cent mark.

"Our defense early in the game was the difference," Tubb said. "There was no doubt the kids stayed after it. We've only allowed 60 points once this year."

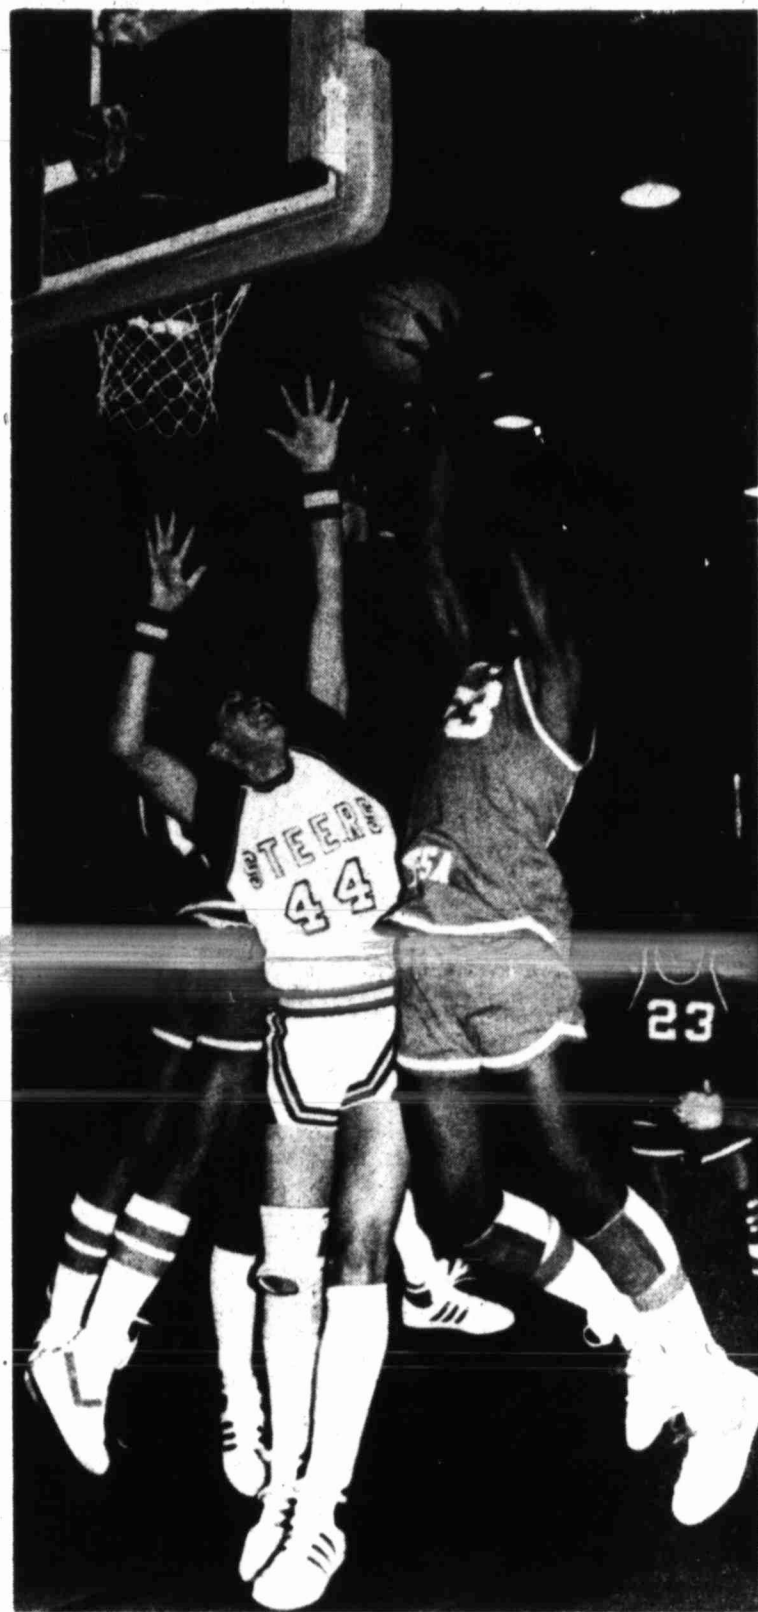

Odessa scored the first eight points of the second half to take a 14-point lead before Jerald Wrightsil scored at the 4:18 tick for Big Spring. Wrightsil — the leading scorer in 4-5A with a 25.0 average — had just eight points at halftime and struggled to get those.

The Steers cut the score to seven, 38-31, but Taylor turned a three-point play to make it a 10-point game entering the final period.

For over five minutes, the Bronchos trampled Big Spring. While the Steers were missing shots and losing the ball, the Bronchos were fast-breaking to easy baskets. Suddenly the game was blowout, but that was before Jerry Wrightsil took his charge.

And that's when the Wrightsils took control of the game. Jerry hit his free shots and bucket seconds later. Jerald dropped in three shots and four free throws as the Steers climbed to within eight points.

But Taylor's second three-point play with 52 seconds to go stopped the rally cold and Wrightsil's final field goal — and his 16th and

IN A REBOUND SANDWICH — Jinx Valenzuela (44) gets caught in the middle on this first half rebound. Odessa's Joe Terry (53) pulls down the Steer miss while Howard Harris (43) helps block out the Steer inside man. Odessa won, 64-54.

4-AAAAA Roundup

Trio keeps pace with OHS

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

Abilene High, Midland and San Angelo did their jobs Tuesday night but still didn't gain any ground on front-running Odessa High.

While the Eagles were downing pesky Midland Lee 66-53, Midland rallying past Cooper 59-58 and Central topping Permian 60-50 to raise their league records to 2-1, the first place Bronchos improved to 3-0 with a 10-point victory over Big Spring.

Here's how they went around the league Tuesday night.

Abilene 66, Lee 53
MIDLAND — The Eagles grabbed a six-point first quarter lead and never trailed in picking up their second straight victory.

AHS led by 12 at halftime but held just an eight-point margin after three periods. A solid fourth quarter ensured the victory as Mike Simmons and Les Hines combined for 47 points in the victory.

Sylvester Johnson had 12 and Tyrone Thurman 10 points for Lee.

upstart Coogs. Joe Melson had given Cooper the lead with two free throws moments before and CHS had possession of the ball when Greg Wilcox missed a layup. Midland rebounded and Pannell hit his game-winner.

Cooper had rallied to take the lead with a big third quarter.

Melson had 19 points for Cooper while Doug Hixson had 16 and Pannell 15 for Midland.

AP lauds 'The Great Gretzky'

By The Associated Press
Wayne Gretzky, who made 1982 his personal showcase by shattering nearly every individual scoring record in the National Hockey League, today was named The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year.

The 21-year-old center for the Edmonton Oilers dominated the balloting of 74 sports writers and sportscasters from across the nation, the same way he dominated the scoring race during the year. Gretzky received 39 first-place votes, easily outdistancing tennis player Jimmy Connors, who had eight.

Third place went to World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes with five votes, followed by marathoner Alberto Salazar and Milwaukee Brewers shortstop Robin Yount with four each, and Georgia running back Herschel Walker and sprinter-long jumper Carl Lewis with three apiece.

Last year's Male Athlete of the Year, tennis player John McEnroe, received one vote this year.

"To win an award with all the great athletes in the world, the United States and Canada, well, it's a real honor to be selected," said Gretzky. "I think any time you win an award, it's always a tremendous honor, for yourself and your team."

For Gretzky, it seemed nothing was impossible, that no offensive record unattainable, in 1982.

He scored 92 goals, 26 more than anyone had ever managed in one season. His 120 assists broke his own record by 11 and his 212 points were 48 more than he collected the previous year. He won the scoring title by an astounding 65 points.

On his way to those records, Gretzky scored 50 goals in the first 39 games of the 1981-82 season, obliterating the record of 50-in-50 set by Maurice Richard and tied by Mike Bossy. He also had 10 games with at least three goals, averaged 1.5 goals and 1.5 assists per game, and scored a point in all but eight games.

For those achievements, Gretzky was the first unanimous selection as NHL most valuable player.

As if to accentuate his greatness, Gretzky was scoring on a pace equal to that of his record season when 1982 closed. He opened the 1982-83 campaign with a 30-game point-scoring streak for yet another NHL mark, and closed out the year holding 27 NHL records.

"I feel very fortunate to have accomplished so much so early in my career," said Gretzky. "I'm playing in an era that suits my style best. When I broke in at 18 or 19, I listened to the older guys who had been around. That's helped me."

The selection of Gretzky as Athlete of the Year marked the second time in the past three years that the award went to a hockey player — or players.

In 1980, the United States Olympic hockey team, which thrilled the nation by upsetting the powerful Soviet squad on its way to the gold medal, was the recipient of the honor.

Those are the only two occasions in the 51-year history of the award that it has gone to hockey.

Connors, the runner-up for the award, made a triumphant return to the top of the tennis world by winning Wimbledon and the U.S. Open. Holmes defended his heavyweight title twice, beating Gerry Cooney and Randy Cobb.

Salazar won the Boston and New York City marathons, the latter for the third straight year, and set American records for the 5,000- and 10,000-meter races.

Yount was voted Most Valuable Player in the American league after leading the Brewers to the AL pennant.

Walker led Georgia to an unbeaten regular season and won the Heisman Trophy. Lewis soared 28 feet, 9 inches, the second longest jump in history, and twice ran 100 meters in 10.00, equalling the fastest time at sea level.

Catching acrobatics over for Swann

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steeler wide receiver Lynn Swann retired from the National Football League to join ABC-TV as a sports commentator, saying he didn't want to prolong his sports career.

"I never wanted to be one of those people who linger on," the 30-year-old wide receiver said Tuesday.

The nine-year Steeler veteran said he's been hired full-time by ABC Sports as a commentator for the United States Football League.

"I always said sports was America's greatest part-time job. This (broadcasting) is something I can do for a lifetime," Swann told reporters by telephone from Los Angeles.

"I promised myself I wouldn't play for more than five years. Then six came, then seven, then eight, then nine," Swann said. "I never thought of myself as really being a football player. Playing football was a fluke from the start."

Swann said he made the decision nine months ago, told Coach Chuck Noll two weeks ago and decided to wait until after the team's season ended to make a public announcement.

Last week, he denied reports of his retirement plans.

"I felt it would have been a distraction to myself and the team," he said.

He was Super Bowl X's Most Valuable Player in 1976 after making four receptions for a record 161 yards as Pittsburgh defeated Dallas 21-17.

Swann, a Southern California All-American, was a No. 1 choice in the Steelers' 1974 draft.

Swann entered the 1982 season as the Steeler career leader in receiving yardage and receiving touchdowns. He finished his career with 5,462 yards receiving.

"I always felt I could have done much better. But as I look back years from now, I'll probably be more excited about what I accomplished."

Swann's departure leaves 10 players on the Steeler roster of the 21 who played on all four Super Bowl teams.

Red ink engulfing states, too

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON — While President Reagan wrestles with the granddaddy of budget deficits, state governments are struggling in their own red ink, a product of recession compounded by cuts in federal aid.

That two-way stretch signals the end for the "new federalism" program the president proposed just a year ago as a way to begin reordering American government with a single, bold stroke.

State governors are not about to bargain to take over federal programs without federal revenues, and Washington doesn't have any money to offer them.

The National Governors' Association estimates that city and state governments lost about $17 billion in federal funds under each of Reagan's first two budgets. There are further cuts in prospect, if the administration can get Congress to make them.

The White House has been considering a reincarnation of "new federalism" that would lump as many as 30 to 40 federal aid programs together, then turn them over to state and local governments. The idea, as in the original version, is to send along federal revenue sources to cover the cost.

But with $200 billion federal deficits in prospect this year and next, Reagan needs the revenue in Washington. Indeed, in order to keep the deficit from soaring even higher, the administration already has had to turn some of the very tax sources the president had proposed turning over to the states as part of the federalism plan.

Reagan plans to propose another $30 billion to $33 billion worth of domestic spending cuts or cuts in the budget. He will present to Congress late this month. Even cuts that don't go directly to federal aid programs will have an impact on state and local budgets, because they leave it to states and cities to do things Washington isn't going to do.

So when the governors convene in Washington on Feb. 27 for their midwinter conference, they will be seeking to hold onto what they've got — and they certainly will not be looking to take over any more programs or expenses that now come out of the federal treasury.

It isn't a partisan matter. As Reagan's dilemma shows, budgets and deficits do not respect party or philosophy. No one in American politics denounced deficit spending more consistently than Reagan, and the deficits he now faces are more than three times as big as any recorded before him.

But any time the governors vote on a policy statement, they will vote Democratic. Thirty-four states are governed by Democrats now, only 16 by Republicans.

The governors association says state deficits totaling about $2 billion are in prospect for the current budget year. By law or tradition, states cannot end the year with budget deficits, so governors and legislatures are looking for solutions now.

The association survey covered 41 of the 50 states. Nine of them project big deficits and the list is likely to grow. Estimated revenues are down by nearly $8 billion. All but 12 of the states have Twenty-two of them have imposed new taxes, and that list is likely to grow, too.

Two years ago, the states wound up with budget surpluses totaling $4.8 billion. Those budget balances went down to $2.4

same economic situation that has compounded the federal deficit. Recession has cut revenues, while leading to pressure for increased spending.

Hall of Fame picks newtimers Brooks, Juan

YORK (AP) — Third baseman Brooks Robinson and pitcher Juan Marichal were elected to the Hall of Fame by the Baseball Writers Association of America today.

Robinson, one of the greatest defensive players in baseball history during his 23 years with the Baltimore Orioles, became only the 14th player elected in his first year of eligibility.

Named on more than 75 percent of the ballots returned by 10-year members of the BBWAA in its annual election, Robinson and Marichal will be inducted in Cooperstown, N.Y., shrine Aug. 1.

Robinson holds major league records for third basemen for games played (2,870), putouts (2,697), assists (6,205), chances (8,902), double plays (618) and fielding average (.971).

He won 16 Gold Gloves and led the league's third basemen in fielding percentage 11 times. He was named to 18 All-Star teams and was the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1964. For his career, he batted .267 with 268 home runs, 1,357 runs batted in and 2,848 hits.

Robinson is only the sixth third baseman elected to the Hall of Fame and only the third selected by the BBWAA. The others were Eddie Mathews and Pie Traynor, named by the writers, and Frank "Home Run" Baker, Jimmy Collins and Freddie Lindstrom, named by the oldtimers committee.

Marichal, a high-kicking right-hander, won 243 games in 16 seasons, spending almost his entire career with the San Francisco Giants. He had a 2.89 earned run average and was a 20-game winner six times. Marichal twice led the National League in complete games and twice led in shutouts. He pitched a no-hitter against Houston on June 15, 1963.

A year ago, when the writers elected Frank Robinson and Hank Aaron to the Hall of Fame, Marichal fell just seven votes short of the three-quarters required for election.

The election of Robinson and Marichal pushed to 182 membership in the Hall of Fame.

Robinson received 344 votes of the 374 cast, and Marichal received 313. A total of 281 was required for election.

Slugger Harmon Killebrew, fifth on the all-time home run list with 573 for his career, finished third in the voting with 269 votes — 12 short of the required number.

Shortstop Luis Aparicio was fourth with 252, followed by pitchers Hoyt Wilhelm with 243 and Don Drysdale with 242.

Gil Hodges, in his last year on the writers' ballot, finished seventh with 237.

The other players to win election to the Hall of Fame in their first year of eligibility were Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Bob Feller, Jackie Robinson, Sandy Koufax, Ernie Banks, Willie Mays, Warren Spahn, Mickey Mantle, Al Kaline, Bob Gibson, Aaron and Frank Robinson.

Reunited Billy in pinstripes, George the boss

NEW YORK (AP) — Alfred Manuel "Billy" Martin and George M. Steinbrenner III, two of baseball's most celebrated antagonists, are friends — again.

And that can mean only one thing. Billy Martin is manager of the New York Yankees — again.

Bullied Billy became only the fourth man to manage the same major league team more than twice and Steinbrenner had made his 10th managerial change since buying the club 10 years ago this month.

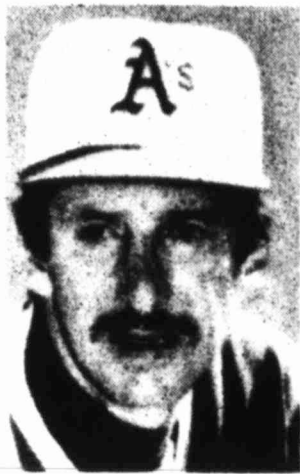

It also was Steinbrenner's fourth change of leadership in a year. Bob Lemon started the 1982 season for New York but was replaced by Gene Michael in April. Michael, in turn, was replaced by Clyde King in early August.

King will stay with the club as a top adviser to Steinbrenner. Contacted at his Goldsboro, N.C., home, King said the Yankee boss "wants me to be upstairs with him to make decisions and evaluations. Not ordinary scouting, but special work where I'll be close to him."

Under terms of his contract, Martin will receive about $500,000 per year for five years, making him the highest paid manager in major league history, sources close to both the Yankees and Martin said.

It's a tremendous contract — longterm and a lot of dollars, Martin said. "It's a regular contract. No ifs, ands or buts, I will get paid."

Martin's two earlier stints with the Yankees came on Aug. 1, 1975-July 24, 1978 and June 18, 1979-Oct. 29, 1979. He was forced to resign the first time when he and outfielder Reggie Jackson and Steinbrenner: "one's a born liar, the other's convicted."

Assault charges leveled at Ayala

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — Boxer Tony Ayala Jr., accused of sexually assaulting a woman who lived in his West Paterson apartment complex, pleaded innocent to the charges at his arraignment Wednesday.

Standing with his arms folded in front of him, the 19-year-old fighter stared at the ground as Superior Court Judge Amos C. Saunders set March 28 as his trial date.

Ayala, the World Boxing Association's top-ranked junior middleweight contender, will remain in the Passaic County Jail here in lieu of $50,000 bail. He has been behind bars since Jan. 1, hours after the alleged assault on the woman.

Ayala's attorney, William J. DeMarco of Totowa, said the boxer has not posted bail here because authorities in Texas, where he faces other legal problems, have asked that he be detained.

He was indicted by a Passaic County grand jury Monday on charges of burglary, aggravated assault, aggravated sexual assault, making a threat to kill, making a terroristic threat and two counts of possession of a weapon for unlawful purposes.

The junior middleweight contender is serving 10 years probation after pleading guilty to an assault charge in Texas.

Ayala pleaded guilty to assaulting an 18-year-old woman on Dec. 23, 1978, in San Antonio, Texas. He was sentenced to 10 years in prison but a judge granted probation after the Ayala family reached a $40,000 restitution agreement with the woman's family.

In the Texas incident, police said Ayala ruptured the woman's bladder in a rape attempt in the women's restroom of a drive-in theater.

The boxer moved to West Paterson to train for an expected title bout this spring against World Boxing Association champion Davey Moore.

Sam Millsap, district attorney of Bexar County, Texas, where San Antonio is located, has said he wants the boxer returned to that state to serve 10 years in prison. The district attorney alleges Ayala violated his probation.

But Ayala has hired a Texas state legislator as his attorney, a move that could delay until July Millsap's attempt to bring the boxer back for a probation revocation hearing.

"Justice in the Ayala case will be delayed," Bexar County District Attorney Sam Millsap said last Friday.

Salad, cookie recipes are like store-bought favorites

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Famous food stores in large cities all over the country now specialize in take-out dishes — often salads. Some acquaintances of mine decided to copycat one of these salads, sold in a San Francisco Bay Area fancy grocery shop, and sent me their recipe.

Although I have not tasted the original salad, the copycat version was such an enormous success at my house that I am passing along the recipe with great enthusiasm. It's definitely a salad to serve guests.

What makes it outstanding? The irresistible combination of wild rice and pecans plus the sweetness that golden raisins add. Ham and scallions go into the salad, too, and an oil-and-vinegar dressing perfects it.

WILD RICE AND RAISIN SALAD
1/2 cup wild rice
1/2 cup (20 large) pecan halves
1/2 pound lean ham
3/4 cup golden raisins, soaked in hot water and drained

1/2 cup thinly sliced scallions
1/4 cup olive oil
1/4 cup rice wine vinegar
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Lettuce cups
In a 3-quart saucepot, generously cover the rice with water; turn into a strainer to drain; repeat several times to wash the rice thoroughly. Return rice to saucepot and add 2 quarts water. Bring to a boil; cover and boil gently, without stirring, until tender and each grain has opened — 40 to 50 minutes. Have extra boiling water on hand to add toward the end of the cooking so that the rice is covered with boiling water. Rinse under hot running water, draining well.

In a small shallow baking pan, spread pecan halves in a single layer; bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until toasted — 10 minutes.

Slice ham into 1/8- to 1/4-inch wide and 1-inch long strips. In a large bowl, stir together rice, ham, raisins and scallions.

In a small bowl whisk together olive oil, vinegar and pepper. Pour over rice mixture; toss. Cover and chill. At serving time, turn into lettuce cups; garnish with pecans.

Makes 6 servings.

The Hazelnut Cookies you can buy in stores are absolutely delicious too, and I've had them copycat-ed, guided by the ingredients listed on the bag. I think you'll approve the homemade version.

HAZELNUT COOKIES (Copycat Version)
1 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 cup cornstarch
1/4 cup nonfat dry milk powder
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup (4 1/2 to 5 ounces) whole shelled hazelnuts, finely chopped (about 1 1/4 cups), see Note
1/4-pound stick butter, at room temperature or cut into 8 pats

1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 large egg
On wax paper or in a medium bowl, thoroughly stir together flour, cornstarch, milk powder, baking soda, cream of tartar and salt. Stir in hazelnuts.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, at medium speed, cream butter, sugar and vanilla; add egg and beat until blended. At low speed gradually beat in flour mixture until blended. Shape dough into a ball. Cover; refrigerate until firm enough to roll — usually 2 hours.

On a pastry cloth with a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll 1/4 of the dough at a time (keep remainder refrigerated) to 1/8-inch (generous) thickness. With a 1 1/4-inch cookie cutter cut into rounds. Place about 1 inch apart on ungreased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until bottoms are golden brown — 5 to 7 minutes. With a wide metal spatula remove to wire racks. Cool completely. Store in a tightly-covered container.

Makes 5 to 6 dozen.
Note: The nuts should be chopped so that some of them are very fine and some the size of rice grains. You can use a hand-operated rotary grater that does not grate uniformly, a food processor or a sharp knife. If any of the pieces are larger than rice grains, chop them by hand with a sharp knife so they are that size.

'Child of nature' tries to return rewards

EDITOR'S NOTE — "The wonder of the world, the beauty and the power, the shapes of things..." This sense of nature has pervaded the life of Mardy Murie, a child of the wilderness. Now 80, she is fighting to preserve that beauty, that power.

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

MOOSE, Wyo. — In a mellow log cabin, beside the rippling waters of the Snake River, in the shadow of the majestic Teton mountains, behind a curtain of quaking aspens, lives one of America's national treasures.

She is a woman governed by curiosity, a mother of this nation's conservation movement, a scholar and a cookie baker, a confidante of congressmen and a connoisseur of swimming holes, a magnet for youth and an example of aging grace.

Mardy Murie is 80 years old. She has outlived her famous biologist husband, Olaus Murie, by two decades. She says she misses her companion of 36 years every waking moment, and often in her dreams.

Since his death in 1963, she has joined in the battles to save America's dwindling wilderness. Often she has stood alone.

"To live a full life, you must have something beyond your household, beyond your family, to broaden your existence," says Margaret E. Murie, widow, mother of three, grandmother of 10, great-grandmother of two.

A simple cabinet in her dining room provides testimony to her involvement in worldly affairs far removed from her warm, inviting home. There's her honorary Ranger certificate from the National Park Service. Two National Audubon Society medals grace the case, one for her and one for Olaus. There's a copy of the Alaska Lands Bill, autographed by President Jimmy Carter. An Izaak Walton Award and John Muir Award offer further evidence of the Muries' dedication to preservation of the environment.

Her books and articles have been read by three generations, and through her support of the Teton Science School, she is working to influence another generation to respect and care for the outdoors. She also serves on the council of the Wilderness Society, which her husband led first as a director and later as its president. Throughout his 17-year affiliation with the society, Mrs. Murie served him as secretary.

Now she spends more than half her time giving speeches on behalf of conservation causes. The demand for her presence continually surprises her. In a talk to a group of national park superintendents, she told them:

"I was a little shocked when I looked on your program and saw that I had suddenly become a philosopher... I think most of my philosophy could be expressed in a very few words that were found on an old tombstone in Cumberland, England. Olaus put them on a plaque... hanging on our mantelpiece:
"The wonder of the world, the beauty and the power, the shapes of things, their colours, lights and shades — these I saw. Look ye also while life lasts."

DURING THE three-month trip the couple had its first separation — Olaus left Mardy at camp while he roamed far away. He didn't return on time. When he finally did get back, his bride made a major decision — she resolved not to worry. She later wrote:

"That hour on the snowy mountainside was good for me. I came to terms with being a scientist's wife. Since then, in many camps, in many mountains, I have waited, and fed the children, and put them into their sleeping bags, and still, long past the normal hour, have kept busy — and waited."

So that is how they spent their life together. She the helpmate, always flexible, he the man whose family went everywhere.

In 1927, the Muries moved to Jackson Hole for good. In 1946, they bought 77 acres within the shadow of the Teton mountains and moved into the log cabin where Mrs. Murie now lives. She sold her land to the National Park Service in 1966, but retains a 25-year lease which, she says, "ought to be enough to see me through."

Although her closest neighbors are the animals of Grand Teton National Park, she has many friends in the little settlement of Moose and the nearby town of Jackson.

Hardly a day passes that someone doesn't drop by to visit. Frequently it's at 4 p.m., the afternoon tea time she scrupulously observes. There is always a plentiful supply of "cry babies," her special ginger cookies with drippy white icing.

Sitting in her comfortable armchair, her white hair neatly braided in a bun, her jewelry discreet and her clothes spotlessly pressed, Mrs. Murie takes obvious delight in the enthusiasm of guests who are decades younger than she.

"Most of my connections these days are with young people," she says. As she speaks, her strong profile appears in bas relief against the giant mountain of granite just beyond her living room window.

"As many of my contemporaries grew older, they seemed to get narrower and narrower in their views, and I couldn't talk to them anymore. I feel complimented that young people seem to seek me out."

THEY FLOCK to her. Foreign climbers, visiting dignitaries, environmental leaders, fifth graders from the science school.

The conversations always come around to nature, the environment, the future.

Some recent thoughts from Mardy Murie:

• "One of the things some people in the environmental movement need to learn is how to listen more and be less rigid. I say, 'Come, let us reason together.' I'm so grateful that much of Alaska has been saved. It was a cleansing thing. Alaska is a non-ending savings account that goes on forever."

• "If we saved every bit of wild country left in the United States right now it wouldn't be enough for future generations, because of the population increases."

• "We must work harder to create some nature in cities. Urban parks are very important. Sometimes that can be what saves people from despair. Suburbia is about the worst of all our American institutions."

In winter Mrs. Murie cross-country skis every day. "When I'm on skis I try to forget everything but what I'm seeing. I try to become a creature of nature."

Each morning she cooks a big breakfast on her faithful wood stove, then works on correspondence and publishing projects.

She loves to go out with her young friends for Mexican food, walks at least a half-mile in the summertime, and between June and September takes a daily dip in the cold waters of her favorite swimming hole, a quiet pool in the Snake River. "It's 1,550 steps from the cabin to the swimming hole, and half the fun is walking there."

Mardy Murie has only one regret in her long, adventuresome life.

"I wish I could have had more time with Olaus," she says, the clear gray eyes momentarily filming with tears. "I've been fortunate about everything else. I feel as though everything has been given to me. I don't know how anyone could have received more."

Just then a large bird flew into her front window, fooled by the mountains' reflection in the glass. It hit with a loud crash, then fell instantly dead of a broken neck. Mrs. Murie rushed to the porch and gently felt for its heart.

"He's gone," she says, stroking the soft feathers. Should it be buried? Tossed in the trash bin? Skinned for dinner?

"I'll take it over to the science school and it can be preserved for the children to learn from it," says the scientist's widow.

"Then its useful life will continue."

Ex-LBJ aide — Hard luck destroyed his climb

By PHILLIP SWANN
States News Service
WASHINGTON — Bobby Baker was money in the bank. At age 27, he was the top aide to Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson. At age 32, he was named secretary of the Senate. The "wheeler-dealer" seemed to be on his way to becoming Gov. Baker or Sen. Baker in his native South Carolina.

But the Capitol Hill golden boy suddenly developed the Midas Touch in reverse:

- In 1966, he was indicted on two counts each of larceny and income tax evasion, stemming from an alleged influence-peddling scheme. He had resigned as secretary of Senate three years earlier when reports of his troubles began to surface in the press. LBJ, who Baker describes as the "closest male friend I've ever had," did not talk to him for nine years.

- In 1967, he was convicted after a highly publicized three-week trial.

- In 1971, he began serving 16 months of a one-to-three-year jail sentence.

- In 1978, his 16-year-old son Lyndon Baines Johnson Baker was killed in an automobile accident.

- In 1982, he declared bankruptcy.

Baker stands in front of Capitol to pose for a picture. He looks tailor-made for the place. The thick mane of white hair. The government-issue, three-piece suit. The smooth and elegant manners. He could be easily mistaken for a senator.

But there is something wrong, something missing. LBJ is dead. Baker was involved in a scandal. He's but a footnote in the history books.

"The average person doesn't even know who I am," Baker said in a two-hour interview this week. "Even as notorious as I was."

Baker, however, says he doesn't miss it, the power and the fame.

"You have to face reality," he says. "You must be strong enough intellectually to face reality."

Baker is unemployed. Bankrupt. He spends most of his waking hours on laborious court struggles — his bankruptcy disposition and his "one in a million" gamble to get his 1967 conviction overturned.

"I am in limbo," Baker says. "No one wants a convicted felon telling them how to run a business... I mean, I know how to make money. I know how to spend it."

"But what difference does it make when you die," he continues. "I've got maybe 16 years left. That's less than three Senate terms."

Baker, whose life has spanned nine Senate terms (he's 54), is told that this doesn't sound like the famous "wheeler-dealer" of past years.

"When you lose somebody like your son, you take one day at a time," Baker replies.

So it may seem that Baker has given up. But not Bobby Baker. He's convinced that he will prove to the world that he was innocent. Using the Freedom of Information Act, he has obtained hundreds of documents from the FBI and the IRS that he says show the government withheld evidence in his 1967 trial.

Baker was convicted of keeping nearly $100,000 in campaign contributions that were earmarked for former Oklahoma Sen.

Robert Kerr. He has submitted an internal FBI memo that says Kerr may have received the funds.

"It keeps life interesting for me," Baker says. "I just want to set the record straight... I'm too dumb to be afraid."

"Listen, I've tried every day of my life to comply with the rules," he says. "I'm a law-and-order guy."

Baker admits that he doesn't have much of a chance. The case is so old and forgotten that the U.S. District Court in Washington has shipped the legal papers to a warehouse in nearby Maryland.

"I know I'm innocent," he says. "I know I'm right. That's what matters... They're all still convinced that I've got loot stashed away." He pauses. "I wish it was true."

The bankruptcy has put Baker's financial plans on hold. A few years ago, he merged his North Carolina motel-restaurant with a New York company. The deal was a disaster, and Baker has filed a $70 million lawsuit against his former partner, charging that he was stealing funds from the company.

Despite his financial troubles, Baker still has a zest for life. He jokes about the old days and he still has the ability to tease the public with a good "inside" story.

• Baker says FBIABSCAM informant Melvin Weinberg once asked a Baker acquaintance if the former LBJ aide would help front a "$3 million heroin deal." This was shortly before the FBI began its sting operation in which several congressmen took cash payments from undercover agents. Weinberg served as the middleman in the operation.

"I don't even know what heroin looks like," Baker says, adding that he quickly dismissed the plan. He says Weinberg wanted to show the FBI that he could bring in the "big fish."

• He was not surprised that LBJ stopped talking to him after he was indicted. "I knew Johnson's temper-ment," Baker says. "When a friend had troubles, he was a runner."

• Oklahoma Sen. Kerr, who Baker worked for before joining Johnson's staff, actually wrote the tax legislation in the House and Senate. "Kerr owned (Ways and Means Committee Chairman) Wilbur Mills," Baker says, smiling. "When I say he owned him, I know what I'm talking about."

Houston Harte to be honored by Texas Historical Commission

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Houston Harte will receive the Texas Historical Commission's Texas Award for Historic Preservation Jan. 25, the commission announced Monday.
 Harte, a San Angelo native now living in San Antonio, will be cited for his financial support of professional archeological investigations on his family's ranchlands in Big Bend.
 That support, according to commission executive director Curtis Tunnell, has led to scientific scrutiny and the discovery of significant new information about the Trans-Pecos region for the period between 1000 B.C. to 1550 A.D.

Harte, chairman of the board of Harte-Hanks Communications, Inc., will receive the award from Louis Terrazas in San Antonio. Terrazas is a San Antonio businessman and a member of the historical commission's archeology committee.

Hispanics await political response

By JANET WARREN
 Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Hispanic vote blossomed as never before during the most recent election season. But whether it wilts on the vine or grows even larger may depend on how well officeholders and the economy nurture Hispanic needs.

That's according to a Hispanic political observer, a Hispanic leader and a study released last month by the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project. Voter registration efforts also will be a major factor in the Hispanic political future, they say.

"Mexican-American voters will stay registered and continue to vote at high rates if they think the political process is responsive to them," said Dr. Fred Cervantes, a Corpus Christi State University political science professor.

"If there is no responsiveness from the Democrats in power, then there's going to be a lot of disappointment and frustration which I think would be registered in a voter drop-off in the next election.

"There are going to be some real tests in those terms if we go very far with the New Federalism. There will be new pressure on the governor and (state government) leadership to respond to the needs of people served by federal programs."

The study estimated that 318,742 Hispanics voted in the battle between Democrat Mark White and incumbent Republican

Gov. Bill Clements, an 86 percent increase over that group's participation in the 1978 John Hill-Clements contest. The study was conducted by the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project, a private, nonprofit, nonpartisan organization dedicated to Mexican-American and American Indian voter registration in the Southwest and western states.

Research data came from 262 predominantly Mexican-American voting precincts in 36 counties representing about 80 percent of all Spanish-surnamed registered voters in the state.

In Nueces County, 92 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for White, compared with 42 percent of non-Hispanic voters, the study said.

In Tom Green County, 91 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for White, compared with 45 percent of the non-Hispanic voters, the study said.

In Val Verde County, 94 percent of Hispanic voters selected White, compared with 30 percent of non-Hispanic voters, the study said.

In Howard County, 89 percent of the Hispanic voters cast their ballots for White, compared with 53 percent of non-Hispanic voters, the study said.

The study shows that Clements' share of the Texas Hispanic vote fell from 19 percent in 1978 to 13 percent in November. But in actual numbers, Clements received more Hispanic support in 1982, garnering 41,942 votes, compared with the 33,212 he received in 1978.

Hispanic support for incumbent Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, in his race with Republican Jim Collins was even greater than it was for White. Some 89 percent of Hispanic voters supported Bentsen compared with 9.6 percent for Collins.

In Nueces County, 95 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for Bentsen, compared with 53 percent of the non-Hispanic voters.

In Tom Green County, 93 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for Bentsen, compared with 55 percent of the non-Hispanic voters.

In Val Verde County, 96 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for Bentsen, compared with 41 percent of non-Hispanic voters.

In Howard County, 93 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for Bentsen, compared with 60 percent of non-Hispanic voters.

The study revealed that Hispanics voted overwhelmingly Democratic, with votes ranging from 86 percent for White to 91 percent for Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower. Also, it attributed about half the growth in that group's voting strength to new voter registration. Some of the increase was credited to greater voter interest.

"Whether these trends continue in future elections may depend on a number of factors: additional voter registration efforts among Mexican Americans, the electorate's perception of the policies of those in office and the economic conditions in the state, among others."

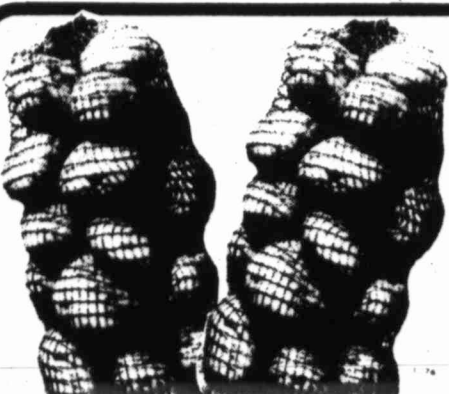

But the man who headed the study said the growth will continue but not so dramatically.

"It will be more and more difficult to increase it," said Bob Brischetto, research director. "But I think we can expect a continued increase in the number of Mexican-Americans voting. It all hinges on how interesting the candidates are to them in terms of addressing the issues and who the candidates are. If the economy continues to decline, we can probably expect the same sort of high turnout and high registrations next time."

Looking to 1984, a presidential election year, Ruben Bonilla, general counsel for and former national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, predicts Hispanics will produce a vigorous turnout and an even greater margin of Democratic victory if "Reaganomics" does not improve the economy.

He said Hispanics are not enticed by the Republican Party because "Republicans have failed because they have not convinced Hispanics of their concern for our human rights issues, good education, freedom to speak a language we feel comfortable with without abuse, good street lighting. We're not talking about appointments" to political posts.

'Poised for recovery'

Automakers hope new year drives away recession brakes

DETROIT (AP) — For the third straight year, domestic automakers are hoping a new year will bring the elusive car sales upturn they have been awaiting.

If the upturn occurs, 1983 could be a banner year for automaker profits, too, because the companies have streamlined operations and cut payrolls to lower breakeven points drastically.

The carmakers say they are poised for a recovery, with United Auto Workers union labor accords signed for all of them but Volkswagen of America Inc. and much of the costly, initial changeover completed to front-wheel-drive and fuel-efficient models.

A recovery would be welcome relief, considering that the four major automakers suffered $2.5 billion in losses from 1979 through 1981 as U.S. car sales plummeted.

The year 1982 really was no better, although cost-cutting and profitable subsidiaries pushed the automakers' earnings as a whole into the black for the first nine months of the year by $511.7 million.

Ford Motor Co. and American Motors Corp.

are in the red for 1982, while General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp. are in the black.

Also in 1982, Canadian Chrysler workers wrested an immediate $1.15 per hour pay raise from the automaker following a 38-day strike. At the same time, the United Auto Workers union settled with Chrysler for its U.S. workers, winning a 75 cent-per-hour pay boost.

The auto industry slump started early in 1979 when the major U.S. carmakers sold 8.3 million cars in the United States, down from the record 9.3 million of 1978. By 1980, the tally was down to 6.6 million and it fell to 6.2 million in 1981.

Layoffs in the industry, meanwhile, were at a record high in December, with more than 250,000 workers on indefinite furlough and another 25,000 on temporary layoffs.

The problems: Competition from the Japanese, rising prices on cars and gasoline, high interest rates, the soaring national unemployment rate and the recession.

The Japanese competition will likely continue to be muzzled in 1983, with most industry observers expecting a third year for import restrictions on the Japanese cars. The quotas limiting the Japanese to 1.68 million vehicles per year began in the spring of 1981 to help the domestic companies get back on their feet and in 1982 were extended for a second year.

Prices on cars have moderated, with an average 2 percent boost for 1983 models compared with 1982 cars. Price boosts for previous years had been at least 5 percent or 6 percent.

Gasoline prices actually have been falling, as have interest rates.

Now, automaker executives say, the keys to revival of the industry are a decline in the unemployment rate and an abating of consumer fear about the recession — neither of which is assured in 1983.

Economic stakes are roasting us

BY JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The word from those who claim to know is that if oil prices collapsed it wouldn't necessarily be good news.

This is so, as you've probably heard, because an economic collapse in oil exporting countries would almost certainly spread to other countries and soon threaten the international monetary system.

The word is also circulating that if you seek to protect U.S. industries from low-cost foreign competition you won't bolster the economy very much because foreigners will retaliate against American exports.

No matter which way you turn, it seems, there's trouble to be found. And if you don't believe so, then you haven't been listening to the "experts."

If you decline further loans to nations that can't even afford to pay the interest on their debts you'll just make matters worse, of course. The word from those who know is that you'll destroy the world economy in the process.

Tax policy is similarly stymied. You can't raise domestic taxes because that will run any possibility of recovery. But you can't let them remain where they are either because then the budget deficit will grow larger.

And monetary policy too. Those who know say that if interest rates get much lower they'll release inflationary demand and be self-defeating. But they also say you can't let them remain high or you'll thwart recovery.

You're familiar with defense policy. Some of those in the know say you can't spend so much on defense and expect to run a productive economy. And others in the know say if you cut there might not be any economy at all.

And you've heard about the fears in business circles, where executives worry that if they spend for expansion they might find themselves too big for the market, and if they don't they might miss an opportunity.

These are among the concerns that make up the big economic arguments today, and off which thousands of economists, consultants, investment letter writers and the like make a pretty fair living.

The list doesn't end there, of course. Relentlessly and endlessly it runs to infinity, eventually challenging you to determine whether the disputes involve twaddledum or tweedledee.

Those who study the mind have an insight into such behavior, explaining that when progress is thwarted the patient turns in on himself in search of answers, disregarding the possibility that the answer might lie in action.

Rather than test ideas, the patient worries his mind about nuances that bear less and less on realities, and eventually corners himself in a mental trap from which escape is almost impossible.

It is not, you'll agree, the sort of problem faced by the great entrepreneurs, past and present.

World War II ace becomes No. 2 at the Pentagon

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — W. Paul Thayer, chairman of the LTV Corp., is a World War II ace who relaxes by flying an old Corsair fighter plane. This week he takes over day-to-day operations at the Pentagon — and he already has his eye on his new employer's equipment. He'd like to fly the B1 bomber, the F-14 fighter, the F-15 ...

Thayer, 63, who takes over on Wednesday as deputy defense secretary, is not your basic bureaucrat.

A hard-charging corporate chief, Thayer knows volumes about military contracts after years of business with the Department of Defense. He has resigned from LTV, the Dallas-based concern that produces, among many products, the Navy's A-7 attack plane and the Army's Multiple Launch Rocket System.

Thayer raised eyebrows in November — when his name was being circulated as a successor to the retiring deputy defense secretary, Frank Carlucci — by saying defense spending should be scrutinized.

In a speech delivered in Youngstown, Ohio, Thayer said, "The time has come for Congress to get serious about controlling federal spending. The business community must pull together on this issue and urge Congress to leave no area of the budget untouched. That includes defense, the big entitlement programs and Social Security."

But he is a firm supporter of the administration. As chairman of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, he split the organization's top ranks last summer by supporting Reagan's $100 billion package of tax increases and other revenue-raising measures. Other chamber leaders opposed any substantial rise in taxes.

Associates describe Thayer as a man who likes to be presented with a set of facts, make a decision and quickly move on to the next item.

A near-par golfer who also likes to ride motorcycles, Thayer is best known as a pilot.

He enlisted in the Navy before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and spent much of the war flying carrier-based fighters. He is credited with shooting down six Japanese planes in the Pacific and says he got another enemy plane over North Africa "that I was never given credit for."

Thayer and his wife, Margery, have a daughter, Brynn, who is an actress on the daytime television soap opera "One Life to Live."

Thayer, as deputy secretary of defense, will be the No. 2 man at the Pentagon. "I believe I'll be running it on a day-to-day basis," Thayer said in a telephone interview from Dallas. "... I expect to act much as a (corporate) chief executive officer," while Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger serves as "chairman of the board."

Weinberger spends much of his time testifying on Capitol Hill, meeting at the White House to discuss policy and traveling to seek public support for defense spending. The deputy secretary generally makes the day-to-day operating decisions.

Aside from the chance to "cap my career in a pretty important post," the new job offers a few perks that seem tailor-made for Thayer.

"I'm looking forward to getting into the new stable of planes," he said.

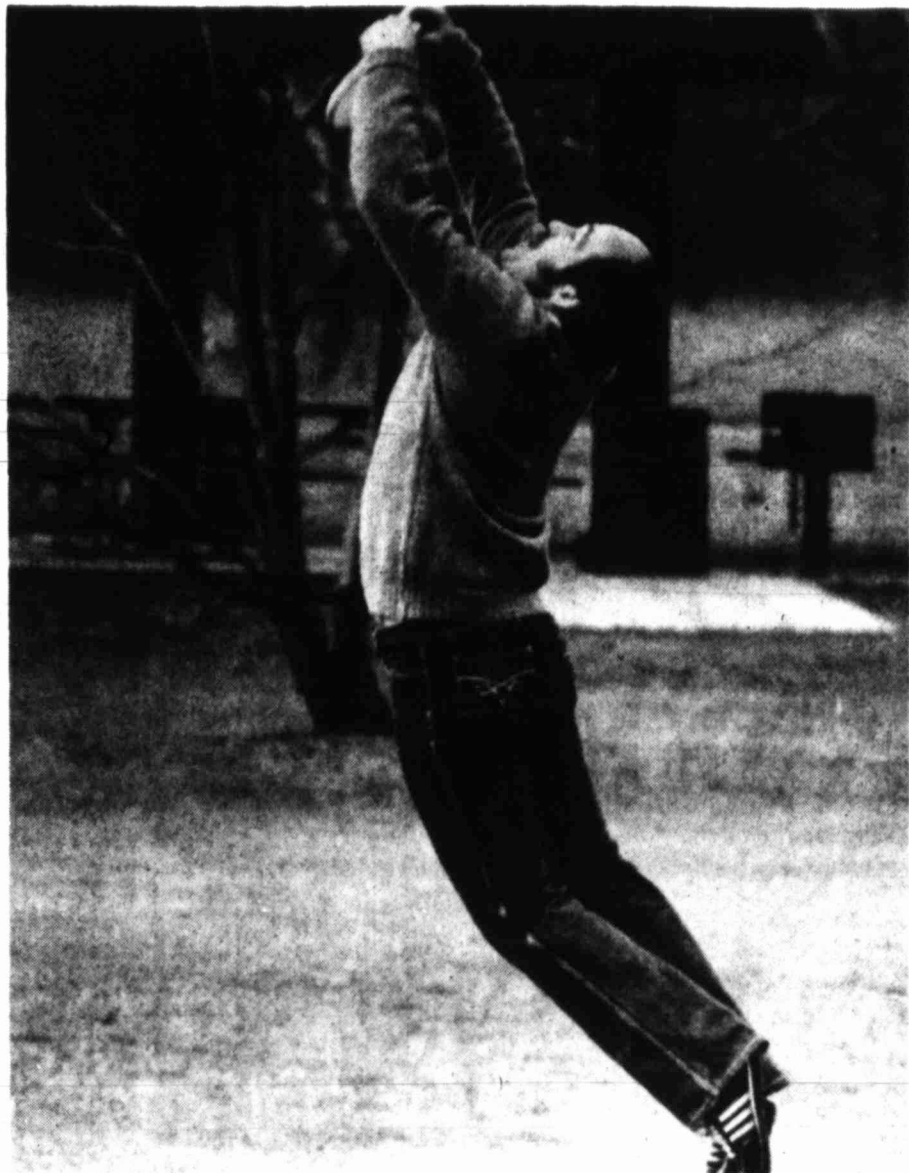

In the past few years, Thayer has spent some of his free time piloting a World War II-vintage Corsair fighter at air shows. Since it's owned by LTV, Thayer won't be able to use it anymore.

"I'll get some new planes at the Pentagon," he said, explaining that he wanted to fly the F-14, the Navy's main fighter, along with the F-15 and F-16, the top Air Force fighters, and the B-1 bomber.

Thayer also likes to pilot his company's jets, and once surprised LTV colleagues returning from a meeting by taking the controls of the company plane and putting it into a quick roll.

As head of a major aerospace contractor, Thayer is widely known and respected in Washington. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, called Thayer an "excellent choice" to join the administration.

Thayer, a native of Henryetta, Okla., is the son of an oilfield contractor.

BALMY WEATHER BRINGS OUT THE TOYS — A year ago, Craig Lewis might have been gliding along through Wildwood Metro Park in Toledo, Ohio on a sled over a half foot of snow. Instead, this January found Lewis leaping through the air to catch a flying disc as balmy temperatures bathed the region.

'Green thumb' designer can make money grow

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — David Madison has access to some heady inner sanctums in the nation's corporate capital: Allegheny International Inc.'s office, inside Universal Metal & Chain Co., behind Urban Development Corp.'s doors, and in Norton Simon Inc.'s Halston-Orlane Fragrances workplace.

Madison, 31, is a "horticultural designer" and he provides, cares for and replaces plants, trees and flowers in commercial spaces.

Last year, his green thumb grossed him $120,000. And although he says his 6-year-old business is blooming, Madison, who is also a college instructor, never planned it that way.

He got his start when artist Lowell Nesbitt asked him to design plants, trees and flowers for his new New York home. That job took two years, four hours a day, Madison says.

Word of mouth did the rest. "I never got into this thinking I was going into a business," he says. "After a couple of years, later, I said, 'Hey, I can make a living out of this.'"

He says his corporate office business tripled in 1981 after doubling every year since he started. He also says he does a lot of work for the fashion, cosmetics and interior design industries.

Madison says he is very choosy about whose greenery he will tend.

"It's got to be a client with taste, and sufficient means, and who I like," he says. "Because I have a small operation," he adds, "it has got to be absolutely blue chip."

He considers himself an artist and says he offers companies "New York's panache." "I'm sure (Allegheny International) doesn't have an orchid in Pittsburgh," where that company is headquartered.

And he has very particular taste: "My specialties are my orchids, predominantly, and my minimal aesthetic in flower arranging. I love minimal look with flowers. I think flowers are so spectacular individually that they need a lot of negative space."

He adds: "I love strange flowers ... lots of Hawaiian and tropical things."

But, he says, "I won't walk into a space and try to impose my aesthetic. I will try to highlight what's already there, try to have a coexistence."

If there is a taste conflict with clients, "I do my best to work it out with them, and if it doesn't work out, there's a mutual parting of the ways."

Most of his commercial clients order weekly arrangements for reception areas and for presidents' suites, which average $50 each. He offers gift designs for about $45 and also rents his 900 orchids on a monthly basis for $35 to $75, depending on the size, type and age of each plant.

"Orchids are so hard to get, I want to hold on to them," Madison says. "Some are my own hybrids. They're sort of like my own children."

He also says orchid rentals are a good idea for clients because if there is a problem with a plant, he replaces it.

"I can save people a lot of money," he adds.

Cosden says worker cutbacks needed

COSDEN FORCED TO CUT BACK EMPLOYEES — Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. announced today a curtailment of petrochemical production would entail a reduction of 35 personnel at the oil refinery by Jan. 21. Officials say a special separation allowance will be offered to avoid layoffs.

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. said today a cutback in employees would be needed by Jan. 21 because of a recent curtailment in petrochemical production.

"We have to reduce the staff by 35 people," said Hood Barnwell, public relations manager of Cosden.

Barnwell said the reduction would have to come through either layoffs or employees leaving voluntarily through a special separation payment offer.

Layoffs may not be necessary "depending on the number of people who accept the separation allowance," Barnwell said. The allowance amounts to a lump sum payment based on an employee's years of service and earnings, he said.

"We want to give folks the opportunity to use the separation allowance," Barnwell said.

Cosden used an incentive early retirement program in March of 1982 to reduce personnel by 103 to avoid layoffs. Barnwell said the separation allowance was not like the incentive program, although in both instances the company was trying to avoid laying off employees.

"We'll know by the close of the day Friday, Jan. 21 if we're going to have layoffs," Barnwell said.

The cutback in personnel was caused by the shutdown of certain chemical units, Barnwell said. The maintenance force has to be reduced in line with overall curtailment of operations, he said.

In December, American Petrofina, the parent company of Cosden, announced a cutback of up to 98 employees at its Port Arthur refinery.

Coke cans calories

Local distributor enters diet derby

Diet Coke was unveiled yesterday in Big Spring with Coca-Cola officials calling the new soft drink "the most significant product" in the bottling company's history.

Diet Coke was introduced to take advantage of the burgeoning sugar-free drink boom, according to Raymond McDaniel, president of Texas Coca-Cola Bottling. He said diet drinks now account for 20 percent of all soft drinks sold — a figure expected to rise to 30 percent by 1990.

"The time and product is right," McDaniel said. "The market is changing and the sugar-free segment is growing. People are ready for a real sugar-free cola."

It is the first time the tradition-bound Coca-Cola Co. has extended its trademark on a new product, he said.

Accompanying Diet Coke's debut is a flood of promotional advertising aimed at television, radio and newspapers. The planned commercials are much like regular Coke advertisements with bright colors, actions and lively music.

With the heavy promotion and the theme "Diet Coke — Just for the taste of it," McDaniel said Coke believes the new product will soon be the second most popular drink right behind its big brother, Coca-Cola.

Marketed for men and women in the 18-49 age category, the Diet Coke design features the traditional red and white Coke colors reversed to create a light look, according to McDaniel. He said about 150 designs were looked at before the final packaging was approved.

The sugar-free drink should be hitting the stores about Jan. 17, according to McDaniel.

Police polish future brass

Big Spring city councilmen have authorized $2,250 to conduct management and supervisory tests within the police department.

Police Chief Rick Turner said Tuesday a two-day "assessment center process" would rank participants as potential leaders and identify strengths and weaknesses in each officer.

Turner is hiring Dr. Don Ellis, an independent management consultant, to organize the session and hire professionals from the behavioral science, management, criminal justice and other fields. The examiners will test about 18 people Jan. 22-23 for sergeant and lieutenant positions.

The program will be financed from Turner's training budget.

"You have to have strong managers to have a professional police department," Turner said. "Hopefully we'll see a very marked improvement in our management staff if we can get our horses going in the same direction. Hopefully it will solve some problems we've been having."

San Angelo couple faces drug charges

COLORADO CITY (SC) — A San Angelo man and woman were arrested late last week by Mitchell County authorities on charges of delivering marijuana.

Olga L. Suniga, 30, and Juan B. Losoya, 29, have been charged with delivery of over five pounds and under 50 pounds of marijuana, Sheriff Wendell Bryant said. Both have been released on $15,000 bond set by Peace Justice Charles Watlington.

"The DPS had been working the case and with backup from the sheriff's department arrested the pair in Mitchell County where they had made the deal," Bryant said.

Farmer harvests local award

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Skeet Dunn has been named the 1982 Conservation Farmer of the Year here, according to Van Mills of the local Soil and Water Conservation District.

Dunn and his wife and two children, Kurt and Staci, have been farming in Mitchell County since 1970.

Dunn automatically is entered in the Region II Conservation Awards Program as a result of the local honor.

Record lamb entries expected in show

The Howard County Junior Livestock Show will have a record number of lamb entries as well as a full complement of other livestock, according to County Extension Agent Don Richardson.

The county show will be held Jan. 28 and 29 at the county fair barn.

Richardson said 150 to 200 lambs were expected for the event. Other expected entries include 50 capons, 40 barrows and 30 steers, he added.

Weighing gets underway Thursday, Jan. 27 with the capons and hogs, Richardson said. No set time has been established, he said. Capon superintendent is Charles Phillips and Ronnie Wood is supervising the hogs.

The steer and lamb weigh-in will begin Friday, Jan. 28 at 1 p.m. Lynn Walling is the lamb superintendent and co-superintendents A.F. Lankford and Howard Armstrong will oversee the steers.

Competition will begin Jan. 28 at 3 p.m. with the capon show. The judge will be Rick Vestal from Lamesa. At 7 p.m., the hog competition will begin with Scotty Windham of Abernathy judging.

The lamb show will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 29 with Kyle Smith of Seminole judging. The steer show will follow at 1 p.m. with Joe Ed Wise of Santa Anna judging.

A barbecue is scheduled for 5 p.m. under the supervision of Charles Hays. The auction will follow at 6 p.m. Saturday with auctioneer Bill Stone. Ringmen will be county Commissioners David Barr and Paul Allen.

Teens arrested in baby's beating

COLORADO CITY (SC) — A 17-year-old girl and her 16-year-old male companion were arrested last weekend here on suspicion of "injury to a child" in connection with the beating of an infant, police said.

Police said the two were babysitting an 8-month-old child for a local man and his wife when the alleged beating of the infant occurred. The couple apparently struck the child to stop it from crying, police said.

The infant was taken to Root Memorial Hospital for treatment, police said.

The 17-year-old girl, reportedly a runaway from Arkansas, remains in jail, while the 16-year old boy has been released to juvenile authorities, police said.

Man taken in marijuana arrest

Police said they arrested 19-year-old David Arnulfo Garza of 507 Douglas last night on suspicion of possessing over 2 ounces of marijuana. Garza was arrested on the 800 block of West Fourth after police found a small bag with a green leafy substance inside his pocket, police reports said.

William B. Hodges told police someone stole 113 white thermal blankets worth $1,218 from the Big Spring State Hospital laundry room between 5 p.m. Dec. 31 and 8 a.m. Jan. 3.

Police arrested three men last night on suspicion of driving while intoxicated. Those arrested were Roy Billings, 36, no address available; James Lee Richards, 22, of Sandra Gale Apartments; and Elton Scott Franklin, 29, of 4009 Dixon.

James A. Reese told police a person who had been working for him stole $400 cash from The Other Place at 800 W. Fourth.

Robert Reagan of 804 Johnson told police that someone stole his 1972 Chevrolet yesterday from an alley behind his residence.

Jim Hayworth told police someone broke into Shade Western at 1733 Yale last night and burglarized three pool tables, a cigarette machine and a juke box. Hayworth estimated the loss at $200.

Two female juveniles were arrested yesterday on suspicion of shoplifting a book of matches from Furr's Super Market.

Police arrested 21-year-old Cathy Guzman of 1501 Stadium yesterday on a criminal mischief warrant.

LET ME SQUEEZE THROUGH HERE — Big Spring High forward Jerald Wrightsill (24) flies up and over two Odessa High defenders for a first half basket. Watching him soar to the hoop are Willie Adams (23) and Howard Harris (43). Wrightsill had just eight points in the first half but scored 23 in the final two quarters for a game-high 31. Odessa won the district contest, however, 64-54.

Extension Members contribute to fund

During Thursday's meeting of the Elbow Extension Homemakers Club, Mrs. L.Z. Rhodes was nominated for delegate to the district meeting of Extension Homemakers Clubs to be held in Crane County in April.

The meeting was held in Mrs. Rhodes home. Members answered roll call with "One thing I would like to accomplish this year."

The club enrolled Ella Bridge as a new member. Members were assigned to work in the concession stand at the Howard County Stock Show Jan. 28 and 29.

Members contributed $1 each to the Texas Extension Homemakers Association Fund. Some of the money from this fund is used to maintain seven college scholarships for 4-H girls in Texas.

Members were reminded to save aluminum cans for the Howard County scholarship that all extension clubs in the county are working to provide.

The next meeting will be Jan. 20 in the home of Mrs. Herman Fowler.

Dear Abby

Name-dropping son hurts parents' pride

DEAR ABBY: Our 25-year-old son, who is graduating from law school in a few months, is being married soon. His fiancée is a college graduate, and they are both intelligent adults.

Our son just informed us that he plans to take his fiancée's name rather than have her take his name. Needless to say, we are shocked. My husband feels that our son is disgracing our family and abandoning his heritage by doing such a thing. Our name is not difficult to spell or pronounce. It is Orlikoff. Hers is Reilly.

Our son explained that he may one day pursue a career in politics and Reilly would be better than Orlikoff because Orlikoff sounds Russian, and people would be more inclined to vote for a candidate named Reilly.

Abby, have you ever heard of a man taking his wife's name? My husband and I are so hurt over this we may not even attend the wedding. We love our son and don't want to alienate him. What should we do?
PROUD ORLIKOFFS

DEAR PROUD: Yes, I have heard of a man taking his wife's name. Please accept your son's decision with grace and attend his wedding. If you refuse, you will surely alienate him. I can understand your disappointment, but your son is an adult and free to make his own decisions.

DEAR ABBY: I have a part-time job delivering parcels to homes. Sometimes it takes a very long time to locate an address because half the houses on a street are not numbered anywhere that's visible from the street.

I keep wondering what would happen if some of these people needed the police, an ambulance or a fireman in a hurry.

I hope you think this is important enough to print.
D.H.

DEAR D.H.: I do. Readers, if your address cannot be easily read from the streets, you could lose more than a parcel!

DEAR ABBY: Hooray for you! Just keep telling people that there is no excuse for failing to write a thank-you note.

I have three children, ages 5, 8 and 10. My job as a parent is to teach my children good habits. When a gift arrives, we have a rule at our house. If it's something to wear, it is not worn until a thank-you note is written. If it's a toy, it may not be played with until a thank-you note is written. If it's a check or money, it may not be banked or spent until a thank-you note is written.

Children cannot be expected to know what they have not been taught.

 The Howard County sheriff's office is warning local churches that a woman is attempting a rent swindle in the area.
 The white female in question has already succeeded once in getting a church to pay her house rent, then getting the cash from her landlord after refusing to stay in the house. Other churches and landlords have been solicited for aid, the sheriff's office said.
 Contact local law enforcement officials if this subject contacts you for aid or rental.
 The sheriff's office is also seeking information in the theft of a pasture gate taken today. The five-bar 10-foot gate is orange and was taken from what is known as the Morita curve, nine miles west of Interstate 20.

Houston Harte to be honored by Texas Historical Commission

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Houston Harte will receive the Texas Historical Commission's Texas Award for Historic Preservation Jan. 25, the commission announced Monday.
Harte, a San Angelo native now living in San Antonio, will be cited for his financial support of professional archeological investigations on his family's ranchlands in Big Bend.
That support, according to commission executive director Curtis Tunnell, has led to scientific scrutiny and the discovery of significant new information about the Trans-Pecos region for the period between 1000 B.C. to 1550 A.D.

Harte, chairman of the board of Harte-Hanks Communications, Inc., will receive the award from Louis Terrazas in San Antonio. Terrazas is a San Antonio businessman and a member of the historical commission's archeology committee.

Hispanics await political response

By JANET WARREN
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Hispanic vote blossomed as never before during the most recent election season. But whether it wilts on the vine or grows even larger may depend on how well officeholders and the economy nurture Hispanic needs.

That's according to a Hispanic political observer, a Hispanic leader and a study released last month by the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project. Voter registration efforts also will be a major factor in the Hispanic political future, they say.

"Mexican-American voters will stay registered and continue to vote at high rates if they think the political process is responsive to them," said Dr. Fred Cervantes, a Corpus Christi State University political science professor. "If there is no responsiveness from the Democrats in power, then there's going to be a lot of disappointment and frustration which I think would be registered in a voter drop-off in the next election.

"There are going to be some real tests in those terms if we go very far with the New Federalism. There will be new pressure on the governor and (state government) leadership to respond to the needs of people served by federal programs."

The study estimated that 318,742 Hispanics voted in the battle between Democrat Mark White and incumbent Republican

Gov. Bill Clements, an 86 percent increase over that group's participation in the 1978 John Hill-Clements contest. The study was conducted by the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project, a private, nonprofit, nonpartisan organization dedicated to Mexican-American and American Indian voter registration in the Southwest and western states.

Research data came from 262 predominantly Mexican-American voting precincts in 36 counties representing about 80 percent of all Spanish-surnamed registered voters in the state.

In Nueces County, 92 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for White, compared with 42 percent of non-Hispanic voters, the study said.

In Tom Green County, 91 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for White, compared with 45 percent of the non-Hispanic voters, the study said.

In Val Verde County, 94 percent of Hispanic voters selected White, compared with 30 percent of non-Hispanic voters, the study said.

In Howard County, 89 percent of the Hispanic voters cast their ballots for White, compared with 53 percent of non-Hispanic voters, the study said.

The study shows that Clements' share of the Texas Hispanic vote fell from 19 percent in 1978 to 13 percent in November. But in actual numbers, Clements received more Hispanic support in 1982, garnering 41,942 votes, compared with the 33,212 he received in 1978.

Hispanic support for incumbent Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, in his race with Republican Jim Collins was even greater than it was for White. Some 89 percent of Hispanic voters supported Bentsen compared with 9.6 percent for Collins.

In Nueces County, 95 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for Bentsen, compared with 53 percent of the non-Hispanic voters.

In Tom Green County, 93 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for Bentsen, compared with 55 percent of the non-Hispanic voters.

In Val Verde County, 96 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for Bentsen, compared with 41 percent of non-Hispanic voters.

In Howard County, 93 percent of Hispanic voters cast their ballots for Bentsen, compared with 60 percent of non-Hispanic voters.

The study revealed that Hispanics voted overwhelmingly Democratic, with votes ranging from 86 percent for White to 91 percent for Land Commissioner Garry Mauro and Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower. Also, it attributed about half the growth in that group's voting strength to new voter registration. Some of the increase was credited to greater voter interest.

"Whether these trends continue in future elections may depend on a number of factors: additional voter registration efforts among Mexican-Americans, the electorate's perception of the policies of those in office and the economic conditions in the state, among others."

But the man who headed the study said the growth will continue but not so dramatically.

"It will be more and more difficult to increase it," said Bob Brischetto, research director. "But I think we can expect a continued increase in the number of Mexican-Americans voting. It all hinges on how interesting the candidates are to them in terms of addressing the issues and who the candidates are. If the economy continues to decline, we can probably expect the same sort of high turnout and high registrations next time."

Looking to 1984, a presidential election year, Ruben Bonilla, general counsel for and former national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens, predicts Hispanics will produce a vigorous turnout and an even greater margin of Democratic victory if "Reaganomics" does not improve the economy.

He said Hispanics are not enticed by the Republican Party because "Republicans have failed because they have not convinced Hispanics of their concern for our human rights issues, good education, freedom to speak a language we feel comfortable with without abuse, good street lighting. We're not talking about appointments" to political posts.

Each ticket contains 4 markers.

WINNERS' JACKPOT BINGO Series No. 479 is available only at 148 Safeway locations in North Central and North Eastern Texas and 3 stores in Shreveport and Bossier City, Louisiana.
