Stanton youth dies in wreck

STANTON — A wreck early Saturday morning claimed the life of an 18-year-old Stanton youth and injured another when the vehicle they were riding in flipped end-over-end three and a half times two miles west of Stanton on U.S. Highway 80.

Department of Public Safety Trooper Wade Turner said James David Mashburn and a companion, Daryl Snell, 17, also of Stanton, were eastbound on Interstate 20 at 1:15 a.m. Saturday. He said they were traveling at a "high rate of speed" when Mashburn attempted to exit off onto Highway 80.

Turner said the vehicle apparently ran off the road into some grass and when Mashburn tried to correct the truck's path, the 1978 Chevrolet pickup flipped over after hitting the side of the road.

Turner said both boys were thrown through the windshield of the vehicle as it turned end-over-end.

Mashburn was pronounced dead at Midland Memorial Hospital at 5:45 a.m. from injuries received in the accident. Snell was in stable condition Saturday suffering from a punctured lung and several broken ribs, according to a hospital spokesman.

Services for Mashburn will be at 10 a.m. Monday at the First Baptist Church in Stanton with the Rev. Ed Carson, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

He was born on April 15, 1965, in Stanton and had graduated from Stanton High School this year.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Mashburn of Stanton; a sister, Donna Carol Mashburn of Stanton; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cain, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Saunders, all of Stanton; a great-grandmother, Mrs. Effie Cain of Stanton.

Rainbow Project more than a dream

HARD AT WORK — Rainbow Project board members Victor Sedinger (left) and Tim Winn (right) are shown hard at work Saturday on the shelter designed for neglected and abused children. The Rainbow Project center will provide a home for up to 12 children at a time who must be placed away from an unwholesome environment until plans can be made for their future. The project has been funded through donations and the support of the Big Spring community.

Home for abused children nears licensing time

By BOB CARPENTER
Staff Writer

Big Spring's Rainbow Project for abused and neglected children isn't far from being a reality after almost a year and a half of planning, hard work and tender loving care.

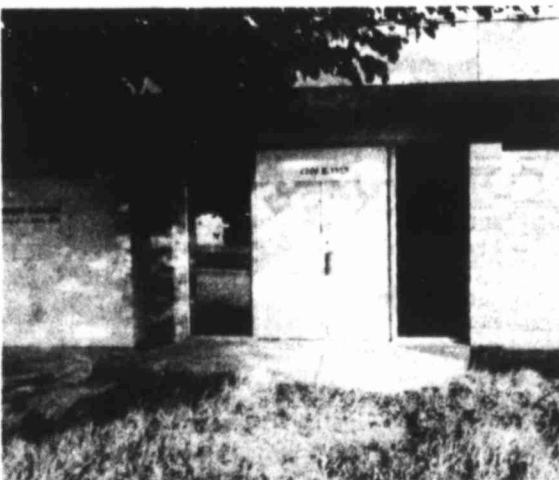

With a little more paint, minor cleaning and furniture, the former firehouse at 2906 W. 13th will have been transformed into a shelter for children who must be removed from an unwholesome home environment.

Victor Sedinger, a member of the Rainbow Project board, said the project should be completed by mid July and license application will be made at that time.

The shelter will be licensed with the Texas Department of Human Resources and will have the capacity for 12 children, Sedinger said.

It is expected that the DHR, Texas Youth Council and juvenile probation will utilize the facility for children who need emergency care for a variety of reasons. The shelter will serve Howard County, as well as Dawson, Borden, Glasscock, Mitchell and Sterling counties.

The shelter will provide supervised care for the child while a social worker researches the home and parental situation to determine what plans are in the best interest of the child. A child can stay up to 30 days in the shelter.

Sedinger said the shelter's board will hold an open house in July if everything is on schedule.

"It will be a treat for people who have been so good in helping out money-wise and who have donated material, time and labor," he said. "This is the result of a lot of work by a lot of people and they're just about to see the fruits of their labor."

Sedinger estimated that renovation of the building would have normally cost $25,000, but with the generous donations of time and materials, the cost of fixing up the center will be between $7,000 and $10,000.

"That's simply because the community supported us so well and met the needs that we have," he said.

Hico man is arrested in children's poisoning

HICO (AP) — A Hico truck driver suspected in the poisoning deaths of his two young children was arrested by sheriff's deputies Saturday after a 24-hour search with bloodhounds and horses, investigators said.

Erath County Sheriff Jack Perry said Delbert Black was arrested without incident. He said Black was on foot and was caught after he tried to hide out in a dairy barn near Hico. Perry said the owners of the barn called police.

Deputies from three counties began looking for Black late Friday after Amy Alnette Black, 8, and Richard Loyd Black, 5, were dead on arrival at the hospital here, said Erath County Sheriff Jack Perry. Warrants were issued for Black's arrest shortly before midnight Friday, the sheriff said.

Erath County Sheriff's Deputy Randy Merriman said Black was out on bond on charges stemming from the attempted shooting of his wife in February. Merriman said Black's trial on those charges was pending. The two children were taken to the Hico City Hospital, where their mother worked as an X-ray technician, by two men who said Black told them he thought the children were poisoned.

One of the men, Marty Bell, said Black drove up in front of his trailer home in Hico and sat in his car for a while, then ran up to Bell and Gary Reed and asked them to take the children to the hospital because he "couldn't make it."

Black said he would follow the two men, but did not, Bell said.

Neighbors who did not want to be identified said Black and his wife, Sylvia, 25, had separated in February and were divorced in May.

The neighbors said Mrs. Black won custody of the two children and that Black had visitation rights on weekends. The children were visiting Black at his trailer house outside this community 75 miles southwest of Fort Worth, they said.

The neighbors said Black had been despondent over his divorce and had called his wife at about 5:30 p.m. Friday, telling her it was "time for us to die."

Two and a half hours later, a man identifying himself as Black called Black's landlord and said "he had poisoned his kids and had taken some of the stuff himself and was fixing to go and die quietly," said Merriman.

Investigators found a can of cyanide-based insect poison in the trailer house and nearby "a bottle of syrup, a jar of sugar and a large glass with it all mixed together," Merriman said.

Nelta Thompson draws nine-year prison term

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

A 54-year-old Big Spring woman was sentenced to nine years in prison after a Howard County jury deliberated an hour and 20 minutes Friday afternoon in 118th District Court.

Nelta Thompson of 1609 Avion had been found guilty of involuntary manslaughter shortly before 11 a.m. Friday after a three-day trial.

She was originally charged with murder in the May 17, 1980 shooting death of 10-year-old Michaela Marlene Reeves on Hilltop Road in Big Spring.

Prosecuting attorney Don Richard said the district attorney's office was satisfied with the jury's decision. However, he said he was surprised the eight-man, four-woman jury decided on prison time after finding for involuntary manslaughter.

The jury found Mrs. Thompson guilty of the lesser charge after less than two hours of deliberation Friday morning. Testimony was completed Thursday afternoon and the jury recessed that night after an hour without reaching a verdict.

Mrs. Thompson was the only witness during the punishment phase of the trial. Defense Attorney Roy Ford asked her if she could uphold the conditions of probation and if she had ever been found guilty of a felony. She said she could follow the conditions and had never been convicted of a felony.

However, Assistant District Attorney Don Richard revealed during cross-examination that Mrs. Thompson had pleaded guilty to driving while intoxicated in 1982 and been arrested for unlawfully carrying a weapon in 1987.

Both are misdemeanor crimes, but would be considered violations of probation conditions, he said.

"You haven't changed your life a bit," Richard said. "I don't think you can get along without it (a gun)."

During closing arguments, Ford said a prison sentence would not be a deterrent in what he called a "real stupid" situation. He said Mrs. Thompson would be a burden to the state in prison and asked for probation.

Richard closed by reminding the jury "You are the 'they'" people will refer to when complaining about the system. He said the jury is responsible for the mores of the community. He asked for compassion for the victim.

"We (the state) will never condone this kind of conduct with probation... especially where a life is taken," Richard said.

Man sentenced to 38 years in priest's death

ODESSA (AP) — James Harry Reyos was sentenced Saturday to 38 years in prison and fined $5,000 for the beating death of a Catholic priest whom Reyos said he killed after a homosexual encounter.

The nude, bound body of the Rev. Patrick Ryan was found by a maid in an Odessa motel room on Dec. 22, 1981. His body was identified after his Denver City parishioners became worried when he was absent from a Christmas Eve church service.

Reyos was found guilty on Friday and faced a possible life sentence. Jurors deliberated his punishment for about four hours Saturday.

Ryan's brother, Rodger of San Jose, Calif., who sat through the trial, said he was "happy" with the verdict.

"I wasn't interested in the length of the sentence," he said. "I just wanted justice done."

Reyos' attorneys, who argued that their client falsely confessed to the slaying last year out of guilt over having sex with the priest, said they would appeal the verdict.

Reyos, 27, of Chama, N.M. has remained in jail in lieu of $100,000 bond since his arrest in November 1982 in Albuquerque.

Houston voters reject transit bond issue

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston voters decisively rejected Saturday a $2.35 billion bond issue to fund a rail transit system in this sprawling city known for its freeway traffic jams.

With 494 of 512 boxes counted, 61.7 percent had voted against the bonds.

The vote count was 39,871 in favor, 65,870 against.

Turnout appeared to be running about 10 percent of the eligible voters in the 1,275-square-mile area served by the Metropolitan Transit Authority.

Supporters of the bonds had said a light turnout would be a bad sign for the plan.

Houston has no rail service and its bus system is limited. The city depends largely on a freeway system that has been overwhelmed by an explosive population growth.

Metro was asking to borrow against future sales tax revenues to help finance a program worth $5.2 billion. Officials proposed no increase in the 1-cent sales tax the agency now receives.

Metro proposed to use the bonds to build the 18.5-mile first stage of the rail project, to nearly double its fleet of 429 buses to 850 by 1990, and to build new maintenance facilities, satellite parking lots and transit terminals.

The 17-station rail system, elevated except for a two-mile subway downtown would parallel major freeways running north and southwest from the downtown area.

Metro general manager Alan Kiepper wants to eventually build a 94-mile rail system, but has yet to decide what routes the trains would run.

The plan was backed by Mayor Kathy Whitmire and 11 other City Council members. Three members opposed it.

DO IT CENTER GROUNDBREAKING — Activity toward building the new Spring City Do It Center on FM 700 east of Burger King began this week. The facility will feature a 17,296 square-foot showroom and an 18,000 square-foot warehouse. The center will have a full range of home improvement supplies and will open sometime in the fall.

The developers of the new Spring City Do It Center to be located on FM 700 have announced groundbreaking activities have begun at the site.

The business will be east of Burger King on 4.59 acres of land and will have an 17,296 square-foot showroom of home supplies including plumbing, electrical, hardware, hand tools, automotive, paneling, pre-cut lumber and other items for the do-it-yourself or professional contractor.

The center will also have an 18,000 square-foot warehouse with a 20,600 square-foot retail area.

The Spring City Do It Center is a marketing concept of Hardware Wholesalers, Inc. Stan Partee, owner of the center, is a member of the organization.

At the present time there are less than 10 of the centers in Texas.

Quake strikes California town again

COALINGA, Calif. (AP) — Another earthquake struck the tremor-weary Coalinga area, destroying a house, shifting mobile homes and breaking up roads six weeks after a devastating quake shattered the town.

Friday's quake was followed Saturday by a moderate aftershock that authorities said caused no damage or injuries.

Nor were any injuries reported in Friday's 10-second earthquake that shook the central California community of 7,000 people about 200 miles southeast of San Francisco at 8:10 p.m.

"It is definitely a new quake," said E.J. Fowkes, a geologist at Coalinga's West Hills Community College. "It is not an aftershock of the old quake."

Friday's quake measured 5.2 on the Richter scale of ground motion and was centered about 10 miles northwest of the small oil town, authorities said. It was one of the strongest jolts to hit the city since the 28-second tremor on May 2 that measured 6.5 on the Richter scale and caused $31 million damage.

The moderate aftershock registering 4.2 jolted the area at 6:31 p.m. Saturday but caused no damage or injuries, according to the state Office of Emergency Services.

It was one of the strongest of several aftershocks to follow Friday's quake, the U.S. Geological Survey National Earthquake Information Center at Golden, Colo., reported.

The tremor, which lasted "a split second... was like a sudden jerk or a shock, whereas the one yesterday (Friday) was a rolling motion," said police Sgt. Ken

Spann. "We're sitting here with our fingers crossed, hoping there's no more."

Police reported no new structural damage within city limits.

Meanwhile, a small earthquake Saturday shook part of northern California near Clear Lake about 220 miles north of Coalinga.

The 3:13 p.m. PDT tremor was recorded at a magnitude of 3.3 on the Richter scale and was felt in parts of Lake County, said Don Finley, spokesman for the Golden, Colo. information center.

About Friday's quake, Fresno County Sheriff's Sgt. Dave Huerta said, "About 20 families live in the area where the brunt of the shock hit" in Los Gatos Canyon. No one was evacuated, but some left voluntarily to spend the night in Coalinga.

A few mobile homes shifted off their foundations, Huerta said.

Mike Walker, who drove through the canyon after the latest quake, said the pavement slipped six inches in some spots.

A toppled transformer started a small grass fire that was quickly controlled, and landslides tossed dirt onto narrow roads that wind through foothills.

The family in the lone Los Gatos Canyon home that was destroyed had time to flee. The house was damaged in the earlier quake and "this one pretty much did it in," said city spokesman Bob Semple.

"Some of the people said it sounded like a jet coming right on through there," said Sheriff's Lt. Donald Burk.

Health Fair coming in July

Persons interested in learning how to take better care of their health will have the chance to do so Saturday, July 23 at the Big Spring Health and Safety Fair.

The fair is sponsored by Howard College, the City-County Health Unit, Big Spring Hospitals, the Herald, the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce and the Texas Extension Services. It is funded and supported by Oilfield Industrial Lines, Cosden Oil and Chemical and Civitan Club.

The fair will held at the Big Spring Mall from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

More than 35 health screenings and information booths are expected. Among those screenings will be tests for anemia, height and weight, diabetes, glaucoma, vision, hearing, dental, oral cancer and others.

An added attraction is an exhibit from last year's 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn. A talking robot and computerized health screening are part of this booth.

Health agencies or organizations wishing to participate should contact Esther Lopez, booth coordinator, at the Texas Department of Human Resources, 707 E. Third.

Chairwoman of the health fair is Barbara Holdampf of Howard College. Co-chairwoman is Pam Welch of Palmer Associates.

Engineer to meet with commissioners

Howard County commissioners will be busy with the county engineer, the budget and the volunteer firemen during their meeting Monday.

Commissioners are scheduled to meet at 9 a.m. in the county courthouse on the second floor.

County Engineer Bill Mims is expected to discuss five items with the commissioners, including repairing the roof of the Heritage Museum. Other items are the Colorado River Municipal Water District's stream quantity and quality monitoring equipment and salary adjustments.

Mims is also scheduled to discuss equipment and a purchasing request with commissioners.

A proposed use hearing on revenue sharing funds will be held at 10 a.m. with County Auditor Jackie Olson. Mrs. Olson is also expected to discuss property insurance and a purchasing laws seminar with commissioners.

A budget workshop is also planned for commissioners.

A discussion with members of the Howard County volunteer fire departments is also planned. Commissioners have been meeting with some members recently who have been attempting to organize the separate departments more efficiently.

County Extension Agent Don Richardson is expected to present his monthly report to commissioners.

The shelter will be licensed for 12 children and will have a living area, dining room, kitchen, a boy's dorm and bathroom, a girl's dorm and bathroom, a laundry, a nursery and an apartment for house parents.

"We hope to do a lot of creative things to work out the kids' problems rather than just deal with the symptoms — we want to provide a cure."

Included in the shelter's programs will be parenting workshops, volunteer training, a "parents anonymous" group and foster grandparenting.

Sedinger said the board was already looking for house parent applicants to run the facility. The board is looking for a mature couple, preferably with no children.

"They don't need any special degrees, but should have common sense and the ability to deal with kids in crisis," he said. "These kids need adult understanding and patience."

Sedinger said the shelter will be initially funded by donations from the community and per diem payments from the state. He said an endowment fund will also be set up for the facility in coming months.

Cranston upsets Mondale in Wisconsin poll

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sen. Alan Cranston of California won a presidential straw poll Saturday at the Wisconsin Democratic Party's convention, upsetting pre-convention favorite former Vice President Walter Mondale.

Cranston received 789 votes or 38.8 percent of the total, compared with 727 votes, or 35.7 percent, for Mondale. Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado finished third with 443 votes, or 21.8 percent.

Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, who did not attend the convention and campaigned in the state only once, got 39 votes.

Former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida received 14 votes, and Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina received one vote. There were 22 undecided votes.

State party Chairman Matthew Flynn attributed Cranston's victory to his well-organized effort and intense campaign for delegate support in recent weeks.

"The strong organization paid off," Flynn said.

Before the vote, Hart backers had criticized Cranston supporters for allegedly recruiting newcomers to the party to attend the convention and for providing some with hotel accommodations.

Cranston admitted he bought 100 hotel rooms for delegates at a cost of about $4,000, but said he had not paid for delegates' party membership or convention fees and accused Hart of spending too much time criticizing him.

Asked about criticism that Cranston's campaign had helped some delegates and alternates travel to the convention, Flynn said Saturday each campaign helped in getting supporters to the convention.

"I know of no untoward activity or fraud," Flynn said.

Mondale was considered the front-runner because he had the highest name recognition, having served for 12 years as a senator from neighboring Minnesota before his election as vice president in 1976.

"I'm going to do very well," Mondale said before the vote.

Cranston said he hoped to run a strong second to Mondale. The balloting "will have a great deal to do with the making of the president" in 1984, Cranston told the placard-waving delegates.

Hart declined to predict how he would finish but indicated he expected to get at least 10 percent of the vote.

Those three candidates addressed the convention Saturday, calling for arms control and more jobs. Glenn's wife, Annie, also addressed the delegates in a plea for straw poll support.

Like Glenn, Hollings and Askew did not attend the convention.

Cranston, Mondale and Hart were interrupted frequently by applause Saturday, especially when they criticized Reagan and demanded nuclear arms control and jobs for the unemployed.

26 injured when balcony collapses at party

GALVESTON (AP) — A tavern's balcony collapsed under the weight of patrons trying to get to free beer, but witnesses said partygoers continued to drink and dance as ambulance workers hauled off the 26 people injured in the accident.

Three people were admitted to John Sealy Hospital after the Friday afternoon accident at the Sports Club Tavern on Galveston Island's East Beach.

Some of those injured at the party, sponsored by Houston rock radio station KSRR-FM, returned to the bar after being treated at a local hospital.

"It kept right on partying," bartender Linda Magoto said about 10:30 p.m. "I've been here since."

The accident occurred at 4:20 p.m.

Thomas Stewart, who was carried away on a stretcher but returned to the tavern, said he was fourth in line at the beer keg.

"They said, 'Form one line through here.' All of a sudden, the next thing you know, it (the platform) shifted," Stewart said. He said the 10-foot drop, which left him buried beneath 10 or 15 bodies, "sort of put me in a daze."

He said his leg was skinned and he suffered "some chest injuries" in the fall.

Police officer Joe Maffie said between 50 and 60 people were dancing on the 43-foot-by-eight foot balcony when the accident occurred. He said some of the injured were on top of the balcony and others were beneath it.

Phone lines at KSRR remained busy or went unanswered throughout the evening.

Spokeswoman Linda MacDonald said 26 people were taken to John Sealy Hospital and three were admitted. Ralph Marquez, 20, of Texas City, and Arnold Bradley, 42, of Galveston, were listed in fair condition with abdominal pains. Ms. MacDonald said.

Others were treated for cuts and many complained of back pains. Ms. MacDonald said.

PARTY GOES ON — Beachgoers help Galveston paramedics and firemen move injured victim Heindrick Hurtsville, of Galveston, from the club area after a balcony collapsed Friday afternoon. Hurtsville was one of 26 people injured. Witnesses said the party sponsored by a radio station continued unabated.

Tax protestor is laid to rest

Gordon Kahl given military rites

HEATON, N.D. (AP) — A hastily formed honor guard of seven American Legionnaires gave Gordon Kahl an awkward military salute, their guns misfiring, as the tax protestor who died in an Arkansas shootout was buried.

The seven Legionnaires paid tribute to Kahl for his service in World War II as an Army Air Corps turret gunner, leader Darrell Hansen said Friday.

"I think it should have been a military funeral. He served his country when they called," said Hansen.

Kahl, 63, a member of the right-wing, anti-tax group Posse Comitatus, was killed June 3 in a shootout at a farmhouse near Walnut Ridge, Ark., with Lawrence County Sheriff Gene Matthews. The sheriff also was killed.

Kahl had been sought nationwide for nearly four months in the Feb. 13 shooting deaths of two federal marshals near Medina. The marshals, along with four other officers, were trying to arrest Kahl for violating probation on a 1977 income tax evasion conviction.

The honor guard was quickly formed Thursday after the Air Force and other state veterans' organizations turned down family requests to be present.

The Legionnaires' rifles misfired on the second of a three-round volley. Taps was played by the grandnephew of Kahl's widow, Joan.

Despite being accused of killing three law officers in two shootouts, Kahl was a quiet, patriotic farmer, a family friend said.

JOAN KAHL — "honors" for husband

"He was a peaceful man," the Rev. Peter Dyck told the congregation Friday at Kahl's funeral. "The only time violence came into play was when it was brought against him."

Some 200 people turned out on a hot, windy day to pay their last respects to Kahl, although there was no obvious presence of Posse Comitatus.

Reagan administration making moves to bridge 'gender gap'

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an effort to bridge the so-called "gender gap," the White House has created a group headed by deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver to court women in preparation for the 1984 presidential election.

That duty normally would fall to Faith Ryan Whittlesey, director of the Office of Public Liaison. But during her brief tenure at the White House, Ms. Whittlesey has alienated some women voters with her extreme conservative views and she is known to have had differences with several of President Reagan's top aides.

The group headed by Deaver also includes the administration's two female Cabinet members: Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler.

The White House's effort to repair relations with women has intensified since the November, 1982, midterm elections which confirmed that the gender gap had widened.

While Reagan has not yet announced whether he will seek reelection, all of his closest aides have said publicly that they are quite certain he will do so.

The National Organization for Women and other women's groups have denounced Reagan's record on women's issues and announced plans to try to defeat him.

The Deaver coordinating council is viewed at the White House as an elevation of the interest placed on women's issues.

There was no comment from Ms. Whittlesey. Phone calls to her home were not answered.

In a television interview taped last week, Ms. Whittlesey said "the gender gap isn't anything that's news. It's widened, but it's been around for a while. We've always suffered a gender gap in the Republican Party. We're doing everything we can to correct it."

She also said there is "a gender gap relating to males, because polls show, for example, that men tend to favor the president more than women. We are sure that there is a gender gap. There is much discussion about it."

Ms. Whittlesey added that organized women's groups do not represent a single identifiable viewpoint.

"I don't think those organizations, those feminist organizations here in Washington, represent the broad stream of American women," Ms. Whittlesey said on the Cable News Network program "Newsmaker—Sunday."

"I think there are hundreds of women's organizations in the United States ... with differing points of view."

She added that Reagan has a "compassionate concern" for women.

Pioneer leaves solar system behind

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pioneer 10 on Monday becomes the first earthly spaceship to sail beyond the solar system when it begins an eternal voyage among the stars bearing a gold-plated greeting for the cosmos.

Launched March 3, 1972, the 570-pound ship challenged the uncharted hazards beyond Mars as it blazed a new trail through the asteroid belt and ran a gauntlet of radiation to take a close look at Jupiter.

Pioneer's trail, like a mountain pass discovered by explorers and used by settlers, opened a path for spaceships that followed — another Pioneer and two sophisticated Voyagers with high-resolution cameras.

With a dozen scientific instruments extending man's eyes and ears deep into space, Pioneer returned a wealth of knowledge as it explored gigantic Jupiter. It delights scientists still with a search for the edge of the sun's domain.

"I think the name Pioneer is very appropriate," said John H. Wolfe of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center. He was chief scientist for the Ames-directed mission.

"It's got so many firsts, but the biggie is that it is leaving the solar system," he said in a telephone interview.

At 5 a.m. (PDT) Monday, the Pioneer 10, racing away at 30,558 mph, will be 2.81 billion miles from the sun as it leaves behind the last of the nine planets of the solar system.

That's when it crosses the orbit of Neptune. Tiny Pluto is normally the most distant planet but its egg-shaped orbit has, for the next 16 years, brought it closer to the sun than Neptune.

News of the historic passage won't reach Earth until 9:20 a.m. Pioneer is so far from home its radio signals, traveling as fast as light, need 4 hours, 20 minutes to cross the expanse.

Pioneer, said Herbert A. Lassen, "is like an 18-year-old child that's about ready to be on its own. ... It's a grand thing."

Lassen, of the TRW Inc. Space and Technology Group, was a key figure in conceiving the Pioneer mission and devising technological strategies that made it possible.

TRW built Pioneer 10 and its sistership Pioneer 11, which followed it to Jupiter, then went off on its own to probe Saturn, a beaming and lovely celestial jewel.

Pioneer 10 had a stipulated lifetime of 21 months. For 11 years, "It has performed beyond all our hopes or expectations," said Charles Hall, now retired, who was project manager for Ames and part of the Pioneer project since 1963.

"With one exception (a magnetometer that measures magnetic fields)," he said, "all of the equipment we turned on at the time of launch is the same equipment that we are using now. None of our redundant equipment was even turned on."

Mission controllers at Ames, who talk to the ship almost daily to calibrate instruments and keep its antenna aimed at Earth, expect to maintain contact through about 1991, and perhaps until 1995, said assistant flight director Alan Fernquist.

Once beyond the sun's atmosphere and into almost empty interstellar space, Pioneer will be in "one of the most benign environments one can imagine," Wolfe said. "There's absolutely nothing to stop it. It will last forever."

At the very least, scientists say, it should still be wandering about the outer rim of our Milky Way galaxy five billion years from now, when our sun is expected to die.

"That," Fernquist said, "is about as close to eternity as you can get."

On Pioneer's flank is a gold-plated plaque bearing a picture of a man and a woman, a chart showing the location of our sun, the nine planets and Pioneer's home planet.

"It's there — 'like a note in a bottle that you throw overboard in the middle of the ocean,'" Wolfe said — in case humans on Earth are not alone in the galaxy and some extraterrestrial neighbor stumbles across the ship in coming years.

Don Bane, now with NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, was one of three science writers who conceived of the plaque and got it aboard the ship.

"I don't think anybody will ever find it out there," he said Thursday. "It's as much a message to the people of Earth as to any civilization that might be out there."

Q: We've made the decision to buy a home. My wife wants to make the move now while I believe interest rates will drop further. What do you think?

A: No one knows for sure whether interest rates will go up or down. Although the trend has been downward, they may have reached their low point, or they may continue downward — or back up. The point is, if you have made the decision, there really is no better time than now. If interest rates continue to fall, it may be only a point or two, if any, within the next year. That's another year without the home you want, and all the advantages which go with it. And don't forget, interest charges can be deducted from your income tax.

There! It's done for another year. And, boy, am I glad the annual hassle to report to Big Brother is over and that those income tax returns are finally on their way.

If you've neglected your personal records, why not go ahead now, while you're "in the habit" and bring them right up to date.

Prepare a list of the following items for the benefit of your survivors:

1. Safe deposit box. Where is it? Who has the key or knows the combination?
2. Wills for the family. Dates drawn, names of executors, guardians, etc.
3. Insurance policies. Where are they? Adequate? Policy loans?
4. Bank accounts, checking and savings. Where? Who controls?
5. Outstanding debts.
6. Outstanding receivables and loans due to you. List them so your personal representative can make sure they're collected in accordance with your wishes.
7. Copies of any marital change papers, like divorce decrees, alimony papers, death certificates, prenuptial agreements, etc.
8. Records of all real estate transactions, including deeds, mortgages.
9. Copies of prior year income tax returns, along with supporting documentation for at least the last three to five years.
10. Personal financial statements — at least annually for as many years as possible.
11. Credit cards. List of account numbers. Who's authorized to sign? Who has the cards? Consider canceling all but one.

Keep a copy of this list — as well as copies of the important records — in a secret place away from the regular records. Then let one trusted family member or friend know where the duplicate list is.

Editorial They're not just lazy

"Most unemployed people could find work if they really wanted it. The trouble is they aren't willing to take ordinary jobs and they are lazy." These were the words of a businessman.

The next day we read that 98,000 people applied for 100 job openings with the U.S. Postal Service in Newark, N.J.

Jobs with the Postal Service pay well and fringe benefits are excellent. Usually there is no problem in filling vacancies. There have been similar stories recently in other communities. When public and private jobs have been advertised, the number of applicants has far exceeded the number of openings.

IT IS TRUE THAT SOME people are lazy. There are individuals who want easy jobs or prefer to live on welfare. But the vast majority of the millions of unemployed want jobs. And most of them will accept work that is beneath their skill levels. Stereotyping the unemployed as lazy does not serve the nation. Rather, it demeans people who are victims of high unemployment, for most Americans still believe in the work ethic. And 98,000 applicants for 100 jobs tells a lot about the people who are unemployed.

Goliad student travelers praised

Dear Editor,

Our trip to Washington, D.C., is a time we will always cherish. Students and sponsors enjoyed a wonderful time together discovering the wonders of our nation's capital.

We would like to express our appreciation to parents, students, our congressman, Lakeland Tour, our bus drivers and guides and all those involved in the trip.

We are grateful for the parents who trusted us with their youth. Our thanks go to Charles Stenholm for meeting us at the Capitol and for providing us with complimentary books and a photographer. We also express appreciation to the guard who assisted our students in presenting a wreath from our group representing Goliad School at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Most of all we thank those students who participated in this program. Throughout the entire trip our youth conducted themselves beautifully. Even though our one flight was delayed 12 hours, our group responded to the situation without complaining.

Many times we were stopped and complimented on the manners and orderliness our youth exemplified. It is our pleasure to be associated with a part of this group. Big Spring has reason to be proud of its youth.

A cup of opinion

Elsa Lanchester Herself, By Elsa Lanchester, St. Martin's; $17.95.

The 20th century's best-known Cockney sparrow grew up in a nest of eccentrics. Her unmarried parents were dedicated Socialists who slept in the woods to avoid the census-taker and refused to let their children be vaccinated. The family pet was a parrot that squawked, "Votes for women." The kitchen table suffered and eventually gave up the ghost from being pounded on by passionate Socialist friends who got carried away while expressing their opinions.

Elsa's father, Shamus Sullivan, worked as a typist in a lunatic asylum, and her mother, Edith Lanchester, was briefly committed by her brothers to another lunatic asylum for living with Sullivan without benefit of clergy. Good Socialists did not believe in benefit of clergy — nor in the Establishment's registry office — so the pair never did marry. And that, says their daughter, Elsa, is what saved them from divorce.

Lanchester's idealistic Socialist background did not take, to say the least. Her first job was that of Establishment tool. She became a professional divorce correspondent, the girl who is hired to be seen by maids in rooms rented by married men at small seaside hotels. She received 100 pounds per divorce.

"I felt that I was pre-ordained to be better than other people," she writes. "In spite of all the arguments I heard in favor of equality, I didn't want any part of it. I saw alert and clever people leaving others behind and rising to the top... from an early age, I never liked dull people and didn't see how equality would work for long since some people were so bright and others were so dull."

THAT THIS solid sense of identity could emerge in a girl with such a raffish upbringing suggests that there is something to the Calvinist doctrine of election that she supports. Few women could have handled marriage to Charles Lanchester with her unruffled finesse. When he confessed early in their married life to homosexual urges and told her that he had made love with a man on their sofa, she replied, "Fine, but get rid of the sofa." He did.

She tolerated the young men he brought into their lives, raising objections only when she thought that they were taking advantage of her husband. Her explanation: "I wanted people to be decent to Charles."

THERE ARE very few subjects on which Lanchester does not have a strong opinion. A random sampling:

● Male nature: "Most boys relish cruelty (they seem to go to war like ducks to water)."

● Sex education: "No children like the idea applied to their own mother and father."

● Personal freedom: "Being successful and fairly prosperous is the nearest a human can get to it."

● Children: "Once I did hold a baby for a busy mother and I nearly dropped it. I remember that it felt like a live snake in a sack."

Reading Lanchester's memoirs is like sitting at a kitchen table with a nice hot cuppa and getting the whole story from the most talkative woman on the block. It is written in an easy style that makes the reader feel like a participant in a tete a tete accompanied by lots of tea for two.

You can get leprosy from armadillos

I thought only the Herald received strange phone calls.

But I have to confess, the Herald has not received a call asking where to buy a buffalo, as Texas Tech recently did.

Tech apparently gets many weird calls. For example, one man called Tech to get a remedy for insects eating his brick house.

Another caller was graciously turned down after he offered a one-of-a-kind gift to the university. That gift was a 23-year-old toothless mandrill — a large fierce gregarious baboon — who subsisted on peanut butter and other mashed foods.

J.M. Hellman, Texas Tech veterinarian, received a call from a man who wanted his 20 heifers tested for pregnancy. The man informed the vet that, "No, he had not run them with a bull and no, they had not been artificially inseminated."

"When I asked him how he expected to get 20 heifers pregnant when they hadn't been artificially inseminated or run with a bull, he told me he had been feeding them 'Breeder Cubes,' a protein feed supplement, and thought that would get them pregnant," Hellman said.

MANY OF THE VET'S calls come from people wanting to donate a malformed or sick animal to the institution.

"The most recent call was from a man who had a bovine animal with two tails," Hellman said. "The man told me I really should come and take a look at this. One tail, he said, was normal. The other tail the animal used to urinate from."

Although Hellman didn't make the trek to see, he said animal mutations are not unusual. "The animal had probably just developed that way. A part of the anatomy didn't end up in the right place."

Dr. Robert J. Baker, director of the university's Natural Science Center and curator of mammals and living tissues, has received several calls from individuals more than happy to explain their existential views on the origin of life that have nothing to do with God or evolution.

"They have figured these theories out all by themselves and are sure no one has ever thought of them before. Why they are willing to share these rare moments of insight with me, I don't know," Baker said.

Baker once received an irate oration from a woman who told him biologists should never kill anything. "The lives of snakes, plants and insects," she pronounced, "are just as sacred and important as human lives."

"I wanted to ask her if she'd ever taken any antibiotics," Baker said.

ONE OF THE MORE interesting calls to Dr. Fred S. Guthery of Tech's Department of Range and Wildlife Management came from a military base. A certain species of bird was being sucked into jet engines. Guthery informed the caller that he would need more information, other than a sketchy telephone description, to identify the birds. Soon thereafter, he received one feather in an envelope.

He was, in fact, able to identify the birds from that one feather. But he is not always accurate.

"I feel kind of bad about one inquiry. A woman called to find out if she could get leprosy from armadillos," Guthery said. "I told her of course not and then hung up. Later I found out you can."

Happy birthday, Ralph Yarborough

Quite too common a fashion today is eulogizing a person before he dies. A statue is erected before the coffin is built. Call it premature burial.

A birthday was celebrated Wednesday which deserves notice. Ralph Yarborough turned 80. This is not Ralph's obituary; it is a happy birthday card.

Twenty-five years ago Texas sent Ralph to the U.S. Senate. His election presaged a crack in time.

Ralph was born in antebellum East Texas, the son of two old Southern families. He is a lawyer, a UT graduate, a World War II veteran and a Democrat. He inherited all the legacy of the Lone Star lore.

But Sen. Yarborough was different. His supporters called him a progressive. His opponents called him a communist. He was and is a liberal. He was probably the first and certainly the last such an odd duck to speak for Texans on Capitol Hill.

IF OUR SOCIETY has changed for the better in the last 25 years, it is due in large part to two Texans — Ralph Yarborough and Lyndon Johnson. LBJ paraded triumphantly on the ground of his Great Society, but it was Ralph who paved the way through hard-won legislation in the Senate.

When Ralph entered the Senate in 1957, schools were segregated, minorities had little political voice and higher education was the bastion of the wealthy.

Ralph helped change all that. He ranted his Confederate colleagues when he became the only Southern senator to vote for the Civil Rights Act and the Voting Rights Act.

His love for his native state was reflected in his accomplishments. He sponsored legislation creating the Guadalupe Mountains National Park, the Padre Island National Seashore, the Fort Davis National Historical Site and the Big Thicket National Preserve.

His most significant contributions to American society came in education. If you attended a small public school in the 1960s, you can thank Ralph you had the privilege of studying in a chemistry laboratory and reading in a school library. If you went to college with the aid of a federal grant, thank Ralph. As a member of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee and the Education Subcommittee, Ralph engineered — mainly through the National Defense Education Act — what one authority later called "the greatest education explosion in the history of the world."

Ralph's tenure in the Senate lasted 13 years, a miracle by any account. He was elected again and again by a New Deal coalition of small farmers, minorities, union workers and the disenfranchised.

He survived as a political maverick for so long because he championed the little guy, and his constituency recognized the fruits of his battles.

SEN. RALPH HAD GUTS, unafraid to challenge the Establishment either in Washington or Austin. Three times he beat off challenges by the conservative coteries and landed gentry.

But he also was cursed by that fatal flaw characteristic of all tragic political heroes. He was too honest. He had the nerve to oppose the Vietnam War, thus handing the dagger to his assassins. Lloyd Bentsen and his megabucks primary campaign of 1970 did in the outspoken fighter.

The halcyon days — the only days — of Texas liberal politics came to an end with Ralph's defeat.

RALPH STILL PRACTICES law in Austin. He's still punching and kicking and scraping for the little guy. At 80, he hints at running for the Senate again.

He no doubt would fail. The Old Warrior is not past his prime, but the country is. The Reagan-Watt juggernaut threatens to undo all that Ralph and LBJ wrought.

Those were heady days, though. A liberal Texas senator, an enlightened Texas president, a Great Society and a political philosophy claiming that federal government could be an instrument of progress.

Many Texans would rather forget about Ralph. He was a quirk in the system, they say, a mistake, a malfunction in the state's political machine. There's a new order now of entrenched conservatism, limited government and something called supply-side economics. There's no place, if there ever was one, for a Texas liberal or his legend.

Perhaps Ralph's Senate career was an aberration. Maybe with the victories won for voting rights, education and land preservation, there's no commission left for a captain of political and social rights.

No. We need Ralph Yarborough, his myth and Texans like him. Democracy is in a constant struggle for survival. It is not guaranteed. If it does not progress, it recedes.

The nation, the state and Western liberalism owe Ralph an unpaid debt. He opened the doors of government to everyone and bestowed its benefits without prejudice.

MOST IMPORTANT, Ralph showed the world that behind the insurance corporations, the oil conglomerates and the good-ole-boy politics, there lurks a soul of Texas. He has earned the honored title of True Texan. While he is still young and active and grateful, we should build a monument or a statue or a school in his name.

I have written not to bury him, but to praise him.

Happy Birthday, Ralph.

Billy Graham

Abortion is wrong

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why don't you speak out against abortion? Or do you believe it is really morally wrong? — D.S.

DEAR D.S.: I am opposed to abortion and believe it is one of the great sins of our age. The Bible indicates that even an unborn child is a human being and not just a piece of tissue which can be discarded at will. I realize there may be difficult and complex questions — both legal and moral — concerning abortion, and exceptions must be made in those rare instances where abortion is the lesser of two evils (such as when a mother's life is clearly in danger). However, as a general principle I oppose abortion, especially abortion on demand.

The Bible declares, "Do not be deceived: God cannot be mocked. A man reaps what he sows. The one who sows to please his sinful nature, from that nature will reap destruction" (Galatians 6:7-8). That can be true of nations as well.

GOP's political dodges

Hatch-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — In political circles the artful dodging of truth, reality and the obvious sometime take on ridiculous proportions.

Take the latest flap in Dallas over designation of a presidential hotel for the Republican National Convention, which will descend on that conservatively proper city next summer.

According to news reports from there, the Republican National Committee was ready last week to designate one Dallas hotel as the presidential hotel for the convention and another as the convention headquarters.

But a White House aide put out the word to squelch any plans to do this during the committee's Dallas meeting. The reason: Such a selection might be interpreted as a signal that President Reagan has decided to run for re-election.

The president wants to wait until late summer or early fall to announce his plans, and no hints, please.

We might be forgiven for giving a great big yawn to such "tension-building" theatrics. We might even be forgiven for believing that the president and all the president's men aren't exactly shooting straight with us on this whole re-election matter.

President Reagan can smile and say he's still trying to decide whether to seek re-election. Reporters can report that and readers can read that, but no one really believes it.

Reagan either already has decided without question to seek re-election or he is playing a self-serving game that could seriously damage the Republican Party.

Although most political scientists decry the long, drawn-out process that has evolved for the selection of presidential candidates, the truth is that participating in the process is practically mandatory for anyone aspiring to move into the White House.

Hardly anyone is paying much attention to the Democratic presidential field right now. But that doesn't mean that they aren't doing anything.

They are fighting small political battles, winning some valuable contributions or commitments for contributions and finding out their strengths and weaknesses on the campaign trail.

At this time, there is absolutely no one in the Republican Party making any moves on the national political scene — except President Reagan. As an incumbent, Reagan has tremendous publicity tools and political tools at his disposal. He can work with them any time he chooses.

Everyone else in the Republican Party is totally overshadowed by him and will be until it is clear — either through a stepping-down announcement this year, re-election to a second and thus constitutionally mandated final term next year or defeat next year — that a successor is in order.

If Reagan really hasn't decided to seek re-election, he is severely damaging any chance of a Republican candidate to be elected next year. Always the loyal party man, it is unlikely that he would do such a thing.

So, Reagan is pretending he hasn't made up his mind and waiting for the right time to say that he finally has made up his mind. And loyal Republicans are proceeding with plans to re-elect him while pretending to believe he really hasn't made up his mind.

News reports from Dallas say Republican convention planners, with host Texans among them, say privately that they have picked out a presidential hotel, the Loews Anatole, and a headquarters hotel, the Hyatt Regency, but they won't sign any contracts until the White House gives the go-ahead.

We should be permitted one or two great big yawns while awaiting the final word.

Prison should be training school, Burger says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soon-to-be-built American prisons should not be "human warehouses" but "training schools and factories with fences," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger told a group of college graduates Saturday.

"This is not simply a matter of compassion for other human beings. It is a hard matter for our own protection and our own pocketbooks," Burger said in remarks prepared for delivery at Pace University's commencement exercises in New York City.

Copies of the chief justice's speech were made available here.

"With 10 billion dollars of prison construction looming, we are at a crossroad on what kind of prisons were are to have," Burger said. "As we brace ourselves for the tax collector reaching into our pockets for these billions we have a choice: we can continue to have largely human warehouses with little or no educational training ... or we can strike out on a new course." Returning to the theme of his 1982 year-end report last January, Burger called for:

—Conversion of prisons "into places of education and training and into factories and shops for the production of goods."

—Repeat of laws that limit the amount of prison industry production or the markets for such goods.

—Repeat of laws discriminating against the sale or transportation of prison-made goods.

—Leaders of business and organized labor to cooperate in programs to permit wider use of prison production facilities.

"I cannot believe for one moment that this great country of ours, the most voracious consumer society in the world, will not be able to absorb the production of prison inmates

Lebanon sees breakthrough in withdrawal of Syrians

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign Minister Elie Salem of Lebanon predicted Saturday an early meeting between Syria and the United States leading to a possible breakthrough in efforts to obtain the withdrawal of Syrian and other foreign troops from Lebanon.

"I believe we should be seeing soon a discourse taking place between the Lebanese and the Syrians, the Americans and the Syrians, and I don't believe there are any basic problems in this regard," Salem said.

The Lebanese foreign minister, emerging from a 90-minute meeting with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, said a breakthrough is near in the stalemate caused by Syria's dissatisfaction over the troop withdrawal agreement between Lebanon and Israel. "We are intensifying the contacts with all the parties that are concerned," Salem said. "... I think that with the proper effort in the coming few weeks, we will make the necessary breakthroughs and Lebanon will get on the right course."

Syria so far has refused to meet U.S. representatives to talk about withdrawal. Asked by reporters if his optimism was based more on hope than reality, Salem it was underpinned by the common interests of Lebanon, Syria and the Arab world.

"Therefore when we speak about breakthroughs we are talking about facts and we are talking about policies that are emerging from facts, and not from dreams," he said.

Mexican convicts captured

Big Spring (Texas) Herald, Sunday, June 12, 1983, 7A

RIO GRANDE CITY, Texas (AP) — A two-nation police dragnet resulted in the capture of three escaped Mexican convicts charged with murder, but four men who escaped with them remained at large along the Rio Grande, authorities said Saturday.

The seven broke out of jail in Ciudad Miguel Aleman, Mexico, just across the border, by overpowering a guard in the prison workyard Wednesday and fleeing with the guard's loaded rifle. Authorities in the Mexican state of Tamaulipas said three of the escapees were charged in the murder of two federal policemen.

"They are very, very dangerous men," said Starr County Sheriff Eugenio Falcon, who helped cordon off the Texas side of the border.

Two of the fugitives — Luis Cavazos, 28, and Ignacio Torres, 24 — stumbled into a Mexican city police ambush Friday as they tried to return to Mexico, their flight into the United States thwarted by a squad of officers supported by a police helicopter.

"The police would have killed them but they offered no resistance," said Falcon.

A third escapee, Elberto Salazar Tellez, was arrested later that day as he sat, exhausted, on a park bench in Zapata, Texas, 50 miles away.

"They were so tired they could hardly walk," Falcon said of the three. "They had no shoes."

Three other fugitives were sought in South Texas while a fourth was believed to have fled deeper into Mexico.

Cavazos, known as "The Butcher," and Torres, nicknamed "The Snake," hid for two nights in the thick underbrush of an island in the middle of the Rio Grande, waiting for a chance to flee into Texas, Falcon said.

Six injured in plane fire

CHICAGO (AP) — An engine of a United Airlines 727 caught fire Saturday as the jet was taking off from O'Hare International Airport, forcing the evacuation of 159 people and slightly injuring six, police said.

The injuries occurred as passengers were sliding down emergency ramps from the jet, Flight 200 from Chicago to Tampa, Fla., police officer Jerome Mallon said. The plane carried a crew of eight and 151 passengers.

The first sign of trouble was a loud "pop" as the plane was taxiing down the runway and began to accelerate, said one passenger, Jim Yunker of Chicago. The plane was never in the air.

"The pilot hit the brakes and taxied to an adjacent runway," Yunker said. "One of the pilots or engineers ran to the back of the plane and announced that everyone was to be evacuated." "Everyone started to get off, and that's when the people got hurt," said Yunker, 36. "It was a very orderly evacuation. Everyone kept their heads." Mallon said the fire in the left engine began about 5:30 p.m.

"The engine blew when the pilot accelerated," Mallon said.

Texxas Jam fans, stars ready for rock

T-minus six days and counting. The Sixth Annual Texxas World Music Festival is less than a week away and Sammy Hagar, the Red Rocker, is as excited about playing the Cotton Bowl as rock fans are hearing the Texas favorite.

"I always get nervous before doing big shows like the Texxas Jam," Hagar reports. "I look forward to it and get a lot of anxieties whether I'm the opening act or the co-headliner. It feels the same to me...it feels exciting."

Hagar first appeared at the Jam in 1979 as an opening act. He's been back every time since, progressively moving up on the lists of grouping rocking 60-80,000 fans each summer.

The native of Fontana, Calif., is sharing top billing this year with Styx. Preceding their evening performances are sets by Uriah Heep, Ted Nugent and Triumph.

Hagar says he's got some tricks up his sleeve for his fourth Jam show. "For just one show, I'm spending $30,000 on effects above and beyond what Styx will have there for me to use. I mean, it's their production...their sound and lights. And I get to use all that plus $30,000 worth of my own special efforts. So I'm going to do some pretty spectacular things."

Styx lead guitarist Tommy Shaw and Hagar have been challenging each other for this show. "I'm going to do the best possible show I can do," Hagar promises. "I intentionally took my position on the show because I think it's a better position. The sun is just gonna go down when I hit the stage and I think that's the optimum time to perform on a show like the Texxas Jam."

Hagar is coming off two highly successful albums, Standing Hampton and Three Lock Box. Not traditionally a top 40 artist, the recent trend in music has allowed the singles "A Piece of My Heart" (the remake of the Janis Joplin classic) and "Your Love Is Driving My Crazy" to reach top 10 status.

Tickets are hot items at music stores. In the Permian Basin, shop at Hastings Books and Records in Abilene, Lubbock and San Angelo or Horizon Records and Tapes in Midland and Odessa. Tickets are $18.50 each.

Styx has evolved in its long history, finally hitting consistent top 40 standing with the addition of Shaw to the group. The Chicago-based fivesome had two hits, "Lady" and "Lorelei," reach the top 10 before their Grand Illusion album marked their arrival as one of rock-pop music's most popular bands.

"Come Sail Away" and "Fooling Yourself" soared into the top five from the Illusion work. Next came Pieces of Eight which produced "Renegade," "Blue Collar Man" and "Sing for the Day."

Styx transformed their music on their next project, Cornerstone. The ballad "Babe" became the group's biggest hit to date with "Why Me" also making the charts. Two years ago came Paradise Theatre, the group's most ambitious thematic work, which spawned the hits "The Best of Times" and "Too Much Time on My Hands."

Now selling towards platinum status is Kilory was Here, a multi-dimensional album. The work includes comments on drugs, rock-n-roll and kids, telling its story through a futuristic time when rock music has been banned for its supposed "improper" influence.

The single "Mr. Roboto" has already become one of the group's biggest hits while "Don't Let It End" is currently a top 10 smash.

But before Styx and Hagar take the stage, rock fans will get a dose of heavy metal from the Heep, Nugent and Triumph.

Triumph is a hot touring act right now, drawing large crowds for its "Never Surrender" tour. Triumph group members say more effort has been put into its latest work.

Fans, however, will want to see what the group does on stage. "The basics we built the band on won't change," responds Rik Emmett. "The live show made us and sustains us. The touring show is what makes you a real live band and Triumph is as conscientious in its stage production as it is in its album recording."

Not much has to be said about Nugent, the Detroit-born guitarist extraordinaire. Originally with the Lourds and the Amboy Dukes, Nugent has stepped out on his own to become a legend among the heavy metal set.

Uriah Heep has formed and reformed through the years and is attempting another surge with their latest work, Head First.

New members of the group are Peter Goalby, formerly of Trapeze, and John Sinclair who has played background keyboards for such groups as Jefferson Starship, the Babys and Eddie Monev.

Jammin' Tips for a safe, cool concert

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

Rockers at the Sixth Annual Texxas World Music Festival may get a break this year. It won't come in the price of tickets but perhaps in lower than usual temperatures.

The first Jam, which featured Aerosmith and Ted Nugent, brought national attention when temperatures on the floor of the Cotton Bowl soared past 110 degrees. Hoses — the same kind used by fire departments — were used to spray down the crowd.

June temperatures have been down this summer as cooler-than-usual weather and rain has been the rule. This may save the crowd from getting its usual lobster-like sunburn.

The show starts at 2 p.m. but gates OPEN at 8 a.m. This is a big change, three hours earlier than past concerts. If you want a good seat or up front on the floor, get there early. Some die-hards even arrive the night before and camp out.

The music schedule reads: Uriah Heep — 2 p.m. (45-min. set change); Ted Nugent — 3:35 p.m. (50-min. set change); Triumph — 5:25 p.m. (55-min. set change); Sammy Hagar — 7:30 p.m. (60-min. set change); Styx — 10:15 p.m.

Remember, that's just a tentative schedule, subject to all sorts of changes.

The same rules as in past concert events at the Cotton Bowl hold true this time around also.

For your health, make sure you're prepared for an all-day outdoors show. Get a good night's rest, eat a good meal before you go and wear the right clothes. Even if you want to sunbathe while the show goes on, bring a hat or shirt to cover up.

The Jam seldom has any problems other than treating people who get over-exposed to the elements. Use your head.

The biggest hassle is getting inside. Traffic backs up on the Dallas freeways quickly so get an early start. Get a parking place within the bounds of the Cotton Bowl; don't take a chance on Joe Blow's frontyard parking lot.

Be prepared to stand in line. Because they search your person for contraband, the lines move slowly. Don't expect to drive up, park and take a seat like you can at the movies in Big Spring.

I don't like to be searched just like the next guy but it's a way of life at outdoor concerts. Someone is always trying to sneak something in so concert personnel have to frisk everyone. Don't bring containers, cameras, banners and things to the show; they won't let you in with them.

Once inside, try to stay put. A trip to the restroom is like trying to cross a street in Manhattan at rush hour. And I repeat, eat well before the show. Food and drink prices are pretty high but at least keep liquids in your body to prevent dehydration.

Medical personnel are inside to help you out if you need them.

One final word of advice. Have a good time but make sure your fun doesn't interfere with those around you. The best thing about the Jams is everyone getting along and enjoying the music. Don't be the one who spoils a good time.

Market rally aids colleges

By The Associated Press
America's colleges and universities have quietly made a fortune this year. Thanks to the stock market rally that started last August, the values of many college endowments are up sharply — by 30, 40, and 50 percent over last year.

Among the more striking examples: Yale University's endowment has risen in value from $740 million to $1.05 billion. Princeton University's portfolio went from $886 million to $1.26 billion. The University of Texas System increased from $1.47 billion to $2.07 billion.

Harvard University's endowment is up $700 million in value since last year, and is now worth $2.4 billion.

The Dow Jones industrial average has zoomed from a two-year low of 776.92 last Aug. 12 to a record 1,232.59 on May 6, before sliding back below 1,200.

But for college endowments, the benefits from the rally are mostly on paper, not in hard cash.

At Stanford, for instance, the value of the endowment increased 25 percent, from $681 million to $850 million. But cash dividends from the endowment will increase by just 6 percent next year, to about $66 million.

The big gains in endowment values — being realized by public and private schools alike — contrast sharply with a year ago, when the stock market slumped and the value of the average endowment lost about 1 percent, according to an annual survey by the National Association of College and University Business Officers.

Less clear is whether the gains will eventually spell relief for students whose tuitions are going up an average of 10 percent or more this fall, or for faculty members whose salaries have often trailed the inflation rate over the last decade.

Officials at most schools insist that endowments can't be counted on in the short run to ease the strain on student budgets — or on college budgets, for that matter. A rule-of-thumb most schools seem to observe is that endowments contribute roughly 5 percent of their average market value over a number of years toward the college's operating budget.

The aim is to keep such payouts relatively consistent each year despite stock market ups and downs, and that's why even a near-record stock market boom like this year's doesn't mean a big change in the amount of cash available for colleges.

"Very healthy investment returns over time will help keep tuition rates down," said Anthony D. Knerr, executive vice president for finance and treasurer of Columbia University, where endowment value rose 23 percent to $950 million, but where tuitions are going up 13.5 percent this fall.

This year's endowment gains, while dazzling, can come and go with the fortunes of the stock market. What counts in hard, spendable dollars, college finance officials say, is the interest and dividend income from the invested endowment funds — and that income will only rise if the economy improves and corporations boost their payouts to shareholders.

"What counts is the long run," said William Reed, vice president and treasurer of Williams College, in Williamstown, Mass., a small but wealthy school whose endowment has risen 39 percent to $160 million since last summer. "If this has a long-term effect on interest and dividends, that's when we'll profit," said Jesse Morgan, vice president and treasurer of Rollins College, a small liberal arts college in Winter Park, Fla., whose endowment soared 55 percent since the August rally to $16 million.

"The key to the future," said Tom O'Brien, financial vice president of Harvard, "is how inflation moves in relation to our investment performance." The minimum goal for an endowment fund, he explained, is to stay a step ahead of inflation. When it doesn't, as was the case at most colleges for much of the last decade, endowment money is less available to provide scholarships or endowed faculty chairs.

Other factors keep schools from dipping freely into endowment funds to ease tuition rates. Endowments, especially at public universities, consist largely of gifts with strings attached.

Man loses legs to thieves again

DETROIT (AP) — A man disabled by a stroke has lost tricycles he uses as his "legs" to thieves six times in six years.

Joe Dewaele, 62, uses a tricycle to scavenge his east side neighborhood for returnable bottles and salable junk. His latest tricycle — built by neighbors — was taken last Friday.

Dewaele suffered a stroke 23 years ago that makes it difficult for him to speak or walk, his wife Angeline said Thursday. Mrs. Dewaele also suffers from arthritis and other ailments, including kidney disease that requires her to undergo dialysis three times weekly.

"I paid a couple of kids to wander the neighborhood" to find it, said shopkeeper Jim Monnig, whose wife refers to Dewaele's tricycles as his "legs."

"Just about anything will get stolen that you don't lock down," Monnig said.

The unlocked cycle was taken from the Dewaeles' front porch. Dewaele is unable to use his hands for complicated tasks such as operating locks.

The Dewaeles live on Social Security, food stamps and the money Dewaele brought in from his scavenging. They have no money for another tricycle, Mrs. Dewaele said.

"Even the used ones are $200," she said.

"It's a shame people would stoop that low, putting a crippled man out of commission," neighbor Frank Trune said. "And I'd love to catch them."

Have a question? Leave word in suggestion box

By JUDITH GRAY
 County Librarian

The library has a suggestion box for our patrons to make suggestions for book or material purchases as well as new or extended programs and services. It is also used to make complaints and compliments. Most of what we find in the suggestion box is unsigned. There are also anonymous notes left in books, in the book drop, or left at the desk.

I feel that it is a pity when these are unsigned because there is no means of follow-up. Sometimes this is necessary for background on why the person is complaining or some other kind of specific information that would help.

When someone leaves an anonymous note criticizing or generally derogatory in tone, it indicates that they don't care about receiving an answer to their complaint. Facts or reasons are not wanted. Possibly they don't really care whether their complaint or criticism has a positive result. They just "hit and run," leaving a little negativism behind them. How can the library improve and correct whatever is bothering the person if their gripe is too general and cannot be pinpointed? If the only effect that is desired is the bad taste in the mouth that negativism leaves, then they might have achieved it and the result is often negative also.

For example, the complaint is about a rule. Perhaps if the person understood why the rule was established, there might be no reason to complain. Usually a rule develops out of a need to protect the library, the user, and the taxpayer, because a few people abuse the privilege of library service. Sometimes a little personal inconvenience is acceptable when it is know that the rule protects that privilege.

One recent complaint about holiday closings was in an unsigned note left in the book drop. If I could talk to them personally, I would point out the following:

- Until April 11, 1983, the "weekend" closing days were Sunday and Monday.
- Many holidays fall on Monday, so the library would take those on Saturday and its normal closed day on Monday.
- Holidays that fell on Thursday and/or Friday were taken as scheduled and the library staff would work on the preceding Monday in order to have the Saturday as part of the holiday (that way there was no loss of public hours).
- The commissioners court sets the holidays for the county employees.
- Since April 17, the library has been open on Mondays, which means that half of the full-time staff works on Saturdays (with Sunday-Monday off), the other half works on Mondays (with Saturday-Sunday off).

When a holiday occurs on Monday, such as Memorial Day or the 4th of July, in order to give both crews equal opportunity, the library will be closed on the Saturday preceding. (A list of holiday closings is posted on the library bulletin board for 1983.)

The County fiscal year (FY) runs from October 1-September 30. In FY81/82, the library was open to the public approximately 240.5 days at 2164 hours. It was closed approximately 1.5 days due to bad weather (snow/ice), ten days for a complete inventory of the collection (the last one three years before), 7 holidays (14 actual days) and 99 Sundays and Mondays (our "weekends").

Compare that with FY82/83 during which we will have been open 271 days to the public at 2433 hours of service. It will have been closed for six hours so far to bad weather 8 holidays (15 actual days), 55 Sundays and Mondays from 10/4/11 and 24 Sundays only from 4/17-9/25.

Even an unsigned note that is complimentary and positive makes it impossible to say thank you to the person. It's great to receive pats on the back and to know the strong points of the collection, programs, or services.

However, the person who offers criticism, constructive and positive criticism does something equally invaluable, because it points out the weak places for improvement. As your librarian, my goal for the Howard County Library is for it to be the BEST it can be within the limitations of budget and size of staff or building. Those necessarily place constraints on what can be done now or planned to do. Sometimes the element of time enters in as well and some improvements only come after waiting. That goal of mine is always just out of reach and always should be. With the support and cooperation of the community, staff, and county government we will always strive toward that goal of BEST.

So next time you have a gripe, or a pat on the back, write it down, sign your name and address, and place it in the suggestion box or give to me directly.

Reagan defends Watt

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan defended his environmental record and his interior secretary today, saying that despite allegations to the contrary, "Our country remains America the beautiful."

In his weekly radio broadcast, the president complained that both he and Interior Secretary James Watt were being unfairly criticized on environmental matters.

Speaking from the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., Reagan said it was "time to clear the air and straighten the record ... how about five minutes of the truth?"

The president said Watt was the "prime target for those who claim this administration is out to level the forests."

Reagan said a recent "firestorm" about whether more land should be designated as wilderness areas, to be totally preserved in its natural state, was unfair since most of the 174 million acres under study had been turned down by previous administrations.

"Do you recall hearing one word about this or any attack made on anybody at the time?" Reagan asked. "I don't."

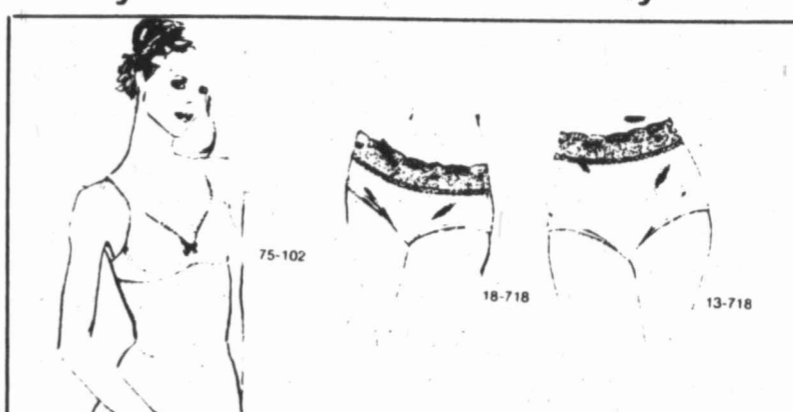

Despite the criticism of his policies, Reagan said, the country was "growing more healthy and more beautiful every year."

Giving the Democratic response, Rep. Barbara Kennelly of Connecticut complained about the Interior Department's coal-leasing program.

Mrs. Kennelly said the General Accounting Office believes that the American taxpayer has already lost over $100 million in one coal leasing deal.

"Just as these coal leases are unfair to the American people, so are the president's tax policies," she said.

A ballpark bonanza

The best-kept sports secret in the Permian Basin is the Midland Cubs.

Few things are better to do on a lazy summer night than take a seat at the ballpark, order up a hot dog and cold brew and watch nine innings of baseball. And the place to cure baseball-itis is located in northeast Midland.

Serious baseball fans, stuck out here in the Texas tundra, often scratch their ballcaps trying to plan a trip to Arlington to catch the Rangers. A lot closer and just as fun is the 40-minute trip to a Cubs Class AA minor league game.

For some reason, actually for many good reasons, I waited until Friday night before making my first trip to a Cubs game. Upon slipping through the turnstile, you know a good time is guaranteed when the boss, general manager Bill Schammel, wanders through the crowd making sure everyone has on their game-faces.

He even scolds those of us dumb enough to wear Yankees or A's caps through the gate, instead of some form or fashion of Cubs gear.

Friday night was 2-for-1 night at the beer stands (not necessarily my reason for making the trip). Other promotions include Aug. 15 when the famed San Diego Chicken struts and clucks his stuff in the stadium, Pack the Park night and, of course, give-away (bats, visors, batt girls) nights.

Throughout the evening there are contests, ranging from guessing the night's attendance to answering a trivia question. Almost 1,700 showed up at the ballpark Friday — that's three-quarters full — while we baseball dummies learned that Hoyt Wilhelm appeared in more games than any other pitcher.

I really didn't believe it until I looked it up and sure enough, Wilhelm appeared in 1,070 games during his career. I guess the guys in the pressbox knew what they were talking about.

Every seat is a good seat and every seat is a cheapie. General admission is $2.50...about half the price of a movie these days. Bring a cushion, though; nine innings is a long time to park one's rear end on the pine.

Every ballpark has its own atmosphere and this one's specialty is music. Before the game, between innings and when the opposing team is making a pitching change, you can hear anything from Men at Work to Dean Martin, with a little Tijuana Brass thrown in for good measure.

My only warning about going to a M-Cubs game is putting up with pro-Cubs propaganda. I didn't cheer the fact the Cubs shut out the Cardinals Friday. There aren't too many Chicago fans in this area but somehow you leave the ballpark more interested in the team that plays Wrigley Field than when you first arrived.

And why not? The Cubs are a club try try hard to like...remember the team that folded under the Miracle Mets of '69? Ron Santo, Randy Hundley, Glenn Beckert, Don Kessinger, Ken Holtzman, Fergie Jenkins...it's easy to pull for a team that stills plays its home games in the daytime when baseball should be played.

The quality of baseball was good. And there were a few laughs too. Cubs leadoff batter Rick Baker was hit in the rump by the Beaumont pitcher Jim Leopold on a pick-off play at second. The next pitch was fouled off, struck a light pole and hit Baker again.

The drawing card of minor ball is the chance of seeing a rising star. Bruce Sutter, the ace reliever of the St. Louis Cardinals and formerly of the Cubs, played in Midland.

A note for you guys out there. Take a female; they are as entertaining as the game. Gayle — city editor Keith Briscoe's baseball-minded wife — joined our foursome and tried to convince us all evening her brother, a second baseman, held his college's record for more foul balls hit in a season.

That's baseball for you. And there's plenty of baseball waiting at a Cubs game. Midland is playing a 12-game homestand right now...call the club's office at 683-4251 for schedules, special promotional nights and other information.

Cubs baseball is too good of a deal to remain this good of a secret.

Denver's Choate strikes it rich in pro football's newest league

By GREG JAKLEWICZ
Sports Editor

Putt Choate is experiencing a Rocky Mountain high.

The former Coahoma High standout and all-American at Southern Methodist has taken up residence in Mile High Stadium shaking the USFL with thunderous tackles as linebacker for the Denver Gold.

Last summer, Choate was operating health clubs in Midland and Odessa, pondering a return to football with a semi-pro team based in Big Spring. A year later he is the leading tackler for the defensively-minded Gold and hoping to lead his team into the league's first playoff season.

"It's been a really good year for me," Choate said this week in a telephone interview with the Herald. "I think I have something like 155 tackles and leading the team. That's something to be happy with."

Denver is currently locked in a battle for the West Division lead with the Los Angeles Express and Oakland Invaders. The Gold rushes into Oakland Monday night for a key divisional game and Choate says, "If we can win our last four games, we'll be in the playoffs."

The Gold is riding a two-game winning streak since former Dallas Cowboys and Denver Broncos quarterback Craig Morton replaced Red Miller as head coach. No matter which man is heading up the program, Choate has performed on a grade A level from the start.

"I pretty well jumped to the front quickly," the ex-Bulldog recalls, "and after the first week of camp, I was first string. I've been there ever since."

Choate had to go through a tryout camp since he was neither coming out of college nor switching from the NFL. "Most of the guys came right out of college or from the NFL...I was one of the few who had been out of football," he says.

He credits his semi-pro play for getting him physically and mentally ready for a chance with the Gold. "Physically, the level of play (at the semi-pro level) is no where near what it is here but I knew I was in shape. I was in good or better shape than any time in my life."

"Mentally, if I go into a place with an even chance, I feel I can rise to the top," he said.

When he saw the USFL was developing into a solid organization, he sent out letters to member teams. Denver had a try-out and since it was closest to Texas, he ventured northwest to test his skills. "The coaches had a little idea of what you could do," he said of the tryout, "but it wasn't like the NFL where you're battling an eight-year veteran. I went into the camp, not just wanting to make the team, but wanting to start."

Fifty linebackers showed up at the try-out and the top four were asked to come to training camp. Putt Choate was one of those. "I ended up being the only one who made the team from those four," he added.

Since he made the team, his presence has been felt around the league. "They don't keep league stats on tackles, but I think I'm one of the leaders," Choate says. But while his hits are tough on ballcarriers, he's still getting used to getting hit back.

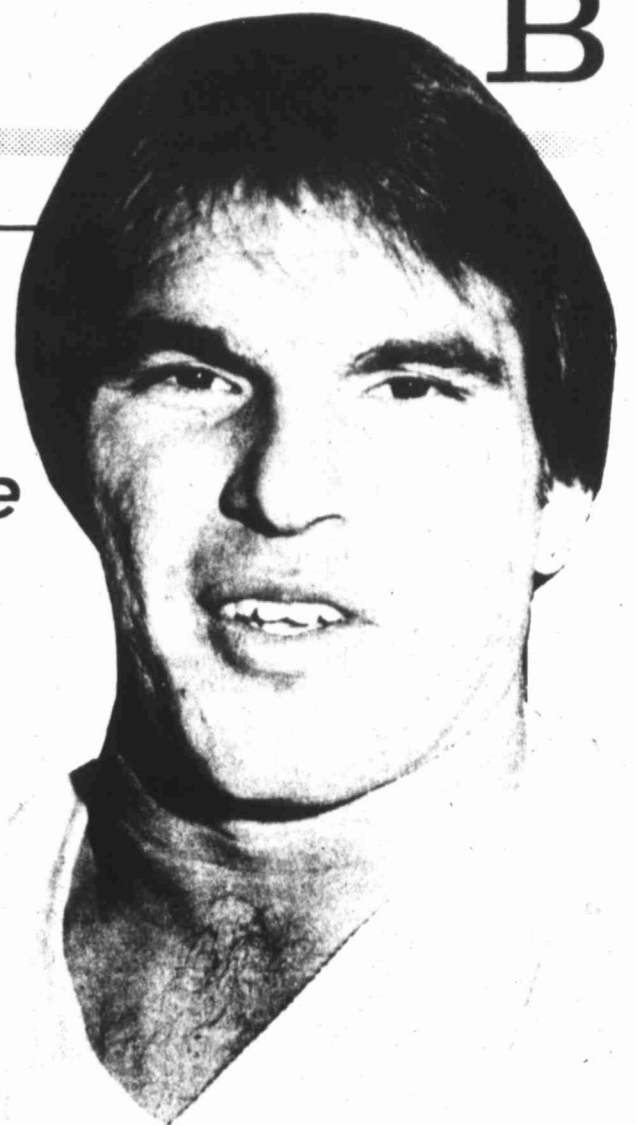

The Gold takes four days to prepare for a game, combining both meetings and workouts for about seven hours of preparation. Later portions of the week are polishing sessions for special teams and the offense. "The hardest thing," he says, "is playing those Monday-Friday games. There's no time to recover from the Monday game. Normally it takes me three days to get over my soreness. When you play teams like Birmingham, you beat each other to death."

One question facing the USFL was playing in the heat of the summer. So far, Choate says warm weather hasn't had too much effect on the league. "Today it's about 75 here," he reported Wednesday. "We played in the cold weather earlier...there's really no difference. The cold weather made it easier to get into shape but now that's it warmers, you have to work harder to maintain it."

He recalled a game against TCU in college when the temperature was 112 degrees one September Saturday. That translated to 142 degrees on the field, Choate remembers. "I lost 25 pounds that day. That's tough on you."

The fledgling USFL gave Choate the chance to return to pro football. After two all-Southwest Conference selections and all-American recognition his senior year at SMU, he was drafted by the Atlanta Falcons. A broken leg derailed his rookie year and he tried his luck, unsuccessfully, with the Houston Oilers.

It was back to West Texas where he established "Putt's Olympic Gym" locations in the Permian Basin. When he wasn't pumping iron and becoming one of the top powerlifters across the nation, he was working part-time for an oil company.

Last fall, the West Texas Stockmen were organizing in Big Spring but the operation fell through. Local oilman Grady Cunningham liked the idea nonetheless and formed the Cunningham Oilers, naming Choate general manager.

The Oilers played just a four-game schedule in the late fall but it gave Choate the chance to get back into shape and thinking football. Now he's made the move from obscurity to popularity.

"For me, things have gone excellent," he says. "In the Denver area, I am more well known than I ever was in Midland and Odessa. We get tremendous media coverage all over the state. We're hot. There's no major league baseball or anything to compete with."

"I went to buy a house the other day," he said, "and shook hands with the man and told him my name was Putt Choate. He said 'You play for the Gold.' We're pretty popular up here."

Now all that's left is making the playoffs. Better yet would be making the league championship game which will be played in Mile High Stadium.

Every seat is a good seat and every seat is a cheapie. General admission is $2.50...about half the price of a movie these days. Bring a cushion, though; nine innings is a long time to park one's rear end on the pine.

Texas nips Tide, wins NCAA title

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — It came down to pitching and hitting. Texas had the pitchers and Alabama had the hitters, most of the time.

In the end, it was the Texas pitching and some timely hitting that gave the Longhorns an undefeated sweep in the College World Series and a fourth national baseball title with a 4-3 victory over Alabama Saturday night.

"Timely hitting and pitching...that's what did it for us," said Longhorn shortstop Mike Brumley, who scored the winning run. "That's what has done it for us all year. We've got to feel great, we won it. We got great pitching when we needed it."

Texas entered the CWS with four 11-game winners and a bullpen filled with starters awaiting their turn, including Roger Clemens, 13-5. He held Alabama to seven hits and fanned nine Tide batters.

Alabama entered the series with a .340 batting average, the highest of any team here. David Magadan, college baseball's leading hitter, led the Tide hitting attack coming into the series with a .323.

"I thought we had a very, very good shot at beating Texas, but their pitching was awfully tough and they did a good job again tonight," said Alabama Coach Barry Shollenberger. "(Roger) Clemens came in and went the distance, giving us only three runs and getting us out at the most crucial times."

Designated-hitter Kirk Killingsworth's triple off the left-centerfield fence in the seventh inning scored Brumley and the Longhorns were on their way.

Texas, 66-14, erased a 2-0 deficit in the tenth inning when Killingsworth and Tolentino singled and Jeff Hearnon was hit by a pitch to load the bases.

Alabama starter Rick Browne, 12-1, walked Steve Labay to force home Killingsworth. Tolentino then scored when Johnny Sutton grounded into a fielder's choice.

Alabama, 46-11, scored one run in the bottom of the ninth, when David Magadan, who went 11-for-20 in the series and tied a CWS record for most hits in a single game, 5, and for most consecutive hits, 8, hit a ground rule double. He scored on a single by Alan Stallings, but Texas

NCAA World Series

starter Roger Clemens, 13-5, got Fermin Lake to fly out to center to end the game.

The Crimson Tide struck for a run in the third and went up 2-0 in the fifth on Dee Smithey's homer.

It was the third consecutive trip here for Texas, which has played in this double-elimination tourney a total of 22 times, and won national championships in 1975, 1950 and 1949.

Alabama had been here only once before and that was in 1950 when the CWS found its permanent home here 33 years ago.

Texas became the 10th team to go undefeated in series play. The champions defeated James Madison, 12-0, Oklahoma State, 6-5 in 11 innings, and Michigan, 4-2. Alabama had to bounce back with a 6-0 victory over Arizona State Friday night to remain in the tourney after a loss to Texas the night before.

Wilkins, Basden qualify for state golf tourney

Two Big Spring golfers have qualified for the Texas State Amateur Golf Tournament to be played in Abilene June 16-19.

Stockbroker Dan Wilkins and former Big Spring High golfer John Basden have qualified for the state event which will be played over the Fairway Oaks golf course, site of the annual LaJet Classic.

Wilkins qualified in Odessa in late April while Basden, a student at Texas Tech, produced his qualifying score in Lubbock.

Competing against approximately 25 other golfers on blustery spring day, Wilkins fired a 78 in winds of "30 mph." The former Westminster, Mo., College golfer tied for second low score of the day. A 77 was the best score in the West Texas windstorm.

To compete in a regional qualifying tournament, a golfer must first send out an application through his local pro. Wilkins says. He must have a low handicap and then finish among the top four in the regional qualifying tournament.

A resident of Texas and Big Spring for 16 years, Wilkins won a state sand greens tournament in Missouri as a youth and played in the Missouri state amateur tournament on several occasions. This was his first attempt at the Texas tournament.

In college, he led Westminster (Fulton, Mo.) to national recognition, finishing as the fourth medalist in the 1961 NIAA national tournament. Since he's been in Big Spring, Wilkins has won the Country Club championship three times.

"I'm playing fair," he said of his current play. "I'm having a little trouble with my putting but I'm playing well."

Wilkins and Basden, an all-district golfer at BSHS his junior year, join the list of Big Spring golfers having qualified for the state tournament. Others include Mike Weaver and Don Osborne.

Ballesteros birdies way past Zoeller, into third round lead

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Seve Ballesteros, the current Masters champion, struggled to a 1-under-par 70 as he pulled one stroke ahead of Fuzzy Zoeller in Saturday's third round of the $450,000 Manufacturers Hanover-Westchester Classic.

Ballesteros, making his first American appearance since his triumph in Augusta, Ga. in April, completed three trips over the 6,687-yard Westchester Country Club course in 206, seven shots under par.

Zoeller, who started the third round tied for the lead with Ballesteros, could do no better than par 71 on the hilly course in suburban New York for a 54-hole total of 207.

During most of the hot, muggy afternoon, it appeared to be a two-man battle, with the advantage shifting on almost every hole. Zoeller led on two occasions. At four different times, they were tied. Ballesteros led five times.

Neither played particularly well over the finishing holes, however, opening the door to potential challenges from Roger Maltbie and Lee Elder, who finished at 208, only two shots out of the lead going into Sunday's final round of the chase for the $81,000 first prize. Elder matched the best round of the tournament with a 65. Maltbie shot 70. "I'm pleased with the way I'm playing," said Elder, a former winner of this title. "I've won about $46,000 for the year, so my exemption is set for next year. Now it's time to think about winning a tournament, something I haven't done since 1978. That's what I'll be trying to do tomorrow. I'll use the driver more. I'll go for the pins. I'll take some chances." Mike Reid, with a 67, was at 209. Craig Stadler, a single stroke off the lead at the tournament's halfway point, had to work hard for a 73 that left him tied at 210 with Victor Regalado. Regalado closed up with a 69.

Westchester Classic

The group at 211 included Hale Irwin, Curtis Strange, Andy Bean, Mark McCumber, Chip Beck and Fred Couples, a winner last week in the Kemper.

Irwin had a third-round 65. Strange and Bean shot 70s. McCumber, Beck and Couples shot 71.

Bob Gilder, the defending titleholder, had a 72 and was at 215. That's 23 strokes lower than his 54-hole total last year, when he matched an all-time Tour record. Zoeller and Ballesteros were tied after 14 holes of play. Zoeller, still troubled by "a little soreness, a little stiffness" in his back, drove into the trees on the 15th, hit a limb coming out and eventually made a double bogey.

But he lost only one stroke to Ballesteros, who missed the green and bogeyed. It was the sixth consecutive hole he'd played without a par.

Haynie zips past Reinhardt in LPGA

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Sandra Haynie surged past faltering non-winner Alexandra Reinhardt with a 5-under-par 67 for the third-round lead Saturday in the LPGA Championship, the second of four annual women's golfing majors.

The 40-year-old Haynie, whose 42 professional victories include two titles in this tournament, made up six shots on 36-hole leader Reinhardt in nine holes. Her 54-hole total of 206 put her 10 strokes below par at the Nicklaus Sports Center, good for a four-shot lead over Reinhardt.

Reinhardt, following a tournament-record midway total of 135, struggled from the start on Saturday. Successive bogeys on the sixth and seventh holes dropped cost her the top spot.

Reinhardt, after 12 birdies in the first two rounds, mustered only two birds on the warm, muggy day and scrambled to a 3-over 75. She had a total of 210 going into Sunday's final round for the first prize of $30,000.

LPGA Championship

Haynie, winner of the 1965 and 1974 LPGA Championship, played near-flawless golf. She avoided any bogeys and birdied the fourth, seventh, 10th 14th and 18th holes.

A two-shot swing on the 349-yard, par-4 seventh created a tie between the two leaders.

At seven, Haynie holed a 12-foot downhill putt for a birdie. Reinhardt drove into trees in the right rough, chipped short of the green and eventually needed a five-foot putt to salvage a bogey.

Haynie, one of only 10 members of the LPGA Hall of Fame, assumed sole control of the lead with her five-foot birdie putt on the 10th hole.

However, Reinhardt created a tie for the lead again when she birdied No. 11. It was short lived. She dropped from the top spot for good with bogeys on the 12th and 13th holes.

JoAnne Carner, another Hall of Famer with 37 career victories; Hollis Stacy, two-time U.S. Open champion; and Vicki Tabor were deadlocked for third place, all at 212.

Carner, searching for her first victory in this 29-year-old event, posted a 70, Tabor a 71 and Stacy, 73. Patty Sheehan, Debbie Massey and Lauren Howe were next at 213, seven shots in arrears.

Jan Stephenson appeared out of the running for her second consecutive title over this 6,277-yard layout Jack Nicklaus created and built. Stephenson had 74 for 215.

Miller leads by a shot

CLEVELAND (AP) — $40,000 of the $250,000 Miller Barber shot a 70 Saturday for a three-round, 6-under-par total of 210 and a 1-stroke lead over Gene Littler in the Senior Tournament Players Championship at Canterbury Golf Club here.

Jefferson, Snyder claim state titles

AUSTIN (AP) — The entire Port Arthur Jefferson squad ran from the dugout all the way to center field to swarm Paddy Doyle after he had squeezed a fly ball for the final out in Jefferson's Class 5A championship baseball victory over Corpus Christi Moody. Jefferson with a 6-1 victory Friday night, and four other schoolboy baseball teams captured their first state titles at the 1983 tournament.

Snyder finally grabbed a title in its sixth tournament appearance by blasting DeSoto for eight runs in the sixth inning and a 13-4 victory in 4A.

Snyder trailed 4-3 but went ahead 5-4 in the fifth on Britt Vincent's blow single and throwing error by Craig Gummelt, who had just moved from the pitching mound to right field. The Tigers ace the game the next inning with eight runs on three hits as relievers Steve Foster and Brad Weber walked five. Charles Bollinger, 6-1, was the winner.

Kenedy came from behind for the second time in two games to edge La Grange 3-2 for the 3A championship.

Pollok Central won the 2A championship by beating Gladewater Union Grove 9-1 on a two-hitter by sophomore Adrian Neal.

Valley Mills routed Cayuga 12-0 for the Class A title in a game that was halted by the 10-run rule after five innings.

Connors, McEnroe meeting in finals

LONDON (AP) — Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe each scored semifinal victories Saturday and will play for the championship in the $203,000 Stella Artois tennis tournament, their last grass-court event before Wimbledon.

The top-seeded Connors whipped Ivan Lendl, who says he dislikes grass, 6-0, 6-3, while No. 2 seed McEnroe had a tougher time, edging Kevin Curren of South Africa 7-5, 7-6.

McEnroe was given a warning by umpire John Parry for racket abuse during his tiebreaker match with Curren. McEnroe was standing on his baseline swinging his racket back and forth when it went whizzing across the court and into the net.

"It just flew out of my hand," he said later. Sunday's Connors-McEnroe final, for a first prize of $32,000, will be a repeat of last year's championship matchup. Connors beat McEnroe and went on to whip him again in the Wimbledon final.

Lendl unleashed some big services against Connors, but was slow in following up to the net.

"I was jumping on everything he did out there," Connors said. "No matter what he had done, I would have been ready for him. It was just one of those days."

The first set lasted 22 minutes, and Lendl won 10 points. He skipped Wimbledon last year because he said he disliked playing on grass, but Connors refused to write off his opponent's Wimbledon chances.

"He plays so well on other surfaces that nobody can dismiss him as a grass-court player," Connors said.

Said Lendl: "I didn't really give him a test because I missed so many shots."

McEnroe and Curren each slammed six aces. They were evenly matched in the first set, which went with service until the 12th game. McEnroe did not have a single break point, but Curren lapsed and double faulted twice to surrender the set.

McEnroe got a quick break in the second and served for the match at 5-3. He led 30-0, but then it was his turn to falter. He served two double faults and failed with a forehand volley, allowing Curren to break back and force a tiebreaker.

McEnroe won that 7-5, finishing with his sixth ace.

"I thought it was over when I was 5-3 and 30-0. It just shows how you have to keep your concentration," McEnroe said afterward.

A crowd of 4,500 watched the matches on the center court of London's Queen's Club, traditional site of the last big warm-up event before Wimbledon, which starts June 20.

Theater group is renovating 1899 showplace

By RICHARD HORN
Staff Writer

COLORADO CITY — Theater hasn't always lived in huge palaces on New York's Broadway and London's West End. Performing troupes began showing their skills in their own towns, in their own buildings.

That tradition can be found in thousands of American towns — and in this community of over 5,000.

In Colorado City, theater lives in a bright red turn-of-the-century opera house. It was built in 1899 for roadshows and has been used as a silent movie theater and a boarding house. It has also spent some of its 84 years dark and empty.

Enter the Colorado City

'We had reached the point where there were too many shows that we simply could not do because we didn't have the space.'

Playhouse Inc. None of the members are professional actors or stage craftsmen; they all perform and create in their hours away from work.

But this group with a supporting membership of over 100 is returning the opera house to its original purpose and original look. And then some.

The renovation represents the toughest time for the community theater, which was formed in 1964 and has operated from the opera house since 1972.

Over $100,000 will have been spent by the time members expand the theater's stage, backstage and storage areas.

"We had reached the point where there were too many shows that we simply could not do because we didn't have the space," said Carl Berry Moore, who has been a member of the group since 1973 and is directing the upcoming production of The King and I.

THEY STARTED making renovation plans in 1978 after the production of Annie Get Your Gun was hampered by space problems.

The group put half of their profits from that show into a special fund and started seriously thinking about making some changes.

"What we will have is just a shade bigger than what we need — which is what we want," Moore said. "The stage will be bigger than anything I have been associated with in college productions."

Moore, 33, was a theater student at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville in the mid 1970s. He now teaches speech and theater at Colorado City public schools.

Most of the rest of the group, which for The King and I involves a cast of 39 and a crew of 20, is self-taught in theater skills. They design and build their own sets, make their own costumes and do their own makeup.

"I've learned a lot of things from them," Moore said. "They do things differently from what you find in professional theater groups — and I think better."

The organization, which calls itself simply "the Playhouse," has gained a reputation for ambition and quality performances. The group staged shows for years in school auditoriums and anywhere else they could find to set up some scenery.

But they had their eye on the opera house at 337 Walnut. It had been built as a house for roadshows when Colorado City was one of the biggest towns between Fort Worth and El Paso.

In the early 1900s, the opera house became a theater for silent movies before it fell dark due to rough economic times.

Colorado City's population dropped from 6,000 in 1882 to 1,000 in the late 1890s when the open range passed and left the cattle industry hurting. The town was saved by the arrival of the cotton industry and oil strikes. By 1920, the population returned to 3,000 and kept growing. The economy was booming again.

To handle the newcomers and fortune seekers, the opera house became a boarding house and, town talk has it, a brothel. A second floor was added to the auditorium section.

It was closed down once again in the late 1940s and remained empty until the Playhouse took an interest in the 1960s. By this time, the city had gained ownership because of taxes.

The city still owns it and rents it to the Playhouse for $1 a year ("... which we don't have to pay," Moore smiled.) The theater group also applies each year for about $5,000 from the hotel and motel occupancy tax.

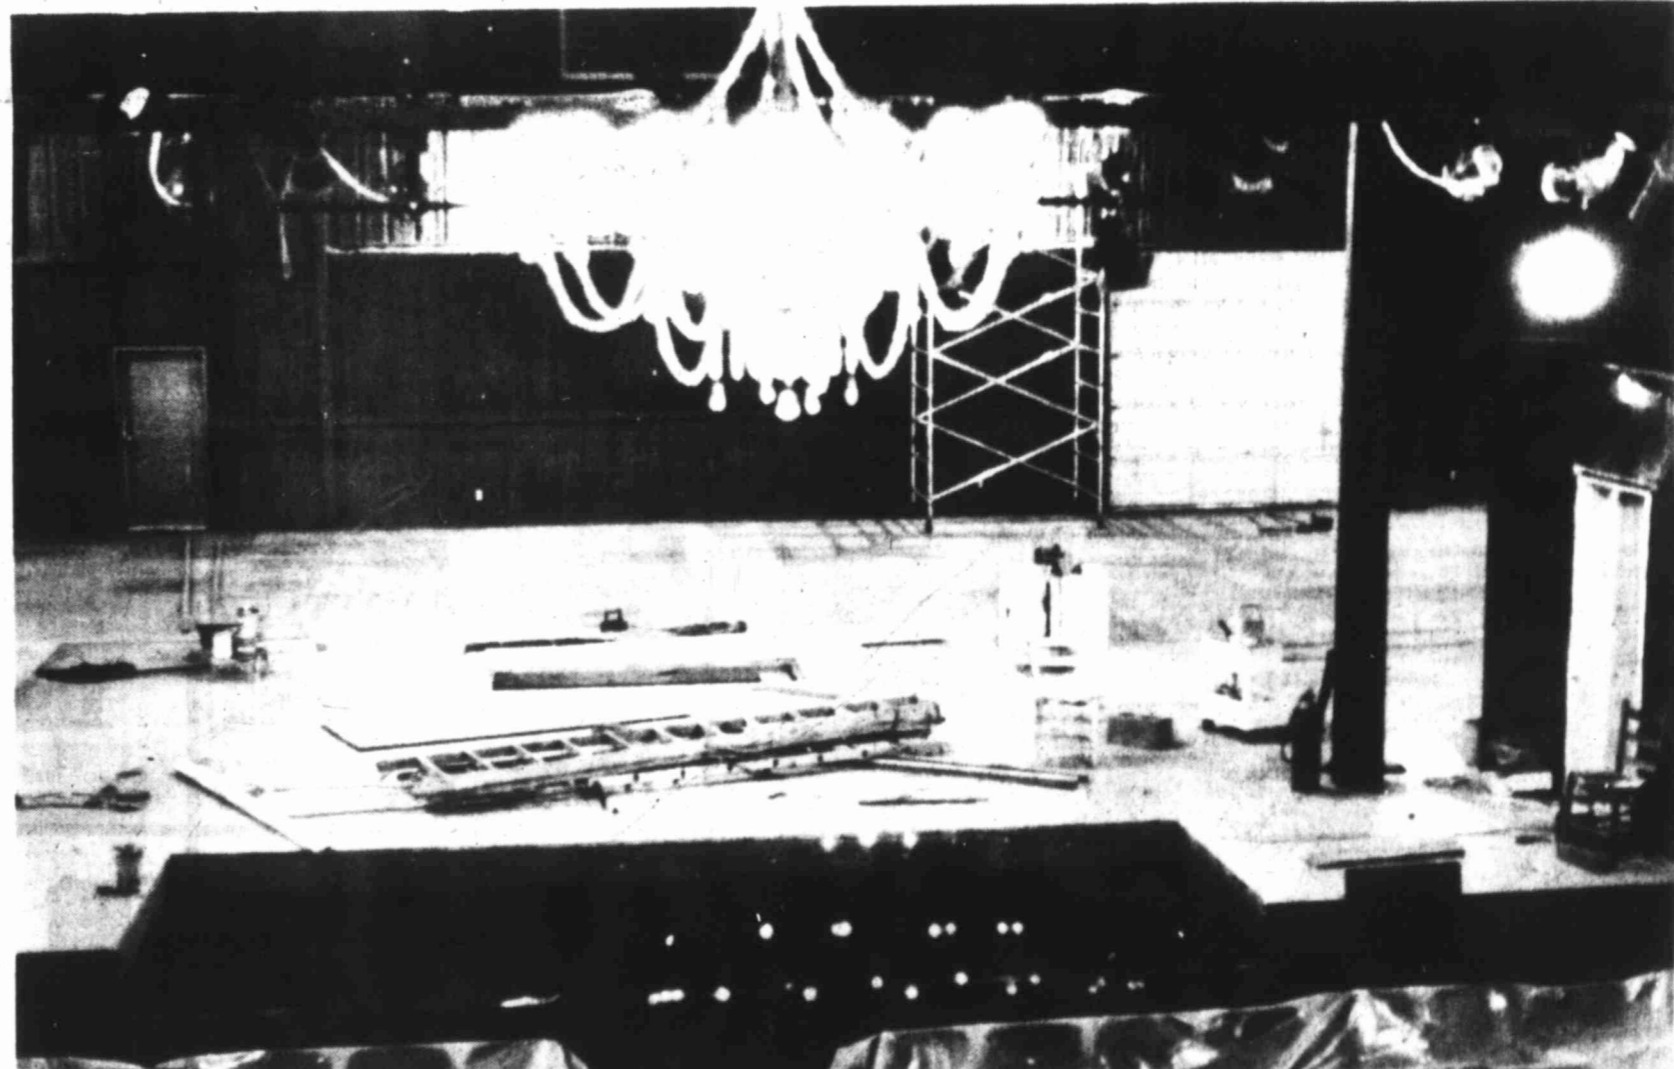

PLAYHOUSE MEMBERS George Womack, Tandy Curlee and Porter Richardson were among the original number who approached the city about their new home. Without much money or outside help, the group was fueled by excitement alone.

"The only thing we really spent money on outside help for was the

A PLACE TO PERFORM — The opera house was built in 1899 for roadshows. It has also been a boarding house and silent movie theater. The community theater group is nearly complete with renovation of the building and plans to stage The King and I in August. The small building on the right is part of the opera house. It houses dressing rooms, offices and a concession stand.

VIEW FROM THE TOP — The stage is shown from the upper room of the opera house. The area where the equipment is piled is roughly the area of the original stage. The Playhouse members have torn down the back and side walls of the stage and constructed a much larger space for performances and set rigging. Much of the lighting, including the chandelier, was designed and built by a member of the group.

main curtain hanging," said Richardson, who at 63 is retired but still does engineering work for the local television station.

He designed the opera house's lighting, built the chandeliers in the entrance hall and auditorium, and is instrumental in the design of the renovation.

"For the first renovation, of course, we had to tear down that second floor," he said. "But it had been open on the inside because it was built as a theater, so there was no problem."

It took two years and hundreds of dollars in donations and show profits. Businesses and residents bought the 160 seats for the theater, sometimes whole rows of them.

"They basically had to strip the building, but they tried to keep the opera house in the same style of its original period," Moore said. He pointed to the inside of a closet that showed roadshow posters still visible on the wall.

"The community's help was and still is tremendous," Richardson said. "They've helped us with whatever we've needed."

In 1972, the opera house was ready for its first theatrical performance in over 70 years. The debut

Opera house preparing for opening

play was Pecos West, written especially for the opera house christening by an Abilene playwright.

They were so pleased with the new theater that they didn't mind the small dimensions of the 35-foot by 20-foot stage. Some scenery had to be painted on the back wall of the theater.

The new stage will be 60-foot by 40-foot. It will include much more room for sets and storage and will include "fly-rigging" that will allow the group to move sets around much easier.

The orchestra pit has been enlarged so that it can hold a 20-piece band. Before, the group had to get by with piano and organ, or maybe a small combo.

The eight-set King and I, which Moore said would have been impossible to perform on the old stage, is scheduled to open Aug. 17. The group must still put black paint on the insulation on the walls of the new stage addition and add the new air conditioning.

The work is being done by about 15 Playhouse members on afternoons, evenings and weekends. An Abilene construction firm was contracted for the metal work on the large stage addition.

"It's been touch and go, but we're confident," Moore said. The renovation work was started with a large anonymous interest-free loan, but otherwise, Moore said, borrowing has been kept to a minimum.

RIGHT NOW, the Playhouse has aesthetic as well as financial and construction matters on its mind. They have paid the $1,600 royalties and rental for the Rogers and Hammerstein King and I and are preparing it for presentation.

Auditions were open to anyone. The lead role of Anna, who takes a job tutoring children of the King of Siam, will be played by Emily Hataway of Snyder. Lonnie Reynolds of Colorado City will play the king's role made famous by Yul Brynner.

Rehearsals began last week, but the cast doesn't expect to practice on the new stage until July.

"Musicals go over very well financially," Moore said. "We usually gross $5,000-$6,000 on a musical, compared to $2,000-$3,000 for straight plays."

"We get very good response from people here in town. You know, we've done our dogs, but people always come back for the next show."

As an example of the community's care for the Playhouse, a concession stand (located across a courtyard from the main theater) does not charge prices but accepts donations, and usually makes plenty of profit, Moore said.

The Playhouse takes on a variety of plays, including emotionally-involved dramas and even permissive modern theater.

"We don't want to offend anyone with a play, so we have to be careful," Moore said. "I Ought To Be in Pictures had some rough language, and we advertised it as having such. It wasn't one of our more popular plays, even though it's Neil Simon."

"On the other hand, Last of the Red Hot Lovers had a permissive theme and marijuana smoking, and the audience ate it up."

Moore said he prefers acting to directing. The next planned production, The Miracle Worker, about Helen Keller, will be directed by Womack.

In addition to plays, the group has started an annual film festival. Last year's movies included Harold and Maude, Sunset Boulevard and Roman Holiday.

But Moore said the Playhouse is held together by a love of theater.

"Artistic people are usually over-troverted and volatile, so sometimes community theaters don't stay together. We're fortunate here that we can handle that. We have our arguments, but nothing major."

"I've been to Midland and Odessa and seen their theater groups and they're very good," he said. "But I'm proud of what we do. I'd put this group up against anybody."

Moore said tickets go on sale for The King and I in early August. There will be eight performances from Aug. 17 to Aug. 27.

Superman sales really soaring

DUBLIN, N.H. (AP) — As Superman has gone about his business changing the course of mighty rivers, bending steel in his bare hands and fighting for truth, justice and the American way for the past 45 years, the value of Superman memorabilia has been rising — faster than a speeding bullet, says an expert in the collectibles field.

Spurred on by the recent movies, such items have never been more popular, according to Charles Jordan, editor of Collectibles Illustrated, a national bimonthly magazine published by Yankee Publishing Inc. in Dublin. Collectibles from the '30s, '40s, and '50s are at a premium, he says.

"One of the most prized Superman collectibles is Action Comics No. 1, the comic book produced in 1938 containing the first adventures of the Man of Steel," said Jordan.

What things do men look for in women?

NEW YORK (AP) — In high school he took a girl to dinner and couldn't pay the check. In college he had only two dates. Once, when he went to pick up a girl for an evening out, he found her in the bathroom taking a handful of pills.

"If she didn't want to go," he says, "she should have just said so."

None of which discouraged Robert Masello from writing "What Do Men Want From Women?," a book which purports to advise single women on how to find partners in romance.

Given his own track record, single women might wonder where this 30-year-old bachelor gets the nerve.

Actually, Masello has had a lot of experience with women, even if it's not all first-hand. For three years he's been writing the "His" column for Mademoiselle magazine.

The monthly column advises women, many of them single, on such matters as how to pick up a man and how to find their type. It has prompted correspondence from women all over the country, and the book takes advantage of the extended exchange.

"The book is based on anecdote and observation. The book is fun," he says, "but I hope with a point."

He also draws on his experience as a single man living in New York and two long-term personal relationships that lasted a total of seven years.

Masello says he'd give the same advice to all women about men:

"Men today are confused," he says, and their confusion stems from women's confusion.

Save money with grocery list

More Texans are now feeling the effects of the nationwide recession, with unemployment hitting record highs in some areas. Everyone is looking for ways to cut living expenses, but when you have lost part or all of your income, it becomes a necessity.

For most families it may seem hard to cut back on food since our need for it doesn't stop just because there is less money coming into the family budget. But you can have nutritious meals even if you have to make a severe cut in your food budget.

By taking the time to plan, cook "from scratch," and take advantage of summer food bargains, you can serve good food with less money than you think. Here are some suggestions for ways to cut food costs.

Start by making a list of what is already stored in your kitchen, freezer, and pantry. Plan meals around these foods until you have more money coming in, if possible. Also use these foods as a basis for planning the other foods you will need to buy. This can help you keep new purchases to a minimum.

Decide how much money you can spend on food each week. Plan daily menus, including snacks for a week ahead so that you can see what you will need to buy. Also plan meals around plentiful and less expensive seasonal produce, either from your own garden, local truck farms or the store.

Make a shopping list. This will keep you from forgetting the things you need, and help you resist buying things you don't need. Place a shopping list in your kitchen to write down foods as you run out, and check your weeks' menus for the foods you need to put on the list.

Go shopping as few times as possible. Frequent trips can add to your monthly bill since it is easy to buy extra items each time you shop. Don't go shopping if you are hungry or in a hurry, because it makes it harder to stick to your list. Also, leave the children at home if possible. It is harder to say "no" to your children's favorite foods if they are shopping with you.

Use the unit pricing tags on the grocery shelves to find the cost per unit, such as the price per ounce. This can help you find the least expensive brands, and compare the actual cost of different-sized packages. Try store brands or generic foods which are usually less expensive than brand name purchases.

You can save money by avoiding single serving snack packages which usually cost more than larger packages and convenience foods such as frozen pizza or frozen vegetables in sauce. You can also prepare nutritious snacks at home instead of buying expensive items which may have little nutrition. And turn leftovers into "planned overs" by storing cooked foods properly to make them last longer.

The recession has forced many of us to take a close look at our spending habits. Our high expectations and lifestyles revolving around convenience have not been free. Cutting food costs is something that all of us employed and unemployed — can accomplish by simplifying our shopping and cooking.

Birthday celebrations

MRS. BERTIE KIRKLAND received a special birthday card for her 80th birthday, which was June 3. The card was from NANCY AND RONALD REAGAN. Her daughters VIVIAN LEE, SHIRLEY GAY and VERLA PAIGE, and granddaughters TAMMIE PAIGE and DEBRA CLARK threw a surprise party for her at Coahoma Bank's Signal Mountain Room.

Howard County extension agent NAOMI HUNT recently returned from an extension agents training meeting held in New York City.

The extension service's clothing specialist sponsored the inservice training "Clothing Study Tour" and about 47 agents from Texas went on the trip. The agents spent the week visiting the Simplicity Pattern Company, Good Housekeeping and fashion designers in the world famous fashion center.

Upon her return home, Naomi had to write several reports on the trip. I told Naomi that she needed a well-qualified reporter to go along with her on this trip and write her reports, namely your's truly. She didn't think that was necessary. Can't say I didn't try. I'd love to visit those places in New York.

Extension agent PEGGY KALINA went with some friends to South Padre Island a few weeks ago for a vacation. The weekend of relaxation was good for her. She was hoping to catch some rays, but overcast skies prevented her from tanning. She also went shopping at Matamoros, Mexico.

Peggy also was visited by her parents the weekend of May 27. Her folks are from Wharton.

RAYMOND ANDREWS, CANDY ANDREWS, KIM AND JOHN HILLMAN and MARG BEAVER of Belleve, Alberta, Canada, went to Lubbock to visit the Rancing Heritage Museum at Texas Tech University. The main attraction was the Gutenberg Bible, which was on a tour of Texas Universities.

The Bible was printed about 1449 or 1450 A.D. The Gutenberg Bibles were the first books known to have been printed on a press using movable type, the invention of which is attributed to Johann Gutenberg.

While the group was in Lubbock, they went to the airport and sent Marg on her way back home to Canada.

PAUL AUSMUS, science instructor at Howard College, was surprised in class recently by the clown from Unique Boutique. The clown delivered a bouquet of balloons and a special message from his Anatomy and Physiology class members. The class had voted to give him a "special teacher" award. Paul has been a much respected and appreciated faculty member by his students for many years.

Until next week...

Strep throat cause by pet

Your dog, cat or even your pet bird may be the cause of your child's recurring strep throat, according to a medical column in Family Circle magazine. Dr. Stuart M. Copperman of the State University of New York College of Medicine at Stony Brook found 40 cases of recurrent strep sore throats in families whose dog or cat was infected by strep bacteria. When the infected pets were treated for their infection by a veterinarian, all the families were relieved of the illness.

Pubic arch fracture

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I am a 45-year-old female jogger. I have been jogging for a few years and up until a few weeks ago had nothing but good news to report. No aches, no pains. Recently, I have had a deep groin pain develop. I have reduced my jogging program but still am getting the pain. Do I need total rest? Is this part of the "no pain-no gain" idea of exercise? — Mrs. H.K.

No, this is not what is meant by "no pain-no gain." Sometimes a normal kind of aching of muscles may be experienced following a good exercise session and that is the kind of "pain" referred to. Yours is different. Stop your jogging right now. You need to be examined. It might be a groin pull or it might be something more serious. Stress fracture of the pubic arch is not out of the question. That has been reported in a significant number of female joggers, and of course, the likelihood of such things happening increases with age.

If you do have such a pubic arch fracture you will have to wait for it to heal completely before resuming your jogging program. Such a fracture will be revealed on X-rays or on a bone scan, which I strongly urge you to have. X-rays often will not detect the fracture in its early stages. Later, as more bone changes occur, the fracture will show on the X-ray. The bone scan, however, detects it quite early.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: Your enthusiasm for aerobic exercise prompts this query about rowing machines. I have no experience with rowers and have no ready access to one. I have read that they are good for muscular development and also for aerobics. I am asking you if you agree that rowers bring sufficient beneficial results to warrant the purchase of one. This comes from a 76-year-old male who has been jogging in place for many years. — L.P.

There are as many makers of rowers as there are of exercise bikes. So before you put your money down for one, try out a couple and see which one suits you. But are you sure you are able to row so vigorously for the time span required for aerobic benefits to accrue? Remember that to get aerobic benefit from any exercise it has to be continued for 15 minutes, during which time the heart is maintained at a prescribed increased rate. That could be about 110 beats a minute for you. Are you sure your doctor would approve of this?

But in answer to your question, yes, rowing machines are effective shoulder, arm and chest muscle exercisers. And because such large-muscle groups are involved is one reason it also represents a good aerobic exercise. (Another prerequisite for aerobic exercise is use of large muscles, like those in the arms or legs.)

So I give a strongly-qualified yes to rowing machines in your case. They are great, but they are not for every 76-year-old fitness enthusiast around.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

One great gift idea we saw from a mother to her soon-to-be-married daughter. It was a hand-written collection of her handy household hints, sure to help the new bride out of many tough spots! Many good books of household advice are available to buy, but if you'd like to start your own collection, here are some suggestions:

***
Plain soap can unjam a stuck zipper.
Lemon juice will remove food stains and odors from your hands.

***
Save your paper towels: you can drain bacon on a paper bag.
Avoid expensive deodorizers: vanilla on a cotton ball can deodorize your refrigerator.
Heat a pan before you grease it: the grease will spread faster, and you'll use less.

***
To keep your bathroom from steaming up: run a little cold water in the bottom of the tub before you add hot.
Cut a "pocket" into a regular sponge, and fill it with soap slivers; works like a bath mitt.

***
Brought to you as a service to new brides from the Bridal Registry & Wedding Ring experts at Blum's.

Dear Abby

Woman climbs wall due to spouse

DEAR ABBY: Do husbands change after they retire? Mine did. We will soon be celebrating our 45th wedding anniversary. My husband has been retired for six months, and I hate it!

When the mail comes, if there's a letter for me, he stands there while I read it, then wants to know what it says. I don't go for groceries alone anymore. I don't mind his going along, but he has to approve every item I put in the cart.

Because he's retired, wouldn't you think he'd offer to help a little around the house? No way. He won't even pour his own coffee. If I head for the door, he either tags along or wants to know where I'm going and how long I'll be. When the phone rings, he rushes to answer it, and if it's for me, he stands there listening to every word I say.

I can't speak for other women, but I was a lot happier before my husband retired. No names or town, please. I've got enough trouble as it is. Thanks.

BEEN HAPPIER

DEAR BEEN: If you think you're alone, you should see my mail. Your husband may need a little help in finding something outside the home to occupy his time. Investigate the senior citizen activities in your community and give yourself (and your man) a break.

***

DEAR ABBY: I've been invited to a bridal shower and I'm supposed to bring some "tips" for a bride on how to have a successful marriage.

This bride plans to make a career out of staying home to be a full-time housewife.

NEVER BEEN WED IN WISCONSIN

DEAR NEVER: I just happen to have 10 tips tucked away in my bridal file:

1. Don't keep telling him about all the other men you could have married.
2. Don't bring out the bills at breakfast.
3. Don't try to start a conversation with him while he's reading or watching a sports event on TV.
4. Don't correct him in front of other people.
5. Don't try to make him jealous.
6. Don't bad-mouth his relatives.
7. Don't put a shirt in his drawer with a button missing.
8. Don't call him at work unless it's absolutely necessary.
9. Don't use his razor.
10. Don't threaten to leave him unless you have a better place to go.

***

DEAR ABBY: You printed a letter from a bride to be who worried about what part her best friend (a man) could play in her wedding ceremony.

I am a woman attorney married to a Lutheran minister. There was no question in my mind as to who my best friend was when I married, so I had my brother at my side during the ceremony.

The church bulletin listed my brother as "Bride's Attendant," while my husband's best man was listed as "Groom's Attendant." Once we got past the jokes about what color dress my brother would wear, we created a beautiful ceremony.

Wedding

MR. and MRS. WILLIAM GONZALEZ JR.
...married during garden ceremony

Wells-Gonzales

Melody J'anne Wells became the bride of William Gonzales Jr. during a ceremony May 28 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Robertson, 708 Tulane. The Rev. Logan Peterson, pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist Church, performed the ceremony.

The couple were wed under an oak tree with dogwood trees on either side. In the background was a flower bed in bloom.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Wells of Chandler, Ariz. Mr. and Mrs. William Gonzales of Muir St. are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore her mother's formal-length wedding dress. The bodice was overlaid with rose lace. The A-line waistline was enhanced by a full skirt of chiffon. She carried a bouquet of peach roses and white daisies.

Sherra Shankles of Midland was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Arlene Robertson and Stacey Wachendorf of Chandler, Ariz. Randy Robertson was best man. Groomsmen were David Taylor of McCamey and Bill Mueller of Post.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. A three-tiered octagonal cake accented with peach roses was served. An arrangement of roses and daisies was the centerpiece. Fruit cake in small boxes were given to single girls.

The bridegroom's cake was a double heart with Melody and Bill printed on each side. The cake was served from an antique tea cart.

The bride attend Chandler High School in Chandler, Ariz. She is now a student at Howard College. The bridegroom is a graduate of Big Spring High School and Sul Ross State University in Alpine. He is a chemist at Cosden.

The couple will make their home in Big Spring.

Plants survive heat

One of the most frustrating things is buying a beautiful hanging basket of vining geraniums, petunias, or fuschias in the spring and by early summer finding that nothing you do will keep it happy during a Texas summer.

Many of the traditional hanging basket plants can't keep up with the pressures of a Texas summer, so we're recommending some different varieties. Here also are some tips on how to cut down on plant loss.

Use a tighter soil in your basket by mixing top soil in equal parts with your usual light weight potting soil. This will help cut down on moisture loss. You can also buy substances to mix with the soil which will help to retain water.

Use one of the controlled release fertilizers to ensure that the plants will have a constantly available supply of fertilizer through the summer. Only use about one half of the recommended amount, since you'll be watering frequently and you may wash out too much fertilizer. You may therefore have to replenish the controlled release fertilizer more often than is recommended.

As to which plants you should use in your hot weather basket, use your imagination-try any plant that likes hot weather.

One of the best of these plants is lantana. Its beautiful flowers come in many colors, from yellow and lavender to bicolors. Lantana will tolerate some shade as well as full sun.

The annual periwinkle looks great in a basket, especially the varieties Polka Dot and Pink Carousel. They will certainly tolerate the heat and full sun, though they won't go long without water.

Impatiens are excellent for shaded areas, and come in a wide variety of forms and colors, like the lovely orange Tangelow variety. Achimenes also grow well in the shade, produce magnificent blooms and can be overwintered to bring you blooms again next spring.

Vines like the creeping zinnia (sanvitalia) and Thunbergia vine, or black-eyed Susan vine, look great in a basket. Just pinch them back a few times to develop bushier growth.

Herbs make great warm season hanging baskets, too. Just plant a basket with basil standing upright in the center, with sweet marjoram, oregano, lemon verbena, tarragon or rosemary as trailing plants around the sides. Hang the basket outside the kitchen for easy access.

Louise Porter gives program on friends

The next meeting will be in the home of Selena Sewell. Members are to bring articles on "What Interests Me Most in Current Events."

Norma Rubio to compete for title

Norma Rubio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Domingo Rubio, 1101 N. Gregg St., will compete for the title of Miss Teen of Texas in Austin, June 17-19.

Miss Teen of Texas will receive a $1,000 scholarship as well as merchandise awards and will join the titleholders of the remaining 49 states to compete for the National Miss Teen of America title and a $15,000 scholarship.

Previous to pageant activities, the contestants are judged on scholastic record, service and achievement to school and community, and personal development. While at the pageant, all candidates will take a written test designed to measure their general awareness. A panel of judges will also score the contestants in the areas of personality, poise and appearance in formal wear.

The pageant finals will be at 4:30 p.m. June 19 at the Hyatt Regency Ballroom in Austin. Pageant headquarters will be at the Austin Hyatt-Regency.

The American Heart Association is the Miss Teen of Texas Pageant. Candidates are currently raising pledges and donations for a bowling fund raiser to take place during the Pageant weekend.

Bridal Lines

TONI CHOATE
KATHRYN PERRY

Do you use your sterling flatware everyday? After much observations, we here at THE ACCENT SHOPPE have determined that how frequently you use your sterling depends largely on your personality. Used constantly, sterling acquires tiny surface lines called "patina" which heighten its beauty. Used rarely, it takes on an important, special-event aura. Either way, sterling silver will "do you proud". Enjoy it!
