Reagan prescribes 'medicine'

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's midterm appeal for a standby tax hike and the "strong medicine" of a domestic spending freeze faces trouble in Congress, even though Democratic leaders say they will accept his summons to find a bipartisan cure for the nation's economic ills.

The president, in his nationally broadcast State of the Union address to a joint House-Senate session Tuesday night, called for holding federal spending at roughly 5 percent above current levels — except for defense programs.

And he urged a 1 percent income tax hike to take effect Oct. 1, 1985 if economic recovery fails to materialize. Reagan also called for excise taxes on domestic and imported oil.

Reagan said cost-of-living increases in Social Security and government retirement benefits should be delayed for six months.

And he said federal pay and retirement benefits, both military and civilian, should be frozen for one year.

"The state of our union is strong, but our economy is troubled," Reagan declared, adding: "We have a long way to go ... but America is on the mend."

He called his plan "bipartisan, fair, prudent (and) realistic."

And while praised by Republican leaders, the president's prescription was greeted with skepticism and even sharp criticism from leading Democrats. They complained the proposed freeze would still permit an increase in defense spending of around 14 percent a year.

As for reaction from the public, assistant White House press secretary Anson Franklin said this morning that by 11:15 p.m. EST Tuesday, 90 minutes after the speech ended, the White House had received 633 telephone calls indicating support for Reagan and 124 opposing him.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said he "found the speech was neither fair nor realistic."

"He's freezing the wrong thing. He offering a freeze on Medicaid payments instead of a nuclear freeze," said Sen. Edward M. Kenn-

Keyboards in class

COMPUTER EDUCATION — Students under the direction of teacher Joe Dawes are learning computer education and literacy with Big Spring High School's new Apple II computers installed this fall.

Dawes is shown putting his students through some exercises during a recent class. This is the first year the school district has had such a class.

Schools tie in to computer age

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

A new learning device is moving into today's classrooms among the books, overhead projectors and maps.

The item is the computer and it's stirring up the educational interest of students, teachers, parents and administrators and is making appearances in many school districts.

Big Spring is no exception, nor is Coahoma, Forsan, Stanton or Greenwood for that matter. All of these school districts have taken steps to bring computer education to students.

For Big Spring, this is the first year the high school has had a computer education course.

The class is taught three times a day by Joe Dawes and has an enrollment of about 50 students. The class primarily teaches students the available operations and applications of computers.

The BSISD has purposely gone slow in involving itself with computers — a move suggested by most experts.

"We started with two or three computers and Joe working with students after school," said Lynn Hise, superintendent of the BSISD. "We did this for two years until we determined what curriculum was beneficial and useful to the students."

From there, $25,000 was appropriated for 11 Apple II computers and software, and Dawes was given the course.

Initial interest in the class has been good, causing Dawes to be optimistic about the program.

'The use of computers is not going to diminish and demand for knowledgeable people is going to increase.'

"There's no reason to think that it won't expand," Dawes said. "There seems to be interest in other students who know it exists. We won't really know until we have pre-registration next week (for the coming year), but we think there's a fair amount of interest."

In Dawes' class, students are taught text editing, data base management, financial planning, program writing and general computer use.

The speed at which computers have entered school districts has, in some cases, created a void in computer instruction. Steps are being taken to get guidelines to schools, but for right now most computer education is in the hands of a single teacher.

"There aren't any guidelines right now. What most schools are doing is finding a teacher who's interested and letting him handle the program," Dawes said.

A group called the Texas Computer Education Association (Dawes is a member and was on the first board of directors) is trying to pull together the thinking of people already teaching computer education and the Texas Education Agency to develop guidelines, but that's still going on," he said. Dawes said until those guidelines are out the single teacher with the knowledge and interest in computers will continue to be the force behind most programs.

Directly tied to that problem is what to do about curriculum contained in software (com-

Cosden to lay off 29

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. is expected to lay off 29 employees in the next few weeks beginning with possibly 11 persons this Friday, according to Refinery Manager Wally Whittington.

Cosden announced two weeks ago a reduction of 35 jobs was needed by Jan. 21 due to a curtailment of petrochemical production. Whittington said four persons at the refinery and two pipeline employees had accepted a special separation payment bonus, but 29 other positions would still have to be reduced.

"A few will be effective Friday," Whittington said. "I think 11 will go."

The refinery manager said the remaining reductions will follow as soon as other employees are trained to do the jobs. "The others will go as training needs permits," Whittington said.

According to Cosden Public Relations Manager Hood Barnwell, the reductions were brought on by a shutdown of certain chemical units at the refinery. The employee reductions were part of the overall curtailment of production, he said.

Cosden used an incentive retirement program in March 1982 to reduce the workforce by 103 persons. American Petrofina, the parent company of Cosden, laid off 98 employees in December.

Mattox predicts frequent executions

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says executions eventually could take place in Texas "every six to eight weeks" and that there may be as many as 10 this year in the death house at Huntsville.

Mattox also said however, that he doesn't believe any executions will be carried out anywhere in the United States until the Supreme Court rules in the case of Thomas Andy Barefoot.

Barefoot, convicted of killing a policeman, came within 12 hours of his scheduled execution before the Supreme Court issued a stay Monday. The court plans to use the case to establish procedures for dealing with emergency appeals in death penalty cases.

A key issue to be considered by the high court is whether federal appeals courts should grant stays of execution to inmates whose federal

Police must open records, judge rules

HOUSTON (AP) — A state district judge has ordered the city of Houston to let the Houston Chronicle and the public see jail records which an appellate court declared open eight years ago.

Assistant City Attorneys Jim Faulkner and Tim James said they will ask a state appellate court here to review the order Judge Louis Moore filed Tuesday. Moore said the Houston Police Department must allow the public to see the police blotter and showup sheets. The blotter is a 10-part form made up on each person booked into the City Jail. It includes biographical data and a brief description of the charge on which the person was arrested. The showup sheets list some of the people who are booked daily into jail.

The Chronicle earlier this month filed a lawsuit against Mayor Kathy Whitmire and Police Chief Lee Brown seeking access to the blotters and showup sheets. The paper sought the records to interview former City Jail prisoners about conditions in the facility.

Attention was focused on conditions in the jail earlier this month after a prisoner, Melvin Roy Wells, 25, said he was beaten and raped on Dec. 27 after being arrested for public intoxication. He said jail attendants did not heed his repeated cries for help.

In 1974, the 14th Court of Appeals here ruled the blotter and showup sheets are public records and must be shown to anyone who asks to see them.

STARVING HORSES — Patricia Booth of Poetry, Texas, brings in one of 22 horses found starving on a ranch near Quinlan in Hunt County Tuesday. Officials took custody of the horses and prepared to file criminal charges against their owner. It was the second time in the past three months that starving horses were found on ranches in Northeast Texas.

2nd horse-starving case spurs concern

QUINLAN, Texas (AP) — A leader of a fledgling East Texas animal protection group says the attention drawn to recent cases of malnourished horses has led to the public reporting more cases of animal starvation.

Bobbie Stinson, a spokeswoman for the eight-month-old Hunt County Humane Society, filed a complaint that led to an order to seize 24 starving horses on a Sabine River bottom ranch near Quinlan.

Volunteers from throughout East Texas arrived in a caravan of pickup trucks and trailers Tuesday to help round up the horses.

"It's rather unnerving," Ms. Stinson said of the ranch where the horses and 15 horse skeletons were discovered.

"I cannot understand how people can do it in good conscience. How can they sleep at night?"

Charges of cruelty to animals — a Class A misdemeanor — were being prepared against the Dallas man who owns the 270-acre ranch and the horses. Conviction would carry a maximum $2,000 fine and a year in jail.

A helicopter search Tuesday turned up a total of 24 horses, which were found on the boggy, frequently flooded property covered with scrubby broomweed, Ms. Stinson said.

She said the last time anyone remembered seeing the animals fed was about six weeks ago, when two large bales of hay were left on the property.

Cruelty to horses, she said, is a problem that only recently gained notice when 129 malnourished mustangs were found in November — along with the carcasses of 36 horses that starved to death — on an overgrazed ranch near the East Texas town of Pittsburg.

"I think the Pittsburg deal kind of spearheaded the whole thing," Ms. Stinson said. "People have really opened their eyes."

The humane society knows there are more starving animals on ranches than has been reported, she said.

"I definitely think there's a lot more out there. It's always going to happen. These horses have been there for two years, and we found 15 skeletons — just bones," she said.

Peace Justice Merrick Money issued seizure papers for the animals Monday. The surviving animals, described as in "very poor condition because of insufficient food," were to be taken to the Fund for Animals refuge for abused animals near Tyler.

Ms. Stinson said Humane Society officials and a veterinarian surveyed the herd of ponies and horses Monday after three carcasses and at least a dozen piles of bones were discovered on the land late last week.

She said she had been told the land had been under water about six times this winter, and that the horses were stranded on small islands.

Quinlan is a town of about 4,000 located 15 miles south of Greenville and about 40 miles east of Dallas. The ranch is six miles southwest of Quinlan in southern Hunt County.

City officials meet in Austin

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Mayor Clyde Angel and Mayor Pro Tem Jack Y. Smith met today with an Austin attorney to discuss a lawsuit that challenges Big Spring's election system.

Also present at the session with attorney Walter Mizell in his Austin office were City Manager Don Davis and City Attorney Doyle Curtis.

Angel said no votes were taken and that other councilmen will be briefed about the closed session at their regular meeting Thursday. He said he did not know if any decisions would be made at that time about the lawsuit.

Councilmen hired Mizell at a Dec. 14 meeting to review their position in the suit filed against them in behalf of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Woman injured in crash

A 28-year-old woman whose car ran over two gas meter barriers and struck a house last night was listed in good condition at Cowper Hospital today, her doctor said.

Debra McDaniel Loftis of 1612 State suffered injuries and was arrested on suspicion of driving while intoxicated after the accident occurred in an alley that runs between The Green House on Scurry and 12th street.

Apparently Ms. Loftis was driving a Datsun 280-Z away from the nightclub, veered to her left and struck the barriers and tore off a corner of the 204 W. 12th house.

The suspect also was ticketed for no liability insurance.

Someone fired five shots into two plate glass windows last night at Jabor Dry Goods at 600 Lamesa Highway. Joe Jabor told police the shots were fired from a vehicle that pulled in front of his store and then sped away northbound on the highway.

Within a span of 30 minutes yesterday morning, police arrested two men suspected of shoplifting laxatives at local stores.

Arthur Ridings, 66, of 1108 E. 15th was arrested at Furr's Super Market and Orlando Pitt Gonzalez, 31, of 500 S. Lancaster was arrested at Giant Food Store.

Debra Lusk of Green Acres Nursery at 700 E. 17th told police someone stole $100 cash and three blank paychecks from her building between Jan. 20 and Jan. 24.

Edward Maxwell of 1-20 Trailer Park told police someone stole a $300 35mm camera yesterday afternoon from his vehicle while he was inside the Texas Employment Commission.

habeas corpus appeals have not been fully reviewed and ruled on by the appeals court.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had rejected Barefoot's request for a stay, deciding not to issue stays unless it found the appeal had a good chance of success.

The result in the Barefoot case would have been the same as in the case of Charlie Brooks Jr., who was executed in Huntsville Dec. 7 — the execution would have taken place without the appeals court ruling on the formal appeal.

Mattox said Tuesday that if the Supreme Court rules in the Barefoot case that the 5th Circuit's standards are correct, and that a full federal habeas corpus appeal is not necessary, Texas could have as many as 10 more executions this year.

Only six people have been executed in the nation since the death penalty was reinstated in 1976.

However, Kennedy added: "There is a strong bipartisan feeling on the Hill to try to work together on the principal issue of the economy."

Congressional leaders on both sides of the aisle said Reagan would have a hard time winning approval for his provisional tax increase, either in the GOP controlled Senate or the Democratic-led House.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, in testimony prepared for the House-Senate Joint Economic Committee, said today that, while the best way to cut the federal deficit is to pare spending, "if we are not successful in reducing outlays sufficiently, and deficits still loom in the out-years even as the economy recovers, we are prepared to request additional revenue-raising measures to be effective in those years."

Reagan's proposed standby tax surcharge would be levied as of Oct. 1, 1985 only if the deficit is projected to exceed 2.5 percent of the gross national product — and only if Congress has first adopted his freeze proposal.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., called Reagan's proposals "heroic and necessary" and said they "will be controversial but I think Congress will respond to the challenge he uttered."

Reagan, referring to the highest level of unemployment since the Depression, agreed this was "a painful period" for the nation's 12 million unemployed.

puter programs) being distributed by various companies.

Dawes said many of the programs are designed by programmers and are sometimes not practical in teaching situations.

He said action must be taken to get programmers and teachers working together to revise programs and make them teachable.

"Most of it (current programs) is just drill and practice," Dawes said. "That's not really using a computer much more significantly than a workbook. Computers can be used to teach and not just practice, and that takes well thought-out programs."

Hise agreed, adding "If the teaching staff doesn't see any use in it then it doesn't matter about what kind of equipment we have. Our approach is to start with what we have and let our people see how it can be beneficial to students."

Dawes said the computer influx will soon create a need for teachers to be familiar with the territory.

"The use of computers is not going to diminish and demand for knowledgeable people is going to increase," Dawes said. "And while schools should be cautious, they can hardly afford not to move in some extent to making personnel more knowledgeable."

Since the program is in its infancy, it is difficult for Hise or Dawes to predict the effectiveness of this new wave of technology, but a high level of interest among students and parents indicates the program is worthwhile.

"Students are motivated for the most part to study and work on the computers willingly, and that's hopeful," Dawes said.

As for the future, no one can really predict where the computer rage will lead.

Dawes suggests that soon every classroom will have at least one computer for student and teacher use. He also says high schools may make "computer literacy" part of the required curriculum as some colleges and universities have done.

Six arrested in cyanide water threat

WAITING FOR WATER — Residents of Hammond, La. wait their turn Tuesday to fill containers with water for drinking. Water was trucked into the town to provide a safe source of pure water after Hammond joined a growing list of numerous other Louisiana towns that have received threats that their water supplies had been poisoned with cyanide.

HAMMOND, La. (AP) — Six people have been arrested for allegedly threatening to poison water systems with cyanide, and state officials, believing dozens of calls are "copycat" hoaxes, urged local authorities to keep water flowing unless poison is found.

The threats have disrupted service to 220,000 people and prompted emergency tests on 55 waterworks in the state. Of the six people arrested, five were teen-agers.

One test, performed Monday night in Hammond, found traces of cyanide, but not enough to be hazardous. A second test Tuesday found no cyanide at all. Health officials said they could not tell whether the cyanide in the Hammond water occurred naturally or had been introduced deliberately.

Sue Ellen Lewis, spokeswoman for the state Department of Health and Human Resources, said Tuesday night that since the first threat Thursday in St. Gabriel, 55 threatening calls had been received by waterworks for parishes, cities, towns, subdivisions and private industries.

Ms. Lewis said she had no comprehensive list of the communities that cut off water after getting the threats, but an estimated 220,000 people were without water for at least part of Tuesday.

Gov. Dave Treen termed the callers "kooks" and vowed to find the money for a thorough investigation, even if it means taking funds from other state budgets. And Louisiana State Police and the FBI were forming a joint task force to find all the callers.

Gregory Larks, 20, of Gonzales, was arrested late Monday and booked for in-investigation of criminal mischief for allegedly making anonymous calls threatening contamination of the Gonzales water system, state police said Tuesday.

Three 14-year-olds were arrested Tuesday, two from Basile and one from Abbeville, troopers said. On Monday, a 14-year-old was arrested in Lake Arthur, and a 13-year-old boy was arrested in Scotlandville, and booked on criminal mischief and telephone harassment charges, according to the state police.

The identities of the teen-agers were being withheld. Hammond was the only place where cyanide was detected, state officials said.

Mubarak visits Washington today

Can U.S. break Mideast stalemate?

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak is expected to urge President Reagan to put more pressure on Israel to withdraw its troops from Lebanon, but U.S. officials concede they don't know what their next step should be.

"We are stuck," acknowledged one well-placed State Department official Tuesday.

Mubarak, who arrives late today for a three-day visit, will meet with Reagan, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger on Thursday.

Egypt's foreign minister, Kamal Hassan Aly, has said Mubarak will tell Reagan that Egypt won't return to Mideast peace negotiations with Israel unless the Israelis withdraw their troops from Lebanon.

negotiations with Israel unless the Israelis withdraw their troops from Lebanon.

Aly said if the United States fails to arrange an Israeli withdrawal, it will "further weaken confidence in the effectiveness of the American role. Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon is an important test of American policy."

Shultz met with special U.S. Mideast envoy Philip C. Habib Tuesday to explore ways of breaking what is now seen as a deadlock in the month-old withdrawal negotiations among Israel, Lebanon and the United States.

THE STATE Department said earlier this week it is "extremely disappointed" in the slow pace of the withdrawal talks.

A department official, who spoke only on condition his name not be used, said the feeling is growing here that the Israelis are stalling in the withdrawal negotiations because they want to delay new talks on an overall Arab-Israeli peace settlement.

Reagan has proposed a peace plan that calls on Israel to surrender the occupied

West Bank, which would be run by Palestinians in association with Jordan.

The key to the Reagan plan is getting King Hussein of Jordan to enter peace talks with Israel and Egypt, taking the side of the Palestinians. But U.S. officials say there is little chance of persuading Hussein to take such a step without a prior commitment for an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon.

"Hussein takes the position that 'If you can't get Israel out of Lebanon, how can you possibly get it out of the West Bank?'" said one official, who insisted on anonymity.

Both Mubarak and Hussein also are pressing the administration to compel Israel to halt its construction of settlements on the West Bank. Reagan has proposed a settlements freeze, but Israel so far has ignored him.

One indication of administration displeasure with the Israelis is that a date hasn't yet been set for a visit to Washington by Prime Minister Menachem Begin. Reporters have been told a visit is unlikely until there is progress in arranging an Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon.

In Jerusalem, according to a dispatch from that city appearing in today's editions of The Washington Post, a U.S. official was quoted as saying Reagan had told Begin that Israel had to agree to withdraw its forces from Lebanon before Begin could visit the president again. The official was not identified.

SECRETARY OF State George P. Shultz said today that Begin is "always welcome in the United States."

Shultz said on the CBS Morning News that no date had been set for a Begin visit, but that reports from Israel indicate Begin would like to concentrate on "the West Bank, the basic peace process that was started at Camp David, and we agree. That's the center of the action, and we've got to keep our eye on that."

Illinois native wants to tag native Texans

AUSTIN (AP) — There's a move on here to license native Texans.

State Rep. Chip Staniswalis, R-Amarillo, has introduced a measure that would tag people born within the Texas borders with the label "Texas Native."

The legislation, if approved, would allow Texas drivers to display license plates inscribed with the label.

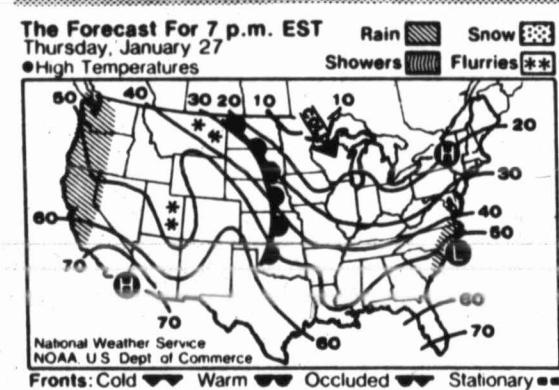

"There is a certain euphoria that the people who are born in Texas are raised with," said Staniswalis, who, because he was born in Illinois, would not be able to buy a set.

The special license plates would cost $50 per set and applicants would have to show a birth certificate or "other proof" that they are native Texans, Staniswalis told The Dallas Morning News.

The revenue from the gimmick would help fund future highway projects, he said. No one is sure how much money could be collected primarily because no one is sure exactly how many of the 14 million residents were born in Texas, although the 1980 census shows 9.6 million native Texans.

Staniswalis said the idea hit him while he was driving to Arizona.

Snow and ice problems continued to plague motorists in the Panhandle and South Plains today, while fog reduced visibilities over portions of North and South Texas.

Light snow fell over the Panhandle Tuesday night, but no significant accumulations were reported. Light rain also fell over portions of East and South Texas and in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Winds over the northwestern two-thirds of the state were blowing from the north at 15 to 25 mph with isolated gusts to near 45 mph. Winds over the rest of Texas were variable at less than 10 mph.

The forecast called for widely scattered thunderstorms over Southeast Texas and scattered rain over East Texas into tonight.

FORECASTERS WERE looking for up to 12 inches of rain from the latest in a series of storms that have saturated Northern California since the weekend. Today's storm carried gusts up to 40 mph, and winds were expected to build as the main body of the cold front hit the coast.

Democrats offer plan to reform taxes

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Democratic Party leaders, trying to blunt Republican criticism that they don't have an alternative economic program, have spelled out proposals to reform taxes, reduce interest rates and control spending.

During a 28-minute filmed response to President Reagan's State of the Union address Tuesday night, the Democrats described the economy as "sliding backwards toward catastrophe."

But early in the film, Sen. Joseph Biden Jr., D-Del., said: "It's time we put up or shut up."

Produced at a cost of $120,000, the Democratic film aired on the three major commercial television networks shortly after the president's speech. Democratic members of Congress described 18 alternatives to Reagan's policies.

At a briefing earlier in the day, Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., acknowledged the Democrats believed they had to counter the claim from the president and other Republicans that only the GOP was offering a program to deal with the nation's economic problems.

"Our polls have indicated the people just don't know we have alternatives," said Coelho, chairman of the House Democratic Campaign committee.

The president's address was one of the few occasions he didn't chide the Democrats for failing to offer alternatives.

Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr., scheduled to be installed Friday as Republican Party chairman, took that role.

In a statement issued hours before the Democratic film was aired, Fahrenkopf said, "If the Democrats have one new idea as to how we can solve the problems which confront this nation, it is time to come forward with it."

Like the president, the Democrats focused in the film on the record budget deficits of the past two years.

Harry McPherson, a White House aide to Lyndon B. Johnson and narrator of the Democratic response, said a "combination of reckless defense spending and unproductive tax cuts is a disaster. It's a federal budget out of control."

Interspersed among the politicians were a carpenter and an electrician, both unemployed, college and high school students, farmers and a retired businessman. All of them complained about life during the past two years Reagan has been in office.

Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey said his fair tax plan "will simplify tax laws and make them equitable by eliminating unfair loopholes."

What will they think up next?

Some dogs howl mournfully, insistently, downright irritatingly, when they want in. Others yap. There are those who do not give tongue at all under these circumstances, but scratch at the door.

As to dogs that want out, repeat the above. The pattern's much the same. In either case, there's a high annoyance factor.

Enter Lorin F. Soward of Brownville, Neb., clearly a man of some experience. He has just been granted a patent for a pet's doorbell (which, presumably, a car or an aardvark or what have you, as well as a dog, could activate).

Our admiration, as the saying goes, knows no bounds.

My forgettery

Everyone has had those moments when a name or date hangs right on the tip of the tongue, just out of reach. The only problem with those momentary lapses of memory is that I fear they are becoming permanent fixtures.

Somewhere said a long time ago — I can't recall who — that forgetfulness is the onset of senility. If that is so, then I need to start breaking in a cane and perusing the Leisure Lodge listings.

I am beginning to believe my case of brain ebb is getting worse and contains unusual elements. For example, the majority of older folks I know have this phenomenal recall for their early years. My wife's grandfather of 80 can remember clearly the names of his 1920 horses, where he bought them, who he sold them to and even their quirks of gait. Uncanny.

What do I remember from the past? Zilch.

I HAVE THESE hazy memories of preschool years — mostly times when I was terrified by neighborhood dogs. My elementary years are mostly a blur, mercifully so.

Mrs. Haynes' first grade class was the biggest in school — I'd never seen so many kids in my life. I don't recall speaking until the second grade — a total blank.

Mrs. Woodcox, the terror of the third grade, had this policy of spanking students who spoke without raising their hands for permission. I didn't talk much that year either.

Fourth and fifth grades are just a morass while sixth grade has one memorable quality: I began noticing the strange shapes girls were developing. I never noticed before.

Seventh grade began the trauma of heterosexual relationships that continued seemingly forever. Maybe it's better not to remember those times so well after all.

HOW DID this turn into a trip down memory lane? Oh, yes, the topic — forgetfulness.

One embarrassing and irritating part of memory lapses is forgetting people's names. It's perhaps understandable losing those names of college friends (although I thought I'd never forget them), but I lose those names of people I see everyday.

It is just a big hello and the vacant stare while the memory synapses go into Panic Search.

Another irritating aspect that fortunately does not risk others' feelings is more personal. I once prided myself on the vast number of rock groups, songs and performers I could recall. Movies and books were also included in this mnemonic storehouse.

Now I have trouble remembering my favorite tune.

So what's the answer for these memory lapses? I can't remember. I once read a book on memory training by Jerry Lucas, the ex-basketball player turned recall genius (who did he play for?).

One of its secrets to better memory is to imagine the hope-to-be-remembered item in a ridiculous and unusual place. Memorizing the states was the first test, but I never could remember my unusual places.

I hate having to look up my phone number all the time. I especially detest sprinting out at gas stations to check my license number. I never can get my wife's birthday right.

I am really glad my name is at the top of this or I'd probably forget that. Well, that's all from Around T. Rim until next week.

Soap operas are addictive

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I think I must be addicted to television soap operas. I know I spend too much time watching them, but I get hooked on them and just can't seem to break the habit. Do you think there's anything harmful in this? — Mrs. H.W.

DEAR MRS. H.W.: I suspect that you know the answer to your own question, because I detect a sense of guilt in your letter and a feeling that you know you should be using your time in a more productive way. Yes, I think you need to re-examine the way you spend your time.

There are at least two good reasons I say this. First, I suspect there is a good chance you are spending so much time watching television (from what you say) that you are neglecting other things that you ought to be doing. Time is a very precious thing — once a minute is lost, it is lost forever. The Bible tells us to "redeem the time" (Colossians 4:5, King James Version). Yes, there is a legitimate place for relaxation and recreation. But we also have been given responsibilities by God — within our family, our job, etc.

Second, you need to ask yourself if your time can be used to better advantage or profit, and even if this sort of activity could be harmful to you. (We should ask this about anything that threatens to absorb our interest and I don't mean to single out soap operas any more than any other activity.)

I have been urging you not to escape from your responsibilities. But I would include especially your spiritual responsibilities in this. Have you ever thought seriously about your own relationship with God? Are you spending time each day in prayer and Bible study, seeking to learn more about God's will for your life? If you have never done so, give your life to Christ, and then seek to follow him each day.

No 'separation' in 1st amendment

Dear Editor:

One of the most disheartening things to me is the reinforcement by the media of widespread misunderstandings. A case in point is last Wednesday's editorial concerning prayer in the public schools. The writer hailed the Supreme Court's refusal to uphold Lubbock school students' right to gather on school property for voluntary group prayer. It was said that the court's refusal to hear the case simply upheld the First Amendment's "separation of church and state."

To say that the concept of "separation of church and state" is the prevailing opinion of the Supreme Court is to speak the truth. To attribute that concept to the Founding Fathers or to find it in the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution is to err seriously. Anyone familiar with the writing and words of the Founders knows that they had no such "separation" in mind when writing the Constitution. It is clear that they were religious men who viewed the United States as a religious nation. Further, they affirmed that the political system they were establishing was based upon religious premises. Some even went so far as to assert that the system could not survive if people ever ceased to be religious.

Of course, they understood well the dangers of a national church established by the federal government and also the dangers of the government interfering with the right of the people to practice their religion. Thus, they wrote the First Amendment to guard against both. It is clear, however, that the Founders never envisioned the "wall of separation" between church and state as promulgated and extended by the courts in our day. They would be shocked that the First Amendment is being used to deny citizens of this nation their right to assemble peacefully on public property and their right to free speech when that speech is in the form of prayer in schools. In fact, from their writings it is evident that the Founders expected the schools to teach religion!

It is one thing to agree with the modern Court's notions concerning an extreme separation of church and state, especially with respect to denying citizens their right to practice their religion and exercise religious influence at school. It is quite another, and very wrong, to assert that the Founders would agree and that the Constitution they wrote provides a basis for that kind of separation. Alexis de Toqueville gave a much more accurate picture of the Founders' intentions in his Democracy in America, saying, "On my arrival in the United States, the religious aspect of the country was the first thing that struck my attention; and the longer I stayed there, the more I perceived the great political consequences resulting from this new state of things."

Later de Toqueville wrote, "Religion in American takes no direct part in the government of society, but it must be regarded as the first of their political institutions... I am certain that they hold it to be indispensable to the maintenance of republican institutions. This opinion is not peculiar to a class of citizens or to a party, but it belongs to the whole nation and to every rank of society."

In all honesty, let us acknowledge that in the prayer cases our legal system seeks not to reinforce the thinking and intentions of the Founders, but rather to forward the creation of a modern society very much different from that the Founders envisioned.

Sincerely yours,

U.S. is now same as Russia

Dear Editor:

Your editorial on January 19, regarding the school prayer ban, was based solely on what you erroneously believe the "intent" of the First Amendment is. Our national school prayer ban is wrong and in violation of the law of the land, our Constitution.

Our country was founded upon the concept of constitutionalism (i.e. limited government under the rule of law). Under constitutionalism the people are governed by a written document of absolutes and not by the arbitrary opinions of men. Supreme Court Justice John Marshall stated in 1803 that "The Government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws and not men." This meant that the President, the Supreme Court, the Congress and the states, were under the law, not above it.

The First Amendment of our Constitution states that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." Now there is no separation of church and state in that First Amendment! It merely prohibits the national Congress from establishing a National Church of the United States like the Church of England was. The main thrust of the amendment is the prohibition of the Congress to make any laws that would limit the free exercise of religion, and up until the twentieth century, a constitutional separation of church and state never existed.

You never bothered to check out what the First Amendment says, or to check out what it meant for the first hundred years of our country's existence. The First Amendment was a guarantee to the states ensuring them that they would be able to continue whatever church-state relationship existed in 1791 when it was written. At that time over one third of the states still had established state churches that were not considered to be in violation with the First Amendment.

So you are wrong in your interpretation of what you think the "intent" of the First Amendment is, but then so was the Supreme Court when those fallible men relied upon their opinions and not the facts in 1963. The Supreme Court is the bad example that all "arbitrary law people" are following today. They now consider themselves above the law and as the lawmakers rather than as the guardians of the Constitution. In 1907 Supreme Court Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes revealed this fact when he said, "the Constitution is what the judges say it is." That's exactly what happened in the 1962 and 1963 prayer rulings, it was they who spoke and not the Constitution!

On January 15, the Lubbock Avalanche Journal ran a front page story on a Federal Judge in Alabama who had the guts to declare that the Supreme Court misread history when it banned school prayer. U.S. District Judge W. Brevard Hand ruled that the First Amendment was only meant to prevent establishment of a national religion such as the Church of England and it is not binding on the states. This judge was not afraid to publicly go on record as saying the Supreme Court was wrong in misreading history, because as he said, "Anything short of the outright establishment of a national religion was not seen as violative of the First Amendment."

I hope it was just an oversight that that story has not appeared in the Herald yet. The conclusions of the editorial you did run were absolutely naive. You said freedom of religion had not necessarily been abridged, and that the gains are far greater than the losses due to the prayer ban. You are wrong, because from the day of that decision we have not had freedom to practice religion in public schools in our country. We are now no different from the Soviet Union, because they too can believe whatever they want, but like us they are forbidden from practicing what they believe. The losses to academic freedom are just as great, for with the prayer ban freedom of speech was removed from public schools.

Sincerely,

One nation 'under God'?

Dear Editor,

In reference to the editorial on the Supreme Court's decision banning school prayer, there is a great deal of confusion in our day regarding the relationship of Church and State. To accept an absolute separation of Church and State is to accept the separation of God from civil government.

Some people believe that a system of law and its principles can somehow be religiously or morally neutral. It must be remembered, however, that neutrality is impossible. Some authority, whether it be God or man, is used as the reference point for all enacted laws. If a political system rejects one authority, it adopts another.

Most people do not realize that the First Amendment says nothing about Church and State or a separation between the two. It simply states that "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." The Constitution of the United States has the First Amendment as a safeguard so that the federal government can have no jurisdiction over the Church. Its purpose was to protect the Church and the already existing religious values.

The origin of the phrase "separation of Church and State" is found in a letter from Thomas Jefferson to a group of Baptist clergymen (Jan. 1, 1802). Jefferson was assuring them that the First Amendment guaranteed that there would be no establishment of any one denomination over another. The Supreme Court has taken Jefferson's "separation" clause (divorced from Jefferson's own explanation of the phrase) and used it to create a new and completely arbitrary interpretation of the First Amendment.

The intent of the First Amendment is that no law would be made by the federal government establishing a National Church. The First Amendment thereby provides freedom for religion not from religion. The states by this amendment were afforded that freedom in the area of religion. That's why our nation was founded on the principle "In God We Trust." If we are "One nation under God," why can't He be mentioned in our state schools or are we no longer a Christian nation? MRS. SPENCER WOLFE

Local delegations head for Austin

Big Spring will be represented in Austin over the next few days by several delegations of people. Bill Read and Leroy Tillery will attend the Texas Chamber of Commerce Legislative Conference and the Texas Good Roads Association. Granville and Marie Hahn will go to the Industrial Developers of West Texas meeting with the Industrial Commission. Sam Woodward, this community's new cultural affairs director, will travel to the Texas Association of Arts Councils. Sam Hill, vice president of SWCID, will be attending to matters helpful in getting various forms of assistance for that facility from Austin sources.

Five new Ambassadors-to-be have been named by that group. They are Rick Turner, Bill Nehls, Pat Porter, Dave Trusty and Steve Fraser. These men, after a training period, will become full-fledged Ambassadors.

The newly organized Women's Division of the Chamber will have a group similar in nature to the Ambassadors. The Women's Division is now in the process of defining goals and objectives in its 10 committees. This is a reminder to every woman in Big Spring to get involved in what promises to be the most dynamic group in town! Call me immediately and learn how easy it is to be a part of those who will make things happen! We particularly need the women of Coahoma, Forsan and Sands. We already have many things being planned and this is the time to give input! Clyde McMahon Jr., is the chairman of the Chamber Membership Drive which began yesterday. Each person on the membership team is challenged to sign up five new members between now and July. One big reason that a lot of owners of very small businesses find for joining the Chamber is to be eligible for a good group health insurance. Many have found that this is the only way they can feasibly afford a quality health insurance for themselves and their small number of employees. Check this out!

Attention all broadcasters and print journalists: Coming Feb. 11 there will be a mega-media-muster at the Brass Nail Restaurant to make kick-off announcements for the upcoming Signal Peak Shiner Pro-Am Golf Tournament. The Tournament will be held May 18-20 and will feature celebrities in addition to the golf pros. Attending the mega-media-muster will be Bob Lilly and Charlie Johnson. This private media party will preview all the exciting plans at the Country Club event, including that the proceeds will go to the permanent endowment fund of the crippled children shriners hospitals and burn centers.

Here's an innovative idea: A motorist in Irving, Texas, was hailed by a policeman when he stopped to allow another driver to pull out ahead of him. Instead of getting a ticket as he had feared, the motorist received a check for $10. An association of insurance agents in Irving had set up a $1,600 checking account for the police department to award motorists who demonstrated courtesy.

Tent settlement turns down chance to move

TENT CITY, Texas (AP) — A group of impoverished people living in a roadside park has rejected a Baytown woman's offer to move rent-free to her private property in Crosby a few miles away.

"We hear rumors every day that somebody is going to move us out of the park," said Bill Collins, 54, the group's spokesman. "But if we were to take a caravan of people over to that private property, there's no guarantee we couldn't be kicked out at any time."

Collins, who has lived in the settlement known as Tent City since November, also said the private 25-acre tract is swampy, waterlogged and needs a 1,500-foot access road.

The property owner, Juanita Adcox, said she was shocked when her offer was refused Monday night. She said the land has proper drainage and access and that she lived in a small home in front of the pasture before moving to Baytown about a year ago.

"I would have gone to hell and back for those people if they'd shown any interest," said Mrs. Adcox, 44. "But I think they really don't want any help."

Tent City, which appeared last spring, lies about 30 miles east of Houston next to U.S. Highway 90.

Tom Stephens, a free-lance writer who alternates living in Tent City and an apartment in Houston, said a barn on Mrs. Adcox's property was to be fixed up as a shelter.

But Mrs. Adcox said she could not promise some of the conditions Tent City residents asked for.

Planning for new year

The 4-H Horse Club held a meeting in mid-November to elect officers and plan activities for the coming year.

Blair Richardson was elected president, Wade Carper was elected vice president, and Renee Blackwell was elected secretary, reporter and treasurer.

The main activity of the horse club at the present time is both participating in and hosting horse judging contests.

AT THESE contests the members will judge four different halter classes and two performance classes. In the halter classes contestants compare four horses of similar age against each other and place them accordingly. The horses are judged by overall conformation, smoothness, balance, and travel ability.

In the performance judging, two classes from a field of five are chosen in advance. The choices are reining, western pleasure, cutting, roping, and western riding. Four horses will make up each of these classes. They will be compared to each other on a basis of performance, skill, ease and natural ability. Then they will be placed accordingly.

OF THESE four halter and two performance classes one of each will be designated as a "reasons" class. This means that the contestants must remember how they placed these two classes and, sometimes as much as a couple of hours later, from memory tell a judge the reasons why they placed a class like they did. The contestants are judged on how closely their placings compare with an official judge's placings.

The contests do not start until spring, but until then 4-H members will be viewing slides, films, studying materials, and listening to speakers to prepare themselves for that contest down the road.

Smuggling evidence 'invalid'

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge says pistols found in the hotel room of accused arms smuggler Ian Smalley cannot be used in Smalley's trial on charges of conspiring to export munitions illegally.

U.S. District Judge Robert M. Hill ruled Tuesday that a search warrant used to seize the weapons on Sept. 20 was invalid.

Smalley, 41, is scheduled to go on trial Monday on conspiracy charges and another count alleging he gave false information when he purchased the pistols from a Dallas hardware store.

FROZEN BRANCHES — Horticulturists advise homeowners to let ice thaw naturally from branches rather than shaking the branches. Shaking branches can cause limb breakage.

Natural thaw is advised for ice-encased trees

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

What do you do when a freezing rainstorm encases your trees and shrubs in ice? Do you run out and shake the branches to dislodge the ice?

Horticulturists caution home owners against doing this because it — as well as wind — can cause breakage of limbs. They advise letting the ice stay until it thaws naturally. Rather than shaking branches, place props under branches where possible to help them support the weight if you can do it without moving branches very much.

If your trees or shrubs sustain damage, examine the plants carefully where the breakage, splitting or cracking occurred. Remove damaged branches with a clean cut. Treat wounds more than an inch in diameter with a wound dressing.

Evergreens misshapen by the ice should be allowed to recover their natural form. Unless the wood is split, most evergreens are resilient and in time will return to their original shape. Later in the year, judicious pruning may help restore the desired shape of junipers and yews. You can tie arbovitae and other multistemmed evergreens with strong cord early in winter to help reserve their shape, which also can be distorted by heavy snows.

You can take advance protective steps by pruning away dead and diseased wood from trees and shrubs, removing limbs from too narrow crotches, and planting in protected sites.

Some trees break more easily than others, among them silver maple, Siberian (or Chinese) elm, willow, birch, cottonwood, poplar and sycamore.

WINTER WATER

Plants need water all year — and often they don't get enough in winter. Water is absorbed by plant roots and moves into the plant to become part of cell sap.

A good deal of plant damage blamed on cold weather is due to inadequate water in plant tissue. Dry winter winds often cause water loss from leaf or stem tissue faster than roots can replace it and cells collapse. Broad-leaved evergreens are among the heaviest victims.

Winter drying in broad-leaved evergreens often appears as irregular browning of leaf margins. In narrow-leaved evergreens, such as pines, needles brown at tips, or worse, twigs or entire branches die or become brittle.

Damaged deciduous plants may not leaf out properly in spring and have twig die-back. Winter sunscald or frost cracks increase problems.

In winter, roots are more likely to freeze in poorly drained soils than in well-drained soil.

Plants near house foundations may be drier than elsewhere because of roof overhangs or poor fill soil. Check for dryness during mild winter weather and water plants if above-freezing weather is expected to stay for a few days. Don't water heavily if a hard freeze is forecast. Freezing of water-logged soil can damage plant roots.

A 3- to 6-inch mulch helps conserve winter moisture, and prevents alternate heaving and thawing of soil. Windbreaks help reduce winter drying of plant tissue, especially for azaleas, rhododendrons and other broad-leaved evergreens.

Future planting should be given natural protection — by putting them downwind from evergreens, buildings or hills.

Don't forget to protect plants near roads and driveways from salt used to melt ice and snow. The salt can kill trees and shrubs.

Food prices in 1983 expected to rise slowly

DALLAS — The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced today that prices for beef, pork and poultry will rise slightly in 1983 but predicted that food prices in general will rise at one of the slowest rates in recent years.

At a regional conference on food and consumer issues affecting the central region of the country, a USDA economist projected that 1983 retail food prices are expected to rise between 3 and 6 percent. In 1982 food prices rose an average of 4 percent — the smallest rise since 1976. One of the major reasons cited for the low price rise, in addition to lower farm prices, was a significant slowdown in food marketing costs. USDA anticipates that this slowdown will continue to be a factor in 1983.

Timothy M. Hammonds, Food Marketing Institute (FMI) senior vice president, said that grocers are attempting to moderate any higher marketing costs by improving the productivity of food stores. The FMI official noted that computer-assisted checkout systems hold the potential for greater improving productivity of the industry. "By November, 1982, an estimated 6,944 supermarkets nationally were operating scanning systems and scanning is being used increasingly in the central states." The advantages of scanners include increased inventory control, more efficient pricing, and faster checkout lines," he said.

Interest in work, helping is volunteers' motivation

COLLEGE STATION — The strongest motivation for volunteering, according to a 1981 Gallup Poll, is the desire to help others. The second most popular motivation is interest in work.

In 1974, the typical American volunteer was a married, college-educated white woman between ages of 25 and 44 from the upper income brackets. Today's "new volunteer" is more likely to be employed full-time.

As a result, volunteers now select jobs that they consider important both to the community and for self-improvement. Volunteers want to put their limited time into projects they really care about. People are anticipating how the skills they develop from volunteering might qualify them for a better paying position. Today's volunteers may also expect benefits and incentives such as mileage, insurance coverage, formal training, and a performance review.

mistrust the motives of those requesting their services. Finally, volunteers must be well-trained and well-placed for maximum job satisfaction.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — An estimated 1.5 million cases of child abuse occur nationally each year. ## Paget's disease can be 'non-disease'

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am 53 and just recently found out that I have Paget's disease. It was discovered on X-rays. I had started having pain in my right hip. I learned from my physician that I had been developing this since 1976. I wonder if precious time has been lost in treating this. — P.D.

Paget's disease of the bone is a relatively common disorder. It affects 3 percent of the population over 40 and 10 percent over 70. That's a lot of people, and for most it is what might be called a "non-disease." It causes no problems and is usually discovered incidentally on X-rays. Let me give you an example of what I mean.

Life was going along beautifully for me until a few weeks ago. Then my barber spun the chair around and insisted I inspect his artistic work on the back of my head. As I gazed into the mirror, I caught sight of a bald spot I never knew I had. That was an incidental finding, and that's how Paget's is usually found.

Not all patients with Paget's need treatment. They might when the disease causes bone pain, or when it causes bone to break easily — then it is time to consider treatment. In your case, precious time was not lost. For one thing, treatment often entails side effects that are not worth the risk when there are no symptoms. Drugs used (when treatment does become necessary) are calcitonin, diphosphonates and mithramycin. And if the Paget's bone begins pressing on nerves, then there are surgical remedies available.

A further word about the illness itself. We tend to think of bones as rock-hard structures that stay the same throughout life — not so. They are constantly reconstituting with new mineral material. In Paget's, this constant remodeling process gets out of whack. Loss of bone begins outpacing production of new bone. Weak areas appear. There follows a period where bone growth becomes disorganized. Again, this happens in defined areas, not generally throughout the skeleton. And usually there are few symptoms.

That's Paget's disease of the bone. Your hip pain, if due to Paget's can be treated. See an orthopedic doctor.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My wife and I have been trying to have kids for about 14 months. I have been to two doctors to test my fertility. The first test showed a 48 million live sperm count. The other test showed 55 million. The doctors says my count is above average. What is your opinion? — L.B.

The lower limits of what constitutes a normal sperm count remains a matter of slight controversy, but they are usually given as somewhere between 40 million and 50 million sperm for each milliliter of ejaculate. As a practical matter, infertility seems to arise only when the levels get below 20 million.

And that is not the whole story. There are other factors besides the count. The shape of the sperm and their motility are also important considerations. So I cannot give you a definite opinion about your sperm count, not having the other information.

Not all back pain originates in the back. In his newest booklet, Dr. Donohue explains the spine, its muscles and nerves and how you can help yourself avoid back problems or ease those you may already have. For a copy of the new booklet, "Backache and Spine Problems," send 50 cents and a stamped, self-

Dear Abby

Troubled family

DEAR ABBY: I just found out that my mature 13-year-old son has been molesting my daughters. They are 3 and 6 years old. I think I should have the girls checked by a doctor to make sure they are OK, but I need some information first.

How much do I have to tell the doctor? Does a doctor have to report such cases to the law or the social service people? Would the police or social service people take my son or the girls away from me and put them in a foster home? I don't want to lose any of my children.

I talked to my son and he promised it will never happen again. If my children need counseling, is there free or low-cost counseling available?

I don't feel close enough to anyone I know to ask these questions and I don't trust my mail to be private. Answer, please, in your column. Sign me ...

UTAH MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: The welfare of all your children should be your first concern. Take the little girls to a doctor to be examined and tell the doctor the truth. Your son should be examined by a psychiatrist. Take him to your local mental health facility and be honest with the people there. Please don't worry that your children will be taken away from you. You need to put your problem into the hands of professionals. Even though your son has promised it will never happen again, he should be evaluated and counseled. And on the chance that the little girls have been psychologically damaged, they need counseling, too. Please follow this advice and let me hear from you again. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Our father died suddenly three months ago. We will be forever grateful to his second wife, "Mary," for making his last 12 years so happy.

Dad and our mother had been happily married for 40 years. When Mother died 14 years ago, Dad bought a double plot and expressed the wish to be laid to rest beside Mother.

When Dad died, Mary handled all the funeral arrangements. She hurriedly bought another double plot for Dad and herself, ignoring his wishes to be buried with his first wife.

We, the children were outraged, but said nothing at the time of Dad's funeral because we didn't want to cause an ugly scene. Also, Mary had been a devoted companion to Dad, and her obvious grief was sincere.

Should we confront Mary and have Dad's remains moved to the plot next to Mother in the spring? Two brothers say, "Wait until after Mary goes, then do it." What do you say?

TWO SISTERS

DEAR SISTERS: I vote with your brothers.

Taiwan jewelry may be glowing 'hot rocks'

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state Health Department urged New Yorkers on Tuesday to discard any glazed ceramic jewelry made in Taiwan because the colorful trinkets could be radioactive.

Health Commissioner David Axelrod said tests detected low-level radiation in the glazes used to produce the golden-yellow and off-white or beige hues in the jewelry. Axelrod said uranium was used in the glaze.

"We're not sure the other colors do not have uranium in the glazes as well," said Health Department spokesman Peter Slocum. "That is why we're encouraging New Yorkers to discard all of it."

Axelrod said the state alert has been passed on to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which is asking distributors around the country not to sell the suspect jewelry.

The state said the glaze appears on pendants, bracelets, earrings and hair combs. Designs usually involve brightly colored enamel flowers, butterflies or animals, surrounded with gold-colored metal etchings, the Health Department said.

It is usually inexpensive, ranging in price from $2 for a small pendant to $15 for a more elaborate piece like a comb, said department officials.

The ceramic glazing process is called "cloisonne" and the jewelry is often marketed under that name, the Health Department said.

Axelrod said "short-term exposure" to the jewelry "would not pose a serious health risk." But he said it would be better for New Yorkers to get rid of the jewelry than to take any chances.

According to Axelrod, a person wearing a piece of the radioactive ceramic jewelry for 10 hours, one day a week, would be exposed over the course of a year to about the same amount of radiation that has been set as the recommended limit for skin exposure.

Slocum said the radioactive nature of the glazes was discovered by accident last year at the Erie County Fair, where a booth had been set up by health officials to test gold jewelry for possible radioactivity.

Frances Tarlton, a spokeswoman for the Health Department, said state officials are still trying to determine which brand names of the suspect jewelry. She said state investigators so far believe the jewelry is being produced by many people in "a cottage-type industry" in Taiwan.

"It doesn't even say 'Taiwan' on it," said Ms. Tarlton.

Trial delayed after TV show.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal judge agreed Tuesday to delay the civil rights violation trial of seven New Orleans policemen because of a Jan. 16 report about the case on CBS' "60 Minutes."

The officers were charged with violating the civil rights of people they questioned about the murder of Officer Gregory Neupert, shot to death on Nov. 8, 1980.

Their trial, shifted to U.S. District Court in Dallas on a change of venue, was scheduled to begin Feb. 7.

Eastern reports 475 million loss

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines, blaming the recession and fare wars, Tuesday reported a loss of nearly $75 million in 1982 — its worst year since 1975 when it lost $95.6 million and nearly went bankrupt.

Eastern Chairman Frank Borman told a news conference, "The loss reflects the recession, and, of course, the over-capacity in the airline industry."

"The prospect for 1983 remains guarded. Clearly, the airline industry is a reflection of the general economy," Borman said.

Despite Eastern's financial crisis, it has not laid off any employees as other troubled airlines have been forced to do. But the poor 1982 performance provides support for the company's position that it can't afford the pay raises sought by the 13,000-member union.

The machinists have been bargaining unsuccessfully with Eastern since Dec. 31, 1981 and are threatening to strike in March.

Borman would not speculate on what would happen if the union workers walked out, saying only, "It would be our intention to fly through a strike. We would not shut down."

Borman said Eastern lost $74.9 million during 1982, compared to a $65.9 million loss in 1981.

The company's fourth-quarter picture showed improvement over 1981. Eastern reported a $12.2 million profit for the last three months of 1982, compared to a $26.7 million loss in late 1981. But the third-quarter profit wasn't enough to surmount a loss of $87.1 million built up in the first nine months.

If a federal mediator declares an impasse this week, it could set the stage for a March strike after a cooling-off period expires.

The airline recently reduced its wage offer to the union and wants workers to accept a two-year wage freeze, with a 10 percent increase in the last year of a three-year contract.

The union has asked for a 30 percent raise over three years. Many other issues still separate the two sides.

Eastern was the first major airline to report its 1982 results but is not expected to be alone with its loss.

BSHS turns White after Bobcat rally

IT'S MY REBOUND, MY MAN — Big Spring High forward Tony Randle (34) pulls down a missed Bobcat shot into front of 6-6 Jeff Kasner (43) Tuesday night in Steer Gym. Randle had 10 points in the game to go with eight rebounds but the Bobcats won the 4-5A game, 64-59.

Central forward gets 35 in 64-59 win

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

A simple deduction could be drawn from Tuesday night's showdown between Big Spring High and San Angelo Central. If there is a player in District 4-AAAAA better than Steer Jerald Wrightsil, it's Bobcat Lorand White.

White sank eight of his 10 third quarter shots for 16 points as Central overcame a nine-point halftime deficit to upend the Steers 64-59 in a crowded Steer Gym.

The loss was a costly one for BSHS. After one round of league play — although the district season will not be played in halves, the Steers stand 3-4. The Bobcats make the turn with a 4-3 record and improve to 17-9 overall.

After Big Spring had dominated the second quarter and built its healthy lead, the Bobcats regrouped in their dressing room. "I told them the biggest thing was that we had to play with more intensity and not wait on someone else," coach Rob Wylie said later. "In the second half — to a player — we got everybody trying to make something happen."

If hesitation was the problem for the Bobcats in the first two quarters, White and teammates solved the predicament in the third stanza. The Bobcats worked the ball down low and the 6-3 senior responded with 16 of his team's 24 points in the quarter. Through the first half, the Steers had contained White; after halftime he was unstoppable.

"We didn't recognize that the guy was down low and they kept lobbing it to him," explained BSHS coach Archie Myers. "Someone should have stepped back and sandwiched him but we didn't."

The aftereffect of a missed slam by bulky Henry Green, strangely enough, put the Bobcats ahead for the first time in the second half.

By scoring 10 points, White guided the 'Cats from nine down to within a point, 41-40. He scored again downcourt after a Wrightsil basket to keep his team close. Big Spring turned the ball over, leaving it in the hands of the 6-5 Green who lumbered off towards the BSHS basket.

His two-handed dunk attempt hit all iron but it was White — in the right place at the right time — to gather in the rebound and score the go-ahead points with 1:12 left in the period. San Angelo led by five, 50-45, entering the final quarter.

Down but not out, the Steers charged back as Wrightsil scored three straight baskets from the 25-foot range to put his team on top 51-50 with 5:01 to play. Jeff Kasner missed two free throws and Big Spring had a chance to add to its lead but Wrightsil went cold on his fourth shot. Kasner made up for his misses with a turnaround jumper and Central was never to trail again.

Jinx Valenzuela fouled out with 2:34 to play and the Bobcats began a string of seven successful shots at the foul line. In that final two and a half minutes, the Bobcats converted eight of 10 foul tries to hold the Steers at arm's length.

The key play came with just over two minutes to go. Tony Randle had just scored from the lane to cut the score to 56-55 and Kasner fumbled the ball away under his own goal. Four Steers scrambled for it but it was White — in the right place again — who scooped up the loose ball and laid it in for a three-point lead.

"That played killed us," Myers moaned.

While it was mostly a San Angelo show in the second half, Big Spring kept the largest home crowd of the season roaring in the first half with fancy passing and ball-handling. Moving Wrightsil out front as a decoy, the Steers utilized their other weapons to keep Central off stride.

"We've got some other guys who can do some things," Myers said. "We redesigned our offense and when they stayed on Jerald, we had those other guys wide open."

That was most evident in the first half as Big Spring scored 17 field goals with Wrightsil taking just eight shots. But for the second straight game, the 6-3 senior failed to take a free shot. He's scored 48 points, sinking 24 field goals.

In the second quarter when Big Spring outscored Central 26-12, an aggressive defense forced seven turnovers and held White to 3 hoops. BSHS gained its lead on a layup by Kevin Watson with 4:42 left in the half (23-21) and stretched the advantage to 11 points with 13 seconds left on a free shot by Watson.

"I thought we played very hard, the guys were really up for the game," Myers said. "It's those little things. If you do them, you come out on top. If they do them, they come out on top."

Was he impressed with White? "That White's a good player," Myers said with a shake of his head. "He's a scorer (his term for the complete player)."

How does your team stand now with the loss? "We're 3-4 but I believe a man that loses five will be all right." Wylie agreed with Myers. "This was a big game but the loser isn't out of it the way everyone's knocking everyone else off. There's been so much inconsistency. If anyone can string four or five wins together, they can run off and win this thing."

White finished with 35 points and was the lone Bobcat in double figures. Wrightsil had 18 for the Steers, now 13-9 overall, with Randle (eight rebounds) and Valenzuela following with 10 each. Big Spring shot 47 per cent (27-57) for the game.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, JAN. 27, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good time to observe the progress you have made in the past and to draw up new plans for greater progress in the future. Strive for success and happiness.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Go to the right sources for information you need. Take time to visit with friends and relieve tensions you are under.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You may find it difficult to handle monetary affairs early in the day but later they work out fine for you. Be wise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Radical changes may be required to gain your most cherished aims at this time. Be sure to improve your appearance.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make a deep study of what is really important in your life and then go after your aims in a positive manner.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Friends cannot be of much help to you during the day, but can be relied upon in the evening. Much pleasure is yours tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Follow every rule and regulation that applies to you today and gain the respect of others. Be poised at all times.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Situations may not work out as fast as you would like at this time, but don't force matters, or you could get into trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Compose yourself so that sudden situations today will not get the best of you. The evening can be a most happy one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to please others as much as possible today and avoid unpleasantness. Take time to meditate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be careful in the handling of important work at this time. Taking risks could bring trouble at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't permit anyone to force you into some situation that you know is not right for you. Be poised at all times today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Express your fine ability when called upon to do so today and please higher-ups. Come to a fine accord with associates.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can easily get along well with others, so be sure to give the best education you can afford and future success is assured. Give ethical training early in life. Sports are a must in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Three states fight over who votes first

WASHINGTON (AP) — A three-cornered war between New Hampshire, Vermont and Iowa over which state will vote first in the 1984 presidential campaign is threatening to upset the Democratic Party's plan to shorten the primary and caucus season.

Democratic Party chairman Charles T. Manatt issued a tough warning on Monday that any state that bucks the party rules risks having its delegation turned away from the 1984 Democratic National Convention.

But Rep. Chris Spirou, the Democratic leader of the New Hampshire House of Representatives, dismissed Manatt's warning as "not news" and filed a bill that would schedule his state primary ahead of any other state election or caucus.

A party official in Iowa said legislators in that state are prepared to retaliate with legislation that would require that Iowa's precinct caucuses be held before any other state holds a primary or caucus.

Until now, New Hampshire has been content to hold the first primary, while Iowa was happy as the state with the first caucuses. And when the Democratic Party moved last spring to shorten the period for choosing convention delegates it recognized the special status of New Hampshire and Iowa by letting them go first.

Under the new party rules all other states must schedule their primaries or caucuses between the second Tuesday in March and the second Tuesday in June, a 13-week period.

Iowa was permitted to hold its caucuses 15 days early and New Hampshire its primary seven days in advance of the starting date for other states.

What touched off the war was Vermont's decision to go ahead with its non-binding presidential primary on March 6, the same day of the New Hampshire balloting.

National party officials charged with enforcing the new rules said they had no authority to force Vermont to change its date because its primary is a beauty contest. The state's convention delegates are chosen later and are not required to follow the primary results.

So far as New Hampshire Secretary of State Bill Gardner is concerned, that triggered the state law that requires the presidential primary to be held one week before any similar type election.

"I assume Vermont is a similar type of primary," said Gardner in a telephone interview. "Everybody's going to be voting. It's going to be by paper ballot."

Under Gardner's interpretation, the New Hampshire primary would be held Feb. 28.

Principal strike shuts schools

BUTTE, Mont. (AP) — Public school administrators walked off the job Tuesday and teachers boycotted classrooms in a show of support, forcing schools to close for 6,400 students.

About 30 principals and other administrators are in a dispute with the school board over job security in anticipation of layoffs expected next school year.

Negotiations between the administrators, represented by the Teamsters union, and the school board collapsed Monday night.

The schools opened Tuesday but teachers refused to cross the administrators' picket lines and few students showed up for classes. The schools were closed and locked about a half-hour after the strike began at 8 a.m.

About 6,400 students attend the city's 16 public schools. They include 12 grade schools, two junior high schools, one high school and a vocational-technical center.

Among administrative personnel, only the superintendent of schools and a few other non-union executives remained on the job.

The major issue is seniority protection. The administrators want years of service to be the prime consideration when trustees transfer or lay off administrators. The trustees do not want to be tied to a strict seniority clause when deciding who would be laid off in the event of school closures or personnel cutbacks.

Administrators' annual salaries range from $20,350 to $35,500, with some working 12 months a year and others contracted to work only nine months.

U.S. may urge world trade summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Admitting the international body that oversees trade agreements between nations almost collapsed at its last meeting, U.S. Trade Representative William E. Brock indicated on Tuesday that the Reagan administration may push for a summit meeting on the agency's future.

Brock testified at a hearing of the Senate Finance Committee which brought out strong criticism from senators over the organization known as the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT.

"It is quite possible that had the United States not been there, there would have been no GATT on the day after the meeting," Brock said in describing the agency's last session.

GATT, which is designed to work out reciprocal trade agreements among 88 member nations, last met in Geneva in November.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the committee's chairman and an observer at the Geneva session, said it appeared to him "that the viability of GATT may have been called into serious question."

Another observer, Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said he "came away very frustrated and disappointed and wondering what the future of free trade was."

Brock said the meeting made "progress... but not as much as the United States had originally hoped."

He told the senators, "We came very close to falling over the abyss into having no international arrangements at all."

Brock indicated the administration is seriously considering a proposal by Grassley and others that an international commission or summit meeting be convened to chart the future of GATT.

"There has been a lot of discussion but no final agreement has been reached, or at least announced, at this time," he told the committee.

Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., said the meeting of GATT ministers "proved conclusively what we have suspected for some time: that the GATT is virtually useless when it comes to dealing with the trading problems of today."

Brock said the issues that caused the near-breakdown included international trade in services and agricultural products.

He made the statements in response to a question by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., about the threat of defaults by Third World countries with large debts to Western banks.

"Given the economic atmosphere in which the (meeting) took place, perhaps our most important achievement was in keeping the GATT system together and moving in a positive direction," Brock said.

'E.T.' scary, but good for kids, doctors say

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The movie "E.T." declared off-limits to youngsters in three Scandinavian countries, doesn't scare kids as much as it touches them, say U.S. child psychiatrists who liken it to "The Wizard of Oz."

"There is something in the film that has captured an important part of a child's concern," said Dr. Kenneth Robson, director of child psychiatry at the New England Medical Center Hospital in Boston.

"The feeling of being understood by someone else in an alien world is common in childhood. It's sharing on the same level, between two people or creatures who are frequently misunderstood, which is the rule of childhood anyway."

The Swedish Board of Film Censorship last week banned children under 12 from "E.T., The Extra-Terrestrial," saying the fantasy film portrayed adults as enemies of children. The censors also said children might be "agonized" by the "threatening and frightening atmosphere" in "E.T."

Finland has set the age limit at 8 and Norway at 12. In the United States, where "E.T." surpassed "Star Wars" last weekend to become the biggest moneymaker in movie history, the film is rated "PG," which means all ages are allowed but parental guidance is suggested.

"Children's anxieties are more likely to be increased by horror films than one as gentle as this," said Dr. Edward Futterman, clinical professor of psychiatry and pediatrics at the Yale Child Study Clinic.

"Some of the most frightening movies to kids are 'Pinocchio,' 'Snow White' and 'Bambi,'" said Dr. Elissa Benedek, an Ann Arbor, Mich., child psychiatrist. "You can't predict when a movie will tap into a particular concern of a child, especially very young children."

Fear is OK if it's "digestible," said Robson.

"That is, given the child's age and previous experience, is it more disorienting than growth-enhancing?" he said. "The kind of fear in a film like 'Jaws,' for example, is unhealthy for youngsters."

In "E.T.," children are sometimes at odds with adults. And last week, in Sweden at least, children took up picket signs to complain about some other adults — film censors. Among the messages: "Children's films are made for children" and "We want E.T."

"I think everyone should be allowed to see it and learn that there are planets out there," said Anna Fogelstrom, 9, as she emerged from a Stockholm cinema. She dodged the ban by pretending to be of age.

Steven Spielberg, creator of "E.T.," has said the story came right out of his childhood daydreams. It is the story of children living in a California suburb who discover "E.T.," a kid-sized alien abandoned by his spaceship while collecting plant samples on Earth.

"E.T." is pursued by federal agents who are seen from the perspective of E.T., or a child — at waist level. When the agents' faces eventually appear on camera, they are obscured by spacesuit helmets.

The kids hide "E.T." in their room and their mother is oblivious even when she opens the refrigerator door and knocks the alien flat on his back. The adults find E.T., dying and homesick, and efforts to save his life seem to kill him.

But the alien comes back to life after Elliott, the alien's special friend, says, "E.T., I love you." And in a wild bicycle ride, the youngsters elude the authorities and take E.T. to his spaceship, which has returned.

Robson said the relationship between the children in the film and the gawky, benign alien is "like one they might have with a best friend or a dog, but rarely with an adult. It illuminates children's fantasies about parental control, but it doesn't make them alienated from their parents."

Shuttle hydrogen leak tested

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Space shuttle Challenger's engines were successfully test-fired Tuesday for a second time, and troubleshooters quickly began analyzing results for any sign of a hydrogen leak that has kept the ship earthbound.

NASA said that if preliminary findings showed the leak had either disappeared or came from an external source, a late February date might soon be set for Challenger's much-delayed space debut. Thorough analysis of all detection instruments was expected to take days.

The 20-second engine test, its boom reverberating throughout Kennedy Space Center, was termed a success in that there were no immediate problems detected in engine performance and ignition countdown.

Blue and yellow flames spouted from the tail section of the spaceplane, firmly secured to the seaside launch pad along with its rust-colored external fuel tank and white rocket boosters. Billowing clouds of white smoke drifted lazily off into the overcast skies as some in the crowd of several hundred tourists and space workers applauded.

"The firing was on time and lasted for the required 20 seconds at 100 percent thrust," said space center spokesman Hugh Harris. "Now the real work starts."

The five-day mission was pushed back after the leak was detected during the first "flight readiness firing" in December. Officials said they were worried that if the leak was internal to the engine room, it could lead to a fire during liftoff.

The 56-hour countdown which began Saturday went smoothly until early Tuesday, when one of 17 hydrogen sensors newly installed on the engines "acted erratically" and had to be replaced.

The count was halted for almost two hours, but time was made up during built-in "hold" periods and ignition took place at 11 a.m. EST as scheduled.

The space agency called off a late-January launch of the new shuttle because of concern over safety factors when tedious, time-consuming inspections and detection tests failed to determine the source of the leak.

The cancer personality: One's outlook may bring on disease

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Can the way people react to life's problems make them more likely to get cancer? Many researchers now think so, and they say there is a definite cancer personality.

Cancer strikes about one in three Americans. Now, several studies indicate that people who get the disease are more apt to have a particular group of habits and attitudes.

It is a kind of passive, emotionless outlook on life that doctors call the cancer personality.

Although this profile has emerged from many years of psychological testing, new research into the intricacies of hormones is providing an explanation of how it makes people sick.

Their theory: A lifetime of pent-up emotion causes the release of a variety of hormones that weaken the body's immune system. Instead of seeking out tiny cancers and killing them, their bodies let them get away. And they grow and spread and kill.

People with the cancer personality have trouble dealing with stress, studies indicate. They are quiet, placid, emotionally repressed people.

"They tend to be the kind of person who outwardly views the world uniformly as a positive, non-threatening place," says Dr. Joan Z. Borysenko. "They will describe things as very nice, be very calm and helpful and not express negative emotions of any sort."

In fact, they have trouble expressing any feelings at all. When something bad happens to them, they do not blow up in anger or fight back. Instead, they withdraw into a cocoon of helplessness and despair. They simply give up.

Many have had emotional trouble early in childhood that makes it hard for them to relate to others. They feel that close relationships will bring pain.

Mrs. Borysenko, a psychologist and cell biologist at Harvard Medical School and Beth Israel Hospital, is one of a group of doctors looking into the links between personality and cancer. The effort to understand the chemistry involved has opened a new field of research called psychoneuroimmunology.

These researchers point out that many things can cause cancer: smoking, radiation, food, sunlight, chemicals and more. Even though personality probably does not belong on this list, it may increase the likelihood of cancer by hamstringing the body's tools for crushing it before it spreads.

Psychologists first started talking about a cancer personality after measuring the attitudes of people who already had the disease. But doubts persisted. Did they get cancer because they had this personality? Or did they have this personality because they got cancer?

Newer studies have measured people's personalities and then waited to see if they got cancer.

One of these long-term studies was conducted at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago. Dr. Richard B. Shekelle and colleagues gave a personality test to 2,020 men. When they followed up 17 years later, they found that those who had shown depression on their tests were twice as likely to have died from cancer.

Such studies take so long that some are just begining to provide results. For instance, Dr. Carolyn B. Thomas has been working on one at Johns Hopkins since 1948. Researchers gave psychological tests and questionnaires to 1,337 medical students. By 1979, 48 of them had gotten cancer. Questions the cancer victims had answered about family attitudes revealed a "lack of closeness to parents."

Another study at King's College Hospital in London took a different approach. Doctors looked at 160 women who were admitted for biopsy of breast lumps but who didn't know whether they had cancer. They found far more suppression of anger in those whose lumps turned out to be cancerous.

Not only do people with this personality get cancer more often, but they are also more likely to die quickly from the disease once it strikes. A variety of studies show that the patients who keep fighting, hope for a turnaround and express their emotions will live longer.

At King's College Hospital, doctors studied 57 women who were given psychological tests after surgery for breast cancer, then reviewed their cases five years later.

Black groups contest use of NAACP initials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two of the nation's prestigious civil rights groups, allies in the streets of Mississippi and the marble chambers of the Supreme Court, are going to court this week in a battle over use of the initials NAACP.

The dispute has smoldered for years between the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and its one-time legal arm, the now independent NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund Inc. The NAACP says use of its initials by the defense fund is a trademark infringement.

U.S. Circuit Judge Nathaniel R. Jones of Cincinnati, former general counsel of the NAACP says, "You get a sick feeling in your stomach."

The case "weakens the civil rights movement," says Joseph Rauh, a veteran civil rights lawyer in Washington. "It's a waste of resources."

Last May, the 73-year-old NAACP filed suit in U.S. District Court to stop the defense fund from using the letters. Oral argument is scheduled for Thursday and lawyers for these two old friends, who separated for tax reasons in 1957, may have some cross words for each other.

The NAACP has hired former Sen. Edward W. Brooke to represent the organization. Veteran civil rights leader Vernon E. Jordan Jr. has volunteered his services to the defense fund.

The suit alleges there is confusion among members of the public and contributors who believe the groups still are connected.

The 400,000-member NAACP claims it never granted permanent use of its name when it established the fund in 1939 to receive tax-free contributions for legal aid programs.

The defense fund, which can call on 400 volunteer lawyers, said there was never any hint 44 years ago that the initials would be taken away. It would be unfair now, its leaders say, to lose the name the fund carried to the civil rights battlefields of Mobile, Ala., Little Rock, Ark., and Jackson, Miss.

In its court papers, the defense fund describes in unflattering language a parent and child relationship that turns sour. The NAACP is accused of rewriting legal history on birthrights almost as if the Bible were rewritten to have Isaac take back the blessing he gave to Jacob.

"Never before, apparently, has a parent organization endowed its offspring with the parent's name and, over 40 years later, sought to deny the birthright," the fund says.

The NAACP says it tried to avoid the fight and is undertaking it "with extreme reluctance." But it contends the defense fund can survive a name change and quotes from Romeo and Juliet to make the point.

"What's in a name? That which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

When the lawyers square off in oral argument they'll be only walking distance from the Supreme Court, where some of the nation's greatest civil rights attorneys collaborated on behalf of both groups to win the cases that made segregation illegal.

After one of those historic rulings in 1958, two of those lawyers walked together from the ornate building housing the nation's highest court.

One, Wiley A. Branton, represented the NAACP in the Little Rock school integration case decided moments earlier. The other, Thurgood Marshall, was co-counsel on behalf of the defense fund.

"Marshall and I hailed a cab," recalled Branton, now dean of the Howard University Law School. "The driver turned around to us and said, 'Wasn't that a great thing Dr. King did? He just got the Supreme Court to let those kids go to Central High School in Little Rock.'"

Marshall, who later became the Supreme Court's first black justice, joined Branton in a round of uproarious laughter. Civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. had nothing to do with the case.

Twenty-five years after that incident, nobody's laughing over who deserves credit for the civil rights victories of the past.

Bills coach to become a Seahawk?

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Chuck Knox has given up his job as head coach of the Buffalo Bills to assume that position with the Seattle Seahawks next season, according to several reports.

WKBW-TV and the Buffalo News said Knox, one of the most successful National Football League coaches over the last 10 years, was expected to announce his plans at a news conference today. The time was uncertain.

Knox, who quit the Bills Tuesday, didn't return several calls placed to his home. Spokesmen for the Bills and the Seahawks said they knew nothing about Knox's plans.

The News also reported that defensive coordinator Tom Catlin may replace Knox, and was set to meet with club owner Ralph Wilson today in Detroit.

Knox, who had one year left on a six-year contract, met with Wilson Tuesday. Upon his return here, he told reporters at the airport: "I was offered an extension of my contract, but I decided that I should resign and be relieved of any contractual obligations."

Differences between Knox and Wilson reportedly stemmed from the team's refusal to sign or keep satisfied top players such as linebacker Tom Cousineau, running back Joe Cribbs and nose tackle Fred Smerlas.

Cousineau, the first player picked in the 1979 draft, rejected a Bills' contract and played in Canada. When the Bills had a shot at signing him last summer, they traded him to Cleveland.

Cribbs, who held out unsuccessfully from training camp and the team's first two games this year to force a new contract, and Smerlas are All-Pro.

Fifteen players on the 49-man roster become free agents Feb. 1 and Knox reportedly was unhappy at the slow progress being made to re-sign them, and to extend his own contract.

As usual, however, he kept his views of the team to himself.

"In order for me to remain, a lot had to be resolved and a lot had to happen," he said. "I don't want to go into anything like that right now. That's not my style."

Knox and players said Catlin, a linebacker coach with the Los Angeles Rams for 12 seasons through 1978, would be a worthy successor.

Super Bowl Title game answers dream for Dolphin running back

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For Woody Bennett, just being here with the Miami Dolphins for Super Bowl XVII is almost more than he can handle.

"A dream come true for everybody on this team," said the 6-foot-2, 222-pound reserve fullback. "For me, more than a dream."

Bennett, a fourth-year pro who backs up Andra Franklin, came off injured reserve four weeks ago.

He has been used sparingly, sometimes teaming with Franklin in double fullback formations, but played a significant role in Miami's drive toward Sunday's National Football League title game against the Washington Redskins.

"If anybody had told me two months ago that I'd be playing in the Super Bowl and that I'd contribute to our getting there, I'd have said no way," said a smiling Bennett. "It's almost unbelievable after all the frustration I've had."

A knee injury sidelined Bennett in the third game of the 1981 season. He spent the remainder of the year on injured reserve, and after giving his left knee a test in preseason was placed on the list again.

He felt he was healthy enough to play after the eight-week players strike ended in November, but Coach Don Shula didn't have a spot on the roster for him.

"It got to be very disturbing because I thought I could play and I wanted to play," said Bennett. "I could see the season slipping away, and I was thinking that two years on injured reserve doesn't do a whole lot to help your career. I talked to Coach Shula about it, and there just wasn't a spot on the roster."

Bennett, however, didn't give up hope. When guard Ed Newman went down with a knee injury last month, Shula activated him.

Bennett played in the Dolphins' final regular season game at Baltimore and scored a touchdown in Miami's 28-13 victory over New England in the first round of playoffs.

Perhaps his finest hour came last week, when he burst through the middle of the Jets defense on a 7-yard scoring run in Miami's 14-0 victory in the AFC championship game.

"It felt special ... great to know that you were doing something to help the team get in the Super Bowl," said Bennett.

The Dolphins began preparation for the Redskins Tuesday, practicing at nearby Fullerton State. Shula said place-kicker Uwe von Schamann, playing with a hairline fracture of a small bone in his back, did not aggravate the injury against the Jets. Franklin, who suffered a mild concussion during the game, also was reported healthy.

Redskins' Dean leads secondary

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Who said you can't go home again? One year after he left California to make his fortune in the National Football League, Vernon Dean is returning to his home town to play in the Super Bowl as a Washington Redskin and as the leader of one of the most aggressive secondary units in the league.

Redskins defensive coordinator Richie Petitbon said Dean "has all the characteristics you like to see: a student of his position, intelligent and player who is not afraid to hit."

Dean, who played his scholastic ball at Los Angeles High School not far from Pasadena, the site of Sunday's Super Bowl game between the Redskins and Miami Dolphins, is looking forward to the game.

"I can't speak for anybody else, but I will enjoy a home field advantage. All my relatives, friends, everybody is going to be there," Dean said.

A graduate of San Diego State, some 90 miles away from the Redskins' training facility in Anaheim, Dean was the Redskins' first draft choice and the 49th player overall to be picked in the college draft.

"I knew a lot was expected, and I felt pretty confident coming to Washington," Dean said.

An injury to starting cornerback and former All-Pro Joe Lavender pushed Dean into the starting lineup in the second week of the season. He has been there ever since.

"All the guys, especially Joe, have really been supportive, giving advice, helping me over the rough spots," Dean said.

One of the few teams to still favor man-to-man coverage in the secondary, Dean has been mark for opposing quarterbacks seeking a weak link in the Redskins defense.

"In the beginning it seemed like I had target painted on my shirt instead of a number," Dean joked.

A ferocious hitter, Dean gave out a lot more than he received this year as he picked off three passes, separated countless receivers from the football and finished second in the voting for defensive rookie of the year honors.

Texas teams win three

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — It's really not that easy against the Jazz, said Artis Gilmore after scoring 40 points against the Utah team, 19 of them in the fourth quarter.

"They have three guys (Dan Schayes, Jeff Wilkins and Ben Poquette) who are legitimate centers and all three are starting," the San Antonio Spurs' 7-footer said. "It's difficult to match up with that kind of size." He did as the Spurs topped the Jazz 116-106.

Mavs 134, Pacers 126

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Dallas' Mark Aguirre was "in his realm" when he scored a career-high 43 points and Indiana guard Butch Carter didn't do so badly either with a career-high 42 points in the Mavericks' 134-126 National Basketball Association victory.

Carter hit 17 of 21 field goal attempts, but his heroics couldn't save the Pacers' defense.

Rockets 114, Nets 11

HOUSTON (AP) — After a record 47,947 minutes of playing time in the National Basketball Association, Houston forward Elvin Hayes has become a substitute.

Rockets Coach Del Harris decided before Tuesday night's 114-111 victory over the New Jersey Nets that the time was right to put "Plan A" in effect.

Bailey scored 24 points on 11 of 17 shots from the field and two from the free throw line and Hayes provided able help off the bench as the Rockets won for only the seventh time this season.
