Q. If a person is fired, is he eligible for food stamps, welfare or unemployment benefits?

A. According to Paula Talbot, supervisor with the Financial Assistance section of the State Department of Health and Human Resources, a person might be eligible for food stamps, depending on his other resources and other factors. A person is not eligible for Aid to Families with Dependent Children unless a breadwinner, usually the husband, has walked out or the family's ability to support the children is incapacitated in another way, Talbot said.

If a person is fired for misconduct, they will not be eligible for unemployment benefits, said Yolanda Gonzalez, employment interviewer for the Texas Employment Commission. However, if they are fired for other reasons, they may be eligible.

From staff and bureau reports AUSTIN - Big Spring won a $300,000 grant Thursday to replace a water distribution system for 434

The grant will provide the neighborhoods on the west side of the city known as the "bird streets" with new water lines, increasing the water pressure and reducing the shutoff time due to breaks in the system. The new water lines will also ensure the availability of adequate water pressure in case of fire.

Before actual work can begin on the improvement project, the city council will take statements of interest from area engineers, select the engineer, allow the engineer to survey and write specifications for the project and ask for bids from area construction companies, Public Works Director Tom Decell said today.

The water line improvement project is identical to one being constructed in the city by Permian Construction Inc. under Phase II of the city's capital improvements plan, Decell said.

STRANDED MOVIE-GOERS — The Strand, a one-screen movie theatre in Henderson, closed its doors Oct. 31. The theatre had been in business for about 50 years when the current owner, Mike Adkison of Mansfield, La., closed the place, leaving Henderson without a movie theater in town. Henderson at one time had four or five theatres but audiences declined and lured away to three-screen complexes off of

nearby highways. Passing of theater signals end of era

HENDERSON, Texas (AP) -The story is familiar.

A large one-screen movie theater in a small town that once often filled to capacity slowly begins having more empty seats as businesses move out of downtown. A multi-screen theater opens, further damaging business. Finally, the sheer weight of hard times slams the doors shut. This time the theater is in Henderson — the Strand, which had been open for 50 years. At one time, residents say, the town had five theaters, then four, then three, then two ... now none. "It was very sad," said Mike Adkison of Mansfield, La., the owner of the Strand. "I had to admit that when I left town I had a hump in my threat. An era ... ended."

Adkison bought the East Texas theater, which had 575 seats, seven years ago. And for the first few years the business prospered.

"It was pretty common to have a line down the street," he said. "You could open a Saturday night late show at 11 o'clock and See Strand page 2-A

The stagelights come on tonight in Howard College's auditorium as the school's drama department presents the Tennessee Williams' play, The Glass Menagerie.

The play premieres today at 8 p.m. and will run through Saturday. Tickets for the performances are on sale at Howard College priced at $3.50 for adults, while senior citizens and students pay $2.50. Friday night's show will be interpreted for the deaf.

The play, about the erosion of a genteel Southern family, is under the direction of new drama instructor Timothy Haynes, formerly of the Dallas Theatre Center.

A tragedy about a family and how it faces life after being deserted by the father, the play chronicles how the family deals with pain of his leaving and the discontentment it must endure.

The mother, Amanda Wingfield, attempts to give meaning to her life and the lives of her children, Laura and Tom. However, she only succeeds in alienating herself from them with her nagging and negativity.

Tom retreats to alcohol and the unreal world of the movies, while his sister, a cripple, is driven into loneliness by her mother's anxiety to see her married.

The cast of the play includes James Bristo as Tom Wingfield of the present, Chris Smith as Tom Wingfield of the past, Mary Owens as Amanda Wingfield, Teresa Webb as Laura Wingfield and Scott Savell as Jim 0'Conner.

Although HC's theater department has been dormant for about five years, Haynes said he is encouraged by his fledging group's performance.

Haynes also had added a couple of attractions to the play.

He has designed a stage which represents the memory of character Tom Winfield. Because memories are only partial, Haynes as engineered a set with walls containing missing portions, picture frames with no pictures and other features that represent a faded memory.

Haynes also has two students playing Wingfield. In the past, it has been traditional for one actor to portray Wingfield as both a young and old man.

"We're looking to create something so exciting you won't want to miss it." Havnes said.

Senate hopeful Phil Gramm said during a brief visit Wednesday at the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce he believes "economic growth is the key to fighting communism". The senate hopeful hit again and again upon his economic policies and said he supported President Reagan's ideas on running the nation's finances.

Gramm, who represents the 6th Congressional District in Washington, announced several weeks ago that he is seeking the seat to be vacated by Sen. John Tower. While in Big Spring, he mingled with critics and supporters of his policies, including one woman who approached him to congratulate him on changing

"I did the same thing," she confided. "So did President Reagan," Gramm answered.

Gramm changed from Democrat to Republican earlier this year after being ousted from the House Budget Committee for supporting Republican opinions on federal spending. He quickly resigned his seat as a Democrat and vowed to win the position again, this time as a Republican. He won a special election in

When he announced plans to switch parties, "people told me I was doing the wrong thing," he recalls. But "if people send you to do a job and you do it, they'll appreciate it. My district had never supported a Republican before.

After being ousted from the Budget Committee for his policies, Gramm said "I was a Democrat. But I decided the only honorable thing to do was to come home and run again as a Republican.

"People are concerned about principle more than party," he said.

Gramm said he felt international communism could be thwarted by encouraging other nations to "develop their own economies." Using Mexico as an example, he said "we should open up our border and let goods and services across. Trade helps (other countries) See Gramm page 2-A

Conductor John Giordano will lead the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra in concert Friday at 8 p.m. at the Big Spring High School

Trained as a composer, Giordano studied under a series of renowned teachers. Recipient of a Fulbright scholarship, Giordano spent two years at the Royal Conservatory of Music in Brussels.

Graduating with the Premier Prix and Diplome Superieur, he returned to the United States and studied conducting with Walter Susskind and Ezra Rachlin Giordano formed the Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra, then the Texas Little Symphony, in 1976. This ensemble of virtuoso players has toured the People's Republic of China, Hong Kong and Mexico. It performs annually at the Ruidoso Summer Festival in New Mexico.

Giordano is active in international music circles. His guest conducting credits include appearances in Belgium, Brazil, China, Great Britain, Italy, Portugal and the Netherlands.

He also has several published works to his credit. The Fort Worth Chamber Orchestra performed the world premiere of his "West Texas Suite," a piece which evolved from a film score composed for a public television television documentary entitled "Milepost 407: A West Texas Story."

Orchestra concertmaster Robert Davidovici will perform the Mozart A Major Violin Concerto in Friday night's 8 p.m. concert at the high school auditorium.

Beginning his third season as concertmaster in 1983. Davidovici also serves as trustee of the Davis Stradivarius, which was placed on indefinite loan to the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra in Nov. of 1981.

The unicorn. So shy, so pure, so mythical. Like the tooth fairy, Santa Claus, and the Easter Bunny, Keith Hallam and Steve Evans, two friends who went hiking in Shenandoah National Park in Virginia last weekend, aren't so sure. They took five color photographs of an animal with a horn sprouting from its forehead and a mane and tail that look as if they have been dyed dirty yellow.

"An ugly-looking mess, pretty mangy," Hallam told The Washington Post. "If we hadn't had the pictures, we wouldn't have told anybody.

Park rangers are investigating the sighting, one of two reported over the weekend. But they suspect a prankster added a gold mane and horn to a horse and then turned it loose in the park, home to such animals as black bears, deer, rabbits and other small mammals

"Parks are full of wonderful discoveries, so who knows?" Karen Wade, park spokeswoman, said Tuesday. "If I were a unicorn, I'd probably hide in a 197,000-acre preserve, too.

We don't have any basis for believing that there's a real, live unicorn in Shenandoah National Park, but if we find one we'll put it on our list of rare and endangered species.'

The unicorn of ancient legend was generally part horse, part stag and part lion, with its horn considered to have magical powers as an antidote to poison. The creature is found woven into tapestries, painted on shields and mentioned in ancient writings from the Bible to Aristotle.

"I've totally suspended judgment," Hallam said. "I don't believe in unicorns, though.

But Robert Vavra does.

"If you want them to exist, they exist," said Vavra, a photographer and animal behavioralist who has published 120 color photographs of the white horse with spiraling horn in his book, "Unicorns I Have Known." Some of those unicorn photographs appeared in the October issue of Life life sentence would be fair for Lucas in this case. "There's got to be something decent in a human being that did all these things...when he brings his case to the state.' Denton County District Attorney

Jerry Cobb said he "felt very good about the verdict."

Cobb asked the jurors to return a life sentence. "He sits here today having murdered his mother in 1960 and having murdered Becky Powell and he's asking you for leniency,' Cobb said. "This doesn't have to do with (Lucas' statements to police). It has to do with the protection of American society by removing this animal from society. "You know he's killed two people.

eight other Texas murders. Four are capital murder charges, which carry a possible penalty of death by injection.

Cobb said he believes Lucas next will be tried in Georgetown, Texas, where he is charged in the strangling death of a young, unidentified woman whose body was found near Interstate 35 in 1979.

In 1960, Lucas was convicted of killing his mother in Michigan. In 1971, after his parole, he was returned to prison for attempting to kidnap two young girls in Michigan. In 1975, he was paroled again and began what authorities say was a nationwide murder spree. Most of the crimes described by Lucas were sexually oriented, investigators say, and many of the victims were

"National Lampoon's Vacation," attracted only 19 people - and that was on a Tuesday, when tickets were discounted to $1.50. On Oct. 31 his lease on the theater ran out and he would have had to renew it for 10 years. With talk of a three-screen theater opening in the new Circle Plaza shopping center on U.S. Highway 259, the main thoroughfare in town, he just couldn't see renew-

No announcement was given of the Strand's closing. One day it was open; the next it wasn't.

"It was a complete shock," said Gayle Woodward, tourism director of the Rusk County Chamber of Commerce in Henderson. "Any town of more than 5,000 people usually has a movie theater. It would be pretty sad if we don't."

Jim Craig, a longtime resident, said, "I thought there would always be the old Strand."

But, he said, he knew few people who attended movies there regularly anymore.

"People just quit going a few years ago," he said. "I don't think it'll be missed very much."

A sparse crowd of about 250 people attended last night's second town meeting sponsored by the Chemical People at the Big Spring High School

More than 1,000 people attended the group's first meeting Nov. 2, which dealt with how parents and concerned friends could identify drug and alcohol abuse

Wednesday night's meeting — in conjunction with meetings across the country — was termed "a national call to action" for forming task forces and community action programs to fight drug abuse.

Those attending saw a public television special hosted by First Lady Nancy Reagan who addressed the problem of abuse by recommending a variety of corrective measures.

These measures included establishment of a community guide to help teens find alternate activities; giving training to school teachers so they would be able to identify drug users before a problem develops; increasing police patrols after school, on weekends and on holidays; putting children whose abuse problem has gone too far into treatment; and asking local alcohol sellers to sign pledge cards promising not to sell liquor

The task forces and their interim chairmen are as

In explaining his desire to seek office, Gramm said "I think of the working person in my district." When considering spending federal money on various projects, Gramm said "I consider if the government spending is worth taking money away from people (in his district) to pay for it."

Gramm said Reagan's economic program "is working for the American people." He said these policies "can bring the federal deficit under control." The present economy "is helping lower the national deficit."
Too many politicians "want to spend money on programs that buy votes," he added.

He said he has pushed to see a balanced budget amendment become law "and I'm going to keep pushing for that amendment until it becomes the law of

When asked about health care programs such as Medicare which face cutbacks in light of federal budget trimming, Gramm said "The answer is not more government control." He said hospitals must be taught "to be more efficient and economical" in order to keep prices down.

Gramm was also asked if he was aware of the SouthWest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf and if he supported funding measures for the school. He said he was supportive of the school and that he feels the government should spend money on programs which 'create opportunity, not dependency." He added he did not advocate giving aid to people "who could help themselves.

Gramm also voiced support for his party and for Reagan's recent actions in Grenada. People there were "panicking," he said, and the President was "concerned they would be hurt. The President could have called a joint session of Congress, but he decided to act. I think this says that the open season on Americans is over. I support the president on this."

The Syrian command in Damascus said it drove off four U.S. F-14 Tomcats over central Lebanon. White House spokesman Anson Franklin, in Tokyo with President Reagan, said the U.S. planes were fired upon from Syrian-held positions while on a reconnaissance mission. None was reported hit.

Gallup Poll puts Mondale in 1st place

DALLAS (AP) -Former Vice President Walter Mondale is a 26-point favorite over U.S. Sen. John Glenn, his nearest rival for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, according to a Gallup Poll commissioned by The Dallas Morning

News. The poll, taken during October and released Wednesday, showed Mondale favored by 45 percent of Democrats polled nationally. Glenn, D-Ohio, followed with 19 percent.

Six other Democratic hopefuls trailed well behind: former U.S. Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota 7 percent, the Rev. Jesse Jackson had 6 percent, and Sen. Alan Cranston of California 3 percent. Sens. Gary Hart of Colorado and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew had 1 percent each.

The poll showed Mondale leading Glenn in all of the 10 largest states, except for Glenn's home state of Ohio.

In Texas, Mondale led Glenn by 50 percent to 19 percent among Democrats. the poll indicated.

Luther's voice echoes in history

Unless I be convinced by Scripture and reason, I neither can nor dare retract anything, for my concience is a captive to God's word, and it is neither safe nor right to go against

So spoke Martin Luther before the Diet of Worms in 1521, refusing to retreat from a bold challenge to the authority of the Roman church. This 34-year-old priest had attacked the practice in the medieval church of selling indulgences, the spiritual favors which would shorten the time a soul must suffer in purgatory. What started as a theological quarrel would shake the church to its foundatioons and change the course of Western civilation.

Today, the world observes the 500th anniversary of the birh of Martin Luther, and a worldwide observance it is. The commemorative events are cutting across ecclesiatical lines. Even the Catholic Church, which vilified Luther for most of five centuries, has come to acknowledge his importance as a reformer.

The celebrations are also crossing political walls. The communist government of East Germany has been conducting Luther commemortives with as much enthusiasm as its counterpart in West Germany.

Luther was born on Nov. 10, 1483 into a world in which both spiritual and temporal authority flowed from Rome. By the time of his death in 1546, the spiritual authority of the papacy has been effectively challenged by the burgeoning Protestant movement, and the foundations had been laid for the rise of nation-states that would replace the medieval kingdoms and principalities held together by allegiance to the pope.

Martin Luther not only struck the spark that brought the great religious, political, and social upheaval known as the Reformation, he opened the European mind to realms of thought and speculation that brought the later Age of Enlightenment. He stood with one foot in the Middle Ages and one on an age of new intellectual horizons opening with the Luther's translation of the Bible into German is credited with forging a national language from regional dialects, unifying the German people for the first time. It is still the standard biblical text in Germany. Luther was a master at writing sermons, and an able composer of music. His writings fill 100 volumes, and continue to attract theologians for their relevance to contemporary issues.

Luther is the spiritual ancestor of every generation's dissenters and protesters, those guided by conscience rather than obedience to custom or worldly authority. He was excommunicated by his church and sentenced to death for heresy. Yet he refused to compromise, and in the end many of his ideas

The ecumenical movement has removed much of the bitterness once aroused by the mention of Luther's name. The anniversary of his birth can be observed by Christians of all denominations. The church which adopted his name embraces 69 million members in 92 countries, while Protestant Christianity as a whole, including sects with a direct or indirect debt to Luther, counts 350 million.

Rarely has a single individual so affected the history of his own times and generations to follow. As long as men and women seek a relationship with God and a life of faith, the voice of Martin Luther will echo down the corridors of time.

Billy Graham

Can you gamble and remain moral?

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am beginning to wonder if I have gotten hooked on gambling. On the whole, I think I lead a very moral life, but I just can't seem to resist opportunities to gamble, and it is beginning to affect my finances and my family. Should I try to fight this or do you think it is not really all that serious? — N.V.

DEAR N.V. - You definitely should not keep on the way you are going, because it is obvious that your gambling is already doing damage to you and to others. Gambling, I am told, can become as addictive and destructive as a bad drug or alcohol habit, and you should take whatever action is necessary to get free of this before it becomes even more destructive. You need to deal with this problem on two levels. First of all, you need to realize that there is a deeper spiritual issue involved here. You have been captivated with a desire for money, always hoping to strike it rich. But the Bible warns us against covetousness. In fact, one of the Ten Commandments declares, "You shall not covet ... anything that belongs to your neighbor. (Exodus 20:17). You need to deal with this sin in your life.

More than that, however, your letter indicates to me that you have never really thought very much about your own relationship to God and your need of him. Yes, you may be a good person in many ways. But how does God see you? You need his forgiveness, and you need to open your life without reserve to Jesus Christ. You need his strength every day, and you need to be guided by his Word. I urge you to ask Christ to come into your heart right now by a simple prayer of commitment.

Then you need to take practical steps to avoid the snare of your gambling habit. Treat it like a poison - avoid it without compromise. Stay away from the places and the people that you know will tempt you. Pray that God will help you to establish new desires and new habits. The Bible says, "Submit yourselves, then, to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Come near to God and he will come near to you." (James 4:7-8). It may not be easy for you to break away from this, but with Christ you can and you must, or it will harm you and your family greatly.

Luther: 500 years

Christians of all denominations today are observing the 500th birthday of Martin Luther, the German monk who broke with the papacy and unleashed the religious, social and political revolt known as the Reformation.

Steve Chapman

Martin Luther: one in a million

The Protestant Reformation was, in the words of a 19th century historian, "the hinge on which all modern history turns." If so, the hinge was hung by Martin Luther, born 500 years ago this week.

. To most modern people, Luther is a hazy, distant figure, the antagonist of the Roman Catholic church in theological controversies long since forgotten. But it is impossible to imagine the modern world without him. More than anyone else, Luther was responsible for unleashing the forces that have shaped the world as we know

Of course his most direct impact was on the evolution of Christianity. More than just reforming the faith he rescued it from decline. As one of his innumerable biographers, Roland Bainton, writes, he "revived the Christian consciousness of Europe ... If there is any sense remaining of Christian civilization in the West, this man Luther in no small measure deserves the credit." No one had done so much since the Apostle Paul, on whose theological legacy he drew. Yet Luther disparaged his own efforts: "While I sat and drank beer with Philip and Amsdorf, God dealt the papacy a mighty blow.

He had help from other sources besides Providence. Luther was greatly assisted by developments beyond his control: the decay of the Roman Catholic church, the awakening of nationalism and, perhaps most important, the invention of the printing press. But he amplified their effects immeasurably. Rarely have a man and a moment been so perfectly matched.

A gifted preacher, in the medieval tradition of the spoken word, Luther was surpassed by none in exploiting Gutenberg's creation. From 1517 on, his written output averaged a book every two weeks. The printing press, under this prodigious hand, turned an obscure argument among the educated into the stuff of mass movements. The Bible went from the special possession of the clergy Rome forbade not only vernacular translations but even the reading of Scripture by lay people to a fixture in every literate household. Thus theology became the province of the average person. But the democratization of religion, which foreshadowed a revolution in the political world, was not only Luther's most potent weapon; it was also his despair. Once given the right to read and interpret the Word for themselves. the people of Christendom were no more satisfied with two churches than with one. Just as Luther had rebelled against Rome, others rebelled against him. Though Luther shrank from the practice of Rome and many later reformers of executing heretics, he watched with dismay the multiplication of sects. One student who predicted great progress if the world endured another half-century was rebuked: "It would get worse than it has ever been, for all kinds of sects would arise that have as yet lain hidden in the heart of man ...

If the Middle Ages proved the dangers of giving a single institution exclusive custody of the faith, the succeeding centuries have acquainted us with the flaws of sectarianism - not the least of which is the spread of skepticism and the decline of religious belief. But by Luther's own logic, better a smaller community of believers acting of their own volition than a larger one enforced by coercion.

A spirit of toleration was not one of Luther's objectives. But his insistence that each person ultimately is alone in coming to terms with God made it inevitable that many would choose paths he would regard as heretical, and that eventually they would be conceded the right to do so. The man who shattered the unity of Christendom rather than submit to the centuries-old authority of Rome inspired free thought in spite of himself

Luther himself, however, is a bracng antidote to moral and theological relativism. We wince at the harsh, inflexible tone of his blasts against the papacy ("the Roman Sodom") and his other rivals, not only because of our ecumenism but because we are unaccustomed to seeing man's relationship to the Almighty treated as urgently important. If modern churches rarely rage over serious disagreements, it is largely because so many of them shun serious matters. To read Luther is to be reminded that the serious matters remain.

In his day, he had many apostles but no peers. Nor has anyone since approached his achievements as a religious thinker and a leader. Given the fallen condition of humanity depicted in his theology, it is probably too much to expect a Martin Luther to come along more than once in a millenium.

Mailbag

Parent questions Coahoma policies

Editor:

In regard to the so called "great" school system of the Coahoma I.S.D., I would like to use the mailbag to shed some light on a few school policies in our community. Since talking to several parents, I realize these need to be made

Before I proceed, I must say that while my children attend the Coahoma Grade School and the Coahoma High School, I too was in full belief that we had a great school system. Now I believe this is not so with our junior high.

I have talked with two of the Coahoma Junior High School coaches, with one of the secretaries at the school and with two Coahoma School Board members as to the authority and manipulation of the principal and teachers of Coahoma

I, along with other parents and the above mentioned people, do fully realize it is a big job and a lot of responsibility to teach these age students. The teachers do have their work cut out for them.

These kids are going through a major change in their lives: adolescence. But is it not a fact that teachers and principals can be wrong and also make mistakes? Students can be right, at least sometimes. How can any prinicpal or teacher not realize this

Since when, in the United States of America, does a parent not have any say in the teaching and discipline of their children, unless they are so-called upper class people with money, power or else are on the school board. These kids and parents always seem to get what they want, regardless of the socalled school policies.

Is this what is called a "good school system, the best in the area?" If kids don't have their parents' love, trust, support and belief, then what do they have? I do not mean for the parent not to discuss the entire issue with all concerned, but when all sides of the story are told, is it too much to ask that the principal or teacher straight-forwardly tell the student, "Hey, I'm sorry. It really wasn't you at fault all and I do apologize."?

Is it not also like communism to put a child, any child, in isolation, away from his classmates and the normal school activities for punishment of a curse word, for sassing, or a lost paper?

These kids are people, too. Have you ever been humiliated in this

I, for one, do not believe that the reat state of Texas" and the U.S of America would allow this kind of discipline in the classroom. There are lots of other humane kinds of punishment.

Our children are not dogs, nor are they prisoners to be locked away in an 8 by 8 foot closed room. This, in my thoughts, is what should be done to some of our authorities we have in the school systems. Let's see how they would feel after being humiliated in front of their colleagues for doing a wrong deed to a student!

In other words, stand up for what's right and don't let anybody treat your child in a manner that you wouldn't even treat them

Setting a bad drug example for kids

It's sad to say but the adult population of the Big Spring community didn't do its youth any favors last week.

For the past two Wednesday evenings, a special program has been presented at Big Spring High School to warn and inform the youth of the city about the harm of drug use. Call it an expression of concern from adult to student. The only problem is that while we're throwing our efforts toward the youth, certain adult members of the community are not putting on a very good example.

Last Thursday - the day after the first Chemical People program — the names of four Big Spring residents were associated with a grand jury hearing in Abilene. As it turns out, one night we are preaching against drugs, the next day we were are accused of peddling them right in our own neighborhood.

I have selectively chosen the term "we" simply because "we" have to take the blame. Although only four names were mentioned in Abilene, one big connection was made. BIG SPRING and DRUGS.

And when you talk about Big Spring, you're talking "we."

Drug trouble in Big Spring is certainly not good news and to think we have none is folly. Of course, some people would rather it not be discussed in newspapers and over radio since it gives our town a bad rap. However, our drug situation has obviously become one that can not easily be pushed aside and ignored.

Look what has happened a week

There is a problem in Big Spring, but what seems to get the most attention is drug use among the youth of the community. Yes, finding out an elementary-aged student is trying drugs is horrifying news. But I think we've found a stiffer problem

That lies in the adults of the community.

Adults using drugs defeats the purpose of such programs as the Chemical People Project. How can we discourage the use of drugs among the youth when we are dealing in things far worse than they can get their hands on?

Where the really bad PR comes in is when big names around the community are linked to drugs. I'm not just talking about the names mentioned last week. I'm talking about the others, brought up only in whispers and gossip...."You mean they didn't get (blank)"...or..."Is, that all they got 'em for?"

That kind of talk — not by one but by several unrelated sources means only one thing. The problem is much more widespread than has been attacked to this point.

What else is sad is that if people know so much, why aren't they contributing that information to the people who can do something about it? Their lack of backbone may be more of a crime.

And why do these so-called big names need to be involved in drugs? We are shocked when Johnny is caught with a marijuana cigarette at a party. We call him a juvenile delinquent when maybe all he's doing is getting a cheap thrill or living up to peer pressure.

But then there's Mr. Respectable. He's got a good business, a good name around town and has earned a place of leadership in the community. Suddenly he's linked to drugs. Not socially, but as a pusher. Why?

Are we that greedy? Are we that sorry of an individual that we need to make an extra dollar off someone who has a weakness? One night we tell our kids not to use drugs; the next day we are taken to court and accused to pushing them around

It brings a bit of irony to the situation. There are plenty of kids who are mature enough to make a decision against drugs. At the same time, there are adults immature enough to keep their lives straight.

Before we go telling our sons and daughters how they should live their lives, we better be living examples of what we are preaching. Why shouldn't kids get bombed every weekend if their parents are promoting the same thing?

As long as those who are older continue to make it "cool" to do drugs, the kids will follow.

That idea brings a new meaning to the old phrase "like father, like son," doesn't it?

had high blood pressure for so many years that when I see the word "sodium" on a product my mind immediately runs up a red flag. This is possibly a foolish question, but can sodium be absorbed through the skin into the body by use of products containing it, like cosmetics, deodorants and toothpaste? I read your messages with a good deal of interest. — M.B.

No, sodium cannot be absorbed through the skin, at least not to the extent that you need worry about it. Dear Dr. Donohue: As one gets older, is one more likely or less likely to encounter problems with constipation? If it's like most other parts of getting older, the answer is probably going to be "more" rather than "less." Does this part of the body's function slow down? Or am I doing something I didn't do before? I'm certain your readers offer you much more pleasant and interesting things to talk about than constipation, but I can still hope. - F.O.

For you, my faithful reader, constipation, the 25—cent version. An older person, as you guessed, is more likely to have constipation than is a younger one. There are many reasons, most of which can be corrected by the person, or prevented in the first place.

It is true that as you decrease your overall level of physical activity colon action slows down as well. That's only part of the explanation. Older people place too great a reliance on processed foods, those that can be chewed easily and, they believe, digested easily. That kind of a diet is usually deficient in fiber. And along with that, thirst decreases a bit along with saliva production - all constipation factors, or

And lots of elderly people use medicines - those containing antacids, for example - of which many may interfere with normal digestive tract activity

DEAR ABBY: I am a Don't try to get him alone 14-year-old girl who is seriously in love with a boy who will be 14 soon. I will call him "Matthew." He is gorgeous, sweet, kind, polite and a lot of fun. My problem is that I can never get him alone. Matthew always comes over with another kid or several other boys, but he never comes over all by himself.

I would like a close and loving relationship with him, but how do I get into one the way things are going? He knows how I feel about him because I told him. (Was that a mistake?)

When I asked Matthew how come he never comes to see me alone, he said his mother told him it was 'dangerous." Abby, where is the danger? I'm not going to hurt him.

Answer soon because I want this guy to like me so bad I am going crazy. POUNDING HEART IN DENVER

DEAR POUNDING Slow down, honey. Girls mature earlier than boys and you are moving too fast for Matthew. And yes it was a mistake to tell him how you feel about him (Boys, and girls too, know when someone "likes" them - they don't have to be told.) Matthew sounds like a normal boy his age.

Thursday Notes

Before Notes marches on, let me report that the Notes staff has expanded from one to two. Kind of like cell division.

The new staffer is Steve Belvin, former sports editor of the Colorado City Record News.

In addition to his duties of working the desk and assorted sports stuff, he'll be handling the area sports beat. With the extra help, Herald sports should be able to provide more Big Spring area coverage and save the few remaining hairs on the sports

Steve played football for C-City, earning scholarships to both Cisco Jr. College and Eastern New Mexico University. He majored in journalism and served his hometown paper for the past year.

His main claim to fame? Steve played in the famous "Snow Bowl" when Stamford downed the Wolves 7-6 in a driving blizzard back in the fall of 1976. Sieve tried a field goal in that game...they still haven't found the ball he kicked.

"They used me on long field goals because I had a strong leg," Steve recalls his "long" 22-yard attempt. "It was just starting to snow. I blew it.

Fortunately, we don't kick too many field goals here at the paper so Steve is safe. A trash can or computer, maybe, but no field

He'll also be starting a column soon, probably on Tuesday, which focuses on area sports. We don't have a picture of him yet because he hasn't let us take one. Since he's 5-11, 235, I haven't argued.

*** Flo Hallam showed up the other day.

She's been out chasing guys again and hasn't been by to turn in golf results. The Women's Golf Association of the Big Spring Country Club hosted a three-day match-play tournament recently. Glenadene Williams was medalist with Jane Jones taking runnerup honors. Bernice Jordan won the championship flight consolation flight by defeating Helen Terry.

Mary Ruth Roberson won the lame duck consolation flight over Martha Saunders while Flo took a consolation first over Mary

Mauvis Jones won the first flight over Kathleen Robertson while Brenda Rucker took the first flight consolation and Dottie Mullen the lame duck flight over Lorene

Daily play starts at 9 a.m. each Tuesday. Nice to have you back, Flo. ***

Three Big Spring area runners tackled the White Rock Marthathon in Dallas last weekend and all three did well in the halfmarathon event.

Donald Webb, running in the 55-59 division sped to a first place time of 84:40, a time that topped even those run in the 50-54 age division.

Big Spring city councilman Bobby Fuller clocked an 88:44 while Sherill Easterling zipped to a 92:30 over the 13.1 mile course.

Over 1,500 runners competed. It was the first race of that size for Fuller, Easterling said, and he had a difficult time adjusting to the slow start. Waiting at the back of the pack for the start, the gun went off and 5-10 seconds elapsed before the local trio even moved. "Heck, I usually get a better start than this," an impatient Fuller said with total seriousness.

Easterling and Webb could only run and *** Speaking of laughing, the "Nostalgia Night" at Howard College came off both good and bad.

The bad was the malfunction of the scoreclock. The minutes digit was stuck at 19 for the entire first half of the Hawks game and at 10 for the second half. No one knew how much time remained but who cared in a 94-56 rout.

The good was the noise level. There was a slightly larger than normal crowd present but the place looked full and sounded even better. The wooden surface was great; basketball was meant to have the sounds of shoes squeaking on the floor just like baseball and football were meant to be played in the afternoons, in my opinion.

With the exception of the clock, everything went well. I think Howard should play its toughest WJCAC rivals in the old gym to get more of a home court advantage.

By the way, only Mel Griffin (HC baseball coach Bill Griffin's wife) and I showed up in 50's style. Yes it was embarrassing and I looked like a nerd. But, heck, I've got spirit. - GREG JAKLEWICZ

Duran aims at 4th title

Hagler stands in way of middleweight crown

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) -Driven by the desire to become boxing's first four-time champion, a reborn Roberto Duran reaches for Marvelous Marvin Hagler's middleweight championship tonight in the most widely anticipated fight of the year.

This dramatic showdown takes place in the 15,200-seat arena constructed outside of Caesars Palace and matches Hagler, who has not lost a fight in seven years, with Duran, reclaimed almost miraculously from boxing's scrap heap.

"I am a man with a mission," said Hagler. "Roberto Duran had his time, but that time is over. This time is for me.'

The champion, whose shaven head adds to his ominous image, has established an aura of invincibility. "He is far and away the most complete boxer around," said Pat Petronelli, who, with his brother Goody, manages and trains Hagler. "He has no weakness. Great chin, never off his feet. He's got great staying power and he hits equally hard with either hand."

There also is a touch of bitterness in Hagler, who, until now has been unable to cash in on the era of boxing's big paydays.

The man who changed that and made this $20 million promotion possible was Duran, whose comeback from two years of drifting after his controversial "No Mas" loss against Sugar Ray Leonard has been nothing short of remarkable.

Ridiculed by his countrymen as a quitter and discarded by the boxing community as used-up, Duran refused to accept that sentence. Under the guidance of new manager Luis Spada, he battled his way back, destroying Pipino Cuevas to earn a shot at the junior middleweight title and then capturing that crown with a textbook attack that ended in an eighth round knockout of young Davey Moore.

"I am redeemed," exulted Duran after he destroyed Moore. And he seems, at age 32, more at ease with himself than he was earlier in his career, which began in 1967. He is almost mellow now, except, of course, when he's around Hagler. Then the old fire seems to return as he glares at the champion.

"I am a man with a mission. Roberto Duran had his time, but that time is over. This time is for me."

Marvin Hagler

If he wins, Duran would write boxing history by ruling at various times in his career titles ranging from 135 pounds to 160 pounds. He beat Ken Buchanan for the lightweight title June 26, 1972 and ruled that division for eight years until he outpointed Leonard for the 147-pound welterweight crown June 20, 1980. Five months later, he surrendered the title back to Leonard, turning-his back and waving Sugar Ray off with the cryptic "No Mas."

For two years after that, Duran drifted. He was advised by many people to retire for good but was convinced he wasn't through. despite some lackluster performances

Meanwhile, Hagler, who had won the middleweight crown from Alan Minter with a third round knockout Sept. 27, 1980, was cleaning up the 160-pound class, waiting for the big name who would help him turned his talent into a fat purse bout.

Association and Ring Magazine hardware, all symbols of his title, "and there are guys with only one belt with a lot more money in the bank than I've got.'

For awhile, it seemed Leonard might be the man who could change that. Sugar Ray was thinking about stepping up to the middleweight division before he suffered a detached retina that forced his premature retirement from the ring. Hagler was crestfallen at the announcement, figuring that Leonard was the only boxer around who could supply the charisma needed for the big payday.

That's because he didn't know Duran was still around.

Desperate after losing to someone named Kirkland Laing in September, 1982, Duran turned to Spada for help. Spada agreed to manage his old friend, provided Duran would dedicate himself in training. There would be no more roller coaster adventures on the scales, battling to get into shape in time for a fight. Duran would get in shape and stay in shape or Spada would leave. It was that simple. Duran agreed and the partnership was formed

The comeback started with a narrow victory over Jimmy Batten in the walkout fight on the first Alexis Arguello-Aaron Pryor card in Miami last November. Then came the wipeout of Cuevas in January and the decisive victory over Moore last June for the third championship.

That set the stage for Duran-Hagler.

The champion is guaranteed $5 million and his percentage of ancilliary earnings from 400 closed circuit television outlets, pay-perview packages in Los Angeles and Chicago, and delayed NBC and Home Box Office network broadcasts could push his take to $8 million. A veteran of Massachusetts politics, he emerged on the national scene as an aide to the late President John F. Kennedy. He subsequently worked for Kennedy's brother, Robert; for the late President Lyndon B. Johnson; as U.S. postmaster general and twice as Democratic national

He said Wednesday that the high point of his NBA tenure was the settlement in 1976 of the suit filed by former NBA star Oscar Robertson, which opened the way to free agency and allowed the league to merge with the American Basketball Association. That brought into the NBA from the ABA four new teams — the New Jersey Nets, the Denver Rockets, the San Antonio Spurs and the Indiana Pacers.

He also cited last year's agreement with the NBA Players Association on strict penalties for drug abuse and the settlement of a contract with the players' union last year that guarantees the players 53 percent of gross revenues and set limits on the amount any single team can pay in salaries.

He said that despite disappointments like a failure to expand beyond 23 teams and the current labor dispute with the league's referees, he believes he has left the league in the best shape ever.

"Television revenue increased 300 percent, gate receipts increased 200 percent and no teams have folded," he said, noting that new owners this year in Cleveland and Indianapolis have revitalized franchises that were in severe financial difficulties last season.

In fact, Gordon Gund, the new co-owner of the Cleveland Cavaliers, said:

"It would be fair to say that without the support Larry O'Brien gave us, there might not be professional basketball in Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers, among the players sorry to see the comissioner leave, said, "He's made a good commissioner. When he came to the job, he added a lot of class to it. He's going to be sorely missed."

O'Brien's announcement was a wellguarded secret, even with NBA owners.

Many were not informed of the decision until Wednesday, when they received a letter notifying them of the move just as O'Brien was announcing it at an 11:30 a.m., EST news conference.

Banks shoots Spurs past Jazz; Lakers' balance does in Mays

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio Spurs forward Gene Banks considers himself a role player and so far this season that role has been the leading scorer for his team.

Banks was leading the National Basketball Assocation with a 71 percent field goal percentage prior to the Spurs' 105-99 victory over the Utah Jazz Wednesday night. In that game, Banks shot 75 percent from the field, scoring 25 points, 11 in the fourth quarter.

NBA Roundup

Jazz guard John Drew led all scorers with 28 points, including two three-point goals in the second quarter, and he grabbed seven rebounds

Jazz forward Adrian Dantley did not make the trip to San Antonio because of a strained left shoulder. Spurs center Artis Gilmore scored 18 points and grabbed 15 rebounds.

Jazz guard Rickey Green scored 16 points before fouling out of the game in the fourth quarter. Guard Darrell Griffith scored 14 points, and rookie forward Thurl Bailey scored 13 points.

Spurs guard Johnny Moore continued to hand out assists in double figures. He had five rebounds. Moore now needs 31 assists for a career 2,000.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - "It's great to be back home," a contented Magic Johnson said after turning in a 22-point, 13-assist effort.

And so it was for the Los Angeles Lakers, who beat the Dallas Mavericks 120-106 with a strong team effort in their National Basketball Association home opener Wednesday, raising their record in the young season to 4-2.

The victory featured 24 points and 13 rebounds by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who surpassed Nate Thurmond's career total of 14,463 rebounds to take over fourth place on the all-time list with 14,476.

But Lakers coach Pat Riley was more interested in the all-around effort by his players, especially a 12-point, sevenrebound performance by James Worthy, playing his first regular-season home game since he broke his leg last April.

'Sure, Magic and Kareem are going to do their thing, but if James develops into the player that he was last year when he was injured, we're going to have enough," Riley said.

Los Angeles never trailed after 6:08 of the first quarter, building 18-point leads in latest attempt to resolve the unhappiness of Houston Oilers running back Earl Campbell has ended in failure.

Oiler General Manager Ladd Herzeg, trying to get at the reasons for Campbell's request to be traded, meeting with the former All-Pro on Wednesday. He was refused.

"I talked to Earl today with the intention of having a face-to-face discussion regarding his publicly expressed feelings of yesterday," Herzeg said. "He informed me that he would prefer to delay the discussion until a later date."

Campbell made overtones about wanting to be traded after he was lifted from Sunday's 55-14 loss to Cincinnati. He clarified his desires during the taping of a television show on Tuesday. Campbell declined further comment following Wednesday's practice about his trade request or why he declined to talk with Herzeg.

There was speculation that Campbell is seeking an agent to represent him in contract negotiatons although his contract with the Oilers extends through the 1985 season.

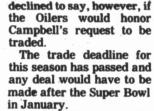

According to salaries released by the National Football League Management Council, Campbell is the second highest paid running back in the NFL

Herzeg said he had talkwith Campbell prior to an Oct. 30 game with Cleveland and the player thought the Oilers were headed in the right direction.

"His attitude at that time was extremely good and he was in very high spirits except for the fact that his groin injury was going to prevent him from playing that afternoon," Herzeg said

Campbell ranks second in scoring in the American Football Conference with 48 points on eight touchdowns and is fifth in AFC rushing, with 708 yards on 168 carries.

ARTIST OF THE MONTH - Kim Merrell recently was selected by the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce as artist of the month for November. Ms. Merrel is a member of the Big Spring Art Association.

Mayor elected to board

COLORADO CITY (SC) - Mayor Elmer Martin was elected to the Mitchell County Appraisal District Tuesday night by the City Council here.

The council also authorized the towing of 12 illegally parked vehicles in Colorado City that had been ticketed several times.

The council also approved a $300,000 offer from the state highway commission to pave Rogers Road south to Cherry Street and then to old Highway 86. This will provide an alternate route around Colorado City should Interstate 20 be blocked for any reason.

The preliminary plat of the Sparks addition north of Interstate 20 was
