Flashdance returns to the Ritz, showing along with Brainstorm. Nick Nolte in Under Fire debuts at the Cinema along with Romantic Comedy. Stryker is showing at the R-70. Richard Pryor in Here and Now is still showing as the 11:30 late show at the Cinema.

Outside: Warmer

Temperatures should warm today and tomorrow as the effects of a cool front dissipate. Lows tonight should drop into the low 40s.

Highs Wednesday and Thursday are expected to approach 80. The warming trend is expected to continue through the weekend, with balmy November days and cool, brisk nights.

The cold front which barged into the Panhandle last night and swept across West Texas this morning dropped temperatures 20 degrees in most places and up to 30 degrees in others.

Snow, which fell up to one foot in Colorado, failed to accompany the polar front as far south as Texas, and no precipitation is forecast for the area until this weekend, when a large, low pressure area is expected to swing east from the West Coast area and collide with a slow moving high pressure dome sliding down from the north.

Billie Sol Estes released

Allman recalls Estes' stay

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

When Billie Sol Estes left the grounds of the Big Spring Federal Camp early this morning, the local prison said goodbye to one of its most famous residents — a man who made a name for himself through several multi-million dollar deals which cost him 12 years in prison.

Superintendent John Allman recalled the three years Estes spent in the Big Spring Federal Camp. "Billie is probably one of the top 10 men in the nation" in terms of notoriety, Allman said. "If you went across the United States asking names, he would probably fall in the top 10," he said. "He has a tremendous identity."

Although Estes was a notable name on the prison log, he caused the institution no trouble and was treated no differently from anyone else in the facility, Allman said.

"Billie adjusted to the institution. We hardly knew he was here," Allman said.

Estes, a former Abilene resident, came to Big Spring on Aug. 9, 1980 and maintained a low profile at the camp.

Allman was besieged with "numerous requests for interviews, but Billie felt it best he not go public" while in Federal Camp so he granted no interviews until recently. Allman said Estes did grant interviews during his last week in prison with three news organizations, including a local radio station, his hometown newspaper, The Abilene Reporter-News, and with Forbes magazine.

Other requests for interviews were declined. Allman said Estes told him "I believe I've had enough press coverage."

HUGS FOR GRANDDAD — Billy Sol Estes reaches down to hug his granddaughter, Amy, while another granddaughter, Tricia, stands in the background. The one-time Texas millionaire who has spent 12 years in Texas prisons on charges of fraud was released from the Big Spring Federal Camp today.

The lobby of the Big Spring Federal Camp was ablaze with bright lights, television crews, clicking cameras and reporters as Billie Sol Estes walked from his prison dormitory into the waiting arms of his wife, Patsy, daughter, Pam Estes, and grandchildren at 7:30 a.m. today.

Estes ended a 3½-year term at the Big Spring Camp and was headed to Abilene to spend a month in a halfway house. A sleek black limousine and chauffeur were waiting outside the doors of the prison for the one-time Texas millionaire who was convicted of fraud and conspiracy to conceal assets from the IRS. Estes has spent more than 12 years on two different occasions in Texas prisons.

"Are you ready to get rid of him," Pam Estes said with a big smile as she talked with a secretary at the camp. After signing release papers, Estes and his troupe exited to the porch of the prison administration building. He paused to look up at the early morning sky and said "I feel like I died and went to heaven."

"I'm looking forward to a happy life," Estes said as cameras clicked and reporters hung on to his every word. "I'm a happy man."

Then reaching around to hug his daughter and grandchildren, he said with a smile "This is my life."

Estes invited the press to "have a cup of coffee" at Carlo's Restaurant, adding that owner David Gomez "is a friend of mine."

Estes and his family slammed the doors of the limousine and sped off to the restaurant with newsmen following close behind.

Estes had been hesitant to talk with reporters during most of his Bubonic plague discovered in county

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Bubonic plague has been found in two dead coyotes discovered in the southwest corner of Howard County, county health officials said Monday.

Officials, however, told Howard County commissioners Monday "there is no cause for alarm in Howard County."

Bubonic plague, which usually is transmitted from animal to flea to human or animal, is endemic, or carried in the animal population of the county, County health officer James Luck said.

No cases of the plague have been reported in nearby counties, Luck said.

"The only time plague is extremely frightful is when the plague becomes urban and pneumonic (or transmitted from human to human through the air)," Luck said.

No cases of pneumonic plague have been reported in the state, he said.

"We don't have any need for worry, just a need for caution," Luck said. "When we deal with wildlife, whether we're a farmer, a hunter or a camper, we need to be aware of nature around us."

As a result of tests conducted on a coyote he caught, county trapper Randy Lewis told county commissioners Monday he now is testing every coyote he finds for bubonic plague. Before, he tested every other animal, Lewis said.

Bubonic plague has been in the western United States "a long time," Luck said, arriving during the 1800s in the United States on fleas carried on rats aboard ships docking in San Francisco from the Orient. Since that time, the plague has migrated slowly eastward to the 100th meridian, which divides

West Texas from West Central Texas.

Symptoms of bubonic plague among the animal population in the area are "die-offs," or many deaths in a particular species that could carry fleas with the plague, Luck said. These animals include rabbits, rats, groundhogs and other rodent-like animals.

Other animals can carry the plague, but are "asymptomatic," or do not exhibit any symptoms of the plague, Luck said.

"They can live with it," Luck said of animals like coyotes.

Despite recent publicity on human deaths from cases of bubonic plague in New Mexico and reports that the disease is in the stages of an epidemic, Luck said the few cases reported in West Texas do not even approach the situation in New Mexico.

Nor is bubonic plague necessarily fatal, Luck said.

"Bubonic plague can be treated medically with a vaccine if diagnosed in time," he said.

Persons who contract bubonic plague itch, feel sick and listless, Luck said. They develop swelling in their lymph nodes, especially in their armpits or groin. If untreated, the fatality rate in persons who contract the disease runs from 25 to 50 percent, according to county health office background material on the disease.

In contrast, the infection in pneumonic plague localizes in the lungs and is spread through the air, Luck said. He said that no cases of pneumonic plague have been reported in the state.

The only human case of bubonic plague reported in Texas occurred in January 1982 in Ector County, Luck said. The man who contracted

Appraisal board jumps gun on 1984 review appointments

By CAROL BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Members of the Howard County Tax Appraisal District board, whose terms expire Dec. 31, had "no authority to go into 1984" and name two men to the Appraisal Review Board, a state property tax board official said Monday.

Don Yates and J.M. Sterling were named last Wednesday to 1984-85 terms on the Howard County ARB by outgoing members of the appraisal district board. According to Debbie Wheeler, associate director of education and standards at the state property tax board in Austin, 1984 terms should be appointed by incoming members of the Howard County Tax Appraisal District board who will take office on Jan. 1, 1984.

By appointing new ARB members before the new HCTAD takes office in January, "you are tying the hands of future board members," Mrs. Wheeler said. Old board members do have the right "to appoint the terms which come open as they were on board. They don't have the power to appoint the future."

Because members of the HCTAD board are being voted on now and will be subject to change on Jan. 1, 1984, the move to appoint ARB members for future terms is not "proper procedure," state property tax board officials said.

Ms. Wheeler said the outgoing appraisal district board should not appoint ARB members for the 1984-85 year because "those terms do not exist" at present. "You have old (outgoing) board members trying to appoint new members. The ARB terms have not expired," she said, adding that present terms will expire on Dec. 31, 1983.

Appointing new ARB directors before 1984 "is not a proper way of administering it," she said. "We are talking about brand new terms in the future which do not exist now."

A Howard County Tax Appraisal Board for 1984 will be voted on by various taxing entities in Howard County by today, according to Gene Pereira, chief appraiser of the Howard County Tax Appraisal District.

Court cools hot check plea

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Howard County Commissioners Monday turned down a request by County Attorney Bob Miller to pay his employees a $150-a-month salary supplement from his controversial hot check fund.

The commissioners' action may not prevent Miller from issuing the supplements to his three county employees, because use of monies generated by the hot check collections department — after merchants are paid the amount of outstanding checks collected — is the sole discretion of the county attorney, according to state law.

MILTON KIRBY

However, the commissioners' decision prevents the county from issuing the money to Miller's three employees who work with hot check collections as part of the regular payroll from the county general fund. The request specified that the general fund would be reimbursed by the hot check fund.

The salary of county attorney's office employee Melba Soles, who runs the hot check division, is paid by a similar plan. Mrs. Soles is paid through the general fund, but monies from the hot check fund pay her salary, insurance benefits, social security benefits and all other charges, according to County Treasurer Bonnie Franklin.

In a vote that was confusing because of the county judge's failure to call audibly for opposing votes, Commissioner William Crooker's motion to approve Miller's request was overturned, 3-2.

Both Crooker and Commissioner Paul Allen, who seconded the motion, voted for Miller's request. County Judge Milton Kirby then announced, without actually calling for votes opposing the motion, that the resolution "failed for lack of support." Commissioner David Barr earlier had announced his intentions to oppose Miller's request, while Commissioner Louis Brown had said before the vote that he was not going to vote for anything he didn't understand.

Commissioners later determined that both Barr and Brown had opposed the measure, creating a tie that the judge broke by siding with Brown and Barr. During discussion of Miller's proposal, Crooker said the request was "a matter of accommodation" with Miller. He also said the commissioners had created a "similar" situation by paying the county judge's secretary — who also serves as the commissioners' secretary — a supplemental income from their budget.

Commissioner David Barr, who spoke against the proposal before the vote was taken, said he objected to the measure because it "would throw every other department out of balance" with the salaries paid by the county attorney's office.

Barr also said he objected to the measure because county commissioners had no control over the hot check fund. He also said the measure would have amounted to approval of Miller's disposal of the monies in the hot check fund, which became a source of controversy earlier this year because of the way the fund was spent.

Miller came under criticism for his handling of the fund when courthouse employees discovered some of the money was spent on pins as Christmas gifts for his employees, a Dale Carnegie course and a seminar he taught.

Miller replied to Barr's statements opposing his request by saying he understood Barr's position.

"It's the luck of the draw whether you work in that department. If it (the supplemental salary for his employees) sets salaries out of line with (those in) other departments, I can understand (your action)," Miller said. "I don't know how it affects the bookkeeping. They'll be making two paychecks (now)."

In addition, Miller told commissioners that he was unable to find any law requiring commissioners to hire an architect to construct an addition to the courthouse to store county records. The commissioners are considering adding space to the building because the city fire marshal recently informed them of fire hazards in the county clerk's records storage area in the courthouse basement.

However, Miller told commissioners that since the county is considering using revenue-sharing funds for the project that an architect might be required to satisfy state and federal construction regulations. He also said the requirement could be contained in administrative regulations of which he was not aware.

In other action, commissioners decided to have the county engineer set specifications for bids to electrically rewire some offices in the courthouse. County auditor Jackie Olson received estimates on the electrical work varying by several thousand dollars, prompting commissioners to ask for the bids.

GREETINGS — Billy Sol Estes hugs his chauffeur as his troupe of relatives and friends prepares to leave the Big Spring Federal Camp this morning. About 30 newsmen were on hand for Estes release from prison.

stay in prison, but said his daughter had written a book, entitled "Billie Sol," that had changed his attitude. "Pam was a little girl when I went to prison," he remembered. "She grew up and became a journalism student. She spent 20 years working on this book. I wouldn't have looked at the past."

This is Estes' second release from prison. He was first paroled in 1971 and remembers "I ran away from the press. I never wanted to see the press." He added he would appreciate "anything you can do for my daughter."

As he drank coffee, ate Hershey bars and talked in the restaurant, he said "When I left that prison, I left a part of me. I left some loyal friends."

Estes first went to prison in the 1960s and said some of the guards at the Big Spring Federal Camp had been in other facilities in which he had stayed. "I've known some of them for 15 to 20 years. I feel real close to them."

Estes praised John Allman, superintendent of the Big Spring Camp, commending him on several programs, including one in which inmates are given time to attend church.

Prisoners in the camp were friends, Estes said, who threw a party for him Monday night and "bought more than 400 books that my daughter had. Some didn't have the money; it was sad. But they gave me so much support. I leave here with no bitterness, no malice."

Before Estes entered the lobby this morning to greet the press, more than 100 prisoners formed a line that Estes walked through.

"They prayed for me. They treated me real special," he said. Some of the inmates "wanted to know if I needed financial help. There are a lot of beautiful people inside."

He said he told the men at the prison "I wasn't saying goodbye. This is a bend in the road."

Estes said he planned now to head for Abilene "to be a neighbor.. to be buried there. I'm going home."

In the future "Who knows, we might write another book."

He said he planned to take stock of his future and "find out where we are. I'm a compulsive person. When I take one drink, I'm a total drunk. I'm not going to do that from now on. I'm just one bad deal from doing life in prison. I'm an insane person, but I believe there is a higher power...God...that can keep me straight. Before, my goal was to build an empire. Money, money, money."

Hugging his grandchildren, he said "Here's my real assets. I'm going to help Pam every way I can to sell her book."

Estes said he also plans to help with an upcoming Home Box Office movie which is in the works about his life. "I've been asked to help."

Daughter Pam walked through the press corps with a big smile and time to talk to anyone with a question.

"We're really excited. He's spent 3 1/2 years here and we spent four years before that fighting not to get him here. I'm excited he's out. We're going to protect him from getting back here. We'll be monitoring his calls and visits."

"There are so many people who want to use his ability to make money. We're already getting people calling. We're going to try and keep him away from a lot of problems."

Billie Sol said that prison terms are "a lot more painful on the family. The men adjust to prison. They treated us real kindly in prison. But it's harder on the man's family than the man."

He said he anticipates no trouble getting back into society and credits the prison's furlough program for helping him adjust.

"When I got out of prison before, I felt like a lost deer in a snowstorm."

Although he credits the furlough program, he remembers "It was hard to go out and hard to come back. But I have a faithful, loyal family who really supported me."

Estes had kind words for friends. "When I got into trouble my friends quit giving me bills. They don't charge me anymore. West Texas is a different group of people — the finest in the world."

He told reporters that Big Spring "Pete Jones is like a son to me." He met Jones more than 20 years ago at a Church of Christ meeting in Odessa and the friendship was renewed when Estes came to Big Spring to serve in the Big Spring Camp. Jones and his wife, Angel, sponsored Estes on trips outside the camp and took him to church.

Estes petitioned last year for an early release from prison and said at that time he was suffering from a weight loss. He was turned down and that time and talked about how he dealt with that disappointment.

"I tried to live one day at a time. In prison, you don't worry about tomorrow. The Bible has a plan for life. When you get in jail — you turn to it, try to learn it, try to follow it. I believe in destiny. There is a purpose for all of us. We shouldn't question. When I look back I think how wealthy I was at such a young age, but I was never content. I'm more content now. I'm not going to reach for stardom. I'm real happy. I just ask everyone pray for me and we'll remember everyone in our prayers."

"I'm going to start a new life and I thank God for being so good to me. I can't tell you how it feels to be free."

Estes told reporters "I'm striving to change. I tried to find myself in prison. I've got no ambition to get great riches again. I'm going home a real happy man, but I left a part of me out there (at the prison)."

In response to a reporter's question about Estes' financial state now, he said "I'm one of the richest men in the world. I see my wealth all around me." His wife answered "But we don't have any cash."

Plague

the plague died, but only because he found out too late for effective treatment, Luck said.

Officials remain unsure about how the man contracted the plague since they did not locate any animals with plague, Luck said, but they believe he probably got the disease from a rabbit. The man had been hunting rabbits and probably was bitten by fleas from an open carcass he brought home, Luck said.

Allman

"I can understand that," Allman said. "This is a traumatic time for him."

Allman refers to Estes as "Billie" and says he calls all his inmates by their first names if they allow it, which most do. "We are very relaxed here," Allman said. "We don't have violent prisoners. We are professional, yet relaxed. We try to keep things as normal as you can get" in prison.

Estes fit into this atmosphere easily, Allman said. "He was a non-violent inmate" who was imprisoned on charges of fraud and executing a scheme of conspiracy to fraud. "All our prisoners are non-violent, and he was a very non-violent inmate."

Not all of the Big Spring prisoners are convicted on tax fraud schemes or swindles, Allman added. "They are not all white collar. They come from all walks of life. We have indigents who are in prison for transporting aliens, and we have wealthy fraudulents who misappropriated funds. We don't have people charged with armed robbery, kidnapping, rape, things like that."

New Mexico has been in a state of a "borderline epidemic" of bubonic plague since the mid 1970s, Luck said. Cases there in which humans have contracted the disease from flea bites range from lows of five and eight cases a year to a high of 35, he said.

Current figures on cases among humans in New Mexico for 1983 show that six persons out of the 29 cases reported this year have died from bubonic plague, Luck said.

Although recent statistics show an upswing in cases reported in New Mexico, national figures show 992 cases of the disease have been reported in humans from 1900 to 1972. During this time the mortality rate from the plague has declined, partially due to better treatment.

From 1958 and 1972, nine persons died of the plague out of 51 reported cases, according to national statistics supplied by the health office.

Like all prisoners in Big Spring, "Billie enjoyed furloughs during the last year to reorient himself with society. He had visits from his family, just like other inmates. He required no special care from me at all."

During 1982, Estes appeared before a U.S. Parole Commission board to request an early release from prison but was denied his request. At that time, he complained of a loss of appetite and a drop in his weight.

Allman said any prisoner complaining of health problems is referred to four local physician's assistants who work at the federal camp, or to a doctor who visits the prison regularly and is always on call.

If there is a medical problem which requires care "we immediately take inmates to area hospitals. Billie Sol spent a few days in a hospital in the local area" while at the federal camp, Allman said.

Estes and other prisoners at the Big Spring Federal Camp shared days which were very much alike. He followed the standard procedures of "waking up at 6 a.m. The men are expected to get up and clean up their room." Rooms are expected to be up to "military standards" and are inspected regularly.

At 7:30 p.m., all prisoners go to breakfast, then on to a job at the camp. They are given a noon meal, then return to their jobs until 3:30 p.m., when they head back to their dorms.

At 4 p.m., "there is a stand up count. The prisoners stand up in their doorways and are counted."

Supper follows, then "the inmates are free for recreation until 10 p.m., when there is another room count. After that time, they are allowed to move about in their own building. There are silent counts every two hours throughout the night," where guards go through the dorms to make sure inmates are where they should be.

The routine changes only on Saturday and Sunday. On weekends and holidays prisoners may sleep later and are allowed visitors.

Police Beat

2 injured in wreck

Two persons were slightly injured in a one-car accident Monday in the 500 block of N.E. Third.

Police said a 1974 Chevrolet Monte Carlo driven by Gloria Aquirre Hernandez of 612 N.W. Third was traveling eastbound on Third at a moderate to high rate of speed when the right two wheels of the car left the roadway, struck and climbed a guy wire, hit a pole approximately six feet from the ground, flipped over and landed upside down on the street.

Hernandez and another passenger were taken to a doctor by private vehicle.

Zina Wood, employee of Keaton Kolor at 1309 Gregg, told police at 8:55 a.m. Monday that someone entered the business between 1 p.m. Saturday and 8:30 a.m. Monday, damaged a glass window, and stole a Kodak camera worth $60 and about $100 in currency and coins, police reports said.

Keith Walker of 2508 Central told police at 9:15 a.m. Monday that someone between 8:45 p.m. Sunday and 7:30 a.m. Monday stole a General Tire worth $150 from his vehicle parked in the driveway of his residence.

Marilyn Mason, 44, of 1607 E. 17th reported two glass window panes in a storage shed were broken at around 5:15 p.m. Friday at the residence. Mason told police she saw two juveniles throwing rocks at the shed and holding BB guns.

Jesse Willard Robertson, 67, of Plainview was arrested at 5:55 p.m. Monday on suspicion of driving while intoxicated, police reports said.

Dayle Motley, 44, of Ackerly was arrested at 9:01 p.m. Monday in connection with traffic warrants, police reports said.

Sheriff's Log

Tools reported stolen

Bruce Henshaw, an employee at Don's Machine Shop on the Snyder Highway, told county authorities at 9:14 a.m. Monday that someone between 1 p.m. Sunday and 8:30 a.m. Monday stole tools worth $1,000 from a 1975 International truck parked at the business' north side, reports said.

Carlos B. Marquez, 22, of 610 N.W. Eighth was arrested at 8 a.m. Monday by county authorities on Howard County warrants of burglary and felony theft and an Ector County warrant of burglary, reports said.

Torres murder trial begins

A 29-year-old Big Spring man will be tried Wednesday in 118th District Court for the Feb. 5 shooting death of a Midland man.

Alfredo Torres, 29, of Northcrest Apartments has been charged with the murder of Daniel Alvarez Rios, 39, who died of a gunshot wound to the chest shortly after midnight Feb. 6 at Malone-Hogan Hospital, according to Big Spring Police Chief Rick Turner.

Rios had been shot once with a small-caliber handgun at Fina's Restaurant at 200 N. Gregg just after 11 p.m. Feb. 5, police said.

Torres was arrested by police in the 900 block of Lamesa Street shortly after the shooting, Turner said. Torres, who was carrying a handgun at the time of his arrest, also was wanted by police on a warrant for aggravated assault in connection with another case, Turner said.

Torres was released Feb. 18 from county jail on $45,000 bond.

Tax

By Dec. 1, county clerk Margaret Ray will count the ballots and declare winners.

When asked if ARB members had been appointed illegally, Pereira said "No, no, no." He read from the state property tax code and said "members hold two-year terms which begin Jan. 1." He then added, "I don't know how you can get them sworn in Jan. 1 any other way."

He said, "I'm not an attorney, but that is my interpretation from the state property tax board. This is what I was told to do. If we are operating illegally, then I was advised illegally."

Pereira contacted the Herald about 30 minutes after his initial interview and said "I've talked with an attorney with the state property tax board to see if my interpretation still stands. Apparently they were contacted about my interpretation. I checked it out not more than 15 minutes ago. They (members of the state board) are studying my interpretation and it could be changed. My interpretation could stand or could be pulled back."

For the record

The Red Cross certificates mentioned in a story last Saturday were discovered at the local Red Cross office, not the Veteran's Administration Medical Center.

Wounded newsman returns

LOS ANGELES — Newscaster Jerry Dunphy, shot Oct. 24 in the neck and left arm, has returned to work at KABC-TV and described the "panic and terror" of the attack on him and a companion as they drove to work in his Rolls-Royce.

He returned to work three weeks to the day after four men "one shouting obscenities, tried to gun down makeup artist Sandra Marshall and me as we headed back to work right here in this studio," said Dunphy, 62, on his return Monday.

No one has been arrested in the attack despite a $25,000 reward offered by the station, but police say they believe the attack was random and not aimed specifically at Dunphy.

Ms. Marshall still has not returned to work.

Ex-Menudo idol mobbed

NEW YORK — Several thousand screaming young women besieged City Hall to get a glimpse of a former member of the singing group Menudo, Miguel Cancel, when he went there for a visit.

Miguel, who had to leave the group because he has reached age 16, the retirement age for members of the Puerto Rican group, was being honored at the request of several prominent Hispanics and was greeted by Mayor Edward Koch.

Police reinforcements were called in Monday to hold back the crowd, which damaged about 15 cars in the City Hall parking lot.

Several young women close to the barricades had to be pulled to safety by police as the crowd behind pushed forward.

The singer later escaped through a side door.

Noguchi predicts return

LOS ANGELES — Dr. Thomas Noguchi predicts that sooner or later he will be reinstated as Los Angeles county coroner, but meantime he has a sign on his office door saying, "Welcome to Siberia."

...controversial

It's been 20 months since the county Board of Supervisors stripped Noguchi of the coroner's title.

Accused of being a poor manager who spent too much time on personal projects, and charged with saying too much about the deaths of celebrities, Noguchi was demoted to physician-specialist.

Noguchi, 56, says his critics figured the demotion would be more than his ego could stand and he would resign.

"Fighting the politicians is my hobby," he said in a recent interview. "I foresee that in the very near future, I will be returned as the chief medical examiner and coroner of Los Angeles County."

The latest brouhaha centers on Noguchi's new book, "Coroner."

Board of Supervisors Chairman Mike Antonovich accused Noguchi of trying to "make a fast buck" on the book, which details celebrity deaths.

Stolen gavel disrupts crime program

ALAMO HEIGHTS, Texas (AP) — The Alamo Heights police chief attended a city council meeting to announce a crime-fighting program, but the session was disrupted briefly when the mayor discovered that his gavel had been stolen.

"I guess we'll conduct an investigation," said Roger Terry, chief of police.

Mayor Bill Balthrop finally opened the meeting after casually remarking, "My gavel appears to have been stolen over the weekend."

U.S. Naval attache killed

ATHENS — A U.S. Navy captain serving with the American military mission to Greece was shot and killed today by a gunman who pulled alongside the officer's car on a motorcycle.

The American was identified as Capt. George Tsantes, 53, of New York City, chief of the naval section in the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group in Greece, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

Embassy spokesman Peter Synodis said Tsantes, an American of Greek descent, arrived in Greece in April 1983. He was married with three children, and had served a previous tour in the Greek capital.

A police spokesman said two men on a motorcycle came up alongside Tsantes' official car, a black Buick, when it stopped at a traffic light at a junction on a busy north of the city center.

One of the men on the motorcycle "fired at least seven shots with a .45 caliber gun," said the spokesman, who declined to be identified.

Tsantes was hit four times in the neck and chest, and one bullet entered his heart, said the spokesman, adding, "He must have died almost immediately."

Police said there had been no claim of responsibility for the attack.

The shooting took place at 7:30 a.m. (1:30 a.m. EST) as Tsantes was driving from his home in the northern suburb of Psychiko to his office at the U.S. Embassy in downtown Athens.

Tsantes' driver, identified as Nikos Valoutsas, was seriously wounded in the attack, the police said. A spokeswoman at Hygeia Hospital said he was shot at least three times and was undergoing surgery for stomach wounds.

PLO repulses Syrian attack

TRIPOLI — Syrian-backed guerrilla mutineers mounted a tank assault today to dislodge PLO chief Yasser Arafat from his stronghold in northern Lebanon, but he claimed the attack was crushed.

With shells falling around his quarters in Tripoli, Arafat's office said in a communique that the attackers were driven back after seven hours of fierce combat on the outskirts of the Baddawi refugee camp.

The communique from the Palestine Liberation Organization said 13 Syrian army tanks were destroyed and 50 PLO rebels and Syrian commandos captured in the fighting that collapsed a four-day-old ceasefire.

Another PLO communique, issued in Tunis, claimed Col. Salah Maani, military commander of the Syrian-supported Saiga guerrilla group, was killed in the attack on Baddawi and that his body was brought to Tripoli.

It also claimed Capt. Ahmed Jibril, leader of the Libyan-backed Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, suffered a head wound in the fighting and was hospitalized in Zagorta, seven miles east of Tripoli.

YASSAR ARAFAT

But Jibril's official spokesman in Damascus, Fadl Shrouf, denied the PLO claim, saying, "Capt. Jibril is quite safe and exercising his normal functions."

The tank assault, backed by infantry an artillery, initially concentrated on Baddawi, but later spilled into Tripoli, including the main commercial thoroughfare. Shops closed and streets were empty.

A few shells struck Tripoli's oil refinery on Baddawi's edge, setting oil storage tanks on fire. The Lebanese government says it lost $100 million from burning crude and refined oil in the past two weeks of PLO warfare.

Tripoli is 50 miles north of Beirut, which was shaken this morning by the sound of rapid explosions as shells and rockets crashed into predominantly Christian east Beirut.

Police said the intense barrage, which lasted 30 minutes, injured five motorists and forced schools in most of east Beirut to close for the day. Christian-controlled radio stations blamed on Syrian-backed Druse militiamen in the central mountains overlooking the capital.

Nuclear arms talks cut short

GENEVA — The Soviet delegation left the medium-range nuclear arms talks after 35 minutes today, the shortest session during nearly two years of negotiations, but U.S. officials said the two sides will meet Thursday.

The brief meeting came one day after the arrival in Britain of the first of 572 new U.S.-built cruise and Pershing 2 missiles scheduled for deployment in Western Europe if the negotiations fail to produce an accord.

Chief Soviet negotiator Yuli A. Kvitsinsky refused to comment to reporters as he left the U.S. delegation building where the session took place, but 20 minutes later the office of U.S. negotiator Paul H. Nitze announced that the talks would continue Thursday.

Negotiating sessions usually have lasted from one to two hours since they began in November 1981, but the brief stay of the Soviets today was seen as potentially significant since they have threatened repeatedly to leave the talks when the U.S. begins deploying new missiles.

Soviet mission spokesman Vladimir Evdokuchine said a Soviet delegation member had told him that continuation of the talks depended on what was said at today's session. He did not elaborate.

Plea made for democracy

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration, in a fresh appeal to Nicaraguan officials to establish democracy, is suggesting the alternative for them could be the kind of political upheaval that led to the imprisonment and death of the Grenadian leadership a month ago.

That thesis was set forth in a speech Monday night to Organization of American States foreign ministers by Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam, who said the lesson of Grenada is that "political differences tend to degenerate into violence" without democratic safeguards.

Calling Nicaragua an obstacle to peace in Central America, Dam accused the Sandinistas of failing to negotiate in good faith.

Missile protesters become violent

LONDON (AP) — Demonstrators sprayed Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine with red paint, chained themselves to the gates of a U.S. air base and climbed a 150-foot radio tower at a nuclear submarine dock today to protest the arrival of Europe's first cruise missiles.

At least 145 people were arrested, most of them at Greenham Common Air Base, 50 miles west of London, where the missiles arrived Monday, police said.

Heseltine, arriving to address a Conservative student union meeting at Manchester University, strode smilingly up to some 200 demonstrators gathered outside the front door. One of the protesters reached out a plastic squeeze bottle and sprayed his face and bushy blond hair with red paint.

Heseltine, shaken but unhurt, disappeared into an anteroom to clean up, then addressed the students — and had to shout to be heard above hecklers.

At Faslane Bay, Scotland, three demonstrators invaded the naval base where Britain's nuclear-armed Polaris submarines dock. They climbed the radio tower, unfurled anti-nuclear banners and stayed for six hours before agreeing to come down.

An open-door S. Africa policy

South Africa's repugnant racial policies have been condemned repeatedly, and properly so, by the United States and nearly every other nation. But restricting American trade with South Africa would do nothing to end apartheid and, instead, could significantly worsen conditions for blacks in that racially segregated nation.

The House of Representatives, however, has abandoned reason and approved a proposal to prohibit new American investment in South Africa. The measure, an export control bill amendment, is viewed by its supporters as a blow for freedom and justice. In reality, it would only harden the determination of the South African government to continue excluding blacks from full citizenship.

In maintaining commercial ties with South Africa, the United States has accumulated some leverage in Pretoria. Government officials there are well aware of the prevalent American view on apartheid. Subtle U.S. pressure has moved Pretoria closer to equality.

By limiting trade relations, however, the United States would lose the moderating influence it now exerts. And black South Africans would lose opportunities to improve their lot through employment in relatively well-paying jobs created by American investment.

Moreover, it would be hypocritical for the United States to curb commercial ties with South Africa while continuing to do business with the Soviet Union.

The Senate should kill this ill-conceived, counterproductive measure.

Mondale pressed on endorsement

The Newspaper Guild has endorsed Fritz Mondale as its presidential candidate. Actually, the leaders of the Newspaper Guild endorsed him — the membership was not consulted. Many members of the guild are very angry that their leaders took a position in the presidential campaign.

I thought there would be jubilation in the Mondale camp when the Newspaper Guild gave the nod to their man. But it was just the opposite.

"This is an absolute disaster," said one of Mondale's people. "We've been blindsided."

"How can you say that? The Newspaper Guild is a powerful union and its members control much of the news fit to print. You should be thrilled they came out for your boy so early."

"The members didn't come out for our boy — the guild officers came out for him, and the rank and file are mad as hell. Do you know what is going to happen? The members will clobber Mondale just to prove they haven't gone in the tank."

"I didn't think of that. You don't believe they would purposely slant their stories against him, just to assert their independence?"

"They could do something worse — ignore him. And if they do write about him they'll be harder on Mondale than anybody else. If they are not, their editors will think they're following the Newspaper Guild party line."

"I think you're right," I said. "I frankly don't believe a Newspaper Guild should support any presidential candidate. After all, what can a president do for the press, anyway? The worst candidates have given us our best stories, and the best ones haven't given us any stories at all. Why do you think the guild officers stuck their necks out?"

The Mondale man said, "We suspect someone from the other side was behind it."

"When you say the other side are you talking about Mondale's Democratic rivals or the Republicans?"

"In a presidential primary everybody is on the other side."

"Perhaps you're overreacting."

The Mondale aide said, "The last time the Newspaper Guild supported a presidential candidate was in 1972 when they came out for McGovern. Look what happened to him."

"I forgot McGovern. Funny enough after they endorsed him, McGovern complained he never got a decent story in the papers again."

"It isn't funny. The same thing could happen to Mondale."

"I guess your best bet would be to repudiate the guild endorsement. After all, you don't have to take every political blessing that comes along."

"It may be too late. We should have turned it down when it was first offered to us. Now it's going to be hard to get the rank-and-file guild members to stop leaning over backwards to show they don't support Fritz."

"I notice where many guild members have already notified their leaders that they don't support Mondale. Isn't this a good sign?" I asked.

"Yeah, but those reporters will go even farther out of their way to show they mean it. No matter which way they go now, it's a no-win situation for us."

"There must be some way you can get a fair shake from the newspaper people, in spite of the fact they endorsed you."

"Any ideas?"
"How about this one? Why doesn't Mondale announce 'If I am elected president, I will let the press go to Grenada?'"

Billy Graham

All our sins not washed away

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have a brother who has some brain damage because he got involved in some heavy drugs. I know you believe that Jesus Christ came to take away the consequences of sins that we commit. Do you think if he invited Christ into his life that God would take away that damage? — L.G.F.

DEAR L.G.F.: First of all, the Bible does not promise that all of the consequences of sins we have committed in the past will automatically vanish. Sin is a terrible and destructive thing, and sometimes we have to pay the consequences for our foolishness and our refusal to obey God. King David in the Bible sinned greatly when he committed adultery with another man's wife. God forgave him when he truly repented and asked God for forgiveness — but the child that was born of that illicit union still died as an act of God's judgement on David.

I therefore do not want to hold out a false hope to your brother, promising that if he invites Christ into his life all of the results of his drug habit will definitely vanish. At the same time, I know that God "is able to do immeasurably more than all we ask or imagine, according to his power" (Ephesians 3:20). There are times when God works in ways that are beyond our human understanding to bring healing and restoration, although none of us can predict when this will be the case. This much is certain: your brother needs Christ, and he will be a better person for having Christ in his life.

Why does your brother need Christ? He needs forgiveness for what he has done, and he needs the strength that Christ can give him every day. He needs hope also — hope that God really cares for him, and God can use him if he opens his life to Christ.

Encourage your brother to come to Christ. It is the most important decision any of us will ever make. What has happened to your brother is tragic, but God wants to help him and make him his child through faith in Christ.

Around the Rim

By CAROL HART BALDWIN

A dim, dark memory

When I think of President John F. Kennedy, I don't remember his politics, his accomplishments or his blunders. I remember his children and a slow, dark procession in which his casket was pulled by horses along streets paved with mourners.

I read with great interest the memories people have of the day President John F. Kennedy was assassinated. It doesn't seem possible that 20 years have come and gone since he was shot, but I believe his assassination colored the thinking of a lot of people in my generation for the last 20 years. We were old enough to know what had happened and young enough to be terrified by it. And no one had any comforting answers to give us.

Kennedy is the first president I can easily recall. My memories of him are dark and tainted by the fact that his term ended so tragically. The nation seemed shocked that this could happen. When I remember the day it seems like a bad dream. And I remember thinking for years afterward that anyone serving as president ran a high risk of being shot. It went with the territory.

I was seven years old and in the first grade when he died. People's attitudes changed. The world wasn't as rosy as before. All the adults became very somber and kept the television on all the time. They told us to keep quiet while they watched the news and they explained to us that President Kennedy had been shot and that this was a terrible tragedy. Kids in my neighborhood agreed to stay out of the way because we understood the magnitude of what had happened but we didn't have any idea why anyone would do such a thing. I'm sure in the 20 years since, no has come up with any answers as to why a public figure is assassinated.

I remember kids in the neighborhoods going to play at each other's home and lingering instead by the television watching the replay of the assassination and the funeral procession. It was frightening to see adults cry and wonder aloud about what the world was coming to.

Before JFK was assassinated, I read stories about his daughter Caroline, who was a year younger than I was and was a typical kid — only one who lived in the White House and whose dad was president of the United States. Caroline's brother was about the same age as my sister and I pictured the Kennedy's as a normal family — the White House didn't carry much weight with me when I was seven.

Then Caroline's dad was killed in the streets of Dallas and I felt sorry for her. We've all grown up since then and we harbor our own memories of a very terrible day in November. I don't think any of us who can recall that day will forget it or the impact it made on our nation.

Big Timber caught with chain saws down

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has quietly approved a $600 million bailout of the nation's big timber companies — against the best advice of his own budget people, the Treasury and the Council of Economic Advisers.

There is even serious doubt that the bailout is legal. Here's the story:

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, timber companies in the Pacific Northwest badly misread the future of the economy. Counting on continued inflation and a growing demand for housing, they bid extravagant prices for federally owned timber. Their intention was to lock up their future lumber supplies at what would prove to be a bargain.

But the timber barons were sabotaged by the economy. High interest rates crippled the housing industry; recession frightened off home buyers. Even the modest recovery this year stalled, and interest rates are creeping back up, threatening the modest housing boom.

Meanwhile, the timber industry is stuck with its high-priced contracts for federally owned timber.

Caught with their chain saws down, the lumber companies came crying to the government for relief. On the shaky premise that the government was responsible for the recession that had shattered their dreams of easy profits, they first asked to be let out of their contracts. That was refused.

Then Big Timber tried another tack. Under their contracts with the Forest Service, they are required to harvest their trees within five years — at the inflated prices they agreed to. So the timber industry's new scheme was to ask for a five-year, interest-free extension on their contracts for $4.5 billion worth of trees. Their hope is that prices will pick up again during the five years.

This is the bailout the president ordered. The chief lobbyist for it was John B. Crowell, assistant secretary of agriculture for natural resources, who oversees the Forest Service. Before he joined the government, he was general counsel for Louisiana Pacific, a timber industry giant that is one of the biggest beneficiaries of the five-year extension plan.

In a 1981 letter to the Office of Government Ethics, Crowell promised to disqualify himself from "involvement in any particular matter which may arise" concerning his former employer. But administration sources say Crowell has fought for the bailout "as if his mother's life depended on it."

At Crowell's behest, the Forest Service prepared a report estimating that the five-year extension would cost the government $300 million in lost interest and royalties. Estimates by other government experts put the figure at $600 million or more.

My associate Michael Binstein obtained a copy of an internal critique of the Forest Service report. It was prepared jointly by the Treasury, the Office of Management and Budget and the Council of Economic Advisers.

"The methodology used by the Forest Service contains several major defects," the critique says. "The Forest Service analysis is highly simplified and is likely to be misleading."

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, OMB Director David Stockman and White House economists all urged the president to reject the bailout. But Crowell, with support from outgoing Interior Secretary James Watt, won the day.

Meanwhile, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, plans to push legislation that would force timber companies seeking relief to pass a needs test — which the big boys would flunk. And the bailout will be opposed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who wants to protect the Southern timber industry by forcing Northwest companies to harvest and market their expensive timber.

Footnote: Crowell said he had divested all his timber holdings and thus did not feel it was a conflict of interest for him to lobby in favor of the bailout.

KAL 007 POSTSCRIPT: The Soviet heat-seeking missile that brought down the Korean Air Lines flight with 269 people aboard was probably a copy of the U.S. Sidewinder missile. In fact, some sources say the missile may have been based in large part on American technology bought or stolen by the Soviets.

The claim is being used as an arguing point in Congress by those who want to stop the flow of sophisticated U.S. technology to the Soviet bloc.

Meanwhile, State Department officials are debating what to do with a "white paper" on the tragic incident. It was prepared quickly with the idea that it would be the complete, definitive story.

But as time passed and public interest was distracted by other things, some officials have argued that release of the report would be an unnecessary exacerbation of U.S.-Soviet tensions. These officials, mainly in the European bureau, reportedly see no point in dredging up the matter all over again.

The decision on whether to sit on the white paper or to make it public is still in abeyance, I'm told.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Masking his disappointment with a little jest, Robert Odle, assistant secretary of Energy for public affairs, sent a report to the White House on the congressional decision to kill the Clinch River breeder reactor boondoggle. He attached a picture of a large hole in Oak Ridge, Tenn., the site of the doomed project, with the caption: "Now you see it, now you don't."

Reginald Bartholomew was given a dubious reward for his yeoman efforts in hammering out an extension of the U.S. bases agreement with Greece: He was named ambassador to Lebanon. The night before he left for Beirut, he was given a farewell party at Foggy Bottom. Secretary of State George Shultz offered words of high praise for Bartholomew, noting that he had succeeded in all his previous assignments and predicting the same for his new job. Five days after he arrived in Beirut, terrorists blew up the Marine headquarters.

LABOR CASE UPDATE: Cher Mungovan will get her chance to testify on Capitol Hill today, as the Senate Judiciary Committee holds hearings on a bill to close the labor law loophole that helped ruin her husband's construction business and drove him into hiding under the federal witness protection program.

I reported last month on the Mungovan case. Walter Mungovan's business was wrecked and his family life shattered by labor union harassment, some of which is apparently legal under the Hobbs Act. The Supreme Court has held that union members and officials are immune from prosecution for acts of violence and intimidation so long as they are committed in pursuit of legitimate union goals.

The hearing, being held at the behest of Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, has also scheduled testimony from a former U.S. attorney who argued and lost the case that gave union goons carte blanche under the Hobbs Act, as well as from others who will ask Congress to close the loophole.

Walkers participated in AHA's annual Turkey Walk

Forty walkers descended on Scenic Mountain in Big Spring for the American Heart Association's annual Turkey Walk, Saturday.

The annual event is engineered by the local American Heart Association chapter to raise funds for the Association. It also helped build public awareness of walking as a heart-healthy exercise.

Proceeds raised from the walk have not yet been totaled. The proceeds will go to the Association's Texas Affiliate for support of cardio-vascular research and many other programs. Some monies will return to Howard County in the form of public education programs on cardio-vascular disease, heart-healthy living and support for on going cardio-pulmonary resuscitation work.

American Heart Association said its volunteers, walkers and local business people made the Turkey Walk a success. Burger Chef, Super Save, Scenic Mountain park rangers and Don Newsom's contributed prizes and supplies needed.

Dr. David Rickey, D.D.S. coordinated the event and worked in conjunction with Carmen Salazar, president of the local chapter of American Heart Association.

Dr. Donohue

Melanoma a more serious skin cancer

Dear Dr. Donohue: I was disturbed that you would write an article on skin cancer without giving melanoma as much as one line, warning people of this serious form, which can be fatal. I just recovered from a malignant melanoma that required four operations. My research shows that the rate of melanoma has nearly doubled in 15 years in most countries where data is available. An international source indicates that there were 14,300 cases reported in 1981 alone. In any event, certainly doctors, as well as the general public, ought to be made aware of what to look for. — A.S.

I don't want to neglect melanoma. All the points you make are valid. Melanoma is the most serious of skin cancers, and it is being seen more frequently. It is curable in its early stages. I can believe the statistics you cite.

We all have pigmented spots on our bodies and it's difficult at times to tell if they are innocent moles or something serious, like a melanoma. So the first step is to ask the doctor about any suspicious growth on the skin.

Certain clues point to melanoma. They often have variations of color — shades of red, white or blue in a brown or black spot. Often, they have an irregular border and a pebbly surface. They may be tender or itchy. In early stages they grow locally, but later may invade deeper tissue and spread in the body. So the quicker one is removed the better. In late stages, there is enlargement and bleeding.

Melanomas on the upper back and sides of the neck, the back and sides of the upper arm, at the back of the scalp are especially dangerous. I'm glad yours was successfully detected and treated.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have written you several times. I am 69 and I've read about a mineral called selenium. It is supposed to slow aging and be good for arthritis. Is this true? — Ms. D.H.

I can't find anything to substantiate either of those claims for selenium. I can tell you a bit about it, however. It is a mineral we need in only very small amounts — between 0.05 and 0.20 milligrams daily. It helps vitamin E carry on its function in the body. In animals, a deficiency of selenium causes liver cells to die and leads to degeneration of muscle tissue. I am not sure whether or not a deficiency has ever been verified in humans.

I don't think there is a selenium crisis present over the horizon. It's plentiful in such foods as grains, skimmed milk, brown sugar, egg noodles, egg yolks, beef and chicken. That's all the information I have on selenium. I'm skeptical about its usefulness as a youth preservative or as an arthritis cure. Your other arthritis answers are to be found in the booklet "How You Can Control Arthritis," which other readers may order by writing me care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

What can vitamins really do for you — and what can't they do? In his new booklet, Dr. Paul Donohue separates the common sense from the nonsense about this controversial health aid. For your copy of "Vitamins: Facts You Need to Know," send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, IL 60611.

Precautions help protect fragile gifts

If you want to make sure more-or-less fragile Christmas gifts arrive in the same condition you sent them, keep this advice in mind. Use a sturdy corrugated cardboard carton, larger than the gift-wrapped box, for packing. Protect the gift further by surrounding it on all sides with a resilient filler such as a crumpled newspaper or grocery bags or strips of fabric. The more fragile the gift, the more space you need for the filler. And never put fragile and heavy items in the same carton.

Dear Abby

Two's a crowd in this double bed

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who is a widow and often travels with a widower. Their relationship is strictly platonic. (My friend says she does not find this man physically attractive.)

Recently the two of them attended her granddaughter's graduation in another part of the country, and the daughter, thinking her mother and this man were lovers and not wanting to appear old-fashioned, put them up together in a room with a double bed!

My friend she was uncomfortable and somewhat embarrassed, but she didn't want to make a fuss, so she went along with it.

What are your thoughts on this?

NO NAMES OR LOCATIONS

DEAR NO NAMES: I find it difficult to believe that a grown woman with all her marbles would share a double bed with a man rather than "make a fuss"!

What fuss? It would seem perfectly logical for her to have told her daughter that she and the gentleman were just friends, not lovers, and separate accommodations were required.

DEAR ABBY: Our son was married to a nice girl whose parents had no money, so my husband and I gave the young couple a wedding reception and paid for it ourselves.

The invitations were sent out with reply cards. Eight couples we did not know but who were friends of our son and his bride returned the reply cards saying they were coming, so we counted on them for dinner as we did for all the others who accepted the mail.

When the dinner was served, those eight couples did not show up. Abby, dinner at $41.50 a plate for 16 people cost us $664. After the wedding, none of the no-shows called to explain or apologize. And none of them sent a gift.

My question is this: Since these people were friends of the bride and groom, don't you think they should make good the $664? We offered to foot the bill for the reception, but must we pay for guests who accepted but didn't show up?

STUCK IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR STUCK: You are indeed "stuck," because having offered to pay for the reception, you are obligated to pay for the no-shows. They were very rude, and your son and his bride should let them know about it, but the financial loss — unfair as it is — is yours.

DEAR ABBY: In reply to "Bible Student": Adam was not born, he was created. Also, the Bible states that "Mary was with child — not with fetus." I really think "Bible Student" should go back to school.

Transplant appeal unanswered

CLYDE (AP) — A little girl whose futile wait for a liver transplant attracted nationwide attention and moved an American president to make a national appeal was buried today.

A funeral for 14-month-old Ashley Bailey was held at the Bailey Funeral Home in Clyde. She will be buried at the Hamby Cemetery near Abilene.

Ashley, who suffered from biliary atresia, an incurable disease that hardens the liver, died Friday in Fort Worth. Her futile 10-month wait for a transplant prompted an appeal by President Reagan during his weekly radio broadcast on July 23.

The transplant was the only chance for survival and finding a donor liver was particularly difficult in her case because she weighed less than 15 pounds for most of her life, said her physician, Dr. Robert Squires.

In July, thousands of mailgrams were sent out to hospitals around the country in an effort to locate a liver donor for the girl. A potential donor was found, but the liver turned out to be too large for Ashley. Reagan asked the nation "to find Ashley a donor."

"Once one is found, an Air Force jet is standing ready in case immediate commercial transportation is not available," said Reagan.

"Time is running out," he said. Marines also donated blood for the ailing girl and Texas Gov. Mark White issued a call for contributions to her hospital bills and family friends raised more than $100,000 through bake sales and golf tournaments. Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis of Fort Worth sponsored legislation granting $41,000 toward the operation and the federal government donated another $51,000.

Despite the publicity, her father, Greg Gossett, said three times he learned of livers that would have been available for transplant if hospitals had known of Ashley's condition.

"Hopefully, some other family won't have to go through what we've gone through," Gossett said at a news conference after Ashley's death.

"Some kind of public awareness has got to come from this because that's why Ashley is no longer with us. I don't want to see somebody else go through this because it's pain — pure pain," he said.

Search to resume for missing crew

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The Coast Guard today planned to resume its search for five Louisiana men missing since a supply boat capsized in the Gulf of Mexico six days ago.

Crewmen, while the cook aboard the vessel recovered in a Houma, La., hospital.

Hayes Bonvillain Jr., whose right leg was badly mangled, was sedated but in stable condition. Bonvillain, 48, survived by huddling in an air pocket on the sunken vessel for more than 30 hours.

"It's going to be quite a while before he gets over this," his father, Hayes Bonvillain, said Monday.

The 166-foot offshore supply boat, the Laverne Hebert, sank late Wednesday during a storm. Part of the ship's bow, however, was still visible.

New 'bloodless' heart surgery performed on children

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Open heart surgery using no transfused blood has been performed on almost 100 infants and children by chilling their bodies and diluting their blood with water and nutrients, doctors said Monday.

In comparison to conventional surgery, "bloodless" surgery results in less loss of blood and places less strain on the kidneys and lungs, said Sambamurthy Subramanian, chief of cardiac surgery at Children's Hospital in Buffalo, N.Y.

Those findings were something of a surprise, Subramanian said in an interview. Originally, the technique had been used only on Jehovah's Witnesses, whose religion forbids blood transfusions.

It turned out, however, that the Jehovah's Witness infants tolerated surgery much better than other patients.

"We felt if these patients are doing so well, why don't we do it for other patients?" Subramanian said.

The technique consists of cooling children's bodies from the normal temperature of 98.6 degrees to about 75 degrees, cutting the rate of blood flow in half.

The blood is diluted with an equal or larger amount of a standard hospital solution of water, minerals and starch or other nutrients.

In cases requiring unusually complex surgery, the body may be cooled to about 65 degrees, at which time circulation stops completely. That condition can be maintained for about one hour before causing damage, Subramanian said.

Transfused blood always carries with it the risk of disease, especially hepatitis. "In this day and age, when you're going to use blood, people are concerned about it," Subramanian said.

In a report to the annual meeting of the American Heart Association,

Subramanian's colleague, Dr. Jacob Bergsland, said, "Our experience shows that bloodless surgery can be performed safely in all but the smallest infants."

The diluted blood that flows through the children's bodies carries as little as a third of the percentage of oxygen-carrying hemoglobin found in normal blood, Subramanian said.

It had been feared that could be a problem, but research has shown that in fact the thinner blood circulates better than normal blood.

In trials with almost 100 infants and children between the ages of 3 months and 8 years who needed surgery for a variety of congenital heart defects, Subramanian said he found no detrimental effects attributable to the technique.

Hospital stays following bloodless surgery and conventional surgery have been about the same, he said.

Subramanian emphasized that no patient is refused blood if emergencies require it. Of the first 48 patients to receive the new surgery, two needed some transfused blood.

The techniques of diluting blood and cooling surgical patients date to the 1960s. But Subramanian said his group is the first to apply both techniques to children.

Diagnosis sought for aneurysm

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — At least 3,900 lives and $60 million could be saved each year if American doctors routinely checked patients for a dangerous ballooning of the aorta, the body's main artery, a surgeon said today.

An aneurysm, which occurs when an artery swells up like a balloon, is usually the result of fatty deposits that weaken artery walls. An aneurysm can rupture without notice due to high blood pressure or after physical exertion, such as lifting something heavy.

The lives and money could be saved if physicians checked for hidden aneurysms in the abdominal artery and made sure patients underwent elective surgery to replace the damaged artery section with a piece of Dacron tube, said Dr. John J. Ricotta, an assistant professor of surgery at the University of Rochester, N.Y.

Ricotta, who spoke during the American Heart Association's annual scientific meeting here, said deaths from aneurysms in the abdominal artery remain "unacceptably high" despite efforts to educate doctors and improvements in emergency care for people whose aneurysms rupture.

The patient survival rate is better when the aneurysm is detected and replaced in elective surgery because "mortality for emergency surgery remains high despite advances in medical care," Ricotta said.

"... Very often, by the time we see the patient (after an aneurysm bursts), the damage has already been done."

Doctors need to check routinely for hidden abdominal aneurysms, paying particular attention to patients who complain of pain in the abdomen, groin or back, or who have a history of aneurysms or high blood pressure, Ricotta said.

Doctors often can diagnose an aneurysm in the aorta by simply feeling the abdomen, he added, noting that using ultrasound equipment to draw a picture of the artery can provide "very accurate" confirmation that an aneurysm exists.

Once an abdominal aneurysm is diagnosed, doctors need to be "more aggressive" in convincing patients to undergo elective surgery so that the damaged segment of artery is replaced, Ricotta said.

The New York surgeon explained that some patients with diagnosed aneurysms have not been referred for such surgery because of research indicating that the smaller the aneurysm, the less the chance it will rupture.

Steve Belvin

Well sport fans this is this young, aspiring sports writer's first column and let me tell you I am quite thrilled.

From reading Greg Jaklewicz's column in last Thursday's paper, you know that I am from Colorado City and was born and raised in the small West Texas town.

Growing up in C-City was a blessing because I was always around the warmth and friendliness for which West Texans are noted. Secondly, I grew up in "football country". What more could a youth ask for? My early childhood could best be described as the "meat years" because I was always shoving meat and whatever else I could get into my fat little tummy.

When my mom and I went shopping for clothes, we would skip the little boy's apparel and head straight to the young men's wardrobe.

By the time I reached the seventh grade and my first year of playing organized football, I tipped the scales at 180 pounds and was on the receiving end of enough fat jokes to last me a lifetime.

At my first practice I wanted to fulfill my dream of being a running back but for some reason the coaches never did give me my chance. They stuck me at defensive tackle where I would play the rest of my career.

I continued to grow during my high school days and, unfortunately, it was out and not up. My friends labeled me with the nickname Bevo because they said I bore a striking resemblance to the University of Texas' mascot. Sometimes I wonder if they were really my friends.

I got my first taste of varsity football action my junior year in 1975. I stood 5-11 and weighed a mere 262 pounds. Until this time Colorado City had not been known as a football power; in fact, during the previous two years, they had a combined record of 3-17.

But under the direction of second-year coach Mike Farda who would later go on to lead the Wolves to two district championships in four years, Colorado City football gained respectability in '75 finishing with a 5-5 record.

Thanks to Greg, you already know I blew a district championship my senior because I missed a "long" 22-yard field goal in the famous "Snow Bowl." Tales have it that they still haven't found the ball.

But let me tell you about the ball that didn't get away. It occurred during my junior year when we played the Ballinger Bearcats, ranked number two in the state at the time. The Wolves pulled off the upset of the year by defeating the Bearcats 7-6, and it was ole Bevo's extra point that provided the margin of victory. Now this is really my claim to fame in the world of football.

I just had to toot my horn a little because even sport writers need to have their ego built up a little.

After leaving the Wolves, I traveled to Cisco Junior College to become a Wrangler. There we did a good job of imitating the Houston Oilers by winning only four games in two seasons. About the only bright spots at CJC were, 1) I realized I wanted to make writing sports my career, and 2) winning the annual chili eating contest two consecutive years.

Eastern New Mexico University saw enough potential in me to offer me another scholarship to play defensive tackle and unfortunately I took them up on their offer.

At Eastern, we too caught "Oiler Fever" and won only seven games in two seasons. The good part about this venture was that I received my journalism degree.

After leaving New Mexico I returned to my roots to work for the Colorado City Record for one year before the Herald gave me my chance at the big time. The people here are great and I am glad to stay in "football country."

Well there you have the life of Steven Belvin in a nutshell and thank you for taking the time to share it with me. Now let's hope that computers don't give me as much problems as kicking field goals.

Nebraska remains number one

By The Associated Press
Powerful Nebraska has come within one vote of regaining the stature it held earlier this season — the unanimous choice as the No. 1 college football team, in the weekly Associated Press Top Twenty rankings.

One vote in this week's poll went to runner-up Texas, but the Longhorns still lost ground after polling two first place votes last week.

The unbeaten, 11-0, Cornhuskers of Nebraska, coming off a 67-13 rout of Kansas, received 59 of 60 first-place votes and 1,199 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters in the weekly poll.

Texas, which rallied from a 14-3 halftime deficit to defeat Texas Christian 20-14, received 1,137 points.

Nebraska, which has been No. 1 in every poll this season and twice was a unanimous choice, led Texas 58-2 in first-place votes and 1,198-1,140 in points a week ago.

This is the ninth consecutive week that Texas has been No. 2.

Auburn, earning the right to represent the Southeastern Conference in the Sugar Bowl by beating Georgia 13-7, remained third with 1,072 points. Georgia slipped from fourth to seventh.

Illinois, going to the Rose Bowl for the first time in 20 years following a 49-21 rout of Indiana, moved from fifth to fourth place with 990 points, and Miami of Florida, which completed a 10-1 regular season by slipping past Florida State 17-16 and will meet Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, jumped from sixth to fifth with 985 points.

Southern Methodist, a 33-7 winner over Texas Tech, rose from seventh to sixth with 882 points, followed by Georgia with 754.

Michigan and Brigham Young traded places. See AP poll page 2-B

The Top Twenty teams in the Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, season records total points based on 28-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 and last week's ranking:

Dickerson leads Rams past Falcons 36-13

ATLANTA (AP) — Eric Dickerson's first appointment with the Atlanta Falcons this year ended in disappointment, but the Los Angeles Rams rookie vowed things would be different next time.

The next time was the National Football League's single-night television contest and Dickerson set two Monday-season club records. He raced for two touchdowns and ripped off 146 yards in 21 carries to pace the Rams to a 36-13 victory over the Falcons.

The game was played in a steady rain before just 31,203 fans. There were 28,253 no-shows.

Dickerson scored on runs of one and seven yards and increased his league-leading rushing total to 1,369 yards for the year. The yardage total and 19 touchdowns shattered Los Angeles single-season records.

Meanwhile, Rams' quarterback Vince Ferragamo, who sustained a cut right hand when he smashed it on a Falcon helmet during the second quarter and needed "a few" stitches after the game, threw touchdown passes of 61 yards to Preston Dennard and nine yards to George Farmer. The Rams ran their record to 7-4 to gain a share of the NFC West lead with the San Francisco 49ers.

Dennard's TD reception gave the Rams a 7-3 lead in the first quarter. Dickerson then scored his first TD in the second quarter to give Los Angeles a 14-6 halftime lead as the Falcons managed only field goals of 31 and 23 yards by Mick Luckhurst. Atlanta's only touchdown was a fourth-period run of one yard by Gerald Riggs.

The Rams, who had 442 yards total offense to only 209 for the Falcons, broke it open in the third quarter on Dickerson's seven-yard scoring run and Ferragamo's TD pass to Farmer. Chuck Nelson added a 27-yard field goal and Barry Redden had a 40-yard scoring run for the winners in the final quarter.

"Our offensive line dominated them, and I wouldn't say I was surprised. I can run in rain or snow, it makes no difference," said Dickerson, the Rams' No. 1 draft choice from Southern Methodist.

He bettered the old Rams' record of 1,238 rushing yards set in 1977 by Lawrence McCutcheon, and his 19 touchdowns shattered the mark of 17 shared by Elroy Hirsch and Wendell Tyler.

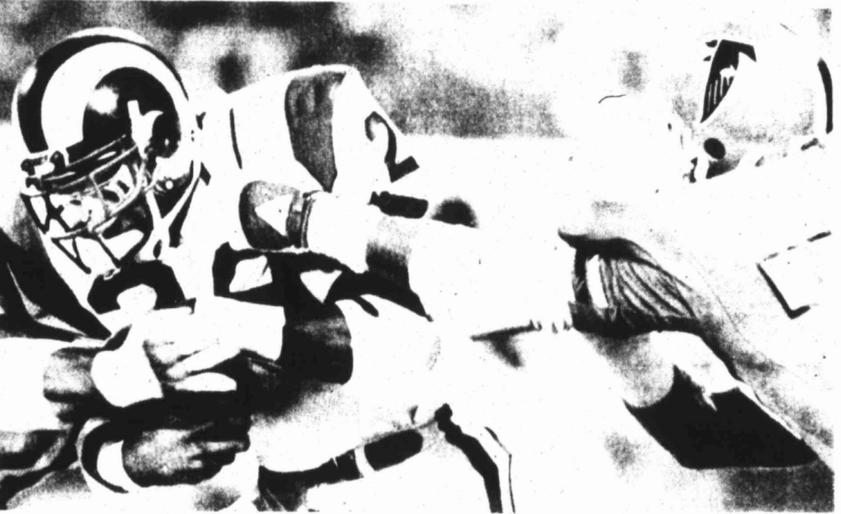

Ferragamo completed 15 of 22 passes for 173 yards while Atlanta's Steve Bartkowski managed to hit on only 14 of 30 for 137 yards. The Falcons' William Andrews managed 52 yards in 14 carries before injuring his shoulder late in the second half and sitting out the rest of the game. He now has 1,007 yards for the season to rank second behind Dickerson.

"I'll take my share of the blame tonight," said Bartkowski, who was the NFL's top-ranked quarterback entering the contest. "I really didn't play well."

Atlanta Coach Dan Henning, whose team fell to 4-7 and last in the NFC West, felt "there wasn't a turning point" in the game.

"You've got to stop people from running before you can win. That's two weeks in a row we haven't been able to stop people," he said, referring to a 27-10 loss to New Orleans.

"Two weeks ago we had the chance to get back into the race. It is obvious we are not good enough to do that right now," said Henning.

Bluebonnet picture clearer

DALLAS (AP) — It will be Baylor and Oklahoma State in the Bluebonnet Bowl and, barring a Texas collapse, Southern Methodist and Alabama in the Sun Bowl, and likely Georgia in the Cotton Bowl.

John Folmer, chairman of the Sun Bowl, said both SMU and Alabama had agreed to accept invitations Saturday to the Christmas Eve classic.

Of course, SMU could still wind up in the Cotton Bowl if the Mustangs defeat Arkansas and Houston and Texas loses to Baylor and Texas A&M in the final two weeks of the season.

Ted Nance, executive director of the Houston-based Bluebonnet Bowl, told The Associated Press that "Baylor has the great offense and Oklahoma State has the great defense, and both teams draw well in this area. It's a good matchup for our bowl. We're looking for a sellout."

Nance said 8,500 tickets will be sent to each school to sell.

The game is on Dec. 31.

The Cowboys are 6-4 and Baylor 7-2-1. The only common opponent was Texas A&M which Baylor tied and Oklahoma State beat by 19 points.

Baylor was heavily courted by the Independence Bowl and the Hall of Fame Bowl.

"It was like recruiting day all over again," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff.

Tom Starr, executive director of the Sun Bowl, said SMU and Alabama have agreed to come to the Sun Bowl "because they're impressed with the fact that the Sun Bowl will be nationally televised (CBS)."

The Cotton Bowl, losing out in a head-to-head battle with the Sugar Bowl for the Big Ten runner-up, will issue an official invitation to idle Georgia at 6 p.m. Saturday, sources said.

Georgia has a loss and a tie after a narrow defeat last Saturday to Sugar Bowl-bound Auburn.

Texas A&M still hoped for a late invitation from the Independence Bowl but apparently Air Force and either Mississippi or Virginia Tech will play in that Dec. 10 game.

SMU was furious it got passed over.

"How can you deny us?" asked Coach Bobby Collins. "Now I'm ready to fight for a playoff system."

Collins said he would still love a rematch with Texas in the Cotton Bowl.

"I'd welcome the opportunity to play Texas again," Collins said. "That would be the best game in town. Why not?"

RangeAnns nip HC in overtime

The third time was the charm for the Ranger RangeAnns last night in Ranger as they nipped the Queens 82-77 in overtime.

Howard had defeated the RangeAnns two previous times this season but this night belonged to Ranger as they outscored Howard 6-1 in the overtime period.

The loss offset a fine shooting performance by Howard wing Debbie Hall who hit 7 of 14 shots from the field and sunk 9 of 12 free throws to pace all scorers with 23 points.

The Queens trailed for the first 10 minutes of the contest before finally taking the lead. They stretched their lead to seven points before Ranger rallied to tie the contest at 35-35 at the half.

In the second period Howard pulled ahead again stretching their lead to as much as nine points before Ranger made surge running a man to man press. "It was a very physical game," said Queens coach Don Stevens. "We made far too many turnovers, (20) and it cost us," stated Stevens.

With the score tied at 76 all at the end of regulation play the Queens fell upon hard times in the extra period as they could not manage a single bucket.

"We panicked," explained Stevens. "We missed some layups and had three critical turnovers," he said.

MARVIN'S BACK — Marvin Hagler proudly display his championship belt as he arrives at Boston's Logan International Airport Monday. The champ says he intends to put his title on the line in his near future.

Hagler to put world title on line

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Marvelous Marvin Hagler of Brockton, Mass., will defend his undisputed world middleweight boxing championship against Argentina's Juan Domingo Roldan Feb. 25, Juan Carlos Lectoure, a spokesman for Roldan, said Monday.

Lectoure spoke to newsmen upon his arrival with Roldan from Las Vegas, Nev., where the Argentine knocked out American Frank Fletcher last Thursday night to earn his shot at the crown.

Later that night, Hagler defended his title by gaining a unanimous 15-round decision over Panama's Roberto Duran.

Lectoure said the Hagler-Roldan fight could take place in New York or South Africa. He said Roldan's purse would be "very good" and that Hagler's purse has yet to be determined.

Roldan predicted to newsmen that he would knock Hagler out.

"He (Hagler) knows a lot about boxing," said Roldan, "but I'm going to use the same tactic I used against Fletcher. I think I'm stronger and faster than him (Hagler)."

Judge bars FmHA foreclosures without informing of rights

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration may not foreclose on borrowers in 44 states without first informing them of their right to seek a loan deferral and offering them a hearing, a federal judge ruled Monday.

U.S. District Judge Bruce Van Sickle said a temporary nationwide injunction was in place against the FmHA until he could hear arguments on a permanent injunction, and on the merits of a lawsuit against the federal agency.

Van Sickle last month granted national class action status to a lawsuit by nine North Dakota farmers against FmHA. However, agency lawyers argued that the order did not include a nationwide injunction.

"We clearly now do have the preliminary injunction and it is in effect nationwide," said Sarah Vogel, an attorney for the farmers. "Secretary Block and Mr. (Charles) Shumman, the FmHA director, have to inform their subordinates all around the country."

Farmers in other states have the same protection Van Sickle granted North Dakota borrowers when he issued a statewide injunction in May, Ms. Vogel said. FmHA "can't liquidate and they can't freeze their family living and cash farm operating expenses," she said.

FmHA must give borrowers written notice of the reason for the foreclosure, factors that may make them eligible for loan deferral and their right to a hearing, Van Sickle wrote.

FmHA has not proceeded with any foreclosures in North Dakota under those guidelines.

"A big burden is off my shoulders because I don't have to worry about farmers going down the tubes between now and January when the permanent injunction will be argued," Ms. Vogel said.

Ms. Vogel said an FmHA document shows that foreclosure action is pending against about 1,800 farmers in the 44 states. She said the same document indicates that 77,000 FmHA borrowers, or 28 percent nationwide, were delinquent on their loans as of Sept. 30.

The injunction does not affect farmers in Florida, Minnesota, Alabama, Kansas, Georgia or Mississippi because statewide class action status has been requested or already granted in those states.

The North Dakota farmers argue that FmHA should enforce a 1978 law, which they contend requires Agriculture Secretary John Block to defer repayment of loans if a borrower is in financial trouble through no fault of his own.

"I find that the rationale contained in the order dated May 5, 1983, concerning the appropriateness of granting a statewide preliminary injunction is equally applicable to the present national class," Van Sickle said in a five-page written opinion.

Saunders Is Complete Plumbing Headquarters

Since 1946 Saunders has served West Texas and Eastern New Mexico with quality plumbing and water well supplies.

Saunders' new warehouse and showroom at 3200 East I-20 — one of the city's finest business facilities — houses the largest inventory in this area of commercial and residential plumbing items. These include Kohler, Universal-Runde and Kilgore fixtures, A O Smith commercial and residential water heaters, Delta faucets, Cuno water filters, In-sink-erator garbage disposers/trash compactors/hot water dispensers, Grundfos & Myers pumps, Ritz ceiling fans, Aristokraft kitchen cabinets and many more.

The highlight of the new facility is the 2,000 sq. ft. showroom featuring the newest in bath and kitchen fixtures. Here customers can view working models of the famous leisure products, Kohler's "Environment" and "Habitat." Steam, sun, rain and Chinook winds — enjoy any or all of them in a totally self-sufficient enclosure while relaxing to your favorite music. For the bath, there are tubs, showers, faucets, lavatories, vanities, commodes, bidets and accessories. For the kitchen they have cabinets, sinks, dishwashers, compactors and disposers. Recreation and therapy fixtures include spas, whirlpools, bar sinks, and back-swingers. Water supplies include pumps, softeners, filters, purifiers and heaters.

Saunders offers a complete kitchen and bath planning service. Simply bring in your dimensions or plans and the trained staff will be happy to design your kitchen or bath and prepare an estimate, all at no cost to you.

The staff includes Jane Blalack, showroom manager, and Mary Kay McLaughlin, both of whom are certified showroom consultants. Bill Blalack is a certified kitchen design specialist and Skipper Boyd is warehouse manager.

The warehouse is open from 8 to 5 weekdays and 9 to 1 Saturdays. The showroom is open from 9 to 4 weekdays and 9 to 1 Saturdays.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1983

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Sidestep any arguments and disagreements during the daytime and use more care on the highway against any accidental conditions. You will be able to handle meetings easily.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be most careful in handling private affairs during the daytime. At night, concentrate on methods for expanding.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be careful not to quarrel with a friend, otherwise it may result in serious trouble. Being sure of yourself is important.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) If you take any risks during the day, you could jeopardize your worldly status. Tonight is fine for discussions.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You will be giving an opponent the upper hand if you permit your feelings to get hurt. Be objective.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Pride could deter your progress today. Bend a little for good results. A loved one needs your attention tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't be forceful with others, but use tact and safeguard your reputation. Spend some time improving your appearance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure you keep that promise made since trying to squirm out of it could get you in big trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Steer clear of that overly fussy pal and concentrate on increasing your assets and income. Be frugal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't argue with one in the business world and then you find that career affairs improve.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A new contact can prove aggravating, so sidle away as quickly as you can. Seek out those who are agreeable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Postpone business affairs that require much wrangling and handle those that are pleasant early in the day.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A partner may be in a fighting mood and want to scrap with you, but avoid him and be happy in the company of good friends.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those charming young persons who is able to understand and handle problematical affairs in a most intelligent way. Teach early to be more harmonious with others and not bullish or forceful.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Being gorgeous is tough job

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Being gorgeous isn't easy.

Just ask the members of a club where the lovely can go to bemoan the problems they suffer from being too good-looking.

"Attractive people are treated markedly differently because of their looks, but nobody likes to talk about it, and it is extremely important to talk about it," said Jerry Lipkin, 41, who dropped a law career two years ago to organize workshops and social events for singles and couples he calls The Frog Prince Conspiracy.

Attractive people often feel insecure about their appearance and self-worth, Lipkin said, and the good-looking may find they have to work twice as hard as their plain competition to get to the top.

"There is a tremendous tendency for people to equate being good-looking with not being overly bright," said the club's co-founder, Bliss Kalet, 26.

Ms. Kalet was a stockbroker before opening a consulting firm for women who want to get ahead in their jobs.

Lipkin and Kalet formed their group a few months ago and plan to expand from the current dinner meetings to one-day workshops at $100 a person. The cost for a dinner meeting is $8 plus food and drink.

Criteria for joining the group is subjective. Lipkin said he can't define good-looking, but Ms. Kalet recalls a meeting where some of the diners clearly didn't belong.

"There were a couple of people who came who I didn't think were that attractive," she said. "But they decided to leave before things got under way."

Both Ms. Kalet and Lipkin say the problems they heard didn't surprise them.

"Women told us they are tired of being thought of as aloof and cold, just because they are attractive," Ms. Kalet said. "A number of women told us that in high school they were lonely, they didn't have dates. Men said women often assume that because they are handsome, they've had things too easy in relationships and therefore wouldn't be good candidates for involvement."

She was a homely child, Ms. Kalet said, and "it's fun knowing that I'm attractive now."

Ms. Kalet said they rejected forming a group for the ugly, calling the idea "depressing. I like to be positive and upbeat. I'd rather work with people who have lots of potential."

"What we're trying to do with this new group is to get people to fully accept the blessing of being attractive," Lipkin said. "Ultimately, it is a blessing, and it shouldn't be resisted. Somehow, society puts a stigma on people who are good-looking, bright and successful."

"What's wrong with having it all?"

GOOD LOOKIN' — Jerry Lipkin and Bliss Kalet know that being gorgeous isn't easy, so they founded a club where the lithe and lovely can go to bemoan the problems they suffer from being too good looking.
