Council approves lower sewer rates

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

Big Spring city councilmen voted unanimously last night for an ordinance revision that would lower sewer utility rates.

After wrangling over billing methods two hours yesterday in a work session, the councilmen compromised and reduced the base rate of $2.75 by 50 cents for a citywide savings of $31,500 this fiscal year. The new rate becomes effective May 1 if it is passed again on second reading at the April 26 council meeting.

Councilmen Jack Y. Smith and Larry Miller, who wanted to return to a flat rate billing method, said before the vote that they agreed to the cut only as a compromise.

Councilmen voted 3 to 2 (with Smith and Miller against) in November 1982 to change the sewer billing method from a flat rate to the current method designed to charge customers for the actual amount of wastewater used. It became effective in December 1982.

After a trial period the council and city staff studied projected revenue figures for the fiscal year and decided customers were being overcharged. The reduction voted for last night should save customers $31,500 for the rest of this fiscal year and $60,000 during a full year.

"When I first considered this (billing method) I didn't like it, and I still don't," Miller said. "I will vote See Council, page 2A"

Big Spring banks, including Coahoma, reported an $18 million increase in deposits for the first quarter of the year over the last quarter of 1982. First quarter bank deposits totaled $274 million as opposed to $257 million for the last quarter of 1982.

The $274 million is also a $97 million increase in deposits over a comparable period one year ago.

First quarter loans, however, dipped from the last quarter of 1982 with $120 million in loans reported this quarter compared with $124 million in loans for the fourth quarter of 1982.

All four area banks showed an increase in deposits and a decrease in loans compared to the last quarter.

Although bank officials said there was no specific reason for the increase in deposits and decrease in loans, most agreed the figures are

"Normally, agricultural loans are at their lowest in January, February and March because farmers have just come off a crop and have paid their loans off," said Jimmy Taylor, president of First

Girl injured in hit-and-run

A 5-year-old girl was listed in good condition today at a local hospital where she was recovering from injuries received Tuesday when she was struck by a car near Bauer Elementary School on North 9th.

Sonya Yanez suffered a broken leg when a car jumped the curb, ran over a stop sign and hit her while she was playing in the school yard, according to police. The driver of the vehicle drove away from the accident without helping the girl, police said.

An Amarillo man is in custody in connection with the 3 p.m. accident, according to Detective Avery Faulkner. James Scott, 43, was arrested by police at 4:17 p.m. yesterday, records show.

Scott is charged with failure to stop and render aid. Other charges may be filed, according to Faulkner.

Police reports state that Scott was going east on North 9th and made a wide left turn onto N. Main. The car jumped the curb approximately 7 feet, striking the girl and hitting a city stop sign, police said.

A spokesman at Cowper Clinic said Sonya suffered two broken bones in her left leg. The limb was set this morning and she was good spirits, he said.

Bill dials help for deaf telephoners

By DANA PALMER
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. official urged a House committee Tuesday to find a more traditional and appropriate method of raising money to buy special teletype phone devices for the state's hearing and speech impaired.

Under a bill sponsored by Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, phone companies could be required to add as much as 25 cents a month to each residential and business customer's bill in order to raise the money needed.

Cavazos noted in testimony to the House Human Resources Committee that a 5-cent surcharge would be more likely and would provide enough money to buy about 500 teletype devices a month for the needy.

J. Carlin Brent, a division manager in Bell's Austin operation, said the phone company "recognizes the social need to permit the deaf community access to telephone communication. We are not insensitive to that need. Our opposition is to the method."

He added that "private industry is not the proper vehicle to promote such social needs."

In any case, Brent asked, how can the state pick one needy group over another to receive surcharge money from everyone's phone bill? Other worthy groups will be seeking the same privileges, he added.

Judy Wingard, an Austin cerebral palsy victim with a speech impairment, noted that without such legislation the deaf and speech impaired will continue to find it difficult to buy such devices and become independent and contributing members of society.

Fred Tammen, Texas Association for the Deaf executive director, explained that "many deaf people can't afford the expense of the ($600 devices) because they are under-employed and/or under-educated" because of their handicap.

Ms. Wingard said she never used a telephone until her second year in graduate school when a roommate finally refused to make any more of the many daily phone calls that most people find a necessity.

Though she uses a regular phone, there have been times when she has had to call over and over before she can even find an operator who can understand her slurred speech. In an emergency, such problems would be disastrous, she said.

The Texas Commission for the Deaf estimates there are more than 122,000 deaf people in Texas, as well as the 10,000 to 20,000 people with speech impairments. See Special Telephones, page 2A

Mariah headed for nationals

By RICHARD HORN
Staff Writer

The Mariah color guard is expecting an "awing experience" in competition this weekend.

Members leave Friday for Dayton, Ohio, and the Winter Guard International contest. They will be judged against the 50 best guards in the United States and Canada.

"Our goal is to make it into the top five high school guards," said Bill Bradley, one of the four directors of Mariah. "That will give us a shot at the finals. But the competition will be tough."

The Big Spring High School unit was named state champion during the Texas State Color Guard Championships at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum on March 26. It was judged the best in Texas last year, also.

But national competition is a new experience, Bradley said.

"It's first for us," he said. "This is like the World Olympics of Color Guards."

Mariah will be judged in the Open Class division. This includes not only high school guards but older, more experienced independent units. Persons as old as age 21 can compete, he said.

"Some of these are almost professionals," Bradley said. "For us to compete against the best of the guards is like the Big Spring

Action/reaction: Copper nickels

Q. Did the United States ever mint copper nickels?

A. According to the supervisor at the U.S. Mint in Denver, Colo., the government has never minted pure copper nickels to his knowledge. However, from 1942 to 1945, nickels did contain 56 percent copper for the first time. He suggested checking in the 36th Edition of the Guide to U.S. Coins (called the Red Book) for a definitive answer.

Angel, Smith re-elected by City Council

By CAROL DANIEL
Staff Writer

Big Spring city councilmen did a lot of swearing last night at their City Hall meeting.

Mayor Clyde Angel administered the oath of office to newly re-elected Councilmen Russ McEwen and Jack Y. Smith. Then the mayor and Mayor Pro-Tem Jack Y. Smith were elected by the other councilmen and were sworn in to continue in those positions.

Since the council reverted to its pre-1973 city charter, council members are required to elect a mayor from within their ranks. The 1973 charter mandated that a mayor be elected by place in a city-wide election.

During research for a lawsuit filed against the city council, the council's advising attorney found that the 1973 charter had never been submitted for the attorney general's approval and that it is illegal. He recommended that the council return to the pre-1973 charter and hold their election April 2 by its rules.

So, as a legal precaution, Angel was re-elected last night by the councilmen.

The councilmen also:

- Did not take action after a closed executive session in which they discussed a lawsuit filed against them in behalf of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC).
- City Manager Don Davis said yesterday that City Attorney Doyle Curtis met with LULAC's lead counsel, Rolando Rios, last Thursday to discuss settling the suit out of court. He said Curtis would brief the council last night on Rios' proposals.
- "Until the council approves some things that were discussed, it would be premature to say we're reaching final negotiations," Davis said.
- Rios is holding a public meeting tonight at 7 p.m. to discuss the lawsuit. It will be held in the county courtroom at Howard County Courthouse.
- The suit alleges that the city's and school districts' current election methods prohibit minorities from electing representatives. It asks that representatives be elected from single member districts.
- Approved a proposal that $2,105,000 in general obligation bonds be sold to finance the second phase of the capital improvements program.
- Discussed widening Birdwell Lane by eight feet from F.M. 700 to Fourth street. The proposal was discussed at the council's work session yesterday as part of the capital improvements program.
- Approved the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce's request for $10,000 for the chamber's industrial development budget. The request was $5,000 less than it has been the past two years.
- Presented Municipal Judge Melvin Daratt and Sanitation Department Supervisor Benito Rubio with appreciation awards for 20 years employment by the city.
- Discussed going to a fleet system for police vehicles in which patrolmen would be allowed to use the cars for personal use while off duty.
- Police Chief Rick Turner said the fleet system would be a crime deterrent because the patrolmen would be responsible for responding to calls while off duty. The current motor pool would be expanded over several years from 21 to 50 cars, Davis said.

Runnels County sheriff resigns after DWI plea

BALLINGER (AP) — Runnels County Sheriff William H. Hall, who recently pleaded no contest to driving while intoxicated, has resigned.

County commissioners had called on Hall, who had served as sheriff since 1976, after Hall was charged with drunken driving in connection with a traffic accident in San Angelo involving his patrol car.

Hall pleaded no contest to the charge March 7 and was placed on two years' probation.

In a letter to county commissioners Tuesday, Hall said he was quitting because of his wife's ill health, County Judge Michael Murchison said.

Hall, 55, asked that the commissioners give him a two-week vacation. His resignation becomes effective Friday, Murchison said.

Because of the "serious illness of my wife and the need of constant attention from me, I wish to resign as sheriff of Runnels County," Hall said in the letter.

Shaw has toll-free number

AUSTIN — State Rep. Larry Don Shaw has installed a toll-free telephone in his Big Spring office.

"District 69 spans over 300 miles," Shaw said. "When my constituents need help with a problem, it's sometimes hard for them to get in touch with me, and long distance phone calls can get expensive. With the toll-free number, everyone in the district has equal access, and it's free of charge."

Shaw also said the cost of a toll-free number will be substantially less than maintaining and staffing a second office within the district.

The new number is 1-800-592-4731 and will be answered in Shaw's district headquarters in Big Spring. His phone number in Austin will remain the same, 512-475-2617, as will the regular district number for Big Spring residents, 915-263-2321.

for this because I see 50 cents less for the customer. I feel it (billing method) is unjust and that a flat rate is the best method."

"I think we're asking for trouble, there's too many exceptions," Smith said. "I'll vote for it because I see a $60,000 savings. It's not enough, but I'll go along with it and keep my foot in the door."

The revised ordinance establishes a $2.25 base rate that includes 2,000 gallons of water used for sewage. That does not include a $2 monthly surcharge initiated in 1979 to retire a debt on renovations at the sewer treatment plant.

The 68-cent charge for each additional 1,000 gallons used is not changed and the estimated amount of water used for sewage is still based on 90 percent of the average amount of water used during the past December, January and February.

Another revision was made to reduce rates for new customers. Previously, new accounts were charged a flat rate of $9. Now they will be charged for 100 gallons per day for each household member with a $9 maximum.

Businesses have the option of basing their sewer base rate on the winter month average or on 90 percent of the amount of water used each month.

caused by stroke and cerebral palsy, that could benefit from such a state program.

Several committee members said they are concerned with the lack of safeguards in the bill to prevent misuse of the money raised through the surcharge, as well as the 25-cent limit.

Tammen said that provision could be lowered to a 10-cent limit and additional safeguards could be written into the bill at the committee level.

After the hearing, committee chairman Rep. Mary Polk, D-El Paso, routinely sent the legislation to subcommittee for further testimony and consideration.

Coahoma student eyes the future

By RICHARD HORN
Staff Writer

COAHOMA — Kathi Wallis' glimpse into the future was one of the best in Texas.

Her glimpse, a school project predicting the future, was one of five "scenarios" chosen by judges in the Texas Future Problem Solving Program.

The Coahoma High School senior, daughter of Joe and Kay Wallis of Sand Springs, is awaiting judging of her scenario at the international finals in Iowa.

This weekend, she and her AWAKE program teacher, Danella Souter, will travel to Austin for the Future Problem Solving convention. Miss Wallis will read her scenario before an audience.

"It takes place in an underwater community in the year 2013," Miss Wallis, 17, said of her scene. "It is written as a letter from a girl, named Chloe, who lives in the community, to a pen pal who lives in California."

In it she describes life in the future. Of 142 state entries, her's was one of five judged good enough to compete in the Iowa finals. State judging was in early April, she said. The international results won't be known until early May.

The Texas Future Problem Solving Program is designed to make students think about their society today and in the future, according to Mrs. Souter.

"This is the first year we've been involved in it," she said. "It's a worthwhile project. It allows students to be creative and can be a lifelong learning experience."

Between 75 and 80 Coahoma students from grades four to 12 participated in the program, she said. Most of the students solved team problems concerning robotics, UFOs and underwater life. All of those involved are from Coahoma's gifted and talented students program.

"Several of our team projects received very high scores," she said, "but Kathi was the only individual to make the international judging."

Miss Wallis said her scenario was judged on creative imagination, social and cultural influences, and feelings and emotions.

KATHI WALLIS
...Coahoma senior

There were two judges for her scenario. Both gave her 30 points out of a possible 35, she said.

"This girl said in the letter (in the scenario) that all inhabitants had to be screened very closely," she said. "In this type of community they had to try and keep bad people out."

"I said it was a communistic society with a few elected officials. People were chosen to work where they were needed."

"I also said there were three levels of school: basics, then higher math, a second language, economy and government, and finally people would receive training in their career fields," she said.

"Chloe told her pen pal that she had never seen weather, because the community has a simulated environment," Miss Wallis said.

"I don't think I would want to live there. It couldn't be democratic, I don't think. It would have to be a cross between socialism and communism," she said.

Miss Wallis said she did not know how many scenarios she was competing against in Iowa; however, she said there were five entries from every participating state.

Shaw sponsors bill on disclosure laws

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, is carrying a wide-ranging proposal to clean up financial disclosure laws for state officials.

His bill, which would force more officeholders to file financial disclosure reports, has been referred for study to a House State Affairs subcommittee. It is part of the legislative package recommended by an ethics advisory panel.

Members of the State Property Tax Board, public members of the Sunset Commission and members of the County and District Retirement System would be required to file under the bill. Most state officials already must disclose their finances.

In addition to standardizing filing deadlines, the bill would revamp disclosure categories. For example, instead of listing revenue "$5,000 and above," the bill would break that category into several more brackets, making the disclosure "more meaningful," an aide said.

Washington wins battle for Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Harold Washington, narrowly elected the first black mayor of the nation's second-largest city after a divisive campaign charged with racial tension, today offered his hand "in friendship and fellowship to every living soul in this city."

The two-term congressman, who defeated Republican Bernard Epton in Tuesday's election, will become mayor on a date to be set by the City Council today. He promised a "new Democratic coalition" in his four years in office, and said his first step would be to meet with Epton at a prayer breakfast — as both candidates had promised, win or lose.

"We must work as one people for our common good and our common goals," Washington said after defeating Epton in an election marred by angry mob scenes, watermelon lapel buttons and "Vote Right, Vote White" T-shirts.

Washington overcame a 1972 misdemeanor tax conviction, suspension of his law license and an array of unpaid bills to dash Epton's hope of becoming Chicago's first GOP mayor in 52 years.

He won on a record 1.3 million turnout with a powerful outpouring of black votes, strong support among Hispanics and unexpectedly strong backing from reform-minded "lakefront liberals" at odds with City Hall for years. Michael Lavelle, chairman of the Board of Election Commissioners, said 82 percent of those registered to vote cast ballots.

With 2,885 of 2,914 precincts reporting early today, Washington had 656,727 votes, or 51.4 percent, to Epton's 617,150, or 48.3 percent. Socialist Ed Warren got 3,725 votes.

Ninety-seven percent of blacks cast their ballots for Washington, compared to 18 percent of whites, according to an exit poll. That was an improvement over the Democratic primary, when Washington got just 6 percent of the white vote in a three-way race.

"History was made tonight, oh yeah," the beaming victor said as an estimated 15,000 supporters chanted "We Want Harold" and broke up his acceptance speech with frequent whistles and applause.

"The whole nation is watching, and Chicago has sent a powerful message," he told those who greeted him at Donnelly Hall with nearly three minutes of chants of "Harold, Harold, Harold."

"Out of the crucible of this city's most trying election ... blacks and whites, Hispanics, Jews, Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics of all stripes have joined to form a new Democratic coalition," he declared.

Washington will succeed Mayor Jane M. Byrne, who was defeated in the Feb. 22 Democratic primary, promised a write-in effort, then changed her mind. He promised city reforms, but stressed the need for healing. "I charge you ... to rededicate your efforts to heal the divisions that have plagued us. Each of us much reach out and open our arms," he said.

Hoarse and weary, Epton left the Palmer House late Tuesday after telling supporters he expected to win in a "neck-and-neck" finish. His supporters weren't told he was giving up for the night, and there was no concession.

Washington's election came nearly 200 years after a black fur trader, Jean Baptiste Point DuSable, established a trading post at the mouth of the Chicago River as the first non-Indian settler here.

At campaign stops, black Washington supporters would sometimes chant: "We discovered it, we should govern it."

Washington had stressed the importance of black support, encouraging a big voter registration drive and telling blacks "It's our turn" to rule Chicago. Prominent Democrats from around the nation came to campaign for him, including former Vice President and presidential candidate Walter Mondale.

VICTORY FOR WASHINGTON — Chicago mayor-elect Harold Washington acknowledges applause from supporters as he announced victory in Chicago early today.

Washington, the city's first black mayor, defeated Republican Bernard Epton by a narrow margin. At left is Washington's fiancée, Mary Smith.

Arab Mideast summit postponed

By The Associated Press
PLO chief Yasser Arafat says negotiations between his guerrilla movement and Jordan's King Hussein will continue, a Swedish political leader said today, but sources reported that a proposed Arab Summit to consider Middle East peace plans has been postponed indefinitely.

Arab diplomatic sources in Rabat, Morocco, said today the planned summit meeting has been postponed from later this month to "a future date." But the sources said Arafat still is expected to arrive towards the end of this week for talks with Morocco's King Hassan II.

The summit originally had been expected to take place this weekend but was delayed by the breakdown in talks between Hussein and Arafat. President Reagan had been pushing for Hussein to join the peace process representing the Palestinians, but Arafat was unable to get agreement from the Palestine Liberation Organization executive committee for this course.

Arafat still sees possibilities to reach an agreement with Hussein and finds "positive elements" in Reagan's peace plan, Sweden's Social Democratic Party leader Olof Palme said today in Stockholm.

Palme emerged from more than two hours of talks with Arafat and other Social Democratic leaders saying "we have a definite impression that the talks in Amman are not over, as President Reagan stated."

Arafat himself was noncommittal as he left the meeting place. Asked if he intended to go to Rabat for further talks on the peace process, the PLO leader only would say "Maybe. I am awaiting a message from his Majesty (King Hassan)." He made no other comment as he was hurried out to a car surrounded by security men.

Earlier, Swedish radio quoted Arafat's spokesman, Abdul Rahman, as saying the talks will continue in Rabat starting Monday and that Arafat has dispatched PLO emissaries to Hussein and Hassan in preparation for them.

Officials in the Jordanian capital of Amman could not be reached immediately for a response to Arafat's remarks. Jordan's information minister, Abnan Abu Odeh, was quoted in a Kuwait newspaper today as saying the "old dialogue" with the PLO would continue but that the talks concerning the Reagan plan had indeed been called off.

In another development, the Israelis said Tuesday they would expand Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Solidarity leader arrested

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Police seized Solidarity leader Lech Walesa at his Gdansk apartment today, and his wife Danuta said she was told he was being interrogated at a police station.

"Tell the whole world they are breaking the law," Walesa yelled to reporters as he was led into a red police van and driven away. Mrs. Walesa said a senior police official told her by phone that her husband was taken to a police station for questioning.

The move came a day after Walesa announced he held a weekend meeting with underground leaders of the outlawed labor movement, and on the 13th of the month, a day sometimes marked by protest over the declaration of martial law on Dec. 13, 1981.

In Warsaw, the spokesman for the Communist government, Jerzy Urban, denied the false information that Walesa has been arrested. "A spokesman for police in Gdansk also denied Walesa was arrested, saying, 'I don't know anything and I have no idea who might know. We are not interested in that, anyway.'"

Western reporters saw Walesa seized, and a spokesman for the independent labor leader read reporters the following communique:

"On April 13, Lech Walesa was arrested at his apartment in Gdansk by two uniformed and one plainclothes police officer." "The officers carried guns and threatened to use force. They refused to present any kind of summons or documents," the communique said.

LECH WALESA ... Solidarity leader arrested

"They also refused to give any explanation to Walesa's wife or any member of the family," it said.

The spokesman, who was at the Walesa apartment, said that the police "first came to Walesa at 2:10 p.m. (7:10 a.m. EDT)."

"He told them he was ready to go, but first wanted to see a summons or another official document. They went away and returned half an hour later," the spokesman said.

"They still had no document (ordering Walesa to enter police custody) but said they had received an order to use force, even guns, if he refused to go with them," the spokesman said.

"They refused to give any explanation and all they said to Walesa was, 'you will find out when you get there.'"

"Given the situation, he (Walesa) just grabbed one pack of cigarettes and went with them," the spokesman said.

Walesa was freed from 11 months martial law detention in November and several weeks later was bundled into a police car and driven around for hours to prevent him from speaking at a rally in Gdansk.

There had been speculation he would be picked up after his weekend meeting with underground Solidarity leaders.

Government spokesman Urban told a news conference that Walesa would be considered in violation of the law if something illegal came out of the meeting.

Walesa, interviewed briefly at his apartment Tuesday, declined to give details of his session with the "temporary coordinating commission" of Solidarity, which includes five fugitive leaders.

It was not known where the meeting, which started Saturday and ended Monday, took place.

Nuke freeze vote expected to pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear freeze resolution was expected by supporters to pass the House today despite President Reagan's 11th hour lobbying against it.

"It's going to be a tough one for us, as far as coming out on the winning side," White House spokesman Larry Speakes acknowledged today. He said the administration would work with the Republican leadership throughout the debate and "look very carefully at the language" of any amendments.

"Our main feeling on it is that we will not support any legislation — any variation of the legislation — which will signal a freeze at a disadvantage or that would prevent our commitment to modernizing our forces," Speakes said.

The measure calls for negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union to seek a "mutual and verifiable freeze and reductions in nuclear weapons."

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., an author of the freeze resolution, said "the mood among freeze supporters is one of confidence that we will prevail on this crucial vote in the House."

The House debated the resolution for 12 hours on March 16 but failed to reach a final vote after freeze opponents offered a series of amendments and used other delaying tactics.

Last summer, a similar freeze measure lost in the House by a slim 204-202 margin.

Reagan, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and other national security officials met Tuesday with a group of undecided Democrats, trying to persuade them to support a toned-down GOP substitute for the freeze resolution.

Hours earlier, Weinberger had announced proposals for bolstering "hot line" communications with the Soviet Union as a means for averting nuclear war through accident or miscalculation.

"These are very simple things. They would benefit everybody," Weinberger told a Pentagon news conference.

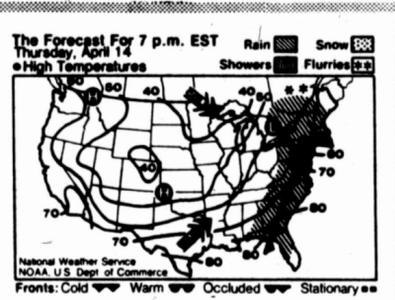

The proposals include upgrading the existing teletypewriter "hot line" between U.S. and Soviet leaders to a high-speed system that could relay photos and charts, creation of separate lines between military commands and also between embassies, and provisions for consultation over possible nuclear terrorist incidents.

Weinberger denied the announcement had been timed to precede House action on the nuclear freeze or a Senate vote Thursday on Reagan's embattled nomination of Kenneth L. Adelman to head the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Some of the congressmen undecided about the freeze resolution left the White House questioning the administration's arguments.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., told reporters: "One of the most alarming aspects of it was there seemed to be the feeling among some — the secretary of defense and others — that this was a unilateral freeze."

Whitesboro tornado, Amarillo snow and San Angelo hail

WHITESBORO, Texas (AP) — A tornado touched down just south of this far North Texas town today, destroying a barn but causing no injuries, authorities said.

Grayson County Sheriff's Lt. Bill French said the twister hit a barn on the Rocking M Ranch about three miles south of here at 8 a.m. and then lifted back into the clouds. He said there were no other reports of damage.

The tornado was triggered by the thunderstorms that rolled across Northwest and North Texas today producing locally heavy rain and gusty winds.

Marble-sized hail fell in the San Angelo area before dawn, the National Weather Service reported.

Rain mixed with light snow fell in Amarillo this morning and skies were cloudy to partly cloudy statewide. Drizzle was noted in parts of Southeast Texas and visibility was reduced to four miles at College Station.

Temperatures were in the 60s and 70s over the eastern half of the state, while readings plunged into the 30s, 40s and 50s over West Texas.

Northerly to northeasterly winds at 15 to 30 mph were the rule in the Panhandle, while westerly winds at 10 to 15 mph were noted in the South Plains and portions of West Texas.

The forecast called for a clearing trend to begin from the west later today, along with colder temperatures. Scattered showers and thunder-showers were possible into the evening hours.

Mobile home proposal pending

A legislative proposal currently before the Texas Legislature would allow mobile homes to be located in virtually any residential neighborhood in the state.

The Texas Municipal League and city officials throughout the state are alarmed at possible detrimental effects the proposed law could have, including an immediate decline in the value of homes and land in conventional home areas where mobile homes are placed.

The bill, H.B. 343, would invalidate city zoning ordinances which prohibit mobile homes from being located in neighborhoods or site-built, conventional, single-family homes. If the law is passed, and in the absence of a deed restriction for a particular piece of property, the owner of a mobile home would be free of city restrictions that now limit mobile homes to mobile home parks and other designated areas.

The Texas Supreme Court, in a unanimous May 1982 decision, said cities have the legal right to pass ordinances distinguishing between conventional and mobile homes, even though the structures sometimes resemble one another in appearance.

Homeowners interested in protecting the integrity and values of their investment would do well to write their state representatives and state senator and make their views known to them.

The fourth floor

Hundreds of books have been written about college life. This is not one of them.

Whatever opinion people hold on higher education, one thing is for sure: some of the wisest people in the civilized world go to college.

Most of the known odities lived on the fourth floor of the Alamo Plaza Rise — my floor. Let's hear some of the roll call: Beverly, Simpson, Roomperson, J.C., Ralph, Don, Big Mo, Brickbreaker, Dean, Byerly, and Mosley (that's me).

Unfortunately, these names do not evoke the same head-shaking wonder and gasps they so richly deserve. For example, Dean, Danny Dean, was just your average Anthony Perkins-like (see "Psycho") guy who drove tanks on the weekends for the National Guard. Dean with a weapon of destruction was a terrible thing to behold.

He had this Bruce Dern-like Eastwood look he'd get just before he did something derailed. He'd set fire to his dorm room door once, but lighter fluid when his roommates wouldn't get off the phone.

BRICKBREAKER (real name Warren) I met in typically of a fashion. He was the new guy on the floor who was about seven feet tall and never spoke. One night near midnight, we kept hearing his "whoom, whom, whom" followed by an occasional crunch and clink. We traced it to the new guy's room.

He slowly opened to our knock to say "What do you guys want anyway?" Warren had a black belt in karate and was shattering under blocks in his room.

Brickbreaker eventually taught everybody how to break bricks. One our floor assistant even broke one with his forehead once when he was drunk. Brickbreaker's fighting crime in Dallas now.

Ole Ralph was a true relic of the hippie generation, even then in the early 70s. He owned three articles of clothing not counting his sandals: a pair of coveralls, a red T-shirt and a pair of jeans he pulled out of the trash can ("Why these are really nice...").

Ralph had a marijuana plant growing in his room until the maids threw it out.

The bearded Ralph, with his shoulder-length hair, could pass through a food fight or a computer tangle with the same nonchalant ease. He's programming computers for NASA now.

AND THEN there's Byerly — undoubtedly the strangest human I've ever known with the possible exception of Roomperson.

Byerly has been in college seven years. In the time I started he was about to graduate to join Army Officer's Training School.

Byerly liked to watch TV for a long time. He'd start late at night and still be there when everyone staggered up for breakfast and early classes. He'd still be there cross-legged on the table watching at noon. When people came in after supper, Byerly and the boob tube would be as one.

He had a peculiar penchant to be dramatic. His favorite clothing was a black floor-length cape. It was not uncommon to turn a corner and find Byerly lurking in the corner, his face hidden behind the ebony cape ("Goodbye evening...").

He had an extra-long extension cord so he could stalk the halls holding a flashlight under his face to get the "Isosid Look."

Byerly's favorite pastime was to take out the lights out of the electrical stand clanked and silent in the back, riding up and down, scaring the football players to death. "No way I'm riding on that thing."

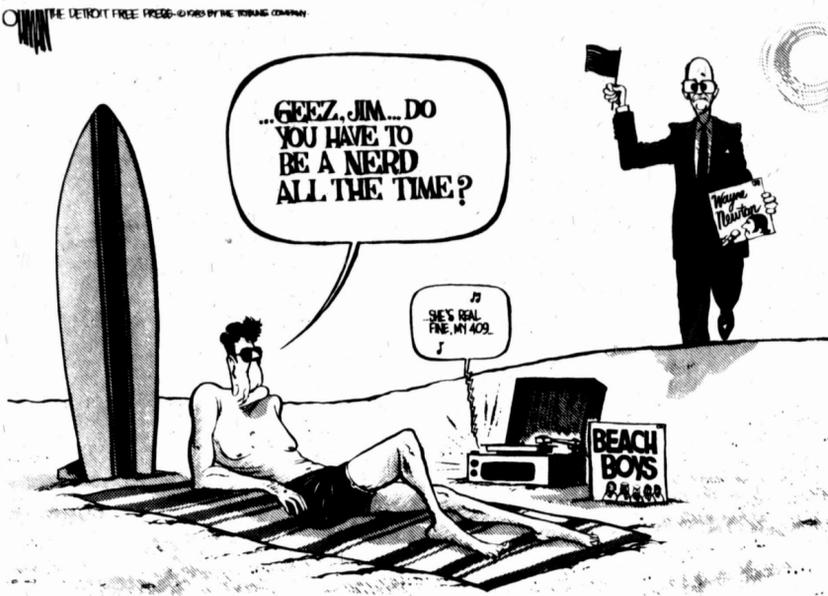

Byerly often slipped into bizarre behavior with no warning. At one floor party in a park, Byerly thought he was an orangutan. He scampered up a tree, and sat there several hours in the fire, throwing sticks of everybody and gibbering nonsensically.

My favorite memory of Byerly, however, has to do with snow. With seven or eight inches on the ground, it was snowball weather when Byerly and I left the cafeteria. Byerly immediately gathered a few dozen snowballs and began plastering people as they emerged from the cafeteria.

Naturally, they'd stop and whip a few cold ones his way. Byerly kept seeking new targets as more people came out the door. I left.

When I returned 15 minutes later, I couldn't just see Byerly at the edge of the building, looking a little wan. He lunged and tossed a snowball towards unseen targets. Then he was immediately pummeled by what must have been 30 snowballs. Byerly had antagonized everybody who left the cafeteria who now were determined to bury him.

Byerly was strange. Roomperson, the only psycho discharge from the Navy I know, had a more subtle strangeness. Maybe next time.

A Mideast Belfast

WASHINGTON — PLO Inc., is a description of the Palestinian Liberation Organization I heard over and over again in a recent tour of the Middle East. The term explains why the recent talks between King Hussein of Jordan and the PLO leader Yasser Arafat did not succeed.

It also explains why the Reagan peace plan for the Middle East is fading out. It suggests that there is shaping up a kind of Belfast in the Middle East.

The peace plan offered by President Reagan on Sept. 1 addressed itself directly to the problem of the Palestinian Arabs. While the Palestinians are scattered around the world, their homeland lies in two bits of territory occupied by the Israelis after the Six Day War — the Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan. President Reagan proposed that Jordan join Egypt and Israel in negotiations for Palestinian autonomy in those two pieces of land as provided in the Camp David Accords.

He indicated the autonomy talks would be swift, and that the Palestinian entity which resulted could achieve larger self-rule in a federation with Jordan. The Palestinians would thus acquire legitimacy and a territorial base. The Israelis, by cutting a deal with King Hussein, would at least avoid the nightmare of a mini-Palestinian state, radical to the core and dedicated to the recovery of the territory which now constitutes Israel proper.

King Hussein is originally optimistic he could make the Reagan Plan work. His view was that most of the Palestinians living on the West Bank and Gaza wanted any kind of accord that would get the Israelis off their backs. The king believed that he and groups of local Palestinian notables with some loose ties to the PLO could come to the negotiating table. He calculated, correctly in my opinion, that with negotiations underway, Israel would have to join.

As to Arafat, the king's assessment was that he would have to go along. The theory was that Arafat headed a revolutionary nationalist movement dedicated to achieving territorial gains. In 20 years he had advanced little toward that goal. Military defeat in Lebanon had rooted the PLO out of an area near the West Bank. Unless Arafat joined with him, Hussein reasoned, the PLO, cut off from the homeland of most Palestinians, would wither on the vine.

The description of the PLO as a company marks a change in that view. For the corporate PLO is not a revolutionary movement dedicated to political achievements. On the contrary, it is a bureaucracy dedicated to its own survival. Far from being willing to take the risks for political goals, Arafat and Co., in this view, prefer to wander from country to country and from summit meeting to summit meeting, selling the cause of Palestine to Arab rulers who need legitimization. The rulers pay out subsidies. In return, Arafat gives them the PLO good-housekeeping seal of fidelity to Arab nationalism.

Evidence to support that view has been piling up ever since the evacuation of the PLO from Beirut. The organization had one session of its ruling body, the Palestine National Council, held in Algeria in February. The main business was internal — an assertion of PLO "unity and independence," which means the supremacy of Arafat and his close followers over other factional groups. Only as an afterthought did the delegates deal with the negotiating table. Even then it was unclear whether they "rejected" the plan or merely found it "inadequate."

Since then, Arafat has continued to flit from meeting to meeting. He went to the nonaligned summit in New Delhi. He has made the rounds of virtually all the Arab countries. All have given him their blessings, and told him to work out a joint approach with Hussein.

But at meetings with Hussein in Amman over last weekend, Arafat ducked anew. Instead of getting together on a plan to name Palestinian delegates who could join Hussein in talks with the Israelis, Arafat arranged to refer the whole affair to another round of meetings, culminating in a summit of Arab leaders in Morocco.

Perhaps the leaders will find some formula for negotiation. Perhaps the U.S. will squeeze the Israelis to the point where Hussein feels he can go it without Arafat. But the odds are strongly against those possibilities.

On the contrary, it looks as though yet another direct address to the problem of the Palestinians has gone awry. It looks as though there will be no positive outcome for the Reagan initiative. Not that catastrophe follows, or any other big deal. On the contrary, there will be a long, dismal continuation of the daily encounters between Israeli forces and Palestinian young people on the West Bank and in Gaza. There will be protests and strikes and terrorism and suppression. The West Bank and Gaza, probably for years to come, will become like Belfast.

Billy Graham

Don't withdraw from hard situation

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Nobody in my school seems to like me very much because I am religious and refuse to participate in a lot of the things they like to do. I'm very lonely, and I'm beginning to wonder if it is really worth it to maintain my convictions. — M.P.

DEAR M.P.: Yes, it is worth it to maintain your convictions. And God wants to help you and strengthen you, and he wants to teach you through this situation also.

Do you remember the story of Joseph in the Old Testament? (You can read about it from Genesis Chapter 37 until the end of Genesis.) He was sold into slavery by his evil brothers and found himself in Egypt — where no one believed in the living God. He was greatly tempted in many ways — to steal, to commit sexual immorality, to abuse power that was entrusted to him, and so forth. But Joseph steadfastly refused to yield to these temptations, and eventually he was placed in a position of great trust by the pharaoh, the leader of Egypt. And because of that he was able to save the lives of countless people from the famine and starvation that came upon the land.

No, don't give in and compromise what you know to be the truth. Instead, let me make several suggestions. For one thing, make it your daily habit to spend time with God in prayer and Bible study. You need a time alone with God each day, and he can strengthen you. Memorize verses of the Bible that you can recall during the day, and practice the habit of praying at all times. Then I urge you to begin to pray for specific people around you, asking God to help you share your faith with them. I find that often someone in your position becomes rather isolated, withdrawing even from activities that are healthy and wholesome. But you cannot help those around you come to Christ if you withdraw from them. Make a point of smiling and greeting everyone. You need to build bridges of friendship with others and by your joy and peace demonstrate that Christ means much to you. When you do, you will find there are many young people your age who are searching for joy, and God wants to use you to point them to Christ.

Our driest state is Nevada. Its annual rainfall averages 8.8 inches.

Admirals want to sink weapons critic

WASHINGTON — This may be the Pentagon's best-kept secret — and Navy spokesmen officially deny it's even happening — but some ambitious admirals are quietly trying to scuttle the Board of Inspection and Survey, headed by the one of the nation's most respected war heroes, Adm. John D. Bulkeley.

What bothers the brass is that Bulkeley insists on subjecting Navy and Marine aircraft to rigid testing before they're turned over to the men who fly them. So the admirals have secretly tried to change naval regulations — the Navy's Bible — to keep Bulkeley's experts from evaluating new naval aircraft.

The reason the admirals are suspicious in their efforts to undercut Bulkeley is that he is a living legend. No swivel-chair admiral in his right mind would openly challenge a man who won the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Navy Cross, two Distinguished Service Crosses and two Silver Stars in World War II combat.

Bulkeley was a PT-boat skipper with John F. Kennedy in the Pacific, and also distinguished himself during the Normandy invasion in 1944. A movie, "They Were Expendable," was based on his exploits in the frail plywood torpedo boats.

Medals and celebrity status aside, Bulkeley is known as a gruff, plainspoken Navy professional who is stubbornly insistent on the kind of details that keep ships afloat, planes in the air — and Navy men alive. Among the unfavorable reviews his office has produced were critiques of the $22.5 million F-18 fighter, which failed operational tests, and the Lamps anti-submarine helicopter, which didn't cut the mustard in Bulkeley's view.

Among Bulkeley's critics is Adm. Robert Monroe, the Navy's director of research, development, evaluation and testing. Sources told my associates Donald Goldberg and Indy Badhwar that Monroe has been upset about the unkind words Bulkeley's board has had for the Navy's new weapons, and has responded with some vituperative memos directed at Bulkeley personally.

It's an ironic antagonism: Monroe himself used to head the Navy's Operational Test and Evaluation Force. In that capacity, he was himself an outspoken advocate of strict operational testing of new weapons.

Now, however, Monroe is responsible for developing the new weapons that are evaluated by Bulkeley's Board of Inspection and Survey. In other words, he's in a position where he doesn't welcome the kind of criticism he used to dish out.

If this were just another personality battle between Pentagon prima donnas, it would rate no more than a couple of paragraphs. But what Monroe and his fellow admirals seem determined to do is get rid of the Navy's only effective, independent, incorruptible critic of grandiose weapons systems.

Adm. Hyman Rickover was another cantankerous maverick who made waves by insisting on quality, now he's gone. Can the Navy afford to get rid of another old pro by dropping Bulkeley over the side?

STILL AT IT: You remember Peter Bibko, the Environmental Protection Agency big shop who prefers to travel by chauffeured limousine instead of by train because he likes the reading lamps in his government car? I reported on his lordly habits on Feb. 24, noting that his favored mode of travel was costing the taxpayers more money than train or plane would have.

Four days later, an unrepentant Bibko once again had his chauffeur drive him and another person from his Philadelphia regional office to Washington, where he testified at a hearing the next day. The chauffeur then returned Bibko to New Jersey.

According to travel vouchers submitted later, the trip cost you and me $177.25 — $100.25 for Bibko's expenses and $77 for his chauffeur's. That's substantially more than it would have cost if Bibko had traveled alone by train.

Can we expect another chauffeured trip by Bibko four days from now?

EXECUTIVE MEMO: Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige's campaign to encourage clear, straightforward writing in official documents has drawn mixed reviews among his subordinates. On the first day of a three-lecture course on simple English, many of those who were supposed to attend didn't show up. But the Air Force officer who taught the course was "an incredible performer," according to a department spokesman, who said, "By the second day, the word got around and the place was packed." Other federal agencies — even the White House — have shown interest. Not everyone is impressed, though. "It's an insult to us on a personal and professional level," grumbled one bureaucrat.

YOUNG WRITER — Samantha Smith, a fifth grader, sits at her typewriter in her Manchester home Monday. The Soviet newspaper Pravda printed her letter to Soviet party leader Yuri Andropov, asking him why he wanted to conquer the world.

Pravada uses 5th grader's letter to Russian leader

MANCHESTER, Maine (AP) — A fifth-grader whose letter to Yuri Andropov was quoted in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda hopes that means she will get a reply from the Soviet leader himself.

"I just wanted to know what Andropov was like," Samantha Smith, 10, said Monday. "If you get a letter back from someone, you get to know what he's like."

Pravda recently published excerpts of several letters it said were written by American citizens. Samantha's letter asked, "Why do you want to conquer the whole world, or at least our country?"

Pravda said, "We think we can pardon Samantha her misleadings, because the girl is only 10 years old."

Samantha's letter offered congratulations to Andropov "on your new job" and asked him if "you're going to vote to have a war or not?"

In a telephone interview, Samantha said she didn't remember when she wrote the letter, but recalled that she got the idea from a class assignment that her father, Arthur Smith, had given to his English class at the University of Maine in Augusta.

"He had his class write a letter to a famous person, so I thought I might do one too," said Samantha, a student at Manchester Elementary School.

This wasn't the first time that Samantha has written to somebody famous. Several years ago, she sent a letter to Queen Elizabeth, and got a response from one of her ladies-in-waiting. If Samantha decides to write to any other famous people, it would be either Princess Diana or Prince Charles, she said.

"She has always been a good writer," said her father. "This is just proof that letter writing works and people do pay attention."

First lady featured on TV program

PITTSBURGH (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan, who has made the fight against teen-age drug and alcohol abuse a personal crusade, will tape two Public Broadcasting Service shows on the subject here Wednesday.

"She's really enthusiastic about what she thinks this program can accomplish," Mrs. Reagan's spokeswoman, Sheila Tate, said Tuesday from the White House.

Mrs. Reagan, a former actress, planned to videotape segments of the two one-hour programs at the studios of WQED-TV, one of PBS' national production centers, on Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning.

The programs, extensions of the PBS "Chemical People" series produced at the Pittsburgh station and aired last May, will be televised nationwide on Nov. 2 and 9.

About 112 groups representing dozens of southwestern Pennsylvania communities were organized before last year's televising of "Chemical People." The groups organized town meetings to discuss ways of fighting teen-age drug and alcohol abuse.

Mrs. Reagan is hoping for a similar community campaigns before the national PBS program is aired.

Area Girl Scouts prepare for 1983 annual track meet

On your mark! Get set! Go!

Area IV of the West Texas Girl Scout Council is warming up for the annual track meet to be held April 16 at Lamesa High School, Lamesa.

The event is open to registered Girl Scouts across Area IV from Sterling City to Lamesa, Stanton to Colorado City. Participants are grouped by grade level to compete in track and field events. Girls spend the day outdoors making friends, and experimenting with sports.

Girls may participate in events such as the 50-yard dash, the 100-yard dash, softball throw, standing broad jump and running broad jump. Fourth through eighth graders are eligible to compete in a troop relay. This year

Cadette Scouts may try their skills at the new obstacle course event.

A patch is presented to each girl who participates in the track meet. A patch design contest is held each year with the winning design made into a patch. The 1983 winner is Big Spring Cadette Tanya Farmer.

There are 388 Girl Scouts entered in this year's meet. Registration begins at 8 a.m. with competition starting at 8:30 a.m. A concession stand will be open throughout the day serving lunch items and cold drinks. The fun will break up at 4 p.m.

The West Texas Girl Scout Council is a participating agency of the United Way.

Dear Abby

Couple won't put money with morals

DEAR ABBY: My nephew and his wife (early 30s) own a nice home in Phoenix. (I'll call them Tom and Terrie.) They have no children.

Recently when Jean and John, an out-of-town unmarried couple from Los Angeles who live together, came to stay with them, they were asked to use separate bedrooms!

Now Tom and Terri are going to L.A. for the weekend and plan to stay overnight with Jean and John. I told Tom that it seemed rather hypocritical to me, since the issue is not the ownership of the house, but whether or not to sleep under the same roof with a couple whom they regard as "sinners."

To avoid their being sanctimonious, I suggested that Tom and Terri stay in a motel. They said to ask your opinion.

UNCLE ROG

DEAR UNCLE: It seems to me that if Tom and Terri want to be consistent in the matter of unmarried people of the opposite sex sharing living quarters, they should stay in a motel.

But hypocrites have been known to stay with "sinners" to save a buck.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the letter you received, "And Baby Makes Three," in which the bride wanted to carry her 7-week-old baby down the aisle cradled in her arms, let me say this:

When my husband and I got married (three years ago), we had our cat at the altar with us. (The best man held him.)

Sure, some of the guests thought we were crazy, but that's too bad. The "three of us" had a wonderful day to remember. After all, it was our wedding right?

CAT LADY IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR CAT LADY: It's purrrfectly all right with me

DEAR ABBY: What do about late-night telephone callers who ring you up at midnight (or later) for a social chat?

My sister, who lives several thousands miles away, thinks just because she calls long distance I should be happy to talk to her regardless of the hour. I have asked her repeatedly not to call me after 10 p.m. unless it's an emergency because I have to get up at 6 a.m. and need my eight hours of sleep.

Well, she called at midnight about three weeks ago. I was sound asleep and didn't feel like talking, so I asked her to please write a letter or call me again — before 10 p.m. She hasn't called or written since.

I'm truly enjoying the respite, but family is family. Any suggestions?

ENJOYING MY SLEEP

DEAR ENJOYING: You may be enjoying your sleep, but your conscience must be bothering you or you wouldn't have written.

You could get in touch with your sister and apologize. But if you do, she will continue to disregard your wishes and call whenever she feels like it.

Or you could let her know that you would like to hear from her — and reiterate the 10 p.m. deadline. And if she disregards your wishes again, give her the same treatment until you have her trained. Good manners and consideration are for family as well as strangers.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send for it long, stamped, (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90023.

Dr. Donohue

Parkinson's: support is needed

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: We have an elderly family member with Parkinson's disease. Our family is trying to be supportive. We are not helped when friends keep bringing up the brain aspect. I tell them that Parkinson's doesn't affect a person's mental capacity. These ideas persist. Don't you think better knowledge of what goes on with Parkinson's would help its victims and families cope.—Mrs. R.K.

I couldn't agree more. One should not think that because there is brain involvement with Parkinson's disease that it causes loss of intelligence. Parkinson's is primarily a movement ailment. Perhaps recent publicity about Alzheimer's disease, a different kind of brain chemical problem with different effects, has added some confusion. That's unfair.

Understanding Parkinson's begins with knowledge of how the brain does its work, which is by relaying incoming messages from one cell to the next and to the next, and so forth. In Parkinson's the area of the brain involved is the one that has to do with motion; a chemical called dopamine, responsible for carrying out that cell-to-cell relay work, is missing. That accounts for the motion problems, the tremor (with the limb at rest), the shuffling gait, the characteristic pill-rolling finger motion. Not all Parkinson's patients have all the symptoms, and there are varying degrees of seriousness in each case.

The important point is that, unlike Alzheimer's disease, in Parkinson's there are medicines to control things. Some are the old standbys, like anticholinergics and anticholinergics. Newer ones, like levodopa, have structure closely resembling the missing brain chemical. And there's a newer medicine — bromocriptine — that is helping others.

Your family is taking the proper course by assuring that this relative is continuing to get the medical attention he needs, and by helping in other supportive ways. There are many things to be done: providing special eating utensils and strategically-placed grab rails, as in bathrooms. Substituting zippers for buttons on garments and many other such helpful measures are available. You can get a lot of support from one of the Parkinson's disease organizations in your area. Just check with any large hospital near you.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Would you please write something in your column explaining why a diabetic is told not to use an electric blanket? My doctor tells me it would be risky, but gives me no reason.—Mrs. E.H.

Some people with diabetes have a disturbance of nerve function, and this often involves the extremities, the feet notably. Their response to such environmental factors as heat or cold can be impaired. They may not appreciate how hot the blanket is and thus burn their feet. I am sure this explains your doctor's advice. I'm sure your doctor would not have been in the least offended had you asked him what you asked me.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: When I had upper chest X-rays done a couple of years ago they noted that I had a hiatal hernia, which I understand to be an abnormality of the esophagus. I have had problems with upset stomach and that gives me heartburn. I cannot get my doctor to commit himself one way or the other with regard surgery to correct this hernia. I cannot understand his reluctance.—W.P.

The reason is that your doctor cannot relate your hernia to your symptoms. That is not in the least surprising. This kind of abnormality (hiatal hernia) is seldom the direct cause of symptoms, such as heartburn. Such a problem is almost always brought on by regurgitation of stomach acid up into the esophagus. That occurs with or without the hernia. So the way to correct the symptoms is to get at the real problem — the acid. You do that by judicious use of antacids and medicines to inhibit acid production in the stomach.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Builders launch surprise searches, urine tests

DALLAS (AP) — Builders concerned about a rising rate of accidents in the Dallas area have declared a war on drugs that includes surprise searches of workers, urine tests and blacklisting.

Under the campaign, the 500 members of the Dallas chapter of the Associated General Contractors will be taught how to reword company policies so workers can be searched or required to undergo blood or urine tests.

Association spokeswoman Guada Lueck said studies indicate as many as 42 percent of the construction workers use drugs and as much as $15 billion in accident claims and property damage resulted from drug use on the job in 1980.

"The workers don't have to submit to a search, but they become an ex-employee if they don't," said the group's safety director, Jim Sprague.

Some union leaders object to the campaign, and the local branch of the American Civil Liberties Union has called a board meeting for Wednesday to discuss a possible protest.

"This sounds an awful lot like Gestapo tactics," said Willie Chapman, secretary-treasurer of the Dallas County AFL-CIO, which represents about 10,000 workers from 17 building trades unions.

ACLU leaders said that while the searches and screening tests are not specifically barred by federal or Texas law, workers can sue if their consent is not obtained or if the test is inaccurate.

Two lawsuits have been filed in Texas challenging blood tests conducted at refineries.

A suit filed in March against a Port Arthur plant contends about 500 employees were given blood tests for drug use under the guise of a medical examination.

Another suit filed in February claims blood tests at a Nederland plant were so unscientific that marijuana use from weeks before would show up in the blood.

The anti-drug campaign was launched after a project supervisor for one of the largest contractors in the area formed his own program.

John Hancock, 58-year-old supervisor for Austin Commercial, Inc., said a private detective discovered a major drug problem while investigating an incident in which large boards were thrown into the street from the 20th floor of a building under construction.

Hancock and his foremen began watching workers and fired anyone who was strongly suspected of using drugs, although some other reason usually was stated for the firing or the employee was shifted to a job that was about to end.

ACLU spokesman Henry J. Albach said the program "sounds sort of '1984.' George Orwellian to me. I have a pretty strong feeling we're going to be very much in opposition."

Sales gains reported during March

Good weather and an early Easter drew buyers into stores in March, business analysts agreed Thursday as all the nation's major retailers posted sales gains for the month.

Economists have been watching retail sales figures for a sign of an upturn that will get the economy moving.

The best showings were among chains specializing in clothing, said Monroe Greenstein, a retail industry analyst with the investment firm Bear, Stearns Inc. He cited Federated Department Stores with a sales gain of more than 17 percent.

The weakest retail segment was in durable goods, he said, reflected in the showings of Sears, Roebuck and Co., a 5.2 percent gain, and Montgomery Ward & Co., 2.5 percent.

Jeffrey Edelman, an analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., agreed with Greenstein that the generally good weather in March and the April 3 Easter were the dominant factors. A year ago, Easter fell on April 11 and pre-Easter sales were split between March and April.

Greenstein said the real test of whether a consumer-led recovery is under way will be to compare combined March and April sales of this year and last.

The strength of chains specializing in soft goods rather than durables such as home appliances indicates "the consumer is coming back but there's not that strong willingness to go into debt," Greenstein said. Durables tend to be bought on credit while many apparel purchases are paid for in cash, he said.

However, Sears chairman Edward Telling said durable goods were its best sellers for the sixth month in a row, including microwave ovens, refrigerators, television sets, video cassette recorders, computers and telephones.

Sears, the nation's largest retailer, said sales of its merchandise group in the month ended April 2 rose 5.8 percent to $1.85 billion from $1.75 billion a year ago, taking account of 21 stores closed since then.

Sales in the first nine weeks of its fiscal year were up 5.2 percent to $3.13 billion from $2.97 billion. Most retailers' fiscal years begin with February.

K mart Corp., the second largest retailer, said sales in the five weeks ended March 30 rose 13.3 percent to $1.54 billion from $1.36 billion a year earlier, accounting for eight store closings in the last year. In its first nine weeks, it posted an 11.4 percent sales gain to $2.54 billion from $2.28 billion.

No. 5 Federated, which operates department stores nationwide under a number of names, discount stores and a supermarket chain, said sales in the five weeks ended April 2 were $728 million, a 17.1 percent gain over $621 a year ago.

State lawmakers vote to oppose interest tax

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas legislators decided Monday to send a message to Congress urging that the Internal Revenue Service be stripped of its authority to withhold 10 percent of investor's earnings.

While the resolution, approved in a 125-8 vote, has no power to do anything other than voice opposition, it could help sway a few votes, said Rep. Steve Carriker, D-Roby, who sponsored the proposal.

"The move in Congress to repeal the authority of the IRS to withhold these taxes is at a very critical state and I hope that this will provide our congressmen some useful support," Carriker said after the vote. "The support from folks in my district to repeal this action by the Reagan administration is overwhelming."

Carriker said that by accident he has received a lot of mail against the new withholding measure — mail intended for congressional representatives.

But Carriker said he became interested in taking what action he could to resolve the issue.

His main concern about the new measure is that it could serve to take funds away from senior citizens, Carriker said.

Currently, senior citizens within a certain, low income bracket do not need to file income tax returns, Carriker said. But with the new withholding measure, some of those people who do receive a small income from savings and investments must file to retrieve the money.

In some instances, the fee for hiring someone to prepare the tax return might exceed the amount to be refunded, Carriker said.

He also acknowledged that the banking-related interests probably are pleased with the resolution, since the law thrusts a new administrative responsibility on them for withholding. But Carriker said that interest was not his motivation for filing the resolution.

Carriker also said he was concerned about the administrative burden that would be placed on smaller businesses and farming cooperatives.

About two weeks ago, some Republicans attempted to kill the resolution plan through a parliamentary maneuver, Carriker said. He withdrew it, but the House leadership insisted that a vote be taken, Carriker said, resulting in the resolution's approval.

Stocks rise as oil prices stabilize

Falling interest rates and stabilizing oil prices gave stock prices a big boost, but new figures on installment debt indicated consumers have been reluctant to increase their spending.

A private study meanwhile showed economies of Western industrial nations to be expanding again, but prospects for sustained growth were regarded as uncertain.

A potent rally Monday lifted the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials by 17.12 points, to 1,141.83, a few points shy of its record closing high of 1,145.90 on March 24.

Stocks, especially energy issues, benefited from falling interest rates and from confirmation by British authorities that most buyers of North Sea oil had accepted Britain's new price cuts.

Interest rates on short-term securities traded in the resale market fell about 1/8 of a percentage point Monday. The average yields on new six-month Treasury bills auctioned Monday fell to 8.248 percent from 8.605 percent at the previous week's auction.

The average rate on conventional mortgages used for buying a previously occupied single-family house in early March fell to 12.61 percent, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported. In early February it had been 12.88 percent and in early January 13.04 percent.

However, in purchases involving installment credit, consumers continued to show restraint. They acquired $1.74 billion more installment credit than they paid off in February, the Federal Reserve Board said, the smallest expansion since last fall.

The study of Western economies made by the Conference Board, a business-supported research group, said a seven-year period beginning this year "may well be marked by a new phase of expansion from 1983 to 1985-86 and a new decline thereafter."

During the first months of this year, "one should see a strong and rapid recovery," the business-financed study group said. But it added that the pace of expansion over the next few years is expected to be slower than in the past because of higher long-term interest rates and government constraints.

In other economic news Monday: —Gold prices rose on the world bullion markets and ended the day with gains of nearly $10 an ounce. Concern was cited for renewed turmoil in the Middle East. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold for current delivered climbed $9.80 to close at $431.50 a troy ounce.

—The Commerce Department reported manufacturers' after-tax profits dropped to 2.8 cents for every dollar of sales in the last three months of 1982.

Pep squad aids benefit

The Diamond Back Dancers pep squad from the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf will kick-off a special benefit event for the Muscular Dystrophy Association Saturday at 1 p.m. at the Big Spring Mall.

The Kick-A-Thon will be a marathon event in which each member of a drill team and pep squad performs his show as well as kick for a certain period.

Girls of the Diamond Back Dancers are collecting pledges and donations for every kick they perform during the three-hour show.

Sharon Fikes, sponsor of the dancers, said the girls have already begun receiving pledges. Many shops in the mall have donated gift certificates to be used as prizes for the top three fundraisers.

MDA has also furnished official kick-a-thon T-Shirts for each of the participants.

The benefit follows a trend of other similar events in the West Texas area. The Texas Tech Raiderettes will be performing their Kick-A-Thon on April 23 at the South Plains Mall in Lubbock.

Congress salutes March of Dimes

Congressman and senators joined in a non-partisan symbolic show of support for the March of Dimes Tuesday by staging a Congressional WalkAmerica on the Capitol lawn in Washington.

In Big Spring the March of Dimes WalkAmerica/TeamWalk will be held Saturday, April 23 beginning at 9 a.m. at the Big Spring Mall.

The march will be led by state Rep. Larry Don Shaw, state Sen. John Montford of Lubbock, Mayor Clyde Angel and County Judge Milton Kirby.

Registration forms for the benefit walk can be obtained at Big Spring Athletics, Inc.

Among the prizes to be awarded to volunteer walkers is the opportunity to win a "Great Escape Vacation" from Places and Pleasures travel agency.

Walkers will solicit pledges and collect the donations before embarking on the 10-mile route.

All contributions will go to fund research and treatment of birth defects.

Dorene Zilberg, executive director of the March of Dimes Caprock Chapter, said companies in the Big Spring area are being encouraged to enter teams in the TeamWalk portion of the event.

Last year over 1.5 million volunteers participated in the walk.

MORNING SNACK — Victor the llama enjoys a mid-morning snack of hay given him by veterinarian and llama breeder Anthony Stachowski. Stachowski has raised the beasts on his rural farm near Mantus, Ohio, for the past six years and says the South American animals are in great demand as pets, pack animals and tax writeoffs.

Llama-lovers like furry lawn mowers

MANTUA, Ohio (AP) — Tax breaks and high-quality wool are two reasons why some Americans are plunking down $5,000 or more for a pair of llamas. But the South American animals make terrific lawn mowers, too.

"We really don't have an average customer," says Andy Tillman, president of the International Llama Association, and a llama breeder in Athena, Ore. "They appeal to a very wide range because they are a general farm animal and they're an attractive sort of lawn mower."

In northeastern Ohio and in the Pacific Northwest, where 63 percent of North America's 3,200 llamas are located, a rush of sorts is on.

"I live 250 miles from the nearest big city, so usually people don't bother me during the winter. The phone rang constantly. I could've sold 50 more llamas than I did," Tillman said.

In Mantua, between Cleveland and Youngstown in northeastern Ohio, demand for llamas has been so brisk that Anthony Stachowski, a veterinarian who owns a dozen of the long-necked, camel-faced animals, has turned many askers away.

Waiting lists for llamas, which usually are sold in pairs, range from 12 weeks to 18 months, says Kay Patterson, who runs a llama business with her husband near Sisters, Ore. "I don't know what it is, but many people have told me they want to smile just from looking at a llama," Mrs. Patterson said. "I just think they make people happy."

The Pattersons, who have about 600 llamas on their 350-acre farm in central Oregon, are believed to be the largest llama brokers in the country. Tillman said the Pattersons own about 10 percent of the continent's females, which can give birth to a single animal once every 11 months.

"We've always had a waiting list," she said. "I don't think there will ever be a glut of llamas on the market."

One reason is that the U.S. Department of Agriculture has banned the import of llamas since the 1930s because the animals are susceptible to such live stock illnesses as hoof-and-mouth disease.

Llamas pay for themselves in about three years, Mrs. Patterson said.

"Doctors usually invest in land, and they want something to go along with it," she said. "Llamas are perfect for that because they don't require a lot of land."

New laser may aid communications

NEW YORK (AP) — A new laser roughly the size of a grain of salt will increase by more than 10 times the efficiency of tiny glass fibers that carry telephone and computer messages on beams of light, says the director of research at Bell Laboratories.

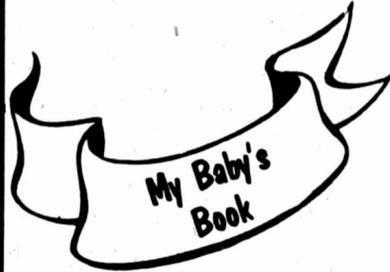

"As impressive as today's lightwave systems are, tomorrow's will be even more so if this laser lives up to its promise," Arno Penzias said Tuesday in prepared remarks at a news conference in New York.

Optical fibers the thickness of a human hair are now used to carry telephone calls in 50 cities, Penzias said. A single fiber now carries "a couple of thousand" calls simultaneously, but the new laser will make it possible to put 70,000 simultaneous calls on a single fiber.

The laser, at Bell Laboratories and called a cleaved coupled-cavity laser, can be tuned electronically like a radio to produce various frequencies of light, said Won-Tien Tsang, the head of the team that developed it.

In his remarks, Penzias said that the laser would help bring closer the day when telephones carrying color television pictures along with voice will be "as ubiquitous as today's plain old voice telephone service."

Man dies after car hits school

SEMINOLE, Texas (AP) — A 43-year-old man lost control of his car after leaving a Lions Club dinner and crashed into a high school, sparking a blaze that burned four classrooms, authorities said Tuesday.

Police referred all calls to the local newspaper, the Seminole Sentinel, and fire officials could not be located for comment.

Peace Justice Mary Parrott said she'd "rather not say" whether she had ordered an autopsy in the case.

But Sentinel publisher Marshall Day said an autopsy had been ordered. He said Switzer left the parking lot where the dinner was being held, careened across a four-lane highway, across a field, onto a residential street and over an 18-inch guard rail surrounding Seminole High School.

"The car went into the building about 20 feet," Day said.

Day said Switzer's physician told him the man had a history of epilepsy.

Valenzuela, Trevino star as BSHS bops Midland, 9-8

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

The stacked odds in Victory can't match it. The suspense of Raiders of the Lost Ark can't equal it. And the triumphant ending of Rocky III can't top it. For Big Spring High fans, Tuesday's Steers' victory over Midland High was the ultimate thriller even if it wasn't showing at the nearest drive-in.

Down 6-1, the Steers rallied back and tied the game with Alan Trevino's two-out single in the bottom of the seventh inning. After two scoreless extra innings, Midland scored twice in the top of the 10th; it wasn't enough, however, as Jinx Valenzuela drove in Marty Rodriguez with a one-out single to lift Big Spring to a dramatic 9-8 District 4-5A win at Steer Park.

The come-from-behind win snapped a four-game Steer losing streak and kept Big Spring in a third place tie with Odessa and Abilene. Big Spring is now 5-4 in district play and 11-10 overall while Midland drops to 3-6 and 8-12.

Steer box can be found in Scorecard. Big Spring travels to Monahans today for a non-district game with the Lobos. Tom Cudd will start for BSHS in the 4 p.m. game.

"That was close, man, down to the wire," said Valenzuela, who also pitched the entire 10-inning marathon. "I knew we could win it. We were playing together again. I knew we were going to come back."

Steer fans are glad that the senior left-hander had confidence in his team; for 10 innings they weren't so sure this adventure story would have a happy ending.

After giving up six runs in the third and fourth inning, Valenzuela settled down to blank the Dogs on two hits entering the 10th. With one out, opposing pitcher Jose Carrasco singled and when he tried to steal second, two Steer mistakes allowed to come all the way home. Valenzuela let down a second and served up a home run pitch to Doug Daehling — the first homer of the year for the MHS shortstop.

"I still felt we could come back," he said later. "He hit a high curve...man, it was jack city."

Down by two runs, Big Spring mounted its comeback. Trevino tripled on Carrasco's second pitch and scored when Daehling threw the ball away on the infield relay. Matt Warren then walked and hit one out, Rodriguez doubled him home. Up stepped Valenzuela and he brought down the house with a run-scoring single up the middle.

Valenzuela could have well been Valentino.

Jay Pirkle gave Big Spring the early lead with an RBI single in the second inning. Midland countered for four runs in the third and two more in the fourth to take a big five-run lead. Even with two runs in both the fourth and fifth, Big Spring found itself in dire straits by the seventh.

Danny Arista opened the inning with a single, his first of the day. Adam Rodriguez entered as a pinch runner and promptly stole second. Or so the audience thought. Batter Tom Cudd, however, interfered on the catcher's throw said the home plate umpire. He was out and Rodriguez returned to first.

The fans, edged on their bleacher seats, slumped back.

Billy Thompson grounded out for the second out. Midland chose to walk Pirkle who had three hits already and that brought up Trevino, a mid-200 batter for most of the year.

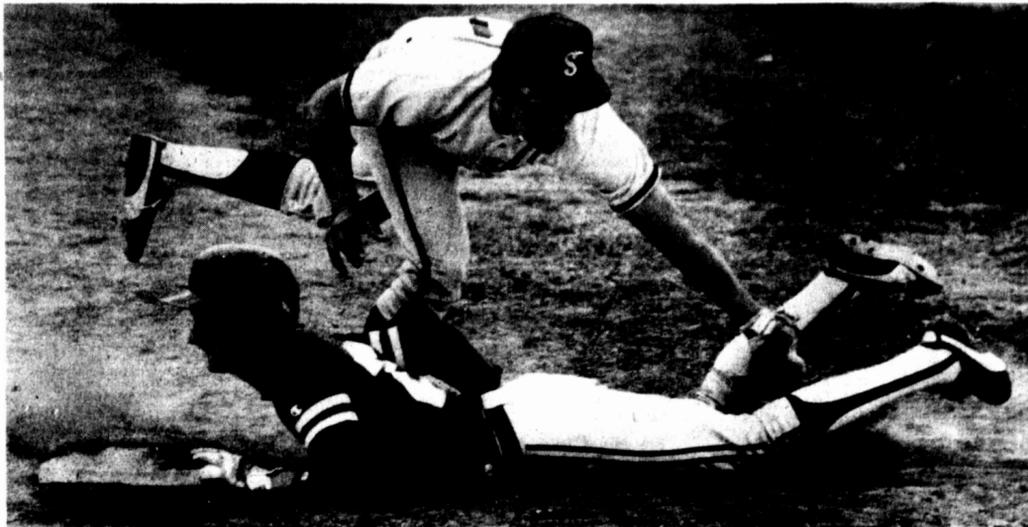

He took a strike and then lined a single to left field to tie the game.

"I'm just keeping my eye on the ball better," said the Steer left-fielder who had four hits Tuesday and six in his last two games. Was his confidence still up in the 10th, with his team down by two runs? "I was sure I was going to get on. It was time for them to make the mistakes we had been making."

And for the first time in two weeks, the Steer locker-room was noisy after a game. "What was more important than winning today," coach Frank Ibarra said, "was the way we kept coming back. Especially after the way we had been playing. We did some soul-searching this week and I think we're back together again. We could start some ball again."

Big Spring banged out 14 basehits, seven by the No. 7 and 8 batters in the lineup.

Valenzuela, raked for four runs in the third and two unearned runs in the fourth, finished with nine strikeouts and just two walks. "I didn't let down," he said, "even when we got behind. It was too early to give up. I knew we could come back."

YOU'RE GOING NO FURTHER, BUDDY — Big Spring High first baseman Danny Arista's tag is too late but Midland High baserunner Wade Perry can't make his advance to second base, either. Perry did work his way to third later in the inning but was left stranded as the Steers came from behind twice to down the Bulldogs 9-8 in 10 innings.

'Cats edge Lee, take over first place

From bottom to top. That's the story of the San Angelo Bobcats.

Central exploded for seven runs in the fourth inning and then held on for an 8-7 victory over Midland Lee Tuesday in the battle for first place in District 4-5A. San Angelo has won seven straight to take over the top spot while Lee has lost three straight to fall into second.

In other games, Abilene decked Permian 14-7. Cooper outslugged Odessa 17-13 and Big Spring nipped Midland 9-8 in 10 innings. Here's how they went around the league Tuesday afternoon:

San Angelo 8, Lee 7

MIDLAND — Light-hitting Mark Smith single and doubled to drive in two runs during the big seven-run fourth. Catcher Henry Klepac continued his tear with four hits for Central.

Rob Walker legged out an inside-the-park home run in the second for Lee, scoring Steve Woodlee ahead of him.

The Money Game

Pros make more, and more, and more

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

First in a three-part series

To the fan who carries a lunch pail or brown bag to work, it's less than comforting to know that every time Moses Malone plays a basketball game for the Philadelphia 76ers, he makes $25,609.

Or that George Foster was paid $2,878.29 per at bat to hit .247 for the New York Mets last season.

Or that Bjorn Borg earned an estimated $75 million in seven years in big time tennis; that John McEnroe will earn even more the same way.

Or that James Edwards makes $700,000 a year to sit on the benches in the National Basketball Association.

Particularly when the fan has to pay $16 for a ticket to see Malone or $8.50 to see Foster. Or $20 a month to watch their games on cable television. Not to mention when there's no game because the players are on strike, which they do more frequently these days than coal miners or steelworkers.

Money.

It has made television a dominant factor in sport, any sport.

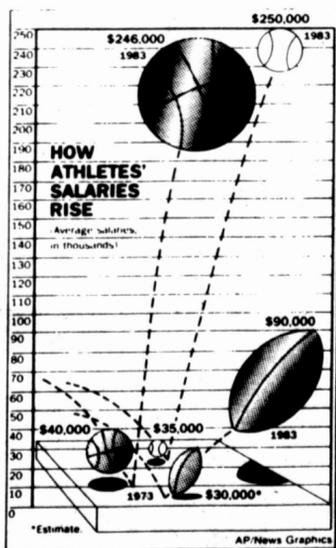

It has made building a winner on the field a process in which accountants and agents are as important as trade-happy general managers and computer-brained coaches.

Some feel it has taken the escape element away from sports. "I think it's been a turnoff to the average fan," says Bob Wolff, a Boston-based player agent. "The fan hates to develop affection for the players because he knows they might be gone."

"They say that money's the root of all evil," says Louis Guth, an economist who specializes in sports. "These days it's also the root of all competition."

In baseball, the average salary has jumped sevenfold in a decade, from about $35,000 to $250,000; in the National Basketball Association, which just agreed to a unique revenue-sharing contract two days before a strike deadline, the increase has been fivefold, to $280,000. Under the new contract, which mandates that poor teams spend more on salaries, that figure will quickly jump to at least $300,000.

Football salaries lag behind — an average of about $90,000 in the National Football League. But that's still triple what they were 10 years ago, and the United States Football League is a new competitive element that will allow players to put their services up for bid. Witness the $5 million contract the USFL's New Jersey Generals gave rookie running back Herschel Walker.

SALARIES ON THE RISE — This graphic shows the increase in athletes' salaries in the last 10 years in professional sports.

To pay such wages, teams have tripled ticket prices, while taking in millions — even billions — of dollars from television. Still, the financial picture is not altogether encouraging.

Only eight of 23 teams in the NBA, for example, made money last year. The reasons given range from poor management, to escalating salaries, even to a lack of appeal in a sport in which the players may just be too good.

Losing teams in any sport have a hard time drawing fans. The New York Mets, with deeply imbedded roots in the community, have lost between $10 million and $15 million in three years for the group of owners that bought them for $21 million. To try to build a competitive team — and to show their fans that they're trying — they spend money, as they did last year for Foster and this year to reacquire Tom Seaver. But when a Foster doesn't produce, fans stay home and the team finds itself deeper in the hole.

A fan 50 years ago had few choices. To see a game, he had to buy a ticket. He heard it on the radio, or read about it in the newspapers. Before radio, people would line up at the Western Union office to watch inning-by-inning results come in.

But fans could root for a team with the expectation that players would be around for a while, not selling their services to the highest bidder when their contracts expired.

The sports pages contained sports news, not financial or labor stories. A season would start and finish without interruption by strike. Why would an athlete, getting paid to play a child's game, join a union?

Once in a while, a dollar sign appeared in a sports story.

The Red Sox sold Babe Ruth to the Yankees for $125,000 in 1920 because they needed the money. Ruth held out and missed part of the 1925 season. But he came back to the Yankees — there was no such thing as playing out an option.

It was easy to figure out if a team was making money. The cash came from selling tickets, plus a small amount from radio rights, concessions and advertising signs.

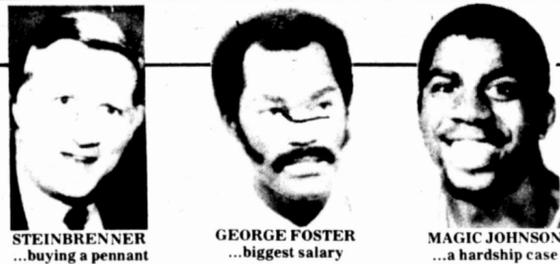

Then, after World War II, a little black-and-white tube arrived. Over the years it grew bigger and more colorful and changed the world of sports. In the 1970s, as cable television developed, the potential was there for, in Guth's words, "selling seats electronically." And the potential for a huge new source of cash developed with it.

Just take some 1982 figures.

More than half the NFL's money — 58 percent — came from television; only 34 percent from gate sales. And that's before the $2.1 billion contract the NFL and the three networks signed last summer is figured in. "It's not as if pro football is being played in a television studio," says Guth. "But ticket prices don't reflect their true market value."

The NFL's new rival, the USFL, is in business in large part because it got some loose television change as startup money — $20 million from ABC and $15 million from the ESPN cable network for two years.

Honeycutt tosses Texas by Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rick Honeycutt says one pitch stood out in his mind after he helped lead the Texas Rangers to victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Honeycutt, who has won his first two starts by allowing only two runs in 15 innings, struck out three and walked one while scattering seven hits in Tuesday's 2-1 Texas triumph.

But the key to the game may have been a sixth-inning changeup to hot-hitting Cleveland designated hitter Andre Thornton, after the Indians had scored their only run.

Chris Bando singled leading off the inning, took third as Julio Franco singled and scored on Alan Bannister's sacrifice fly. Manny Trillo then singled and Toby Harrah walked, loading the bases for Thornton.

"Andre's been swinging the bat so good, so I knew I had to give him something to get him off balance," Honeycutt said. "I threw the changeup and got the double play. I knew he'd be looking for something else."

Odell Jones came on in the ninth to post his second save.

Dave Hostetler led off the Texas fourth inning with a line drive over the center field fence, giving the Rangers a 1-0 lead. The shot was Hostetler's first home run since Aug. 17 of last season.

Texas added a run in the fifth inning. Bucky Dent singled and went to second on Billy Sample's single. One out later, Buddy Bell slapped an infield hit to load the bases. Blyleven then walked Hostetler, forcing home Dent.

Royals 5, Red Sox 1

Steve Renko waited a long time to get home. Or, at least, close to home.

Renko fulfilled a long-time goal when he started for Kansas City on Tuesday night and pitched six strong innings in the Royals' 5-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

"It took me 18 years to get here, but I made it," said the 38-year-old Renko, who was born in Kansas City, Kansas, and later played football at the University of Kansas in the same backfield with Gale Sayers.

Astros drop 8th straight in April

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even though they're the only team in the major leagues without a victory this season, the Houston Astros seem to be doing almost everything right — except win.

They dropped their eighth in a row Tuesday night to open the new season, a 3-1 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

And if Joe Niekro falls tonight in the final game of the series, the '83 Astros will match the modern National League record for losses at the start of a season of nine, a dubious honor shared by the 1918 Brooklyn Dodgers, 1919 Boston Braves and 1962 New York Mets.

Tuesday night the problem was Alejandro Pena, the Dodgers' 23-year-old right-hander who was making his first major league start.

A onetime reliever who took up starting over the winter in his native Dominican Republic, Pena scattered a half-dozen singles over 6 2/3 innings before Steve Howe picked up to preserve the win with his first save of the season.

Pedro Guerrero, Steve Yeager and Greg Brock cracked solo homers — as many home runs as the Astros have managed all season — to account for Los Angeles' scoring.

Pena is 2-0 this season, both wins over the Astros, the first one opening day in relief.

Vern Ruhle, 0-1, took the loss. He hasn't defeated the Dodgers since April of 1979, a string of eight straight losses counting a loss in the NL Divisional Series, and is 1-8 lifetime against Los Angeles.

The Astros got their only run in the fourth when Bill Doran singled with two outs, stole second and came home on John Mizerock's first major league base hit.

Braves 4, Reds 1

Rick Behenna, making his major league debut, hurled a two-hitter for five innings and singled his first two trips to the plate to lead Atlanta over Cincinnati.

Atlanta Manager Joe Torre said he removed the 23-year-old right-hander after the fifth because "he got tired."

Behenna, who jumped from Class AA to the majors, yielded only two singles to Cesar Cedeno and an unearned run in his five innings. Rick Mahler came in to pitch three scoreless innings and Terry Forster finished up in the ninth.

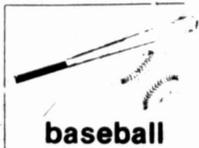

Dale Murphy homered in the eighth for Atlanta.

Phillies 4, Mets 3

A bases-loaded, two-out single by Larry Milbourne in the bottom of the 10th inning gave Philadelphia its come-from-behind victory over New York.

The Mets had taken a 3-2 lead into the bottom of the ninth before Pete Rose's sacrifice fly scored Bob Dernier with the tying run. That denied Tom Seaver his first victory since returning to the Mets in

STUFFED GRAPE LEAVES

Mrs. Haddad is an R.N. from New York City and Southampton, Long Island, New York. Her husband, Rudy, is a urologist at Malone-Hogan Clinic. He was born in Lebanon and grew up in Egypt. They have twin sons and a preschool daughter.

1 lb. hamburger
1 tsp. minced onion
2 tsp. salt
2 eggs
2 tsp. garlic powder
1 can chicken broth
lemon juice
Combine hamburger, onion, salt and garlic in large bowl. Mix well. Prepare the leaves by boiling for 10 minutes, then remove and rinse off. Open each leaf separately. Wrap the leaves like you would cabbage leaves, adding the meat mixture inside. Once this is done, each leaf is ready for cooking.

A crock-pot is the best method of cooking. Place in the pot to form rows, one on top of the other. Add one can of chicken broth over the leaves and one can of water. Then add 1/4 cup lemon juice. Let cook in crock pot for six to seven hours. If boiling on the range, cook for one to two hours, tasting for tenderness. Do not burn the bottom, and add water accordingly.

'Spice up' low calorie menus

Staying on a low calorie diet doesn't mean giving up taste. Flavor foods with spices and herbs instead of fat, bacon and salt pork. Spices and herbs add flavor without adding calories.

A small amount of spice can make a big difference in the flavor foods. When trying a spice for the first time, use a little bit of it. Gradually add more to suit your taste.

Some of the spices available are bay leaves, bouillon, cory (fresh, flakes, salt, seeds), chili powder, cumin, dill, garlic, green or red pepper, horradish and lemon.

Others are, mint, mustard, onion, onion powder or salt, onion, orange juice or grated orange rind, paprika, repper, salt and pepper and sage.

There are several ways to spice up meat dishes. For instance, rubbing a clove of garlic over roasts and steaks or bly over chicken to give the meat a new taste. Or usage with fresh pork, turkey, chicken or meat loaf.

Add cun (cumino), ground or whole, and oregano to ground meat dishes to give a "South of the Border" flavor.

Try chlowder in ground beef dishes or in stews. Sprinkle lemon juice over beef, chicken and fish before or after cting.

Use salt pepper, chopped onion, celery, green pepper, a dash oregano and lemon juice to make a good mixture brush over meat, fish or chicken to be baked.

Add one two bay leaves to dried beans, stews or pot roast. Bake fish with lemon juice, parsley and a dash of prika.

Use spe such as oregano, thyme, rosemary, marjoram, cty, basil and paprika to bring out the flavor of meats.

To add flavors to vegetables, prepare carrots cooked in orange juice and/or pineapple juice; or with grated lemon or orange rind added after cooking; or with caray seeds or with nutmeg.

Prepare whole kernel corn cooked with green or red peppers with chili powder, garlic powder and/or onion.

Green beans may be cooked with a small amount of onion or sage or basil.

Cook beets with vinegar or lemon sauce or cook with ginger and cinnamon and/or cloves, dill, ginger or thyme.

Potatoes may be cooked with onion and parsley (this is a good way to reheat left-over potatoes); if baked, slice open and sprinkle with paprika.

Tomatoes may be cooked with garlic, crushed basil, diced celery and green peppers; or with celery seeds, flakes or celery salt or bay leaves.

Prepare cucumbers with vinegar, basil, dill, mint or tarragon.

Dry beans, especially pintos, can be seasoned with onion, chili powder, celery, green peppers, oregano or cumino seed. Try all of these together in a pot of beans.

Cabbage, may be chopped and cooked until just tender crisp, with a small amount of vinegar, caraway seeds and dill (fresh and dry.)

Cook okra with chili powder, onion, green peppers and oregano. And cook zucchini-squash with dill or onion or tomatoes.

Baseball still gets more than half its money from ticket sales. But television provides 30 percent and that figure will increase once specifics on a $1 billion network contract are worked out. And cable is coming. Ten teams now have cable or pay-cable and 10 more are setting up networks. Within a decade, pay TV could be the sport's single largest revenue source.

The NBA gets 63 percent of its money from tickets, 27 percent from television. But NBA teams are starting to turn heavily to cable and other forms of pay television. Says Harold Katz, owner of the Philadelphia 76ers: "I can't break even on gate sales alone."

The television-money explosion can be traced to one game — the 1958 NFL Championship in which the Baltimore Colts defeated the New York Giants in the first sudden death overtime game ever. The sheer drama of the game demonstrated what television could do for football and vice versa.

Suddenly, pro football was hot. In the mid-50s, TV's going price for the NFL was between $35,000 and $50,000 per team, per year. By 1965, CBS was paying the NFL $28.2 million, to be divided evenly among the 14 teams under the revenue sharing plan that was to make the league prosperous.

At the same time, the four-year-old American Football League was signing a $36 million, five-year contract from NBC. It gave teams money to compete for players and precipitated the merger that was to enrich owners in both leagues.

The lure of football on television carried over to other sports, where the players — and their unions — looked for a bigger chunk of the action. An arbitrator named Peter Seitz provided them with a very sharp knife.

In 1970, Curt Flood, traded by the St. Louis Cardinals to Philadelphia, challenged the reserve clause that allowed the trade. Baseball fought and won.

But in 1974, Catfish Hunter of the Oakland A's, baseball's best pitcher, declared himself a free agent because A's owner Charles O. Finley hadn't paid $50,000 of Hunter's $100,000 salary. The case went to arbitration and on Dec. 16, 1974, Hunter was declared a free agent by an arbitration panel.

Fifteen days later, Hunter signed a contract with the New York Yankees for $3.75 million over five years, a 750 percent pay increase.

The next year, pitchers Dave McNally and Andy Messersmith challenged their contracts. By ruling in their favor, Seitz struck down baseball's reserve clause, which bound players to their clubs forever.

Over the next five years, basketball players and hockey players won modified free agency that allowed them to change clubs with compensation going to their old teams. Football players tried, but after winning a free agent clause in their 1974 strike, they found the compensation — a first-round draft choice for an $80,000-a-year player — to be too expensive. Owners didn't jump at the chance to buy a Super Bowl ring, as their compatriots in baseball, basketball and hockey had done.

Free agency is the major reason behind the baseball and football strikes in the past two years; wanting to protect their court-ordered free agency was one factor that drove NBA players to the brink of a walkout.

Individual sports, particularly tennis, have their own millionaires. According to a report in New York Magazine, McEnroe earned close to $4 million last year — $827,425 in 12 tennis tournaments; $1.4 million in exhibitions; $1.3 million in endorsements of tennis products and several hundred thousand more in non-tennis endorsements.

Colleges? They're also in on the bonanza. For televising this year's NCAA college basketball tournament, CBS paid the NCAA $16 million, much of which went to the schools involved. ESPN also picked up some of the games.

Monahans drops Tors, 12-2

MONAHANS — Mike Starnes rapped a 3-run triple to highlight a six-run sixth inning and lead Monahans to a 12-2 District 2-AAAA victory over Lamesa here Friday night.

The loss was the third straight in district play for the Golden Tornadoes and dropped Lamesa to 7-12 for the season. Monahans is 1-1 in 2-4A play.

Down 5-0, Lamesa scored its only two runs of the game in the fourth inning. Ben Morales reached on a fielder's choice and Richard Diaz and Tony Cervantes walked to load the bases. Catcher Blake McKinney followed with single up the middle to score two runs.

The six-run sixth by Monahans put the game away, however, as three Lamesa errors helped end the game by the 10-run rule.

Greg Winder's two-RBI single in first inning started the Lobos on their way to the victory.

Lamesa was off Tuesday and resumes district action Friday with a 7:30 p.m. game in Pecos.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are now able to understand a comprehensive course of action awaiting your attention. You can make progress by using today's beneficial aspects to your advantage.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): A good day to engage in recreational activities that will bring you in touch with congenials. Show that you have wisdom.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): A new project proposed could bring you added income in the future. Try to please loved one. Stop procrastinating.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Contact allies and see how you can gain their full cooperation where mutual goals are concerned. Keep all appointments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A good time to study new ways that could add to your present income. A monetary expert can give the advice you need.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Know what it is you truly want and direct your efforts toward attaining it. Sidestep one who has an eye on your assets.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Use your intellect in the handling of private matters. Not a good time to confide in others. Use common sense.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Meet with good friends today and exchange new ideas. A desire you've had can now be attained. Relax at home tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Know the best way to express your talents. Discuss your aims with a prominent person. Be more confident.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Study new outlets that could add to your income in the days ahead. A new contact can be most helpful to you now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): A good conversation with the one you love can pave the way to a better understanding. Be sure to keep your promises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Paying attention to what associates have to say can improve your relationships with them. Express happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): A new plan needs to be discussed with co-workers if it is to be successful. You can make much progress in career matters now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be full of good ideas that will bring many honors, so be sure to encourage your progeny early in life for best results. Direct the education along governmental lines. A good person in this chart.

Open for Business

By JOHNNIE LOU AVERY

To be or not to be, ya'll

A few days ago Cecelia McKenzie, director of the Spring City Theatre, received a phone call from an editor of Texas Monthly who wanted to do an interview for an upcoming issue of that magazine about the recent production, "Taming of the Shrew." This Shakespearean comedy was done in a western setting with western costuming but using the Elizabethan language. We hope to know in which issue this story will appear within the next few weeks.

Because the manufactured home (or mobile homes or sectional homes) industry has been tagged as one of the most promising of the Eighties. I talked to Gud Forrest of Cameo Energy Homes here in Big Spring about their outlook. Gus is a part of the management team that guides this plant to new records regularly. This valuable industry began in Big Spring about 12 years ago and now makes both single and double wide homes. A new management group took over the reins of the company two years ago and since that time it went from two houses per day to now almost five a day. Soon it will be adding modular homes to the output. Recently the company reached a milestone of producing the 4,000th house. The finished products are distributed in Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma. It has 150 employees and is growing. Watch for an open house of the plant in May that will give the citizens of Big Spring the opportunity to see the inside of this manufacturing operation.

Another example of how our businesses benefit this community through social responsibility can be credited to Advanced Telephone Systems. The owners of this company donated installation costs of a telephone system in the Salvation Army facilities, a non-profit social service-religious institution.

Sattelite Channel Media, a new business in town that sells advertising on cable television, is donating 120 spots on CNN2 and Sports Channel 3 to advertise the Big Spring Signal Peak Shiner Pro-Am Golf Tournament coming up May 18-20.

Terry Dobson, an administrator at the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf (SWCID), reminded us that his office will be a clearinghouse in helping to place college students from SWCID in summer jobs. He has students available in almost all job categories who are eager to work. Please call him today if your company will have part- or full-time summer work available. This applies also to individuals who might need help in their homes.

Charles Hays and Sam Hill are not letting up in their efforts to receive adequate funding to keep SWCID open. They will meet in Kerrville with the West Texas Chamber State Affairs Committee on April 17 at 4:30 p.m. to solicit their support for SWCID and to give information about the uniqueness of this college.

CRIMESTOPPERS have ordered bumper stickers and telephone decals and will soon be distributing these to the citizenry in an effort to generate public awareness and involvement in the fight against vandalism, arson and other types of crimes in this community.

Attention all small, independent business owners: There will be an organizational meeting Tuesday, May 3, in the Chamber conference room of the Independent Business Council. Gordon Myrick will chair the meeting to unite small businesses in order to have an effective voice in local, state, and national legislation. Call the Chamber for more information.

Frank Hardesty reminds us that if you're planning to have new stationery or business labels printed, use the new post office zip code of 79720. The postal service will continue to deliver mail bearing the old zip code for one year but keep this change in mind as you run out of printed material. Also, to further speed up mail service, you can use the Zip+4 code which is simply the new zip code plus your box number. Your voluntary Zip+4 code would look like this: Big Spring, Texas 79721-2271.

It is looking very bleak for the repeal of withholding on dividends and interest payments. Congressional leaders are resisting pressure from the banking lobby and from the massive public outcry.

With just two more days to go to file your income tax, you may be feeling desperate. Here's help: before April 16, send Form 4868 to the IRS and you will be able to extend the due date to August 15.

Upcoming dates to remember for the remainder of this month:

- April 17 — Saunders Company Open House for their new plant. 1:00 to 5:00.
- April 19 — Women's Networking Brown-Bag Lunch. 210 Permian Building.
- April 22 — Public Library Open House.
- April 23 — March of Dimes Celebrity Walk-A-Thon. 8:30 a.m., Big Spring Mall.
- April 26 — Big Spring Arts Council will host a consortium meeting at 9:30 a.m.
- April 29-30 — U.S. Highway 87 Association annual meeting hosted by Big Spring.

Houston can't ID deaf-mute boy

HOUSTON (AP) — Federal officials say two factors are handicapping their attempt to identify a deaf-mute 16-year-old: the boy does not know sign language and does not want to return home.

Officials said Tuesday they believe the blue-eyed, brown-haired boy is a Canadian runaway and a victim of abuse. He is scarred by burns and "appears to fit the profile of an abused child," said Vincent P. Henderson, assistant district director of investigations for the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"He doesn't understand sign language, in English or French, and doesn't read lips," he said. Henderson said, he has communicated with the youth through written conversations.

The boy has identified himself by two names, Mike Jones and Mike Kinisky, Henderson said.

He said the boy surrendered to a security guard last week at a shopping mall "apparently because he was sick of living on the streets." He had apparently been in Houston about two weeks, Henderson said. Henderson said the agency has been unable to trace the boy's guardians by either of the names or by records kept in the two cities he has mentioned, Toronto or Ontario.

Henderson said the boy was turned over to juvenile authorities after surrendering to the guard, then to INS.

House passes nuke war plan

AUSTIN (AP) — One legislator said she wasn't too enamored of spending a nuclear war in the company of her colleagues, but the Texas House still passed a proposed constitutional amendment providing for continuation of the Legislature in case of nuclear attack.

"Wouldn't you really advise me to be gone and be with someone I love — not with you guys — but with someone else somewhere else preserving my life?" Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, asked Grand Saline Rep. Bill Hollowell, the proposal's sponsor.

Hollowell avoided the issue by telling her that Houston is a prime nuclear attack target, and "if this eventuality occurred, you wouldn't be here."

Texas should do its part to make sure "the genius of constitutional rule" is not lost and replaced with martial law or a military government, Hollowell argued.

The proposal was passed 119-17 and sent to the Senate. Voters would then have to decide if they want the Legislature to be able to meet during a nuclear war to raise taxes and appropriate money.

Hollowell's proposal would provide for replacement of legislators who are "unavailable for duty" during an enemy attack.

Ex-madam to appear on 'Lie Detector' show

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Former brothel operator Theresa Brown will appear on the syndicated television show "Lie Detector" to vouch for the authenticity of her much-touted "trick list."

But the show's producer, Tom Cole, refuses to say whether Ms. Brown passed the polygraph.

The former madam asked to appear on the show, hosted by defense attorney F. Lee Bailey, to prove her trick list is authentic and that she was coerced into pleading guilty to charges of promoting prostitution. She is appealing that conviction and subsequent five-year probated sentence to the 4th Court of Civil Appeals here.

"She did great," Cole said from Los Angeles. "I'm not going to tell you if her answers were truthful or deceptive. You'll just have to watch to see how she came out."

Guests on the show take polygraph tests to try to prove their sides of a dispute or legal problem.

'Equus' causes stir in Corpus Christi

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A local theater producing the award-winning play "Equus" has temporarily surrendered its liquor license because of a nude scene that apparently got under the skin of police officers.

The brief nudity earned the play a self-imposed "R" rating from its producers, the Encore Theater Company.

But a Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission spokesman says that a state nudity law regulating bars could be applied against the theater.

"The police came to the theater Friday and said either we voluntarily suspend our alcoholic beverage license or they would arrest the actors on stage when they appeared nude," said Robert Johnson, a member of Encore's board of directors.

"I thought that was totally unfair. This is art... not a topless bar," he said.

The police vice squad contacted the TABC about the two-minute nude scene, said the agency spokesman, who declined to be identified.

"Even though they just frolick around on stage and there's no lascivious groping, there can be no liquor license where there is total nudity on stage. Once the theater group was told this, they voluntarily placed the license in suspension," the spokesman said.

Corpus Christi Assistant Police Chief Ken Bung said police plan to enforce the law, but have yet to take any action.

"Equus," Peter Shaffer's play about a stable boy and his worship of horses, has been one of the best attended stage productions at the theater, board member Donna Garica said Tuesday.

"We averaged about 100 people a night for Thursday through Saturday," she said.

Losing the liquor license could damage the theater financially, she said.
