Winter storm death toll hits 28

By The Associated Press
A violent storm hit the Pacific Coast with 70-mph winds and rain today, forcing dozens of families to flee their homes, blocking highways and knocking out the power to thousands of people.
Storms were blamed for at eight deaths Sunday and a total of 28 since Thursday in the rainstorms and freezing rain that struck from Alabama and the Carolinas to Illinois and New Hampshire.
An ice storm and heavy fog in New England and parts of New York even had sand trucks skidding off the highway and many residents decided to extend their weekend today.

Up to 3 feet of fresh snow was expected today in the Sierra Nevada, and forecasters in California said the storm was the first of three expected to hit before the week is out. About 16 inches of snow fell during the night on Interstate 80 at Donner Pass and three other major roads across the Sierra were closed, including California Highway 70 through Feather River Canyon, which was blocked by a snowslide.

Surf up to 15 feet high was pounding the beaches of Southern California.
Residents of Key West, Fla., were drying out from a weekend deluge of 12 inches of rain that one police dispatcher described as "like a hurricane."

Winter storm warnings were posted in northeastern California and the Lake Tahoe basin of western Nevada. Snow also was scattered from northeast Montana across North Dakota, northern Minnesota and the upper Great Lakes region.

Al Arey, a spokesman for the Vermont highway department, said today the state's heavy highway trucks were sliding off the road even with chains on the tires.

"It's been a real merry-go-round," he said. "We get a route done and we have to start all over again."
More than 80 people evacuated their homes in Northern California today, about 50 from an apartment complex near San Jose. One vacant house tumbled down a hillside, and washouts affected about 5,000 commuters on the Southern Pacific Railroad.

At 80, Mr. Charlie has wealth of oilfield memories

By CLIFF COAN
Staff Writer

"Working in the oil field, you didn't think much about birthdays or holidays or anything," A.L. (Charlie) Holley said, "you just went ahead working."
Chances are he spent some time thinking about his birthday Saturday, though.
Holley's not working in the oil field anymore — he quit doing that in 1950 to become an independent operator of his leases. And in 1975, he "really" retired, letting his son-in-law work his leases.

He deserved a rest — Mr. Charlie, as some of his friends call him, turned 80 Saturday.

Born on a farm in Mitchell County in 1903, Holley helped his family scratch a living from the reluctant West Texas soil until he turned 21.

"The oilfield wages looked real good to me," he said. "I'd never made more than a dollar a day working on a farm, and I made $6 a day in the oilfield."

His first job was firing the boilers on a cable-tool rig drilling Moore No. 1 south of Ira.

"We worked a 12-hour shift," he said, "and I was on the morning tour from midnight until noon." Holley gives "tour" the oilfield pronunciation — "tower."

That was a long workday. "Yeah," he said, "but it was pretty busy. You had to look after that boiler and keep the steam up. If you let the steam get low, that driller would tell you about it."

VETERAN OILMAN — A.L. (Charlie) Holley spent most of his 80 years in the oil patch. Mr. Charlie, as many of his friends call the Big Spring resident, celebrated his 80th birthday Saturday.

His tone tells you that drillers don't believe in gentle reminders.
Holley then went to Olney as a roughneck on a steam rotary rig.

There, the crew often washed their work clothes in a "steam box," he said, a homemade washing machine which used steam from the boilers to clean the mud and dirt off the clothes.

In 1925, he came to the Big Spring area to rig up a rotary rig in the Forsan field. It was his first job as a driller. "I don't know how in the world we ever got a well drilled," he said, "but we did. Those fishtail bits would wear out real quick, so we spent a lot of time tripping out."

He went to Hobbs in 1928 to work for Eastland Oil, the company he would spend most of his working life with.

But the depression hit in 1929, and West Texas drilling slowed to a crawl. Holley went to the East Texas oil boom.

"I worked right on through the depression," he said. "Being experienced in the oil field and knowing a lot of people, I had no trouble finding work."

His depression-day salary was an astronomical $10 a day.

"We even bought a car in the depression," Lucy, his wife of 53 years, notes with pride.

But things weren't always good for them during the depression.

"Once in East Texas," Holley said, "I got a hot check after we were done with the well. We didn't get it completed, and I never did get any money for it."

When things looked better out west, he returned and worked as drilling superintendent for 22 years with Eastland Oil Co.

As drilling superintendent, Holley was responsible for wells sometimes as much as 500 miles apart. And the oil field could be dangerous.

"One time over at Monahans," he said, "we were living on the lease. At about 11 p.m., a rig all of the sudden blazed up. I went down to see what was going on, and I drove up beside the truck. There wasn't anybody around, but I saw there were about 300 quarts of nitroglycerine still on

City council meets Thursday; attorney to review LULAC suit

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

The Big Spring city council's regular meeting will not be held at its regular time this week.

The meeting has been rescheduled for Thursday at 6:30 p.m., apparently so council members may first consult with an Austin attorney about a lawsuit filed against the city last November.

Only two councilmen, Mayor Clyde Angel and Mayor Pro-tem Jack Y. Smith, are expected to attend the meeting.

The council has posted a notice of an executive session to be held at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday in the attorney's Austin office.

The meeting is closed to the public under Section 2, Subsection (e) of the Open Meetings Act which allows a governmental body to discuss legal matters in a closed session.

Councilmen hired the attorney — Walter Mizell, 1300 American Bank Tower, 221 W. Sixth in Austin — at their Dec. 14 regular meeting to review their position in a suit filed against them in behalf of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

The suit asks that the city be divided into single member districts because they claim the current by-place elections dilute minority voting strength.

The suit was filed by the Southwest Voter Registration Education Project in behalf of L.U.L.A.C. The project recently won a similar suit filed against the Lubbock city council.

Federal District Judge Halbert Woodward ruled in favor of the plaintiffs Jan. 20, declaring the city's at-large election system unconstitutional because it violates the 15th Amendment and the Voting Rights Act, according to a S.V.R.E.P. press release.

The release says the judge recommended two possible single-member district reapportionment plans. The first would divide the city into four districts, one which would be 47 percent Mexican American and 25 percent black.

The second plan divides Lubbock into six districts in which Mexican Americans would make up 50.6 percent of one district, and the other would be comprised of 72 percent blacks and Mexican Americans together.

State has not ruled on sewer rates

By CAROL DANIEL

At least two local radio stations carried news stories today saying the state attorney general issued an opinion that sewer revenue figures given city councilmen, during a closed meeting are an interoffice memo and thus not subject to public scrutiny.

However, the attorney general's office told the Herald today that there has been no formal opinion or ruling issued on the matter and that they have no record of a request for an opinion.

When the Herald phoned City Attorney Doyle Curtis to ask if he had requested an attorney general opinion, Curtis's secretary said the city attorney would release information only through City Manager Don Davis.

Davis said the city attorney requested an informal attorney general opinion Friday morning "to satisfy our own position."

Satellite tumbles into sea

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. ships and planes with radiation detection gear are looking for signs of a Soviet spy satellite that fell from orbit, showering some pieces into the Indian Ocean while leaving its nuclear fuel core still spinning toward a mid-February burn-up.

But an alert by the Federal Emergency Management Agency is over, called off 49 minutes after the main body of the out-of-control Soviet ocean surveillance satellite hurtled into the Earth's dense atmosphere Sunday at about 5:21 p.m. EST.

In a message to officials in all 50 states, the agency said "the public should be advised that protective action in connection with Cosmos 1402 are no longer necessary and thus the alert is over."

Emergency teams ready to fly to the scene of impact, should it have fallen within the United States, were disbanded.

Dr. Richard Wagner, a top Pentagon nuclear expert, said any radiation from metal fragments surviving the burn-out of the satellite would remain in the immediate area where they landed.

The contest was sponsored so that area people could show off their talent as amateur photographers.

College grads report continuing job worries

DALLAS (AP) — Scott Baker was an average student with above-average appearance attending a solid university — staple fare for jobs in business and industry when he graduated. But he didn't get hired.

Texas' December college graduates face of the tightest job markets in recent history, college placement counselors said. Top students with good grades are still finding jobs, they stress. But those with average grades, such as Baker, are worried.

"It's an employer's market," Baker said. "When a company needs only a few new employees they take only the top graduates. I know my grade-point average hurt me."

"It's anticlimactic to graduate and then not get a job, but eventually the economy will turn around and there will be a place for me. I was hoping I would be in demand."

Baker, of Fort Worth, graduated from North Texas State with a degree in marketing. He had a 2.5 grade-point average out of a possible four points.

Baker said prospective employers are hesitant to hire a "C" student when they can hire an "A" student.

"I guess if I had it to do over again, I would major in computer science," he said.

Universities throughout Texas are reporting drastic decreases in campus recruiting by companies and in the number of job offers.

"The demand for on-campus interviews is off 35 to 40 percent throughout the Southwest," said Bill Audas, of the Southwest Placement Association. "The decrease in the number of companies (recruiting on campus) has never been this dramatic. This fall has been difficult and spring looks equally bad."

Placement counselors said that even engineering and business graduates, traditionally in strong demand, are receiving fewer and less attractive job offers.

A recent College Placement Council survey showed that 12 percent fewer engineers will be hired in 1983, 4 percent fewer business graduates and 9 percent fewer liberal arts graduates.

But the results of the survey, reported in Sunday's editions of The Dallas Morning News, showed that there will be a 3 percent increase in the number of math and science majors hired.

Tony Franzolino, director of the University of Texas' Engineering Career Assistance Center, said that only 30 percent of the college's 90 petroleum and chemical engineers who graduated in December have jobs.

Water main to be shut off

Water service to consumers on Goliad street from Eighth to Tenth will be shut off tomorrow morning from 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon, said a water department spokesman.

The three-and-a-half-hour shut off will allow city workers to repair a water main break, the spokesman said.

The biggest thing they found out that truck was a measuring reel, and they found that 3/4 of a mile away."

But, looking back on nearly 50 years in the oil business, Holley said it was worth the risk and the labor.

"I enjoyed it," he said. "The oil field has been good to me. I've had good people to work for, and good people to work with."

Ask Holley how many wells he drilled in his career, and he'll just spread his work-hardened hands and shrug.

"I never did keep up with it," he said. "I was always busy drilling. I wouldn't even try to guess ... a bunch. If I guessed, people'd think I was exaggerating."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, said it is "awfully hard to know" whether the main part of Cosmos 1402, estimated to weigh about 8,000 pounds, had burned up entirely on re-entry.

The Pentagon said, "We do not know at this time whether any portion of the satellite reached the Earth's surface intact."

Colonel Robert O'Brien, a Pentagon spokesman, said U.S. observers on the British-owned island of Diego Garcia reported seeing a 40-second "burn" in the sky about six minutes before Cosmos 1402 hit the heavy friction of the atmosphere.

Apparently, the satellite burned red hot as it dropped toward the final stages of a space voyage which lasted nearly five months.

A Pentagon official pinpointed the re-entry at about 980 nautical miles (1,127 statute miles) southeast of Diego Garcia, where the United States maintains a naval base.

Gov. White has media savvy

AUSTIN — Sworn-in and tuned on...Mark White has lived in the Governor's Mansion less than a week, so it's a little early to rate his gubernatorial skills. But his talent for ensuring top media coverage, at least last week, was beyond reproach.

Take, for example, his symbolic gesture to open state government to the people by stripping a hastily procured chain from the wrought iron in front of his new home.

But the real capper may have come later that night when White and his wife, Linda Gale, took a calculated step out onto an inaugural ball dance floor at 10:01 p.m. That dance was beamed live to a host of Texas television viewers and, of course, was the top news story.

Explained Betsy Todd, an inaugural committee spokeswoman, "They wanted to be available to the news media as much as possible. They couldn't offer interviews to everybody."

OPEC meeting ends in 'failure'

Ministers fail to prop up oil prices

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer
GENEVA, Switzerland — OPEC oil ministers ended an emergency meeting today after failing to resolve any of the critical issues that threaten to force oil prices down and prolong a worldwide oil glut that has undermined the cartel's price-setting power.

"It's a complete failure," said Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani of Saudi Arabia.

"We couldn't agree on anything at all," said Mana Saeed Otaiba of the United Arab Emirates. "Everyone does what they want."

However, Iran's oil minister, Mohammad Gharazi, said he was not displeased with the meeting's outcome.

"Saudi Arabia has lost its major role in OPEC," Gharazi said. "This is enough for us."

The emergency meeting of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was convened to seek a compromise on the cartel's pricing and production levels in an attempt to support crude oil prices.

The prevailing OPEC base price is $34 a barrel, but some members are undercutting that price.

Failure of the meeting left open the possibility that Saudi Arabia, OPEC's leading producer, and its Persian Gulf allies would carry out previous threats to cut their oil prices unilaterally.

That could, in turn, prompt a downward spiral of oil prices throughout the world. Mexico and some other non-OPEC oil-producing countries are fearful of a price-cutting trend, which could force them to default on their huge foreign debt and possibly undermine the international financial system.

Some oil minister said there was agreement to lower OPEC's production ceiling by 1 million barrels a day to 17.5 million barrels — which is about the cartel's present level of output.

But Yamani and other ministers allied to Saudi Arabia said there was no agreement on any issue.

Mallam Yahaya Dikko, the Nigerian oil minister and OPEC president, said 11 of the cartel's member states had agreed to hold the cartel's daily production to 17.5 million barrels, but Saudi Arabia and Kuwait "withheld their consent."

Those countries contended that any production-sharing agreement would have to be contingent on Nigeria and other African countries raising the price of their oil to make Saudi oil more competitive.

Kuwaiti oil minister Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah said that if OPEC members which offer discounts in the base price continue to do so, Kuwait "definitely" will reduce its price and raise production.

"It is only natural to protect our own interest," he said.

Asked whether he thought that the Saudis would cut their price, Humberto Calderon Berti of Venezuela told reporters, "You'll have to ask Sheikh Yamani."

Yamani made no public statements about prices.

Many members have been flouting cartel policy, and threatening its unity, by exceeding production quotas and cutting prices to make up for slumping sales created by the worldwide recession and the international oil glut that preceded it.

The Saudis, the world's largest petroleum exporters, have hitherto adopted voluntary production cuts, while maintaining that their production was an issue of national sovereignty.

Iran, Saudi Arabia's chief rival on the production issue, reportedly has agreed to hold its production to 2.5 million barrels a day if the Saudis accept an official quota.

Iran claims to be producing 3.2 million barrels a day and industry sources say it has been undercutting prices to pay for the 28-month-old war with neighboring Iraq.

Saudi Arabia has been using some of its oil revenues to help Iraq in the drawn-out border war.

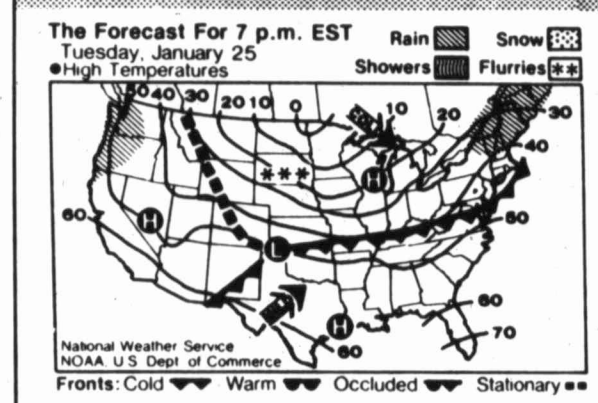

In exchange for adopting a production lid, the Saudis are demanding a $2 a barrel reduction in the price of their light Arabian crude oil, Gonzalez said.

Such a price cut below OPEC's $34-a-barrel benchmark price would be intended to give the Saudis a greater sales edge against the African producers, who already sell their higher grades of oil at $1.50 a barrel above the benchmark price.

Skies clear; weather warms

By The Associated Press
Skies were clear to partly cloudy over most of Texas today, but snow-packed roads continued to cause hazardous driving conditions across the Panhandle and South Plains.

Lubbock public schools were scheduled to be closed today in the wake of a weekend storm that brought a record 16.7 inches of snow to the area. No school closings were reported in Amarillo, where about 8 inches of snow fell.

Dense fog covered the Coastal Bend, lowering visibilities to near zero in some locales.

Middle- and high-level cloudiness covered portions of the Panhandle, North and South Texas before dawn. Otherwise, clear skies were the rule.

Pre-dawn temperatures were in the 20s over the Panhandle, while readings in the 30s and 40s were noted over West, North and East Texas. The mercury had climbed into the 40s and lower 50s in South Texas.

Readings at 4 a.m. ranged from 24 at Lubbock to 52 at McAllen.

Winds over the southeastern two-thirds of Texas were variable with speeds generally less than 10 mph. Winds over the Panhandle were from the northwest at speeds ranging from 10 to 25 mph.

The forecast called for fog in the Panhandle, South Plains and along the Coastal Bend. Fair to partly cloudy skies and slightly warmer afternoon temperatures were expected across the rest of Texas.

Execution to take place after midnight

Barefoot awaits final appeals

By CHARLES C. HILL
Associated Press Writer
HUNTSVILLE — Unless last-hour appeals succeed, Thomas Andy Barefoot will die shortly after midnight and Texas will become the first state to execute more than one man since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976.

Barefoot today waited in a five-foot by nine-foot cell a few feet from the death chamber in The Walls prison in downtown Huntsville. He arrived there about 7 a.m. from death row at the Ellis Unit, about 13 miles northeast of Huntsville, prison spokesman Rick Hartley said.

The hopes of the former oilfield roughneck rested with the Supreme Court and U.S. District Court Judge Lucius Buntin in El Paso. Both were asked for a stay of execution.

Barefoot, 37, was convicted of killing a Harker Heights policeman in 1978. He insists he is innocent and that his execution would be "the most premeditated of murders."

The U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals last Thursday rejected Barefoot's lawyers' contention that a stay was warranted because a trial witness now says she lied when she said a man she saw near the time of the slaying resembled Barefoot.

The court also rejected arguments that testimony from two psychiatrists who had not examined Barefoot was improper.

Six states have executed one man each since the Supreme Court approved reinstatement of capital punishment. The Dec. 7 execution in Texas is the most recent and was the first time an execution was carried out by lethal injection.

Barefoot calls Munselle "Pappy" and says he is "about as close a friend as I got around here."

One killed in gang ambush at baptism party

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Guests leaving a christening party said they had no warning before their "good time" was turned into a rain-soaked bloodbath in a brutal ambush that left one person dead and nine injured, authorities said.

"Here they were celebrating the birth of a child, and it ends up in the death of someone else's child," Detective Larry Kallestad said of Sunday's violence.

Between 75 and 100 partygoers who left a veterans' hall in pouring rain near midnight were met with gunfire and knife attacks by gang members who had been thrown out earlier, Kallestad said.

Members of the South Los Angeles gang climbed into a 1962 Chevrolet and tried to mow down the guests down in repeated attacks, he said.

The detective described the attack in Wilmington, near Los Angeles' harbor some 20 miles south of downtown, as one of the worst in city history.

"Basically the people at the (party) were not gang members. They were just your middle class people attending a thing. They were not ready to be attacked. They're just your law-abiding citizens," Kallestad said.

"It all happened so fast," said a distraught woman who identified herself as godmother of the newborn child.

The woman, who refused to give her name, was waiting at the police station to be interviewed along with 35 or 40 other guests still in party attire.

"I just started hearing the gunshots," the woman said. "Everyone was having a good time."

Ronald Gallegos, 20, was struck and dragged under the car for eight blocks before his mangled body came to rest. He died on the street, Kallestad said.

His body lay on the street near his home, and relatives roused by the commotion stood by in shock.

Congress to convene, hear Reagan Tuesday

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON — The 98th Congress is convening to hear President Reagan's State of the Union Address and go to work in earnest on measures to reduce the federal deficit and rescue the Social Security system.

With unemployment still at 10.8 percent, Reagan is facing restive members of both political parties, including moderate and conservative Republicans, who have grown increasingly skeptical of the president's program.

In his annual diagnosis of the nation's well being and prescription for healing its problems, Reagan is expected to attempt to reassert White House initiative over efforts to get the deficit under control.

The president will deliver his address Tuesday night to a joint session of Congress in the cavernous House chamber on one of the few occasions when all senior officials of all three branches of the government are in one place.

Actual legislative action on budget and Social Security measures are unlikely to start until later, with Social Security hearings in the House opening Feb. 1, and House and Senate Budget Committee meetings about the same time.

Republican leaders in both houses have already served notice they will seek far deeper cuts in defense spending than the president is willing to accept in preparing the 1984 budget outline.

"We're going to take the president's budget, which is, after all his proposal for a budget, we're going to examine it, we're going to produce a congressional budget," Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee said Sunday.

"Now that doesn't mean we're going to reject his, but it also means we're not going to accept his outright," he added.

Proposals for a contingency tax increase, which would kick in only if budget deficits hit certain levels, have already been dismissed out of hand by Republican leaders, including Baker, Sens. Bob Dole of Kansas and Bob Packwood of Oregon, and Rep. Barber Conable, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee.

Teen-agers need jobs too

President Reagan's proposal to allow businesses to hire teen-agers to work for $2.50 an hour makes sense to us.

There are many teen-agers who need the jobs, and there are many businesses who can't afford to hire additional personnel at the current minimum wage of $3.35 per hour. It looks to us as if the proposal might allow new jobs to be created.

ORGANIZED LABOR, of course, will be screaming bloody murder, arguing that jobs for low-income workers will be jeopardized. But since Reagan's proposal would be applicable only during the summer months, labor's logic weakens.

How many people, in the prime of their careers now, got their start in their teens, working for as little as 50 cents an hour? How many of those people learned respect for work and self-reliance in the process?

A HEALTHY RESPECT for work is one of the things today's welfare state has failed to instill in many of its young people. The $2.50-an-hour plan for 16- to 22-year-old workers during summer months would deal directly with that problem.

Reagan's proposal warrants support.

My kind of town

Of all the big cities in Texas the only one I'd live in is Austin.

My choice is made over Dallas, Houston and San Antonio even though the latter may have more charm than the other three. I like Austin because it seems to be in perpetual motion and the eye is never in want for a visual thrill.

One only has to walk up and down Sixth Street or Guadalupe Street to see a mixture of all the societal classes and fads. It's not uncommon to see a '60s hippie-type right beside an '80s new waver, a clean-cut prep by a punk.

Austin always seems to have the important music, books and films for residents seeking something different from the main line products most stores and advertisers offer the masses.

Austin gives its people a chance to be different and it appears residents seize that chance because of the myriad of lifestyles walking down the streets.

THE CITY has a young feel to it. A large amount of that feeling comes from the 40,000 students at the university, but more than that, the new experiences popping up from day to day bring a fresh appeal to Austin.

Those new experiences are probably much more apparent to a twanging hick like me than to a fad-weary Austinite, but at least the opportunity for something new is always there — something a West Texan can't always claim.

Austin doesn't seem to be growing too fast for its own good like Houston or Dallas. I get no sense of community from those towns, but Austin feels like it has a comfortable ambience.

There are, of course, things that bother me about Austin.

The town seems to have a large number of burn-out cases just wandering about the streets. It makes me uncomfortable to see so many hollow-eyed, defeated people just passing time sitting by buildings or walking down streets.

FAR TOO MANY of those lost souls seemed broke, bored and bitter. After a while they must blend into the scenery, but it's not something I could live with easily.

If I lived in Austin I would be afraid of being swallowed up. With all the students, professors, politicians, journalists, intellectuals and writers, it would be easy to start feeling like I didn't matter much. It's hard enough feeling like I matter without having all that competition.

But even with that, I would still choose Austin as my Texas city.

Austin seems to be a city that will let you have those little things that make life better. Among all the quantity that plagues Texas cities, Austin gives back some quality.

Saving apple pie

WASHINGTON — Economic stringency breeds social trouble. So the tendency in a long, deep recession is to pay special attention to such events as race riots in Miami, or sympathy strikes in Pittsburgh, or protest against farm foreclosures in Iowa.

In fact, the distemper is center stage. It finds notable expression in the ugly attacks that made it politically hard to save something as American as apple pie. That is, Social Security.

The Social Security system has been with us for more than a fifth of our history as a country. It touches daily existence to the point of determining the shape of the family. It directly engages more than half the population — 160 million Americans who pay taxes into the system; and 36 million who draw out benefits.

POLLS SUGGEST that on the gut issues of benefit and tax levels, overwhelming majorities — from 70 to 80 percent — favor the system as it is. If ever there was a good focus for consensus politics, it is Social Security.

For just that reason kooks have long made Social Security a favorite subject for attack. Right-wing ideologues, in particular, have seen in the system the living embodiment of the hated New Deal. They have denounced mandatory contributions as denial of freedom. They have put it about that the system was fatally flawed financially and verging on bankruptcy.

For years these charges got nowhere. But with the onset of hard times, the climate changed. When Ronald Reagan entered the White House, the country got a President with inner doubts about the financial soundness of the Social Security system. In April, 1981, he made a move to limit benefits. He was harshly rebuffed in the Congress, and he then went into the closet by establishing a bipartisan, 15-man commission on Social Security.

Last Friday, just before the commission reported back a compromise solution, Reagan came out of the closet. In a special press conference, he went out of his way to repudiate any idea that the commission was "my commission." He mentioned, in a classic right-wing rallying cry, "some 30 years' imbalance of Social Security." Then he took a shot at the Democrats for "the lies that have been told by those who want to portray us as somehow out to destroy Social Security."

The shot was not altogether unjustified. After beating the President on Social Security in 1981, the Democrats seized on the issue as an all-purpose winner. Many, including Congressman Claude Pepper of Florida, Sen. Pay Moynihan of New York, gave the impression there were no financial problems in the system. House Speaker Tip O'Neill sounded a note which the Democrats were to use with devastating effect through the 1982 campaign. He charged that Reagan wanted "to balance the budget on the backs of the elderly."

THE UPSHOT was the political problem that made rescuing Social Security a herculean job. The Hercules was the conservative economist and chairman of the bipartisan commission, Alan Greenspan. After the November elections, Greenspan proposed that for analytic purposes the future of Social Security finances be charted on a pessimistic projection which figured seven lean years for the period 1980-1987.

That projection made it possible for the Democrats, led by Sen. Moynihan, to acknowledge there was a modest, short-term financial problem. To solve it, they were prepared to accept some limits on the rise in benefit payments. With the Democrats compromising on the immediate future, the Republicans could come off the proposition that the whole future looked terrible. Under the leadership of Sen. Bob Dole, they broke with the President and accepted some limited tax increases.

The compromise is classic. Each side gives a little, and a whole system is saved. It seems churlish not to join in the back-slapping. Still, it is a question why such an elaborate sleight-of-hand was required to rescue something as popular as apple pie.

The answer is that our national politics is currently askew. Hard times have produced a President who is not a man of the center. He comes from the ideological right wing. He thus disrupts the political system for Democrats and Republicans alike, and it will stay out of kilter for as long as he is in the White House.

Jack Anderson

Good times at the Pentagon

WASHINGTON WHIRL: Contrary to press reports, Republican National Chairman Richard Richards is leaving his position at the end of his two-year term Jan. 29 on good terms with the White House. He has personal pipelines into the Reagan administration, particularly the Interior and Energy departments. He'll stay in Washington to practice the delicate art of influencing government decisions. He's a smooth professional, skilled in the soft sell, with top clients already lined up.

— Ex-Rep. Phil Gramm's decision to resign and run as a Republican has delighted Democrats on the Energy and Commerce Committee, where his conservative views were a constant pain in the neck to the majority. If his Texas constituents re-elect him as expected, the House GOP leadership has promised to save him a spot only on the Budget Committee, not the Energy Committee.

— Dignified silver-haired Rep. John Edward Porter, R-Ill., is a fancier of classic cars. Recently, the owner of a sleek 1965 black Mustang convertible found the congressman's card stuck in his windshield when he parked in Porter's slot in the Rayburn Building garage. Porter wrote on the card: "Used to have a Mustang like this. Want to sell?"

— Freshman Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., has an uncommon loyalty to his constituents. While other members of Congress hire people from just about anywhere, Richardson has vowed to have only New Mexicans on his staff. He has premises and during duty hours.

even instructed his staff to segregate his phone messages into "New Mexico" and "non-New Mexico" piles.

— At a fancy holiday cocktail party in Vail, Colo., newly elected Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., was overheard telling Lynn Freedman, daughter of Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, that her father was considering him as a running mate on this 1984 presidential ticket. Lautenberg's press aide explained that the senator's remark was only a comment "on the intense early media interest in the 1984 presidential race." Oh.

THE 'FREEDOM' SCAM: Poor Walter Polovchak! He's the 15-year-old Soviet citizen whose parents came to this country in 1980. Then he declared he wanted to stay here when they decided to return to the Ukraine. He has friends, including two lawyers, Julian Kulas and Henry Holzer, who are donating their services to keep Walter from being sent back to the Soviet Union.

But now Walter has been "discovered" by the Young Americans for Freedom, a conservative Republican group that evidently sees an opportunity to capitalize on Walter's plight for a little fundraising.

YAF's executive director, Sam Pimm, has sent out thousands of letters asking for contributions of $500 ... or $250 ... or even as little as $10, which "might make the difference between freedom and slavery for Walter."

The mailing includes a petition to Congress, asking for passage of legislation to prevent Walter's "extradition" to the Soviet Union.

Why worry about the world?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why do you think we ought to be so concerned about things like world hunger? It seems like we have a lot of people in our own country who need all the help we can give them. — T.S.H.

DEAR T.S.H.: Yes, we need to be concerned about people in our own country who face needs of various kinds, particularly during a time of economic recession. But we also need to be concerned about the pressing needs of people in other parts of the world, millions of whom will die during this year as a direct result of malnutrition and starvation.

The reason for this is that God is concerned about the whole world, and he commands us to be concerned about the whole world also. This is true in evangelism; those of us who have come to know Jesus Christ have been commanded to "go and make disciples of all nations" (Matthew 28:19). But it is equally true for our concern about the physical needs of others as well, because God is concerned about the whole person — body, mind, and spirit. Man's greatest need is spiritual because the human race is lost and apart from God, but our love for others includes a concern and compassion for their other needs as well.

I hope you will remember the example of Jesus, who healed the sick and fed the hungry during his ministry on earth, as well as preached the Gospel of salvation. In fact, Jesus warned his disciples that they would be judged for their failure to help those who were in need, wherever they might be found. "Depart from me, you who are cursed, into the eternal fire prepared for the devil and his angels. For I was hungry and you gave me nothing to eat. I was thirsty and you gave me nothing to drink ... whatever you did not do for me" (Matthew 25:41-42, 45).

Ask that God will give you love for others, even if they are very different from you, and that he will help you find practical ways to heal them. This is part of our responsibility. But as you consider this, I hope you also will consider your own spiritual need as well. The first step you need to take is to invite Christ into your life, and then to follow him each day in showing his concern for others.

Dear Abby

Mom wants to protect daughter

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for years and finally need some advice. My 20-year-old daughter is planning to marry a man who dated her for several months before telling her he had a pregnant wife and two small children.

How do I tell her that this sorry excuse for a man will never be more than the liar he has shown himself to be?

How do I tell her she will never be able to trust him, or to look at herself in the mirror after she sees his wife and children?

How do I tell her she deserves more? She says she "loves" him. Or am I the one who's crazy?

HEARTSICK MOM
DEAR MOM: You aren't crazy. Your daughter is. ("Love" is a mental condition that renders its victims temporarily blind to that which is clearly visible to everyone else.)

You can talk from now until your voice gives out, but the more you point out his faults, the more ferociously she will defend him.

Sorry, Mom. Some people have to learn the hard way. Just stick around to pick up the pieces.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law cannot sit down to a meal without smothering everything she eats with hot sauce, jalapeno pepper, ketchup, Tabasco, A-1, you name it — if it's hot a spicy, she loads it on. She even uses it on eggs.

This offends me because I work hard to prepare tasty meals when she visits. Of course, I don't say anything, but my problem is that my 13-year-old daughter has picked up this habit, and I am trying to break her of it. My mother-in-law says, "Let her eat what she wants."

I want to break my daughter of this habit because I'd like her to learn to appreciate the taste of food, and if she smothers everything with hot sauce, it will all taste the same.

Also, I'm afraid too much hot sauce can harm her health.

HOT AND BOTHERED
DEAR BOTHERED: Your reasons for trying to get your daughter to lay off the hot sauce are valid. And yes, an excess of spicy stuff could be hazardous to one's health.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a 30-year career naval officer. Recently at a dinner party the subject of the high cost of medical care came up. I mentioned that the Navy had provided me with the best medical services free.

A woman in the group (not Navy) said, "Yes, our tax dollars go to pay your doctor bills!" Not wishing to create a scene, I said nothing at the time, but how I wanted to speak my piece.

My husband and I are grateful for the many privileges we have had because of his career in the Navy. Therefore, you will never hear us complain about the long separations; having to cope with alien customs and languages in foreign lands in unsanitary conditions, often without hot water, air conditioning or central heating; losing precious heirlooms through theft and breakage due to constant moving; leaving friends and family behind and often risking our lives — even in peacetime.

It is regrettable that some begrudge us free medical care. Please be reminded that my husband — a kind, intelligent, patriotic officer — spend 30 of the best years of his life earning a comparatively small income, working for the American people to make their country a safer place to live!

Dr. Donohue

Triglycerides and cholesterol

Dear Dr. Donohue: Are triglycerides the same as cholesterol? Are triglycerides as dangerous as cholesterol? How is either controlled? — Mrs. R.R.

You don't have to concern yourself with the chemistry of these substances. Just understand that both are fats found in the blood, where they may, in excess, cause deposits to form, leading to circulation disturbance and heart disease.

Arteries narrow because their inner walls have become sites of accumulation of fatty debris. Mostly, that's the chief worry. The higher the blood cholesterol levels, the greater the risk. While triglycerides are also a factor, they do not pose as great a threat as the cholesterol, in and of themselves. However, a marked increase in triglycerides needs some attention.

Often, triglyceride levels can be lowered simply by bringing body weight down to normal. It is known that extra food calories are turned into triglycerides by the liver. They then circulate in the blood, and eventually can be deposited as fat. Many people can take care of a high triglyceride level simply through a diet where the amount of calories derived from fatty foods is decreased to about 30 percent of the daily total caloric intake. Generally, that means less heavily-marbled meat, more fish, more poultry, more low-fat dairy products, and greater emphasis on vegetables and high-fiber foods.

An important fact to keep in mind is that triglyceride levels and cholesterol usually are inseparable comrades. They go hand in hand. So if one goes up, the other tends to also. So the corrective diet should also restrict cholesterol intake to less than 300 milligrams a day. To give you idea of what that is, a single egg yolk contains 260 milligrams of cholesterol.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I recently read that excessive consumption of sugar depletes the vitamin B supply in the body and can eventually lead to eye and ear problems, as well as other disturbances. What is the correction, if any? — A.W.

What you say is not really correct, but I can guess where you got that idea. Let's start with thiamine, which is one of the B vitamins, and the one necessary for metabolism of sugar in our bodies; that is, how the body utilizes sugar. Now we generally get ample amounts of thiamine in many foods, either those enriched with it or that contain it naturally. So we normally need not worry about being deficient in thiamine if we get a normal diet.

I think you are referring to a condition that can arise in alcoholics, whose main source of calories has been booze. Now, we're talking about an abnormal diet. Alcoholics do become thiamine depleted. And when they are given intravenous solutions of sugar as therapy they can manifest some of the symptoms of acute thiamine deficiency — weakness of muscles, for example. Some of the muscles affected might be those that control eye movement, which gets back to your question. As to the ear problem, I just don't know. If I've overshot the mark in responding to your question, write again and send me any reference you might have.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What is the Doppler test for high blood pressure? — K.L.

The Doppler method of taking blood pressure employs sound waves. A beam of sound waves is aimed at a large artery in the arm or leg, and because of the characteristics of a physical phenomenon called the Doppler effect, pressure can be determined. Please permit me to cop out with that, K.L.

FOR MRS. F.C. — Believe me, there is only one cause of thrush, and its the fungus, candida, which lives in and on all of us, as do many other organisms. It doesn't grow noticeably because other germs keep it in check.

Organisms like to stake out their claims on the body and protect their turf. Now there are reasons why candida suddenly grows rampantly, producing the white patches, commonly in the mouth or genital areas. Use of antibiotics can kill off other germs and change the balance, so candida grows. Sometimes, the fungus can grow during general body illnesses. There are both ointments and oral medicines to control candida effectively. You have an alarmist information source.

Vaginitis can strike any woman at any time in her life. You can read about the causes — and cures — for this troublesome complaint in the booklet, "Vaginitis: The Hidden Ailment." To get a copy, write to Dr. Donohue in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11216, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Reader's questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Local woman awarded credential

Nora Bustamante has been awarded the Child Development Associate

Credential in recognition of outstanding work with preschool children in a group setting. The credential was awarded by the CDA Credentialing Commission, which is working to improve the quality of care provided for youngsters in child care centers. The Commission represents the early childhood profession through its member national organizations.

Every candidate for the CDA Credential is assessed by a team of four persons including three from the local community. The team members observe the candidate working with children and evaluate the caregiver's competence in six areas. These range from establishing and maintaining a safe and healthy learning environment to advancing the child's physical and intellectual growth.

In an age when both parents of an increasing number of children are working outside the home, finding an environment in which children will receive more than basic maintenance has grown in importance. CDA assures parents that the credentialled caregiver is capable of providing competent and nurturing care.

Parents and caregivers interested in the CDA program should write the CDA National Credentialing Program, 1341 G Street, N.W., Suite 802, Washington, D.C., 20005. Or phone toll-free, 800-424-4310.

Researcher has ideas for America's trash

Americans account for about 5 percent of the world's population, but they produce 50 percent of the world's garbage.

new material," she said. An empty tin can is not merely a used food container. It is also a shiny metal cylinder. As such, new uses may come to mind — a building material, for example. Juice cans are so sturdy you can use them to build simple furniture, such as a hassock or a table base.

It costs the average American city between $35 and $50 a ton to collect the trash. Most cities treat the expenditure as a dead loss. However, a few trailblazers defray some of the cost by reselling usable leftovers.

One person who would like to see these statistics of waste change is Carolyn Jabs, who has spent four years in researching uses for some of the discards of American civilization. In a book, she enumerates more than 2,000 ways to recycle and reuse the things people ordinarily throw away.

Ms. Jabs said she felt she had been in training to write the book all of her life.

"When I was a child growing up in the Midwest, I had a junk box under my bed. When I moved to New York, I furnished my first apartment with curbside chic — things I found on the street," she said. Then, after moving to a 100-acre farm in upstate New York, she began recycling garage sale and attic finds as decorative and useful accessories in her new rural life.

As a result of these experiences, she has developed a recycling philosophy as well as a list of recycling do's and don'ts.

First, she stresses that nobody can use every bit of excess that comes into his life. She urges people to relax about recycling and treat the activity as fun rather than a chore.

Her prescription is simple: "Before you throw something away, just look at it. If you don't see any immediate value in keeping it, throw it away with a clear conscience."

Another rule is to change your attitude regarding leftovers.

"Don't see them as something you have to get rid of, but look at them as a

Whatever the project, treat the recycled material seriously — as if you had paid for it. And don't use slapdash methods of construction just because it didn't cost anything. The best reuses are personal — marriages of available material and pressing need. For example, she inherited a collection of old feed sacks when she moved into her farm home. The sacks were too pretty to throw out, so she kept them. Before long, a use suggested itself. She combined them into a collage which — sprayed with an acrylic coating — is now a decorative wall hanging.

Parts of Africa caught in major drought

JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer

Kenya — Wide swaths of the vast African continent are gripped by a drought that has withered crops, killed livestock, shrunk rivers and reservoirs and threatened millions of people with hunger.

The Food and Agriculture Organization, a United Nations agency based in Rome, said recently that 15 African countries face severe food shortages because of the lack of rain. Some southern African nations are in their second year of drought and are running out of food reserves, the FAO said.

The stricken countries of southern Africa, according to the FAO, are South Africa and Zimbabwe — both major grain producers for the region — Angola, Zambia, Mozambique, Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland. In east Africa, portions of Ethiopia and Tanzania have been hit by drought.

In the Sahel — an arc of countries stretching eastward from the Atlantic along the southern edge of the Sahara Desert — the Cape Verde Islands, Senegal, Mauritania, Mali and Upper Volta are in the throes of a dry spell.

A SEVERE drought in the Sahel a decade ago killed 50,000 to 100,000 people. But the FAO said reports from the region so far indicate the current drought is much less serious than the one which lasted from 1968 to 1974.

In some parts of southern Africa, however, the drought appears to be the worst this century.

South Africa, the bread basket for the region, normally harvests about 40 percent of the continent's corn — maize, as it is called here. This year, says the South African National Association of Maize Producers Organization, the drought has stunted 60 percent of the season's corn, the nation's main farm export.

South Africa harvested a record crop of 14.66 million metric tons in 1980-81. But last season's crop, also hit by severe drought, amounted to 8.32 million metric tons and this season's is not likely to be much better.

THE MOUNTAINOUS kingdom of Lesotho, surrounded by South African territory, is suffering its worst drought in a decade. The government says if rain does not come soon, the maize crop could be destroyed and whole herds of cattle will perish.

Two years of drought in Zimbabwe have dimmed hopes of black African countries in southern Africa that Zimbabwe would replace white-ruled South Africa as the region's chief food supplier.

The country was a corn and beef exporter when it was the British colony of Rhodesia. The first season after independence in April 1980, Zimbabwe produced a record corn crop of around 3 million metric tons.

Last year drought reduced the maize harvest to around a million metric tons, and there is expected to be a bigger shortfall this year. In hard-hit Matabeleland, in southwestern Zimbabwe, drought and slaughter for lack of fodder have cut cattle herds from around 600,000 to 400,000 head.

In neighboring Mozambique, drought has affected seven of 10 provinces — mostly in the south and central regions — and is causing hardship to 4 million of the country's 11 million people, Internal Trade Minister Manuel da Silva told diplomats recently.

THE MINISTER said the lack of rain has cost the former Portuguese colony 100,000 tons of grain and added that only international aid can avert deaths by starvation.

Zambia, also in its second year of severe drought, produced slightly more than 5 million 200-pound bags of maize last year, compared with 11 million bags the previous harvest. Annual domestic consumption is about 7 million bags, and Zambia has had to import the shortfall.

Drought, floods and insect pests have hit crops in Tanzania since the 1970s, and the socialist east African nation had to import 310,785 metric tons of grain in the 1981-82 season to offset shortages. Twenty-one thousand tons went to eight scattered regions hit by drought in 1982.

The Food and Agriculture Organization said the Ethiopian government has reported that 4.5 million people face severe food shortages in the Horn of Africa nation. Tigre and Wollo provinces in the north were most badly hit, but reports from Ethiopia indicate nearly every region except that around the capital, Addis Ababa, has been affected to some degree.

A nationwide drought in 1972-73 killed 200,000 to 300,000 Ethiopians and contributed to the downfall of Emperor Haile Selassie and his replacement by a Marxist military government.

In West Africa, the hot wind off the Sahara called the Marmattan has been blowing off more topsoil than usual over the past few months because of the dryness of the Sahel countries in its path.

Millet, sorghum and rice crops have failed along the length of the Senegal River, once considered the granary of the region.

30,000 British water workers stage walkout

Army may be used to maintain services

LONDON (AP) — More than 30,000 British water and sewage workers walked off the job today after union negotiators rejected an 11th-hour wage proposal, but the government vowed to call out the army if necessary to maintain services.

Fearing possible health hazards during Britain's first water and sewage strike, authorities warned millions of people in the midlands city of Manchester and in South Wales to boil all drinking and cooking water to remove impurities.

The National Water Council said reservoirs were "full to the brim" and Environment Secretary Tom King said authorities could cope "reasonably well" for the next few days. He said most supplies would be uninterrupted, but the union warned of immediate shortages.

Press reports said army trucks with 400-gallon water tanks were on stand-by to move into areas with any serious contamination, and Defense Ministry sources said "as many as 15,000" soldiers were available to man pumping and sewage stations if needed.

The Defense Ministry said troops are on stand-by if needed, but we don't expect that for a while.

WHILE THE STRIKE began in Northern Ireland, England and Wales, Scotland's 2,000 water workers — who belong to a different union — were still on the job. But a strike ballot was being taken, and Scottish workers generally follow their counterparts to the south.

The strike began at midnight Sunday after the National Union of Public Employees rejected mediator Ian Buchanan's recommendation of a 7.3 percent wage increase.

The National Water Council earlier offered its 29,000 workers in England and Wales a 6 percent increase over average pay of about $217 a week.

But union negotiators stuck to their demand for a 15 percent increase, which would bring water and sewage workers' wages in line with the gas and electric industries.

Union negotiator Ed Newell said he was "bitterly disappointed" with the mediator's recommendation. He said he would put the offer to the striking union today, but added he had "grave doubts" it would be accepted.

The striking workers operate water pumping, filtration and purification plants as well as running sewage treatment works and handling drainage and disposal of sewage. They also repair broken pipes, water mains and other facilities.

THE AUTOMATED pumping stations remain in operation, officials said, but filters can become choked after several days if not cleaned regularly. Without constant chemical purification, water must be boiled for consumption.

Major quake hits Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A powerful earthquake hit the southern Pacific coast of Mexico early today and shook the capital city nearly 400 miles away, U.S. scientists and Mexican officials said. There were no immediate reports of casualties or serious damage.

The quake registered 6.6 on the Richter scale and was centered near the coast in Oaxaca province, about 380 miles southeast of Mexico City, according to Don Finley, spokesman for the U.S. Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

The earthquake was recorded on seismographs at Golden at 2:18 a.m. Mexico City time (2:18 a.m. CST), Finley said.

There were no reports from outlying areas early today.

Borg stuns tennis world with retirement

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Bjorn Borg, who reached the top of the tennis world at age 23 and dominated Wimbledon as nobody ever has, says the game is too much work and too little fun for him to go on playing in world-class competition.

So, Borg says, he's retiring at age 26 after 10 years on the tour in which he earned an estimated $75 million in prize money and endorsements.

Borg as he left his hotel en route to the airport Monday confirmed the retirement reports that had been appearing in recent days, and added, "My last tournament will be in Monte Carlo," at a tournament which begins March 28 and runs through April 3.

He said he would continue his involvement in the game, a remark Lennart Bergelin, who discovered Borg at 14 in a junior tournament in Sweden and coached him to the heights, explained meant that the Swedish star would play some exhibition matches. He is scheduled to play in the Suntory Tennis exhibition April 9-10 in Tokyo.

Borg made it clear, though, that he would not be playing again at Wimbledon or in the U.S. Open.

The reason was explained in a report in Kvallopsporten, a Malmö, Sweden tabloid by Arne Reimer, a Swedish reporter close to Borg.

Reimer quoted Borg as saying: "I haven't got the right motivation. I can't give 100 percent and if I can't do that, it wouldn't be fair to myself to go on. Tennis has to be fun if you want to get to the top and I don't feel that way any more."

Borg told Reimer that the year off had made him realize "how nice and fun life can be even without tennis, how there are so many other life values."

"But that," he added, "was not good for my tennis.

Borg's announcement "half-surprised" Jimmy Connors, the reigning Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion. "I thought he was working harder at his game and trying to come back and start playing some good tennis again," said Connors at the Volvo Masters in New York.

"But (I'm) half not (surprised) because you take a year off and get used to a different kind of life," Connors said. "You don't want to go out and work quite so hard, and you don't want to grind out the matches quite as tough."

John McEnroe, who ended Borg's five-year reign as Wimbledon champion in 1981, said he didn't know if Borg "mentally has the desire."

Borg has played little competitive tennis since he lost to McEnroe in their battle for the U.S. Open title in September, 1981. The Open was the one major title that eluded him in a 10-year career that included six French Open crowns and the unprecedented five straight victories at Wimbledon, the biggest of them all.

All were won with a style that earned him the nickname "The Ice Man," a player who methodically destroyed his opponent with smashing, top-spin ground strokes and never changed his expression win or lose.

Last year, Borg played only in the tournament at Monte Carlo, where he now lives with his wife, the Romanian star Mariana Simionescu. He reached the quarterfinals and earned $8,700, his only official winnings of the year.

He wanted to enter both the French Open and Wimbledon, but declined to play after officials at both ruled that his absence from the required number of official tournaments would make it necessary for him to play in qualifying matches.

Borg, after that experience, had petitioned the Men's International Professional Tennis Council for permission to play in fewer than the minimum 12 tournaments under a new rule which went into effect this year. The rule was adopted mainly to accommodate Borg and the Council voted Saturday to allow him to make use of it.

Borg was discovered by Bergelin, who soon after being appointed Sweden's Davis Cup captain started looking for young talent. Borg was young and he was talented.

By 1973, at the age of 17, he had moved into the top rank of the men's tennis world, defeating Arthur Ashe to reach the final sixteen at the U.S. Open.

In 1974, just turned 18, he won the French Open for the first time, defeating Spain's Manuel Orantes, and was ranked No. 10 in the world. The next year, led Sweden to its first Davis Cup.

A.J. NO CAN DUHE FOR JETS — Miami Dolphins linebacker A.J. Duhe (77) gets a "high five" from teammate Steve Shull (52) after intercepting his third Richard Todd pass Sunday in the AFC Championship game in the Orange Bowl. The third interception was returned for a game-clinching touchdown as the Dolphins advanced to the Super Bowl with a 14-0 victory over New York.

Dolphins intercept Jets' dream, 14-0

MIAMI (AP) — It's been nearly six months since Miami whipped the Washington Redskins in a "meaningless" National Football League preseason game, and none of the Dolphins are looking back.

The two teams will meet in Super Bowl XVII next Sunday, and that's all that matters now.

"What happened back then doesn't mean anything. It's meaningless at this stage," linebacker A.J. Duhe said Sunday after the Dolphins stopped the New York Jets 14-0 to win the American Conference championship and a Super Bowl berth.

"This time, everything will be on the line," added Duhe, who intercepted three Richard Todd passes and returned one of them 35 yards for a touchdown to key the victory. "This time, it's for what we've all dreamed of."

The Dolphins and Redskins will tangle for the NFL crown in Pasadena, Calif., 169 days after Miami launched the exhibition season with a 24-7 pounding of the NFC champions.

"We're packing our bags, going to Pasadena," said Duhe. "Redskins, we're going to meet you there on the 50 (yard-line) and I hope it's a helluva game and we're going to be the world champions — hopefully."

The trip to the title game is the first for Miami since Coach Don Shula's team defeated Minnesota 24-7 in Super Bowl VIII. Washington's last appearance was in Super Bowl VII, when the Redskins, then coached by George Allen, dropped a 14-7 decision to the Dolphins.

"We're the Rodney Dangerfield of the AFC and they're the Rodney Dangerfield of the NFC," said Miami nose tackle Bob Baumhower. "We're two teams that scratched and fought all year to prove ourselves."

It seems like everybody said, "Yeah they won, but wait until next week when they play so-and-so," Baumhower added. "I think maybe it's time we got the recognition we've deserved for a long time."

If the Dolphins haven't gained respect throughout the league during a 10-2 campaign, then at least they have that of the Jets. Sunday's victory was Miami's third over New York this season.

"We came down here seeking revenge," said New York punter Chuck Ramsey. "We had it in our minds that if Miami beat us a third time in a year, we didn't deserve to go to the Super Bowl; they did."

Miami became the first team to beat another three times in one season since the Green Bay Packers did it against Shula's Baltimore Colts in 1965.

The Dolphins accomplished the task with a swarming defense — ranked No. 1 in the NFL during the strike-shortened season — that shut down a high-powered offense for the second straight week. The club's five interceptions tied a playoff record.

Miami's offense struggled early, but still managed to hold the football for better than half the game in a steady rain that left the Orange Bowl turf a muddy mess.

"Each and every week we rose to the occasion," said Shula, whose team limited San Diego to only 247 total yards in the AFC semifinals. "Today was the greatest day, though. The defense was just overwhelming."

Miami limited the Jets to 139 total yards — lowest in an AFC title game since Pittsburgh held Houston to 142 in 1978 — and literally stopped Freeman McNeil, the NFL's rushing king, in his tracks.

McNeil, clearly bothered by the soggy turf, gained just 46 yards on 17 carries after gaining 202 in a first-round playoff victory over Cincinnati and 101 in the Jets' semifinal triumph over the Los Angeles Raiders.

Todd, meanwhile, completed only 15 of 37 passes for 103 yards. He was sacked four times for losses totaling 26 yards.

"I've got two things to say," said Todd. "They played better than us. We did not play well at all. It was their day. If anybody deserves to go to the Super Bowl, it was them."

Duhe's first interception set up Miami's first touchdown, a 7-yard burst through the middle by backup fullback Woody Bennett, who replaced Andra Franklin after the AFC's second-leading ground gainer was shaken up by a hit in the head.

Bennett's 1-play, 48-yard drive and snapped a scoreless tie with 12:55 left in the third quarter.

Duhe, a six-year pro, picked off another Todd aerial later in the third quarter and was lined up at defensive end when he intercepted a screen pass intended for Bruce Harper and rumbled 35 yards for a touchdown 2:08 into the final period.

"It sounds like a miracle and it really was," said Duhe. "I was playing defensive end and I saw I wasn't going to do any good on the pass rush, so I dropped off on Harper."

"I don't think Todd ever saw me," he continued. "I juggled it a little, but once I got it, nobody was going to catch me."

Queens subdue pesky Clarendon

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

For all her many talents, it was Nell Haskins' passing and free shots that allowed Howard College to fend off a determined Clarendon women's team Sunday night.

Haskins whooshed through three free throws in the final 1:25 of play and zipped a pass to a wide-open Christi Adams for a clinching basket as the Hawk Queens fought off the Lady Bulldogs 81-76 in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The make-up game victory boosts the Queens to 16-3 on the season and to 3-2 in conference play. Clarendon slips to 8-9 and 2-3 in WJAC play.

Granted Haskins will get her share of the scoring but she had to share the spotlight with several other players last night: Adams scored the last two Hawk Queen baskets; Pam Roberson had her best game in weeks with 15 points; and ballhandler Janene Berry solved Clarendon's full-court pressure and hit six baskets, five from the perimeter.

And that made Don Stevens a happy coach.

"Pam really played great and Janene played a much better game," he said of two players that have struggled in recent games.

"I told them at halftime that the longer we let them hang on, the harder it will be to beat them later in the game. And it happened," he continued. Clarendon scored the final six points of the first half to close Howard's lead to 37-35 at intermission.

Clinging to slight leads all game long, the Queens saw the Lady Bulldogs tie the score at 58 with 11:22 to play. A six-point lead dissolved at 4:13 when Denis Posey hit a shot off the glass. HC fans got very nervous when Vanessa Calloway layed a shot in with 2:30 to go to put Clarendon ahead for the first time, 76-74.

But Adams — who splits wing time with Andrea Fowler and Holli Holloway — was open in the lane and Haskins found her for the tying points. Stevens still wasn't confident. "When it was 76-all I felt like it could go either way," he said later.

Clarendon turned the ball over downcourt but so did the Howard. The Lady Bulldogs blew another chance and then fouled Haskins. The HC sophomore sank both shots and her team never trailed again.

Paula Dotsan missed for CC and Haskins again passed to Adams who locked up the contest with a basket with 41 seconds to play.

The reason why the game was so close was because of the amazing all-around shooting talent of the Lady Bulldogs. After hitting just 33 per cent in the first half, the trio of Dotsan, Posey and Rose Benson bombed the Queens with a relentless attack of 20-footers.

The Queens built a seven-point lead, 51-44, as Berry scored and then fed to Roberson for a basket. A five-point play — that's right — by Benson knotted the game at 58 and it was a free-for-all. HC maintained the upper hand until a turnover allowed CC to tie the game at 70.

"Man, they could shoot the ball," Stevens said with a shake of his head. And while Clarendon was hot from outside, Jannet Brunson scored 14 inside on the Queens.

Haskins finished with a game-high 28 points (and 12 rebounds) with Susan Cordell adding 12 points, six rebounds and six blocked shots. Posey had 20, Benson 17 and Dotsan 11 for Clarendon.

Howard (81) — Andrea Fowler 0-22; Holli Holloway 2-0-4; Janene Berry 6-0-12; Nell Haskins 11-6-28; Pam Roberson 7-1-15; Christi Adams 4-0-8; Susan Cordell 5-2-12; Totals 35-11-17-81.

Clarendon (76) — Vanessa Calloway 4-0-8; Paula Dotsan 3-5-11; Denise Posey 9-2-20; Rose Benson 9-1-17; Jannet Brunson 6-2-14; Bobbi Dembowski 1-4-6; Totals 31-14-20-76.

Bulldogs choke Hawks by 2

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

After Howard College coach Harold Wilder shrugged his shoulders and said, "I guess it wasn't meant to be," the song "Never on a Sunday" suddenly seemed an appropriate theme to the Hawks' loss to Clarendon.

The Bulldogs ran off a 10-point string of points late in the game but it was three missed chances by the Hawks that allowed Clarendon to take a 79-77 upset victory over HC last night in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The loss is the third in Western Junior College Athletic Conference play against two wins for Howard, now 15-3. Clarendon — coached by former Howard assistant Mark Adams — steps up to 14-8 and 3-2.

Trailing 62-58, the Bulldogs reeled off their streak in a span of three minutes before Wilder called a time-out at 3:52 with his squad now trailing 71-64. "There wasn't anything different going on," he said later. "They managed to hit some nice shots and we didn't hit ours."

Although down by seven, the Hawks weren't out of the game. Danny Grayson scored and Nate Givens sank one of two free shots by cut the deficit to 71-67. After Basil Brown hit a pair of foul shots, the Hawks tied the game with 1:53 to go as Grayson, Reggie Childress and improving Willie James scored to knot the score at 73.

Daniel Spivey and Grayson traded hoops before Brown put Clarendon on top by a point with a free shot.

Then came the missed opportunities:

- A wide-open Leon Issac fumbled a downtown pass away.
- The Hawks had to foul but James pulled down Greg Pinckney's miss with 1:07 to go.
- James Barnett weaved his way through traffic in the lane but missed a five-point bank shot.
- HC seemed doomed until James blocked Pinckney's shot with 45 seconds left.
- Grayson got loose under the basket but rolled a layup off the iron.

The lights went out when Brown converted a three-point play with 27 seconds to go. With two seconds left, Grayson rebounded his miss unmoisted and Clarendon had its upset.

"All three of those plays we should have been able to make," Wilder moaned. "We didn't convert and they did...I guess it just wasn't meant to be."

The outcome soured an otherwise encouraging night for the Howard coach. James — the 6-10 freshman from Michigan — logged his most playing time of the year, scoring four times, rebounding and blocking shots for the Hawks. "Big Will keeps making constant improvement," his coach responded.

The Hawks needed other players to score Sunday night. Givens — the No. 1

Fergus survives his sudden death

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A little knowledge of geography helped Keith Fergus to his dramatic victory in the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

He came to the 18th hole of the day Sunday, the 90th of this five-day marathon, needing a birdie to tie Rex Caldwell and force a sudden death playoff.

He faced a 20-foot make-or-break putt, with the ball resting in desert sunshine and the hole in a shadow.

"It's sometimes pretty hard to read the putt when you're going from sunshine to shadow," observed Lee Trevino, making his debut as a television commentator.

Fergus had no trouble at all. "They say that everything here breaks toward Indio (a nearby town). I know where Indio is. I just read that into it," Fergus said.

"I'd been putting pretty good all day. I just wanted to make sure I put a good stroke on it."

He did. The ball broke left to right into the cup, finishing off Fergus' third consecutive round of 7-under-par 65, lifting him into a tie for the top spot and setting up the playoff that was something of an anticlimax.

Caldwell, who had come from two shots back with three to play, had taken the lead and seemed to have his first professional victory in his pocket, was a picture of dejection when Fergus' ball found the hole on the 18th. His face was drawn, his features tight. He dropped his head. His shoulders slumped.

"We were going in different directions," Fergus said. "I was excited, happy. I had to get myself calmed down before the playoff. And Rex, well, that putt took the wind out of him. While I was trying to calm down, he had to try to get himself pumped up again." And he didn't quite make it.

On the playoff hole, the par-3 15th, Caldwell hit first and sent his shot so far to the right that, in effect, it was all over then. He had to play his second stroke left-handed with a putter from under a tree. He got it on the fringe and then missed a putt, his third shot. He marked the ball and watched in helpless dejection as Fergus calmly two-putted for a routine par that won it.

Fergus' third career victory — one a year starting with his Memorial triumph in 1981 — was worth $67,500 from the total purse of $375,000 and put him in the No. 2 money-winning spot for the young season at $81,300.

Caldwell, a breezy, chipper character who has yet to win in nine years of PGA Tour activity, also had a closing 65 and, like Fergus, finished 90 holes at 335, 25 shots under par and matching the tournament record. He won $40,500.

Masters champ Craig Stadler was a distant third at 339 after a closing 69. Chip Beck, with a 68, and John Fought, with a 71, followed at 340. Doug Tewell was next at 68-342.

Ray Floyd, who briefly shared the lead when he birdied the third hole, slipped to a 73 and was tied at 343 with Tze-Chung Chen, a rookie from Taiwan who closed up with a 64, and Bob Gilder, who had a 69.

Gil Morgan, winner of the first two tournaments of the year, was far back at 73-354. Jack Nicklaus completed his first start of the season with a 71 and tied for 25th at 349. He won $2,862, not enough to put him past the $4 million mark in career earnings. Nicklaus now has $3,994,933.

SON-OF-A-GUN, I MADE IT — Keith Fergus may look upset but actually he's very happy with a 20-foot birdie on 18 that shot him into a tie with Rex Caldwell at the Bob Hope Desert Classic Sunday afternoon at the La Quinta Country Club. Fergus won the sudden death playoff on the first hole with a par.

Clarendon left Dwight Harris open and the freshman wing scored a team-high 20 points, most of those in the first half as Howard constructed leads as large as eight points, 30-22 on two free shots by Issac.

A hoop by Brown and another Richard Miller caught Howard at the end of the half and lifted Clarendon into a 37-35 advantage.

Three baskets by Givens at the start of the second half put the Hawks into a lead they maintained until Pinckney hit a layup off an HC turnover to give his team a 63-62 advantage with 6:40 to go.

Givens finished with 13 points along with Childress. Brown had a game-high 22 for the Bulldogs while Tim Thomas added 17, Miller 13 and Pinckney 11 points.

Lendl handles McEnroe...again

NEW YORK (AP) — Now that he has captured his second consecutive Volvo Masters tennis title, Ivan Lendl has his sight set on the U.S. Open crown.

"I would like, of course, to win some big titles," the Czechoslovakian star said after crushing John McEnroe 6-4, 6-4, 6-2 in the finals of the $400,000 tournament at Madison Square Garden.

Lendl rode his big serve and powerful groundstrokes to an easy victory Sunday, his 15th title of the 1982 season, which ended with this Grand Prix Series finale.

Fan attacks White after Redskins game

DALLAS (AP) — Police in Washington, D.C., say that Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White could press charges against a Redskin fan who took a swing at him in the waning moments of Dallas' bitter 31-17 trouncing.

But that could do little to erase some sad memories of the championship game Saturday which dashed the Cowboys' hope of representing the National Conference in Super Bowl XVII.

White suffered a concussion in the game before the half in a jarring sack by Dexter Manley. And White was attacked off the playing field as well as on.

A Washington policeman said he witnessed the Redskin fan's attack on White at RFK Stadium. The attack occurred during the chaos of the last 12 seconds of the NFC championship contest, after Joe Theismann went to one knee on a fourth-down play with 12 seconds left and ran off the field with the ball.

White's replacement, Gary Hogeboom, was accidentally hit during the struggle that ensued and a third player was tackled by a fan, officials said.

Wagner makes it to TV

By MIKE SILVERMAN
 Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK — A spicy new miniseries is coming to public television tonight, brimming with incest, adultery, murder, suicide and more dirty dealing than J.R. Ewing ever dreamed of.

In the first episode, one character renounces love to build a vast fortune, only to have it all stolen. In the ring that bestows unlimited power on its possessor, presides over a coal mine. So revolutionary was Chereau's concept that the premiere in 1976 was assailed by many critics as a desecration. Outraged traditionalists in the audience booed and hissed; some protesters picketed the opera house.

Adding to the furor, members of the orchestra, but a novel and fascinating work. "Our basic approach," Boulez said, "is that there is no basic approach. You cannot reduce a work as complex as the Ring to one single vision."

In "Rheingold," Chereau's skill as a director comes through in the superb acting performances of the singers. Watch especially Hermann Wach, who as the betrayed Alberich reaches frightening heights of frenzy, and Heinz Zednik as the mercurial, cynical demigod Loge.

Each of the remaining operas in the cycle will be shown in two parts, as follows: "Die Walkure," Feb. 21 and 28; "Siegfried," April 11 and 18; and "Die Gotterdammerung," on June 6 and 13.

The cycle was filmed on the stage at Bayreuth, a production of UNITELMunich, the West German network. The performances are in German, with English subtitles.

final installment, the hero suffers a bout of drug-induced amnesia and kidnaps his own wife so his best friend can marry her.

Sounds like the stuff of soap opera, but this is opera of a different kind. It's Richard Wagner's "Ring of the Nibelung," the four-part, 17-hour-long musical drama that plunges viewers into a legendary world of Rhinemaidens, dwarfs, giants, dragons and gods.

(It can be seen locally on cable channel 5 beginning at 9 p.m.)

Its reaching television for the first time in an extraordinary production that is likely to win new converts to the high priest of German romanticism, as well as please those who already worship at his shrine.

The first and shortest of the operas, "Das Rheingold," will be broadcast tonight. Much of the credit for the high quality of the series belongs to director Patrice Chereau, a young French genius who had never even seen the Ring cycle when he was invited to stage the 100th anniversary production at Bayreuth, the opera house in West Germany that Wagner built.

Chereau has stripped away most of the fat-soprano-in-a-helmet tradition and set the action in Wagner's own lifetime, turning it into a commentary on the Industrial Revolution.

"I don't know anything about the gods and the cosmos or the beginning of the world," Chereau has said. "I'm interested in staging human life, not Wagner's idea of grandeur."

The giants and dragon are still around, but they are surrounded by modern trappings. Wotan, Fricka and their fellow gods are decked out in Victorian costume — in fact Wotan, in a silk dressing gown, looks suspiciously like the composer himself. The Rhinemaidens are prostitutes who ply their trade atop a giant hydroelectric dam. Alberich, the dwarf who steals their gold and turns it into the coveted magic alarmed at the quiet, chamber-music effect conductor Pierre Boulez wanted from them, threatened to strike.

But by 1980, when the television version was made, just about everyone acknowledged that the production was a masterpiece — not the final word on how to interpret the Ring cycle.
