State eyes Howard as dump site

BY JANET WARREN
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The state's search for a place to bury low-level radioactive waste has narrowed to portions of 105 Texas counties, including Howard and other area counties.

Most of the potential sites are concentrated in north central, western and southwestern parts of the state. The Texas Coast, the Panhandle and chunks of East and West Texas have been ruled out because of undesirable geographic conditions, such as shallow groundwater, limestone deposits or flooding.

THE REPORT PROPOSES to concentrate the search in 15 regions of the state. It is the first phase of a three-step study designed to locate the best place to construct a landfill for low-level radioactive waste from nuclear reactors, hospitals, laboratories and other industries handling radioactive materials.

Spent reactor fuel will not be dumped at the landfill, a state official said, but other radioactive material from the reactor sites, such as contaminated chemicals, worker clothing and tools will be deposited there, he said.

The term "low-level" is relative, however. A lot of the material must be handled with great care although it is not as highly radioactive as the spent fuel, which would be sent to a federal repository, an official said.

Although the first phase of the study has narrowed the site search to 15 regions, eight of those areas are listed as preferred locations in the report. Areas that do not have the preferred soil conditions probably will drop out in the second phase of the study, a state official said.

AREAS IN THIS REGION include the Red Bed Plains Region, with possible sites in portions of Howard, Martin, Mitchell, Sterling, Glasscock, Dawson, Borden, Scurry, and Kent counties. It is among the top eight of the 15 regions selected for further review.

"This area features small but favorable siting locations in nine counties or more, each exhibiting preferred soil conditions," the report said.

Dames and Moore Consultants of Houston is performing the search under a contract with the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority, a state agency created in 1981 by the Texas Legislature to establish the facility.

The search area will be narrowed to five specific sites in the next phase of the study expected to be completed by July, said Rick Jacobi, the authority's general manager. A final site will be pinpointed through the study by no later than October, he said.

IF THE AUTHORITY decides to pursue the final location, the authority board will hold a hearing in that county before making its choice. The ultimate site selection rests with the state's health commissioner, who will issue or deny the license for the landfill, Jacobi said.

The Texas Department of Health also could call another public hearing as part of its review of the site license application, Jacobi said.

The disposal area is planned to be operational in January 1988, with an expected life of 30 to 40 years. The site would be no larger than about 600 acres, with about 50 acres designated for waste disposal, said Bob Avant, the authority's assistant general manager.

Texas currently sends its low-level radioactive waste to a site in Washington state, Jacobi said. But a 1980 federal law requires that by 1986 each state handle its own waste or enter into an agreement with nearby states to take care of the material.

Commissioner says 'huge error' made in school figures

From wire and bureau reports
AUSTIN — State Education Commissioner Raymon J. Bynum said today the losses in minimum aid to Texas public schools will not total the $110 million previously reported.

The losses will be reduced to $45 million to about 400 school districts for 1984-85, Bynum told a Capitol news conference.

Bynum said Tuesday he made a "huge error" in computing the figure.

"A previously circulated printout failed to give school districts credit for prior salary raises, excluding steps," Bynum told the news conference. "By not including the salary increases, calculations showed that the school districts would lose $110 million in minimum aid by using the 1980-81 base."

He said the new figure for losses will total $22 million for the first year of the biennium and $23 million the next.

According to the new calculations, Big Spring Independent School District would still lose money. It would suffer a $177,800 loss in state aid during the school year beginning in September.

The next year the school district would lose $180,000, according to the Texas Education Agency.

Insurance rates may decline

From staff and wire reports

AUSTIN — If the State Board of Insurance takes the recommendation of its staff, holders of property insurance policies in Texas will save $42 million the next year.

The cost of homeowners' insurance in Big Spring could drop 1.4 percent if the state board follows a staff proposal.

The three-member insurance board heard testimony on the proposal Wednesday and is scheduled to adopt a new rate to go into effect Oct. 1.

Tenant or renters' insurance would jump by 9.4 percent under the staff proposal. In addition, the proposal calls for fire insurance to increase by 14.4 percent on dwellings and 6.5 percent See INSURANCE, page 2A

Los Ybanez bout enters new round

By RICHARD HORN
Staff Writer

LAMESA — The Los Ybanez legal bout is entering another round.

Israel Ybanez, owner and current leader of the 300-population town, filed another petition Tuesday for a local option election on beer sales.

However, a Lamesa attorney said today he expects to file a lawsuit this week challenging the legality of the town's incorporation.

Ybanez' petition, containing signatures from voters favoring an election for beer sales for off-premises consumption, should receive action at a meeting of the Dawson County Commissioners Court on Monday, Ybanez said.

A petition for beer sales was presented to commissioners in May, but was withdrawn because of a question about wording on the agenda.

At the time, attorney Ed Fulbright said his clients, Dawson County landowners John Dell Barron and Milton Earnest, were considering a lawsuit challenging the legality of Los Ybanez.

Fulbright, in a telephone interview this morning, declined to comment on the exact nature of the lawsuit, but said it has to do with the state of the former workers camp at the time of incorporation.

He said there was question whether Los Ybanez was a city or just a collection of houses owned by Ybanez. "My clients simply don't feel that it (Ybanez' efforts) is a good faith effort to establish a town. It's a good faith effort to be able to sell beer," he said.

Fulbright filed a lawsuit last December charging that the town was illegal because of a surveying error. An Andrews County district judge ruled in favor of the suit.

The town was reincorporated in April. "I don't see where there's any legal way of filing against us," Ybanez said Tuesday. "The town has cooperated with the law."

Ybanez said he has found the action against the town valuable.

"It has been to our advantage and we've corrected our mistakes," he said. "Because of his (Fulbright's) research we have done it right this time."

Fulbright said he plans to be present at the commissioners meeting Monday.

Mitchell County entering ring

COLORADO CITY — The desire for more liquor sales has been uncorked in Mitchell County.

A petition calling for a liquor election in the county's Precinct 4 has been verified by County Clerk Joan Beach. An election may be scheduled for some time in July, County Judge Bill Carter said this morning.

Voters in Mitchell County Precinct 3 approved the sale of alcohol for off-premises consumption in April. Carter has approved four applications, and sales began two weeks ago.

Ms. Beach said Tuesday that the new petition, which also calls for an election for off-premises consumption, had about 200 valid signatures. She said 144 were required.

Precinct 4 includes the eastern part of the county and the city of Lorraine. It borders Nolan and Scurry counties and has 830 registered voters. The precinct does not include any part of Colorado City.

Carter said commissioners will set the election date at their meeting Monday. He estimated that the election would be scheduled for Saturday, July 9.

Carter said he did not know who was organizing the campaign for liquor sales in the precinct.

"We'll just see what the people say," Carter said. During liquor application hearings for Precinct 3, Carter said that he questioned whether liquor sales could be considered "progress."

Precinct 3, which includes Lake Colorado City State Park and part of Colorado City, voted 476-393 in favor of liquor sales on April 9. The proposition was heavily opposed by clergymen and some businessmen.

To this date, Carter has approved four applications and turned down one. Three applications have been withdrawn during hearings with Carter.

He said there are five or six applications pending that he may consider next week.

Mitchell County had been dry since the 1880s. Before the election in April, opponents of liquor sales had fought off propositions in Precincts 2 and 3.

Carter said that to his knowledge this was the first time Precinct 4 has filed for a liquor election.

TESCO rate quest would hike home bills 20 percent

From staff and wire reports

A rate hike request announced yesterday by Texas Electric Service Co. would increase most residential rates about 20 percent, officials said.

The company said it will file the request with the Public Utilities Commission Thursday.

The rate request would effect an overall increase on residential and commercial rates of 16.1 percent, according to TESCO spokesman George Hedrick.

But residential rates would go up more than commercial rates, Hedrick said.

If the entire rate increase was granted by the PUC, the average residential customer whose bills are $50 per month would pay about $10 more.

Commercial rate increases probably would be "slightly lower" than residential rates, according to Hooper Sanders, local TESCO office manager. But saying just how much lower is difficult, Sanders said.

"Commercial rates depend on the business' size and what kind of demand it has for electricity," he said. "They are figured on such an individual basis that there is no average in commercial rates."

TESCO serves a 48-county area, including Fort Worth, Arlington, most Tarrant County suburbs and portions of Grand Prairie, as well as parts of West Texas, including Wichita Falls, Sweetwater, Big Spring, Midland and Odessa.

TESCO rates have not gone up since Oct. 14, 1980, when a 10.1 percent increase took effect.

TESCO said the increase is needed because of inflation and construction needs.

White: TEC fate may need session

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White says a decision by the U.S. Department of Labor will help Texas decide if and when a special session is needed to take care of the Texas Employment Commission issue.

In the final days of the Legislature, which closed May 30, a bill to continue operations of the TEC failed because of House-Senate differences.

Floyd Edwards, employment and training administrator of the Labor Department's Dallas office, immediately said there would be no unemployment compensation paid and no job placement in Texas after Sept. 30 without passage of the bill.

On Tuesday, Albert Angrisani, assistant secretary of the Labor Employment and Training Administration in Washington, sent White a telegram.

"I would like to emphasize that the Department of Labor has not taken a position on extending the TEC, nor has it analyzed possible consequences of the state Legislature's authorization for the TEC expire," the telegram said.

"Any statements or intervention by the Dallas regional office have been both premature and inappropriate. I regret that the regional administrator has interpreted state actions and consequences on his own initiative."

The Washington official invited White to give them the facts of the TEC matter "and we will respond promptly."

White told reporters that Angrisani's telegram "shows the Department of Labor is willing to work with us in trying to adjust their time tables to meet the time tables we are faced with and gives us better flexibility in handling this problem."

White said the telegram definitely would affect the calling of any special session at which the TEC matter might be considered.

He has said several times the TEC would be a likely subject in a special session but he has not yet decided if or when he will call such a session.

Illiteracy study done 8 years ago, UT says

AUSTIN (AP) — A study concluding that about 21 percent of Texas adults were functionally illiterate was conducted in 1975, but the illiteracy rate is probably at least that high today, a University of Texas official said Tuesday.

The Associated Press reported Monday that the study, based on interviews with a random sample of 1,500 Texans, concluded that two million Texans did not have the basic reading, writing and computation skills needed for everyday tasks.

The study, rewritten from information in the body of a newspaper story on Texas illiteracy, did not say when the study was conducted. Jim Cates, director of the University of Texas Education Department's Adult Performance Level Project, which did the study, said the survey was conducted and released in 1975.

He said a similar study has not been conducted by his office since then, but that it is his belief, based on competency test results in high schools and on other reports, that the illiteracy rate has not improved.

"Every indication we have is that the situation is no better and is probably a little worse," Cates said.

the two-year time lag between the effective date of the federal law and the time the landfill comes on line, Jacobi said.

State officials have backed away from entering into a compact agreement, fearing Texas would be selected as the regional dump site for surrounding states since it has so much waste of its own, Jacobi said. The prevailing sentiment in compact negotiations among other states is that the major waste producer host the dumping ground, he said.

The report also identified three of the 15 search regions that are the least likely to provide suitable locations for the disposal site. Those three regions include the Loving County area, some territory in Central Texas surrounding Hamilton and Lampasas counties, and an East Texas area referred to as "Eastern Timbers."

But officials noted that any of the 15 regions could be selected to host the facility, depending on various problems encountered in the selection process.

OTHER REQUIREMENTS FOR the site include being near a road and not too far across the state from the nuclear reactors, which will account for the majority of the waste after they come on line, Avant said.

The South Texas Nuclear Project is under construction near Bay City along the coast. Comanche Peak is being built near Glen Rose in North Central Texas.

In the first phase of site selection, the consultants considered geology, hydrology, mineral resources, population, flooding and coastal hazards on a statewide basis.

Jacobi said the authority has received numerous telephone calls from concerned citizens as word has spread about the study. Many are worried that the site will wind up in their backyard and want to know if their property is located in a search area, he said.

But the landfill is not expected to endanger area residents, Jacobi said. It would not be placed near high population areas or in growth corridors and would be surrounded by a buffer zone, such as farming or ranch land, Avant said.

The report is available for inspection at the agency's office at 1300-C East Anderson Lane, Suite 175, Austin.

beginning in September include Dawson ISD, $6,500; and Coahoma ISD, $35,900.

Figures on the following year were not immediately available for these districts.

In the coming school year, other area districts would either gain funds or retain the same level of funding they currently have.

"Some districts will still be hard hit," he said. "There's Dallas and Harris counties and probably the worst is Montgomery, where there have been some tax rollbacks." Bynum added that "a special session could correct this at any time ... I feel certain we will have a special session before the second year of the biennium."

Texas Education Agency estimates released last week indicated school districts would lose $110 million in state aid because the Legislature failed to update a formula for distributing the minimum aid.

Minimum aid is part of the Founation School Fund. It is a safeguard that guarantees that state funding for school districts does not fall below a certain level, Bynum said. "If the safeguard did not exist and state funding for a district was substantially reduced, a local school district might be forced to raise local taxes or lay off employees," he said.

State law says that no district will receive less in state aid per pupil than it received in 1980-81, plus pay raises.

on farms, extended coverage to increase an average of 2.7 percent and farm and ranch insurance to decrease by 4 percent.

The insurance industry was expected to ask for increased rates.

The board will announce its decision on rates about the first week in July. The new rates will be effective with policies written Oct. 1 or afterwards.

The staff recommendations for this year include statewide average rate reductions of 5.9 percent in homeowners insurance; 7.1 percent in farm and ranch owners insurance; 16.2 percent in fire coverage for businesses; and 5.5 percent in extended coverage

Police Beat

Suspect in shooting released

The 36-year-old Big Spring man who was arrested Monday night in connection with a shooting outside a north side bar posted a $200 bond yesterday for his release on a public intoxication charge.

Police say no other charges were filed against Juan E. Williams of 1502 Bluebird because the victim, Fred Cole of 707 Ohio, refused to press charges.

Cole was moved from intensive care to a floor room and is "doing better," a Malone-Hogan Hospital spokeswoman said. Gunshots wounded Cole in the face and back at 11:20 p.m. Monday outside the T-Club at 311 N.W. Fourth.

Police Sgt. J. D. Carter said a warrant may be issued for Williams' arrest for violating parole.

Williams has had a "clean record" since his release from the Texas Department of Corrections on May 25, 1982, said Williams' case worker, Patti Buchanan of the Midland-Odessa Board of Pardons and Parole.

Ms. Buchanan said Williams was sentenced to TDC for 12 years for two counts of delivery of heroine.

Police reports also show the following:

- James A. Reese, 52, of 1405 Tucson was arrested yesterday on an assault warrant for an April 30 offense. He posted a $65 bond for his release.
- James R. Kathmann, 18, of 2514 Fairchild posted a $1,500 bond yesterday for his release after his arrest Monday night on suspicion of possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia. Michelle Alexander, 17, of the same address paid a fine for her release on the same charges.
- Winifried Wood of 1701 Jennings told police someone stole her billfold from her house between noon Monday and 10 a.m. Tuesday. The billfold contained $160 cash, a driver's license and credit cards.
- Andy Napier of Dewees Exxon told police someone pumped $34.71 worth of unleaded gas at 3:10 a.m. today and didn't pay for it.

David Mitchem of Mitchem Auto Sales at 700 W. Fourth told police someone broke a window of a Manta Montage between 7 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. Tuesday. He estimated $150 damage to the car.

A 55-year-old Big Spring woman is in stable condition today at Malone-Hogan Hospital after a two-car collision yesterday at South Scurry and West Fifth.

Police say a 1979 Ford Bronco truck driven by Patrick C. Gray, 32, of Derrick Road collided at 12:10 p.m. with an Oldsmobile Regency car driven by Juanita W. Bryant, 55, of 900 Abrams.

Ms. Bryant was taken to the hospital by Shaffer Ambulance Service and admitted. Police cited Gray for failure to yield right of way at a stop intersection.

Building permits show construction up over year ago

The 33 building permits City Building Inspector Dewey Byers issued in May were for $1,257,329 worth of commercial, instructional and residential construction, bringing total construction expenditures so far this fiscal year (October 1982 through May 1983) to $5.9 million.

Construction expenditures in May 1983 are about $550,000 more than they were in May 1982 and $541,980 more for fiscal year 1983 than for fiscal year 1982.

The largest amount of construction dollars was spent on two new commercial buildings. They were issued to O.T. Tilley for a $1,100,000 motel, Shiloh Inn at 2900 E. Interstate 20; and a $1,000 drive-through film developing business, Clear Photo Co., at 402 Birdwell.

Byers also issued permits to Don Baker for a $60,000 home at No. 3 Bennett; St. Mary's Episcopal Church at 1005 Goliad for a $20,200 addition to its kitchen and dining area; and to Tommy Rutledge for a $25,000 swimming pool at 2101 E. 25th.

Byers also issued a permit to Randall Merrill to move Air Force barracks from the Big Spring Industrial Park to 3800 W. Highway 80. Merrill plans to convert the barracks into apartments similar to the Sandra Gail Apartments.

Fees for the building permits, sewer and water taps and other permits generated $4,283 in May for the city's general fund.

County clerk collections up

The Howard County Clerk's office collected $33,587.93 in fees for misdemeanor criminal, probate, civil and state hospital cases for the month of May, according to County Clerk Margaret Ray.

Mrs. Ray said her office has seen an increase in the amount of work coming from the four areas. A total of $23,036.38 was from criminal, probate, civil and state hospital fees while $10,551.55 was clerks' fees, she said.

The $33,587 total is up from April's $26,934.37. March was equally good with $34,143.90 collected. April totaled $34,143.90 collected for the county.

Other months for the fiscal year going back to October, 1982 averaged $30,000 with only a dip in November, according to records.

Nicaraguan diplomats leaving U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a swiftly moving diplomatic drama marked by charges of assassination plots and spying, 21 Nicaraguan diplomats are obeying U.S. orders to close all six of their country's consulates and leave the country.

The State Department on Tuesday ordered the consulates shuttered and the diplomats and their families expelled in an unexpectedly severe and swift retaliation for the expulsion of three U.S. diplomats by Nicaragua on Monday.

"The Nicaraguan government's precipitate action in expelling U.S. officials, giving them an unreasonably short deadline for leaving the country, and then the public show staged (in Managua) on June 6, called in our opinion for a strong response," said Rush Taylor, a spokesman at the State Department.

"An important additional consideration was the Nicaraguan government's use of its consulates for intelligence operations," Taylor said.

Another official, speaking privately, said the consulates were "being used very actively" for intelligence gathering. He gave no details.

In Managua, the Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry distributed a note to reporters which said Nicaragua "denounces before the international community the latest act of hostility by the Reagan administration against Nicaragua."

The statement said the U.S. action brings Central America closer to war. "Now the United States comes with this response of closing the six consulates and expelling our diplomats, which strengthens the line of confrontation and the war in Central America," it said.

Word of the U.S. action was passed to Nicaraguan Ambassador Antonio Jarquin during a chilly 15-minute interview with James H. Michel, newly appointed acting assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

At the Nicaraguan Embassy, Minister-Counselor Manuel Cordero, the deputy chief of mission, told reporters that "so far the U.S. government hasn't challenged the proof" that three expelled American diplomats plotted for the CIA to try to kill foreign minister Miguel D'Escoto and to form terrorist squads.

However, the State Department says it "rejects the charges." And Linda Pfeifel, head of the political section at the U.S. Embassy in Managua and one of the three expelled Americans, called them absurd.

The officials heading the Nicaraguan consulates in New York, New Orleans, Miami, Houston, Los Angeles and San Francisco were given until 4 p.m. local time today to close their doors and leave the country.

The remaining officials and all dependents were told to be out by Friday.

Cordero said 50 to 60 Nicaraguans in all would have to leave. The action would leave open only Nicaragua's embassy here, its mission at the United Nations in New York City and honorary consuls in Santa Barbara, Calif. and in Puerto Rico.

Managua and Washington were already locked in a long-running diplomatic word battle that includes U.S. charges that Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government funnels Soviet arms to guerrillas in El Salvador and the counter charge that the Reagan administration is striving "to overthrow our government." In Congress on Tuesday, the House Foreign Affairs Committee voted 20-14 to ban U.S. undercover operations in Nicaragua and to instead openly help friendly governments in the area intercept arms bound for leftist rebels in El Salvador.

Some committee members, however, are predicting that a compromise will be reached when the issues comes before the full House that would allow U.S. covert aid to continue. No action is expected until later this month.

The State Department said the sweeping U.S. diplomatic retaliation Tuesday is not a signal that a complete break in relations is imminent.

And Taylor said there is no plan to change the schedule of former Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., now a presidential envoy charged with negotiating peace in Central America, who is scheduled to meet with Sandinista officials in Managua on Friday.

Some officials conceded it was difficult to see how the Stone trip could produce results in the present atmosphere.

The three Americans — Ms. Pfeifel, first secretary David Noble Grieg and second secretary Ermila Rodriguez — were declared "personae non grata" by the Nicaraguan government on Monday and given 24 hours to leave the country.

An official communique stated that "The criminal actions that the diplomats were planning to carry out included the organization of attempts on the lives of leaders of the Sandinista revolution and of high-ranking officials of the Nicaraguan government."

CLOSING CONSULATE — Nicaraguan Consul General Aura Betetta holds her head at a San Francisco news conference after announcing Tuesday that the consulate would close. Mrs. Betetta returned to her home country Tuesday night after 22 years in San Francisco.

Police revealing several clues in family slaying

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — Whoever committed four brutal murders at a posh hillside home left bloody smears, fingerprints, clothes and partly eaten cans of food at a vacant ranch house less than 100 yards away, authorities say.

San Bernardino County Sheriff Floyd Tidwell said at a news conference Tuesday night that the new evidence indicated the killer had stayed in the ranch house sometime within the last week.

"The home had evidence in it that leads us to believe the person that was in that home perpetrated the murders of the (F. Douglas) Ryan family," he said.

"We found blood in the residence, smears of blood, some clothes that had been left there and some other items of evidence I'm not at liberty to reveal," Tidwell said.

Ryan, 41, and his 41-year-old wife Peggy Ann, were slain along with their daughter and a neighbor boy Sunday at their home. Their 8-year-old son survived.

The last occupant of the ranch house, a worker on a nearby ranch, told authorities the house had been cleaned before she moved out June 1.

Tidwell said his investigation now is focusing on a reported sighting of the victims' missing station wagon in Costa Mesa, about 40 miles southwest of the crime scene.

A man spotted near where a witness claimed to have seen the car was in custody, Tidwell said. Detectives were questioning Milton August Bulau, 33, of Costa Mesa, who surrendered Tuesday and confessed to a liquor store holdup Monday night, said Costa Mesa Police Lt. Tom Lazar.

Bulau, booked for investigation of robbery and held at the Costa Mesa City Jail in lieu of $25,000 bail, has "not been linked with the murder at this time," San Bernardino sheriff's deputy Alexis Tanner said Tuesday.

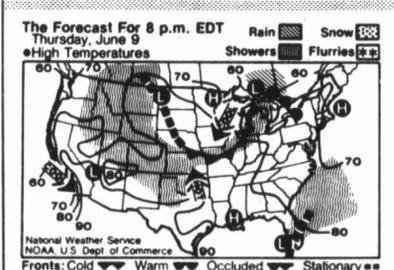

Authorities said they have postponed further interviews with the family's lone survivor, 8-year-old Joshua Ryan, whose throat was slashed in the attack that killed his parents, sister Jessica Ryan, 10, and a playmate, Christopher Hughes, 10.

Joshua was in stable condition Tuesday under heavy guard at Loma Linda University Hospital. In initial interviews Monday, the boy was unable to provide any useful information, said San Bernardino sheriff's Capt. Phil Schuyler.

A detective interviewing the boy Monday got him to scribble some things down, but nothing was legible and his limited verbal responses were contradictory, he said. The boy had undergone a tracheotomy to help him breathe.

County Coroner Brian McCormick said all four victims had been stabbed at least 20 times and died within minutes of the attack.

Weather

Fair skies predicted

By The Associated Press

Fair skies dominated the Texas weather picture today as a high pressure system settled across the northeastern section of the state.

Showers and thunderstorms developed from Lubbock to Abilene Tuesday night in response to a weak upper level disturbance moving through the Panhandle.

Thunderstorms rumbled across Hockley County, causing some wind damage in Levelland and dumping golf ball-size hail across the area.

Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 54 at Amarillo to 70 at McAllen and Beaumont.

The forecast called for fair to partly cloudy skies, with a few scattered showers and thunderstorms, through Thursday.

Scattered showers and thunderstorm dampened parts of Florida as a storm system that soaked the mid-Atlantic Coast moved out to sea early today.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms covered the upper Mississippi Valley, mid-Missouri Valley and the southern Plains while widely scattered showers and thundershowers covered the northwest quarter of the nation.

Most other areas of the country were expected to have fair weather today.

Heavy thunderstorms, high winds and golf-ball size hail hit the southern Plains and parts of Texas on Tuesday, but the storm system weakened during the late evening hours.

Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms continued over the western United States — mainly over Utah, Nevada, Northern California and southern Oregon.

A few showers were developing along a cold front in the north-central United States and dense fog developed in central Alabama and central Georgia.

Temperatures at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 31 degrees in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to 89 in Phoenix, Ariz.

West Texas — Partly cloudy with scattered afternoon and evening showers and thunderstorms most sections Thursday and Friday. A slow warming trend through the period. Highs Thursday near 80 Panhandle to mid 90s Big Bend warming to upper 80s Panhandle to near 100 Big Bend valleys Saturday. Lows mid 50s Panhandle to lower 70s Big Bend Thursday warming to lower 60s Panhandle to lower 70s Big Bend Saturday.

Election polls becoming issue as campaign closes in England

LONDON (AP) — Just three days into the British election campaign, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher cautioned her Conservative Party to "keep calm" after an opinion poll gave her a 21-point lead.

In the four weeks since then, newspapers have splashed three dozen more polls across their pages. Each forecast a substantial victory Thursday for the Conservatives, and in the unprecedented barrage, the surveys themselves have become a major campaign issue.

Mrs. Thatcher's opponents in the socialist Labor Party say the polls have distracted voters from the real issues — in Labor's view, Britain's 12.8 percent jobless rate and the danger of the nuclear arms race.

"The polls are doctored and manipulated as part of a gigantic con trick designed to keep out a Labor government," says party Vice Chairman Eric Heffer. Another Laborite, Tony Benn, recites a list of "polls the press will not publish," showing Britons pessimistic about the economy and critical of defense spending.

But Mrs. Thatcher says she too, wants voters to ignore the polls. She told rank-and-file Conservatives, "Opinion polls do not win general elections. Hard work does."

The centrist alliance of the Liberal and Social Democratic parties is pleased with the polls. It was formed 20 months ago to break the two-party system that has dominated British politics in recent decades, and some recent surveys showed the alliance moving past Labor into second place.

"If opinion polls did not exist, this would be a very different election," said political analyst David Butler of Oxford University.

"The triumphal decisiveness of the polls has taken the edge — if not the vehemence — from the battle. The election has come alive only in the race for second place," Butler said.

Tuesday was the last full day of campaigning, and most politicians planned to return to their home districts by tonight, ready for the start of voting Thursday morning.

Two new polls published today reinforced the prediction of a decisive Conservative victory.

A poll of 1,040 electors by National Opinion Polls in the Daily Mail put support for the Conservatives at 46 percent, against 28 for Labor, 24 for the centrist alliance and 2 for other groups. A poll by Market and Opinion Research International (MORI) predicted the Conservatives would win 408 seats in the House of Commons against 201 for Labor, 19 for the alliance and 22 for other groups.

Throughout the campaign, the pollsters have hit the streets in unprecedented numbers. The 39 surveys taken as of today compared with 22 at the same point in the 1979 campaign which brought Mrs. Thatcher to power.

"There are so many pollsters on the streets at present that they'll soon end up interviewing each other," observed the Daily Mirror newspaper.

In fact, Mrs. Thatcher might not have called the election were it not for the polls. Still 11 months from the end of her 5-year term, she was advised by aides that public opinion would never be more favorable.

Newspapers have trumpeted poll results with headlines such as "Maggie Out for a Landslide" or "Shock as Tory Lead is Cut in Half" when one poll gave her a mere 7 point edge, the lowest she's had.

Britain's public opinion czars see nothing wrong with their high-profile role.

Is it yellow rain or bee excrement?

Our government has accused the Soviet Union of furnishing a kind of exotic poison for use in Southeast Asia. It has been identified as a mycotoxin, derived from the kind of fungi that grow on grain, and has been called "yellow rain."

The Soviet Union has denied the charges. The United Nations has been less than aggressive, to put it kindly, in investigating the matter. And our State Department has continued to denounce the Soviets for violating international agreements against the use of chemical or biological weapons.

Now come two American scientists, who recently appeared at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and declared that the toxic rain appears to be nothing more than bee excrement, to which natural fungi can be attracted, producing mycotoxins of natural origin.

We do not wish to see our State Department embarrassed in the unceasing propaganda war with the Soviet Union. The Soviets will undoubtedly make much of this in every available forum.

But the fact that the scientists came forward and went public with their finding testifies to the freedom of inquiry and expression that exists in our country. Soviet scientists similarly engaged would soon find themselves in Siberia or in straitjackets.

The State Department should quickly come to grips with the new yellow rain hypothesis. Our national credibility is at stake. An independent panel of scientists should be commissioned to make a report without delay. And if yellow rain appears to be of natural origin, we should be the first to say so and retract our accusation.

Around the Rim

By MIKE DOWNEY

Lone Star dummy

Traffic signs are meaningless to Johnny. Newspapers are worthless; magazines garish splashes of color, food labels nothing but pictures. Johnny can't decipher movie credits or the liner notes on his favorite album. He can't make out the football scoreboard or even make change.

Johnny is a Texan, an illiterate and 20 years old.

A recent University of Texas study found 21 percent of the adult population of Texas lacks the basic "reading, riting and rithmetic" skills expected of every schoolkid.

Two million Texans are living in a half-world shut off from the things we take for granted: reading instructions, determining medicine dosages, even knowing their street name.

Astonishment at this calamity is quickly replaced by anger that our multi-million dollar Texas public education system could allow these people out without the rudiments of education.

The anger is understandable, probably justified in some cases, but the 21 percent should not be unexpected for anyone who has spent any time in a classroom.

EVERYBODY points an accusing finger at the schools, the colleges, the teachers, to ask: why can't they read? Sometimes the answer is simple: they didn't want to learn.

The UT study described Texas classrooms as "war zones or holding tanks" for students uninterested in literacy. A literacy expert said students have no incentive to learn reading and writing because of what they see in "the real world."

No incentive, no desire, no motivation. Those ivory towers of higher learning teach many wonderful things. But none of those professors ever had to deal with a 15-year-old with money in his jeans, a girl in his eye, Van Halen blaring in his ear and Defender beeping at his fingertips.

Naturally, the educational system cannot offer students anything to motivate them to study verbs, adjectives and real numbers. The system has lost touch with society.

That 21 percent did not learn because Texas beckoned with its siren call of "Who needs that — have fun, make money; be like Burt; buy this, wear that." The world said "larning" was not needed. It lied.

When the public education system began in the late 1800s, its purpose was to give individuals the fundamental abilities to better their lives and function easier in a changing world. Today that basic education has become survival knowledge, but the lure to avoid that knowledge is stronger.

FROM EVERY song about a good ole boy needing just a beer, a pickup and Saturday night to the latest artificially hyped "hero," society is saying literacy is not important.

What about the 2 million illiterates and next year's crop? They should demand their rightful education now if they want it. No one should suffer a lifetime of discomfort and shame due to a youthful error and an errant system.

What about the Texas schools? Naturally, the system needs changes — remove those deadwood teachers; clear out the incompetents and keep them out by toughening standards. Restore schools as places of learning, not day care centers.

But society has the larger and longer task. Make literacy mean something again. Re-discover the power of literature, the thrill of composition. Everyone needs to know that what they can learn will have some value beyond the school yard.

As long as literacy has no importance for Texans, Texas illiteracy rates can only rise. Picture Johnny Sr., gray, on a park bench, waiting to die ... still having never written or read his name.

Summit of the capitalists

WASHINGTON — "At Versailles the Socialists offered bread and circuses amidst the vanished splendor of the Old World. At Williamsburg the capitalists will show how economies work in the atmosphere of a New World."

That comment, by a European foreign minister present at both events, provides a good comparison of the economic summits held by the seven leading industrialized countries last year and this weekend. For a broad consensus on economics now subordinates political differences to the point where Williamsburg can be a takeoff for a coordinated approach to the Soviet Union.

The distinguishing feature of Williamsburg is that for the first time since the summits began in 1975, the economic policies of the Big Four among the seven are in general harmony. The U.S., Japan, West Germany and Britain all have governments that subscribe to free market — as distinct from Socialist — principles. All have brought inflation under control. All are experiencing, or expecting, recovery from recession. So they can chart a course that leads to a general upsurge.

The starting point lies with the perception that the front four can be what are known as "locomotives." They have what is being called "room for growth." The Europeans and Japanese, to be sure, believe the American deficit must come down for recovery to last. But so does Ronald Reagan, and thus they will all be able to get together in advocating policies for sustained, non-inflationary recovery.

HUGE FOREIGN debts — some $600 billion in all — are perceived as a main obstacle to continue economic growth. The debt is heavily concentrated among a few rapidly developing countries — Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Venezuela, Korea and Taiwan. If any defaulted, it could do drastic damage to the banking systems in the U.S., Japan and Europe. But the International Monetary Fund and the industrialized countries have banded together to bridge the debt on a nation-by-nation basis. The Williamsburg summitters are agreed that that process should be strengthened, though not in any elaborate way.

Rather, there is a new emphasis on making it possible for debtor and other countries to earn their way back to prosperity through enhanced trade. With Secretary of State George Shultz in the lead, the advanced countries are pushing for a leap forward in fighting protectionism in all its forms. In a major foreign policy address in New York Thursday, Shultz went a long way toward linking the prosperity of the advanced countries of the North to the opening up of trading opportunities for the developing countries of the South.

What emerges from all this is a kind of free enterprise scenario for global recovery over the next two years. It is far from perfect. It involves a very slow retreat from high unemployment in the industrialized countries. It spreads recovery to the rest of the world by a trickle-down process. But no other mechanism for managing the world economy exists. If nothing else, the present consensus is strong enough to stifle political disagreement among the seven.

France provides the most obvious example. President Francois Mitterrand, the only Socialist among the seven leaders, came to office in 1981 at a time when most other advanced countries were squeezing their economies to contain inflation. He put France on a go-it-alone course for more rapid growth. That effort failed and left France unable to compete with other industrialized countries largely because of high inflation.

To regain competitiveness, the French have embarked upon an austerity program. But the program is unpopular, especially among Mitterrand's own Socialist followers. So the president is tempted to lay off blame on the U.S. by calling, as he did at Versailles, for more substantial government action to cut unemployment, lower interest rates, stabilize currency exchange and manage foreign trade.

But last year, Mitterrand enjoyed the backing of another Socialist leader, Helmut Schmidt of West Germany. Schmidt has since been replaced by a Christian Democratic chancellor, Helmut Kohl. So, if Mitterrand raises a fuss at Williamsburg, he will merely call attention to, and thus deepen, France's plight.

A SECOND source of political difficulty has been Ronald Reagan's phobia about European trade with Russia. The president threw a fit when he discovered after Versailles that Schmidt and Mitterrand interpreted that summit as a blessing for business as usual with Russia, particularly on a gas pipeline deal. But in the fight over American sanctions against the allies which then developed, the U.S. eventually backed off. The issue was buried in various study groups instructed to agree on some kind of agreement.

According to Secretary Shultz, President Reagan is "quite happy" with that arrangement. He had better be, and not only because, as the host at Williamsburg, his interest is to have a smooth meeting. The controlling fact is that all the summit partners favor more serious dialogue between Washington and Moscow. Even the relatively hawkish new boys at Williamsburg — Chancellor Kohl and Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan — are pressing strongly for an early get-together between Reagan and Yuri Andropov. So the Williamsburg summit can set the economic stage for the arms control summit that everyone now wants between the Big Two.

of State Richard Burt supporting increased U.S. military aid for Turkey. But Burt was in Turkey recently, and remarked that the longstanding ratio of U.S. aid — $10 for Turkey vs. $7 for Greece — was not carved in granite.

This so incensed the Greeks that they withdrew their invitation to Burt to visit Greece. What baffles the people in Foggy Bottom is that Burt had said the same thing at public hearings in Washington.

But sources at the State Department acknowledge that Burt's pro-Turkish remarks have "screwed things up" in the negotiations with Greece over renewal of leases for U.S. military bases there.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: A secret Pentagon report gives a scorecard on U.S.-Soviet competition in nuclear weapons available for use in the Pacific area. In 12 separate nuclear weapons systems in the Pacific, the United States leads in just two: carrier fighter planes and surface-to-air missiles. The Russians hold the advantage in short-range surface-to-surface missiles, artillery, rockets, long-range surface-to-surface missiles, naval surface-to-surface missiles, submarine surface-to-surface missiles, naval guns, torpedoes, land-based fighter-bombers and land-based heavy bombers.

The eastern Mediterranean off the coast of Lebanon has been named "Bermuda Triangle East" because of the dozens of merchant ships that disappear each year. A typical disappearance involves Greek-owned freighters — old but well-insured — that carry cargo already bought and paid for. En route to Lebanon, the ships' names and registry are changed after being sold at hefty profits. The cargoes are then sold to Lebanese or Syrian smugglers, and the still-insured, empty ships are either loaded with hashish for the European trade market, sold for scrap or sunk.

Extramarital affair hurts

Dear Dr. Graham: I feel like I am in a hole that I have dug for myself. I have had several extramarital affairs to get back at my husband, who often treats me unkindly. However, I realize that I have only hurt myself. Can God forgive me and help me, or is it too late to do anything about the mess I have made of things? — Mrs. B.S.T.

Dear Mrs. B.S.T.: I am sorry that for so long you had been deceived into thinking that kind of life would solve anything. As you have discovered, however, there is not only no future in living that way, but it also is destructive. It has not solved your marriage problems nor has it brought you real happiness and security. I mention this because it may be there is someone reading who is tempted to do what you have done, and your experience will be a warning to them.

You need God's forgiveness — not only for the sins you have committed for what you have mentioned, but for every other sin you have ever done as well. The greatest sin is that you have turned your back on God and tried to live your life without him. But I want you to know a very important truth. God loves you, in spite of what you have done. He is willing to forgive you and he has done everything possible to make your forgiveness possible by sending his Son into the world to die for your sins on the cross. In Christ "we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, in accordance with the riches of God's grace that he lavished on us" (Ephesians 1:7-8).

Carol Daniel's column knocked

Dear Editor: For a moment I thought I must be reading some left-wing columnist in the New York Times — but no! It was our own Carol Daniel venting her spleen in Sunday's "Around the Rim" because Jerry Falwell had the audacity to appear on national television and suggest that a "nuclear freeze is un-Christian."

All the liberal journalistic tactics were there: the crudely sarcastic tone (Those vile fundamentalists do not deserve mere sophisticated satire.); the caricatures of "fundamentalists" (especially portraying them as using TV solely as a means of raising money — clearly this practice of those rascally TV preachers is a quite proper function of the American Cancer Society, Planned Parenthood, the A.C.L.U., and Norman Lear's People for the American Way.); the ridicule of the notion that one might actually know the will of God — or that God even wills at all; the glaring inconsistency (There is no indication that Carol is disturbed over another element of "authoritarian Christianity," the American Conference of Roman Catholic Bishops, stealing media attention for months with the writing of a pastoral letter asserting that nuclear weapons are immoral!); and finally, the repetition of that great modern fiction of the "absolute separation of church and state" — apparently if Carol could have her way, any citizen of this nation openly professing to be a Bible-believing Christian would be stripped of any right to influence the political process or the thinking of other citizens. And TV would be reserved strictly for entertainment, left-wingers and fellow-travelers — absolutely no "authoritarian, fundamentalist preachers!"

I must admit that I was surprised to read the slur on the link between the Great Awakening and the American Revolution. Perhaps Carol is having serious second thoughts about the propriety and results of the American Revolution because a "fundamentalist outbreak" helped to precipitate it? Tom Hayden, Jane Fonda, and the New York Times would be proud!

Sincerely yours,

EXPENSIVE DINNERS: A civil rights official at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board used government funds to buy tickets for a $150-a-head fund-raising dinner for the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation — and wound up having to pay for the tickets herself.

Adean King, director of the bank board's minority affairs, used government purchase orders to buy a pair of tickets to the black-tie affair in both 1981 and 1982. She attended herself and gave the extra ticket to another employee of the office.

But agency investigators faulted King for stating on the purchase order that the $300 was to pay for a Black Caucus workshop held the same weekend as the fancy dinner. In fact, the workshops were free.

Open for Business

Wayne Henry has taken over the restaurant at Coahoma, formerly Waterhole #3, renaming it Wayne Henry's Steak House of Coahoma. It will be open for lunches seven days a week and open for evening meals on Friday and Saturday nights featuring heavy-aged charcoal beef. It will be open to the public beginning today.

Groundbreaking for the new Spring City Do-It Center will occur sometime next week, depending on the weather. Manager Mark Sheedy and owner Stan Partee hope to have the facility ready for a grand opening by early fall.

One of our super women entrepreneurs is Margaret Hull, who is celebrating 15 successful years as owner of the Casual Shoppe this week. She bought the store from the original owners, the Fishers, who had been in the retail business in Big Spring since 1882 — in fact, she has 1882 as part of her phone number to symbolize the heritage of the store. Margaret built a large new building in a new location 6 years after she bought the Fisher store. Pat Hamilton, one of Margaret's original employees, still works for her. Congratulations are in order this week. Stop by the Casual Shoppe for registration of special anniversary prizes.

Watch for the following business-related cases still to be considered by the Supreme Court between now and July. They still have 80 cases to settle in that length of time. Those of most interest to the business community are:

Sex discrimination in retirement programs: the question is must annuity payments be the same for men and women, despite the differing life expectancies?

Insiders stock trading: Can a stockbroker tip off her customers to damaging information about a company before the facts are made public?

Firing of union activists in a firm: How much proof is needed that the dismissals weren't the result of hostility toward the union?

Severance tax on oil and gas production: Are the states allowed to prevent energy companies from passing the tax on to their customers?

Home video taping of TV shows: Does it violate copyright law? If so, must video machine manufacturers and distributors pay royalties?

In the June issue of Texas Business there is an interesting article by Kenn George of Midland who is working in Washington, D.C. In the article he is warning his fellow Texans that their great state may be missing the lessons taught by the coal fields of West Virginia and the unemployment lines of Detroit. George says that Texans are so used to blithely "living off the land" — i.e. oil and agriculture — that we have become insular and complacent instead of progressively promoting and selling our own products and services in world markets. We are letting New York, Illinois and California push in front of us in these markets, he declares.

George should have the big picture from his vantage point in his federal office of Deputy Assistant Secretary for the U.S. and Foreign Commercial Service. He's no career bureaucrat. He's a conservative businessman who served as president of Olix Industries (Midland-based oil company which since has been sold to Adobe Oil & Gas), before accepting appointment to the government post in 1981.

Everyday something new gets confirmed to reinforce our belief that this is going to be the biggest and best rodeo ever held in this part of the country. The latest news is that the prison band will be performing each night from 7:30-8:30 before the rodeo performances. On Friday night at 8:00 p.m., the Big Spring Area Jaycees will sponsor a calf scramble for youth, ages 8-12. Next week we'll have a complete run-down of all the rodeo week activities. You will be surprised at the assortment of events.

ABC wins Nielsen television ratings third time in four weeks

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC won the Nielsen television ratings for the third time in the past four weeks, as NBC dropped from first place to third for the week ended June 5.

CBS, which hasn't won the weekly ratings since May 1, was in second place. CBS, however, was the victor in the ratings for the regular season.

ABC won the week but placed only three shows in the Top 10. The top show was ABC's "Hart to Hart." The comedy "9 to 5" tied for sixth place with NBC's "The A-Team." The ABC Theatre production of "Ghost Dancing," starring Dorothy McGuire, tied for eighth.

Second-place CBS had four shows in the Top 10 and NBC had three.

ABC had a 13.8 rating in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey. CBS was second with 13.0 and NBC was third with 12.4. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 13.8 percent of the country's TV homes were tuned to ABC.

Network viewership was noticeably down during the week, when most of the network fare was reruns.

NBC introduced a new comedy series, "Buffalo Bill," one of the few breaks from the series reruns.

Both NBC and ABC plan to offer some new programming during the summer.

NBC's "Buffalo Bill," starring Dabney Coleman, finished in 29th place, winning its time slot by beating the CBS rerun of the movie "Rehearsal for Murder" and an original episode of ABC's "Tales of the Gold Monkey."

NBC also brought back the 1979-80 series "Eisched," starring Joe Don Baker. The first show tied for 46th place with CBS' "Falcon Crest" and beat the repeat of the movie "Fighting Back" on ABC.

The CBS telecast of the Tony awards finished in 30th place.

The lowest-ranked show of the past week was the ABC News Closeup "Vanishing America."

Others in the bottom ranks leading down to the Closeup were ABC's "Monitor," CBS' "Small Frye," the NBC special "Dear Mr. President" and CBS' "Zorro and Son."

Here are the week's Top 20 programs:

1. "Hart to Hart," ABC, a rating of 21.0 or 17.4 million households.
2. "M-A-S-H," CBS, 19.2 or 15.9 million.
3. "One Day at a Time," CBS, 18.7 or 15.5 million.
4. "Three's Company," ABC, 18.6 or 15.49 million.
5. "60 Minutes," CBS, 18.5 or 15.41 million.
6. "The A-Team," NBC, 17.8 or 14.8 million.
7. "Remington Steele," NBC, 16.3 or 13.5 million.
8. Movie—"Murder One," NBC, 16.7 or 13.9 million.
8. (tie) Movie—"Ghost Dancing," ABC, 16.7 or 13.9 million.
10. "Hill Street Blues," NBC, 16.6 or 13.8 million.
11. "Fantasy Island," ABC, 16.5 or 13.7 million.
11. (tie) Movie—"The Buddy Holly Story," ABC, 16.5 or 13.7 million.
13. "Remington Steele," NBC, 16.3 or 13.5 million.
14. "The Love Boat," ABC, 16.2 or 13.4 million.
15. "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, 16.0 or 13.3 million.
16. "What Have You Learned, Charlie Brown?" CBS, 15.6 or 12.99 million.
17. "Simon & Simon," CBS, 15.5 or 12.91 million.
18. "Cagney & Lacey," 15.1 or 12.5 million.
19. "20-20," ABC, 14.9 or 12.4 million.

Philosophers defend whales' rights

BOSTON (AP) — As intelligent and emotional creatures, whales have a moral right to be left alone by scientists who want to study their habits, two philosophers say.

"To persist in viewing and treating whales, creatures who have a mental life of greater sophistication than many humans, as if they exist as a resource here for us ... is neither rationally nor morally defensible," the two professors said in a paper delivered Tuesday at an international conference on whales and dolphins.

Dale Jamieson, assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Colorado, and Tom Regan, a philosophy professor at the University of North Carolina, presented their thesis at a WhalesAlive, a global meeting attended by 200 marine biologists, researchers and activists.

Jamieson and Regan said whales have language, feelings and brains larger than humans' and should not be exploited for food, amusement or knowledge.

Denying whales basic considerations "is a tragic moral failing ... such as racism and sexism," the philosophers said.

They did not comment on the hunting and killing of whales, focusing instead on more "benign" uses, including organized whale-watching and scientific field work.

"Whales do not exist as visual commodities in an aquatic free market, and the business of taking eager sightseers into their waters ... is exploitative," they said.

Regan and Jamieson said that scientific study of whales might provide some benefits to understanding the huge, air-breathing mammals, but said, "No benefits are morally to be allowed if they are obtained at the price of violating individual rights ... The moral task before us is to let whales alone."

In a question-and-answer session afterward, most delegates agreed that whales and dolphins have rights but rejected the conclusion that field work and whale-watching should stop. Many of the scientists said the ocean-going mammals, known as cetaceans, give signs that they enjoy human contact and could easily swim away if they did not.

The week-long conference at the New England Aquarium attracted representatives of the International Whaling Commission, the world body that has overseen commercial use of whales since 1946.

Eduardo Iglesias of Argentina, the current commission chairman, said the commission provided the conference administrative and financial aid.

Hot weather can threaten health of elderly people

Hot weather can be very dangerous for the elderly. It can lead to life-threatening heat exhaustion, heart failure and stroke.

The body needs time to adjust to hot weather. Therefore, a sudden increase in temperature is especially serious, because it can put a strain on the heart and blood vessels before the body has a chance to acclimate itself.

The reason the elderly are more vulnerable to heat stress than younger people is that they don't adjust as well to heat. They perspire less. They are also more likely to have health problems requiring medicines that work against the body's natural ability to adjust to heat.

It's important to know the warning signs of heat stress. Early symptoms - feeling hot, uncomfortable and listless - are mild and usually pose no threat unless they persist. However, because the serious signs of heat stress are usually preceded by milder ones, it's important that you get medical attention if you experience any of the following: dizziness, rapid heartbeat, diarrhea, nausea, cramps, throbbing headache, dry skin but no sweating, chest pain, great weakness, mental changes, breathing problems or vomiting. These symptoms can also signal other major problems, such as heart failure. If you experience any of them, call a doctor immediately.

Here are some ways of keeping cool, so that heat stress can be avoided: -Fans and air conditioning can provide lifesaving relief from heat stress, especially if you have any history of heart disease. If you don't have air conditioning go someplace that does, such as a library, shopping mall, senior center or movie.

-Cool baths or showers provide relief from the heat because water removes extra body heat 25 times faster than cool air. Placing ice bags or wet towels on the body is also helpful.

-Curtail physical activity during extremely hot weather. Activity add to hear strain.

-Avoid hot foods and heavy meals. Digesting them adds heat to your body.

-Your body needs more water in hot weather. Don't wait until you are thirsty to have a drink. If you are taking any medication or have a problem with body water balance, check with your doctor for advice on how much water you should drink.

-Avoid alcohol. It acts as diuretic, resulting in fast water loss. In addition, alcohol can promote a sense of well-being making you less aware of the danger signs of heat stress. -If you live alone, make sure a relative or neighbor checks on you regularly.

To help you learn how to protect yourself, symptoms to watch for, and what the remedies are, the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs has published a special report. For your free copy of Heat Stress, write to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 652K, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Dear Abby

Man's birthday party is one year to soon

DEAR ABBY: This is a problem I've never seen in your column. I will be 50 years old in December, and my wife wants to give me a big party to celebrate the occasion.

I would rather she didn't, because in September we're giving my parents a big party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary, and a little quick addition will explain why I don't want a big splash on my 50th birthday.

My wife assures me that people are very broad-minded today, and nobody will care if it becomes known that my mother was pregnant with me when she walked down the aisle.

My wife then suggested that I "lose" a year and celebrate my 50th birthday next year in order to spare my parents embarrassment.

What do you think? P R E M A T U R E I N PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR ABBY: If you're giving your parents a big party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary in September, I suggest you celebrate your 50th birthday quietly in December.

DEAR ABBY: A reader named Sue asked you about the expression, "Mind your p's and q's." She wanted to know, "What do the 'p' and 'q' stand for?" You supplied three possible theories, but neglected to mention the explanation one would most expect from an old newspaper hand like you.

An elderly printer once told me the expression goes back to the days when printed pages were set by hand, one letter at a time.

The printer's wooden "cupboard" from which he withdrew each piece of type was called a job case. It was compartmentalized into pigeonholes in alphabetical order.

The bay containing the p's was the next-door neighbor of the one containing the q's. So it was easy to get the p's in the wrong bay, and vice versa.

Such mistakes led to typographical errors, which were hard to detect because p's and q's are look-alikes.

Thus apprentice printers were constantly admonished, "Mind your p's and q's!"

ROBERET McMORRIS, COLUMNIST, OMAHA WORLD-HERALD

DEAR MR. McMORRIS: The theory proffered by the elderly printer seems more likely than any of those I submitted in my column.

Coincidentally, my source was the Morris Dictionary of Word and Phrase Origins. Any relation, Mac?

Mrs. Rhodes, Tonya Rock present programs to Elbow homemakers

Two speakers were featured at a meeting of the Elbow Extension Homemakers in the home of Zula Rhodes, Thursday.

Tonya Rock, a member of the Forsan 4-H Club, talked about the Financial Jungle. She explained how she budgets her allowance with the three S method - Save (save for the big things), -Share (share with those you want to make happy), and -Spend

(spend wisely for things you need or really want.)

Mrs. Rhodes talked about Arthritis Management. Arthritis, which affects the joints, is one of the world's oldest illnesses. Americans spend an estimated $4 billion a year on arthritis care and relief.

It is important to obtain professional medical care for diagnosing and treating arthritis.

The proper amount of rest and exercise is one of the most important ways of managing arthritis. Good nutrition is also important and necessary for management of the illness. Possibly, the most important factor is maintaining an ideal body weight.

The club will travel to Midland to tour the Museum of the Southwest, June 14.

Club to have meeting

NARFE, the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, Chapter 1095, will have a meeting Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Kentwood Older Adults Activities Center. Following the business meeting, there will be a salad pot-luck luncheon.

For the Record

The fashion show, "Summer Breezes Special", will be sponsored by Ozella Long and Sandra Robinson, independent consultants of Mary Kay

Cosmetics, instead of Mary Kay Cosmetics sponsoring the fashion show as reported earlier in the Herald.

A Checking Account You Can Smile About.

Free Checking
Sure, everyone likes something free, and free checking is no exception. But there's a catch, right? Wrong. When we say free checking we mean there's No Monthly Service Charge. That's right, it wouldn't really be free if there was. And at First Federal, there isn't. Aha! Then there must be a minimum balance. Wrong again. At First Federal free checking means no monthly service charge and

No Minimum Balance
No Strings attached . . . there simply isn't a minimum balance of any kind. So what could be better than that? How about Free Checks. Right again, with First Federal's free checking you also receive a supply of imprinted checks at no cost.

Still smiling? Then you must already have a First Federal checking account!

Dr. Donohue

Diet can lessen premenstrual symptoms

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Could you please devote some of your column to PMS (pre-menstrual syndrome)? My troubles starts before my period is due and last a few days into my period. The symptoms include headache, tension, irritability, nausea, dizziness, hot flashes, to name a few. I am only 31, so I have a few years yet to deal with the problem. What about progesterone for treatment?—S.P.

I touched on this recently, but like so many problems it's impossible to cover all bases in a single column. As I mentioned earlier, premenstrual syndrome has only recently been recognized and a full explanation is not yet at hand. There seem to be different types. In one, irritability, anxiety and depression are dominant symptoms. In another weight gain, bloating, breast tenderness and swelling predominate, and in another appetite increase is the major problem.

The one thread of evidence woven into the general problem, seems to be an imbalance of female hormones just preceding and during the cycle. And even that sounds simpler than it really is. In some women the amount of estrogen may be too great and the progesterone too low. Or in a third setting still another hormone, aldosterone, may be overproduced.

You mention progesterone. It has been tried in high doses for time with some success, although its general use is still being investigated. Birth control pills have been tried, with some success.

You don't hear too much about dietary measures, but these too are being used. Symptoms can be controlled in some who go on a low-carbohydrate, low-salt diet with six small meals daily. Also avoiding coffee and sugar during the time you have the symptoms may alleviate them.

Returning to drugs, some women can be helped with simple aspirin therapy, especially for the crampy kind of pain reported. In such cases, aspirin's effect is to dampen the action of still another hormone — prostaglandin. Doctors are learning more about PMS, but as yet we do not have a really good handle on the problem. Right now there seems to be an overabundance of handles.

FOR J.L.— Here's the Webster definition of factitious. "produced by man rather than by natural forces ... produced by special effort: sham...artificial...." In short, it means "fake." Used medically, as in "factitious symptoms" the word has precisely the same meaning—"factitious fever" etc.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Farmettes selling in New Jersey, planned for Texas

SWEDESBORO, N.J. (AP) — Depression-style "farmettes" — new homes with just enough farmland to help feed a family — are selling so well in New Jersey that developers say they may try the idea in other states.

"There's a tremendous movement back to the rural areas," said Robert Strudler, a senior vice president of U.S. Home Corp. of Houston, one of the nation's largest homebuilding firms.

Each farmette in a development usually has more than five acres of land for raising crops or animals. Owners who sell more than $500 worth of farm products annually can qualify under the law for tax savings through lower assessments for farmland.

In the 24 hours after U.S. Home opened its model farmhouse in this southern New Jersey community, more than 700 people listened to the firm's sales pitch for the homes, which range from $75,000 to $120,000, including the cost of the land.

"We opened up yesterday, and we sold 10 homes," U.S. Home Vice President Mike Mallott said Monday.

U.S. Home, which owns 488 acres of property here, is selling homes on tracts ranging from 1.5 to 11 acres, although only those with more than five acres can qualify for the tax break.

"What we're trying to do is show what you can do on a farm of five acres in terms of raising your own food," said Strudler. "It's a tremendous new market which gives recognition to a reversal in the trend."

The company took the name of the development,

Five Acres and Independence, from the title of a book by Depression-era author M.G. Kains who wrote about how Americans could start their own farm to become self-sufficient, said Mallott.

"We'll probably be taking it around the country as a concept," said Strudler.

He said his firm plans to build another farmette community in Texas. He also said negotiations are under way to purchase land in central Florida.

Pat Quinn, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Agriculture, said the farmette plan "saves the land from being turned over to another use. We're in the business of saving farmlands and retaining farming as a viable industry."

TEC CELEBRATION — Local Texas Employment Commission supervisor Joe Wallis displays a cake proclaiming the 50 anniversary of the U.S. Job Service and the TEC. A celebration was held Monday at TEC offices and attended by several business and civic leaders.

High-tech battles old-style industry

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The big goal of industrial development groups these days is to come up with a scheme to replace old-style manufacturing concerns with high-technology industries in their areas.

Various approaches are being taken, including tax abatements and plans to boost the quality of science instruction at the local college, the idea being to create a catalytic mass that will feed growth for years ahead.

Such notions are based on observations of how electronics developed near the great California and Massachusetts universities, and to a less-publicized degree in places such as Chapel Hill, N.C., and Austin, Texas.

The ambition of every industrial developer seeking a name for himself is fed by images of a bustling Silicon Valley and of once idle textile mills north of Boston now converted to the production of computers.

Couldn't the same be the good fortune of those areas where heavy industry has fallen on bad times? A good many state officials think so. But some of those who observe them think they are not entirely correct.

"We are a long way from a world in which we can write off basic industries and become dependent on others for essentials," says Ian Ross, president of Bell Laboratories. He suggests that those who think otherwise are misguided.

The proper approach, he suggests, is to use high technology to revitalize basic industries, and thus convert them into high-technology industries. That is, save and nurture rather than abandon them.

Business Analysis

Many critics have commented that it is naive and costly to assume that heavy industries have no future, pointing out that you cannot house a computer manufacturing facility without steel nor transport the product without wheels.

They add to their argument the convincing observation that until human beings become more civil no nation can possibly remain secure without the ability to produce heavy machinery.

Bureau of Labor Statistics' studies also tend to rebut the contention that areas now depressed because of the downturn in heavy manufacturing industries always will remain so. Manufacturing, it points out, has a future.

The bureau projects that factory employment will climb to 22.7 million workers in 1995 from 19.2 million last year, and that manufacturing will account for the creation of one of every seven jobs between 1982 and 1995.

Ross believes it is a myth that high technology in itself is a panacea for economic troubles, and claims misinterpretation of the term limits our vision of how new technology should be applied.

In his view, it would be economically healthier "if each state, instead of trying to attract high technology industry, sought to develop its own potential by upgrading the best of its existing industry."

That is, high tech could be seen as a means of improving the production of cars and steel rather than a substitute for them.

Ross believes that states also should improve their educational system to supply creative and skilled people, and that it should foster ties between industry and academia.

But he disagrees with the rest of the popular formula which says an area should abandon its old industries in favor of newer, technologically oriented industries. That, he suggests, is not the way.

More properly, he observes, "we need to apply new technologies to our existing basic industries to convert them from smokestack industries to high-tech industries."

New banks planned

AUSTIN (AP) — New state banks have been proposed for Harris and Dallas counties, the State Department of Banking said today.

The proposed Mayde Creek Bank of Harris County would have capital of $1 million, surplus of $1 million and reserves of $500,000.

Phoning helps IRS in tax collections

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is finding that the telephone is mightier than the pen when it comes to pressing delinquent taxpayers to come through with their back taxes.

Officials said a new telephone-dialing computer is nearly doubling the rate of collections.

"We've been very pleased with the compliance rate," said Rob Wilkerson, who is in charge of the IRS' Automated Collection System in St. Louis. "The percentage is in the high 80s or low 90s right now. We used to run between 40 and 50 percent."

Wilkerson said Monday, nearly a month after the computer was made operational, that the new system was a vast improvement over the old, which generated millions of pieces of paper in the form of letters and memos.

"You were lucky if you ever found that piece of paper again," he said. "Now a complete file on the case pops up on the computer screen whenever the call goes through. Our people know what's been done and where it stands. We even enter comments and promises to pay."

Typical, said Wilkerson, was a case in which the IRS received more than $18,000 in back taxes and a thank-you from a woman who was dunned by its new computer.

"We told her that we'd have to file a lien against her property," said Wilkerson. "She asked us to please not do that. We had the check 10 days later."

The computers, which call delinquent taxpayers between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. weekdays and from 8 a.m. until noon on Saturdays, automatically call back 15 minutes later if a busy signal is reached. If no one answers, the computer will call back later in the day.

When someone does answer, an IRS employee gets on the line.

Wilkerson said the system was "already making a big dent in the 2.2 million taxpayers who are delinquent more than $27 billion. It's bringing more dollars into the treasury and that's the bottom line."

Wilkerson said taxpayers contacted by computer seem to be more cooperative.

Wilkerson said he has not received any complaints himself.

"Ironically, two delinquent taxpayers called back to thank us for our courteous, professional handling of the situation. We like being able to resolve things in an amicable way," he said.

Congress to consider fate of boxing in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — For more than 25 years attempts have been made to outlaw boxing. Another is in the works.

The House Education and Labor Committee approved Tuesday, by voice vote, legislation to create a 10-member panel to study the sport of boxing and make recommendations on reform to the Congress.

Over the objections of one of the chief proponents, however, the committee adopted an amendment to have the study panel decide "whether boxing as a professional sport should be abolished."

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., amendment sponsor, said the outlawing of professional boxing "would move us in the direction this nation should be going."

"It is intolerable that this goes by the name of sport," he said. "We pay two poor kids to knock each other's brains out. For us to tolerate something like that and call it sport...when its aim is to do damage to the brain is intolerable."

Rep. Ronald C. Packard, R-Calif., agreeing with Simon, said, "We've outlawed animals killing animals and humans killing animals in bullfighting but we permit humans to beat humans."

Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., one of the chief sponsors of the bill, said the Simon amendment would jeopardize passage of legislation because proponents of boxing reform do not want to outlaw the sport.

"The bill will die and we will have to wait another 25 years for action," he said. "We're trying to reform a sick sport."

Despite Williams' pleadings, the Simon amendment was adopted on a 12-11 vote, with most of the committee's Republicans voting for and most Democrats against.

After the vote, Williams said it was an easy vote for most of the committee members to vote to have the study panel look into the possibility of prohibiting professional boxing.

"They can tell their constituents back home that they voted to outlaw boxing when, in fact, they're voting for a commission to make recommendations on boxing reform."

Under the Williams proposal, the main purpose of study panel would be to make recommendations for the establishment either in the federal government or in the private sector of a central boxing commission "for the promulgation and enforcement of standards."

Williams said, "That is the heart of the legislation — a study panel to make recommendations on the viability of a central authority, whether in or out of the government."

Before sending the bill to the House floor for action, the committee also reduced the life of the study panel from nine months to six months and its budget from $950,000 to $350,000.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee already has approved legislation to create a 10-member boxing study commission, but the bill had to go before the Education and Labor Committee because of overlapping jurisdictions. There has been no action yet on such legislation in the Senate.

WON'T LOSE ONE FOR AWHILE — Appleron (Wisconsin) High School West principal Emmett Hoks may never need to buy a dozen golf again. At this week's commencement ceremonies, nearly all of the 400 graduating seniors, as they received their diplomas, handed the avid golfer a golf ball.

Nets talking to Spurs' Albeck...legally

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck appears to be on his way to becoming the head coach of the New Jersey Nets, the owner of the National Basketball Association team says.

"Everything looks like he should be our coach," Nets' owner Joe Taub said late Tuesday night. "He wants to come here and we want him."

Taub said he felt the signing of Albeck was imminent, adding: "I'm hoping we can wrap it up."

On Tuesday, the Nets were given permission to negotiate with Albeck, and the team agreed in return to give the Spurs a second-round draft choice, a reported $300,000 cash and the rights to forward Fred Roberts.

The settlement, announced by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, follows a court battle over the rights to Albeck, whom the Nets want to replace Larry Brown. Brown left the Nets to become head coach at the University of Kansas shortly before the end of the regular NBA season.

Jay Rosenfeld, a spokesman for the Nets, said the team immediately began negotiations in New Jersey with Jerry Davis, Albeck's agent.

Taub said Albeck, who was in San Antonio Tuesday, was "alerted" to leave for New Jersey if a contract agreement was reached.

Albeck, who had two years to run on a three-year agreement with the Spurs at $175,000 a year, claimed that his commitment to the Spurs was by verbal agreement, not by written contract.

Albeck guided the Spurs to first place in the Midwest Division this season with a 53-29 record and into the Western Conference finals, where they lost to Los Angeles in six games. But he maintained that he had been blamed by Angelo Drossos, the team's president, for losing the sixth and final game of the series to the Lakers. Drossos has denied that.

The coach also charged in court papers that Drossos had agreed to provide an additional assistant coach before the season and then refused and that Drossos "browbeat" him, took away his authority on personnel decisions and refused on several occasions to put his contract in writing.

Last Friday, a judge in San Antonio ruled that Albeck was the property of the Spurs because of the oral agreement. He granted a temporary injunction forbidding him to negotiate with any other team.

Albeck's lawyer, however, said at the time he would ask the NBA to intercede.

O'Brien met Tuesday with Drossos and New Jersey Chairman Alan Cohen.

McEnroe plays well, behaving too

LONDON (AP) — "I'm not proud of some of the things I've done," said John McEnroe.

"But I'm only 24 years old and I make mistakes. Often they are magnified a thousand times every time I make them. But I am getting older all the time, and I'm learning."

The controversial tennis star moved into the second round of the Stella Artois Grand Prix tournament on the grass courts at London's Club Tuesday by defeating Jeff Borowiak 6-3, 6-3.

And he crossed the borderline and was safe for Wimbledon.

McEnroe was fined at the French Open for kicking a press camera and using obscene language to linesmen. He is in danger of going over the limit of $7,500 in a year and being automatically suspended.

But even if he collected more fines at Queen's Club he would have 10 days in which to appeal, and that would take him into the period of Wimbledon, and he would be free to compete in the big tournament.

McEnroe wasn't involved in any scenes in his match against Borowiak, though he had plenty to complain about. The grass was slippery and he fell a half-dozen times.

"It was close to unplayable," McEnroe said.

He told newsmen he was "trying to tone down."

"I am lucky enough to be a good tennis player," McEnroe said, "and I'm trying to make the most of it. In 10 years' time nobody will care about me."

"There are things I still want to achieve in tennis before I stop playing, and one of them is to enjoy my tennis more."

HC Queens recruit double trouble

DIANE DICKSON...Gregory-Portland star

ALLISON DICKSON...complets G-P duo

Howard College basketball coach Don Stevens has made a twin-killing, so to speak.

Stevens landed two more recruits this week when he signed twins Allison and Diane Dickson of Gregory-Portland High School. The recently-signed Hawk Queens give Stevens 10 new players for the 1983-84 season.

The Dickson twins give Howard good height inside, both standing close to 6-2. Both players are newcomers to basketball but Stevens says with the improvement they made their senior year, both could become top-notch college players.

"I feel they will develop because of their attitude and opportunity," the HC coach said. "Allison and Diane are eager to learn the skills of basketball after getting a late start in their basketball development. Their improvement their senior year is indicative of their commitment to excel."

Diane Dickson averaged 7 points and grabbed 6.2 rebounds during her first full season on the varsity. He hit 46 per cent of her shots from the floor.

Allison averaged five rebounds a contest and four points a game, hitting 56 per cent of her shots.

According to their coach, the best game for both girls came against Class 5-A state runner-up Victoria.

Both played volleyball and ran track at Gregory-Portland, located near Corpus Christi. Other interests include ballet, Girl Scouts and, of course, sailing and swimming because of their location near the Texas coast.

Stevens has recruited 10 players although he lost one, Big Spring's Shell Rutledge, to a track scholarship at Abilene Christian University.

NFLPA union chief Garvey apparently on his way out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ed Garvey apparently is on his way out as executive director of the National Football League Players Association.

Garvey, who has held the job for 13 years, said Tuesday night, "If I do anything but stay with the union, it would be return to Wisconsin in some capacity."

The Boston Globe quoted sources as saying Garvey would resign at an NFLPA awards banquet in Chicago on Sunday to become a Wisconsin assistant attorney general.

"I want to and talk with the players and then decide what's in everyone's best interests," Garvey said in a telephone interview late Tuesday night. "I will have no comment until I meet with the board this week. The decision whether or not to leave is mine and mine alone."

The Globe reported that Garvey, who led the union in a 57-day strike last fall, will be temporarily replaced by NFLPA President Gene Upshaw, who has served in that post for the past three years.

"It is his (Garvey's) decision, whatever he decides to do," Upshaw said from his home in the San Francisco area. "The board is going to meet in Chicago this weekend. We've been mandated by the board of player reps to negotiate a new contract with him. We as the executive committee will make him an offer. It's up to him to accept or reject."

The NFLPA leader was instrumental in molding the once-passive union into a more militant organization and bringing the NFLPA into the AFL-CIO.

Garvey earns about $125,000 a year.

'Bama holds off Wolverines, 6-5

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Troy Brauchle usually sits in the bullpen until the seventh or eighth inning, and sometimes even until the ninth when the plot has thickened.

"When I come to the ballpark I don't even loosen up," said the Alabama junior reliever. "I sit there and wait for the sign from the dugout to start throwing."

"After about 15 pitches, I'm ready to go to the mound."

Brauchle received that summons in a precarious situation Tuesday night when Alabama led Michigan 6-5 in the bottom of the ninth.

With two outs, runners at first and second, and the count at two balls and no strikes, Brauchle entered the do-or-die situation.

His first pitch to Chuck Froning was a ball for a 3-0 count. The next three were strikes with the last one hit to shortstop for the final out and Alabama's victory over Michigan that sent the Tide into the finals of the winner's bracket against Texas in the 37th annual College World Series.

Michigan meets Stanford and Oklahoma State meets Arizona State Wednesday night in the loser's bracket of the double-elimination event.

Alabama and Texas, both undefeated in tournament play, meet Thursday night.

Alabama, 45-9, has won its last 15 outings, including two games over national champion Miami, Fla., in the NCAA South Regional to earn a spot here.

Tim Meacham, 6-0, got the call for Alabama in the seventh to relieve starter Rick Browne, who had lost a 6-0 Alabama lead, yet with help from his friends boosted his record to 12-1.

Some of that help came from David Magadan, college baseball's leading hitter at .539, who set a college world series record for most consecutive hits in a series, including a three-for-four performance in the game. He tied a single-game hitting record with a five-for-five performance in Alabama's 6-5 victory over Arizona State Saturday night.

Magadan, a second round draft pick of the New York Mets in the major league

NCAA

World Series

free agent draft Monday, had hit safely in eight trips in two games before flying out to left.

Alabama struck for two runs in the first inning off a Bret Elbin homer and a Magadan single that scored Ted McClendon.

The Tide added another in the third and three runs in the fourth. Craig Shipley walked and went to third when Elbin singled. Magadan then singled, scoring Craig Shipley, and Elbin scored on Rob Skate's single. Magadan scored on Allan Stalling's single.

Michigan, 49-8, rallied for four runs off five hits in the fourth. Casey Close's double scored Ken Hayward, who singled, and Close scored on a throwing error after Fred Erdmann's hit.

Gretzky wins 4th MVP

MONTREAL (AP) — Saying it was "just as exciting this time as the first time," Wayne Gretzky accepted the Hart Trophy as the National Hockey League's most valuable player for the fourth straight year.

Gretzky, the 22-year-old record-shattering center of the Edmonton Oilers, has won the award in each of his four NHL seasons after one year in the World Hockey Association. He collected 43 first-place votes and 266 points in the voting by 63 members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association.

On Tuesday, when he received the award at ceremonies in the Place des Arts, Gretzky joined Gordie Howe and Eddie Shore as the only four-time Hart winners. He is the first player to capture the honors four years in a row.

"These are considered individual awards but they really are for the team," said Gretzky. "No one can win these kind of trophies without a lot of help."

Gretzky had 71 goals, an NHL-record 125 assists and 196 points, all tops in the league.

Gretzky was one of four first-team All-Stars to collect awards Tuesday. Rod Langway of the Washington Capitals won the Norris Trophy as the NHL's best defenseman. Mike Bossy of the New York Islanders got the Lady Byng Trophy for sportsmanship combined with skill. Goaltender Pete Peeters of the Boston Bruins captured the Vezina Trophy as most outstanding goalie.

Steve Larmer of the Chicago Black Hawks was named the Calder Trophy recipient as rookie of the year and Bobby Clarke of the Philadelphia Flyers took the Frank Selke Trophy as the best defensive forward in hockey.

Langway, who was dealt to Washington by the Montreal Canadiens last summer, thanked Caps General Manager David Poile "for making the trade" and Canadiens general manager Irving Grundman (who has since been released, partly because of the trade) "for accepting it. I had to get that in."

Langway received 24 first-place votes and 180 points to outdistance Mark Howe of Philadelphia, who had 13 and 155.

Celtic coming home to coach

BOSTON (AP) — For four seasons, the reins were held by an outsider who carried on the Boston Celtics' winning tradition. Now they have been given to a member of the family who was present at the creation of the dynasty.

K.C. Jones, who played on eight consecutive National Basketball Association championship teams with the Celtics, was named Tuesday to replace Bill Fitch as head coach.

Jones, a brilliant defensive guard in his nine NBA seasons starting in 1958, is the fourth player from those title teams to ascend the throne that Red Auerbach, now general manager, left in 1966.

Being part of those clubs "is a great help" to Jones as coach "because he's lived it. He knows what it is and he can put it out and get other people to do it," Auerbach said.

"It gives me total confidence," Jones said of his success with Boston and elsewhere. "You have so many avenues to draw from with the success of all those years."

Jones, 51, agreed to a multi-year contract as Boston's ninth head coach and the sixth since Auerbach stepped down. Five of them — Jones, Bill Russell, Tom Heinsohn, Tom Sanders and Dave Cowens — are former Celtic players.

Fitch took over the team in 1979 after nine years as head coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"You can't talk about the last four years in anything but a positive way. Bill had a great record," Auerbach said.

FORMER CELTIC K.C. JONES ...returning to Boston to coach

Fitch's teams were 61-21, 62-22, 63-19 and 56-26. The Celtics won the NBA title in his second season but were eliminated in four straight games by Milwaukee in last season's playoffs.

Fitch resigned May 27, citing Harry Mangurian's announcement that he planned to sell the team as a key reason. Several days later, Fitch became head coach of the Houston Rockets.

"I'm very happy to be home. This is a fantastic opportunity for me. I've been associated with the Celtics since I've been black, since 1958," Jones joked. "I'd just like, hopefully, to continue the association with Red."

Auerbach said he would play a more active role than he did with Fitch, who preferred to have extensive control over basketball strategy and practices.

"K.C., having played for me, has a different relationship," Auerbach said. "I'm around. I'm available. It's like a shot in the arm."

He also announced that assistant coach Jimmy Rodgers had agreed to a multi-year contract to stay with the club and that the Celtics would seek another assistant.

Jones was head coach of the Capital and Washington Bullets from 1973 to 1976, when he was fired. He led them to a 155-91 record, including a 60-22 mark in 1974-75 when they were beaten in the NBA finals by Golden State in four games.

Jones was an assistant coach with Los Angeles in 1971-72, when they won the NBA title. The next season he was head coach of San Diego in the American Basketball Association before spending the next three seasons with the Bullets.

With Russell, he was on two NCAA championship teams at the University of San Francisco. He also was a member of the U.S. Olympic basketball team that won the gold medal in 1956.

Ducks win tourney

The rain-hampered 7th Annual Cotton Mize Fast-Pitch Softball Tournament saw the Texas Ducks winning the President's Division, and Lubbock K-K Supply taking the Governor's Division Sunday.

The rain kept play from finishing until 3 a.m. Sunday morning when the Ducks were able to edge Coahoma Big Three for the championship.

The most valuable player of the tournament was Ben Prater, center-fielder for the Ducks. Most valuable pitcher was the Duck's Mark Blough.

Best hitter was Bobby Doe of Cotton's Chippers with a .625 average. Doe's teammate Paul Spence hit at a .600 clip as the host Chipper's finished third in the tournament.

'Cats upset Angels

The Wildcats scored six times with one out in the top of the seventh inning to upset the Angels 8-4 in American Senior League play Tuesday night.

The loss was the first of the season after nine straight wins by the Angels. The victory boosted the 'Cats to 5-3.

Felix Olivas had a 3-2 lead entering the final inning but the bottom of the Wildcat order spured the winning rally. Winning pitcher Sammy Watson and Stacey Kilgore had two hits each. Watson scattered six hits and struck out 13 batters.

Olivas finished with six strikeouts but gave up nine hits.

The Angel pitcher had two of his team's half-dozen hits.

Country Club sets weekend tourney

SAN ANTONIO It's not quite the rush of the 1950s, but steadily, San Antonio is heading for the big time. His wife, O.A. has really seen for the first time Chris, their daughter, some into the Alsatian her rural neighbor. She even ran this year for the show.

San Antonians heading for hills

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It's not quite the Dust Bowl rush of the 1920s, but steadily, San Antonians are heading for the hills.

San Antonio certified public accountant Bernie Bernsen wears boots to his office and has learned the difference between Wichita, Choctaw and Mohawk pecans.

His wife, O.A., says she has really seen the stars for the first time.

Chris, their teen-age daughter, sometimes slips into the Alsatian accent of her rural neighbors.

She even raised a hog this year for the livestock show.

The Bernsens retreated to Rio Medina at the foot of the Texas Hill Country six years ago, selling their north-west San Antonio home next to a large car lot.

They are part of an exodus of San Antonio families casting off the shackles of city life and heading for the rural quietude and magical tranquility of the Hill Country.

And expatriates such as the Bernsen family are keeping their workday ties to San Antonio — they commute daily to jobs in the city.

If you ask any of them, they'll say they wouldn't trade their 50-mile, twice-a-day drives for a new condominium in "Loopland."

"Living in an apartment complex in San Antonio gave me a complex," recalls Donna Renken, who moved to Canyon Lake 10 years ago.

Since then her husband, Bobby Renken, has commuted to work at Big State Electric Co.

"It's two cups of coffee to work and three beers coming back," Mrs. Renken jokingly says.

"It gives Bobby a chance to unwind for 45 minutes or so, but it's nothing unusual. Nearly all of our friends out here commute to San Antonio or Austin."

That's true, says New Braunfels Realtor Gaz Green, who estimates 25 percent of New Braunfels' population commutes to San Antonio.

They come from all walks of life.

Some work at the Bexar County Hospital District and the military bases.

Others are San Antonio police officers and firefighters.

Many of the transplants are citing the city's growing population and traffic congestion — "another Houston," they say — for fleeing to communities such as Mico, Sattler, Startzville, Bulverde, Pipe Creek and Rio Medina.

But part of it is a desire to return to basics.

"There's only a post office and a beer joint in Rio Medina," said Bernsen, a CPA in San Antonio for 18 years.

From his northwest side office, Bernsen can be home in approximately 30 minutes, a short jaunt to what seems like the other side of the world.

Skunks, opossums, snakes, tree mites and coyotes have made life in Medina County interesting for the Bernsens, who are remodeling a turn-of-the-century ranch house.

"The first winter here, we had to buy longjohns for everybody," Bernsen recalls, noting he was forced to install insulation.

"But, I like living in a kind of place where you don't have to have any drapes."

Bernsen's wife taught school in San Antonio but now teaches in Castroville to be near her children — Ray, 17; Christine, 16; John, 13; and Jim, 11.

Her children, she said, will benefit from the smaller enrollment of the Medina Valley School District.

"This gives them an opportunity to learn leadership, instead of getting lost."

"The longer we are out here, the less we miss the city. But for the first couple of months we thought we had made a mistake," O.A. said.

Rex Tackett, sales manager for radio station WOAI, moved to the Bulverde Hills subdivision along U.S. 281 North and takes just 27 minutes to get to his office.

"We had an interest in living outside the city," Tackett said, "and now we have two horses and bird dogs and there's something about seeing the deer and hearing the quail whistle."

Although many are looking for weekend shelter in the Hill Country, much of the housing is becoming luxurious.

Realtors say homes from $29,000 to $300,000 are available throughout the Hill Country.

But as San Antonio continues to grow, the lifestyle may be the shape of things to come.

Nudist camp not excluded

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. (AP) — State officials want to draw people to Tennessee with a summer promotional campaign, but travelers may be exposed to more than they bargained for if they use a state-offered discount coupon for a nudist camp.

Along with some 350 hotels, restaurants, campgrounds and historic sites listed in an advertising supplement distributed recently in various newspapers statewide is a listing for the Rock Haven Family Nudist Camp near Murfreesboro.

The advertising supplement was co-sponsored by the Tennessee Department of Tourism and bottlers of Coke. The coupon offers 20 percent off camping and lodging fees at the nudist camp seven miles southeast of Murfreesboro.

"The state contacted us. They were asking if we wanted to be in it," Harold Holliday, the camp owner, said Tuesday. "We're licensed like everybody else."

The 14-year-old camp claims 400 members from several states.

"We didn't feel it was right to exclude the nudist camp," said Tom Lightsey, assistant commissioner of tourism.

The camp has received about 15 phone calls from people curious about the offer, but no one has shown up at the gate with coupon in hand, Holliday said.

Leader of 'Grandma Mafia' given 25-year prison sentence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 44-year-old leader of the so-called "Grandma Mafia" cocaine and money-laundering ring has been sentenced to 25 years in prison and fined $1 million.

Barbara Mouzin was also ordered by U.S. District Judge A. Wallace Tashima to turn over any interest she holds in a Miami clothing store she operated as a front for her illicit business.

Ms. Mouzin's enterprise "involved exactly the kind of transaction the law was intended to reach," Tashima said.

Also sentenced Monday was Janet Warren, 34, a clothing dealer from Los Angeles who pleaded guilty to trafficking in cocaine worth an estimated $450,000. Unlike others in the ring, she refused to testify against her former partners.

Tashima cited that refusal in sentencing Ms. Warren to six years in prison for her role in the drug ring, which was broken up by an elaborate federal "sting" operation.

Ms. Mouzin, who is a grandmother, was convicted last month of laundering $25 million in drug profits from other dealers through two Southern California banks. Agents posed as bankers who did not report her cash deposits as required by federal law.

She was also taken in by agents who bought millions of dollars' worth of cocaine from her underlings and from her Colombian drug connections.

As Ms. Warren left the court, she whispered "good luck" to Ms. Mouzin, but her co-defendant did not react.

Later, however, Ms. Mouzin wept as her attorney, Howard Weitzman, pleaded for mercy from Tashima. Weitzman, who said the woman was remorseful, called it "one of the heaviest sentences in any case I've been involved in."

The attorney, who is also defending millionaire automaker John Z. DeLorean against federal drug charges, said Ms. Mouzin would be eligible for parole in about 15 years, when she will be 60.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Perry, who called

Foster kids a problem in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A shortage of foster homes is compounding problems for child welfare workers in Houston, where parents abandon about between 30 and 35 children each month, a county official says.

Judy Hay, spokeswoman for the Harris County Child Welfare Department, said her agency's 270 approved foster homes falls about 60 short of what is needed.

"We have the same number of foster homes they have in Dayton, Ohio," she said. Dayton has slightly more than 200,000 residents. Houston has more than 1.5 million.

"We have children who go off to school in morning and when they come home in the afternoon the family is gone," Ms. Hay said.

Of the 30 to 35 children deserted here each month, Ms. Hay estimated one-third were infants or preschool children, one-third ages 6 to 12 and one-third teen-agers.

Ms. Mouzin a "consummate criminal and true danger to society," had asked Tashima to sentence Ms. Mouzin to life imprisonment but said he thought the lesser sentence was fair.

The case was complicated by allegations of official corruption, including three leaks of confidential information to the targets of the drug inquiry and a $700,000 robbery of Ms. Mouzin by a former Internal Revenue Service agent who died last year.

Ms. Mouzin had offered to cooperate in the corruption investigation in return for a lighter sentence. But that deal collapsed when she refused to testify against Anthony Cantelli, who hired her to run the clothing store and who prosecutors claimed was involved in the illicit business.

Cantelli, 45, of New Jersey, is to be tried later this year on federal charges of racketeering and money laundering. The remaining 10 defendants in the case have either been convicted or have pleaded guilty.

Church in Poland known as 'the pope's church'

NOWA HUTA, Poland (AP) — Known to the steel workers of Nowa Huta as "the pope's church," St. Mary's nestles among the drab concrete apartment blocks and billowing smokestacks of a town conceived as a model of proletarian communism.

The church, a modernistic structure resembling an ark, is the result of more than two decades of struggle pitting the church and workers on one side and the Communist government on the other.

"Nowa Huta was to be a socialist town, a town without God, which would obliterate religious tradition," said the Rev. Franciszek Skupien of St. Mary's.

"Instead, the town gave fresh blood to the faith in Krakow," said Skupien, quoting Pope John Paul II, who was Cardinal Karol Wojtyla of Krakow when the church was built, and led the political battle for it.

Krakow, a center of religious and ecclesiastical learning, is a citadel of rebellious Polish nationalism in a land governed by communists but spiritually dominated by the Roman Catholic Church. The government built Nowa Huta — which means "new steel works" — adjacent to Krakow to counter its "bourgeois tendencies."

Nowa Huta is a stronghold of Catholicism and also of the outlawed Solidarity labor union. Underground Solidarity cells are active in the city's giant Lenin Steel Mill, and one worker died in clashes

May 1 between union supporters and police.

During his June 16-23 pilgrimage to Poland, John Paul will consecrate a second major church in Nowa Huta, to be named after Maksymilian Kolbe, a Polish priest who volunteered to take the place of a condemned fellow prisoner at the Nazi death camp in Auschwitz. Kolbe, one of 2,801 priests, monks and nuns killed during the Nazi occupation, was canonized by the pontiff last October.

The Kolbe church, like St. Mary's, was built by workers on their own time, in part with materials procured locally, in part with materials, like the red marble floor, provided by the Vatican.

The new church is largely finished, and was filled for Mass on a recent Sunday. Outside, young parishioners sold yellow and white paper banners from a table decorated with a poster bearing the pope's portrait and the words, "We are waiting."

In recent years, the government has allowed the Roman Catholic hierarchy to build scores of new churches all over Poland, but in the early days of communist rule, the authorities persecuted clergymen, placing the primate, Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski, under house arrest from 1953-56.

In the thaw which accompanied the rise of Nikita Khrushchev in the Soviet Union, the Polish government released Wyszynski and in 1957 gave permission for construction of major church in Nowa Huta to accommodate the workers moving there.

The workers erected a cross on the church site, but in 1960, the government changed its mind and ordered the cross dismantled. It was defended by the worshippers who braved tear gas and police clubs to prevent its removal.

"There were riots for two days, and people were beaten so severely that they later died of their injuries," said Skupien.

"The rioting shocked the authorities," said the priest. "The same people given new apartments and well-paid jobs were turning on their benefactors, fighting for their faith."

Wojtyla actively fought for the church.

"As archbishop, he would say Mass in the street right outside the steel works during the shift change," said one woman from Nowa Huta. "Thousands of workers would gather, tying up traffic and blocking transportation. Finally, the government gave in."

Permission to build the church, however, was not granted until 1967, and the structure was not finished until 1977.

"Once the construction was under way, the curia had very little to do with it," said Skupien. "It was the people's own affair. Because earth-moving equipment and cranes are virtually non-existent, they did everything by hand."

"Hundreds of men would come here day after day, after their work shifts at the steel mill, treating their labor on the church as prayer," said the priest. "There was no shouting, swearing or boozing as there was on other construction projects."

"Cardinal Wojtyla was a frequent visitor here, and whenever word went round that he was coming, crowds turned up," said Skupien. "What was going on here was unprecedented by world standards. It was a pioneering venture."

Stolen cow goes home

KENNEWICK, Wash. (AP) — A fiberglass cow kidnapped from the roof of a store two months ago has been returned to its owner — after a cross-state journey that may have included several college parties.

Seattle police recovered the Great American Dairy Store's 28-year-old, black-and-white bovine from a tree on the University of Washington campus in Seattle, officials said. The cow's horns and hooves had been damaged before it was found hanging from the tree branches, police said.

Jim Wilson, owner of the store in Kennewick, drove to Seattle on Sunday to make a positive identification and truck the cow back home.

Police said they have no theory on how the animal got to Seattle, but Wilson said he heard rumors that it had been an attraction at college parties across the state.

The store had received as many as two dozen calls of sightings a week after Wilson posted a sign on a busy street that read, "We miss her. Please return our cow."

The cow was first reported missing April 1 in what employees thought was an April Fool's prank.

Once the $1,000 cow is repaired, it will be returned to its perch, securely bolted and wired down.

TRAMPING — It was the fifth annual Charlie Chaplin Lookalike Contest in Niles, Calif., recently, and there were lots of Little Tramps to shuffle their stuff. Winner was Michael Hinz, left, a

Celeste Holm 'very lucky' to be alive

NEW YORK (AP)— Oscar-winning actress Celeste Holm said today she was "very lucky" to escape death when a long scarf she was wearing around her neck caught in the wheel of a taxicab en route to Broadway's Tony awards ceremony.

"All I could think of, of course, was the sudden and terrible death of Isadora Duncan," Miss Holm said, recalling the American dancer killed in Nice, France, in 1927. "That's how she was killed."

Miss Holm, 64, and her husband, Wesley Addey, had hailed a cab outside their Central Park West apartment to ride to the Sunday night ceremony.

She was wearing a gray Anne Klein dress embossed with rhinestones and a sheer gray scarf about 5 feet long.

"I jumped in the cab and didn't realize that it was probably half out," the actress said. "When we got to the end of the block and turned the scarf got caught in the left rear wheel, and I was slammed inside of the cab and grabbed around the neck."

"I screamed, of course. "Thank God we were in one of those cabs where there was no partition separating the driver from the passengers. He realized something desperately was wrong and stopped immediately."

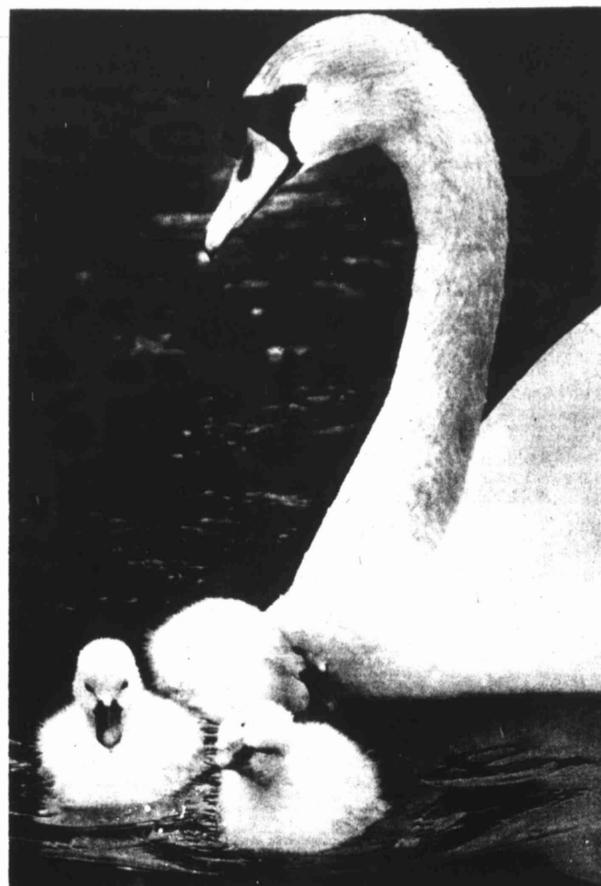

"I was very lucky. It happened so suddenly, that if he'd gone another 5 feet, my neck would have broken," she said.

Miss Holm said the driver offered to take her to the hospital, but she insisted on continuing to the ceremony to avoid disappointing its producer, Alex Cohen, who had provided her the seats.

"The scarf was just in shreds," she said. "It looked as if a tiger had clawed it."

Miss Holm said her only injuries were a red welt on her neck and a badly bruised arm.

Miss Holm was the original Ado Annie in "Oklahoma" on Broadway and won the Academy Award as best supporting actress for "Gentlemen's Agreement." She also was in the films "All About Eve," "High Society" and "The Champ," and in "Mame" on Broadway.

'Buffalo Bill' is man you love to hate

NEW YORK (AP)— How does NBC promote a louse?

Buffalo Bill Bittering, the central character in "Buffalo Bill," is such a despicable human being that test audiences hated him and hated his show. So NBC decided to turn a negative into a positive with a campaign selling Buffalo Bill as "the man you love to hate."

Ads promoting the series, starring Dabney Coleman, say: "You loved to hate him in 'Tootsie.' You loved to hate him in '9 to 5.' Would you rather watch reruns of 'The Gold Monkey' or get hit in the face with a pie?" The people say they'd prefer the pie, and take it on the chin.

As you can see in tonight's second episode, "Buffalo Bill," about a morally bankrupt talk-show host from Buffalo, N.Y., is a rollickingly funny comedy, particularly for fans of dark humor. It is definitely worth saving. As NBC's Brandon Tartikoff says, "This is a show people will talk about the next day. It's not another lovable sitcom from the makers of 'Diff'rent Strokes.'"

But NBC feared that it would be too unconventional and outrageous for viewers used to staring passively at the silliness of "Three's Company."

"This is an extremely fragile show," says Tartikoff, president of NBC

Entertainment. "The research was very unfavorable. He's so outrageous that he took the audience quite by surprise."

NBC's guinea pigs called Bill lots of names — none of them nice. "Self-centered, cold, unfriendly, phony,

'In all our conversations about the show, we kept referring to Archie Bunker. But Archie had a wife and daughter, whom he loved. This guy doesn't even pet his dog.'

stupid, oblivious to others." They also didn't like the other characters because they didn't stand up to Bill.

"Their first-blush reaction was not unexpected," says Tartikoff. "In all our conversations about the show, we kept referring to Archie Bunker. But Archie had a wife and daughter, whom he loved. This guy doesn't even pet his dog."

In one future episode, Bill's ugly daughter comes to Buffalo. "He tries to avoid her. He treats her like dirt," says Tartikoff.

audiences were never indifferent to "Buffalo Bill."

"When the research is so unfavorable, with such high negatives, then you know the audience wasn't bored, that you touched some chords," says Tartikoff. "Howard Cosell and Barbara Walters are two personalities who test negatively, but audiences tune in to see them."

The network's vision of another "All in the Family" success centers around its ad campaign and its strategy of showing the 13 episodes of "Buffalo Bill" in the summer. If it clicks, Tartikoff says room for the series would be found on NBC's fall schedule. "You can always make room for a hit."

"Buffalo Bill" originally was scheduled as a spring series, but NBC reversed itself, feeling the show would never get off the ground against first-run programming on ABC and CBS. "This show needs multiple-episode samplings," says Tartikoff. "With such an outrageous, unscrupulous character, viewers might not come back. With reruns in the summertime, there's less competition."

Because sleazy Bill happens to be a TV personality, it might appear that third-rated NBC is making a vicious anti-television statement. Tartikoff, who commissioned executive producers Tom Patchett and Jay Tarses to do the series, says that's not the case.

"They wanted to do an anti-hero show with Dabney Coleman," says Tartikoff, adding that other situations considered were: an investigative TV reporter who nails people every week; an urban police chief who's a real social climber, and a big hospital medical director who's more interested in his real-estate holdings than his patients.

"We just gravitated to the TV thing," says Tartikoff. "There was no driving, compelling force for us to take TV apart. It's just a convenient backdrop for this irascible character."

In tonight's episode, Bill throws a fit because his guest is deadly dull. He demands exciting interviews. His preferences? "Ax murderers, rapists and Freddy Silverman."

Court mulls origin of martini

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— The court convened solemnly at noon, the lawyers argued the pros and cons of the tricky issue and spread the evidence before the judge. And then, they drank Exhibit A.

Draining the last drop of his martini, Judge Daniel M. Hanlon pronounced his judgment: the delicious idea of mixing gin and vermouth originated in San Francisco.

So ended Tuesday's session of the Court of Historical Review and Appeals, a tongue-in-cheek tribunal trying to ascertain the birthplace of the martini.

While the court was unofficial, the players — and the evidence — were real.

Hanlon, a San Francisco Superior Court judge, said the mock court gives him, prosecuting and defense lawyers and witnesses a chance to loosen up during the lunch hour. Other topics that have been discussed in the court, which convenes a few times a year, include the origin of the hot dog.

Pregnancy good reason for running red lights

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP)— Bus driver Doug Weaver had good reason for skipping a few red lights. His special passenger was "obviously pregnant" — and close to giving birth.

Weaver, employed by the Champaign-Urbana Mass Transit District, was at the end of his line when he got a call from his dispatcher Saturday telling him a woman on another bus was in labor.

She was transferred to his bus at the Country Fair Shopping Center so he could take her to the Carle Foundation Hospital, which is on his route.

"I was hoping nothing would happen on my bus, because I wouldn't really know how to handle it," said Weaver, a bachelor. "She got on the bus with her husband and another kid. They didn't say a word to me, but she was obviously pregnant."

As Weaver drove east, he picked up a fire truck escort. "We weren't really speeding, but we did blow off a few red lights along the way," said the driver.

After arriving at the hospital, the woman gave birth to a boy.

The four or five other passengers on the bus didn't seem to mind the detour, Weaver said.
