Coastal residents view damage left by Alicia

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — National Guard troops carrying shotguns and rifles patrolled this storm-battered island city early today, helping enforce a strict nighttime curfew imposed to discourage looting in the aftermath of Hurricane Alicia.

At least five people died in the season's first Atlantic hurricane, which crashed into the Texas' upper Gulf Coast with 115-mph winds and a 12-foot storm tide Thursday, ripping through homes, businesses and trees from near Houston, 50 miles inland.

A sixth victim was killed in Dallas in a wind-related traffic accident as remnants of Alicia lashed that area with thunderstorms Thursday afternoon, 14 hours after the hurricane moved ashore.

Stunned coastal residents surveyed the damage Thursday afternoon as the storm subsided. Many among an estimated 42,000 who left in fear came back home. Officials said the clean-up will take weeks.

"Even those of us who are Houston natives can't remember anything like this," said Houston Mayor Kathy Whitmire, 37.

She said the biggest problem today was a lack of fresh water because electric pumps were without power. Residents were urged to conserve water and boil tap water before drinking it.

In Galveston, thousands of residents spent a second night huddled in homes without electricity.

Alicia's screaming winds demolished many homes on the island, defaced hotels, uprooted trees, and sent debris slashing and tearing at the historic island's buildings like shrapnel.

Hundreds of homes throughout the stricken area were flooded. The storm surge flooded both highways leading to the mainland, completely isolating Galveston for a time.

When floodwaters receded, the highways were left littered with broken limbs and other debris.

Expensive yachts were left piled in heaps like children's toys.

Four of the dead were crushed by falling trees. One man drowned. Several other victims were hurt in the storm, but amazingly, there were no serious injuries.

"I've stayed through hurricanes before, but no more," vowed Milton Carter, 44, of Galveston. "This is the worst I've ever seen."

The storm spawned about a dozen tornadoes in the Galveston-Houston area as it slammed ashore. Later, Alicia was downgraded to a tropical storm and rolled north toward Dallas with heavy rains.

By early today, remnants of the storm were centered near Fort Worth, its violent power spent.

City to study lost tax revenue impact

By RICHARD HORN
Staff Writer

Big Spring city council work sessions for the 1984 budget are expected to begin next week, and city officials say they don't know whether a tax increase will be necessary to cover lost sales tax revenue.

Big Spring's total sales tax rebate is 14 percent lower for the fiscal year ending next month than for fiscal year 1981-82, according to City Finance Director Tom Ferguson.

To prepare for the lost money, City Manager Don Davis said, next year's revenue budget has been adjusted downward by some $1,400,000. This year's revenue estimate has been lowered by $325,000, he said.

The income from sales taxes makes up a large part of the city's revenue, second only to property taxes in financing the general fund.

But Davis said recently that other sources of city revenue — ad valorem taxes, delinquent tax collection, recreational fees, building permit fees and franchise taxes — were up slightly. He said Thursday that no decision had been made on whether to recommend any tax increases.

"I don't have any idea and won't until we get through with the budget review," he said.

City Councilman Robert Fuller said he hopes the

City receives $207,590 check

Big Spring received a $207,590 monthly sales tax rebate this week — just $733 less than what the city took in last year at this time.

City officials say that's an improvement over last month, when the city got $76,633 less than what was received in July 1982.

City Manager Don Davis said that because the rebates have been very irregular this year, it was difficult to know why this month's rebate was so much healthier.

"I know that merchants can turn in those taxes monthly or quarterly, and normally our better months are at the end of a quarter." He said this rebate covers the end of the second quarter.

Receipts for Stanton, Colorado City and Lamesa showed increases over last year.

Although Big Spring's total rebate for the first eight months of the year are 18 percent lower than they were for the same period in 1982, the chamber of commerce said local merchants have not as a

Nigerian research scientist to use studies in native country

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Working quietly for the past two months in a small room at the U. S. Big Spring Field Station has been Nigerian agricultural research scientist Jobe Edwin Ujah.

Ujah is studying wind barriers and shelter belts for use in his native country after he completes his four-month training session at the U.S. Department of Agriculture experiment station.

His observations, field and lab work have already given him sufficient information to aid Nigeria, Ujah says.

"I have got enough to be of great help," Ujah said. "I can design various barriers and carry on further research in the semiarid regions."

Nigeria is located in the northwestern part of the continent of Africa. Ujah works in Kano in the northern part of the country but resides in the village of Imo. He spent six years in the Soviet Union working on his masters' degree.

The 42-year-old government scientist takes his work seriously in the United States, saying this is not a holiday for him.

"We have a fragile ecosystem that we need to combat by all means," Ujah said.

West Texas has a climate exactly like the arid regions of Nigeria, Ujah said. But unlike here, Nigerian farmers are unable to operate at all without government aid.

Ujah says he cannot accurately compare life in America to Nigeria since his exposure to America has been limited to this area. However, he did have some observations about differences and similarities.

"You rarely see people on the road here," Ujah said. "I thought every state would be congested; everywhere would be crowded. It is

N-dump site choice delayed, agency says

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A state agency needs until late September or early October to narrow a field of potential low-level radioactive waste disposal sites from 15 counties — including Howard, Borden and Mitchell counties — to as few as two possible locations, a state official said Thursday.

Finding areas where landowners can be readily identified is delaying the process, said Bob Avant, assistant general manager of the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority.

Counties currently under consideration are in Southwest and West Texas. The others are Knox, Baylor, Haskell, Throckmorton, Scurry, Garza, Maverick, Zavala, Frio, Dimmit, La Salle and Webb.

The agency initially hoped to reduce its tentative choices to as few as two by the end of July. But Attorney General Jim Mattox ruled last month that agency officials must secure mineral rights in addition to surface rights for proposed sites.

Since much of the land in Texas has mineral rights owners different from surface rights owners, the process of finding all owners is time-consuming, Avant said.

"We are having to methodically search these areas to find out which of those counties might have a situation where it might be easier to obtain all of the property," Avant said. "That's why it is taking longer."

So, areas where land ownership is complicated probably stand a better chance of not being chosen, Avant said.

Also, since the agency does not have authority to condemn land for the project, it cannot force the landowners to sell the property, Avant said.

Action/reaction: Dirty water

Q. Is there a city ordinance against running washing machine water onto the ground?

A. City-County Health Director James Luck said state laws prohibit the release of "gray water," washing machine or tub water, onto the surface. Such water should be plumbed into a city's sewer system. The state plumbing code, which the city has adopted, says all waste water should be plumbed into sewer systems, he said. Public Works Director Tom Detell said prohibition against running washing machine water onto the ground was "implied" in city ordinances.

Local man burned in well explosion near Sterling City

A Big Spring man is in stable condition today at Lubbock General Hospital where he is being treated for second and third degree burns suffered in an oil well fire Wednesday afternoon near Sterling City.

Sterling County Deputy Sheriff Will Lenoir said Oscar Ovalle, 39, was working on a Texaco lease 16 miles southwest of Sterling City when the accident occurred.

"From what we've been able to tell, the well suddenly starting blowing gas and before anything could be done the fumes surrounded a motor that was running at the site and consequently the motor ignited the flames," Lenoir said.

Lenoir said Ovalle, an employee of Small Fishing and Rental Tools of Big Spring, was burned in the initial ignition of the fire.

Lenoir said his office received the call at 4:15 p.m. Three firetrucks and an ambulance were sent to the site. He said firemen were able to bring the flames under control quickly but not before the fire engulfed an American Well Service tractor-trailer rig positioned at the site.

"It was just too far away for us to respond to and do any good," Lenoir said.

Lenoir said Ovalle was taken to Malone-Hogan Hospital and then transferred to Lubbock General Hospital's burn unit.

Frog hunter shot in foot

A 9-year-old Odessa boy was accidentally shot in the foot yesterday in southern Howard County as he and his father were shooting at frogs on an oil lease.

Carl Black was treated at Malone-Hogan Hospital Thursday afternoon and later transferred to an Odessa hospital for treatment of a broken bone in his foot, according to the Howard County sheriff's office.

Carl, his father Archie Black and a brother were on an oil lease when the accident occurred at 12:33 p.m. Black was supervising a rig move for BJM Drilling, deputies say. His .22 caliber pistol discharged, striking the 9-year-old as the three were shooting at frogs on the lease, reports say.

Vet says cattle died from drought-related toxic nitrate

By MIKE DOWNEY
Staff Writer

Local veterinarians are issuing warnings to cattlemen after tests showed that cattle which died of poisoning last weekend north of Big Spring had eaten hay with drought-related toxic nitrate levels.

Dr. Joe Neff said tests showed an "extremely high level of nitrate and low levels of arsenic" in the hay that was fed to cattle belonging to Leroy Hunt of Garden City Aug. 13. Sixteen of the 23 head of cattle that consumed the hay died, Neff said.

The nitrate occurs naturally in plants such as sudan and sorghum, Neff said, but only becomes poisonous during times of stress.

"It rises to toxic levels in drought conditions or after a quick freeze," Neff said.

Nitrate poisoning acts very quickly, often within 15 to 20 minutes after an animal has eaten plants with high levels of the poison, Neff said.

Cattlemen should take care feeding cattle during the current drought, Neff said.

"The safest thing is to take the sorriest animal and let him feed for 30 to 40 minutes," Neff said. "You can have it tested. In a year like this, you sure need to watch it."

Daisy Hunt, the wife of the cattle's owner, said the cattle began staggering within five minutes after eating the toxic hay.

Nigeria is slightly larger than Texas but has a population of 80 million.

In addition to the "breathing space" here, Ujah says, he was impressed with the religious nature in America. He expected very few Americans — and then only "the underprivileged" — to be concerned with religious matters.

"I thought religion would be lukewarm ... but even the President has declared it the 'Year of the Bible' — very impressive," Ujah said.

Food and costs of living differ in the two countries, Ujah said. When his four children and his wife joined him last week, the soil scientist said he noticed food was cheaper in his homeland.

But he found that Mexican food is very similar in taste to Nigerian food.

"It's the peppers," Ujah said.

"My impression is that it's kind of spotty," said LeRoy Tillery, executive vice president of the chamber. "Some say they're doing well, some say they're holding their own, some say they're hurting a little. But it's not all positive or all negative."

Big Spring has so far this year received $1.05 million in payments from State Comptroller Bob Bullock's office. By August 1982 the city had been sent $1.28 million.

Here are rebates received this week by area cities:

- Coahoma — $3,392, down from $4,045 in August 1982.
- Forsan — $3,217. This is Forsan's first year to receive rebates.
- Lamesa — $68,439, up from $65,590 in August 1982.
- Colorado City — $30,456, up from $25,805.
- Stanton — $8,819, up from $6,204.
- Midland — $977,000, down from $1,004,414.
- Odessa — $881,004, down from $1,201,451.
- Abilene — $1,022,802, down from $1,115,504.
- Lubbock — $1,597,110, up from $1,480,043.
- San Angelo — $674,622, up from $630,352.

Police Beat

Bus passenger arrested

Police said they received a report at 1:29 a.m. today that a white male carrying a handgun had boarded a Greyhound bus at the company's terminal at 315 Runnels. Police responding to the call said they arrested Charles W. Carroll, 28, of San Angelo, who they say was carrying a .22-caliber single shot pistol in his left boot.

Police reports also contained the following:
• Maxwell R. Walkup of 407 Owens told police that at 11:55 p.m. Thursday a person known to him kicked him in the kidneys.

Frank Murphy also reported that one of the subjects kicked in the driver's door of his pickup truck causing about $350 in damage.

• Paula Wildman of 1511 E. 11th told police that someone stole a $100 bill from her home between 10:15 a.m. and 11:45 a.m. Thursday.

Missing car returned

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Carroll O'Connor, the star of television's "Archie Bunker's Place," had his stolen car returned before he even knew it was missing.

The actor had parked his 1983 BMW on Sunday night in a garage near Central Park. On Tuesday, police made a routine traffic stop in the Bronx and discovered the three occupants were in O'Connor's car.

"When they tried to get in touch with Mr. O'Connor, they found out he didn't know it was missing," said police spokeswoman Diane Kubler. Three men were charged with grand larceny.

It was the second time O'Connor had been victimized by car thieves. In June, his 1979 BMW was wrecked when two youths led police on a 100-mph chase after stealing the car in Manhattan.

Nudists don't want heiress

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Shipping heiress Christina Onassis, seeking to join sun worshippers in the nude, got a frosty reception Thursday from members of Greece's first legitimate nudist club.

CHRISTINA ONASSIS

"We had an enquiry from Ms. Onassis about joining us but we think she would do us more harm than good. We're an organization for serious naturists and we don't need rich or famous people," said Jimmy Pzaris, vice president of the newly formed Greek Naturist Club.

The club, affiliated with the International Nudist Federation, was officially recognized Wednesday under the socialist government's new bill permitting nudists to swim and sunbathe freely on beaches. The bill is expected to become law later this month.

Currently, nudists face immediate arrest and possible imprisonment for "provoking a public scandal through immoral acts."

The naturist club, which already has more than 2,000 members, plans to open a vacation center on a private island near Athens as well as camping sites on isolated beaches throughout Greece.

Ms. Onassis, only daughter of the late tycoon Aristotle Onassis, is currently holidaying with friends on her private island of Skorpios off Greece's western coast.

BURTON AND WIFE — Actor Richard Burton stands with his bride, Sally May, after their July 3 wedding in Las Vegas. This is the only photograph of the wedding. A spokesman for Burton said most of the film was ruined in processing. The photo was released today in New York.

Conductors robbed

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Conductors Leonard Bernstein and Michael Tilson Thomas were unhurt but poorer after two robbers burst into their hotel bungalow while they ate dinner with two guests.

Police said Thursday that the holdup occurred as Bernstein and Tilson Thomas were dining Sunday night at the Beverly Hills Hotel with Harry Kraut, a New York agent, and Marty Merkle, manager of the opera department at the University of Southern California.

The robbers, one carrying a gun, "forced their way in and took cash from each of the gentlemen and fled the scene," said Lt. William Hunt. "They took a total of $360."

Gere issued a summons

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Richard Gere, star of "An Officer and a Gentleman," has been issued a summons for urinating in a city street, police said.

Gere was picked up Saturday morning on Broadway in Greenwich Village after he was seen by passing police officers, who issued the summons.

"It's no big deal. It's only a minor summons. He pays it and that's it. No headlines," Lt. Murray Jacobs of the Sixth Precinct said Thursday.

The summons is returnable to the city's Environmental Control Board.

Mom finds abducted child in Florida

MATTAWAN, Mich. (AP) — A mother who gained fame by founding a group to help locate abducted children got the only reward she ever wanted for her efforts — the return of her 5-year-old daughter, who had been missing for over a year.

Leslie Campbell, founder of HEART (Help Every Abduction Return Today), found her daughter Erin on Wednesday, ending a yearlong search that cost thousands of dollars. Erin had been missing since she went camping with her father in July 1982.

"I told her mommy had been looking for her, and if I had known where she was I would have gotten her sooner," Mrs. Campbell said after she and Erin returned to Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Mrs. Campbell was awarded permanent custody of Erin after her divorce from Ken VanFleet. Father and daughter had been living in Orlando, Fla., and Erin did not recognize her mother when she was discovered at an apartment complex swimming pool, Mrs. Campbell said.

Besides her work with HEART, Mrs. Campbell also helped gain approval for a state law that makes it a felony for a parent to abscond with his or her children. The law won final passage July 1, but because it was not retroactive, it was too late to help Mrs. Campbell.

Mrs. Campbell, who lives in Mattawan in the southwestern part of the state, hired a private investigator from Texas, Jim Popp, to trace Erin. He located VanFleet in Orlando two weeks ago, and arrangements were made for Mrs. Campbell to meet Popp in Florida and obtain a Florida court order for the return of the girl.

But Mrs. Campbell discovered that getting back her daughter would not be that simple.

"When I got to Florida and talked to an attorney, we were not certain (an order could be obtained) without alerting Ken and going through a long, expensive litigation," she said.

Instead, Mrs. Campbell acted on a tip that Erin was swimming at the apartment complex where she lived with her father, and she, Popp and another investigator hustled the girl off to the Tampa airport.

"I went onto the first step of the pool, knee-deep in the water, and picked Erin up," Mrs. Campbell said. "I said, 'I'm mommy, I'm mommy.' But she didn't recognize me."

Mrs. Campbell said she didn't recognize her daughter at first, either. "She was four to five inches taller, she was thinner, she had lost a tooth, her hair was wet and I was yards away," she said. "I almost fainted."

But once in the airplane, headed back to Michigan, the two became reacquainted.

"In the airplane our relationship just blossomed," Mrs. Campbell said. "We were best friends again."

Polish government calls Walesa 'ridiculous'

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Communist government has intensified its campaign against Solidarity founder Lech Walesa, calling him "a ridiculous person" and a U.S. agent conspiring to prolong Western economic sanctions on Poland.

The leader of the outlawed trade union was called the "Yankee of Gdansk" by the Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu on Thursday. He maintains the government wants to discredit him because he is still considered a legitimate spokesman for labor rights by millions of Polish workers.

The official state news agency PAP stepped up the anti-Walesa commentary Thursday night charging that "in the anti-Polish policy pursued by Washington, no Polish citizen has sided so much with the United States as Walesa."

PAP said "Walesa is bidding to cut down the Polish standards of living ... Accordingly, he supports the American sanctions. The policy which runs counter to the interests of every Pole is being advocated by a man who used to present himself as a super-patriot."

Solidarity's underground has called for public boycott of transit in a nationwide show of support on Aug. 31, the third anniversary of the agreement that spawned the union.

A clandestine union cell has set a Monday deadline for the government to begin negotiations with Walesa on reviving free unions, or face a work slowdown.

The Reagan administration imposed economic sanctions on Poland after the government decreed martial law in December 1981, banned Solidarity and jailed thousands of unionists and dissidents.

The government formally ended martial law last month and ordered a partial amnesty, but it has incorporated many military edicts into the criminal code and enforces tough restrictions on union activity and dissent. PAP said, "Walesa holds secret conferences with American politicians who come to Poland" to seek better U.S.-Polish relations, and convinces them that the economic sanctions should stay in effect.

"Walesa is becoming a ridiculous person ... a figure of farce," the news agency said. It referred to a meeting Walesa had with Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., last week. After the meeting, Dodd said Walesa "is opposed to lifting the sanctions."

A delegation of seven U.S. congressmen that sought to meet with Walesa this week was barred from doing so, said delegation leader Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md. The congressmen met Wednesday with Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who told them the sanctions had aggravated Poland's problems.

"We were anxious to see both points of view. But we were not allowed to see Walesa," Long said before departing Thursday from Warsaw's Okęcie Airport.

Pilot, Italian tourists die in sightseeing plane crash

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Helicopters and alpine crews will be needed to reach the bodies of a pilot and nine Italian tourists killed when their sightseeing plane slammed into a mountain during a flight through the storm-shrouded Grand Canyon.

The grim task of removing bodies and wreckage from a plateau facing the canyon was to begin today, with crews rappelling down from helicopters or the face of the 5,800-foot Arizona mountain 110 miles east of Las Vegas.

Las Vegas Airlines Flight 88, its pilot attempting to dodge thunderstorms that blanketed the canyon, flew into the mountain about noon Wednesday. The charred debris was found 24 hours later by another of the airline's pilots. A helicopter and paramedics who flew to the scene said there were no survivors.

"It's a wonder they even spotted the wreckage," said photographer Rene Germanier, who flew over the scene. "There was just nothing there. The biggest piece of the plane was a small section of the tail."

"It looks like it ran head-on into the mountain near the 5,800-foot level," said Earl Leseberg, owner of Lake Mead Airlines. Leseberg spotted the wreckage shortly after it was found by the Las Vegas Airlines pilot.

"The only way they're going to get in there to get the bodies is with a helicopter," Leseberg said. "They can't even get horses in there."

"Weather conditions were very poor, very poor," said Sgt. Sam Whitted of the Coconino County, Ariz., Sheriff's Department. "There were widespread thunderstorms in the area, especially along the flight path of the airplane."

Sheriff's Sgt. Ron Anderson said the plane struck 75 feet below the rim of the 5,800-foot mountain, and the debris came to rest 50 feet below the point of impact.

The plane disintegrated, Anderson said, adding

"How could anyone survive?"

The Italian consulate in Los Angeles said the nine passengers had been identified as two couples from Rome, their teen-age children and a nephew. Their names were being withheld pending notification of relatives.

The pilot, however, was identified as Wallace S. Gustafson Jr., 48, of Las Vegas, a retired Air Force fighter pilot who had flown the Grand Canyon run daily since 1980.

They muffed it

The American Bar Association has muffed its chance to reverse the low esteem for attorneys that is consistently found by opinion polls. After six years of debate, the ABA House of Delegates refused to adopt a code of legal ethics that would have required attorneys to disclose a client's intention to commit fraud or other non-violent crime.

Under the code of ethics finally adopted by the ABA ruling body, lawyers may withdraw from cases if they disagree with a client's motives. But this offers little protection for the victims of white-collar crime.

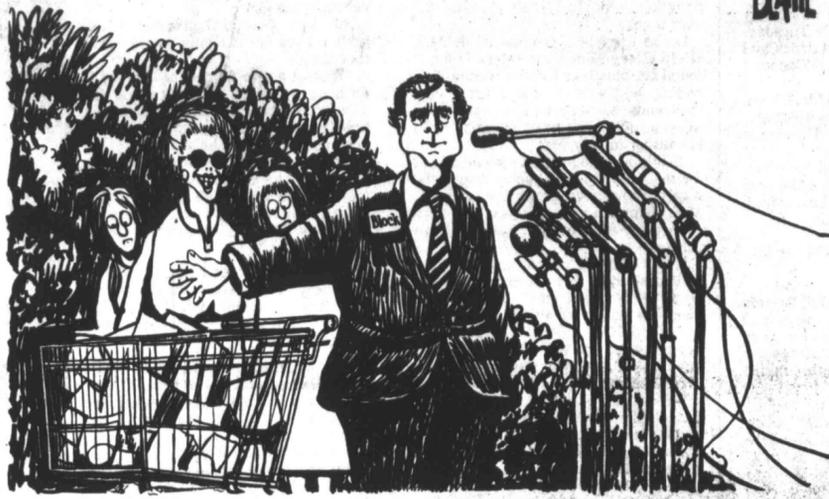

Opponents of disclosure predictably argue that an attorney's primary obligation is to his client and that blowing the whistle would destroy attorney-client confidentiality. The opponent's credibility is severely undermined, however, by the fact that the code of ethics does require attorneys to reveal a client's intention to commit murder or other violent crime.

The opponent's logic is inconsistent. They can't have it both ways. If attorneys have a duty to blow the whistle on one type of planned illegal activity, they should be obliged to reveal plans for any criminal venture. Indeed, failure to disclose amounts to abetting crime.

The ABA displayed similiar arrogance in asking Congress to immunize attorneys from federal consumer protection laws. Congress ought to ignore this self-serving request to exempt lawyers from Federal Trade Commission regulation of pricing and other business practices.

The ABA's code of ethics is not binding on attorneys. It serves only as a model for state bars. For more than a decade, Florida's legal code of ethics has required full disclosure of a client's intent to commit a crime. Attorneys from Florida report it has caused no problems.

The ABA has shown us why the opinion polls reflect badly on the legal profession. Other states are sure to follow Florida and require a higher ethical standard than the ABA.

The peace feelers from Havana

For two decades the United States government has treated Fidel Castro's government as a mortal enemy, to be harassed, ostracized and even attacked. In return Cuba has become a valuable tool of Soviet foreign policy, a troublemaker in Central and South America and an infuriating symbol of Latin defiance of American power. Isn't it time for a change?

The opportunity is provided by Castro himself, who recently declared his willingness to negotiate with the United States on matters of mutual concern, including Cuba's role in the various conflicts in Central America. The offer is no guarantee of success, but it is worth pursuing. First, however, the Reagan administration will have to acknowledge the necessity of dealing with the Communist government, a reality it has strained to ignore.

The President reportedly regards the peace feelers from Havana as evidence that his big-stick policy has struck fear into his Latin enemies. In fact, Castro's recent declaration represents no change in his attitude toward Washington.

Havana repeatedly has offered to discuss its differences with the United States. Successive administrations, however, have spurned the overtures. Reagan has done everything possible to increase the tensions between the two governments — from banning travel by American tourists to threatening military action against Cuba.

None of these measures have achieved the intended effect. Cuba's policies in Latin America and southern Africa, to name the prime administration concerns, haven't changed at all. If anything, Castro's regime is more closely tied to the Soviet Union than it was before.

The latter is no accident. Americans may regard their government's intentions in the Caribbean as peaceful, but Castro has reason to suspect otherwise. Washington has tried to isolate his government, assisted an invasion by Cuban exiles, even tried to murder him. In 1981, the Reagan administration pointedly allowed anti-Castro Cuban refugees in Florida to resume paramilitary exercises, while encouraging speculation that the U.S. might attack Cuba.

WHAT ALL this means is that the Cuban government can't afford to seek any real independence from its longtime patron. To do so would leave it naked to American military power. As scholar Mark Katz writes in the summer issue of International Security: "It is doubtful that Cuba would ever break relations with the USSR even under great Soviet provocation unless the U.S. first made some convincing gesture toward Cuba that the U.S. will not undertake threatening actions against it." The more imminent the threat from the north, the closer Castro pushed toward Moscow.

That result serves no American interest. Given the failure of the administration's bellicosity, it's worth considering whether a more conciliatory approach might work better.

There is no way to know if an American move toward detente would induce Castro to genuine cooperation. But there is nothing to lose from the effort, and plenty to gain. At worst, we will have wasted our time. At best, we might persuade Castro to minimize his activities in Central America and to put some distance between himself and the Kremlin.

Cuba's extreme dependence on Moscow — which provides some $4.7 billion in annual economic aid and more than half a billion in military assistance — can hardly be Castro's preference. Besides forcing him to support Soviet actions in Afghanistan and Poland, at considerable cost to his ambitions as a spokesman for non-alignment, the arrangement has obliged him to provide soldiers to fight in Angola. And the relationship has done little to promote Cuba's economic development.

OF COURSE, getting the sort of concessions we want will require the U.S. to give something up in exchange — such as an explicit pledge to refrain from efforts to bring down the governments of Cuba or Nicaragua. If we expect Castro to stop destabilizing El Salvador, we will have to reciprocate. Most likely we also would have to normalize diplomatic relations and resume trade with Cuba — changes that will cost us nothing.

But Reagan may not want a rapprochement with Cuba. He may regard the current tensions as the best of both worlds: Cuba presents no dire threat to American security, but nonetheless serves nicely as a demon to justify his policies in Central America. That may make for good short-term politics, but as foreign policy it has been a dismal failure.

Is the world coming to end

Dear Dr. Graham: Do you think that the Bible teaches that the world is going to end in a nuclear war? If so, doesn't that mean that we may be nearing the end of time?—A.B.D.

Dear A.B.D.: Some of the descriptions in the Bible which portray the end of history as we know it are very vivid, and some Bible scholars have pointed out that they could be describing the type of thing that would happen in an all-out nuclear war. No one can say, however, that that is exactly what the Bible is picturing for us.

In some ways, you see, it is not so important for us to try to figure out exactly what will happen at the end of time when Christ returns to establish his Kingdom. More important is the fact that some day God will intervene and the world as we know it will come to an end. The Bible stresses that "No one knows about that day or hour, not even the angels in heaven, nor the Son, but only the Father" (Matthew 24:36). Some say the sin and evil of this world will be completely conquered, and Christ will reign in righteousness. "But in keeping with his promise we are looking forward to a new heaven and a new earth, the home of righteousness" (2 Peter 3:13).

Christ could come today, or his coming might be delayed for another thousand years. Certainly there are many signs that his coming may be near, and we need to take that seriously. But the real question is, are we ready for his coming? "Therefore keep watch, because you do not know on what day your Lord will come" (Matthew 24:42). The end of the world as we know it and the establishment of Christ's Kingdom should not lead us to laziness or complacency—quite the opposite. We should instead be busy doing the Lord's work and living for him. We should do all we can to tell others about Christ's salvation, for "Night is coming, when no one can work" (John 9:4).

Make it your goal, therefore, to live for Christ, no matter what the future may hold. God is not finished with his plans for this world, and we should seek to live for him every day of our lives.

School days

Back-to-school time is traumatic for everyone. It's tough on kids wondering what the year holds in store for them. And it's bad on parents who have to spend money and time getting the kids ready for classes.

It's hard on teachers, facing new classes and a year's worth of lesson plans. And for those of us who don't fall into those categories — it's also difficult, because we're feeling a little left out as our routines remain the same.

I used to hate school. That's too bad, because looking back now I realize all those years weren't wasted after all. It wasn't until my senior year in college that I began to appreciate my education.

About 20 years ago I couldn't wait for school to begin. I stood at the window for years, watching the "big kids" walk off to school.

But then a few days before I was about to begin first grade, a bunch of kids were hanging around my house and we began talking about school. I told them who my teacher was. They stopped cold in their tracks, their eyes widened and they whispered "Oh, noooo. Not her. You're in big trouble. She is the meanest teacher in school. She makes kids stand in the corner with their noses against the wall. She slaps people's hands with rulers and makes you stand in front of class to yell at you."

That did it. My attitude changed immediately, and didn't change back for years. I told them I just wouldn't be going to school, and they informed me that it was the LAW and I had to go. Everyone had to go.

I equated the LAW with prison, and I began to think of school as prison. Teachers became wardens and homework was cruel punishment.

The kids were wrong. My first grade teacher was a wonderful person. But I sat nervously through class all year, waiting for the dire predictions about her to come true. Every year, kids in the neighborhood would evaluate the teacher I was going to get, and every year the evaluation was the same — I had gotten the meanest teacher in school. I spent years waiting for the worst.

Looking back now, I wish I hadn't been so down on school. If I had looked at it like a learning and growing situation instead of a sentence to jail, I think I would have gotten much more out of the whole experience. But no one can tell you that. You just have to learn it for yourself.

Paper-boy's mom speaks her mind

Dear Editor,

Although it is customary to address letters to the editor, I felt that in this case, it was more appropriate to start with this salutation:

Dear Subscriber, What rolls on two wheels, wears a baseball cap, and carries a dirty white bag with Herald written on it? I thought it was about time that the good citizens of Big Spring became better acquainted with the job that their paper-boys or girls do. By delivering the paper an average of 25 days per month, they are receiving 6¢ per paper per day. For this, they are required to roll the paper, bind it with rubber-bands (that they pay for), and throw it on your porch. They must also keep records, pay for a bag, and collect from their subscribers. This is where the fun starts; this is what separates the weak from the strong. Just think, for only 6¢ per paper per day they have the opportunity to be put off, ridiculed, put off, criticized, put off, and just plain lied to. Of course this only happens if they are lucky enough to find the subscriber a-dozen trips.

Not all subscribers are obnoxious, but it's curious how those that are, are the ones that stick in a mother's mind. Let me give you an example of one of the sweet paragons of purity that resides on a particular route with which I am familiar. She requires that the carrier go in her gate, up her steps, and deposit her paper neatly on the rack beneath the mail-box. In return she condemns him for collecting, or I should say attempting to collect, on a Sunday morning (never mind that this is the only time he can catch most of his subscribers at home), and even goes so far as to criticize his parents for his lack of good manners. She, in return, has never once thanked him for going out of his way to give her good service, much less offer him a tip. All this, and sunstroke too, for 6¢ per paper per day.

Then there are those thoughtful subscribers who do not pay their bills; who quit the paper in the middle of the month, or move without informing the carrier or the paper office. They don't pay for their paper, but their paper-boy does. At 6¢ per paper per day, the carrier must deliver 2.33 papers for an entire month to recuperate his losses for each paper.

I am constantly amazed at the patience, understanding, and maturity of those people who call from the comfort of their warm living room to complain that their paper is fifteen minutes late, as they gaze through their window at five inches of snow. All this, and pneumonia too, for 6¢ per paper per day.

Out of the money that they earn they must pay a $20.00 a month bond (that they get back if they quit) and $2.50 a month for insurance. This does not exactly place them in a high tax bracket. But it is a job that is steady and dependable; and there are not many of those offered to kids.

I am not suggesting that all the people on paper routes are as heartless as I have indicated. Most are considerate, polite and supportive. Some even go so far as to say "Good job kid!" and slip them an extra fifty cents. Surprising as it may be, these are the ones that those industrious kids remember. Not the old stinkers that Moms remember. Maybe there is a lesson to be learned by all of this (I just hope it is the right ones that learn) or perhaps these happy, ambitious and hopeful kids just don't understand the situation — yet.

Not all subscribers are lucky enough to have hardworking and dependable carriers. Those that do — please appreciate them.

Thanks, I needed this, JACQUELYN McELROY, PBM (Paper-Boy's Mom)

The first machines for making paper bags were invented in the United States during the early 1850's.

Commissioner wants to see image of teaching improved

By RICHARD HORN
Staff Writer

COAHOMA — Texas Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum told a group of area teachers Wednesday that starting salaries and "the image of teaching" need quick improvement if college graduates are to be attracted to the profession.

Bynum, Texas' chief school official, spoke to over 400 teachers and administrators from the Coahoma, Forsan, Stanton, Grady, Garden City, Lamesa and Midland-Greenwood school districts at an in-service training program at Coahoma Elementary School.

He said the ideal base pay for beginning teachers is $18,000 — about $8,000 higher than present base salary.

"It's said that Texas has a very cruel salary schedule — we need to raise beginners' pay immediately and get it to where they can live," he told the group.

"The schedule of salaries we have now started at a time when women would teach for two or three years, then start a family and quit," he said.

Bynum, 55, grew up near Snyder and taught math for over 20 years. He was appointed commissioner two years ago by the State Board of Education. The position requires State Senate approval.

Much of his 40-minute talk Wednesday concerned teacher pay. He said in order for teachers to get salary increases, the state's teacher-pupil ratio must be higher.

"We can't lower that ratio (providing fewer students per teacher) and expect to gain support," he said. "The lawmakers are not nearly as afraid of you as they are of the taxpayers."

Bynum was asked if he thought Gov. Mark White would call a special session on teacher salaries.

"Only God and Mark White know, and I don't think God is too sure," he replied. "I don't see how he can. You can't raise state salaries retroactively, and I think it's too late for any action to affect this school year.

...addresses teachers

"But I know he won't call one unless the votes are there, and there has been no work done on the tax issue."

Bynum said in an interview after his speech that a statewide merit raise program would not solve the salary problem.

"I don't want to mandate certain standards, but I am for the state giving money for districts to use as they see fit."

Bynum also said public education's negative image is keeping people out of the teaching profession. He said there were more young women in pre-law and petroleum engineering courses at the University of Texas than there were in teaching programs.

"If I were out in college and I looked at education journals, I know I wouldn't want to be a teacher. We're negative, we're down on ourselves, and we have no pride."

He said after the session that morale in rural communities is higher than in urban areas.

Bynum was asked if he thought Gov. Mark White would call a special session on teacher salaries.

'Capping' draws little support in Legislature

COAHOMA — Possible legal action to keep wealthy school districts from outspending poorer ones drew criticism from some area educators Wednesday.

The plan — called capping — has little support in the Texas Legislature but could be prescribed by the state courts to resolve litigation over state school funding, according to Texas Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum.

Some districts may seek to limit wealthier schools and have excess money distributed around the state.

"It's socialism, really," Coahoma School Superintendent Jerry Doyle said. "There's a little bit of a push for it, but I think it's mostly backroom talk right now."

Bynum was asked about capping by Forsan School Superintendent J.F. Poyner, who said he feared it would mean a loss of local control for school districts.

"I'm very much opposed to any kind of move to cap," Bynum said. "It won't solve anything because it's averaging down. But there are some court cases being prepared against the present funding system ... and they'll probably win."

"There is no way any district out here can attract young people except by paying above state average," he said. "If you cap, then it's a matter of saying you can't enrich your program."

Poyner said the capping plan could be stopped if some sort of school funding change were approved. He said that local control, not just finance, is the issue.

"We all need to get ball coach and had a together as a profession coaching staff as divided and work," he told the teachers. "If I were a foot-

Ford's son arrested on drunk driving charge

OCEANSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Jack Ford, a local television commentator and son of former president Gerald Ford, will lose his driver's license for six months after being charged with drunken driving and refusing to take a chemical test for drunkenness, police say.

Ford, 31, was stopped after his car was spotted traveling 60 mph in a 45 mph zone and weaving erratically on Highway 101 near Cardiff on Tuesday, the California Highway Patrol said.

He was arrested after flunking a field sobriety test and refusing to take a blood, breath or urine test to determine alcohol content, CHP officer Vic Johnston of the Oceanside office said Wednesday.

In California, such a refusal means an automatic driver's license suspension for six months, Johnston said.

scene from "Seven Year Itch," during rehearsals in New York Tuesday, won out over 800 hopefuls for the title role in "Marilyn, An American Fable," which opens on Broadway in November.

Perrier faces lawsuit in California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — There was Perrier, the bubbly mineral water favored by people in France. And there was Calistoga, the bubbly mineral water that Northern Californians loved best.

Then Perrier bought Calistoga, and the price of Perrier went up 20 cents a bottle — or so a class-action suit alleges.

A Superior Court suit filed on behalf of everyone who drinks either beverage charges Perrier with buying Calistoga last year to "eliminate competitors so that they can, in fact, charge artificially high prices..."

A hearing is scheduled Aug. 30, attorney Pat Sturdevant said Wednesday.

"At that hearing, Perrier will be saying federal law pre-empts state law, and California can't allow consumers to sue," Ms. Sturdevant said. "But I think Perrier's claim that the state can't afford consumers any greater protection is without merit."

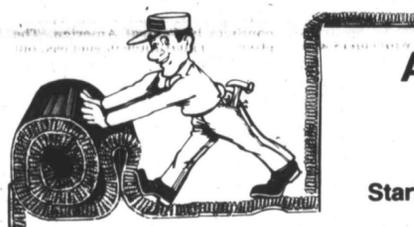

The suit asks that Perrier divest itself of Calistoga. It also asks triple damages and lawyers fees for all who bought either Perrier or Calistoga since the alleged price-fixing began.

Ronald Davis, president of Great Waters of France, the Perrier-owned national distributor for the water, disputed the argument that the purchase of Calistoga affected the price of either beverage.

Research punch

NEW YORK (AP) - Scientists have convinced that the process now being used to create genetically altered mice is a wildly chaotic one. Researchers in Nature magazine have shown that two separate genetic transformations normally take years to do. The new studies in Nature magazine show that the process can be done in a matter of weeks. The genetic changes occur infrequently, but the new process might take a long time to become common.

Weinberg said that both the new process and the old one are somehow altered. "We're beginning to see the cell which is being altered," Weinberg said. "We're beginning to see many possibilities of what the cell will do." The research is being done at the National Cancer Institute. "In the long run, it will become common," Weinberg said.

Pilots

NEW YORK (AP) - A federal appeals court ruled that three pilots should receive double back pay. Five other pilots also may be eligible for the award.

The decision of a lower court ruling that the pilots of federal airlines were discriminated against when they were forced to retire before age 60.

In ruling that World Airlines, an employee discriminated, the court said the pilots were entitled to flight engineers, them to work until they were 60.

Raymond C. lawyer for the pilots, said he estimates their awards because of the subject to a number of pilots but noted that flight engineers about $70,000 a year.

An attorney who filed the case for the pilots said that the pilots were discriminated against when they were forced to retire before age 60.

In an effort to win federal discrimination suits, TWA began allowing pilots to do a job to engineer job.

But several pilots in mid-1978, were not enough, and they filed suits.

The appeals court said that other TWA pilots are permitted to do less desirable jobs unrelated to age. The airline captains and officers were being discriminated against by doing so "solely on their age."

The 2nd U.S. Court of Appeals ruled against the Air Line Pilots Association, a union.

Research shows genetic one-two punch needed to initiate cancer

NEW YORK (A) — Doctors who have become convinced that the development of cancer is a multi-step process now have new evidence — the discovery of a genetic one-two punch that turns healthy cells into the wildly chaotic cells of cancer.

Researchers working independently in Massachusetts, New York and England reported today in Nature magazine that they have discovered at least two separate genetic alterations that are needed to transform normal cells into cancer cells.

The new studies might also help explain why cancer takes years to develop, said Robert Weinberg of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the principal author of one of the reports.

The genetic changes that cause cancer presumably occur infrequently in nature, Weinberg explained. It might take a long time, therefore, before both genetic changes occur in a particular cell.

Weinberg said the research suggests the possibility that both the nucleus of a cell and its membrane must be somehow altered to turn it into a cancer cell.

"We're beginning to focus in on exactly the sites in the cell which must be damaged to make a cancer cell," Weinberg said in a telephone interview. "From many possibilities, we're narrowing it down to a small number of possibilities."

The research will not immediately change the way cancer is treated, he said, but it is a prerequisite to a cancer cure.

"In the long run, understanding what forces the cell to become cancerous may give us insight into cancer treatment, but that is still years away," he said.

The new studies clarify the role of so-called cancer genes, or oncogenes, in causing disease.

At first, it appeared that a single cancer gene, when introduced to a cell, would immediately turn it into a cancer cell. But that conflicted with the well-known observation that cancer generally develops years after a person is exposed to a carcinogen.

It seemed there must be some additional step necessary to begin the growth of cancer tumors.

Three research groups — led by Weinberg at MIT, Earl Raley at Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory on Long Island, and Robert Newbold and Robert Overell of the Institute of Cancer Research in Buckinghamshire, England — tried various experiments to introduce cancer genes into normal animal cells.

The cells did not become cancerous. But certain cancer genes turned the normal cells into an intermediate form, in which the cells would begin to grow indefinitely in the laboratory, rather than dying after a brief period.

The cells were said to be "established," or "immortalized." They were not cancerous, but they had apparently taken the first step toward becoming cancerous.

When any one of a second group of cancer genes was added to these cells, the cells were transformed into cancer cells.

The researchers have now separated some of the known cancer genes into two groups: one group that can "immortalize" cells, and one group that can turn them into cancer.

Pilots win TWA discrimination suit

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court has ruled that three TWA pilots forced to retire at age 60 should receive double their back pay. Five other pilots also may be eligible for the award.

The decision overturned a lower court ruling that the airline was entitled to dismiss the pilots because of federal rules that bar them from commercial flying after age 60.

In ruling that Trans World Airlines, Inc., and an employees' union discriminated, the appeals court said the senior pilots were entitled to jobs as flight engineers, allowing them to work until age 70.

Raymond C. Fay, a lawyer for the three plaintiffs, said he could not estimate their possible awards because they were subject to a number of factors but noted that senior flight engineers make about $70,000 a year.

An attorney who handled the case for the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission, Susan Buckingham Reilly, said that in addition to the original three she believed five other pilots were eligible for the back pay award.

In an effort to conform with 1978 changes in federal discrimination law, TWA began allowing pilots to downbid to the flight engineer job.

But several pilots turned 60 in mid-1978, when there were not enough vacancies, and they filed the lawsuit.

The appeals court found that other TWA employees are permitted to take lesser positions for reasons unrelated to age, but that airline captains and first officers were blocked from doing so "solely because of their age."

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals also ruled against the Air Line Pilots Association, a union it said had "actively campaigned to persuade TWA to retain its age-60 retirement policy for all flight deck positions."

In its 2-1 decision in favor of the three pilots and the EEOC handed down Aug. 1, the court said TWA is liable for double the pilots' lost wages and benefits.

The union also is responsible for making up the pilots' back pay, the court ruled.

"The union owes a duty to all its members, including its over-60 members, not to discriminate against them," Circuit Judge Walter R. Mansfield wrote. "One of the purposes of a back pay award is to spur unions, as well as employers, to evaluate employment practices and eliminate unlawful discrimination."

The appeals court turned the case over to Judge Kevin Thomas Duffy, who made the initial decision at U.S. District Court in Manhattan, and directed him to find out how much money the plaintiffs are due.

Hearing loss affects child's development

The playful antics of a three-year-old are not only a joy to watch, but are signs of learning. Unfortunately, not all children can engage in the learning process. Many will have life-long difficulties because their development has been side-tracked by hearing loss.

Child development specialists cite delays in acquiring language skills around age three as the single, most common educational difficulty in pre-school age children. Likewise, the building of social skills is severely hampered by an inability to communicate.

According to Dr. Burton L. White, founder of The Center for Parent Education, hearing losses occur in degrees.

A severe loss is 70 decibels (units to measure sound) or more. But such major losses are comparatively rare. Far more common is the moderate loss, which is in the range of 20 to 50 decibels. Because of their comparative mildness, such losses can go undetected for years.

"The symptoms of a mild loss" he said, "eventually show up in older children in the form of slurred or louder than required speech and slower response and less accuracy in understanding conversation. These alarm signals, however, don't happen with younger children because no one expects a toddler to speak clearly or have a command of the language. As a result, milder losses often go undetected until severe damage has been done to the learning and development process.

"While the field of early detection of hearing loss has been advancing rapidly," said Dr. White, "much study remains before we have a truly effective system for identifying children with hearing problems early enough to make a substantial difference in their development."

Much of the responsibility for early identification of a hearing problem rests with parents, who should be on guard for warning signs.

Meat is richest source of iron

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: From childhood on, I have not been a big meat eater. I am now 73 and have been told by my doctor that I am deficient in iron, which my doctor lays to my diet. He advises me to try to get some meat into me. Isn't there iron in other foods besides meat? — R.P.

Certainly, other foods contain iron. You are living proof of that, since you have gone through life on a low-meat diet. Grains and vegetables contain iron, for example. But the point is that meat is especially rich in it. Secondly, the body is able to absorb iron from meat more readily than it can from other iron foods.

And let me add another interesting iron-absorption fact. It is that meat appears to actually help the body absorb iron from vegetables and orange juice actually can increase the absorption of iron from food generally (because of its vitamin C content). A recent article in the magazine Geriatrics points out a number of interesting facts on the subject, including the fact that tea can inhibit iron absorption. This was noted from a study of people who subsisted largely on a vegetarian diet. Do you drink tea? Elderly people are advised to drink tea between meals rather than with meals.

I hope you can come to terms with your iron needs. You should ask your doctor about the possibility of iron supplements if you cannot find the proper diet. You should also see him to learn if you are losing some iron from bleeding. That does not have to be the kind of bleeding you can see. It can be a very subtle blood loss from the digestive tract.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a headache that my doctor attributes to tension. I am informed that there is no cure for tension headache. True? — H.R.

Tension headache arises from unconscious tensing of muscles in the head area. The ultimate cure for tension headache is to reduce stressful situations that frequently are involved. The common aspirin may take away the pain of such a headache, but it will return after the effects of the medicine wear off so long as the muscle contraction persists. Frequently, with chronic and persisting tension headaches, a brief course with a mild tranquilizer drug will help. But during that time the person should be making efforts to reduce any lifestyle stresses that are giving rise to the physical tensions.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I read the phrase "subjective halitosis" in a medical magazine in my doc's office. Explain that phrase, please. What's the cause of that kind of bad breath? — Mrs. E.E.

The term means that the person feels he has bad breath, but that it is not apparent to those around him. It is not objective, or objectionable. Many people think they have bad breath, when they really do not. Some people sense an objectionable taste in their mouths, for example.

If you have this problem, then you should see a dentist or your doctor for possible signs of mouth infection, or infection deeper in the throat or lungs. If you want some additional answers to most-asked questions on the subject, the booklet "Bad Breath CAN be Corrected" might be helpful. Others may order by writing me care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I've had it with doctors who snub any cures because they have to do with diets. For your information, an aunt who was crippled up with rheumatoid arthritis began a special diet, which eliminated meat. In three months she was able to mow her own lawn and walk to church without hobbling. Why can't your doctors be honest about nutrition information? — R.L.

I try to be honest about nutrition and health. I make no blanket condemnation of diets and their relationship to health, but I have to express doubts about a diet that eliminates meat and which is given credit for curing a person's rheumatoid arthritis.

A balanced diet is always in order, and frequently the person with arthritis may lose interest in food and feel less healthy. Sometimes arthritis may enter a remission phase, where symptoms are less. If that remission phase coincides with that person's change of diet, it is natural to assume that the diet caused the well-being. But you know that isn't true.

Dear Abby

Husband's gift is sure bet to please

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 22nd wedding anniversary coming up, and he asked me what I wanted. I asked him how much he planned to spend, and he said about $500.

I told him I couldn't think of anything I wanted, but I owed my bookie about that much and if he cleaned up my bill, I'd consider it a nice present.

He agreed, and that's what he gave me.

My question: What do I tell people who ask me what my husband gave me for my anniversary?

LIKES THE HORSES DEAR ABBY: Tell them he paid off your bookie. They'll never believe it.

DEAR ABBY: Denny and I lived together for a year, then we had a falling out and he left for a few weeks. Denny is 23 and I am 28. While we were apart, Denny took up with "Marcie," who is 22, then he came back to me saying he still loves me, but he also loves Marcie. She is pregnant by him, and he is going to marry her. They both moved in with me and we get along great. There is no jealousy between Marcie and me. Denny still loves me and wants me to have a baby by him. He wants to marry me, too, and if that's the only way to keep him, I am agreeable. I know this sounds weird, but we three are very happy together. (We even sleep together.)

Do you think our sharing arrangement will work? Do you think we are weird? Are there any states besides Utah that allow multiple marriages?

SHARING IN SYRACUSE DEAR SHARING: There are no states — including Utah — that permit multiple marriages. Do I think your sharing arrangement will work? I don't know. Do I think you're weird? Yes.

DEAR ABBY: Which is correct: "The bride walked up the aisle" or "The bride walked down the aisle"?

MADE A BET DEAR MADE: I'm inclined to believe that the bride walks down the aisle. After the ceremony, she walks (or runs) up the aisle.

DEAR ABBY: I have a message for the young man in jail who chose to get his high school diploma:

Hurrah for you! But don't settle for a high school diploma. Many prisons offer courses that can prepare you for work on the outside, so take advantage of them. Don't be just another "ex-con" when you get out.

My husband is an instructor at the prison in Vacaville, Calif., so I know something about the programs offered there. No only can inmates earn a high school diploma, they can also learn clerical skills, electronics, grinding, horticulture and auto mechanics. They can become dental technicians, nursing assistants, X-ray technicians and cooks, as well as expert craftsmen in wood, jewelry, leather, pottery and ceramics.

Don't let one mistake ruin your life. Learn from it. Study hard, and good luck.

Stoned jeans — the new look replacing prewashed jeans — are abraded by ball or stone-like objects laundered with the jeans, says Ann Vanderpoorten, a

This doesn't affect the wear life of the jeans, but it does add comfort, she says.

Park shooting alarms industry

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — On Main Street, they are the Keystone Kops. In Frontierland, they are pioneers in coonskin caps.

Behind the gates of the Magic Kingdom, most of the Disneyland security officers are invisible — and unarmed. The purpose is to maintain an image of trouble-free family fun.

But the point-blank shooting of a Disneyland guard has jolted the amusement park industry, and officials at other parks say they are re-thinking security policy following the shooting Sunday night, the first in Disneyland's 28-year history.

Saved by a bulletproof vest, guard Joe D'Allura, who was unarmed, was released from the Medical Center of Garden Grove Wednesday after being treated for bruises to the heart.

"This shooting has really shaken the industry up, believe me," said Larry Shapero, security chief at Six Flags Magic Mountain in Valencia, where guards have neither guns nor bulletproof vests.

That may soon change, Shapero said. Company officials are meeting this week, he said, to "re-evaluate our position on the use of protective clothing in all six amusement parks across the country."

At Marineland in Rancho Palos Verdes, which is patrolled by uniformed, armed guards, spokeswoman Mary Schmidt said the shooting at Disneyland has "brought the subject of security clothing under closer focus. We will be re-examining our current security procedures to determine whether we need to make any changes."

D'Allura was shot once in the chest with a .25-caliber gun as he approached a man he thought was trying to break into a car.

The gunman — whose bullet would have hit D'Allura in the heart, doctors said — was still at large Wednesday.

D'Allura, a former Garden Grove police officer, said many of his fellow workers are angry.

"The stuff we encounter is like any police officer would encounter in the street," he said. Overall, the park's security officers make from three to five arrests daily, mainly for use of cocaine, he said.

The only training given to guards is a tour of the park, he said. Security guards are issued only a flashlight, he said, adding that its use as a weapon would be grounds for immediate dismissal.

Although they have the option of wearing protective vests in the parking lot, D'Allura said, few do. Inside the park they are not allowed to wear bulletproof vests, he said.

"The weather was so hot and sticky, yet I knew I should be protected," D'Allura said, crediting his police training. However, other guards at Disneyland, including some retired schoolteachers, have no idea about protection measures, he said.

"Believe me, things are pretty tense out there right now," said a Disneyland security guard who would identify himself only as John.

Disneyland spokesman Robert Roth said officials believe only a small percentage of security guards are dissatisfied with park procedures.

Hospital receives check for 47 year old bill

MIAMI (AP) — Jackson Memorial Hospital received a check for $382.05 a few days ago — along with a bill dated April 22, 1936.

The money was payment from the husband of a woman who spent seven weeks at the hospital back in the days when a semiprivate room cost $5 a day and the use of an operating room cost $15.

Officials said the bill and check arrived without explanation. They wouldn't reveal the name of the woman or her husband because of confidentiality laws.

"I doubt we were trying to collect a bill that old," Betty Baderman, a spokeswoman for the hospital, said Tuesday. "We probably lost track of it."

The bill is so old that hospital officials doubt there is a record of it in their files.

"We were a city hospital back then and the whole system has changed," Ms. Baderman said.

The woman, who checked into the hospital for surgery on March 2, 1936, accumulated a $255 room-and-board bill for her 51-day stay. Today, the same hospital stint would cost her $190 a day. The operating-room fee has jumped to $385 for the first hour and $188 for each additional hour.

The total bill's increase comes to about 2,600 percent. The treatment nowadays would have cost $10,487.

The hospital doesn't know why the bill wasn't paid 47 years ago. The check arrived a few days ago without an explanation.

CHILD COMPUTER LEARNING — Dr. Ann Piestrup, right, instructs her 6-year-old daughter Sarah in using a computer game created by Mrs. Piestrup's Learning Company called Spinnaker Software. The computer game invites children to discover the rules of a game, letting them learn subconsciously as they play.

Children learn while playing

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — Just before supper-time, as working parents begin pulling into their driveways, dozens of little children pedal around Ann Piestrup's neighborhood on the lookout for her car.

If a computer's stowed in her Volkswagen, they'll ditch their bikes and skip TV to act as willing guinea pigs for tests and trysts on a new breed of learning games.

The games, created by Mrs. Piestrup's Learning Company, Spinnaker Software and a growing number of other innovators, are transforming the educational power of computers. And they're making a multimillion-dollar splash among families with computers and children as young as 3.

A pioneering learning toy, they bring the color, graphics and excitement of video games to the ABCs of reading, numbers, puzzle-solving and logical thinking.

"They're instructive but not pedantic, challenging yet whimsical. They invite children to discover the rules of a game, letting them learn as they play. They react instantly to a child's touch, yet never rush the player. They offer clear, encouraging instructions if a child gets stuck, never bleeping "wrong" or "incorrect."

Companies in the vanguard of this computer wizardry are "mixing the educational with the playful so we have playful learning," Mrs. Piestrup said.

"Walt Disney does it. Fisher-Price toys do it. I think it's the most effective way of learning," she said. "A child's natural way of learning is very joyous and playful."

Until recently, educational software was little more than an "electronic flash card" or mechanical drillmaster, grafting workbook learning onto a computer screen.

"Drills in schools are fine, that's what schools are about," said David Seuss, president of Spinnaker Software in Cambridge, Mass. "But kids won't accept that at home, not when they have options like riding their bicycles, eating ice cream or watching TV."

The new generation of programs capitalizes on the special educational powers of home computers, the capability of responding instantly and acting as a child's partner in a mental playground.

They have the pizzazz of video games — "Make it red and it's twice as good," Seuss said.

And they also co-opt a key feature of video games: "It is inherent in the game that you realize what you can do to turn in a superior performance," according to Bob Olton, a research psychologist at Atari.

"This is a very attractive educational feature," he said. "The fact that you don't succeed is not interpreted as failure. Instead it's interpreted as guidance for how to do better."

In creating Learning Company games, Mrs. Piestrup, an educational psychologist and former teacher, said she wanted "to give clear information, but not to say "wrong" or "incorrect," because I've seen the effect of that on so many children."

Since they're not "made wrong by the machine," children quickly become comfortable, confident and competent on the computer, Mrs. Piestrup said.

The new computer games "let the child roam around and explore and give them the opportunity to define their own activity," Seuss said.

"First they learn the rules, like learning how to get around the board in Monopoly," Mrs. Piestrup said. "Then they get a little better at it... then there's another stage in the program where they're plumbing its depths, seeing the concepts that are there."

"And after that, they transform the whole thing, controlling it to do what they want to do."

Once toddlers grasp the above-below, left-right concepts they need in Juggles' Rainbow, for example, they can make the rain "dance" in colors and the sequence they choose.

In Spinnaker's Story Machine, a child composes simple sentences and paragraphs, and the computer animates it.

"If the child writes — 'The boy runs to the tree. The dog eats the tree.' — all those things will appear and that fascinates children," Seuss said.

"The relationship between nouns and verbs isn't something a teacher, book or parent can't teach. But the game adds a new dimension to the grammar lesson and motivates children to write."

After winning a child's attention with fun, the games encourage logical thinking and a building-block approach to tackling adventures of increasing difficulty.

In Gertrude's Secrets, a puzzle-solving game by The Learning Company, children get a "prize" for placing colored shapes in a tic-tac-toe-like array. But to do that, they must find a formula for arranging the pieces.

Similarly, Spinnaker's Snooper Troops challenges children to unravel mysteries, subtly introducing them to scientific methods in order to do that.

The games have such potential that Jeanne Dietsch, president of industry analyst firm Talmis Inc., said, "We expect them to supercede television. It's a far richer medium."

Kennedy chided for taking tusk

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy's 16-year-old son violated state law by picking up a 2-inch walrus tusk from an island preserve that is home to thousands of walrus, officials said.

Authorities also were waiting Thursday for reports from two state biologists on the island, who complained that the Kennedy party violated terms of its permit during a visit to the marine mammal sanctuary.

The tusk picked up by Patrick Kennedy was surrendered Wednesday to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service after the senator was told it is a misdemeanor to remove anything from Round Island, a marine mammal sanctuary in Bristol Bay.

Kennedy, D-Mass., said it was his understanding "from a previous visit up here" that the law allowed collecting "petrified" tusks if they were registered with the wildlife service before being transported across state lines.

Unlike state law, the federal Marine Mammals Protection Act allows possession of animal parts such as ivory if found in a natural state. Possession of new or "raw" ivory is forbidden for everyone except Alaska natives.

The walrus tusk, weighing about five or six pounds, was deeply abraded from rolling in the surf, said Larry Hood, assistant special agent in charge of the wildlife service in Alaska.

"If he would have picked it up on the mainland, the kid would have a great souvenir of Alaska," said Hood, who was keeping the tusk in his office safe.

Activity in the refuge is restricted because the circular island, roughly 1 1/2 miles wide, is the gathering place for what is believed to be the largest concentration of bull walrus in North America. It is about 400 miles southwest of Anchorage.

Flying in a plane piloted by long-time guide Bob Curtis, Kennedy and his son landed Monday on their way to a fishing trip. Resident biologists Jim Taggart and Cindy Zabel, a husband-and-wife team, complained the party violated its permit by failing to land in the designated area and circling the island more than necessary, said Don Tetzlaff, deputy director of the Alaska Division of Fish and Wildlife Protection. Even slight disturbances can stampede the animals.

Kennedy said the plane "circled at some considerable height, several hundred feet." He said some of the 2,000 or 3,000 visible walrus were frightened and dove into the sea, but most stayed on the rocky beaches, sunning themselves.

The senator said he did not believe the animals were harassed.

Tetzlaff said he was waiting for the biologists' written statements, being flown to Anchorage on Thursday, before deciding whether to pursue an investigation. He said his information came "second- and third-hand from the state Department of Fish and Game."

"We are not investigating it right now. At this point it's strictly allegations," he said.

The walrus tusk had been found by young Kennedy as he walked with his father and others who were being escorted on a tour of the island by the resident biologists. They advised him he could not keep the tusk.

Kennedy said he promised the biologists he would give the tusk to federal officials in Anchorage if his interpretation of the law was incorrect.

"I live on the sea, and always feel a special relationship with the sea, and certainly understand the importance of preserving fragile areas," Kennedy said.

Soviet boy says he wants to go home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Andrei Berezhkov, the 16-year-old son of a ranking Soviet diplomat, denied to American reporters Thursday he had written President Reagan asking to remain in the United States. That set the stage for him to leave with his parents later in the day for their homeland — with the concurrence of the U.S. government.

AFTER MEETING — John Wallich, diplomatic reporter for Hearst Newspapers, faces fellow reporters after a session with the 16-year-old son of a Soviet diplomat.

The boy, in a session with three reporters invited to the Soviet embassy compound, said "The letter that was published, I didn't write it. Even my name was spelled wrong." And he said he wanted to go home.

That, apparently, resolved the diplomatic tug-of-war that had the administration demanding that government officials be allowed to talk with the youth to make sure he was willing to return to the Soviet Union.

He and his father spoke with Leslie Gelb of the New York Times, Roger Mudd of NBC News, and John Wallich of Hearst Newspapers. The conversation was relayed via tape recording to other media organizations. According to the NBC crew, the mother, Valeriya, cried to one side during the interview.

The youth's father, First Secretary Valentin Bereshkov, acknowledged that the boy had taken the family car and was mediately for Dulles International Airport and a flight for Europe, then home. It appeared the State Department, had agreed to the procedure, and would officially see the family off.

Wallich said the boy looked extremely tired and was red-eyed and solemn, and he never smiled. About 18 Soviet officials were in the second-floor room where the interview was conducted. The boy's father spoke first in English and then said something in Russian to another Soviet official, and the boy was produced.

Wallich asked the father if he would have objected if the boy had wanted to stay. He refused to answer the question and said, "Grown-ups only have the privilege of emigration, not children."

The boy's mother sat in the background throughout the interview but said nothing as tears streamed down her face. Wallich told fellow journalists the youngster, too, looked "pretty damned down."

Explaining why he took his father's car, Andrei said, "I just want to go around the city and drive and I never thought that this would be interpreted as my intention of staying here. I ask the American authorities to leave me alone and let me go home, and that's what I wanted to say and I think there should be no questions."

Soviet embassy officials tried to prevent any questions from being put directly to the youth, but reporters insisted on asking a few.

Andrei said, "I wanted to leave at the end of this month, so I'm leaving..."

Asked if he was happy about leaving, he said, "Yeah."

Both father and son spoke English which was easily understood.

The elder Berezhkov expressed what he said was outrage that his son had been used as "a pawn" by U.S. officials in what he described as a politically motivated campaign against his country. Soviet officials had insisted all along that the letter was a forgery.

"My wife and my son are deeply offended by this noisy campaign and this gross violation of international law and private family life," said the father.

He said it was "childish" for his son to have taken the family car without permission and to have disappeared with it for what he said was 10 hours or more.

But the father said what happened then was "an attempt to use our boy as a pawn in a new anti-Soviet gambit."

"We are a diplomatic family and we have diplomatic immunity," the father said.

He said both he and his wife "demand (that U.S. authorities) leave us alone and stop harrasing our boy."

He called the incident "a shock for our family," and said, "My son certainly wants to go home as quickly as possible."

The reporters repeatedly argued with the elder Berezhkov and with Soviet officials present for the right to question the boy.

As their voices were heard on a monitored recording of the conversation, the officials sounded as they were cutting off the boy after he had made a brief statement.

Both the father and son noted that the photocopied version of the letter that appeared in the New York Times was signed "Andy Bezhkov" or "Andy Berezhkov," according to how one interpreted the handwriting. In any case the second "e" in the youth's name was omitted.

The father was asked how the letters received by the president and The New York Times, if forged, could have been sent exactly at the time the son left home and was reported to police as missing.

"I don't explain it," he replied.

Geese make good guardians, says LA man

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tony Angellotti's sentries make more noise than a dog, keep his lawn well trimmed and don't have to be walked. In short, he thinks his pair of guardian geese are a quacker-jack idea.

"If nothing else, they are highly effective as a sound alarm," says Angellotti, 28. "Together, they make more noise than a dog, and it is more startling and unusual."

Angellotti, vice president of a Century City public relations firm, decided he needed a house guard last fall after a gunman took his watch in the alley behind his Venice home. He had previously seen an intruder running out of the house he has owned for two years.

"I toyed with the idea of getting a guard dog, but my girlfriend lives in the (San Fernando) Valley. I commute there a lot, and I figured a dog would get lonely," he said.

Back again, after two weeks 'vacation.' Actually, it was a week's vacation in Ruidoso & the rest in Hall Bennett Hospital! It all started with a severe back pain while in Ruidoso...where I went to the hospital emergency after much urging from my daughter. They took my blood pressure, one x-ray & temperature. The Doc said, "Are you constipated?" I said, "no." He said, "Yes, here's a prescription for a laxative. Your pain will probably subside within the hour. Incidentally, here's your bill for $165.00 ... cash please!"

Well, the laxative didn't work, my pain didn't quit, nor was the diagnosis correct. I made it back home (painfully) and good old Dr. Thomas diagnosed shingles after a week of hospitalization & "thorough" testing. Do you think I could write the Dr. in Ruidoso, return the laxative & request my $165 back?

We may not give your money back, but we do stand behind our products at BIG SPRING SEED & CHEMICAL, 602 N.E. 2nd where you can call Sherry about insurance on Wheat, Multiple Peril or ALL RISK. Also, we are having a big DOG DIP Saturday to help raise money for the Rainbow Project.

TV STAR — Canine star Beni, and co-star Joe Rainer, take some time out from their filming. After two years of negotiations, "Benji" will air on CBS this fall, not as a cartoon but as the only live-action series on Saturday morning network television.

Daytime ratings heating up

NEW YORK (AP) — The world of daytime television programming turns slowly, with the slightest shift in viewing habits watched carefully by the three networks.

One such change is going on now, as the daytime ratings race percolates for the first time since 1978, when ABC put a hammerlock on afternoon viewing with "All My Children," "One Life to Live," and "General Hospital," the country's most popular soap opera.

ABC is still the dominant network while the sun shines, but during several weeks this summer, CBS showed surprising strength, coming out on top in the ratings for three consecutive weeks for the first time in more than five years.

And NBC, traditionally in third place in daytime, has increased its numbers and plans an aggressive bid to challenge the other two networks, says Steve Sohmer, a senior vice president at NBC Entertainment.

Sohmer says he will promote a schedule of what he calls "appetizing" programs this fall, including a revitalized "Search for Tomorrow," the long-running soap opera given new life by producer Joanna Lee, and something new, that may be announced later this month, for the important 3-4 p.m. slot now dominated by "General Hospital."

The stakes and profits are enormous. According to Variety, the show business weekly, a hit soap like "General Hospital" can command up to $30,000 for a 30-second commercial and gross as much as $150 million a year.

CBS has also strengthened its daytime lineup. "As the World Turns," at one time the most traditional network soap, shed many of its older characters, brought in new writers, changed its opening credits and theme music and quickened the pace of its stories.

"In daytime programming the size and frequency of audiences are important," says Michael Brockman, a CBS vice president for daytime. "If we can get the viewer who turns in once or twice a week to watch three times a week, we will be successful."

Jon-Michael Reed, syndicated soap opera columnist, credits the resurgence at "World and "Guiding Light" on CBS and "Search for Tomorrow" on NBC to a commitment by their owner, Procter & Gamble, with more money being spent on production and promotion.

In addition, Reed says, the P&G soaps are each gaining their own unique style, that has made them more competitive with ABC's daytime drama. CBS also starts its afternoon schedule strongly, with "The Young and the Restless," its top-rated soap and this year's Emmy-winner for best daytime drama.

ABC, in turn, has been hurt by the poor performance of "Loving," the network's newest soap opera which made its debut earlier this summer.

The show, a creation of soap-opera maven Agnes Nixon, is broadcast before noon, a time considered inhospitable for daytime drama. But ABC still has hopes for "Loving" and reportedly has a two-year commitment for the show which may need that time to attract a sizable audience that can spell success.

Amnesiac doesn't recall brother

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A hospitalized amnesia victim and his brother were reunited Wednesday, but the meeting apparently did not do much to jog the injured man's memory.

"No, he didn't recognize me," said Aras Gasunas, 32, of Manchester, England, after emerging from a 40-minute meeting with his brother, Mantis.

Mantis Gasunas, 24, of Melbourne, Australia, was injured July 30 in an automobile crash in The Dalles, about 60 miles east of Portland. He had no identification when he was discovered by authorities.

The driver of the car in which Mantis Gasunas was riding was killed in the crash. The Australian had apparently hitched the ride.

Aras Gasunas said nothing dramatic happened in Wednesday's meeting at Emanuel Hospital. He said his brother "took it (the visit) in stride."

Mantis Gasunas remained in fair condition and has been undergoing rehabilitation therapy for a broken hip, a fractured neck and head injuries, hospital spokeswoman Marianne Koop said.

His brother said before he left England, "We are certain from what we have seen that it is him."

tors, psychologists and hospital officials for several hours before visiting his brother, whom he had not seen since June.

Aras Gasunas arrived at the hospital Wednesday morning and met with doc-

Cat lovers denounce deport plan

SEARSPORT, Maine (AP) —irate animal lovers bombarded the town clerk's office Thursday denouncing the town's plan to round up and deport dozens of stray cats that are taking over barns, attics and gardens.

The callers, who Town Clerk Sue Lessard said were from outside this coastal community of about 2,500, apparently thought all the strays were doomed to death. Some "labeled us murderers" and threatened to boycott Searsport businesses, Ms. Lessard said.

"If I deleted the four-letter words, the conversations didn't (amount to) much," she said Thursday, after a report about the town's plans appeared on the front page of the Bangor Daily News.

"We're not going to go around assassinating cats," she said. The cats will be taken to an animal shelter in nearby Belfast, where those found to be "totally wild" will be put to sleep while domesticated strays will held until they are claimed or adopted.

HOT WORKOUTS FOR TORNADES — Temperatures topped 100 degrees Wednesday in Lamesa where new coach Clyde Noonkester ran his Golden Tornados through an afternoon workout. ## It's over KC wins 'Pine Tar Classic'

NEW YORK (AP) — It wasn't the World Series.

It wasn't even the playoffs.

It wasn't as big as the Black Sox Scandal of 1919, nor even as memorable as Bill Mazeroski's home run that won the 1960 World Series for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

But, Dan Quisenberry, who pitched the final three outs in the historic pine-tar game, said it would be "remembered as a completely different scenario."

It took just 12 minutes to play the final four outs of the suspended pine-tar game. And finally, at 6:20 p.m. EDT on Thursday, it went into the books — although New York Manager Billy Martin filed one last official protest.

The Kansas City Royals had beaten the New York Yankees 5-4 on a two-run homer back on July 24 by George Brett.

Brett, who hit the homer with an illegally tarred bat, wasn't even around to witness the end to this most bizarre event in baseball.

Brett's homer originally was nullified by umpires because of his excessive use of pine tar. Four days later, American League President Lee MacPhail made history by returning the homer to Brett, along with his bat. But, at the same time, MacPhail ejected the Royals third baseman along with Manager Dick Howser, coach Rocky Colavito and pitcher Gaylor Perry for their part in disputing the umpires' call.

The only one of the four at the resumption of the game Thursday was Howser, who watched on television in the Royals' clubhouse. The other three had gone on to Baltimore, where the Royals begin a three-game set on Friday.

"I didn't start to get nervous until about 30 minutes before the game," Howser said. "I was relieved because I didn't enjoy watching the game on television. I'm not a very good fan."

Quisenberry, who earned his major league-leading 33rd save with just 10 pitches in the ninth inning, said the culmination of this controversy represented "only a half a game for us closer" to the AL West-leading Chicago White Sox.

As far as history was concerned, Quisenberry wasn't impressed, although he admitted his wife was at home videotaping his performance for posterity.

"It was a nice way to end it. It was controversial enough," Quisenberry said of a painlessly quick ending before only 1,245 witnesses at Yankee Stadium. "It was the consummate ending, and everybody lived happily ever after."

While the Royals pulled within six games of Chicago, the Yankees fell another half-game, to 3½, behind Milwaukee for fifth place in the hotly contested AL East.

Some of the Yankees were still miffed at MacPhail for overturning the original umpires' decision, most notably Manager Billy Martin, who hid out in the team lounge and refused to talk.

The game did create a couple of oddities in the Yankee lineup. Don Mattingly, a left-handed first-baseman, wound up playing second base, and Ron Guidry, a left-handed pitcher, played one out in the ninth inning in center field.

"It seems like every year (with the Yankees) is a weird year," said Mattingly, a rookie. "It's the Yankees. It's New York City. It's exciting. It's Yankee baseball."

Guidry, who had played center field once before in the last inning of a game in 1979, called the game a personal highlight.

"I'm not sure it was a highlight for the team," he said. "But now, when I'm 60 years old, I can say I played in the pine tar game."

U.S. swim streak snapped

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Ricardo Prado said he had heard the "Star Spangled Banner" played once too often at Pan American Games awards ceremonies, so he did something about it.

Through the first six swimming races and two diving events, the United States was a winner every time, but Prado, a 5-foot-6, 142-pound Brazilian who trains in California and Texas, ended the streak Thursday night.

"I was tired of hearing the 'Star Spangled Banner,'" a chuckling Prado said after winning the 400-meter individual medley, his world record specialty, in Pan Am record time of 4 minutes, 21.43 seconds.

Prado eclipsed the 1979 meet standard of 4:21.63 by Jesse Vassallo of the United States and finished six seconds ahead of silver medalist Jeff Kostoff of Upland, Calif. Mike O'Brien of Mission Viejo, Calif., tied with Canadian Peter Dobson for the bronze.

When Kathy Bald of Canada set another meet record in the next race, the 200-meter breaststroke, beating Susan Rapp of Eden Prairie, Minn., and Kim Rhodenbaugh of Cincinnati, the American hope of equalling the 1979 feat of winning 28 of 29 races ended.

But the U.S. team still isn't doing badly in the water, or on land, either.

Matt Gribble of Miami lowered the games record in the 100 butterfly twice Thursday and he and Cynthia "Sippy" Woodhead, who won the 200 freestyle for her sixth overall Pan Am gold medal, led two 1-2 American sweeps. The U.S. team also won the men's 800 freestyle relay, and Greg Louganis of Mission Viejo put on another in a long string of impressive diving performances in winning the three-meter springboard.

U.S. boxers Dennis Milton and Louis Howard easily won their bouts, the baseball team stayed undefeated after four games and U.S. shooters won four more golds for a total of 18.

In the medal standings, the United States has 39 golds and 77 overall. Cuba's count is 29 golds and a total of 63, while Canada has 6-40

Pan Am Games

and Venezuela 2-21.

Louganis, the world and defending Pan Am champion in both the springboard and 10-meter platform, dominated the springboard so completely that he could have skipped the last of his 11 dives and still won.

He finished with 724.02 points, while Abel Ramirez of Cuba was second with 631.26 and David Burgering of Mission Viejo third with 616.15. Going into his final dive, Louganis already had 640.32.

Gribble became the third swimmer to lower the Pan Am record in the men's butterfly in qualifying with a clocking of 54.64 seconds. He erased the meet record times of 55.54 by Canadian Tom Ponting and 55.27 by Morales, from Santa Clara, Calif., set in earlier heats.

Then Gribble came through with a 54.25, with Morales following .37 later for the silver. Woodhead, of Riverside, Calif., the star of the 1979 Pan Am championships in San Juan, Puerto Rico, with five gold medals, one world record and five meet records, and Mary Wayte of Mercer Island, Wash., finished 1-2 in the 200 freestyle final. Woodhead was timed in 2:01.33, more than three seconds slower than her own world record.

In boxing, Milton scored a third-round knockout of Jamaica's Anthony Logan in the 156-pound class. He scored a pair of standing eight counts, and the referee stopped the bout with six seconds remaining. That moved Milton into the semifinals, and all semifinalists in boxing are assured of at least bronze medals.

Howard, from St. Louis, won a unanimous decision over Segundo Quintero of Ecuador in the 147-pound class.

Both U.S. basketball teams lost key players. Lataunya Pollard, the college women's player of the year with a 30-point average last season, flew home with an injured ankle, while men's forward Michael Cage left to be with his ailing father in Arkansas.

Steers scrimmage today

This afternoon's intrasquad scrimmage for Big Spring High will serve as a week-long progress report says head coach Quinn Eudy.

"We want to see where we are, defensively and offensively," said Eudy. "We had a really good workout this morning. We are competitive at several positions and today's scrimmage will go a long way towards telling who's going to start for us."

The varsity scrimmages immediately following a junior varsity-sophomore workout scheduled for 4 p.m.

The Steers will line up their No. 1 defense against the "next best" offense, Eudy said, and then reverse the session with the best offense against the remaining top defensive players. "We'll see where we are and what we've got to correct before the season starts," he said.

After a week of two-a-day drills, the second-year head coached is delighted with what he's seen on the practice field.

"I've been real happy with our enthusiasm and work habits, especially since it's been extremely hot. We've had the opportunities to drag and didn't. They've done a good job of working hard when they could have fallen back," Eudy said.

Rejoining workouts was senior quarterback Mark Johnson who injured knee ligaments earlier this month. Although he's still rehabilitating the knee and it's a "wait and see situation," Eudy thinks Johnson could be ready for the season opener Sept. 2 against Snyder.

Johnson and junior Tommy Gartman were locked in a battle for the starting quarterback position before Johnson's injury.

The Steers will scrimmage at Sweetwater next Friday. — GREG JAKLEWICZ

NY Jets kick Bengals in OT

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals usually prosper through the pass. On Thursday night, they buried themselves by it, with New York Jets kicker Pat Leahy tossing the last shovel of dirt.

Bengal quarterbacks were intercepted three times, with the last one setting up Leahy's 31-yard field goal in overtime that gave the Jets a 20-17 victory in a nationally televised National Football League exhibition game.

The Jets, who boosted their exhibition record to 2-1, tied the score in the fourth quarter behind backup quarterback Pat Ryan. He engineered a 55-yard scoring drive, tossing an 8-yard touchdown pass to rookie Mike Harmon with just over six minutes to play.

After a Cincinnati fumble, Ryan then drove the Jets 43 yards to the Bengals' 28.

But with 44 seconds to play, Leahy missed his second straight field-goal attempt, this one from 45 yards out.

The second Jet interception of the game nearly gave him a shot at a shorter one. Backup quarterback Turk Schonert threw downfield on the next play and defensive back George Floyd intercepted, giving New York the ball on the Cincinnati 31.

This time, the Jets did themselves in. Ryan hit Mike Augustyniak with a 9-yard pass, and the fullback fumbled the ball.

Cincinnati, looking for its first exhibition victory, took the kickoff and decided to bring in rookie quarterback Jeff Christensen. The first play was a pass, and Christensen fired the ball to linebacker Mark Jerue. He returned it 8 yards to the 22, and the Jets ran three plays before Leahy booted the winning field goal 2:15 into overtime.

OILER DAVE CASPER ...San Angelo police arrest tight end for DWI after one-car accident Thursday

Police arrest Casper on DWI suspicions

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Houston Oilers tight end David Casper was arrested early Thursday on suspicion of driving while intoxicated after his car crashed against a light pole, police said.

The 31-year-old Casper, a 10-year NFL veteran, was initially arrested for not having proof of insurance after officers found him standing beside his badly damaged Jeep at about 12:45 a.m., investigators said.

Master Patrolman Kenneth Kothmann said the DWI complaint was added after Casper agreed to take a chemical breath test.

Casper was released from Tom Green County Jail on a $500 personal recognizance bond, Sheriff Ernest Haynes said.

Formal charges against Casper had not been filed late Thursday.

Casper, a former all-pro tight end from Notre Dame, has played the last three seasons for the Oilers and the seven previous seasons for the Oakland Raiders.

BU If Baylors' unknowns come through...

WACO, Texas (AP) — Baylor Coach Grant Teaff listens to predictions of a second-division finish for his Bears and smiles.

"Nobody gives us much of a chance," he says. "Of course, the experts have done that to us before."

Teaff has brought the Bears Southwest Conference football championships in 1974 and 1980 on years that started out like this one.

He has a lot of talent but it's mostly untested, particularly at the vital quarterback position.

If it were a horse race, the Bears would be listed as 25-to-1 shots behind Texas, Southern Methodist, Arkansas, Houston, and Texas A&M.

The last time Baylor was picked sixth in the conference the Bears finished sixth in the nation.

The Bears will trot out a brand new offense and a new defense this year in the season opener against high-scoring Brigham Young on Sept. 10.

Teaff moved to the I Formation so he could put swift Alfred Anderson at tailback.

The Bears will unveil a 4-4 defense or wide tackle six, if you prefer, which was used sparingly but with some success last season.

Teaff also has had to revamp his staff because he an interesting season."

A player who could make things very interesting for Teaff is quarterback Cody Carlson, who is a freshman in eligibility because he was hurt last season.

"He could be the best we've ever had around."

"We're a team in transition in both the personnel and coaching standpoints. It should be an interesting season."

Grant Teaff

here," said Teaff. "Tom Muecke could be a great one, too."

"Cody is a better passer than Tom and Tom is a better runner than Cody but neither one is a slouch at either one," said Teaff. "They're both capable of becoming All-Southwest Conference quarterbacks."

The Bears have two gifted receivers in Gerald McNeil and Bruce Davis, who are swift and sure-handed.

Anderson rushed for 822 yards last season, the most yards of any back returning in the SWC for the 1983 campaign.

Defensively, the Bears are tough up front but green in the secondary. Giant 290-pound tackle Pat Coryatt anchors the defense.

Teaff said the key to the season should be how the Bears fare in the first three games.

"If we are to be successful, we need to come out of those games in good shape," Teaff said. "Opening with Brigham Young will be one of the biggest challenges that any team I've ever coached has had."

"Then we play UTEP (Texas-El Paso) and they're coached by my former assistant Bill Yung."

How does Teaff see the SWC race? He picks Texas, saying the Longhorns "should be head and shoulders above the rest of us."

Of course, that's what the experts said in 1974 and 1980.

Ninth in a series; coming next, a final look at the 1983 Southwest Conference race.

Homer drops Astros

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Luckily for Andy Van Slyke, the art of hitting and the ability to play defense remain separate entities in baseball.

The St. Louis Cardinals rookie excelled in one if not both departments Thursday night. His three hits, including his seventh homer, outweighed his faults as St. Louis rallied for 5-4 victory in 10 innings over the Houston Astros.

"I try to relax. I try not to let what I do on defense affect me," said Van Slyke following an offensive spree also featuring four of the Cards' runs.

If Van Slyke wasn't extending himself while at home plate, Houston likely hopes it's not around to watch it happen.

An RBI single by the young player helped St. Louis earn a 2-2 tie in the first inning. He walked, stole second and scored in the third. Afterward, he flied out in the fifth before tripling and scoring the tying run in the ninth ahead of his winning one-out homer an inning later.

Before distinguishing himself with his bat, the 22-year-old Cards player experienced trying moments at third base.

In the opening inning, he failed to cut across on a slow roller off the bat of Jose Cruz to shortstop and set up Ray Knight's two-run single. Two innings later, he fielded a bunt headed foul that wound up as a hit. And in the sixth, he let catcher Darrell Porter field a popup in front of the plate that should have been his.

"There are things I'm going to have to learn if I'm going to stick around," Van Slyke said.

At bat, his home run off

NAILED IN A RUNDOWN

St. Louis Cardinal Lonnie Smith is tagged out in rundown by Houston Astros third baseman Phil Garner during the fifth inning of their game in St. Louis Thursday night. Smith came around third too far on a high bouncer and was thrown out by pitcher Joe Niekro. St. Louis won the game, 5-4, in 10 innings.

Houston rookie Bill Dawley, 5-5, kept the young player at a 4-7 clip in his last 13 games. Over the span, the National League's longest current streak, he's lifted his overall batting mark from .232 to .289.

The Cards, by winning a

3-0 count, he expected to take a pitch from Gary Lucas, perhaps to draw a walk. But third base coach Dave Bristol was wig-wagging different signals.

Reds 6, Pirates 5
 Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner kept throwing relief pitchers at Cincinnati, and the Reds kept jumping on them, Duane Walker administering the coup de grace with a three-run double that wrapped up their five-run ninth inning and halted the Pirates' five-game winning streak.

Tanner brought in Rod Scurry, who walked Eddie Milner and Ron Oester, forcing in the tying run. In came Manny Sarmiento — and up came Walker, who ripped his double off the right-center field wall.

Glants 5, Expos 3
 Darrell Evans hit his 25th homer of the season, a two-run shot in the first inning, and Tom O'Malley homered in the seventh to lead the Glants past Montreal.

Phillies 4, Padres 2 to see the hit-and-run sign in that situation," said Diaz. So he decided to check the dugout. "I kept looking in and (coach) Bobby Wine and (manager) Paul Owens were going, 'Yes, yes.'"

"We were going like this, telling him to swing at it," Owens said, swinging an

Old clubs help Regalado into first round tie

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Victor Regalado had gotten pretty used to the old golf clubs he'd used since 1965, when he was a teenager.

But in June, just before the Western Open, he decided he needed a change and broke in a new set of clubs. Though he said he played well, "I wasn't scoring," Regalado said.

He missed the cut at the Western, tied for 53rd and 51st the following two weeks and hasn't made the cut in a Professional Golfers Association tournament for more than a month.

Regalado decided on Monday that he'd had it. He picked up his old clubs again. Three days later, he was one of four first-round leaders in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

Haynie, White tied

SHAKER HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — While Sandra Haynie's sore shoulder kept her from playing golf for three weeks, it helped her shoot a steady 2-under-par 70 for a share of the first-round lead with Donna White in the $200,000 World Championship of Women's Golf.

"Sometimes I tend to swing a little long, especially in my backswing," Haynie said after Thursday's first round. "I still have a little stiffness in my back. It's really a positive thing, because I have a really controlled swing with it."

Haynie, who finished eighth in the tournament last year, was the only golfer in the 12-player field to avoid bogeys for the first 18 holes on the par-72, 6,225-yard Shaker Heights Country Club course.

White, making her first appearance in the prestigious World Championship, was less consistent than Haynie but still managed a share of the lead. White had two bogeys to go with her four birdies.

Haynie played even-par golf except for birdies on two of the course's four par-3 holes. If she wins the first prize of $65,000 — largest on the tour — Haynie would become the eighth woman golfer to go over $1 million in career earnings.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Beneath all of the practical and organizational blockages and problems that can today occur, there is also a strong and vital influence that can bring broader scope to your life and plans.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Work activities do not seem to go as smoothly as you desire, so listen to the ideas of partners and follow through.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't get into anything new today but improve your present work activities. Come to a better understanding at home.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get into amusements that will lift your spirits and make you more dynamic. Forget business for a while.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Good day to discuss with kin what you have planned for the days ahead, but sidestep a demanding partner.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Although detailed work is boring you find it easy to communicate with others quite admirably. State your true aims.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into those activities that give you a feeling of wealth but forget amusements that are altogether too expensive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have very good judgment where ideas are concerned, so use it. Don't let a confused family tie dissuade you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A close tie can give you good advice today, so put aside any communications that can bring you trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your good friends can be most helpful in any personal wishes that you may have. Avoid money worries.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Cheer up and then you can use good judgment and you can get aid from an official for some problem you have.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You get fine ideas from contacts today and can use them to your benefit, but don't just sit around and fuss.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You want to change the conditions around you and close ties give good advice, so follow it. Steer clear of demanding types.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be good at anything that is of an intellectual nature and should have the finest education possible. He or she will find it difficult to organize matters. Stress religion and sports.

Prison chaplain welcomes youths

By TINA STEFFEN
Lifestyle Editor

"We like to have outside groups, both religious and cultural groups, to boost the morale of the inmates here," says Jim Combs, chaplain at A & R Unit of Oklahoma Department of Corrections in Lexington, Okla.

"The most monotonous thing about prison life is boredom," he said in an interview prior to "His Children's" concert, Aug. 4.

Combs was contacted earlier this year by Joe Whitten, minister of music at First Baptist Church, in regards to "His Children," a youth choir ensemble, performing at the unit during its prison concert tour, Aug. 3-14.

"He (Whitten) wrote me a letter stating they had been here and provided references from other prisons," Combs said. Combs talked with the unit's warden and secured permission for the group to perform at the unit's chapel.

Combs has never disapproved of any religious group coming into the prison unless those coming in had relatives living at the prison, he said. "Most of the inmates can relate to the youth choir. The inmates enjoy the singing as well as having someone close to their own

Prisoners have the option to attend the religious events at the prison chapel. "We have some areas of our prison where they are not allowed to come because of security. Some are on solitary confinement, on protection, and some on maximum security," he said. A few maximum security prisoners were at the concert that evening. "They've been here long enough and behave well enough (that) they've come up to a level where they can attend."

The Lexington Correctional Center, a medium security prison, and Lexington Assessment and Reception Center (A & R), a maximum security unit, are two prison units in one complex.

A & R unit receives every prisoner who comes into the prison system in Oklahoma. At the unit, the prisoner is subjected to all forms of testing and placement procedures. Testing includes psychological, educational, emotional, physical, mental, medical and personality testing.

Depending on an assessment, the inmate is assigned to a certain prison to begin serving his time. The assessment also determines the prisoner's security level.

age group coming to see them." Anytime the prison gets a large group like "His Children," the prisoners ask to have them back. "As a matter of fact, some might come up (to me) tonight and ask 'why don't you have them back next month,'" he said.

Ministerial fellowship has meeting

Howard County Ministerial Fellowship met at Spanish Inn Restaurant, May 15, to nominate and elect officers for the coming year.

New officers are Keith Wiseman, president; Rick Davis, vice president; Kenneth Patrick, treasurer; and Carl Powers, secretary.

An 8-hour sex education seminar designed for parents to discuss sex education was discussed. The program would come to churches promising to not discuss abortion or contraceptives for children. The Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce would sponsor the program.

Several churches had not responded with pledges or commitments for the Rainbow Project. Keith Wiseman, representing First Methodist Church, presented the project with a check for $4,919.20.

A report on the Haitians was given saying that all the Haitians except one is working. One was in San Antonio for TB treatment. Quinn Eudy, head football coach at Big Spring High School, and Mike Sharp, assistant coach, were guests at the meeting. Eudy spoke about the upcoming football season and the revamping of the football program at Big Spring High. He urged the members to help define a new image for Big Spring football.

Mrs. Johannsen, former Bible teacher, has several work books available for sale; the money could go to the Rainbow Project. The books are still used in the High School Bible classes.

Bonnington named new headmaster

Bonnington, Ph.D., to be headmaster of St. Mary's Episcopal School and Interim minister at St. Mary's Episcopal Church. The appointment became effective June 1, 1983, and will remain effective until a new rector is called.

Bonnington has been in Big Spring since June, 1982, serving as curate of St. Mary's Episcopal Church. Prior to attending the Episcopal Seminary of the Southwest in Austin, Bonnington taught economics for 12 years at Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

Brent Hutchins, summer youth minister at Coahoma First Baptist Church, was introduced.

Former governor's brother murdered

CROWLEY, La. (AP) — Nolan Edwards, an attorney and a brother of former Gov. Edwin Edwards, was shot to death in his law office by a disgruntled client who then killed himself, police said.

The assailant, identified as Rodney "Bubba" Wingate Jr., 29, of Mire, was twice convicted on drug charges. Nolan Edwards' law firm had helped him get a pardon in 1980 from then-Gov. Edwards.

Crowley Police Chief Al Gibson said Edwards was shot minutes after he arrived at his office Thursday.

Witnesses said a secretary ushered Wingate into Edwards' office, and three shots were heard before she could close the door.

Police said Wingate apparently pulled a .38-caliber pistol from his boot.

Edwards, 52, was shot in the head and shoulder. Wingate was shot through the neck.

Investigators found the gun on the floor.

The pardon Wingate received in 1980 also restored his right to carry firearms, said Alice King of the state Pardon and Parole Board.

Edwards had represented Wingate, an offshore oil worker and former jockey, in several cases.

Wingate had filed a $3.1 million malpractice lawsuit against Edwards' firm, said District Attorney Nathan Stansbury. Wingate had hired the firm after he fell on an offshore rig in 1977 and hurt his back, but the lawsuit was thrown out and Wingate claimed his case was mishandled.

A brother, Michael Wingate, said after Rodney's fall on the rig he was unable to work and Edwards loaned him about $20,000 to live on until a settlement was reached.

Michael said he received an envelope from Rodney on Wednesday night. He said the envelope contained Rodney's diamond ring, some other possessions and a note that said, "I'm tired of living."

Edwin Edwards and brother Marion Edwards stood in tears outside their brother's home on Thursday.

"We dont know all the details. We do know that Mr. Wingate was a long-time client and somewhat of a friend of Nolan's," Edwin Edwards said. "He (Wingate) had gotten into some difficulties, as you have been told earlier, and Nolan represented him in other matters.

"Wingate was currently involved in some legal controversy. Other members of the law firm believe he may have gotten angry at ed as an Acadia Parish assistant district attorney.

He administered the oath of office when Edwin was sworn in for his first term as governor in May 1972.
