Action/Reaction: Antler points

Q. Do deer ever lose their antlers?

A. Deer lose their antlers once a year, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologist Mike Reagan. The antlers, which are made of bony material covered by a velvety substance, start growing each year in April and continue through September, when the antlers are at their peak. At that point, the velvety covering is rubbed off and the antlers harden. At the end of the breeding season, January through March, the antlers separate at their base in the skull and fall off.

Train derails near Shreveport

BLANCHARD, La. (AP) — Crews worked into the morning today to right freight cars derailed when a train got onto the wrong siding and slammed into a parked flatcar — and perhaps to find a missing track maintenance worker.

"We're trying to get the cars up to make sure he's not (under them). We'd rather he not be," said Caddo Parish Deputy Charles Scholz.

The worker, whose name was not released, was the only man unaccounted for after the Kansas City Southern freight train derailed and caught fire Wednesday afternoon, injuring six men, one seriously.

Scholz said the crews were working from the rear of the train because the cars that caught fire Wednesday were still too hot to approach, although the blaze that had produced a column of smoke visible for miles was mostly out.

Fire crews were standing by to make sure the flames didn't take over again, he said.

"The fires are out for the most part. They'll flare up a little bit and then they'll put them back out. We'll be out there through the night making sure the fires don't flare up again," he said.

Tommy Hicks, 47, of Karnack, Texas, had several broken bones and remained in serious condition in the intensive care unit at Willis-Knighton Hospital, nursing supervisor Billy Carter said today.

The other five men injured in the 3 p.m. crash were released from the hospital Wednesday evening, Scholz said.

They included four identified by A.D. Karr, a Kansas City Southern official in nearby Shreveport, as the train's crew members. Hicks and the sixth man apparently worked at the Haughton Timber Co. yard where the derailment occurred.

"The derailment occurred at a little pulpwood yard," Karr said. "The engines went down the track going into the woodyard and that is what caused the derailment. But we don't know what caused the engines to go down that track."

He said a track maintenance crew had been working on the 10-mile stretch near the yard, but he did not know if the accident was related to that work.

The yard is in a sparsely populated, remote area west of Shreveport near the Texas border, less than an hour's drive from the spot where a passenger train derailed last weekend near Marshall, Texas, killing four.

"The engines just got into the first part of the track when they piled

Grain aid bill passes committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation requiring the government to sell 83 million bushels of feed corn at bargain prices to drought-stricken livestock growers has been approved by a Senate-House conference committee.

The committee agreed to the provision as part of a dairy and tobacco price support bill, while deciding that farmers and ranchers and not the government should pay the cost of transporting the corn from storage facilities.

Several conferees complained that this would ignore the needs of livestock growers in states where little or no corn is stored and where such transportation costs would thus be much higher.

"They are being directly discriminated against," said Rep. Lindsay Thomas, D-Ga.

However, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said the drought aid provision had originally passed the Senate with the understanding that the federal government would not pay for transporting the corn.

"I believe the bill will be in trouble if we would add back in transportation charges," said Helms.

The drought aid provision had been tacked on the dairy support bill in the Senate by Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, which has been particularly hard hit by the drought. There was no similar provision in the dairy measure approved by the House.

The conference committee met to iron out differences between the two versions of the bill, and the committee's recommendations must again be voted on in both chambers.

The version approved by the committee would require Agriculture Secretary John R. Block to sell the three lowest grades of government-held corn at 75 percent of the government price floor for corn.

That price varies from county to county, but in Lubbock County, Texas, for example, ranchers could buy corn at about $2.04 per bushel compared with a market price of about $3.15, according to Bentsen's office.

Those eligible to buy the corn would be livestock growers in counties declared disaster areas by the Agriculture Department because of the drought. The corn would be made available to assist in maintaining breeding herds of livestock and poultry, including their offspring.

However, the conferees rejected language calling on the government to pay the cost of transporting the grain to centrally located areas, where it would have been more readily available.

Block has said that grain is stored in 27 states, but that a majority of it is located in Texas, Iowa and Minnesota.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the conference committee, said the drought aid would be a big help to Texas ranchers at least.

"This hopefully will take care of the immediate emergency" in Texas, he said in an interview.

About 21 million bushels of the corn are stored in the Texas Panhandle, but Agriculture Department officials have contended that it was not fair to help only one state and that a nationwide program would be too costly.

Smokeout

CIGARETTE? NO THANKS — Before she decided to join the Great American Smokeout, Cecelia McKenzie offered a cigarette to Terry Dobson, who declined, as shown in the photo above. Dobson quit smoking in 1979. He and several others offered Mrs. McKenzie encouragement as she tried to cut back on cigarettes today.

TAKING COMFORT

By CAROL BALDWIN Staff Writer

Cecelia McKenzie woke up this morning and reached for a pack of cigarettes. But before she could light one, she remembered today is the Great American Smokeout.

On a normal morning, "I don't turn on the coffee or wake up the kids before I smoke a cigarette," she said. "I don't have another one until about one or two hours later. Then I'll smoke two or three in a row to wake me up with my coffee."

Mrs. McKenzie and millions of other smokers are cutting down or cutting out cigarettes for 24 hours in recognition of the Great American Smokeout. The event was started seven years ago and is sponsored nationwide by the American Cancer Society. The idea behind the day is that if smokers can give up cigarettes for 24 hours, they may be able to quit the habit for good.

Today will be "a really miserable, frustrating day where all I think about will be cigarettes," Mrs. McKenzie said this morning as she glanced at her empty ashtray sitting on her desk at work. "I'll try to stay very busy."

She began smoking 13 years ago when she was in college at Incarnate Word in San Antonio.

"I had a real demanding schedule. I was working from 11 at night to 7 in the morning as a waitress. I was going to school during the day, worked 18 hours on campus in work study programs and participated in plays in the evening."

"I thought smoking would help keep me awake because it gave me something to do with my hands. And my boyfriend at the time smoked. And it was cool, cool, cool."

Soon, she was smoking a pack a day.

"I wasn't a chain smoker, and I

Ex-smoker recalls habit up in smoke

As Cecelia McKenzie and millions of others try to give up smoking for the Great American Smokeout, people who have made the transition from smoker to nonsmoker will be on hand to offer encouragement and a few tips.

One of Mrs. McKenzie's friends, Terry Dobson, remembers the time and day he quit smoking. He had been smoking for 17 years and suddenly decided to give it up.

"It was 10 a.m., April 11, 1979. I remember it well," he said.

"It wasn't a long, thought-out process. I was at work. I lit up the last cigarette in a package that had been fresh at 8 a.m. that morning. I turned to the person sitting next to me and said 'This is going to be a four-pack day.' There was something about what I was saying that struck me as being ridiculous. I just decided to see how long I could go without smoking a cigarette. I never smoked again."

He remembers "The first few days were difficult, but after that it was never a problem. I was never tempted to start smoking again."

Dobson isn't sure why he started smoking.

"I was in the Air Force. I was learning Morse code. During a break, someone offered me a cigarette, and I took it. I began with a few cigarettes a day, then a pack a day, then three to four packs a day."

Although Dobson stopped smoking cold turkey, he says not everyone should try to stop that way.

"Don't set a goal that's too difficult to keep. Don't say 'This is definitely my last cigarette.' Say 'I'm going to try.'"

"That way you're not disappointed if you decide to smoke a cigarette."

Coahoma battles budget

COAHOMA — City aldermen will administer the oath of office tonight to appointee Roy Lee Metcalf before wading into a messy sewage problem that threatens to further strain the city's overdrawn budget.

Metcalf will take the council seat vacated by present Mayor Jim Rackley. Rackley replaced former Mayor Johnny Justiss when Justiss resigned earlier in the year.

Aldermen will discuss a letter from the Texas Department of Water Resources in reference to sewage treatment facilities. At the council's last meeting, aldermen agreed to approve a plan from the city's water director to prevent runoff water from a private irrigation pump from entering the water supply.

The state told the council two weeks ago that unless they notified the department by Nov. 7 of corrective action underway, the city would be fined $1,000 a day for violations of the Texas Water Code.

The city of Coahoma already is suffering financial difficulties, with a general fund that is a few thou-

Decontrol bill headed for Senate

Harte-Hanks Washington Bureau WASHINGTON — A compromise bill for natural gas decontrol could reach the Senate floor by late Thursday or Friday, according to a spokesman for independent producers of oil and gas.

"They're very hopeful" of reaching a compromise, said Bill Anderson, vice president for political and legislative relations of the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Anderson said negotiations on the compromise almost broke down in a long meeting Wednesday between senators with conflicting views about how gas production prices should be treated by Congress.

But he said "an overwhelming majority" of those senators felt they had come close enough to a compromise to continue the discussions.

A bill that would decontrol gas prices by 1987 failed late Tuesday on the Senate floor by a 67 to 28 vote, and a bill to "recontrol" or roll back gas prices to 1982 levels failed by an even larger margin, 71 to 26.

Included in the negotiations were Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee Chairman James A. McClure, R-Idaho, and Sens. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., and Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. McClure sponsored the committee's decontrol bill that failed Tuesday on the floor, Kassebaum sponsored the recontrol bill and Metzenbaum has been a long-time foe of decontrol.

"I have a suspicion that it will be something with more good in it than bad," said Anderson, who monitors the negotiation process for the independent oil and gas industry.

"I do know that as far as the McClure side, they're in this (so that) what it leads to is at some date certain all natural gas will be decontrolled," said Anderson.

Cowper Clinic is not closing

Rumors that the Cowper Clinic is closing are "incorrect and untrue," said Dr. Roscoe Cowper, who owns and operates the clinic.

Cowper said he has no intentions of closing the clinic, where he now is the only doctor practicing medicine.

The clinic is located at 1500 Gregg.

City Hall closes next week

The Big Spring City Hall will be closed Nov. 24 and Nov. 25 for the Thanksgiving holidays.

There will be no trash pick-up on these two days, but police, fire and water services will operate as usual.

Two arrested for smoking

GAINESVILLE (AP) — Two Oklahoma men returning home from Dallas on Interstate 35 were somewhat surprised when their car was pulled over by police and they were accused of smoking.

Tom West and T.J. Clymer, from Davis, Okla., then volunteered to be "arrested" and were taken to the town square in a mule-drawn jail wagon. They threw their cigarettes in the coffins lining one side of the square.

Mayor Harry Roark then "adopted" them under the Adopt-a-Smoker campaign, one phase of today's Great American Smoke-Out sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

War games test stress

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Army is playing video war games, not to entertain the troops but to measure the effects of stress on performance.

The Army calls the test its "Star Wars game," which was designed and developed in Kansas City under a contract with the non-profit Midwest Research Institute, a top research facility.

"Using a game format keeps people interested and may help us get measurements that we haven't been able to get in the past," said Hegge, who, until recently, was chief of the Army's Department of Military Medical Psychophysiology, which monitored and funded the game.

As a person plays, researchers measure the effects of stress on efficiency and speed, memory, information processing, decision making, risk taking and psychomotor skills.

The game — called Strategic and Tactical Assessment Record or STAR by the institute — is played on a video display terminal. Each contest is considered a military mission in which the goal is to seek out enemy warships and destroy them in the most energy efficient way in the time allotted.

The "battlefield" is shown as a grid pattern, and a player must do battle in one quadrant before moving on. Information is provided on the screen about enemy location, ammunition and fuel supplies as players carry out a mission timed by a digital clock in the corner of the screen.

Players must keep track of battle positions and the other data while plotting strategy. Mathematical calculations are involved in determining the most direct way to travel between quadrants.

Researchers plan to incorporate their findings into Army teaching curriculums, training exercises and field manuals, Hegge said.

"What it becomes is basic information of use to people who must make military decisions," he said.

Each game can be varied. Charles Graham, MRI's principal investigator on the STAR project, said stress was introduced into a mission by cutting down on the time allowed for the mission or by reducing the amount of fuel and other resources available to the player.

The project's co-principal investigator, Harvey Cohen, said MRI did not vary physical conditions such as room temperature or study the effects of sleep loss, both of which have been found to cause added stress.

Unlike arcade video games which rely on random choices, each move in STAR is evaluated by researchers against predetermined optimal alternatives.

If a player is skillful, each game becomes more challenging — and more stressful. Hegge said a computer terminal was used for the game, because computers are now a mainstay in battle strategy and tactics.

In designing STAR, Graham said the MRI research team recognized that some people can perform well under the stress that accompanies complicated tasks, and some can't.

The need to respond quickly to a variety of tasks under stressful conditions is becoming more and more apparent during battles, Hegge said.

He said the Army planned to administer STAR and other tests in a heat chamber so "they (the Army) will know how people can perform in a field setting where heat and humidity are present."

At other times, a soldier might be asked to play STAR continuously for a long period of time to evaluate the effects of sleep deprivation.

Aldermen also will discuss a letter from the Howard County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1 concerning the repair of the 6-inch water line near the connection to the Big Spring water system.

Aldermen will discuss changing the allocations on the rate of pay taken out of the police department

In other action, the council will discuss Texas Municipal League insurance, the city's computer program and billing supplies, the Thanksgiving holidays and a possible agreement with 3-M Inc. on the city's copier.

never have been. I have smoked up to five cigarettes an hour, and I thought I was going to die."

Today, she smokes a pack to a pack and one half a day but battles the urge to smoke more than that self-imposed limit.

"I went through a period where I only smoked one an hour. I spent the whole hour thinking about smoking and waiting for the hour to go up in smoke."

She also "went through a period of smoking only after eating. That can be very fattening because you have to eat something so you can have a cigarette."

Now, "I smoke whenever I want a cigarette. I've gone long stretches without thinking about it or feeling like I need a cigarette."

Today is Mrs. McKenzie's second try at the Great American Smokeout. She participated last year but "of course, I didn't make it. I had great encouragement from friends at work. I cut down to one-tenth of what I usually smoke.

I thought that was good."

Although she hasn't stopped, she agrees "smoking is bad for me. It is a smelly, nasty, horrible habit — but I love it. I really enjoy a cigarette. There are so many good reasons to give up cigarettes and so few reasons to keep smoking."

Cecelia is one of the directors for the Spring City Theatre and finds it easier to smoke during rehearsals.

"When I'm not thinking about it, I smoke a lot."

She does have a defense for cigarettes. "It's sad that cigarettes have such a bad reputation. They make a great stage and screen prop. There are so many neat things you can do with a cigarette."

She believes "I'd feel better and I think I'd live longer" if she could quit. "The thought of lung cancer doesn't scare me now, but I'd hate to think I murdered someone else by smoking in their presence."

Her husband, Robb, "quit smoking cold turkey about two or three years ago. His father had quit and encouraged him to do so." Quitting cold turkey "made Robb a little nervous but it didn't last very long. He took up the pipe to have something to do with his hands."

Her three children, Emily, Ian and Michael, would like to see their mother give up the cigarettes. Ian "is the biggest encourager of not smoking. He says 'smoke only one at the office' to me all the time."

"They don't understand the habit and it's hard to explain it to them. When I expect them to break a habit, like sucking their thumb, I expect it immediately."

Mrs. McKenzie thinks about quitting cigarettes on days other than the Great American Smokeout.

"I've read every book on 'how to stop smoking.' I've seen photos of lungs mutilated from too much smoking. I've heard lectures. I don't know what it will take to make me stop it."

up," said Karr.

He said all five engines caught fire from diesel fuel spilled onto the ground. "I think those tanks carry about 23-hundred gallons apiece," he said.

In addition, some of the drums of antifreeze and cleaning compounds on piggyback cars behind the engines also caught fire, he said.

An evacuation of a one-mile area around the site was ordered but was later called off, state police said.

The flatcars were being loaded with pulpwood by employees of the Houghton Timber Co., said Randall Taylor, whose mobile home is about 200 yards from the yard where the accident happened.

"Two boys was up on the wood car, and it threw them off. One of them, it threw wood all over him. The other one jumped just a few seconds before it hit. He was in pretty good shape," said Taylor.

The man hit by the wood had several broken bones and was the worst injured in the accident, said Taylor, who said he helped rescue workers at the scene.

Sharon Strawn of Willis-Knighton identified the others as Joe White, 42, of Karnack; Gregory Ford, 24, of Garland, Texas, and Prince Selva, 35, Jerry McHenry, 25, and Robert Thomas, 30 all of Greenville, Texas.

Karr said Selva was the engineer, Thomas the conductor, and Ford and McHenry were brakemen.

Initial reports said that a tank car filled with liquified petroleum gas was burning, but Karr and Police Sgt. Gary Presswood said later that it was diesel fuel from the engines.

Another tip Dobson found helpful is to approach the problem from a financial point of view.

"Stop and figure out how much you spend on cigarettes in a year's time." People who smoke up to four packs a day may be surprised by the cost of their habit, he said.

Now that he has been off cigarettes since 1979, he has noticed differences in himself.

"I feel better — both psychologically and physically. I feel good knowing that I could do it."

He also notices "I don't cough when I get up in the morning. I don't get nearly as many headaches as before. I don't wheeze when I breathe anymore. "And I know my clothes smell better," he said.

Family awarded $2.6 million

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A Mexican family has had a taste of American justice, and likes it just fine.

A federal jury awarded $2.6 million Wednesday to Francisco Soto Aguilar and his family, all of Juarez, Mexico, for injuries they suffered in a collision between the family's four-wheel drive vehicle and a delivery truck in 1981.

"They are very pleased with the American system of justice," said Richard Grand, a lawyer representing the Aguilars.

The judgment was assessed against Controlled Delivery Services Inc., owner of the truck that collided with the Mexican family's vehicle, and against Clinton L. Hunter, the truck's driver.

Train derails in N.M. canyon; 'looks like hell'

SCHOLLE, N.M. (AP) — Fifty-six cars of a Santa Fe Railway freight train derailed in a narrow canyon in the Manzano Mountains early today, overturning cars and sending them ablaze.

"It looks like hell," said Mountainair Fire Chief Elliott Ferrer. "It's shocking. Flames were shooting probably 100 to 200 feet high. It was quite a sight at 2 o'clock in the morning. The sky was aglow red in the west when we left town this morning."

Santa Fe Railway spokeswoman Susan Metcalf in Chicago said no one was injured when the westbound train jumped the tracks, which runs along the canyon wall. Ferrer said many of the railroad cars tumbled 50 to 60 feet to the bottom of the gorge.

Several fires erupted along the derailed train, including one tank car carrying the combustible chemical naphtha, but Ms. Metcalf said the fires posed no danger.

"The car was off the track and headed down the canyon," Ferrer said of the tank car. "The upper end had ruptured so it really did everybody a service by burning itself out."

"If you could put it out, then you've got the problem of what to do with the chemical."

He said railroad officials were letting the fires burn themselves out because firefighting equipment couldn't reach the blazes.

"We just couldn't get near it," the fire chief said. "The train derailed between the closest access and the fire. There's not enough water in the country to do any good anyway."

Ferrer said two units of his fire department dashed to the scene about 20 miles west of Mountainair after the derailment was reported about 2 a.m. near the tiny ranching community of Scholle.

He said derailed train cars were piled across the dirt road leading into the canyon.

"The fire can't go anywhere," he said. "There's a sheer rock wall on one side and a rock canyon on the other side."

Ms. Metcalf said the burning train had blocked Santa Fe's main transcontinental line and eight other trains had been rerouted through El Paso, Texas, by 8:30 a.m. MST.

Sunny skies expected

Texas awoke today to high cloudiness over the northwestern two-thirds of its skies, but South and Southeast exas had clear skies with sunny warmth expected to prevail statewide later.

Early morning temperatures were reported in the 40s and 50s across the state, except for the coastal areas, where readings dipped no lower than the 60s.

Forecasters said the state would have mostly sunny skies today, but winds were expected to be gusty in the western and central regions of Texas.

Elsewhere in the U.S., rain lingered over New England today as snow dusted areas in the upper Ohio Valley and the lower Great Lakes region.

Rain also dampened areas from north-central California and the Pacific Northwest to Utah, western Wyoming and western Montana, turning to snow in the higher elevations.

Another foot of snow was predicted for the Colorado Rockies by Friday afternoon, and mountain travelers should be prepared for the worst, the Colorado State Patrol said.

The forecast for the second mountain storm since Sunday prompted the National Weather Service to issue a winter storm watch for the Rockies and the Gunnison Valley which was to remain in effect through Friday afternoon.

Colorado state health officials hoped that high, strong winds today — from the same Pacific storm system — would sweep away the dense polluted air that had blanketed the metropolitan Denver area since late Tuesday.

Elsewhere sunny skies prevailed from the desert Southwest through the middle Mississippi Valley to the southern Atlantic Coast. Temperatures in the 60s held from New Mexico and Arizona to Florida.

10,000 invited to party

FRANKFORT — When Kentucky Gov. John Y. Brown Jr and his wife Phyllis George Brown, throw a party, they don't scrimp on the guest list.

JOHN Y. BROWN

The reception Wednesday at the Governor's Mansion, which featured punch in crystal bowls and hot cider in silver servers, was for state employees to get together with their boss.

Of the 10,000 people invited, "we thought maybe half that many would show up," said Pat Capito, director of the mansion.

Mrs. Trudeau files for divorce

TORONTO — It comes as little surprise, but Margaret Trudeau has filed for divorce from Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, six years after the couple separated following months of sensational headlines dealing with her jet-setting exploits.

Papers requesting a no-fault divorce were filed in the Supreme Court of Ontario on Wednesday, according to Mrs. Trudeau's lawyer, Michael Levine.

The jet-set lifestyle of the 35-year-old Mrs. Trudeau has made her a favorite of gossip columnists.

The prime minister, a devout Roman Catholic, is not expected to contest the divorce, which could take up to a year to go through, Levine said in an interview Wednesday night.

Mrs. Trudeau, who has dated Fried Kemper, a wealthy Ottawa businessman for several months, is not planning to remarry, the lawyer said.

Trudeau's office said the prime minister would have no comment.

New mayor gets ticket

BOSTON — When Raymond Flynn campaigned for mayor, he vowed to call off meter maids who ticket cars in congested city neighborhoods.

RAYMOND FLYNN

On Wednesday — the day after he won the election — Flynn got a $15 ticket outside the Parkman House on Beacon Street, where he was having lunch with outgoing Mayor Kevin H. White.

Flynn, 44, "had no complaints with the ticket," said press spokesman Frank Costello. He immediately sent an aide to City Hall to pay it.

"It was the quickest ticket paid in Boston history," Costello added. "It was paid before the ticket was registered in the system at City Hall."

LINCOLN — CBS correspondent Marlene Sanders says she has managed to combine a hectic career and a family life by having a supportive husband, good house-hold help and not letting herself feel guilty about working.

CROSBY, Texas (AP) — Investigators digging through the rubble from a house fire that killed an 82-year-old woman discovered $21,000 she had stashed in her purse and in a chest of drawers, authorities said.

Annie B. Gargaro, who had lived in the one-room house for nearly 30 years, died Tuesday night in the fire. Investigators believe the blaze may have started in a rubber propane line.

Earthquake shakes Hawaii

HILO — Windows shattered, ceiling plaster fell and more than 20 houses were rocked off their foundations in a strong, minute-long earthquake that frightened Hawaii Island residents but caused only minor injuries, officials said.

"The damage will run into the millions. We have homes and businesses that were totaled," Harry Kim, administrator of the Hawaii County Civil Defense Agency, said after Wednesday's quake, which struck at 6:13 a.m. (11:13 a.m. EST).

The quake, Hawaii's strongest in eight years, registered 6.7 on the Richter scale of ground motion and was centered on the southwest flank of Mauna Loa volcano, about 70 miles southwest of Hilo, said the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center in Honolulu.

Kim said most damage was minor but that 20 to 35 homes were heavily damaged or destroyed. He said a precise count was unavailable because few residents were insured for earthquake losses.

In Hawaii Volcanoes National Park, a section of the Crater Rim Road at the summit of Kilauea Volcano was swept into the volcano by one of two landslides reported on the island. Neither damaged buildings, but crews worked for hours to clear debris that closed the main highway from the park to Hilo.

In the community of Volcano Village, a few miles from Kilauea's summit, six houses moved 2 to 4 feet off their foundations, said Sybil Spencer, a free-lance reporter who toured the area.

Electricity and telephone service was restored in all but a few small pockets within a few hours, police said.

The quake was Hawaii's strongest since November 1975, when a quake that measured 7.2 on the Richter scale produced an ocean wave which killed two campers.

Arafat's stronghold falls

TRIPOLI — Palestinian rebels today declared victory in their war against Yasser Arafat, but he vowed to fight on as a pocket of his besieged loyalists held out north of Tripoli.

YASSER ARAFAT

Lebanon's state radio reported that Arafat had ordered his troops in northern Lebanon to cease fire, but the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization told reporters today he would continue fighting.

"It is difficult. But we have no choice," Arafat said in a brief news conference at his headquarters in Tripoli. One of his hands was wrapped in a bandage, but he said it was "not a wound."

Arafat and his aides said there were still some loyalist fighters in positions on the southern edge of the Baddawi Palestinian refugee camp, taken by the rebels in fierce hand-to-hand fighting Wednesday. The camp was Arafat's last Middle East stronghold.

Most of today's fighting was in an area called Mankubin, just southwest of Baddawi. Rockets, machineguns and rocket-propelled grenades were being fired by both sides.

"We will win. I keep telling you," Arafat claimed. One of Arafat's spokesmen, Mohammed Shaker, said the Syrian-backed rebels were sweeping the camp to stifle resistance.

The rebels already hold positions on the north, east and southeast, as well as inside nearly all of the camp.

10-year-old boy runs across U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — A 10-year-old boy who jogged from British Columbia to New York is now looking for new continents to conquer, his mother says.

Mayor Edward Koch presented Danny Meyer with a hat and a lunch after the Webster boy jogged down Broadway to the tip of Manhattan on Wednesday, completing a 3,425-mile, five-month run than began June 6 in Vancouver.

"He would like to run across Russia next, and knowing him, he may find a way to do it," said Danny's mother, Jean.

The boy undertook the run, in which he averaged 20 miles a day.

AUSTIN (AP) — A power blackout covered much of Austin briefly today when a switch in a sub-station failed.

Editorial

U.N. is biased in Mideast affairs

Hundreds of Lebanese civilians and Palestinian refugees are being slaughtered by Syrian and rebel Palestine Liberation Organization troops in the assault on Yasser Arafat's forces in northern Lebanon. Yet, as when last year the Syrians ruthlessly killed an estimated 9,000 of their own people while putting down a rebellion in the Syrian town of Hama, hardly a voice has been raised in protest — in the United Nations, in Europe, in the Soviet Union, or even the Arab world.

It's not hard to imagine the outcry that would be heard now if Israeli forces were savaging Arafat instead of the Syrians and his own former comrades. During the Israeli pursuit of the PLO into Lebanon last year, the Israeli forces were denounced widely for what the news media described as unnecessary civilian Lebanese casualties. Only later did the media acknowledge having exaggerated the death toll after International Red Cross and other sources confirmed that the Israelis' effort to avert civilian deaths had, instead, cost their forces additional casualties.

There's a clear, and strange, double standard in the way the Syrians and Israelis are perceived. Yet it is the Syrians and the Lebanese militias they control that keep Lebanon in turmoil and that remain a principal reason that the Lebanese are unable to unify and regain their independence.

While it's dangerous to oversimplify the extraordinarily complex factors underlying the problems in Lebanon, in this case there's little question that the Syrians, and behind them their Soviet mentors, have shown little regard for human life when pursuing their aggressive interests. Yet they seem oddly immune to world criticism either for what's happening around Tripoli or for their role, direct or indirect, in other bloodshed in Lebanon. Even the moderate Arabs who understand well the threats to them all of the Syrian-Libyan-Soviet axis have failed to speak out.

IMF policy hurts its credit

The international "debt bomb" is ticking away. Numerous Third World countries — Brazil, Argentina, Mexico and others — are up to their ears in hock. Big American banks which lent them money find their survival at stake. Default looms, which will devastate American banks and dry up international trade, which will create chaos in the U.S. economy, which will precipitate a worldwide depression, which will unleash the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, which far greater than their ability to pay. Of special concern is the $100 billion they owe to American banks. The nine largest U.S. banks have outstanding loans to Third World and Eastern bloc countries that add up to nearly two-and-a-half times their total capital.

There lies the darkest threat. In the event of a default by a Brazil or an Argentina, some big U.S. banks could go bust — so say the bill's supporters. Besides sowing general confusion and hysteria, that could cause a paralyzing monetary contraction.

The picture is too grim to be believed. In the first place, it's not likely that any banks would fail, as long as the government allows them to write down such losses over time. They and their shareholders would find that process unpleasant, but they have only themselves to blame. Even those banks that are badly squeezed probably would make attractive merger candidates.

Nor would bank failures have cataclysmic effects. The federal government has an array of mechanisms to prevent such fallout, devised in the aftermath of the Great Depression. The Federal Reserve has more than ample means to stave off a contraction — all it needs to do is make reserves freely available to member banks.

The administration argument that the new loans are necessary to allow the Third World to buy our exports, thus boosting our economic recovery, is the oddest of all. As one critic puts it, that's like a shopkeeper throwing money out the window in the hope that whoever finds it will spend it in his store.

In any case, defaults by any of the major developing countries are probably not in the cards. This year's recovery, combined with a drop in interest rates, has eased the pinch already. More important, the debtor nations have an interest in retaining access to foreign capital, and their creditors have an interest in getting at least some of their money back. Absent new IMF loans, the two parties would be forced to find mutually acceptable solutions, with each bearing part of the cost.

One avenue, suggested by economist Allan Meltzer of Carnegie-Mellon University, is to trade debt for equity. He proposes that the banks forgive 15 to 20 percent of the loans to the hardest-pressed debtors. In exchange, the debtors would give them another asset — steel mills, oil fields. The banks would be assured of getting most of their money back, while the debtor would get his debt reduced by a third. And American taxpayers wouldn't be forced to pay for the mistakes of either.

Kicking in more billions to the IMF will forestall this sort of remedy. It will also encourage both the banks and the debtor nations to do more of what got them into trouble in the first place. In fact, the IMF insists that any new loans will have to be accompanied by additional lending by the banks.

That approach will only turn a manageable mess into a potential catastrophe. Until they are required to pay for their mutual errors, neither the big American banks nor the overextended debtors will correct them. Better an uncomfortable resolution now than agonizing regrets later.

Around the Rim

Badge of honor

Not since the Vietnam War has the United States been so closely involved in armed conflict on foreign shores. From Lebanon to Grenada, the U.S. is playing referee as two tiny but strategic countries battle for stability within their governments.

Our role in the defense of democracy is one of major importance but at the same time, can easily be forgotten when the week's big football game rolls around or prices go up in the grocery store. Turmoil in distant lands can seem so distant at times.

Distant, that is, until representatives of the Marine Corps come to your door or your neighbor's door with the sad news that your son has died in combat. Then our involvement seems all too close to our hearts.

My father served in the Marine Corps for the better part of 30 years and our household was never free from tension while he was away. Even during his second and final tour of duty in Vietnam when he wasn't faced directly with combat, the days and months stretched like eternity.

Being young — elementary age, at the most — I never fully appreciated my mother's anxiety. Raising a boy, worrying about her husband and trying to maintain an active life put a burden on her. It's no wonder both have taken to retirement like ice cream to cake.

While life isn't easy at home, a soldier's life abroad is certainly no summer vacation. Especially right now. Speaking from first-hand experience with my father, there is nothing worse for a Marine than waiting. Action is the foundation of their life. Occupying a bunker in downtown Beirut, waiting, watching, can drive a Marine nuts.

It isn't hard, then, to imagine daily life for the Marines in Lebanon. They are there as part of an international peace-keeping team. Their job is to be highly visible and prevent further conflict which has gripped this country for many years.

Their situation is similar to that of the proverbial sitting duck. While the Marines are armed and ready at a moment's notice for attack, they cannot respond to sniper fire, even if a stray bullet kicks up sand in their helmets.

What can they do besides watch and wait? With the threat of war hanging over their heads like a dark thunderhead, the recreational volleyball games have been cancelled and sight-seeing trips are a thing of the past. Free time has to be confined to indoor card games, occasional TV on a battery-powered unit, guitar-playing, reading and writing home.

This was the life until the recent tragedy at the Marine headquarters which killed more than 200 men early one Sunday morning. Never more was the sitting duck image clearer. More men died in one bomb blast than since we pulled out of Southeast Asia.

The attack infuriated my father. He's a man of action, remember. To be in a situation where something like that could happen is beyond him. We should be actively searching for the terrorists and punishing them right this minute.

On the opposite side of the spectrum is Grenada. Here, a small but potent force of Marines landed with a mission and accomplished such in short order. Yes, lives were lost but better so in a progressive moment than in one of stalemate.

Soldiers — Marine or otherwise — join the service because they are a breed of men who are willing to take the risk of life. Some newcomers have been mistaken into thinking military life is just another job, with many fringe benefits. Such were the topics in "Stripes," "Private Benjamin" and other such films that depicted military life as one big party.

But that is Hollywood; this is Lebanon and Grenada. When the order to move out is given, the real-life soldier realizes he may return safely, he may return mangled or he may return in a pine box. The honor of service to his country is more important than his life. That's a character trait that war seems to bring out best in Americans.

Remember, when we turn off the TV set after the nightly news, it doesn't mean the end of the news in the Middle East or Caribbean. While the importance of maintaining a stable government in Lebanon or Grenada may be unclear to us these days, keep in mind it is important enough to have our soldiers there.

And remember it's their decision that keeps us safe in our own backyards.

A federal program gone mad

WASHINGTON — A Commerce Department program intended to help minority inventors develop and market their products has been a dismal failure. An unreleased draft report by the department's inspector general and other agency documents lay much of the blame on mismanagement in Washington.

Lackadaisical supervision from headquarters is best illustrated by what federal investigators say happened at the now-defunct Northwest Technology Center in Seattle, Wash. The center "achieved little success in assisting minority firms in the commercialization of high-technology products," the investigators wrote.

What's more, the government is still trying to collect $159,000 the auditors say was misspent by the center's director, Clarence W. "Bo" Hunter. His extravagant two-year reign, which ended when the funds ran out in April 1982, was detailed in agency documents obtained by my reporters Tony Capaccio and Laurie Siegel.

Through his attorney, Hunter said he had made a full response to the IG audit and complained that "in some aspects the draft (report) is just plain inaccurate."

The IG determined that Hunter's center falsely claimed to have commercialized at least three products, including something called a "Tilt Up Housing System."

More seriously, the Inspector General's auditors reported that Hunter "maintained two separate bank accounts, one of which he attempted to conceal from IG auditors." Into that account, they said, he deposited money solicited from private sources under the center's auspices and refunds from unused airline tickets bought by the center.

"He used funds from this account to pay his personal expenses, which included jewelry and a Porsche," the draft report states.

Hunter says he didn't try to hide the bank account and that it had only $800 in it. He "doesn't know where they got the idea about the jewelry and the Porsche," his lawyer said.

According to Commerce Department records, the Seattle center was visited twice by officials from Washington, and its federal grant was renewed without an audit. But a subsequent audit disclosed that Hunter had "falsified his claimed accomplishments, misrepresented his work attendance and misused more than $159,000 in grant funds."

Agency investigators noted payment of at least $14,500 to Quality Secretarial Services, of which the owner and sole employee was his wife. Hunter said he got oral permission from the Commerce Department to hire his wife and pay her "the standard amount of wages." He said she had a degree in business and performed "valuable" services.

"Our audit found no evidence that she performed any significant work for the center," a department document states.

The investigators noted that $51,572 was paid to the center's employees for one particular grant, but that the time and attendance reports needed to document and justify the payments "appear to have been created in response to ... our own inquiries regarding such documents." A memo explains that all "were prepared in identical ink and handwriting for the entire grant period."

FOOTNOTE: Last June, Margaret Matta, one of the headquarter's officials who had jurisdiction over the Seattle center, recommended that the department pay $42,176 in costs the auditors had questioned. But two months ago, another branch of the Commerce Department conducted an in-depth review and found "no justification to allow the reinstatement of the questioned costs." Matta has refused to comment.

BLUNDER OF THE WEEK: President Reagan has invited the wrath of the National Women's Political Caucus with his latest favorite for a federal appeals court judgeship: J. Harvie Wilkinson III. That would make 22 men and no women Reagan has appointed to the appeals bench. The women's caucus plans to protest if Wilkinson is actually nominated; it has identified four qualified women candidates for the Fourth Circuit appeals court.

Wilkinson is a pillar of the white, conservative Virginia establishment. Unlike most judicial candidates, his opinions on matters of public policy are on the second indelibly. He used to be editorial page editor of a Virginia newspaper.

"Compulsory busing is madness," he wrote in an editorial in 1981. "Compulsory busing between city and suburb is madness compounded." In another editorial he supported capital punishment because "I just don't trust parole agencies."

Wilkinson is only 38, which means he could remain on the bench for 30 or 40 years if he is nominated and confirmed.

GUYANA ON THE SPOT: Guyana's leftist prime minister, Linden Forbes Burnham, is feeling the heat of recent developments in the eastern Caribbean region. Grenada's Marxist regime is gone, and neighboring Suriname's socialist dictator has cooled his ardent courtship of Cuba, leaving Burnham a bit lonely and threatened.

Two other prime ministers, John M.G. Adams of Barbados and Edward Seaga of Jamaica, have accused Burnham of leaking the U.S. invasion plans to Grenada's communist rulers. They may soon try to kick Guyana out of the regional market council, CARICOM. This would be disastrous for Guyana, whose economy is already in a mess.

Billy Graham

Taking the gospel abroad important

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Why do you seem to spend a lot of your time preaching in other countries, when there are so many needs here in our own country? — K.H.

DEAR K.H.: Yes, there are serious spiritual needs in our own nation, and I am deeply concerned about the direction of our society in many ways. Increasingly we are leaving God out of our lives, and acting instead as if he did not matter or even exist. The Bible warns us that any nation which leaves God out of its life will eventually pay the consequences for its sin. I believe we are already seeing this in many ways, and the only ultimate answer is for us to turn to God. That is true for us as a nation, and it is true for each individual as well. As long as God gives me strength I intend to devote a major part of my ministry — as I have in the past — to preaching the Gospel here.

At the same time, you need to remember that God's love extends to every nation and people on earth. Many people today have very little opportunity to hear the Gospel because there are very few believers in their countries. Some countries are also almost closed to the Gospel because of religious or political reasons. But Christ's command is the same today as it was almost 2,000 years ago: "Go and make disciples of all nations" (Matthew 28:19). It would be disobedient to God to neglect his clear command. As God opens doors, therefore, my associates and I believe a portion of our time must be spent declaring the Gospel in other parts of the world.

One thing I have found in my travels is that people are basically the same everywhere I go. They have the same spiritual needs, and Christ is able to meet those needs. The Gospel is not limited to one race or culture; God loves the whole world, and God is "not wanting anyone to perish, but everyone to come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9).

Are you seeking to share Christ with those around you? Don't leave it up to your minister or those who are evangelists. Every Christian should seek to point others to Christ as God gives him opportunity.

Consultant claims that Comanche Peak unsafe

TROUBLED NUCLEAR PLANT — A consultant hired by the owners of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant claims plant officials have ignored safety problems within the trouble-plagued facility. The plant is located near Glen Rose, Texas, about 50 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

DALLAS (AP) — A consultant hired by owners of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant says plant officials have "deluded" themselves into ignoring problems at the trouble-plagued facility and appeared to want a report from him giving the "right" answers.

The consultant, Joseph L. Lapinsky, a technical service director for Oliver B. Cannon and Sons Inc. in Philadelphia, was hired by Comanche Peak owner Texas Utilities Generating Co. to perform a three-day review of the workmanship and quality control at the plant.

A four-page memo by Lapinsky, dated Aug. 8, was labeled "inaccurate" and "misleading" by one plant official. Lapinsky charged in the memo that plant management "attempts to squash any efforts to point out quality problems" and appeared to want to "buy the 'right' answer" from him.

The memo was provided to the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board by William A. Dunham, a former paint inspector who contended he was fired by construction contractor Brown & Root Inc. on Aug. 26 because he complained about harassment of inspectors at Comanche Peak. Texas Utilities officials denied his allegations and said he was fired for insubordination.

Last month, the Department of Labor found that Dunham had been illegally fired and ordered him reinstated with full back pay.

Lapinsky accused Comanche Peak officials of ignoring problems with workmanship and employee qualifications in the department that applies radioactive-resistant paint.

The memo indicated serious problems exist with some of the paint work. The painting would have to be redone, he wrote, because "it will be impossible (by all indications) to salvage what work is currently in place."

"The writer's opinion is that management at Comanche Peak had deluded itself into thinking everything is alright (sic) or it will all come out in the wash," Lapinsky wrote.

Allegations of inspector harassment and poor paint work have become central issues in licensing hearings. The board has questioned the utility's motives in firing a second inspector, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff has proposed a $40,000 fine against the utility for firing a third inspector. That fine has been postponed pending an appeal by the utility.

In an affidavit to the licensing board, Dunham said federal officials seized quality control records at the plant as part of an investigation of "massive falsification of documentation" in the protective paint department.

The affidavit was released Monday by a group opposed to operation of Comanche Peak, the Dallas-based Citizens Association for Sound Energy.

NRC spokesman Clyde E. Wisner confirmed that records were seized from the quality control vault during an NRC investigation, but said he could not comment on that investigation.

TMA president advises freeze on medical fees

AUSTIN (AP) — The president of the Texas Medical Association says he will recommend Friday that all TMA members voluntarily hold their fees at current levels or plan fee reductions during the next two years.

Dr. Milton V. Davis, Dallas surgeon and TMA president, will speak Friday to the board of delegates, the TMA governing body, and urge cooperation with Congress in curbing rising medical costs.

Congress is considering a six-month freeze on physician reimbursement levels for treatment of Medicare patients, a proposal Davis says the TMA will not oppose if "the total fee is left up to the patient and the doctor."

However, he said the TMA will "strongly oppose" a proposal in Congress that physicians be reimbursed directly by the government for Medicare services. Currently physicians have the option of either billing the patient or the government under Medicare.

Doggett gets Sierra Club nod

AUSTIN (AP) — Lloyd Doggett's race for a U.S. Senate seat picked up the support of the political arm of the Texas Sierra Club on Wednesday.

A news release issued by the Sierra Club Committee on Political Education said Doggett, a Democratic state senator from Austin, "is clearly the most effective and hard-working candidate in the race."

"At such a critical period, Texans cannot afford more hot air and empty promises from Washington," said Howard Saxton of Dallas, chairman of the Sierra Club political committee.

Cause of derailment still unknown

LONGVIEW (AP) — A section of railroad track, which was discovered to have broken into 58 pieces following the derailment of an Amtrak passenger train, has been sent for analysis to a metallurgy laboratory.

But John Rehor of the National Transportation Safety Board said it is too soon to conclude the broken rail caused the derailment which killed four passengers Saturday morning near Marshall.

"We're not in position to say that it would be premature to suggest a broken rail caused the accident," said Rehor.

The break in the rail, made by a West German firm in 1981, may have been caused by the wreck, not vice versa, Rehor said.

About nine passengers who were aboard the Amtrak train "The Eagle" remained in local hospitals Tuesday. Most were listed in stable condition.

"That the rail broke could be a secondary effect of the derailment. Keep in mind you have tremendous forces at work," said Rehor, one of seven NTSB investigators who came to Marshall to study Saturday's Amtrak derailment.

Rainbow Project procedures listed

Dear Abby

Grateful mother has praise for pooch

A program about the Rainbow Project was given at a meeting of the Mary Jane Club in the home of Mrs. Ronnie Wood, Nov. 10. The Rev. Victor Sedinger, pastor of First Christian Church, assisted by Lee Ward, social case worker, presented the program. Sedinger has been active in the Rainbow Project from its conception as an idea to it becoming a reality.

The facility has the capacity for seven boys, five girls and two infants. Placements are made at the recommendation of Department of Human Resources, a juvenile probation officer or parent or person having legal custody of the child.

The child can be kept up to 30 days. During this time, a complete review of the case is done to determine the best route to be taken for the child. Seventy-five to eighty percent of the children will be returned to their parents.

Each child is checked for current immunizations and is given a complete medical and dental check-up. In 1982, 214 abuse cases were reported to Howard County officials. It is suspected only ten percent are actually reported. A state law exists stating all suspected child abuse must be reported.

Persons reporting child abuse may remain anonymous. The Child Abuse Hotline phone number is 1-800-252-5400. Child abuse can be reported to any law enforcement agency.

Members brought children's books for the Rainbow Project. Items currently needed at the center are disposable diapers, diaper bag, car seat, combs and brushes, tube socks and underwear, and twin bed linens. Clean, wearable clothes for age ten and under also can be used. Anyone wanting to make a donation, can call houseparents, Jim and Liz Jones at 267-6253.

The next meeting will be a hand-made gift exchange and covered dish luncheon in the home of Mrs. Don McKinney, Dec. 8.

DEAR ABBY: Please tell "Dog Tired," who hates animals, that while on vacation it was one of those "stinking animals" that brought my 4-year-old son back after he had been lost for three long hours in the woods. When I saw our beautiful German shepherd tugging our son by the sleeve of his sweat shirt, I could have kissed that dog's feet.

I thank God every day for creating such a noble animal!
DOG LOVER IN ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR DOG LOVER: My mail has been running 100-40-1 in favor of dogs.

DEAR ABBY: When "J." answered my ad for a non-smoking roommate, she admitted that she smoked but was "trying to quit." I told her that I would encourage her efforts to quit smoking and I accepted her. It's been six months and J. is still smoking! She keeps promising to quit but she's still smoking.

I really dislike it because (1) I am a nurse and I know what smoke does to the lungs; (2) she smells bad; (3) even though she smokes only in her room, the rest of the apartment smells of smoke.

Since I advertised for a non-smoker, do I have the right to tell her she will have to move?

CLEAF LUNGS
DEAR CLEAN: You accepted J. as a roommate knowing that she smoked but was trying to quit. She thought she could, and you thought you could help her. You were both mistaken. Talk turkey. Tell J. if she isn't "clean" by Thanksgiving, she will have to find another roommate.

DEAR ABBY: After 20 years of dieting, "Fat, Female and Feeling Fantastic" found a support group of fat people who decided to quit dieting and accept themselves the way they were. Then figuring that she had accomplished something that merited national applause, "F.F. and F.F." bragged about it to you. You told her, "There's nothing wrong with being heavy — as long as you're healthy."

Abby, it's not possible to be hefty and healthy. Excess weight impairs both the immune system and liver function. It breeds diabetes, gallstones, arthritis, puts a strain on the heart and contributes to bad backs and high blood pressure.

"F.F. and F.F." may try to justify her gluttony, but before the American Medical Association says obesity is OK, Yuri Andropov will be a born-again Christian!

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents),

State hospital to feature 'Carol of Lights' program

A "Carol of Lights" program at Big Spring State Hospital will feature the lighting of the Christmas tree at the front of the hospital campus at 7 p.m. Dec. 1.

The program is a first at the hospital. The hospital is inviting all ministers of music in area churches to bring choirs for the event. The choirs will sing 10 Christmas songs in unison as the Christmas tree is lighted.

"Since many of our patients are here on a long-term basis, the Christmas season is a very special time at the hospital," said Kathy Viccinelli, coordinator of Volunteer Services. "The Chaplaincy Services and the Volunteer Services departments have joined forces to plan an activity that will be important to all patients."

Area citizens may attend the Christmas tree lighting

Dr. Donohue Drug for severe acne

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am writing in regard to my complexion problem. I have acne which is not too severe, yet enough to bother me. I have tried various things to clear it up, yet nothing seems to help. Recently I read an article (enclosed) regarding a new drug for acne call Accutane. I would deeply appreciate your thoughts and knowledge about this. — D.E.

If you read that article carefully, you noted that it said Accutane is for severe acne that fails to respond to other treatments. I don't know what you have tried in the past, but if your acne is mild, as you say, then you should be able to get yourself into a good conservative control program.

Acne is inflammation of the skin's oil secreting glands, and mild cases can be controlled by taking a few simple steps. Keep your face clean, and I don't mean by that excessive face washing or use of strong abrasive soaps, or other kinds of tinkering. That only irritates your face and can make the acne worse. Washing twice a day using mild soaps without hard scrubbing should be enough. Don't pick at pimples, which only pushes oil and pus into the skin, adding to the inflammation. Don't use oily cosmetics. You can try some of the over-the-counter lotions, like benzoyl peroxide.

If you've tried all this and had no luck, then it's time to get a doctor's help. He may want to prescribe antibiotics to kill bacteria deep inside oil glands. And there are antibiotic lotions, also. The skin preparation, retin-A, can help dry the oil glands. That's a prescription item.

Only after all these treatments have failed is it time to try Accutane, a powerful stopper of oil gland activity. It's quite effective for severe acne, but before you jump to that step use the simple measures I mentioned. Then talk to your doctor.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My eye problem has been diagnosed as nuclear cataract. Will you please explain? What can be done for me? — E.M.T.

A cataract is an area of cloudiness inside the lens of the eye. Let me try to explain. I have a large thermopane window in my living room. Everytime it gets muggy, or after a heavy rain, the space between the two panes clouds. I can't get rid of it. I suppose there's a tiny leak somewhere. A cataract is something like that, only it's not a leak problem. The cloudiness just develops for reasons that aren't entirely clear.

a clear lens is needed for clear sight. Nuclear cataract doesn't have anything to do with bombs. It refers to the lens area affected.

The lens has three regions and the central region is the nucleus. That's where your cloudiness is forming. Nuclear cataracts interfere with vision more than those in other areas. If it continues to develop to the point where sight is greatly disturbed, then removal of the lens is the answer. You and your doctor can decide how to restore vision in that eye — with lens implant or special contact lenses. Your other questions are answered in the booklet "Cataracts and Glaucoma," which other readers may obtain by writing me care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Playmate statue nixed

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A life-sized statue of three boys peering at a Playboy centerfold will be removed from a city park next week in response to complaints that the statue was a bad influence on children and was degrading to women.

"I knew they were looking at a centerfold but since I was assured there had been no complaints (in the sculpture's previous exhibition) I assumed it was not as explicit as it was," said Mara Brazer, the executive director of Parkfriends, a private group that brought the statue to New Haven.

Ms. Brazer said the bronze sculpture, entitled Playmates, was part of a group of works her organization had borrowed from New Jersey artist J. Seward Johnson.

Once the statue was installed in Wooster Square Park, part of a residential neighborhood near downtown New Haven, the complaints started, she said today.

The centerfold is not obvious until an observer gets close to the sculpture, which shows three boys gathered around the magazine.

"You can see a woman who basically has her back to the audience and she is looking over her shoulders. She's partially clad. You can identify breasts and buttocks," Ms. Brazer said.

Parkfriends received only seven written or telephoned complaints on the sculpture, but Ms. Brazer said she also had heard from the alderwoman who represents the area and from the Catholic church diagonally across from the statue.

"There's too many young kids in the park," said resident John de Gennaro. "We've got a lot of churches in the area too. The nuns walk right past it. We just don't want it."

CONTROVERSIAL STATUE — The sculpture "Playmates" by Princeton, N.J., sculptor J. Seward Johnson has caused controversy in New Haven where it was placed in a city park. The statue shows three boys looking at the centerfold of a men's magazine. The statue will soon be removed.

Scientists predict meteor visibility

ODESSA (AP) — Astronomers say a meteor shower expected this week should be visible in the Permian Basin.

Odeesa College Planetarium Director Jean Henry said the phenomenon is expected to be visible after the moon sets between 5 and 6 a.m. Friday.

He said the best place to see the shower will be away from the lights of the city.

On Friday, the moon will set at 4:48 a.m., with dawn beginning at 5:53 a.m. Sunrise would be at 7:16 a.m. Henry said the shower should be visible for about 35 minutes within that period.

Eighth-grade poker class folds under pressure

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A class that taught eighth-graders how to play poker has folded its hand, but the head of a group that helps compulsive gamblers says it was "lunacy" to teach students how to gamble.

The belief that "students should explore a number of things" was behind the controversial class, East Windsor Schools Superintendent Edgar Thomas said Tuesday.

"We're not promoting gambling," insisted Principal Steven McLaine of the Grace Norton Rogers School, where poker was played in class for two days before a parent complained.

Using paper markers for bets, the pupils in the optional non-credit class played games and learned the rankings of straights, flushes, full houses and other hands during the grading period that ended Nov. 9.

McLaine said that a teacher wrote up a list of rules for students, and "four of them (students) sat down and she went over rules with them. There were 10 or 12 kids in class. The rest were involved in something else."

McLaine said he discussed the poker sessions with the teacher "and she said as an afterthought that 'I probably shouldn't have done it.'"

He said the card-playing course was offered along with other optional classes "instead of giving kids study halls. On other days, they get a study skills program and family life classes."

McLaine said that he never heard a complaint directly from a parent. But the mother of one student contacted Arnold Wexler, vice president of the Council on Compulsive Gambling of New Jersey, a private organization.

Wexler, who called McLaine on Monday, said his group's studies showed that 96 percent of all compulsive gamblers start playing before the age of 14.

"I really don't feel like we set up something and said, 'Hey, let's teach the kids how to gamble,'" said McLaine.

"I guess kids know about poker and wanted to know how the game was played," he added. "There was no money or betting."

But Wexler said: "If someone taught alcoholism or smoking marijuana in school, people would go bananas. It's lunacy to spend a period of the school day teaching gambling."

New Jersey's state health department has spent $60,000 to open a telephone hotline to help compulsive gamblers, said Amy Collings, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Health.

Class sounds alarm over siren's silence

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Who says you can't fight City Hall? When the city decided to discontinue its noon siren, a group of kindergarten students raised an alarm of their own — and got action.

The pupils were concerned because they felt that without the noon siren their parents might not know when it was time to pick them up.

So kindergartners at the Little School sent letters to each city councilman and to Mayor Crawford J. Carroll.

They wrote: "We miss the noon whistle. When the whistle blows at 12 o'clock we know it is time for our moms and dads to pick us up at school. Sometimes the clocks have different times but everybody knows it's noon. If our moms are at work they know it's time to pick us up at school. People driving by need to be careful because we go home when the whistle blows. Thank You."

City Hall responded Monday, with officials saying the noon siren would be reinstated.

Jailhouse opening to rock

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Pitkin County Sheriff Richrd Kienast has never been one to let stodginess get in the way of community relations. So when Aspen opens its new county jail, it will do it in style.

A fund-raising jailwarming is planned for Saturday night. For $10, visitors will get fingerprints, cheap mugshots and the chance to belly up to a cash bar.

The new 25-cell jail officially opens for next month and Kienast said Tuesday he wants to ensure that it is ready.

Higher profits forecasted

for AT&T
WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and its Bell System companies are predicting they will record higher profits next year despite the Jan. 1 breakup of AT&T.

AT&T and the seven new regional Bell companies that will be created Jan. 1 told the Securities and Exchange Commission on Wednesday they expect to slightly increase their cash dividends in the first quarter of 1984.

Assuming a shareholder kept stock in all the companies, first-quarter combined dividends will total $1.365 per share compared with the equivalent now of $1.35 per AT&T share.

AT&T and the new regional companies, on a consolidated basis, projected total net income next year of $8.7 billion. The company refused to predict what its fourth quarter performance in 1983 would be.

Under a reorganization plan approved by the Justice Department and a federal judge, existing stockholders will retain their stock in AT&T while also receiving one share of stock in each of the seven regional holding companies for every 10 shares of AT&T stock they now hold.

Students expelled over textbook flap

CHURCH HILL, Tenn. (AP) — Nine students at Church Hill Middle School have been suspended for three days because they refused to read textbooks their parents say are anti-Christian and un-American. "I really hate it happened, but I had to do something because they refused to go to class," said principal Jay Sally after ordering the suspensions Tuesday.

Bob Mozart, spokesman for the parents, said the series of grade school readers, published by Holt, Rinehart and Winston, contains stories with "anti-gun, anti-war and anti-capitalist biases."

"We have the constitutional right not to have this rammmed down our throats," said Mozart.

Until last week, the students could read alternative textbooks, Mozart said. But the Hawkins County school board decided Thursday that all students must use the same readers, introduced at the school this year.

Sally said the board decision forced him to order the suspensions.

Bill Snodgrass, Hawkins County school superintendent, said the students were suspended "for disobeying school rules."

Mozart's 12-year-old son, Travis, was one of the suspended children. "It frightened him at first," Mozart said. "But he understood it and accepted it. We have prepared him all along. We're a strong family unit."

Mozart's 7-year-old daughter, Sundee, a second-grader, wasn't told to refuse to read from the textbooks because she is too young to understand the controversy, Mozart said.

"They (the textbooks) are saying there are no moral absolutes. That contradicts the Bible and contradicts the social mores, values and standards being taught by the parents," Mozart said.

Travis will go back to school Friday and continue to refuse to read the textbooks, Mozart said, adding he expects continued suspensions.

Polygraph rule draws protests

AUSTIN (AP) — More than 1,000 workers for the State Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation have signed petitions protesting a recent rule requiring polygraph tests if accused of patient abuse.

The new ruling also says so-called lie-detector tests are mandatory if an employee is accused of drinking, use of drugs or other illicit activity while on duty, said Wakie Martin, spokesman for the Texas State Employees Union (AFL-CIO).

Martin said the petition will be presented to the MH-MR board when it meets here Friday.

A Sept. 14 memorandum from MH-MR Commissioner Gary Miller said employees accused of patient abuse, drinking or other illicit activity while on duty may be fired if they refuse to take the polygraph test.

Miller said the memo was merely a "clarification" of existing departmental rules that cover the agency's 26,000 employees.

Martin said that in the past employees accused of wrongdoing have been given the option of taking a polygraph test to prove their innocence.

Martin said the new interpretation would make employees take the test or lose their jobs.

Thursday Notes

The Thursday Notes staff is excited. Next week is our national holiday... "Turkey Day." It's about time someone gave us proper recognition.

Here's an update on how two local — or nearly local — guys are making out in the big time.

• The Forsan Buffaloes struggled through a rebuilding year this past football season. Things might have gone a little bit smoother had the Buffs been able to use the services of Daniel Bristo for another season.

Bristo transferred to Lubbock Christian High School after his junior season, and has helped guide LCHS to the state TAPS (Texas Association of Private Schools) football championship.

The Eagles won only five of 10 games during the regular season but thumped Dallas Christian High 21-15 in last week's playoff contest. LCHS meets For Worth Country Day this weekend for the state title.

DANIEL BRISTO
...former Buffalo

In 9 games, the 6-1, 190-pound Bristo piled up 636 yards rushing from his halfback position in the Eagles' wishbone offense. His specialty is getting the first down in short yardage situations. He added 53 more yards against DCHS. His 56 points scored this year ranks him No. 2 in Lubbock.

He's also played a defensive end position and is second on the team in tackles.

"He's probably our most durable, consistent player," says LCHS coach Stan Caffey. "He's really a fine kid."

• Another athlete making good is former Big Spring High basketball standout Jerald Wrightstil. Wrightstil, the 1983 Most Valuable Player in District 4-5A, has gained a starting position with the Midland Chaparrals.

In the latest stats from LCHS, Wrightstil is averaging 7.6 points a game and has five steals and 12 assists. He will make his Big Spring homecoming Jan. 23 when the Howard Hawks entertain the Chaps in a Western Junior College Athletic Conference game.

Big Spring High basketball opens next Tuesday. The Steers, under the direction of first-year head coach Mike Randle, tangle with Midland High in Midland. The Lady Steers, regarded as one of the top teams in 4-5A this year, host Class A powerhouse Greenwood in Steer Gym.

Annette Fowler, the transplanted Yankee from Michigan, is coaching the LS for her second year.

Speaking of basketball, the Hawk Queens Classic is going on today and continues through Saturday night at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

In addition to Don Stevens' Queens, there is considerable talent in this year's 16-team field. McLennan Community College of Waco has been labeled as the state's best by Stevens and Odessa College is the favorite to win the WJAC title this fall.

Those two teams should meet in one semifinal game with the Queens challenging in the other. The championship game is slated for 8 p.m. Saturday night.

And, still on the topic of basketball, registration is underway for the 1983-84 Big Spring church league program. Churches interested in entering men's and women's teams should contact Keith McVay at 267-3633 (FBC Family Life Center) or Noel Hull at 263-3108 by Nov. 28.

Don't forget the Big Spring High Fall Sports Banquet Nov. 28. Texas Tech head football coach Jerry Moore is the speaker. Tickets are $8 and on sale now at BS Athletics, J.C. Penney, the Choate Co. and the school administration office. — GREG JAKLEWICZ

Two for the Show Klondike pair gives sterling performances

By STEVEN BELVIN
Sports Writer

Rolando Juantos and Mitch Mitchell sure know how to make a first-year head coach's job a lot easier.

Under the direction of coach Mickey Virdell, the duo has helped lead the Klondike Cougars to the Class A bi-district playoffs. The Coogs vie for the crown against the Gorman Panthers at 7:30 p.m. Friday night in Sweetwater's Mustang Bowl.

All season long the Cougars have defied the odds-makers, starting the season being ranked ninth out of 12 teams in the North and South Zones in District 7-A.

But with good coaching and players like Juantos and Mitchell, Klondike finished runner-up in the North Zone behind state-ranked Roscoe and upset South Zone champs Greenwood 7-6 last week.

"We are very excited to be in the playoffs and the kids' enthusiasm and teamwork has been the key."

Coach Mickey Virdell

Juantos, the tailback in the Cougars' wing-T attack, has clearly been their offensive leader having racked up 1,200 yards in 11 games. Linebacker Mitchell leads a stingy defense that has yielded only 48 points in the last six games. Of that total, 34 points came in a loss to the 1982 state finalist and eventual zone champion Plowboys.

Virdell, who came to Klondike from Lamesa, said he didn't know what to expect in his first season at the school. "Of course our team goal was to make it to the playoffs, but you really don't know what to expect when you install a new offense and defense," said Virdell. "We are very excited to be in the playoffs and the kids' enthusiasm and teamwork has been the key."

Along with Juantos and Mitchell, "Rolo" — as he is called by his teammates — has been on a tear since district play having run for over 700 yards, including 188 on 32 carries last week against Greenwood. The 5-8, 190-pound junior looks almost pudgy in his football gear, but he possesses the power and quickness that puts fear in opposing defense's hearts.

"Last year, Rolo didn't play that much running back," Virdell said, "and you could tell early in the season because he had trouble finding his holes. As the season progressed he started finding his holes gaining the yards. He is an excellent running back and had done everything we have asked of him. He has good speed and the ability to break tackles."

What does Rolo think of his new position? "I like it," he simply stated. "I love to carry the ball 20-25 times a game." With his combination of speed and strength Juantos says he prefers to run over a would-be tackler than to run around him. "It makes you feel good afterwards," he said, a smile forming on his lips.

But Juantos is quick to point out that most of his success can be attributed to his offensive line. "They have been opening up the holes all year," he said.

Standing 5-11 and weighing 162 pounds, Mitchell does not have the ideal size for a linebacker, but what he lacks in bodily he makes up in hustle and desire. His formula for being a good linebacker is simple: "You have to like to hit," he says.

And the junior, who played only offensive guard last season, has been hitting people all season. He leads the team in tackles with 136 and has a nose for the ball, Virdell said.

"Mitch has done a great job of being our leader," said the Klondike coach. "He is intelligent and does a good job of reading the plays. He likes to hit," Virdell summed up.

It seems the best running backs in the district brought out the best in Mitchell this fall. Against Forsan's star running back Mitch Hays, for example, the defense held him to 68 yards and Mitchell made 18 tackles. The defense limited Sand's all-district performer Robbie Creswell to 66 yards and Mitchell made 16 tackles. He made an amazing 26 tackles against Roscoe's high-powered veer attack.

Last week against two-touchdown

favorite Greenwood, the Cougar defense limited all-purpose back Roger Smith to 89 yards — his first sub 100-yard effort since the first game of the season — and Mitchell was credited with 17 tackles.

"The key to our defense and our team is that the coaches won't let us give up," said Mitchell. Even when the Coogs lost three of their first four non-district games, Mitchell stated that Virdell along with assistants Jimmy Thomas, Joey McQueen and Van Kountz "kept the team fired up" for every encounter.

Both Juantos and Mitchell agree the key to their successful season is a motto installed in each player by the coaching staff: "No matter how much underdog they were, they could still come out on top."

"Coach Virdell has a good attitude, he wants to win," said Mitchell. "He has taught us how to win," summed up Juantos.

And Friday night against Gorman, the Klondike Cougars take aim at defying the odds again and continue their winning ways.

Hawk Queens test Cisco in Classic first round contest

Howard College begins defense of its 1982 Hawk Queen Classic championship when it tests Cisco at 8 p.m. tonight in Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The game is just one of eight first round contests scheduled today. Also on schedule this afternoon are the Grayson-Ranger game (4 p.m.), Tyler-TSTI (Waco) matchup (6 p.m.) and Phoenix (Ariz.)-Temple contest (10 p.m.).

Winner's and loser's bracket games continue Friday, all being played in DGC. Tournament semifinals are set for 8 and 10 a.m. Saturday with the championship game slated for 8 p.m. that evening.

The Queens rolled by Tyler 77-74 in last year's finale as forward Nell Haskins scored a school-record 43 points. The Queens enter tonight's game 6-3 and a secondary choice for a tournament title behind favorites McLennan and Odessa.

Molly Early is scoring 14.0 points a game to lead the Queens. Joining her in double figures are Debbie Hall with a 13.2 average and Alex Provincio who has boosted her stats to 10.3 points a game.

HC has won five of its last six games, sharing the recent Odessa Optimist Classic championship with Odessa College.

In games played this morning, New Mexico Junior College edged Navarro 75-72 and Western Texas downed Weatherford 79-70. Sharon Smith scored 18 and Carla Dudley 16 for NMJC while a trio of players — Velma Eldridge, Tracy Burr and Kim Williams — had 15 points each for Navarro. Mary Nell Clayton poured in 29 points and Rhonda Hoeltn 19 for the Dusters while Julie Callaway topped Weatherford with 14. NMJC and Western Texas played at 6 p.m. Friday while Navarro takes on Weatherford in a 2 p.m. loser's bracket game Friday.

Sun Bowl officials sympathize with SMU mood on bowl selection

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Southern Methodist officials have apologized to this West Texas city and Sun Bowl officials for some remarks their football players made about El Paso, and a bowl spokesman says "everything should be fine now."

"We're looking forward to the game and I think once these men get here, they'll see the Sun Bowl is just great," said Tom Starr, Sun Bowl executive director.

While bowl invitations cannot be issued until Saturday, Starr said SMU and Alabama are expected to be asked to play in the Dec. 24 Sun Bowl.

That announcement, made earlier this week, disappointed some SMU players, who had hoped to play their final game of the season in a New Year's Day bowl, Starr said.

OSU's Johnson talks with Rice

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State football coach Jimmy Johnson said today he has had "casual conversation" with officials from Rice University, which is looking for a new head coach.

But Johnson said he is not a candidate for the job, which became available when Ray Alborn announced earlier this fall he would leave the Houston school at the end of the season.

"I am not a candidate for the job," Johnson said. "I have not interviewed for the job. There has been nothing more than casual conversation."

"My own interest right now is Oklahoma State playing Iowa State (on Saturday.)"

Smith says Tar Heels won't stay No. 1

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — For the third time in six years, North Carolina has been chosen No. 1 in The Associated Press preseason college basketball poll and, for the third time, Coach Dean Smith isn't betting it will last.

The Tar Heels, national champions in 1982, received 34 first-place votes and 1,175 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Smith, however, said Wednesday one team cannot be expected to reign supreme all season.

"Take the first four in the polls and I think any one will be fortunate to say they'll be in Seattle," he said, referring to the site of this season's NCAA basketball tournament. "Last year, I think Louisville was the highest ranked team to go to the Final Four."

Kentucky, whose hopes are strengthened by the return of 7-foot-1 Sam Bowie, drew 16 first-place votes and 1,123 points to rank second, ahead of Houston, which lost to North Carolina State in last season's championship. The Cougars got four first-place votes and 1,042 points.

A top-ranking in preseason is nothing new for the Tar Heels. They were picked No. 1 prior to the 1977-78 season and reached the second round of the NCAA tournament before losing to the University of San Francisco. They were top choice again before the 1981-82 season and backed it up with a 63-62 victory over Georgetown in the finals at New Orleans for Smith's first title after six previous trips to the Final Four.

"I don't think it makes much difference whether you're one or 10 because of the great balance in college basketball," Smith said. "For North Carolina State and Georgia to be in the Final Four last year demonstrates this since those teams were the fourth seed in their conference."

North Carolina, 28-8 last season and losers to Georgia in the finals of the East Regional, returns 6-foot-7 junior All-American Michael Jordan and 6-9 senior Sam Perkins. Other starters returning are 6-7 senior Matt Doherty and 7-foot sophomore center Brad Daugherty.

Three freshmen are expected to provide immediate help, although none is likely to start. Forwards Dave Popson and Joe Wolf, both 6-10, will help along the front line, while 6-4 Kenny Smith will fight two incumbents — Buzz Peterson and Steve Hale — for playing time.

"Smith is a very fast learner. It's helpful because the point guard is required to do a lot," Smith said.

Georgetown attracted four first-place votes and 1,024 points for the No. 4 spot. The Big East Conference favorite has 7-foot Pat Ewing, a first team All-American, and a strong supporting cast. Memphis State, which includes 6-10 Keith Lee among its four returning starters, drew one vote for No. 1 and 905 points to gain fifth place.

Louisville, which made the Final Four last season for the third time in four years, received the other first-place vote and 836 points to rank sixth despite losing the McCray brothers.

Iowa was seventh, with Maryland and UCLA and Oregon State completing the Top Ten.

Louisiana State topped the Second Ten, followed by Michigan State, Fresno State, Arkansas, Boston College, Georgia, Kansas, DePaul, Indiana and Oklahoma.

Nine of last season's final Top Twenty is missing from the preseason rankings.

Among them are NCAA champion N.C. State, which lost Dereck Whittenburg, Thurl Bailey and Sidney Lowe, the catalysts of that championship squad. Also missing is Virginia, which graduated 7-4 Ralph Sampson, three-time Player of the Year.

Also unranked from last season's Top Twenty are St. John's, Nevada-Las Vegas, Missouri, Villanova, Wichita State, Tennessee-Chattanooga and Oklahoma State.

Steinbrenner, Kuhn in court

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn can now get on with his efforts to investigate the actions of New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner following last summer's "pine tar bat" game.

The two men, along with their lawyers, met in State Supreme Court in The Bronx Wednesday, at which time Steinbrenner agreed to drop his request for an injunction against Kuhn's planned hearing on the matter.

Kuhn has not set a date for the hearing.

Steinbrenner sharply criticized American League President Lee MacPhail after MacPhail reinstated George Brett's controversial home run — hit with a bat containing excessive pine tar — that cost the Yankees a victory July 24.

Sources close to Steinbrenner, who claims Kuhn is biased against him, have said he is concerned that he could be fined as much as $250,000 and suspended because of his conduct.

This winter, get your diesel off to a good start.

Gulf Auto Diesel fuel is specially formulated to meet the cold weather starting needs of diesel engines. A cold flow improver makes the fuel flow to your engine as easily in January as it does in June. And, because Gulf adds the cold flow improver before you pump fuel into your car, you don't need to add anything later on.

So, if you want to beat the cold weather starting grind, look for our red and yellow 'D'. And get off to a good start this winter with Gulf Auto Diesel.

KC's Wilson draws 3-month sentence

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Willie Wilson, the Kansas City Royals' All-Star center fielder, was sentenced to three months in prison or a drug treatment institution and fined $5,000 today on a federal charge of attempting to possess cocaine.

Wilson, 28, pleaded guilty to the charge last month, along with teammates Willie Aikens and Jerry Martin, who were scheduled for sentencing later today.

U.S. Magistrate J. Milton Sullivant ordered Wilson to report to federal prison at Fort Worth, Texas, Dec. 5. He imposed a one-year sentence, but suspended the remaining nine months of the sentence. The maximum sentence was one year in prison and a $5,000 fine.

The judge said that upon Wilson's release, the player would begin two years of probation.

Wilson stood quietly with his head bowed and hands folded in front of him as the sentence was imposed.

"I think as an outstanding athlete you occupy a special position in our society," Sullivant said. "There are certain obligations and responsibilities you must live up to. The court regards this as a serious offense."

"There is an increasing awareness of the harm coming to our society from the proliferation and use of drugs," Sullivant said.

Prior to sentencing, Wilson declined to speak in his own behalf. But his lawyer, David Russell, urged the judge to place his client on probation.

"He's willing to give whatever time and money he can to pay back society," Russell said at the hearing in the overflowing courtroom.

Wheaties honors an age past

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

A generation ago, when the world was a nicer place in which to live, tykes gathered around their radios to listen to the travails and ultimate triumphs of "Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy."

During the commercial breaks of these half-hour dramas, a sports idol of the period, a Babe Ruth or a Lou Gehrig, would break in with an exhortation which went something like this:

"Now, boys and girls, if you want to grow up to be strong and brave like Jack Armstrong, don't forget to eat your Wheaties."

People who heard those words 50 years ago are now papas, mamas, grandfathers and grandmothers, TV has replaced the talk box and Jack Armstrong's adventures appear mild compared with the gun-totin', car-chasin' and head-bashin' of T. J. Hooker, Mr. T and Simon and Simon.

But the spirit of strength and goodness, as conveyed by a cereal box, goes on. Now it's a blond, handsome Olympic champion or some other outstanding amateur athlete making the appeal on a TV screen during Saturday morning cartoons.

Over the years, Wheaties have become a continuing thread in the fabric of our social structure — "as American as baseball, Kate Smith and apple pie."

The producers of the cereal, General Mills, Inc., touched many a nostalgic nerve when they gathered many of their illustrious alumni to New York this week for the 50th anniversary of their theme: "Wheaties — Breakfast of Champions."

They included Red Barber, one of the original radio baseball broadcasters; Olympic gold medalists Bob Mathias and Bob Richards, basketball great George Mikan, Yogi Berra, Phil Rizzuto and other baseball personalities.

The event also launched a "Search for Champions" campaign in which outstanding amateur athletes from throughout the country are chosen to grace the cereal box.

The late Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig were among the first to endorse the product, and both figured in interesting radio froulous that have become part of the industry's deathless lore.

Gehrig had been signed to endorse Wheaties but later was lured away by a rival product, Huskies, no longer in existence. On a national radio hookup Gehrig was giving his commercial spiel, which ended with, "Kids, don't forget to eat my favorite cereal — Wheaties."

Newspapers had a field day with the slip of the tongue, generating publicity for both products which would not have been otherwise possible.

Babe Ruth was in a studio rehearsing one his commercials promoting Wheaties as an ingredient for cookies.

"So, boys and girls," he said, "ask your mother to buy Wheaties so you can have some of these wonderful kookies."

"Babe," admonished the director, "it's cookies, not kookies. Let's try it again." The Babe tried two more times. Each time it came out "kookies."

"Aw, I know it's cookies," said the Babe. "I'll be okay."

So on he went — live — but at the end he repeated "kookies."

The staff gasped. There was an awkward pause. Then the Babe growled — for all the country to hear: "I'm a SOB if I didn't say 'kookies' again."

Besides the "Jack Armstrong" show, the cereal also sponsored widespread radio baseball broadcasts, starting with one station, WCCO in Minneapolis, in 1937 and spreading in a few years to 95 stations in various major league and minor league cities.

Red Barber, later renowned as "Voice of the Dodgers," first broadcast with the Cincinnati Reds in the early 1930s.

Although scores of the nation's sports celebrities were used for endorsements, Bob Richards had the longest exposure as official spokesman — 13 years, from 1958 to 1970.

The last athlete to be pictured on a Wheaties box was Bruce Jenner, 1976 Olympic decathlon winner. A San Francisco district attorney took up a consumer complaint that it was false advertising, that Jenner really didn't eat Wheaties, after all.

GOLDEN OLDIE ON THE RADIO — Des Moines radio broadcaster Ronald Reagan is ready at the microphone at "WHO" in 1937. That was the year Wheaties had a contest for the best baseball broadcaster in the Midwest.

Reagan won. His prize was a trip to Hollywood. Reagan went, stayed and later became the President of the United States.

Drugs jeopardize Medich's career

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Former New York Yankees pitcher Dr. George "Doc" Medich, arrested for writing illegal prescriptions, won't return to his full practice until he kicks his drug dependency, according to officials at Children's Hospital.

Medich, 34, who spent 11 years in professional baseball, was arrested this week for improperly writing prescriptions for pain killers and muscle relaxants. A Children's Hospital official announced Wednesday that Medich is being treated for a drug dependency.

Since July 1, Medich, a former pitcher for the Yankees, Pittsburgh Pirates and Texas Rangers, has been working in the residency program at Children's Hospital as part of a five-year specialization in orthopedic surgery at the University of Pittsburgh Health Center. Hospital officials said they learned of his drug habit only last week.

"We saw to it he immediately underwent medical care and observation," said Dr. William F. Donaldson, medical director at Children's.

"Until we can be assured by the people who are caring for him that he is not under medication, he will not go into the operating room. (But) he is still seeing patients," Donaldson said. "As far as I'm concerned, he was handling his residency very well. He's such a fine person, and he's a good doctor."

"The appropriate way for us to look upon it (the drug problem) is an illness. When the people treating him indicate he is OK, he will go back to his regular duties."

Medich, however, sees both his license to practice medicine and his new career in jeopardy. He also risks the possibility of one year in jail and a $5,000 fine for each of the seven prescriptions he is charged with writing.

Also winning awards were Sissy Doss of Big Spring, third in breakaway roping; Karen Salter, a freshman from Palmer, Texas, sixth in barrel racing; and Suzanne Hart, a freshman from Gruver, Texas, second in barrel racing.

The team currently ranks third in the Southwest Region with Sul Ross University and Western Texas College ranked first and second.

State Capitol get fire scare

AUSTIN (AP) — Capitol employees had another fire scare today when Austin fire trucks rushed to the pink granite building.

Marvin Erickson, department operations chief, said the brief blaze, accompanied by considerable smoke, came from an electrical motor in a basement atticway above the Senate supply room.

He said there was some smoke damage but nobody was hurt.

CHILDRESS (AP) — A 42-year-old pilot injured when his plane crashed while trying to land on an unlighted runway remained in stable condition today, a spokesman at Childress General Hospital said.

John Hopson Malone, 42, was in the intensive care unit, officials said.

The crash, which took place about 7 p.m., killed a passenger, identified as W.M. Hoffman of Independence, Mo., according to a spokesman for the Childress County sheriff's office.

The pilot radioed the tower of the Childress airport and said he needed to make an emergency landing for fuel, despite the fact that the runway lights were out of service, investigators said.

The private plane crashed after circling the airport three times, officials said.

Studies disagree as to coffee-heart disease link

BOSTON (AP) — Three new studies dispute a controversial report that linked coffee and heart disease, but two others suggest there may still be cause for concern about the morning brew.

The five studies, all being published Thursday, fail to resolve doubts about the safety of coffee. But one researcher said people who drink ordinary amounts should not be worried.

Norwegian researchers reported in June they had found that heavy coffee drinkers have 14 percent more cholesterol in their blood than do people who shun it. Cholesterol buildup leads to hardening of the arteries, and the scientists said coffee drinking could at least double the risk of heart disease.

To check the results, five teams around the world analyzed the results of large population studies. Three found no link between coffee and cholesterol. One found that coffee raises cholesterol only in young people, and the fifth suggested it does this only in women.

The five reviews were published in the New England Journal of Medicine, along with a rebuttal from Dr. Dag S. Thelle and colleagues from the University of Tromso, who conducted the original study.

The Norwegians said differences in the way coffee is brewed in Norway could explain the conflicting findings, saying followup studies should be done in places with a "coffee culture" similar to that of Norway, where people drink lots of boiled black coffee and shun decaffeinated coffee.

Among those who exonerated coffee was Dr. Richard B. Shekelle of Rush Medical College in Chicago. His analysis of the coffee-drinking habits of 1,900 middle-aged men found no relation between coffee and cholesterol.

"As far as serum cholesterol goes, I know of no reason for people in the United States who consume coffee in customary amounts to be concerned," he said in an interview.

Dr. Albert Hofman and others from Erasmus University Medical School in Rotterdam looked at data gathered from 10,532 people in The Netherlands. They also could not confirm the link.

"We have no explanation for the discrepancy between our findings and those of the Norwegian group," they wrote, "but we are hesitant to accept coffee consumption as a major determinant of cholesterol levels."

A similar review of data from 5,098 people, conducted by Dr. Mary Grace Kovar and others from the National Center for Health Statistics in Hyattsville, Md., also found no evidence of an association between coffee and cholesterol.

Two other groups, one in West Germany and the other in Australia, partially confirmed the Norwegian findings.

At the Clinical Institute for Heart Attack Research at the Medical University Clinic in Heidelberg, Dr. Lenore Arab and others looked at coffee and cholesterol in 387 people in their late teens and early 20s and 383 in their late 60s and early 70s.

Although there was "absolutely no hint of a trend" among the elderly, the researchers found a correlation similar to the Norwegians' among the young people.

In the Australian study, Megan Shirlow and Colin Mathers of the University of Sydney looked at total caffeine consumption — tea, cola and chocolate as well as coffee — in 4,757 people. They found a link between caffeine intake and cholesterol in women but not in men.

Infertility treatment questioned

BOSTON (AP) — Many couples who seek medical care for infertility eventually achieve pregnancy — but not necessarily because of their doctors' treatment, a study shows.

The survey found that 31 percent of all pregnancies among couples who received treatment occurred so long afterward that they were probably not helped by the medical care.

The doctors surveyed 1,145 infertile couples, half of whom received treatment and half who did not. They concluded: "Even among couples with infertility of more than three years' duration, over half the pregnancies occurred independently of treatment."

The study was directed by Dr. John A. Collins of Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

During a followup ranging from two to seven years, pregnancy occurred in 41 percent of the treated couples and 35 percent of the untreated couples. However, among the treated couples, 31 percent of the pregnancies occurred at least three months after the last treatment or a year after surgery.
