

U.S. Marine death toll rising

Troops leave for Lebanon

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — More than 300 fresh Marine troops with morale said to be at a "fever-pitch high" left Camp Lejeune on Sunday for Lebanon, where they will replace those killed and wounded in a terrorist bombing.

Shortly after Maj. Gen. Al Gray ordered the Marines to leave Camp Lejeune, which is the home base for the Marines killed in Lebanon, troops could be seen climbing aboard large Huey helicopters and leaving the airfield in shifts, beginning at 3 p.m.

The Marines were flown to Cherry Point Marine Air Station, about 60 miles northeast of Camp Lejeune, where they began boarding 13 airplanes to leave the country, said Gray, commander of the 2nd Marine Division.

The planes carrying between 300 and 400 Marines began leaving at 7 p.m. Sunday, with the last flight to depart at 6:30 a.m. Monday, Gray said. The Marines would arrive in Lebanon "within 24 hours," he added.

Earlier Sunday, Gray said the troops would bring the 24th Marine amphibious unit back up to strength after 161 Marines and sailors were killed early Sunday by a suicide bomber.

Gray termed the attack "a godless type of thing and we're a force that knows our God." "If we were barbaric, we could defend against this sort of thing, but we're not," he said.

Gray said throughout history, such attacks have been prevented by lining up "five, 10 or 20 people and shooting them."

"It is possible to train and defend against any type of terrorist attack, but it is difficult to counter this kind of attack when our honor, training and Western civilization, and our respect for human life, is involved," Gray said.

Marines at Camp Lejeune were "stunned by this terrible act of violence," he said.

"We're ready to go," he said, adding that morale was at a "fever-pitch high."

Lt. Col. Edwin Kelley, battalion commander of 2nd Battalion, 6th Marines, 2nd Marine Division, said his unit did not have revenge on its mind as it prepared to move to Beirut.

Source: Department of Defense

"We've got a mission to do — it's unfortunate we had to have Marines killed, but we've got a job to do," he said.

The Defense Department said 161 Marines were killed and scores were wounded after a suicide bomber drove an explosives-laden truck into a four-story building housing several hundred Marines, part of the international peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

About 200 people were in the building when the bombing occurred.

The dead and injured Marines belong to a unit that had been in Lebanon since June and was due to be sent back to the United States in mid-November. The Marines are part of the 24th Marine amphibious unit based at Camp Lejeune.

The unit had been scheduled to be relieved by the 22nd Marine amphibious unit, which left the United States for the Mediterranean on Tuesday but was diverted to the Caribbean when civil disturbances broke out in Grenada.

Lt. Craig Fisher of the Camp Le-jeune public affairs office said the slain Marines were part of the Battalion Landing Team 1-8, which is the ground combat element of the unit.

Fisher said relatives would be notified through the standard Marine procedure — an officer would bring the news in person.

Kelley said some of his battalion had been in Beirut until four months ago, but others, including himself, had never been in Lebanon.

"I think morale is very high," he said. "All Marines are clearly concerned about the incident this morning. This is bad, that's all I can say."

Earlier Sunday, Marines were moving in jeeps, trucks and other equipment and marking them for shipment. In the barracks area, field packs were covered with ponchos in the pouring rain as troops lined up under the shelter of a balcony.

At least one sniper group was preparing its equipment for travel, but Marine officials would not discuss the unit nor allow reporters to talk with Marines on alert.

U.S. families await word on death list

By The Associated Press

In rain-dampened protests and tear-stained vigils, anxious and angry relatives of U.S. soldiers in Beirut waited today for word of their sons, brothers and husbands as the death toll from a terrorist bombing continued to rise.

For some families, there was good news by telephone, as the military notified relatives of survivors. For others, grim news came with a knock at the door, as officials visited the families of the dead.

"We have been praying, and we have a strong gut feeling that he is alive," said Jess Garcia, father of 19-year-old Randy Garcia. "We know we will see him again."

But the elder Garcia, reached Sunday at his Modesto, Calif.,

home, said, "The whole thing makes me sick. It's not our war."

The U.S. State Department said at least 172 Marines and sailors were killed as they slept early Sunday when a truck laden with explosives rammed into a four-story barracks. Moments later, a second truck crashed into a building housing French troops, killing as many as 58.

The State Department said there was an unconfirmed report that a group known as the Islamic Revolutionary Movement had claimed responsibility for both attacks.

"Ma'am, your son is OK," were the words that brought back hope to the family of Lance Cpl. Joseph A. Barile of Dover Township, N.J. See FAMILIES, page 2A

Navy systems analyst prepares for assignment as task leader

There's no grass growing under the feet of Vickie Burnett, the ambitious, intense daughter of Mrs. Lavelle Bartlett of Lamesa.

Thirty-year-old Burnett, a 1971 graduate of Lamesa High, has worked on Navy underwater research projects in Iceland's arctic 50 degree-below-zero temperatures and Guam's 100 percent tropical humidity.

Now a systems analyst for SAI Comsystems, Inc. while working toward her MBA, she'll soon be a task leader working for her company on a Navy undersea warfare contract.

One weekend a month she can be found working as an ocean systems technician at the Naval Reserve

Center in San Diego, where she was just promoted to chief petty officer.

"Making chief has always been one of my goals," she said. "Even though there are many women in my Naval enlisted specialty, not many of them are in senior positions, and I see myself as being a role model for other Navy women."

As a supervisor with Naval Reserve Inshore Undersea Warfare Group 1, her job is to teach detection of enemy ships or submarines prowling our coastlines during wartime.

LEARNING — Eight-year-old Stephen Ballas sits by a computer just outside of his classroom at the Lamplighter School in Dallas. The second grader uses the Texas Instruments computer to learn computer programming.

School has bevy of computers

DALLAS (AP) — Five-year-old James Eric Martin was intent upon moving a stick body to its proper place beneath a head on the computer screen.

"Move it up, up by his head," instructed his 5-year-old classmate, Stephen Nash.

"Why?" asked James Eric, manipulating the keyboard of the terminal, placed on a pint-sized table in the kindergarten classroom.

"Because that's his body," said Stephen.

Children teaching other children — even 5-year-olds — is a cornerstone of the computer program at the Lamplighter School, a private school that has more computers per pupil than any school in the nation.

In keeping with Lamplighter's motto — "A child is not a vessel to be filled, but a lamp to be lighted" — computers are not used for instruction by the teachers, unlike many other schools across the country. Their function at Lamplighter is purely creative and teachers are more interested in the processes involved than the end results.

The school has field tested a computer language called "Logo," developed by Massachusetts Institute of Technology researchers and adapted to Texas Instruments terminals by a team of MIT and TI programmers.

The idea was originated by J. Erik Jonsson, TI founder and chairman of Lamplighter's board of trustees.

"He sees a view of kids that is really quite visionary," said John D'Angelo, TI's liaison with the school. "He felt that computers — and this was five years ago — are something every child needs to know about. He sought ways to make that happen and he had some contacts with people at MIT and saw Logo as that vehicle. Children could develop those skills necessary to be computer-aware and be able to live in this society."

Lamplighter's 447 students — ranging from 3-year-olds to fourth-graders — have been using 50 computers donated by TI for three years.

Although no studies have been conducted at Lamplighter on whether the computers speed learning, D'Angelo and school director Pat Mattingly said they were convinced the program has improved the children's logic.

"They have to think through where they're going; they have to see the end result in their minds and then figure out the steps to get there," said D'Angelo, who taught math and science for 25 years before joining TI five years ago.

"We do feel that we've seen some changes in the children, mostly their feeling comfortable with what some adults would consider a scary experience" of using a computer, Miss Mattingly said.

The computers "naturally bring people together" and are well-suited to peer teaching, she added.

Lamplighter's history of innovation made it a natural setting to test Logo, D'Angelo said. The school, which issues no grades and has open classrooms built around "conversation wells," sits on 12 acres that include a barn and farm animals. The fourth-graders formed a corporation in which they sell fresh eggs and declare dividends.

Although most of the students are from upper-middle-class families, school officials say they provide financial assistance for students whose parents cannot afford the tuition, ranging from $1,150 to $3,100.

Logo was revised and refined after the study was completed at Lamplighter about a year ago. School officials declined to conduct studies on the computers' effect on learning because they didn't want to deny computer use to a control group of students, Miss Mattingly said.

The children's prowess during the Logo study, however, surprised even Logo's founders at MIT.

They found that Lamplighter's students "at a very young age were doing things on these computers that they didn't figure they'd be doing until the second or third grade," D'Angelo said.

Miss Mattingly said she thought the MIT researchers were surprised that such young children "would recognize letters, directions, colors so easily. To them, it was a game. And I'm sure it will have some effect on their other studies." She noted that children can more easily use a word processor than labor over a hand-written report.

Logo has spread to schools across the country, and studies elsewhere indicate that children working with computers "tend to grasp ideas quicker and it stays with them longer," D'Angelo said. "I think in the next three, four or five years we'll start seeing more definitive studies."

TI's role in the Lamplighter program remains minimal, he added. The company maintains the computer terminals and D'Angelo, manager of TI's educational support division, conducts a monthly tour of the school for educators and others interested in the computer program.

Each class has two terminals, and the teachers determine how often they are used.

The youngest children help each other "color the background" — turn the screen various colors — or create designs by moving a turtle in any direction. Fourth-graders create geometric designs, make balls bounce or program their own versions of video games.

Some children even have created computer-assisted instruction by designing arithmetic drills for their classmates, D'Angelo said.

The computers are not used for instruction by the teachers, however. Their function is purely creative and teachers are more interested in the processes involved than the end results.

"The teacher introduces it, motivates the child and gets him started. In the process of learning, the teacher has to step in many times," D'Angelo said.

Fourth-grade teacher Theresa Overall, who helped implement the computer program at Lamplighter, said teachers "at first were intimidated" by the computers. But once the teachers learned how to use the terminals, their response was overwhelmingly enthusiastic, she said.

Parents' response also has been positive, teachers said. One of Ms. Overall's students, 9-year-old Amy Day, bounded up to her teacher to announce, "We got Logo at home!"

Families

"My face must have lit up when I heard the news because my family just started cheering and shouting; I can't tell you how good I felt," said Angela E. Barile, after she phoned the American Embassy in Beirut to learn her 19-year-old son's condition.

Jennifer Simpson of New York City, wife of Cpl. Phillip Simpson, 23, waited for word of her husband, two days after giving birth to the couple's first son late Saturday.

"Just after the birth, we sent a telegram to the Red Cross in Beirut asking them to inform Phillip that he was a father," said the soldier's mother, Ida Rosenberg. "Then I woke up Sunday and heard about the bomb."

Sunday was "the worst day in my life" for Margaret Martinez as she waited at her Denver home for news of her 19-year-old son, Eugene. She said she dreaded a knock on the door, because she believed the Marines always notify the next of kin in person.

Mrs. Martinez called the bombing "cowardly" and said she had a solution to the Lebanese crisis.

tivities of seven West Coast Naval Reserve Mobile Inshore Undersea Warfare units," she said. "These surveillance teams use tractor-trailer vans containing electronic equipment, such as radar, sonar and high-frequency radio to detect and monitor the enemy, be they on the air, on the surface of the ocean or under it."

"In a national emergency we can be operational anywhere in the world within 72 hours," she said.

Burnett wasn't always this technically oriented; after college she originally planned on law school.

"Law school is graduate school and, since any undergraduate degree will do to get in, I went to Texas Tech and, in 1975, picked up a B. A. in anthropology — a subject which interested me," she said.

But the costs of graduate school kept her from going. The summer of 1975 she went from basic training in Orlando and ocean systems technician training in Key West on to Keflavik, Iceland, her first duty station. In less than two years she advanced to petty officer second class.

Due to the sensitive nature of her work, Ms. Burnett won't elaborate on job details but does remember the harsh Icelandic winters, gale force winds and six months of total winter darkness.

"It took me four months to get used to the hot sun, warm waters and humidity of Guam, my next duty station," she said. "I really enjoyed this tropical paradise with its incredibly good food and fantastic views."

Ms. Burnett, however, enjoys moderate climates best and, having always wanted to work in San Diego, left the Navy in 1980 to seek work with companies involved with Navy undersea research contracts.

"That was bad timing — no jobs were available in my field because all the companies were in between contracts," she said.

She returned to the Navy for two years, then left to briefly work as a GS-11 intelligence research specialist — still working for the Navy but as a civilian. Finally, in March, 1983, still in San Diego, she joined SAI Comsystems.

She wanted to retain some affiliation with the Navy, however, and train others in her specialty so she joined the Naval Reserves in September 1982.

At her Naval Reserve Command, Inshore Undersea Warfare Group 1, she is responsible for technical training and leadership and says she makes a significant contribution to her command's mission.

Next year she says she plans to apply for a Limited Duty Officer commission.

TV newswoman Jessica Savitch drowns in crash

NEW HOPE, Pa. (AP) — Jessica Savitch, an anchor for NBC News and the public TV series "Frontline," drowned along with a close friend, New York Post executive Martin Fischbein, when their car tumbled into the Delaware Canal, officials said today.

The car was found upside down in about four feet of water early today near a restaurant on River Road, said Mario Lasarro, a member of the Lambertville, N.J., rescue squad.

Miss Savitch, 35, a resident of New York City, was the author of the book "Anchorwoman."

Stan Getleson, circulation manager of the New York Post, confirmed that Fischbein, vice president and assistant general manager of the newspaper, died in the crash with Miss Savitch. Fischbein, 34, of Woodmere, N.Y., also was personnel and circulation director for the newspaper.

Bill McAndrew, a spokesman for NBC, said Fischbein and Miss Savitch were "close friends."

"The mud is knee deep on the bottom. It looked like they tried to kick the doors open but they couldn't," Lasarro said. The car's back window was smashed, allowing water and debris to pour into the car. A dog with the couple was drowned too, he said.

Bucks County Coroner Thomas Rosko confirmed the deaths today and said the bodies were recovered at about 1 a.m., but Lasarro said they appeared to have been under water for several hours.

"If it wasn't for the mud, they probably would have been able to get out," Lasarro said.

The bodies were taken to Doylestown Hospital, where autopsies were to be performed today, said Joanne O'Donnell, a hospital spokeswoman.

Miss Savitch, who had been with NBC since 1977, delivered NBC's one-minute prime-time news updates during the week, and had been an anchor for the Saturday edition of the "NBC Nightly News" until last summer, when she was replaced by Connie Chung.

She also was an anchor for NBC's special news service for its television affiliates and was the anchor for "Frontline," the weekly documentary series begun by public television in January.

Miss Savitch, who has served as substitute host for the "Today" show, was one of three NBC correspondents under consideration as a replacement for Jane Pauley, who is taking a three-month leave of absence from the show starting next month to have a baby.

She signed a new contract with NBC News last summer.

Famous drugstore closes

LOS ANGELES — Schwab's Pharmacy, the Sunset Boulevard soda fountain where legend has it the original "sweater girl," Lana Turner, was discovered, has closed after more than half a century.

But even as its doors shut Saturday, its future was up in the air.

"I've been here for 51 1/2 years. It's a tough (decision) to make, but everything comes to an end," said 72-year-old Leon Schwab, owner of the landmark. He said he was closing for "family reasons."

However, some New York businessmen are reportedly in the process of acquiring land that includes the drug store for a $40 million hotel and retail development, and Schwab's may become a part of it.

The legend of Miss Turner's film career being launched at Schwab's has no traceable source and is denied by Miss Turner, now 63.

But Schwab recalls a story concerning another famous person, this one grounded in fact. He says the late comic Charlie Chaplin used to like to get behind the soda fountain and make his own milkshakes.

Champ takes on new sport

NEW YORK — Floyd Patterson, the former world heavyweight champ, took on a different sport over the weekend — punching in at 3 hours, 35 minutes, 27 seconds at the New York City Marathon.

Sunday's race marked Patterson's first such run in the United States and his best time ever for a marathon.

The 48-year-old Patterson, the world heavyweight champion from 1956 to 1959 and again from 1960 to 1962, has run in three other marathons in Sweden.

Another sports celebrity, 40-year-old Jean-Claude Killy of France, a triple gold medalist in skiing in the 1968 Olympics, also completed his first marathon in New York in 3:58:08.

And actor Robby Benson, 28, running in his first marathon, beat them both with a time of 3:05:15.

Singer disputes charges

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Pop singer Bobby Goldsboro, who lost custody of his daughter Brandy in a bitter 1982 divorce battle, vows to disprove charges against him and get the 8-year-old back "if it takes the next 10 years and every cent I've got."

In the court case in which the singer and his wife of 20 years, Mary Alice, were divorced, Goldsboro's 17-year-old daughter Terri accused him of molesting her and a friend when they were 11 years old.

The couple was divorced last December and the 42-year-old singer was ordered to give his ex-wife about one-third of his $3 million estate.

The custody decision was upheld by a three-judge state court of appeals last week, but Goldsboro says he will appeal to the Tennessee Supreme Court.

"The simplest thing to do would have been to make a quiet settlement and be done with it," Goldsboro said Friday. "But when you're innocent of something and your reputation is at stake, you've got to fight it. I will go to my grave fighting this accusation."

Goldsboro said the charges are especially odious because he has carved a reputation as a strait-laced family man, performing songs like "Honey," "Watching Scotty Grow" and "The Straight Life."

"The worst thing that could be said about someone with my image, who sings about family life and children, is child molesting... If I had done something like that, I ought to go to jail."

No more laughs about boots

EL PASO, Texas — At first there were snickers over sneakers that are actually cowboy boots, but now the footwear — a combination of tennis shoes and boots — is catching on, with country singer Willie Nelson owning two pairs.

"I got all kinds of snickers until people tried them on and found out how comfortable they were," says Holmes Till, vice president of sales for Tony Lama, a maker of cowboy boots.

The tops of the "Tennie Lamas," which sell for $135, are leather, the soles are rubber and the unfunctional shoelaces are decorative. When the elaborately stitched top is tucked under the flare of a pair of jeans, they resemble your ordinary gussied-up-for-Sunday sneakers.

Till says Nelson, 50, has "one pair for running in the snow in Colorado and one for wearing on stage."

Actress to testify

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — Actress Jennifer O'Neill, who accidentally shot herself in the stomach last year, will testify in her estranged husband's trial on a weapons charge stemming from the incident, an official says.

John Lederer, 36, was indicted last November on a charge of criminal possession of a weapon, a felony carrying a possible jail term of up to seven years.

The charge stemmed from the seizure of an unregistered revolver at the O'Neill-Lederer estate in Bedford Hills after Miss O'Neill shot herself with the .38-caliber revolver on Oct. 22, 1982.

Bruce Bendish, the assistant Westchester County district attorney prosecuting the case, said Thursday that Miss O'Neill, 35, would be a witness for the prosecution in the Lederer trial. No trial date has been set. Bendish refused to say why he would call Miss O'Neill.

Miss O'Neill, who was not seriously injured in the shooting, has pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of possession of a weapon.

Harris out of hospital

AUGUSTA, Ga. — A gunman accused of taking five hostages while President Reagan played golf at a posh club will be released from a hospital today, authorities said.

Charles R. Harris, 45, was taken to University Hospital after complaining of chest and back pains following the Saturday incident at the Augusta National Golf Club.

Cardiologist David W. Cundey said Harris would be returned to the Richmond County Jail and is scheduled to be arraigned on various charges Tuesday before U.S. District Judge Dudley H. Bowen Jr.

Harris rammed his pickup truck into the club gates, took two White House aides and three other people hostage at gunpoint and demanded to speak to Reagan, who was on the 16th fairway at the time, authorities said.

Reagan called Harris five or six times at a clubhouse where the hostages were held, but Harris hung up on the president, apparently because he wanted to speak to Reagan in person, Richmond County Sheriff J.B. Dykes said.

After the gunman released four hostages and the fifth bolted to safety, he surrendered.

Harris had alcohol on his breath at 11:30 that night, seven hours after he was taken into custody, said cardiologist David W. Cundey.

"He seemed to be the type ... (who) just had a good time at night on the weekends," Cundey said. "He confirmed for me ... that he had been hospitalized for alcoholism before."

U.S. Attorney Hinton R. Pierce said Harris faces federal charges for threatening the president and could face a variety of state charges including kidnapping, aggravated assault, criminal trespassing and criminal damage to property.

At the White House on Sunday, the golf course hostage-taking appeared virtually forgotten, and the president's spokesmen did not mention it in press briefings that dealt with the crisis in Lebanon.

Secret Service spokesman Jack Smith said Sunday that he would not be a "Monday morning quarterback" on security procedures. The Secret Service is responsible for the president's safety.

But Smith added, "My initial assessment is if it were done again, it would probably be done the same way... As far as I know at this time, nothing was done improperly."

Friends said Harris' drinking had been a problem before.

"He's fine when he's sober, but when he's drinking, there's no reasoning with him," said James Hayspear, an associate of Harris and a lieutenant with the Augusta police force.

Any foreigner is free to leave by commercial aircraft, the radio said.

The United States has said it had no plans to invade Grenada. A convoy of U.S. warships carrying 2,000 Marines is sailing toward the tiny nation to evacuate Americans if necessary. Britain said Sunday it was sending a destroyer to its former colony in case its citizens needed to leave. About 1,000 Americans and 350 Britons are in Grenada.

"We hope to have a pretty good idea by Monday about how many Americans want to come out," said Kenneth Kurze, one of four U.S. diplomats who visited Grenada on Sunday to interview U.S. residents. "We have not recommended that they leave," he said.

A Western diplomatic source in Barbados, 150 miles northeast of Grenada, said Sunday night that between 200 and 300 Americans want to leave Grenada. Most of the Americans are students at St. George's University School of Medicine, said the source, who asked not to be identified. The source said about 40 to 50 Britons want to leave.

Teacher freed unharmed

DETROIT — A former Detroit teacher was freed unharmed after she was held in a detention home for three days on the turbulent Caribbean island of Grenada, her husband said Sunday.

Michele Gibbs-Russell, 37, who has lived in Grenada with her husband since September 1980, was taken from the couple's apartment Wednesday night, shortly after the army seized control of the island.

"A rumor was spread that she was involved in some political meeting this week" and that may have caused the abduction, said her 55-year-old husband, George D. Colman, who, like his wife, is a teacher in Grenada.

Colman, who remained in Detroit after his wife returned to the island last Monday, said he did not know what political meeting his wife could have been involved in.

"I can't think of any reason why the soldiers would have taken Michele," Colman said.

Colman said he talked to his wife by telephone Saturday night. She had returned to their apartment in the island city of St. Georges after having been released that afternoon.

Colman said his wife was treated well by her captors and was held in a St. Georges detention center known as Richmond Hill.

Lawyers want dismissal

LOS ANGELES — Lawyers for John Z. De Lorean, angered by the broadcast of explosive FBI videotapes showing the automaker's arrest on cocaine charges, say the case should be dismissed because a "circus" of publicity makes a fair trial impossible.

CBS and its Los Angeles station, KNXT, broadcast a total of about five minutes of previously secret surveillance tapes on Sunday, following a court ruling in the network's favor despite the objections of both defense and prosecution.

The tapes, made Oct. 19, 1982, showed the automaker lounging around a hotel room, discussing his ties to the Irish Republican Army and his need for financing for his failing car company in Northern Ireland, and declaring "it's good" when undercover FBI agents presented him with a suitcase purportedly containing cocaine.

De Lorean is scheduled to stand trial Nov. 1 on cocaine trafficking charges. Defense attorneys and the prosecutor had both argued in court that the broadcast would prejudice potential jurors.

New sanitation supervisor

WESTBROOK, Conn. — Actor Art Carney, who played the sewer worker Ed Norton on the old "Honeymooners" television show, has been named senior supervisor of subterranean sanitation in a town that doesn't have a sewer department.

"We felt that it needed the expertise of Ed Norton," said Westbrook First Selectman Donald Morrison.

The board of selectmen, the elected panel that runs the town, this month appointed Carney as honorary chairman of the nonexistent department. But the 64-year-old actor, who lives in Westbrook when he is not in Hollywood, wasn't happy with the title, "honorary chairman."

He told the selectmen that he wouldn't take the job unless his title was "senior supervisor of subterranean sanitation," the job Norton held in the 1950s TV comedy series starring Jackie Gleason.

On Thursday, Morrison said the minutes of the earlier selectmen's meeting would be corrected to give Carney the authentic job title.

Carney has appeared in Broadway plays and numerous movies, including "Harry and Tonto," for which he won an Academy Award as best actor.

Leaders halt trade

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados — Caribbean leaders have decided to halt trade with Grenada's new military regime, and a diplomatic source says at least 200 Americans caught up in the island's turmoil want to leave.

Grenada's government radio claimed today that the Caribbean community, the United States and Britain were preparing to invade the island imminently to overthrow the military council that took power last week.

The radio said the military council sent a diplomatic note to the U.S. Embassy in Bridgetown, warning that an invasion would lead to the deaths of "thousands of men, women and children" and would be "a rude violation of Grenada's sovereignty and of international law."

The early morning radio broadcast repeated earlier assurances that "the well being, lives and property of every American and other foreign citizens residing in Grenada are fully protected and guaranteed by our government."

Silent minute struck down

NEWARK, N.J. — A federal judge today struck down as unconstitutional a state law requiring a minute of silence at the start of each class day in New Jersey public schools.

On a suit brought by the American Civil Liberties Union challenging the minute of silence, U.S. District Judge Dickinson R. Debevoise ruled the law violates the First Amendment guarantees of separation of church and state.

The ACLU, representing an Edison High School teacher and several students and their parents, had contended the Legislature enacted the law as a way of allowing prayer in the classroom.

Censorship marks end of our freedom

The Reagan administration now requires that all its top officials with access to high-level information sign contracts.

These contracts require them to submit for governmental review anything they write and release to the public — for the rest of their lives.

Signatures on these contracts are required from thousands of persons on the White House staff and in the State and Defense departments, from military leaders, National Security Council officials and high-ranking foreign service officers.

The requirement is dangerous in the extreme. It gives those in power control over criticism from the very persons who are most aware of the facts and who are most qualified to comment.

The American Society of Newspaper Editors warns this is "peacetime censorship of a scope unparalleled in this country since the adoption of the Bill of Rights in 1791."

The stated purpose of the contract, of course, is to prevent the unauthorized disclosure of classified material. That's commendable. The effect in the end, however, will be government control of the distribution of information. The government will release only what it wants released.

The contract requirement is the latest of several moves by the Reagan administration which tend to whittle at the freedom-of-speech tenet of the First Amendment:

- It has sought to place limits on the Freedom of Information Act, which, since 1961, has opened federal files and has resulted in many revelations of government wrongdoing.

- It has rewritten the federal classification system to ensure more rather than less information will be classified.

- It has threatened the right of universities to publish and discuss unclassified information.

It's high time the media and public show concern. It is not the role of government to decide what information about its conduct should be released to the public.

If government somehow obtains that power of censorship, it will mark the end of freedom.

"Campaign '84 is getting ridiculous! One of the candidates just announced he won a straw poll of people riding with him in an elevator."

Mondale avoids the banana peel

WASHINGTON — The recent surge of Fritz Mondale is no flash in the pan. It springs from enduring sources of support inside the Democratic Party.

Mondale's strengths, moreover, are peculiarly well fitted to meet the special demands of a primary campaign. The Mondale hope is that early victories will overcome his big problem — the image of an old shoe Democrat soft around the edges on the hard issues and incapable of beating Ronald Reagan.

"A Real Democrat" has become the Mondale slogan, and it provides the key to his strength inside the party. Mondale has been moving nonstop around Democratic circles, high and low, since his successful race for vice president in 1976.

He knows Democrats and their hopes and problems at all levels and in all corners of the country. He shares their basic belief in a strong government working for prosperity at home and order abroad. They feel comfortable with him.

That is why Lane Kirkland took the extraordinary risk of pushing the AFL-CIO into an early endorsement of Mondale. That is why the National Education Association endorsed Mondale. That is why many Democrats from the big cities — led by Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York — are ready to declare for Mondale.

Support of that kind serves any candidate well in the primary and caucus contests that lead up to the nomination. For it is not a case of playoffs before the World Series or heats before the final race. Primary and caucus tests are intrinsically different from a national election.

Hand-shaking, answering direct questions and other features of person-to-person politics count in the primaries. Local issues become crucial, even dominant. Moreover, there is a rapid-fire, bang-bang quality to the caucuses and primaries. Hard decisions have to be made week by week, and sometimes day by day. Candidates cannot be programmed. They have to fall back on instinct. They are in trouble, sometimes fatal trouble, if the instinct fails, and mistakes are made.

While no one is exempt from blunders, Mondale's sure knowledge of local politics and local players confers relative immunity from banana peels. The more so as he has already begun to build local organizations in all the major states.

In that respect, his victory in a straw poll in Maine recently takes on special significance. Mondale spent something like $200,000 in Maine. Not because he needed to win the straw poll, which doesn't in fact have any direct bearing on Maine's choice of delegates to the national convention.

Maine was important because Mondale developed there the nucleus of an all-purpose, movable campaign staff for the caucuses and primaries to come. He brought together some hundred men and women who have now learned to do detailed political work together. They will be used over and over again as the campaign evolves — in Iowa and New Hampshire and Florida and everywhere else. That is why Mondale was not just being nostalgic when he repeated the old saw, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation."

Serious problems, to be sure, continue to plague the Mondale campaign. Though the former vice president has been running for the top office without cease for two years, many close observers still do not believe he has the "fire in his belly." Though he is intellectually one of the most astute figures in American politics, and less given to cant than any comparable leader, the general impression is that Mondale is a "softie." Though he favors a tax increase to close the deficit, it is also believed that he is "tool of the interests."

These paradoxes reduce themselves into a problem of image. Mondale does not enjoy, in voice or bearing, the attributes of a commanding leader. He is associated with the liberal wing of the Democratic Party. So the public imputes to him irresponsibility in money matters and mushiness on national security issues. When put up against President Reagan or his chief rival for the Democratic nomination, Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, Mondale does not look like an easy winner.

But Glenn lacks close rapport with Democratic leaders all over the country. He has almost no organization in the field. He lacks the sure political instinct so important in primaries. So he has to run even in the early tests as though he were going for the general election. He has to throw the long bomb, hit the home run. Which is to say that Mondale could beat Glenn in the primaries.

A win would do wonders for Mondale. For his great lack is what the military calls combat experience. He is a veteran without stars, a tough political general who has won no battles. More than anything else, Mondale needs to prove that he can beat heavyweight competition. The coming battle against Glenn is just what his managers ordered. He is well placed for that contest, and if he wins it, he will be no pushover for any Republican.

People are one who share faith

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am of a different racial background from most of the people where we live. Frankly, I have seen a lot of prejudice and while I try to overlook it, it is hard not to be angry. Can you understand how I feel? — F.M.

DEAR F.M.: Yes, I certainly can. One reason is because I have seen far too much of it in my lifetime, and very early in my ministry, I determined that our crusaders would not be segregated. I also have been in foreign countries where I was no longer of the same race as most people, and at times I have sensed the hostility some have against my own race. Racial prejudice, I have come to realize, is found in many parts of the world — sometimes very intensely.

A Christian who is seeking to live as Christ wants him to live will realize that racial prejudice and hatred are wrong. The apostle Paul had grown up being very proud of his racial heritage, but when Christ came into his life he began to see people differently. He began to look at them the same way God looks at people, and reached the point where he could say, "So from now on we regard no one from a worldly point of view... All this is from God, who reconciled us to himself through Christ and gave us the ministry of reconciliation" (2 Corinthians 5:16-18). God had given him a new love for others, and Paul became the great apostle to people who were not of his race.

At its heart, racial hatred is a spiritual problem caused by sin. We should support laws and other measures that promote racial harmony, but at the same time the deeper problem of hatred is a spiritual one that only can be fully solved by God. Christ can change a person's heart, replacing hatred with love and indifference with compassion.

Don't let anger and bitterness control you, no matter what others do that causes you to get angry. You would only become guilty of the same sin that afflicts them, and nothing would be solved. Instead, open your life to Christ and let him give you a new love for others. Let him show you that you can help bridge the gap between peoples, and let him help you in every area of your life to live for him.

In eighteenth century England eyeglasses were often worn purely as fashionable accessories, not as aid to vision.

Missile issue a political battlefield

WASHINGTON — Anti-nuclear agitators are trying to blow up a hurricane of protest powerful enough to stop the deployment of Pershing and cruise missiles in western Europe.

This is causing considerable consternation in the backrooms of Washington.

In what is probably a vain hope of defusing the controversy, NATO officials meeting in Ottawa will announce a 25 percent cutback of the short-range nuclear weapons already deployed in Europe.

The presence of these tactical nuclear weapons has been an accepted fact of life for years; they have been all but ignored in the hullabaloo over the scheduled December deployment of medium-range Pershing II and ground-launched cruise missiles.

Indeed, the only recent controversy over the tactical nukes involved their nomenclature. For years they were known as "theater nuclear forces," which offended some Europeans. So the Reagan administration obligingly lists them now as "non-strategic nuclear forces."

But a nuclear bomb by any other name is still a deadly piece of hardware, and the tactical nuclear weapons in Europe are now being upgraded, many of them to handle neutron bombs.

The number of these weapons is impressive, too. The Kremlin is fully aware of the grim figures. There is no reason not to let the American people in on the somber secret. My associate Dale Van Atta has seen top-secret Pentagon reports which describe the deployment of U.S. nuclear weapons around the world. There are 346 of these doomsday weapons in Guam and South Korea, 1,426 abroad in U.S. warships and 3,193 in arsenals at home. Slightly more than half our tactical nuclear weapons — 5,840 — are deployed in Europe.

The expected decision in Ottawa will reduce that number by 1,500. The hope is that this will blunt the protests over deployment of 572 Pershing and cruise missiles.

The tactical weapons, which are ready for action in Europe, include air-delivered bombs and Pershing 1A missiles, short-range 8-inch and 155mm howitzers, Lance and Honest John surface-to-surface missiles, Nike Hercules anti-aircraft missiles, nuclear land mines and naval weapons. West Germany, which has the largest and most vocal anti-nuclear protest movement also has the greatest number of U.S. tactical nuclear weapons systems on its soil: 594 155mm howitzers, 84 8-inch howitzers, 72 Pershing 1A launchers and 24 Lance launchers.

In second place is the United Kingdom with 36 155 howitzers, 12 8-inch howitzers and 12 Lance launchers. The breakdown for other NATO allies includes:

- Belgium: 36 155mm howitzers, eight 8-inch howitzers and four Lance launchers

- Turkey: 32 8-inch howitzers and 16 antique Honest John launchers.

- Greece: 24 8 inch howitzers and eight Honest Johns.

- Italy: 16 8-inch howitzers and six Lance launchers

- Netherlands: eight 8-inch howitzers and six Lances.

There are just the weapons systems, not the actual bombs or warheads. Each howitzer and launcher would have several rounds. All these tactical nuclear systems are being modernized — which means the Pentagon might have been planning to withdraw the 1,500 obsolete bombs anyway. New artillery shells for both size howitzers are already in production and they'll include some neutron ("enhanced radiation") warheads.

The Pentagon will spend nearly $70 million for about 800 new shells for the 8-inch howitzers, the weapons system common to all the allies. Each shell will have a maximum yield of 1.1 kilotons — one-sixth the size of the Hiroshima bomb — plus another .8 kilotons of enhanced radiation.

The new nuclear artillery shell will also travel 29 kilometers (18 miles) compared to the present round's 14-kilometer range (8.7 miles).

No neutron warheads will be deployed in Europe initially. By December, at least 340 of them will be stockpiled in this country. And any decision to deploy them abroad could come only after close consultation with the allied "host" and explicit approval from the president.

Footnote: There will be no demonstrations in East Germany, of course, against Soviet nuclear weapons. Yet the Soviets have deployed more of the horror weapons threatening western European than the other way around.

Good news

National Newspaper Week went by two weeks ago with little fanfare. Oh, one saw an editorial or two on the subject, but as far as I could tell no one cared, not even newspaper persons.

Perhaps newspapers, overcome by modesty, didn't feel it was right to print their own praises, so to speak. But I don't think that's the real reason they didn't play up freedom of the press and the meaning it has for our country.

Newspapers, as well as other media forms, know there is an anti-press mood spreading in society. Recently, a survey of Americans showed almost two-thirds of those polled would support some form of government censorship of the press in certain situations.

So any gung-ho editorials on the value of a free press would have been largely ignored. Apparently, fewer and fewer of us realize that a free press is a foundation of democracy. And we are failing to consider that once censorship begins, the open discussion of ideas diminishes, thus cutting into our freedom.

No, we seem to be content to think of the press as an arrogant and unethical bunch.

Of course, there are those in the business who fit this description. And there are times when the press makes mistakes that hurt its credibility. However, one must remember the persons making up the profession are human and sometimes will make bad judgments and mistakes.

Often the press is held to unrealistic standards. When one makes a completely new product everyday under deadline pressure, some mistakes are bound to creep in. That is simply the nature of the human condition, and to expect anything less is not reasonable.

However, the press has been negligent in informing the public just how it works. Most persons have no idea how a newspaper works or any appreciation for the amount of information that must be disseminated and molded into objective, yet interesting stories.

The press is not an enemy to the people of America, rather it is part of their makeup. The press, given freedom in the Constitution, is for the benefit of the people. And the press' job is to bring the truth, or the closest thing to the truth, to the people.

But with censorship, government or otherwise, the truth becomes clouded. And where does censorship begin and end? Without a free press, things could become much like the scene painted in George Orwell's 1984 where Big Brother talks of prosperity and good times, while in actuality people are living in poverty and fear. However, the people in 1984 really believe they are well off just because Big Brother and the news he controls tells them they are.

The task at hand is to review the tenets of freedom and reflect on what a free press means to our democratic system. And the press should make its purpose clear to the public. It is important both understands the other.

Most of all, it is important our hearts and minds remain free.

About three billion copies of the Bible have been sold or distributed throughout the world.

Dr. Donohue

Herpes discussed again

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: OK, so you ignored my first letter in which I pointed out that labeling herpes as Type I or Type II is an irrelevant distinction. Now it appears that you're going to spread more misinformation: In a recent column you say a Pap smear for diagnosis. Not quite true. A Pap smear costs about $8, I think, and a smear for herpes about $100. And as far as I can tell, they all are done the same except for difference in cell collection.

Some of your readers may be surprised to learn what a herpes culture costs if they think they are paying for a Pap smear. And the business about shaking hands. Didn't you see the item on TV about the doctor getting herpes through fluid on her surgical glove? — S.L.R.

It is not irrelevant to distinguish between herpes I and II. Even though both produce similar skin lesions, the herpes I virus is mostly responsible for infections above the waist and herpes II for the genital infections. Because the distinction has important social consequences for the afflicted person is not the only reason it is important to make it. The viruses have slightly different genetic makeup and respond differently to available drug treatment. And it's important for scientists seeking a good cure for herpes to keep such distinctions in mind and to study them as they relate to spread, etc.

I did say that a test "like the Pap smear" is often used to demonstrate the herpes II virus presence. It is called a tzanck test. The cell collection from the genital tract is done just as with the more familiar Pap smear for cervical cancer. However, a different strain is used to dye the collected cells and permit observation of them. You are referring to this test, but to a viral culture, which is a different matter, and which is obviously quite expensive. But even an ordinary Pap smear discloses infected cells. I don't know how valid your price quotations are.

Finally, the business of infection from touching a herpes sore: If a person had herpes infection of the finger, he could possibly spread it to another by hand-shaking, for example, but if the person had a genital infection, that handshake possibility would be virtually non-existent. Medical and dental personnel are at risk of getting herpes when they have to deal with active infections, but that's true of any infection. Protection is used, but there will always be accidents. That's a risk health workers take, but not the general population.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: After a series of blood tests I found I am a carrier of hepatitis. How is that I am not sick with hepatitis, but am a carrier? Will this ever leave me? — Reader

You could have had a case of hepatitis that was so mild you had no noticeable symptoms at the time. If you have the hepatitis virus in your blood now, you carry the illness and you could cause someone to get sick from it if your blood was transfused. But there are other ways to spread the illness. Your immediately family should get hepatitis vaccine for full protection.

I can't answer your question about if or when the virus might leave you. All I can say is that it sometimes does in time. Periodic blood tests will tell when and if that is happening. And you do need continuing attention and observation for your particular situation.

Dear Abby

Man doesn't like ladies in jeans

DEAR ABBY: I'm a reasonably attractive bachelor who enjoys the company of young women, but I'm having a hard time trying to find one who still wears a dress.

The other night when I called for my date for dinner and a movie (not a drive-in), she met me at the door wearing blue jeans! I asked her if she had a dress, and she said, "Yes, but then I'd have to shave my legs!"

Abby, I shaved my face to go out with her. Why can't she shave her legs to go out with me?

What is it with women these days? Why do so many of them prefer pants?

If you can answer this, you're a genius.

HATES WOMEN IN PANTS

DEAR HATES: I'm no genius, but I asked a number of pants-wearing women why they preferred pants. Some typical responses:

1. Pants are much more comfortable than a dress.
2. My legs aren't too terrific, so why advertise it?
3. Pants are warmer when I need warmth.
4. If I have a run in my hosiery, it won't show.
5. With pants I can wear a shirt or blouse that hangs down over my big behind to hide it.
6. Almost everybody else wears pants, and I don't want to be the oddball.

DEAR ABBY: When a funeral director signed "Dead Serious" requested that you ask people to quit making jokes about his profession, instead of being sympathetic, you added a few more. Abby, you showed the sensitivity of an armored tank and the shallowness of onionskin!

I am also a funeral director, and I've heard just about every mortician joke in the book.

When I walk into a place, I am asked, "What are you doing here — looking for business?"

Then someone else pipes up with, "Hey, everybody, act alive. Look who's here with his meat wagon!"

Abby, how would you like to come into a place and be greeted with, "Well, if it isn't Heartache Hannah" or "Lovely Abby with all the answers...ha, ha, ha!"

Now do you get my point, or should I hit you with my shovel? My name is not "Digger" or "Planter" — just call me...

DAVE IN IOWA

DEAR DAVE: Though somewhat corny, there may be a kernel of truth in your complaint. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: When you printed the letter from the mortician who was fed up with jokes about his job, such as "I'll bet people are just dying to do business with you" and "How's business? Dead, huh?" I think you did him more harm than good when you replied, "All men are cremated equal."

I am only 13 years old, but I know a put-down when I hear (or read) one.

A.C. IN GLENDALE, ARIZ.

DEAR A.C.: I apologize to all morticians who were offended. They should not have been. The final put-down is theirs.

P.S. Orchids to the mortician who wrote: "Don't let it bother you, Abby, most people in this business have a good sense of humor. Sign me... GRAVEDIGGER IN WEST ISLIP, N.Y."

DEAR READERS: Some Ralph Martin's new best-selling book about the late Jack Kennedy — "A Hero for Our Time".

This fascinating, somewhat gossipy book (published by Macmillan) makes wonderful reading. If you can't afford to buy it at $19.95 — borrow it.

Proper diets can help senior citizens to drink less alcohol

Senior citizens indulging in too much liquor may find that proper diets can lead them to sobriety, says a specialist in alcohol abuse among the elderly.

"When an alcoholic decides to begin eating well, overall behavior changes, the image improves and the person drinks less," says Kenneth F. Finger, Ph.D., director of the Alcohol Research Center at University of Florida in Gainesville, which is primarily concerned with senior citizen's drinking problems.

Although researchers have just begun to study alcoholism in elderly, it is known proper nutrition plays a part in recovery from disease, says Finger.

The proper diet, one built around choices from four food groups — milk, meat, chicken or fish, vegetables and fruits, enriched breads and cereals — can play a significant part in the recovery of alcoholic, who consumes only empty calories while drinking.

Finger says excessive alcohol consumption in older persons not only leads to poor eating habits, but also can be more hazardous to aging bodily systems than younger ones.

"It is now well established that the elderly are more sensitive to many drugs, including alcohol, as a result of the biological and physical changes that are brought about by the aging process," Finger says.

And research indicates heaving drinking by an older person may speed up aging process, causing deterioration of tissue, heart and brain, says Finger.

Why a senior citizen becomes alcoholic also is important. Finger cites preliminary results of National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA) study which attributes excessive alcohol use among elderly persons to several factors.

Retirement may trigger problem drinking in a person who has been in a productive job for many years and recognized as a community leader, NIAAA study suggests. Seniors may feel overwhelmed with too much time and too little to do and turn to alcohol as an outlet.

Or people living in retirement homes of villages may feel socially isolated from children and grandchildren. Others may be upset by death of friends or siblings and find comfort in alcohol.

"Once we've discovered the demographics of the elderly alcoholic, we can begin to design effective treatment programs such as individual counseling and group therapy," Finger says.

Chemical people

Q.: What is the Chemical People Project?

A.: The Chemical People combines public TV and people-power to launch a war on school-age drug and alcohol abuse November 2, 1983.

Millions of youngsters are reckless abusers of drugs and alcohol in our society and many more are threatened each year as the age-level of beginners drops. Forecasts show 8,000 of them will die in drunk driving accidents this year, according to a National Institute on Drug Abuse/University of Michigan survey.

A nationwide action campaign to combat school-age drug and alcohol abuse, combining the power of television and people-power at the community level, will be launched November 2, 1983, at 7 p.m. That is when First Lady Mrs. Nancy Reagan, as host, will introduce THE CHEMICAL PEOPLE on the Public Broadcasting Service, a two-part television special airing simultaneously with the gathering of thousands of men and women in local townhall meetings.

The first one-hour program is designed to inform and to motivate people. The second, following a week later, will act as a catalyst to the formation of permanent community Task Forces emerging from the Meetings. The meeting in Big Spring will be at the High School on Nov. 2, 1983 at 7 p.m. and Nov. 9, 1983, at 7 p.m. For more information call: 263-7641 or 263-1451.

This project is supported by the Big Spring Police Department.

Law hopes to ease crime

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A proposal to limit weary travelers to four hours at rest stops and 20 minutes in highway laboratories is being hailed as a way to crack down on roadside crime.

The state Department of Transportation is seeking the time limits for its 66 rest areas so people won't use them for long-term stays, and so police can combat the prostitution, drug abuse and homosexual activity that plagues a few.

Two Monroe County rest stops just north of the Ohio border pose the most trouble, with prostitutes from Toledo, Ohio, frequenting them, local officials testified last week at a hearing before the Legislature's Joint Committee on Administrative Rules. Another hearing is scheduled Nov. 1.

"The prostitutes are making $200-$300 a night out there," Monroe County Prosecutor Michael LaBeau said of the stop off Interstate 75 just after motorists enter the state.

LaBeau said that while illegal activity has subsided somewhat, it has been "a common occurrence for a husband to be accosted in front of his wife or children by prostitutes... for women to be in men's restrooms, for women to be using the restroom and to be robbed, or to walk in the restroom with a child and to find a prostitute in the restroom using narcotics openly in view of the child."

He said another rest area on U.S. 23 not far from the Ohio border experiences similar problems, but not of the same magnitude.

"The crime that's occurring at these rest areas... is not just a Monroe County problem," LaBeau said. "A majority of the victims come from all over the state and all over the country."

Jack Burton, supervisor of roadside development for the DOT, told the committee that the proposed rules — which run seven pages and include a variety of acceptable and prohibited activities — were drafted by a task force set up after a woman was murdered in 1979 at an I-75 reststop in northern Michigan near Gaylord.

Some lawmakers questioned whether time limits would do any good in combating the problems.

"The law enforcement people are not going to stand there and time people going into the john," said Rep. Ernest Nash, a former state police officer. "I really don't see how these rules are going to deal with the problem they've laid before us."

But Rep. Michael Griffin said the rules would give police "something to operate with."

Police find little to link suspect with death of boy

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Although Ottis Elwood Toole says he kidnapped and killed 6-year-old Adam Walsh, there is little evidence linking him to the boy's disappearance other than the confession, police say.

"Anything is possible," Hollywood Police Chief Sam Martin said Sunday. "But we're convinced we have the right man."

Adam, the subject of a recent television movie on child abduction, was snatched from a shopping mall here July 27, 1981. His head was found floating in a canal two weeks later.

When Toole led police to the site where he said they would find the boy's buried body, they found nothing, Martin said, however, that the search for the body might resume soon.

Martin said police would "start anew" in seeking evidence that might help connect Toole, 36, to Adam's disappearance.

The boy's disappearance led his parents to start a campaign that was instrumental in helping win passage of the federal Missing Childrens' Act, which helps authorities nationwide swap information in such cases.

Martin said that so far, police hadn't been able to prove that Toole was in Hollywood at the time of the kidnap-murder.

"We can't find any physical evidence placing him in the area," he said. "All we have is what he has told us."

Toole apparently made little or no use of credit cards and was involved in few other transactions for which investigators might be able to find bills or receipts, Martin said.

He was reluctant to explain how Toole could have fed or supported himself.

"He says he didn't do anything down here other than" the Walsh killing,

Martin said. "But I don't think I'd better get into that. It's a little difficult to talk about. After this is all over, I'll tell you what he told us," he said.

At the time of his confession, Toole was serving a 20-year prison sentence for arson convictions and was in the Duval County Jail in Jacksonville after being indicted Sept. 8 by a grand jury for first-degree murder and first-degree arson.

Toole and confessed murderer Henry Lee Lucas, who met on a headline in Jacksonville in 1976, have been linked to 69 unsolved homicides.

Met celebrates 100th birthday with stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Seldom have so many listeners had so many reasons to shout bravo — but then how often does an opera lover find the likes of Leontyne Price, Luciano Pavarotti and nearly 100 more of the world's greatest singers on the same stage?

The star-studded lineup of opera greats gathered over the weekend for an 8 1/2-hour musical extravaganza to celebrate the 100th birthday of the Metropolitan Opera.

In contrast to the Met's opening on Oct. 22, 1883, when three singers performed "Faust," Saturday's observance — 100 years later to the day — required more than one work for what some called the operatic event of the 20th century.

In one performance Saturday afternoon and another that evening, both of which were televised, each singer tried to surpass his or her previous best, pouring out a succession of thrilling arias, duets and ensembles. Ticket prices ranged from a steep $10,000 for an eight-person box to $10 for standing room.

The only selection from "Faust" was the final trio sung by Katia Ricciarelli, William Lewis and Nicolai Ghiaurov. Their performance came after Osie Hawkins, with the Met for more than 40 years as baritone and announcer of "indisposed artists" to Met audiences, introduced 26 former Met singers who sat on stage during the final third of the evening concert.

And after it was all over at 1 a.m. Sunday, the performers all crowded on stage to ring down the curtain with a rousing rendition of "Happy Birthday to You."

A tingling sense of heightened excitement pervaded the five-hour evening concert. It began at 8 p.m. with Leonard Bernstein, lavishly cheered, conducting the Met Orchestra in Beethoven's "Leonore Overture."

First performance honors went to Montserrat Caballe and Jose Carreras, beautifully singing the final duet from "Andrea Chenier." The final, "Masked Ball" duet was sung by a glowing Miss Price and Pavarotti.

The two solos before the last duet were the most thrilling of the exhilarating night. Marilyn Horne sang "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" in a way to make one wish always to preserve the memory. Birgit Nilsson, greeted by the audience as an artist in a class by herself, was both crisp and heart-rendingly emotional in her singing of Isolde's narrative and course. Greeted after she finished with a bouquet thrown to her feet and silver confetti thrown from the top balcony, Miss Nilsson held up a hand to stop the cheers.

The daytime concert ended with an elegant duet from "Otello," sung by Mirella Freni and Placido Domingo.

Bahr's FG dashes Cowboys' win streak

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Chris Bahr gave the boot to the Dallas Cowboys' dreams of an unbeaten National Football League season Sunday night with four field goals including the game-winner from 26 yards out with 20 seconds left.

Bahr's short-but-deadly placekicking and quarterback Marc Wilson's passing gave Los Angeles a pulsating 40-38 National Football League victory over the Cowboys.

Los Angeles Coach Tom Flores said "I'm exhausted. It was a wild game but when you play Dallas that's the kind of game it's going to be."

"Of all the games I've been involved in over the years this is one of the greatest, especially the way we came back after giving them life."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry took the loss philosophically.

"I thought we might pull it out again," said Landry. "But you know the winning streak isn't going on for ever. The Raiders made some excellent plays on that final field goal drive."

The Cowboys had been the lone unbeaten team and had come from behind to win seven consecutive games before the last-second loss to the Raiders.

Wilson completed 26 of 49 passes for 318 yards and three touchdowns as he made his first start since 1981.

"I was thrilled to get the chance to play against Dallas," Wilson said. "You may as well start out against the best."

Wilson confirmed that he had signed a new lucrative multi-year contract with the Raiders.

Dallas linebacker Mike Hegman lumbered nine yards for a touchdown with a Wilson fumble early in the fourth quarter to give Dallas a 38-34 lead. Bahr kicked a 26-yard field goal to trim the deficit to one point before he covered the same distance to beat the Cowboys.

Linebacker Anthony Dickerson, who stood to be the defensive goat for the Cowboys, applied the hit that jarred the ball loose from Wilson with 1:55 lapses in the final quarter.

The ball bounced along the ground until Ed "Too Tall" Jones became entangled with a referee and knocked it forward. Hegman was tackled at the goal line but fell across for the score.

Wilson threw three first-half touchdown passes, including a one-yard toss to tight end Todd Christensen as time ran out.

a fake field goal attempt gave the Raiders the chance for their go-ahead touchdown in a wild 31-24 first half.

The Raiders drove 78 yards in less than a minute for the score after Odie McKinney intercepted a pass by Danny White at the Los Angeles 22. Chris Bahr faked the field goal and Wilson threw a long pass in the direction of Don Hasselbeck. Dickerson interfered with him in the end zone with three seconds to go before intermission.

Bahr kicked a 24-yard field in the third quarter and a 26-yarder at 5:20 in the fourth following Hegman's touchdown.

White caught a touchdown pass and threw two scoring passes himself, including a 17-yarder to Doug Donley at the beginning of the fourth period.

The Cowboys received 17 gift-wrapped points in the first half thanks to Los Angeles fumbles.

Jones pounced on Wilson's fumbled snap at the Raider 33 and four plays later Dallas tricked the Raiders for a touchdown from the 15.

White floated off to Ron Springs who ran to the left then floated a pass across field to the wide open White at the 5.

Bahr's 37-yard field goal and Wilson's two-yard scoring pass to Derrick Jensen put the Raiders back on top 10-7 at the end of the first period.

Greg Pruitt's fumbled punt to Rod Hill at the Los Angeles 38 positioned the Cowboys for Springs' two-yard touchdown run.

Rafael Septien's 23-yard field goal after Dickerson recovered Marcus Allen's fumble at the Los Angeles 20 gave Dallas a 17-10 lead.

Rod Dixon wins NYC marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — New Zealand's Rod Dixon, fighting off leg cramps and a sore hamstring, wore down first-time marathoner Geoff Smith of Britain and won the New York City Marathon in dramatic fashion Sunday — the first foreigner to capture the prestigious event in the race's 14-year history.

Norway's Grete Waitz, meanwhile, continued her domination of the women's competition, winning for the second year in a row and the fifth time in the past six years.

Dixon, in only his second marathon, was timed in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 59 seconds — the 10th-fastest in history — and nine seconds ahead of the weary Smith, who led from just past the 15-mile mark until the final-quarter mile in the grueling race run in a steady drizzle.

The 33-year-old Dixon fell to his knees after crossing the finish line in Central Park, kissed the ground, then wildly waved both hands into the air. The leg-weary Smith collapsed.

"I couldn't believe I passed him when I did," said Dixon, who had predicted he would win the race and do it with the fastest time in history.

"It took me ages and ages to catch up," added Dixon, the 1972 Olympic bronze medalist in the 1,500 meters who had trained intensely for this marathon in Reading, Pa. "With one mile to go, I told myself, 'Kick does the trick. I've got to go.'"

Dixon went — as fast as he could although continually grabbing at his right hamstring.

"I was getting cramps and I had a twisted hamstring," said Dixon, "but I just decided to push, push, push..."

"It was the greatest thrill of my life."

For Smith, finishing second, in 2:09:08, had to be both rewarding, since it was his first attempt at the 26-mile, 385-yard distance, and frustrating, after leading for so long before faltering in the closing stages.

Smith, 29, from Liverpool, England, and a former firefighter before coming to the United States and going to Providence College, where he is a senior, stumbled with about one mile left and nearly fell.

He regained his composure and determinedly tried to hold off Dixon's surge.

"I was really worried that I was going to have to quit," said Smith, a member of the 1980 British Olympic team in the 10,000 meters. "I was getting leg cramps."

When he saw Dixon stride past him, Smith said he thought to himself, "I've just got to get to the line." "The last few miles, I was really tired," he added. "My legs were gone. I was running from memory, not from any strength."

Smith admitted that he had gone out "too fast at the beginning."

Did he have any regrets about the race?

"Yeah," he said, "I got beat."

Ron Tabb, the runner-up in the Boston Marathon this year and winner of marathons in Sydney, Australia, and Peking, China, was the first American finisher Sunday. Tabb, 29, came on strong in the last half of the race to wind up third in 2:10:46.

He was followed by John Tuttle of Auburn, Ala., in 2:10:51, John Graham of Scotland in 2:10:57, early pacesetter Gidamis Shahanga of Tanzania in 2:11:05, first-time marathoner Rudy Chapa of Eugene, Ore., in 2:11:13, and Domingo Tibaduiza of Colombia in 2:11:21.

This was the first time since 1975 that neither Bill Rodgers nor Alberto Salazar had won the race. Rodgers, the winner four consecutive years, from 1976-79, did not enter after running last week in the America's Marathon at Chicago, and Salazar, the champion from 1980-82, claimed he was suffering from a hamstring injury.

The women's division, however, provided a familiar story, as the imperturbable Waitz, a former school teacher in Oslo, pulled away from her closest competitors near the eight-mile mark and breezed to victory in 2:27:00.

She was followed by Laura Fogli of Italy in 2:31:49, Priscilla Welch of Britain in 2:32:31, Alba Milana of Italy in 2:34:57, Nancy Ditz of Menlo Park, Calif., in 2:35:31, and West Germany's Christa Vahlesieck, two-time holder of the world best, in 2:35:59.

"It was not difficult with no opposition," said Waitz, the marathon winner in the inaugural World Track and Field Championships at Helsinki, Finland, in August. "I ran a comfortable race."

The race, through New York City's five boroughs, attracted 15,193 starters from more than 17,000 entrants, making it the largest marathon in the United States and the second biggest in the world.

A total of 14,458 runners completed the marathon. The final runner to cross the finish line was Carolyn Messner of New York, who was clocked in 9:36:49.

Oilers edged by Chiefs

HOUSTON (AP) — Kansas City kicking specialist Nick Lowery got his second chance against Houston Sunday but Oiler kicker Florian Kempf will have to wait for another day.

Lowery and Kempf both missed potential game-winning field goals in the final four minutes of Sunday's National Football League game that forced an overtime period.

Kansas City won the toss and drove to Houston's 22-yard line where Lowery, who had missed a 52-yarder with 4:04 to play, booted a 41-yard field goal for a 13-10 victory.

Houston called a time out prior to Lowery's game-breaker, but it was just what Lowery wanted.

"I like time outs before I kick," Lowery said. "Today, it gave me a chance to go to the sideline and collect my thoughts and tell a few jokes."

Lowery said he didn't want to stay on the field during the time out, where he would have to face an Astrodome video screen displaying his picture.

"I didn't want to stand there looking at a 40-foot picture of myself, now that WOULD make me nervous," he said.

Lowery returned to the field with a very unhappy outcome for the Oilers, who saw their chance for victory dashed when Kempf missed a 41-yard kick with four seconds remaining in regulation play.

Kansas City has won three of its last four games to even its record at 4-4 while the Oilers lost for the 15th consecutive time and are 0-8 this season.

"I wanted to make it... it was too perfect," Kempf said. "I was too conscientious. It was a good snap, place and kick. I know I'm a good kicker. I'll tune it out, but it's sure to be reshaped. This is the worst experience in my life."

Houston scored on a costly first quarter drive that sent Earl Campbell to the sidelines for the remainder of the game with a pulled groin muscle.

The Oilers scored on Gifford Nielsen's three-yard touchdown pass to Stanley Edwards and Kempf booted a 32-yard field goal with 8:25 left in the game to knot the score at 10-10.

The Chiefs offense continued to blossom under Kenney, who completed 25 of 43 passes for 264 yards and the team gained 353 total yards.

Nielsen, once the darling of the fans when he was the backup, heard the heaviest boos of the season when he threw a third quarter interception to safety Deron Cherry.

"I try to keep everything on an even keel, in life as well as in football," Nielsen said. "I feel like after today's performance, that I need to do a lot to improve. I don't think we've lost the will to win."

Interim Oiler Coach Chuck Studley said, "It's a terrible thing to lose a game like this when you have an opportunity to win. It's a credit to the coaches and team the way we played."

Falcons win on furious finish

Falcons 27, Jets 21
 Mick Luckhurst booted two field goals in the final 3:42 as Atlanta, down 21-0 late in the third period, exploded in the final 16 minutes to down New York.

Billy "White Shoes" Johnson caught a TD pass from Steve Bartkowski and sped 71 yards with a punt return for another score. The other Falcon TD came on a 25-yard pass from Bartkowski to William Andrews.

In other games Sunday, it was Kansas City 13, Houston 10 in overtime; Minnesota 20, Green Bay 17 in overtime; Atlanta 27, New York Jets 21; Chicago 7, Philadelphia 6; New England 31, Buffalo 0; Cincinnati 28, Cleveland 21; Washington 38, Detroit 17; Miami 21, Baltimore 7; Pittsburgh 27, Seattle 21; Denver 14, San Diego 6; San Francisco 45, Los Angeles Rams 35; and New Orleans 24, Tampa Bay 21.

Tonight, the New York Giants will be at St. Louis.

Rivera's career finished

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers' rookie Gabriel Rivera will probably never play football again, according to a neurosurgeon who called the promising defensive lineman's case "bad, very bad."

Rivera, severely injured in a two-car, head-on auto collision last Thursday in suburban Ross Township, had his status upgraded over the weekend from critical to serious by the Allegheny General Hospital staff.

But a Steelers' spokesman said it will be 10 to 14 more days before doctors know whether Rivera's spinal cord and chest injuries will result in permanent paralysis.

"The chance of paralysis still exists," said Steelers' spokesman Joe Gordon. He said Rivera's parents, who live in Texas, and the player's pregnant wife were with him throughout the weekend.

"He responds to their questions by nodding," Gordon said. "He holds his mother's hand."

Rivera listened on the radio as the Steelers defeated the Seattle Seahawks 27-21 Sunday. Afterwards, several of his teammates sent Rivera greetings during post-game interviews.

Gordon, meanwhile, said he was upset with a Pittsburgh Press story Sunday which quoted the unidentified neurosurgeon as saying the question is not whether Rivera will play football, but if he will walk again. The doctor said he was "very acquainted" with the Rivera case.

"I don't think the question about him every playing again is even a legitimate question at this point. It's more a question of whether or not he'll ever walk again," the doctor said. "You're talking about a long, protracted recovery period. You're talking about months."

The neurosurgeon, who did not want to reveal his name for professional reasons, claimed the first 24 to 48 hours after the accident were the most important to Rivera's recovery.

"If he doesn't show any improvement, even the slightest improvement in the first day or two, he's not likely to make any," the doctor said. "He has what we call a physiologically transected (spinal) cord. That means his spinal cord is not working. There has been an interruption of the electric impulses. The impulses aren't going through the damaged part of the spinal cord. It's like a short-circuited cable."

"You can't patch that. You can't change that. The spinal cord will heal and be sturdy, but whether the function returns is a matter of nature. In most cases, the chances are not very promising."

The doctor said that if Rivera doesn't recover, "he'll have total loss of function below the injury. We're talking about the lower limbs. He has had movement in the upper body."

The neurosurgeon said surgery would not correct the problem, although Rivera's brother, Adrian, was told the doctors will operate again after the swelling in Rivera's chest goes down and his low blood pressure returns to normal.

Rivera underwent surgery several hours after his accident in order to determine the extent of his injuries.

On Friday, Rivera, 22, was charged with drunken driving, speeding and related violations, although Ross Township Police Chief Dwight Guthrie refused to release the results of a blood alcohol test that led to the charges.

Guthrie had asked the hospital to perform the tests after Rivera was admitted.

The police chief said the 6-foot-3, 285-pound Rivera had been thrown through the rear window of his sports car, a Datsun 280-Z, after Rivera's car collided with a car driven by Allen Watts, 48 of Ross.

DANCE FEVER — Atlanta Falcons' kicker Mick Luckhurst dances and gyrates after he kicked a field goal in the fourth quarter Sunday at Shea Stadium in New York to put his team ahead of the New York Jets 24-21 with 3:42 remaining in the game. Luckhurst later kicked another field goal to make the final score 27-21.

Payne holds on for Disney win

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — There was only one winner — Payne Stewart — but three players achieved cherished goals in the Walt Disney World Golf Classic.

"It was one of my goals to win again this year," Stewart said after he had pulled away from the pack with an eagle-birdie burst and scored a two-stroke victory Sunday. The victory was worth $72,000 from the total purse of $400,000 and pushed Stewart's earnings for the season to $177,834.

"I'd been close before. I'd been right there. I had chances three times in July, in the Western, in Milwaukee and in Quad Cities.

Disney Golf

"I'd been knocking on the door. This time I got it. "Maybe the golf gods were looking out for me," said Stewart, who had a final round 67, 5-under-par, and claimed the second victory of his three-year PGA Tour career with a 269 total, 19 strokes under par on the 7,150-yard Magnolia course at this sprawling resort complex.

The key, of course, was his chip-in eagle on the 10th and a 15-foot birdie putt on the next hole, a burst that separated him from the field and put him in command. "Realistically, after that, we really didn't have a chance of overtaking him," said Nick Faldo of England, who eventually tied for second with Mark McCumber at 271. McCumber shot 67 over the last round while Faldo had a solid, no-bogey 66.

"This was an important week for me," said Faldo, winner of five European tournaments and the leading money-winner on that tour.

He came into this tournament — the next to last on the American schedule — as the 126th man on the money-winning list. He faced the task of improving to 125th or better to insure his exemption in the United States next year. His winnings of $35,200 nailed it down.

"My future is in this country," said Faldo. "I'll play 18 to 20 tournaments here next year, only a few in Europe. I'll probably buy property here. It was very important to me to get the exemption."

And Hal Sutton achieved a goal, too. Although he finished a distant 40th, with a closing 70 and a 282 total, he learned he will be named the PGA Player of the Year. The official announcement was expected today.

"A dream come true," said Sutton, who now has completed his American season. He won $1,520 and increased his leading money-winning total to $428,668.

Scott Hoch, who had shared the third round lead with Stewart, was fourth alone at 70-272. U.S. Open champion Larry Nelson, Craig Stadler, Gary Koch and Morris Hatafsky were next at 273. Stadler and Koch each had a closing 67, Nelson 68 and Hatafsky 69.

NFL

scoring pass play in the fourth quarter as Denver overtook San Diego. The Denver defense held the high-scoring Chargers to just two field goals, but San Diego was operating without quarterback Dan Fouts, leading rusher Chuck Muncie and wide receiver Wes Chandler.

Saints 24, Bucs 21

Safety Bobby Johnson returned his first NFL interception 70 yards for a touchdown to complete New Orleans' come-from-behind victory over winless Tampa Bay. The Bucs had held a 14-0 lead on James Wilder's two-yard TD run and Jeremiah Castille's 69-yard interception return.

Frosh post tourney victory

The Big Spring High School freshmen volleyball team won first place in the Snyder Tournament Saturday.

The team advanced through the first round by whipping Lamesa 15-2 and 15-5. Top server was Sonya Evans with 11 points. The second round saw the frosh stop Pecos 15-9 and 15-11 with Evans once again serving 11 points.

Coach Anna Ezzell said team play was the big factor in the win over Pecos. She cited Sheri Myrick for blocking, Tab Green and Shelia Chapman for spiking, Connie Swinney for setting, Laura Mauldin for backcourt play and Lisa Hale for all-around effort.

In the championship game against Seminole, Big Spring lost the first match 11-15, but stormed back to grab 15-5 and 15-8 wins. Tab Green served 18 points during the match.

The team will be a home tonight with a 4:30 p.m. game. The freshmen also will play their final game of the year Tuesday at Steer Gym at 5 p.m.

The team's record is now 15-2.

Goliad wins 2nd at Snyder

The Goliad volleyball team captured second place in the Snyder Tournament over the weekend.

Goliad defeated the Snyder "C" team 13-15, 15-1 and 15-6 to advance to second round action against Snyder's "A" team. And Snyder once again fell to Goliad 15-13, 12-15 and 15-6.

In the championship round, Seminole defeated Goliad 15-6, 1-15 and 11-15.

Goliad's high point server for the tournament was Melissa Martinez with 30 points followed by Sharon Chatman with 15 points and Shana Brasel with 10. The team is in action again Thursday at Andrews.

Steelers 27, Seahawks 21

Franco Harris, Cliff Stoudt and Frank Pollard scored first-half touchdowns, then Pittsburgh had to hold off a dramatic second-half Seattle comeback.

Pittsburgh led 24-0 at the half before substitute quarterback Dave Krieg led the Seahawks' second-half resurgence.

Bears 7, Eagles 6

Quarterback Vince Evans threw a first-period touchdown pass to Dennis McKinnon and the Chicago defense made it stand up as the Bears edged Philadelphia. The Eagles' scores came on Tony Franklin field goals of 24 and 38 yards.

Flag football event delayed

The Big Spring Jaycees, in conjunction with Coors and radio station KWKL, are sponsoring a flag football tournament to benefit the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center.

The tournament was originally planned this weekend but has been postponed until either Nov. 5 or 12. Spokesman David Trusty said the delay was needed to obtain a playing field and give teams additional practice time.

The double elimination tourney will carry an $80 per team entry fee. Rosters are limited to 20 players. To enter, call Trusty at 267-4121.

Church volleyball Nov. 4-5

A coed church volleyball tournament sponsored by the First Baptist Church will be held Nov. 4-5 at the FBC Family Life Center. Entry fee is $60 per team with entry deadline set Oct. 28. Call 267-3633 for further information.

Trophies will be given to the top five teams with individual trophies going to the top three teams. The tournament ball will go to the team exhibiting the best sportsmanship.

Y volleyball event postponed

The YMCA-sponsored coed volleyball tournament benefiting the United Way has been postponed until a later date.

Y director Wallace Gill said only two teams had signed up for the event but the tournament will be played possibly next month when a larger field is assembled. Contact the YMCA to enter.

Barber captures Seniors tourney

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Miller Barber shot a 3-under par 69 Sunday to earn a three-shot victory and repeat as champion in the $150,000 Seniors International Golf Tournament at Shipyard Golf Club.

Barber, who earned $25,000 with the win, became the eighth player in PGA history to earn more than $2 million in his career. He joins Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Lee Trevino, Ray Floyd,

Hale Irwin and Tom Weiskopf. Third-round leader Gay Brewer slipped to a 73 Sunday to join Gene Littler and Jim Ferree in second place. Ferree, a Hilton Head resident who had to qualify for the event, shot a blistering 66 in the final round, the tournament's best performance, to join the group at 4-under par.

With Brewer and Barber separated by only one stroke at the final tee, both players caught the trees on the 18th fairway, but it was Barber who got a break.

His ball bounced back into the fairway and he was able to make par. But Brewer's was buried in the tall grass and he had to settle for a double bogey which dropped him back into a tie for second place.

Cardinals, Giants fight fan apathy

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Members of the St. Louis Cardinals are excited about playing the New York Giants tonight — even if their fans aren't.

More than 9,000 seats at Busch Stadium remained unsold for the contest between National Football League also-rans 72 hours ahead of game time Friday. Under league rules, that means the nationally televised contest between the National Conference rivals will be blacked out locally.

Apparent fan apathy notwithstanding, St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan admits mixed feelings over the first performance by his young team on prime time since 1977.

"In reality it's just another night ballgame. The only thing about it is the players know everyone in the country is going to be watching," Hanifan said. "It's an important ballgame — like any game is."

If anything extra is on the line, it is the embarrassment two teams with 2-5 records are seeking to avoid by dropping into sole possession of last place in the NFC East.

New York slipped into a tie for the bottom when it lost 38-17 last week to the Kansas City Chiefs. Meanwhile, the Cards shook off a pattern of costly errors that had plagued them and prevailed 34-27 over the winless Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"The mistakes are still something that concern us very much," said Hanifan, whose team has turned the ball over 27 times.

"In some respects, the Giants are a very fine defensive team. Their linebackers may be the best in the league. They're capable of putting intense pressure on you, and we'll need some good blocking."

Entering the contest, St. Louis has been bolstered by the return of right guard Joe Bostic and right tackle Tootie Robbins from the injury list on offense but may be hobbled by the absence of running back Otis Anderson.

Anderson suffered a shoulder injury in the victory over Tampa Bay. On Sunday, his availability was downgraded from questionable to doubtful. If he cannot play, his place will be taken by Stump Mitchell.

Aspects of the contest to watch will be St. Louis quarterback Neil Lomax' probing of a New York pass defense ranking 27th in the NFL and Giants running back Rob Carpenter's assaults on the Cards' rushing defense, which ranks 21st.

Jeff Rutledge, a fifth-year player, draws his first start at quarterback for New York. He spells Scott Brunner, who against Kansas City suffered three interceptions and fumbled once.

St. Louis' last appearance on Monday night was a 24-17 triumph in November 1977 over the Dallas Cowboys two weeks after a 28-0 conquest of the Giants in a similar time slot.

"It's an opportunity to show the folks in America that the Cardinals have a good organization and a good team — that we're at least better than 2-5," said Cards wide receiver Pat Tilley. "It's prime-time TV, the most popular football game watched."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This can be a day of broken promises, tensions and strain unless you make a consistent effort to carry through with whatever you have agreed to do. Avoid making unjust criticisms.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't be too much in a hurry to answer some irksome letters that may reach you and listen carefully to what friends have to say.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Think carefully before you come to any final decisions on monetary matters, and be sure to double-check all figures.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You arise feeling quite depressed, but if you study both sides of whatever is troubling you, you can soon feel cheerful again.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Some secret anxiety could keep you from progressing in your field of endeavor, if you permit.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Try not to upset a friend or new contact and avoid allies who are apt to be petulant. Stay out of the way of irritating people.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You have to use much care at your work so that you do not make costly errors, and adhere to standard methods.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are eager to be off to new places and be with interesting people, but for now you should adhere to important contracts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) In the morning you are somewhat confused about a business deal you recently made, so don't split anything.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) An ally could have been doing something you do not like for some time, but don't light into him or her now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A co-worker could be acting strangely so get at the root of the trouble, and don't jump to any conclusions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You need relief from worries and want to run off on tangents, but if you rest up a while, you find you can easily resolve problems.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be very conciliatory at home and maintain peace and show you are devoted to family members and friends.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those highly energetic young children who will also require much rest and constant supervision so that you may have to revise your schedule in order to give proper care and diet.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Monday night football in ratings tailspin

NEW YORK (AP) — Say it ain't so, Howard — has the nation really lost its passion for "Monday Night Football?"

Ratings for pro football's prime-time staple are down 15 percent from ABC's record year in 1981. There are many explanations:

Last season's NFL strike and the supersaturation of sports on cable, local and network TV have turned off some fans. The National Football League's parity schedule, which seems to have created a preponderance of break-even teams, doesn't produce as many dream games anymore.

ABC's prime-time act of Howard, Giff and Danderoo may be getting stale. And ABC, ironically, helped dilute its own NFL coverage by broadcasting the USFL.

In addition, there is the success of CBS' regular programming and NBC's female-fantasy films on Mondays. Some recent titles: "Sessions," about a prostitute, "Police Woman Centerfold" and tonight's "Haunting Passions," which NBC calls an "erotic drama about a woman torn between two lovers, one of whom has been dead for many years."

These factors seem to play most prominently when ABC has an American Football Conference game, but they're not as significant deterrents with the more-entrenched National Football Conference, particularly when ABC has America's Team, the Dallas Cowboys, on the schedule.

Why? One hypothesis here is the national preference for the NFC, dating back to the pre-merger days of the old NFL, when the Northwest watched San Francisco, the Northeast rooted for the Giants and the Southeast followed Washington.

Today, you'll find NFC fans in NFC cities, AFC cities and everywhere in between. The AFC doesn't have the same broad appeal — particularly when parity creates many mediocre match-ups. (The exception was Pittsburgh in its heyday in the late 1970s. But Pittsburgh is an AFC team with NFL roots.)

Here's some proof for the NFC Superiority Theory: —This season's top-rated Monday night game: the NFC's Washington (Super Bowl champion) and Dallas, which finished as that week's No. 1 show.

—The second-best performance: NFC's Washington-Green Bay. Next best was a so-so NFC match-up between Green Bay and the New York Giants, which beat the Monday ratings for AFC powerhouses Miami and the Los Angeles Raiders — both undefeated at the time.

—The lowest-rated Monday game and worst since 1979: Buffalo vs. the New York Jets — both from the AFC.

—The lowest-rated prime-time game, and worst ever: A Thursday night game between Cincinnati and Cleveland, both AFC teams. (Thursday games never draw well, but that one just edged viewership for the USFL title game.)

Add to this the inherent risk in the NFL constructing a prime-time schedule based on the previous year's records. With only one game available, ABC can't switch to better games, as NBC and CBS can on Sunday. Cincinnati, a playoff team last year, is a loser now, yet the team has three prime-time shots.

Viewer preference for the NFC is equally obvious on Sundays, where CBS, home of the NFC, is maintaining its record 1981 pace. NBC, which carries the AFC games, is well behind and down 11 percent from two years ago.

NBC points out that the AFC is in fewer Top-10 markets than CBS' NFC. Yet, on one weekend this season, when AFC teams were playing in NFC cities, NBC broadcast games in Chicago, New York and Washington and still lost to CBS. That weekend, CBS' regional lineup featuring the pure NFC match-up of Dallas-Minnesota easily outdrew NBC's interconference doubleheader of Giants-San Diego and Washington-Los Angeles Raiders that went to most of the country.

Not surprisingly, the NFL doesn't agree with the NFC Superiority Theory. "Historically, Dallas has gotten the best ratings," said Val Pinchbeck, the NFL's director of broadcasting. "But take Dallas out of the mix, and the AFC and NFC ratings have been comparable."

Whatever the reasons, the decline in sports viewership bodes ill for ABC, which is battling CBS for prime-time leadership with a lineup that includes "Monday Night Football," the World Series and the Winter Olympics.

Besides the declines for "Monday Night Football," prime-time World Series ratings were down 5 percent from last year, but even worse for ABC's coffers and ratings, Baltimore's five-game triumph meant two fewer prime-time games.

Bay City Blues offers humor

NEW YORK (AP) — Frenchy Nuckles races home to tell his wife about the spitball pitch he's just learned to throw. He finds her upstairs, in the bedroom, with the cable TV guy.

"Judy," the ballplayer pleads, seemingly on the verge of tears, "was he at least gonna give you a deal?"

So that's what life is like in Double-A baseball: adolescents from 18 to 40, living as adults in backwater towns, away from friends and family and always on the margin.

The producers of "Bay City Blues," starting tonight on NBC, built a minor-league ballpark in Southern California as the backdrop for this promising show that could be the best new dramatic series since the network introduced "Hill Street Blues" in 1981.

But don't be misled by the setting. As with "The White Shadow," that estimable CBS series about a high school basketball team, the sports arena in "Bay City Blues" serves largely as common environment for a diverse cast of characters, some young and inexperienced and uncommonly vital, others aging and fading and desperate to hang on.

And it's a continuing story, one told with sensitivity and plenty of humor and with that special, sneering, clubhouse brand of cynicism that seems often to embitter the professional athlete, on and off the field.

"So one of these winters, we'll detox him," the big-league scout says of the young pitcher with a drinking problem. "He can give press conferences. The writers will love it."

Not coincidentally, the two men who created "Bay City Blues," as well as four members of the cast, also worked on "Hill Street" at one time or another. Steven Bochco is executive producer of both shows, while Jefrey Lewis, an Emmy-winning writer for "Hill Street," is supervising producer of the new series.

The cast includes Pat Corley, the bumbling coroner from "Hill Street," as Ray Holtz, a used car dealer and owner of the Bay City Bluebirds; Dennis Franz, the sadistic cop who killed himself in last season's finale of "Hill Street" as Angelo Carbone, the pitching coach; Peter Juraski, a drug dealer from "Hill Street" as the team announcer, and Marco Rodriguez, an addict who kicked the habit but fell off the wagon in "Hill Street," as the team's mascot, the Bluebird of Happiness.

Michael Nouri, star of the theatrical film "Flashdance," plays the Bluebirds' manager, Joe Rohner, with Perry Lang as Frenchy and Michele Greene as Judy.

Bay City is a blue-collar town, and Holtz is struggling constantly to meet the payroll. "Bus 'em to Bakersfield Sunday night instead of Monday," he tells Rohner after passing out the paychecks Friday night. "That'll buy me three more days at the bank."

Rohner, meantime, has troubles of his own. The team is making a late-season run at the Western League pennant, and Holtz is trying to unload his most promising pitcher on St. Louis. Then there's Sunny Hayward, the banker's wife who has her eye on Rohner.

A baseball game, graceful and fluid, is not easily dramatized. There is something of the athlete in most actors, but even the casual fan can spot the unpracticed pitch or the awkward swing.

Action on the ballfield in "Bay City Blues" is surprising, and pleasingly, realistic, a credit to the cast that includes only one recognized athlete, Bernie Casey, a former professional football player.

High rise fire kills three

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An intense, smoky fire on the top floor of a luxury high-rise building killed three people and injured 40 as screaming occupants fled to their balconies to escape the blaze and wait for rescuers.

Fire investigators were seeking a cause today of the $250,000 three-alarm blaze that started about 10 a.m. Sunday at the downtown Cabrillo Square apartments.

The dead included an elderly couple and a 28-year-old man who fell to his death from a balcony as he tried to escape the fire.

"We have never had a high-rise fire of the intensity of this one in the seven years I've been here," said Fire Department spokesman Dennis McNeil.

Most of the injured were firefighters, some of whom ran out of oxygen during rescue efforts after a long climb up stairs, said Ken Guyer, a fire official.

"They had to get out on the balconies and get some fresh air, then go back inside and get people out," Guyer said.

Four firefighters were treated at a hospital and released. More than 100 fought the blaze.

The victims were identified as Claude Peterson, 82; his wife, Edith, 80, and Felix Colon Jr., of Elmwood Park, Ill., Guyer said. Colon had moved into the apartment last month.

Guyer was among the first to arrive and feared the worst. "It was a scary kind of a fire, a very, very difficult kind of fire to fight," he said.

Many occupants of the upper three floors were out on their balconies hollering to get the attention of firemen.

Colon was apparently trying to climb down from his balcony on the 15th floor to the 14th floor when he "lost his balance and fell," said deputy coroner Jack Larkie.

A gas station attendant, Danny Rico, 20, watched Colon's unsuccessful escape attempt from across the street.

"He was hanging on. He thought he had it; he was going to drop into the lower balcony. He was really panicking," just before he fell, said Rico.

Moments after he plunged 12 stories onto a tennis court, "a big old huge flame poured out of the balcony where he was," said Rico.

The Petersons' bodies were found in the hallway of the 15th floor.

Roger Nelson, who was credited with saving the lives of several 15th floor occupants, said he took an elevator up to the top after hearing shouts from the upper floors.

"I tripped the alarm when I got up to the 15th floor and banged on people's doors on the way out.
