County attorney reprimanded

Miller's use of hot check fund called improper

By KEELY COGHLAN Staff Writer

Howard County Attorney Bob Miller Wednesday told reporters he repaid more than $1,800 of fees in the hot check collection fund administered by his office after the state Prosecutor's Council publicly reprimanded him for spending the money improperly

The council further found, however, that "there was no evidence of criminal intent on my part," Miller said.

Miller said he appeared in a formal hearing conducted by the council in Austin, which for several months has been investigating charges that Miller improperly used fees collected from hot check writers who paid restitution through the county attorney's collection office.

Questions arose over the use of the hot check fund, which is not collected from taxes, to buy his employees gold pins, to pay for an office party, to pay for Miller's Dale Carnegie class, to purchase tickets for the governor's inaugural ball and to pay the costs of a seminar he conducted.

According to Miller, the council informed his lawyer, R.H. Weaver, that it found he had misspent $1,849.98 out of more than $72,000 in fees his office had collected. The council also found that his office had collected more than $350,000 in restitution since it began the opera-

Miller said he already has repaid the money to the fund.

"In my interview with the Prosecutor's Council, I informed the council that if, in the opinion of the council I had used the funds in a manner not authorized, I would want to reimburse the hot check fund for such expenditure, and consequently I have already reimbursed the hot check fund in the amount of $1,849.98," Miller said in a prepared statement.

The action taken by the Prosecutor's Council is serious, a local attorney said.

"A public reprimand is serious," the attorney said. "It is not a slap on the wrist. That's a private reprimand.'

Miller has said he was operating expenditures from the fund according to a statute establishing the hot check fund, Article 5308 of the Code of Criminal Procedures

According to the statute, which Miller and other attorneys and public officials have termed vague, 'expenditures from this fund shall be at the sole discretion of the attorney, and may be used only to defray the salaries and expenses of the prosecutor's office, but may not supplement his or her own salaries, expenses or allowances.

The council did not find that Miller violated the statute, but rather an article of the state constitution

Student plays present Thanksgiving meaning

By CAROL BALDWIN Staff Writer

Pilgrims, Indians and turkeys took to the stage Tuesday and Wednesday at St. Mary's Episcopal School and Lakeview Kindergarten as students presented Thanksgiving plays Students in the fourth and fifth grades at St. Mary's performed under the direction of Irene Sanchez. The play dealt with the true meaning of Thanksgiving and the children, dressed as slaves, Pilgrims and royalty, told the audience "what

Thanksgiving is really all about.' The students relived history through several songs chosen by Mrs. Sanchez, music teacher at St. Mary's. Puritans dressed in traditional garb set sail for America on a ship drawn by students. And a group of children dressed as slaves sang "It's a great morning, your first day in heaven," a song which brought home the meaning of freedom. Mrs. Sanchez told parents and friends assembled "We can't ask for anything better than the country we live in. We truly are a blessed people."

Mrs. Sanchez said she and her students began work on the program in September. Parents helped by making each child's costume.

The group consulted history books to gather an American chronology to present to the audience, and they used songs to illustrate most of their ideas.

Kindergarten students at Lakeview Elementary spent about three weeks preparing their tribute to Thanksgiving and showed parents and fellow students results of their work in the school gym. The bilingual classes of Mrs. Cruz Martinez and

Mrs. Cindy Schaffer presented songs and fingerplays in English and Spanish about traditional Thanksgiving figures.

Students from the classes of Mrs. Elmira Forman and Mrs. Jessye Myles highlighted the life of the turkey and "some of his escapades in trying not to be the guest of honor at the Thanksgiving dinner.' said Ruth Nanny, a kindergarten teacher.

And Mrs. Nanny's class, coupled with Mrs. Bernice Daniels' class, told the story of the first Thanksgiving, how the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock and why they wanted to come to America.

The students wore a variety of costumes which their parents and teachers had helped them with. Put many of the touches were their own. Mrs. Myles See Plays page 2-A railroads not flawed WASHINGTON (AP) - A top Federal Railroad administration official says that a recent rash of railroad accidents in the South and Southwest does not reflect "some fundamental flaw" in railroad operations there. Five railroad accidents have occurred in Texas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Oklahoma since November 12, claiming nine lives, according to transportation officials. Tom Till, deputy railroad administrator, said the five accidents were "isolated instances" and 'there's no generic or systemic problem behind this." John H. Riley, the agency administator, visited Houston Tuesday to ensure that the accidents are thoroughly investigated, transportation officials said. He was accompanied by Joe Walsh, associate administrator for safety.

Till said Riley visited Houston "to make sure that we get enough resources into the region" to investigate the accidents.

"We may end up transferring some resources in from other regions," he said.

"These accidents demand our immediate and thorough attention, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said in a statement. "Our goal is to determine as quickly as possible what caused these accidents to

"My chief concern is for the safety not only of the traveling public by the men and women who operation America's transportation system," Mrs. Dole said.

The rash of accidents began on November 12, when an Amtrak train derailed near Marshall, Texas, killing four people. Four more were killed in Texas on November 19 when an engine hauling tankers smashed into parked freight cars at Baytown.

Other freight train accidents occurred last Wednesday near Wheland, La., killing one; last Thursday at Mountainair, N.M., and last Saturday at Wagoner, Okla., officials said

Riley arrived in Houston Monday night and was scheduled to return to Washington late Tuesday after visiting the site of the Baytown accident, officials said.

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) - The Sam Holle family's tale of two turkeys is not a Thanksgiving story, but one that is a little like the "in-laws who came for dinner" story.

Their story began in August 1982, with the acquisition of 22 day-old turkey poults for Jennifer Holle's Future Farmers of America project.

Not just any turkeys, mind you, but a special variety of broad-breasted white turkeys from Oxnard, Calif. The Holles said that in retrospect they should have been forewarned they were embarking on a different kind of turkey adventure from any that they had in the past. And they had known a bunch of turkeys over the years, Holle said.

The turkey poults were purchased through Schoeletter Farms near Houston, which in turn had arranged for the day-old birds to be shipped, airfreight, from California.

"Can you imagine driving 400 miles in one day — 200 to the airport in Houston and 200 back - just for some turkeys?" asked Kay Holle, who is at best a dubious turkey hostess.

"But," her husband explained, "these are special and expensive birds. As day-old chicks, they sell for $5 each.

Holle, a former agriculture teacher, said the time and expense involved weren't as strange as they may seem on the surface.

Youth involved in raising stock, calves, pigs or sheep to show invest large sums of money to acquire top show animals. If they are in the top 10 at the Houston Fat Stock Show, the payoff is tremendous. But so is the return for those who have one of the top 10 pens of broilers (chickens) or turkeys. Although the investment is considerable, it is nothing like that of those who invest in livestock to

"The Schoeletters' daughter had the grand champion turkeys at the Houston show a couple of years ago. They sold for $60,000," said Mrs. Holle.

The turkeys purchased for Jennifer's project were top quality, they were hardy and they suffered no disastrous event, but Jennifer and her turkeys never made it to the Houston Fat Stock Show.

Jennifer said with a faint air of disgust as she looked at the pair of 50-pound plus toms preening and strutting on the front lawn, "They got too fat!"
Holle said apologetically, "There were several things that we were supposed to do, but I didn't get it done. One, we were supposed to put the turkeys in a dark house or coop. Light, the number of hours of light that the birds get, starts the maturation process. And for another, we were told to cut back on

He defended not putting the turkeys on a diet for beauty's sake. "But I just can't cut down on an animal's food knowing it's hungry. I can't stand to see anything starving," he said.

The couple's son, Jeff, a freshman at Sulphur Springs High School, said that in March, stock show time, the birds were weighing at least 10 pounds over maximum weight. "They weighed around 38 pounds; some were up to 45 pounds.

The pair of proud, fat males apparently were not aware of it as they strutted and made mating calls, but their extra large size has another liability. They are too heavy to mate with the much smaller hens, an ironic twist of fate and genetics.

'This particular variety can only be bred with artificial insemination," Holle said, adding that they would have liked to raise some of the prized chicks.

With Jennifer's ambitions for fame and money at the Houston Fat Stock Show and her father's hopes of propagating some of the expensive premium birds both dashed by the turkeys' size, the only other use for the birds was for the table.

Even here the Holle family found it had a problem. "A 50-pound bird is more than our family of four can use. And they had become pets," Holle

Even his wife agreed that it would be a little like eating the family cats, to which the family is very

Sam was not surprised when he received a call from a "prospective buyer" who grilled him thoroughly on the use of chemicals in the birds' feed and their exposure to other "man-made

Hoping to make a sale, Holle said he assured his caller at length that his birds were free of any such harmful pollutants. "About the time the caller really had me going, he started laughing. It was a friend of mine, Billy Dan Lindley.

"Come to think of it, next time I see Lindley, I think I'll tell him that I can't sell these two because they remind me of him," he said.

The family plans to just keep the pair as pets.

The Chemical People town meetings sparked many questions from participants. Answers to those destions — provided by seven panelists — appear below. Chemical People Q & A continues tomorrow in the Herald

Today's answers are by School Superintendent

Q. What is the best procedure to handle a problem should it arise on a school bus, if you are driving and hear children discussing drugs and alcohol, and you know these children personally?

A. If children are overheard discussing their use of drugs and alcohol, their parents should be made aware of this. However, whether or not one could do this would depend on how well they knew the parents.

Q. I know someone who took drugs and that person didn't know that I knew. What should I do? The person is an adult (Question is from a child).

A. An adequate response to this question is difficult. What a child should do under this circumstance would be dependent upon the relationship of the child to the adult (parent, family member, parent of friend, etc.).

Q. Is it true that even 3rd and 4th grade students take some form of illicit chemicals?

A. Elementary age children do bring medication (external and internal) to school on occasion. Sometimes they may have tablets or capsules. School personnel are generally informed by parents when children are to be allowed to take medication

PUC relieves phone users of charge

AUSTIN (AP) — A Public Utility Commission examiner ruled Wednesday that companies offering long-distance service — and not Texas ratepayers must help Southwestern Bell recover revenues it will lose when it become an independent company.

Mary Ross McDonald's ruling means that companies such as American Telephone and Telegraph, MCI, Sprint and other long-distance providers will pay 'access charges' to Southwestern Bell.

Jim Lydon, a spokesman for Southwestern Bell in Dallas, said the company is "pleased" with the decision because it provides subsidies "to replace the long distance revenues we'll lose on Jan. 1.'

However, Southwestern Bell is "disappointed that the order didn't provide for some kind of charge to be paid by customers.

"We really feel strongly that the local service will have to recover some of those costs," said Lydon.

When the break-up of AT&T goes into effect on Jan. 1, Southwestern Bell will lose all of its interstate long distance business and about 75 percent of its profitable intrastate long distance business. Lydon said that means a loss of $3 million a day.

An attorney for MCI, one of the leading long distance companies, said he was not pleased with the ruling.

'The PUC was overly concerned with (Southwestern Bell's) welfare and not sufficiently concerned with either the welfare of the public and the benefits to the public flowing from competition or with applicable law which prohibits discriminatory rate making," Besing

Southwestern Bell initially asked for an access charge system that would force customers to come up with $249 million in additional rates. But Ms. McDonald's Wednesday interim order, which can be appealed to the full commission, places the full burden on the long distance companies

"I think this plan recognizes some of the real problems faced by all the local exchange companies as a result of divestiture," she said. "However, I don't think any state regulatory decisions can fully rectify all divestiture-related ills. A federal court ordered the divestiture of AT&T

after a decade-long antitrust battle initiated by the U.S. Department of Justice.

After 50 years of ownership, Andrew Swartz has sold the Swartz ladies wear store at 215 E. Third to Joyce and Charles Wash, who will operate the store under the name iw Charde.

Swartz will retain ownership of the building and the Swartz brand name, which he will continue to use in a Midland shop opened this fall, Mrs. Wash said Wednesday.

strongly about residents in Big Spring shopping with Big Spring merchants." Among the innovations Mrs. Wash plans for the store are small jewelry, millinery and shoe departments and the introduction of American furs. The store will continue with the same clerks and services as before, Mrs. Wash said.

Snowstorm claims 21 lives

A dawdling snowstorm blamed for 21 deaths "put its act back together" Wednesday to disrupt Thanksgiving travel with crippling snow in much of the Midwest while another big blow waited backstage on the Pacific

The same storm system that early in the week buried Rocky Mountain towns under 2 feet of snow also sent tornadoes and hurricane-force winds screaming across Dixie on Tuesday and Wednesday, splintering scores of homes and business and injuring dozens of people.

And more trouble was on the way.

Another storm hit the West Coast and travelers advisories or winter storm watches were posted over the mountains of southern Oregon, northern California and northeastern Nevada. Forecasters said the storm appeared to be a carbon copy of this week's howler and should reach the Plains by Sunday.

"It looks like it's going to be the same sort of thing, another major winter storm," said Bill Hirt of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Cities such as Minneapolis, where 5 inches was on the ground by noon Wednesday and a foot was expected, got ready for their first big icing of the season. Snow fell from eastern Minnesota and northwestern Wisconsin across Iowa and Kansas to parts of southwest Missouri and a corner of Arkansas, coming down in many places as fast as an inch an hour.

and many schools closed. The snowstorm had seemed to sputter earlier. "It had a hard time, but it put its act back together and it looks like they're going to have a real heavy snow,'

Hundreds of minor traffic accidents were reported

By Thanksgiving morning up to 15 inches of snow is expected in southwestern Minnesota, where 8 inches already had fallen in places such as Marshall. Herrington, Kan., already had half a foot, as did much of Douglas and St. Croix counties in Wisconsin.

agreed on a plan to end the Palestinian war. But thousands of panicky civilians fled to the mountains to beat a rebel deadline for Arafat to get out of the besieged city. The compromise, reported in Tripoli and Damascus, apparently is aimed at stopp-ing a full-scale invasion of Tripoli by the Syriansupported mutineers and giving the Palestine Liberation Organization leader a face-saving way to flee. In Beirut, U.S. Marines of the multinational peacekeeping YASSER ARAFAT force huddled in bunkers for two hours after receiving a threat of a car bomb attack like those that killed 239 American servicemen and 58 French soldiers last Unidentified attackers lobbed a grenade at a French army truck in Beirut but caused no damage or injuries, the French command said. In nearby mountains, Druse militiamen clashed with Lebanese army units, violating a civil-war truce.

Sporadic sniping persisted between Arafat's cornered loyalists in Tripoli and the rebels, who want to topple Arafat because they claim he has forsaken the guerrilla struggle to wrest a homeland from Israel.

The rebels advanced to the northern part of the city Arafat's office. They decreed a truce, broke it Tuesday, declared another truce and said the PLO chairman must leave by Saturday or they would go after him "in the streets.

As combatants awaited the rebel-imposed deadline, thousands of civilians crammed belongings into cars. vans and trucks and fled to relative safety outside the city of 500,000 population.

Investigators say no brake was used in Baytown wreck

HOUSTON (AP) - A federal investigator looking into the train wreck which killed four crewmen last weekend near Baytown speculates the crew may have been distracted or dozing, allowing the 13-car Southern Pacific train to slam into a line of parked freight cars.

"There are very definite indications no brakes were applied and that's very much a mystery," Thurman Toal, a safety inspector for the National Transportation Safety Board said. Toal also said Tuesday he was mystified why the crew did not properly comply with the railroad's rules and Federal Railroad Administration regulations. "They didn't stop before they hit the train," he said.

"They're supposed to proceed only as fast as they can stop within one half of the sight distance and at night that means the headlight sight distance.

Bell collects on long distance

AUSTIN - A Public Utility Commission examiner ruled Wednesday that companies offering long-distance service - and not Texas ratepayers - must help Southwestern Bell recover revenues it will lose when it become an independent company.

Mary Ross McDonald's ruling means that companies such as American Telephone and Telegraph, MCI, Sprint and other long-distance providers will pay "access charges" to Southwestern Bell.

When the break-up of AT&T goes into effect on Jan. 1, Southwestern Bell will lose all of its interstate long distance business and about 75 percent of its profitable intrastate long distance business.

When they filed a $1.36 billion rate hike case, company officials said Southwestern Bell would lose $753 million in revenue from long distance.

The company initially asked for an access charge system that would force customers to come up with $249 million in additional rates. But Ms. McDonald's Wednesday interim order, which can be appealed to the full commission, places the full burden on the long distance companies.

"I think this plan recognizes some of the real problems faced by all the local exchange companies as a result of divestiture," she said. "However, I don't think any state regulatory decisions can fully rectify all divestiture-related ills.

A federal court ordered the divestiture of AT&T after a decade-long antitrust battle initiated by the U.S. Department of Justice.

Under the McDonald order, Southwestern Bell and other local service providers in Texas must tell the commission by Dec. 15 how much worth of long distance business they expect to lose.

Southwestern Bell's loss might be adjusted when its pending $1.36 billion rate hike case is resolved in the spring, according to PUC spokeswoman Ronna

Officials with Southwestern Bell have long claimed that their long distance profits helped keep local service bills below the actual cost of providing that service. The company, in a release issued in June when the rate hike was requested, said it sought access charges to "assure a continued flow of dollars necessary to assure quality service in Texas.'

Reagan orders leak probed

WASHINGTON - President Reagan ordered an investigation two months ago into the disclosure of secret recommendations about U.S. military and diplomatic strategy in Lebanon, a top White House official confirmed today

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese said Reagan called for a probe in September after television networks broadcast stories saying that Robert C. McFarlane had recommended U.S. air strikes against Syrian positions in Lebanon to protect the U.S. Marines stationed in Beirut.

"The president felt sufficiently concerned about it to request the investigation," Meese told reporters aboard Air Force One as the president flew to California for the Thanksgiving holiday.

McFarlane, now the president's national security adviser, was Reagan's Mideast adviser at the time.

Johnny Cash hospitalized

NASHVILLE - Country singer Johnny Cash was reported in stable condition at Baptist Hospital after abdominal surgery.

"The surgery was to treat a bleeding duodenal ulcer from which Cash has been suffering for the past five years," hospital spokesman Gil Cawood said Tuesday. The 51-year-old singer's condition was apparently aggravated by a long, stressful European tour he recently completed, Cawood said.

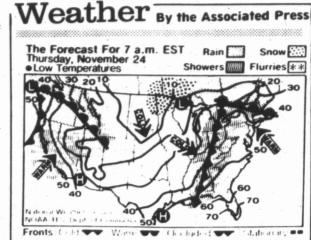

Cash is expected to be hospitalized for approximately 14 days, he said.

In February, Cash was hospitalized at Baptist briefly for pneumonia, and was in a room next to his wife, singer June Carter Cash, who had undergone abdominal surgery Among Cash's hits are "A Boy Named Sue," "A Ring of Fire" and "I Walk The Line.

A fast-moving cold front spawned high winds as it pushed through the state early Wednesday, leaving 13 people injured and damaging property across the eastern half of the state.

Mobile homes were overturned, trees were uprooted and telephone poles toppled as high winds whipped through the area.

Authorities said most of the injuries from the storms late Tuesday and early Wednesday were not

Seven people were injured in Ellis County, about 20 miles south of Dallas, late Tuesday as winds up to 80 mph damaged homes in the towns of Italy, Ennis and Bardwell, officials said.

A woman hit by wind-blown debris underwent surgery for internal injuries, said Ennis Community Hospital administrator Ronald Hudspeth, and three others hurt when a trailer home flipped over were admitted. Three other people were released after treatment for cuts and bruises, he said.

In the Kaufman County town of Red Oak, four people suffered minor injuries when either a tornado or high winds overturned a mobile home late Tuesday, authorities said.

A woman in the East Texas community of Cayuga suffered minor injuries early Wednesday when a mobile home was blown over, an Anderson County sheriff's department spokesman said. In Titus County, a man suffered cuts to his face when he was hit by wind-blown glass, a sheriff's department dispatcher said. Two mobile homes were destroyed in that county. Elementary school students in Italy had Wednes-

High winds also knocked over trees and utility posts, interrupting power and telephone service in the two counties, authorities said.

Thanksgiving toast: here's to our health

When we push away from the tables this afternoon and waddle over to our television sets, probably the farthest thing from our mind will be the general state of the nation's health — with exception perhaps of the need for a seltzer.

But a report by the American Council on Science and Health offers excellent news for a nation entwined in modern technology and lifestyles that may tend toward excess, particularly during holidays. Americans are healthier than ever,

They cite some impressive statistics in making their case. Life expectancy is 27 years longer than in 1900; infant mortality has been cut from 100 per 1,000 to fewer than 12 per 1,000; the death rate from major diseases of the heart and cancer have fallen dramatically over time.

We may live in the fast lane, there may be additions to our bodies which are questionable — food additives, pesticides, pollutants and the like - but modern medicine, technological advances and research dollars are keeping us off death's

Compare this, then, with the harsh realities of the first Thanksgiving. It was observed by the Pilgrims of Plymouth Colony in recognition of existence. The Pilgrims made it through their first year and were, quite simply, glad to be alive.

Consider that when you groan under the weight of a third helping of turkey and contemplate the years of Thanksgivings that you've either had or to which you look forward. There's everything for which to be thankful.

Evita's cadaver

WASHINGTON - When a million Peronistas rallied in Buenos Aires two nights before the recent Argentine election, they roared the loudest not for the party's presidential candidate. Italo Luder, nor the party's founder. Juan Peron. The face that dominated the posters. banners and leaflets was that of Peron's second wife, Eva. The Argentine workers still adore Evita, who has been dead for more than 30 years.

The magic of her name and the almost mystical reverence with which she is regarded by millions of Argentines — many of whom were not born when she died in 1952 were made clear in posters that proclaimed, "Eva presente" (Eva is

Her hold on the Argentine working class was once explained by the U.S. Defense Intelligence Agency this way: "Through her devotion to the urban poor, she rapidly overshadowed her husband in the eyes of the workers and the revolutionary left, and in time her image grew to personify the Peronist movement. Evita was only 33 when she died, wasted by cancer to a mere 80 pounds. Her brief life had been a remarkable one, taking her from the slums of Buenos Aires to the presidential mansion. In death, the odyssey of Evita's mortal remains was, if anything, even more fantastic.

My associate Dale Van Atta pieced together the story of Evita Peron's body during a recent visit to Buenos Aires. Her life has been romanticized in the hit musical, "Evita," but the saga of her cadaver sounds more like "Love At First Bite." Here are the bizarre details:

When Evita died at 8:25 p.m. on July 26, 1952, Peron immediately called in Dr. Pedro Ara to embalm her. Ara was a professor of anatomy who happened to be one of the Spanish embassy's cultural attaches at the time.

Millions of mourners filed by Evita's casket, and after the funeral in early August, the corpse was moved to the Confederation of Labor headquarters, where Ara set up a laboratory to continue his painstaking work.

The body remained in the labor union building for three years, while government officials worked on plans for a monument as huge as the Statute of Liberty. But when the military overthrew Peron in 1955, a lieutenant colonel and a squad of soldiers seized the building and removed the body, fearful that the Peronistas would snatch it for use as a totem to rally behind.

Concealed in a plain box, Evita's body was taken in the back of an army truck to a marine base, where the truck remained for a day before the commandant discovered its contents and nervously ordered it removed from his jurisdiction. For lack of a better destination, the truck was simply parked on a street in downtown Buenos Aires. It was Christmas Eve, but the grisly Christmas package was left unopened.

The body was next loaded into a crate marked "radio equipment" and stashed in the office of the army's information chief until it was transferred in June 1956. The crane disappeared, its whereabouts known to only a few top military

In the late 1960s, Argentine journalist Thomas Eloy Martinez learned the closely guarded secret: Evita's body had been sent to Bonn as part of an Argentine military attache's household effects and was buried either in the embassy basement or in the garden of the ambassador's residence.

Martinez and a diplomat did some digging - literally - on the embassy_property. But they wee too late. The body had already been moved and reburied under a false name in a cemetery in Milan, Italy.

After negotiations with Peron, who was living in exile in Madrid with his third wife, Isabel, Evita's body was turned over to the Perons on Sept. 23, 1971.

The coffin was usually kept in an upstairs room, though visitors sometimes saw it on the dining room table. According to one fascinating report, Peron's private secretary, Jose Lopez Rega, an astrologer and spirtualist, encouraged Isabel to lie on the coffin to soak up Evita's magic vibrations while Rega chanted incantations.

Peron returned to power in 1973, and after Isabel succeeded him the next year, she brought Evita's coffin back home and put it on display in a Buenos Aires suburb. But the magic proved non-transferrable.

A military junta overthrew Isabel in 1976 and Evita's itinerant corpse was quietly turned over to her two sisters the next year. It now lies in a family crypt in the Recoleta Cemetery in Buenos Aires.

PLO has become a common cause

Fourteen months ago, the world was keenly aware of the plight of the Palestinians. The Israeli invasion of Lebanon and the massacre of several hundred people by Phalangist soldiers in the Sabra and Shatilla refugee camps had vividly dramatized the need to provide this stateless people with a national home. Even the President of the United States, Israel's closest ally, stung Israel by endorsing a Palestinian homeland in confederation with Jordan. At last, it appeared, the Palestinians had grounds for

The picture today is much different. The U.S. plan for a solution to the Palestinian problem has been dropped. The Reagan administration is taking steps to forge a closer political and strategic alliance with Israel. The construction of settlements on the West Bank has continued, thus making Israel's occupation practically irreversible. The Palestine Liberation Organization and its leader, Yasser Arafat, appear to be on the verge of oblivion. The question of what to do with the Palestinians has been forgotten.

It has not, however, gone away. In a century which has enshrined (if not always honored) the right of distinct peoples to self-rule, the Palestinians remain a most glaring exception. That principle was the basis for a Jewish state. But its denial is now the chief premise for the Jewish state's treatment of the other claimants to Palestine

The Palestinians' misfortune is that their claims conflict wit the narrower interests of so many other parties. Israel bitterly opposes any accommodation, which would require it to give up land conquered in the 1967 war. The United States, though not entirely unsympathetic to Palestinian demands, has no stomach for trying to force a solution on one of its most valued military allies. The Arab nations, preoccupied with concerns more pressing than Palestinian nationalism, are no help either.

By contrast, postwar Zionism served the interests of others besides the Jews. At minimal cost, it rid the British of the troublesome Jews who had emigrated to Palestine. It eased the guilty conscience of the West, which had failed to prevent the Holocaust. It spared other nations the obligation to accept large numbers of Jewish refugees from the liberated portions of Europe. It gave the Truman administration a chance to win the electoral support of American

A Palesltinian state is unlikely even though deserved - because the only people who stand to gain are the Palestinians. Being powerless as well as unloved, they have no leverage. Moreover, they are faced with an opponent, namely Israel, which is both powerful and Israel's friends blame the Palestinians themselves for their lot. By denying Israel's right to exist and by turning to terrorism, it is said, they sacrificed any claim on the world's conscience. But the harsh truth is that if the Palestine Liberation Organization had not been willing to kill people to capture attention, the fate of the Palestinians would hardly have been noticed. Even the Arab countries ignored their demand for a homeland until 1974. The PLO learned something from the success of the Zionists, who relied as much on terrorism as on mankind's better impulses.

Terrorism and recognition of Israel are not the obstacle to a just settlement. Successive Israeli governments have declared their refusal to negotiate with the PLO under any circumstances whatsoever. They have unequivocally rejected any kind of Palestinian entity on the West Bank. They have declined to negotiate with Arabs in the territories on any topic more substantial than garbage collection.

Whenever the PLO or any Arab group has endorsed a two-state solution to the problem - which would mean granting Israel's right to exist - Israel has hastened to reject it out of hand. Why should the Arab nations or the Palestinians negotiate as long as Israel decrees all important issues to be nonnegotiable?

In the Middle East, as recent events show, the only right lies in might. Syria has managed to all but liquidate the last vestige of an independent PLO, the only representative accepted by Palestinians. Israel has continued to repress dissent in the occupied territories, while hoping for the emergence of "moderate" Palestinians resigned to permanent subordination.

Thus Arabs and Israelis have found a common purpose: extinguishing Palestinian nationalism. At the very least they have managed to stave it off for a while. For the time being, and perhaps for good, the Palestinians and their problems have been dispjosed of. That may make for peace and quiet, but it offers no cause for

ABC's "The Day After" made quite an impression Sunday night. While sports writers typed out their stories on the Dallas-Kansas City game in the pressbox at Texas Stadium, a television set in the lounge area brought nuclear horror to the laps of its viewers. It seemed the appropriate place to be. After all, the Chiefs have just played the Cowboys and on the TV screen their home town is getting wiped out by nuclear warheads from the USSR. Joked one member of the Kansas City media corps to another, "Hell, we got nuked here today by the Cowboys and now we're getting nuked at home. It's been a long season, huh?' Adding to the irony was the scene from the made-for-TV film which showed U.S. missiles blasting out of corn silos over the horizon of a football stadium. The action came to a standstill as fans, players and the like gaped at the spectacle.

Surely nothing short of a nuclear attack would stop a football game. Well, perhaps a dirigible similar to the one which crashed into a stadium in "Black Sunday."

That sums up many American views of nuclear war. Like the fans at the stadium, life will go on in the shadow of total destruction until we see the weapons exploding around

Some have debated whether ABC's showing of "The Day After" was educational or propaganda Does it matter? The fact is the movie depicted how hopeless our situation is should nuclear war be-

Should you be lucky enough to escape the explosion by finding an underground shelter, how is life after the fact defined? As we saw in the film, surviving a nuclear explo sion is hardly a joy. What's left behind is hardly worth living for. After watching the movie, I had only one thought. Nuclear war must be avoided. Period.

"The Day After" served its point. The Texas Stadium pressbox is normally an animated place after the writers complete their assignments. The bar is open and bowls of popcorn grace each table. Writers who seldom see each other take the opportunity to swap stories and extinguish a drink or two.

Sunday night, the lounge quieted for four minutes when the graphic destruction of human life and a major Midwestern city filled the screen.

Vern Lundquist, the voice of the Dallas Cowboys radio network, usually captivates a large table of people with his humor. But even Lundquist took a backseat to "The Day After" as his following turned their attention to the screen.

What they saw were nuclear winds crushing buildings, radiation seering through bodies and a beautiful part of our country turned into the surface of Mars. How much of a lasting impact the movie made is not known, but for a few minutes everyone in the room was studying the effects of the ultimate horror. Nuclear war is out of our hands.

The buttons lie in the hands of our military and the decisions to push them in the minds of our government officials. I don't think we would be the first to push the button; I've got to believe our society has raised its populous with a greater regard for life.

But what about the Russians, the Chinese, the Indians? Who's to say what kind of people over there can push the button or order it pushed?

We need to show a film like "The Day After" overseas. That's impossible, I realize, but I bet the citizens of those countries don't know what kind of power their governments hold. If they did, perhaps Vladimir Gustov, Hjang Ching Cho or Ali Hjah Majal might be just a little hesitant to press the button.

There hasn't been a nuclear attack since the U.S. dropped the bomb on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. That attack is ancient history. Never will one of two bombs be dropped again. The next time nuclear warheads are released, the world is in for big trouble.

Today is Thanksgiving Day. I am thankful that nothing such as "The Day After" has happened yet, at least not in our country. I think we are safe from this happening just yet although the hotbeds in the Middle East and South America cause daily anxiety. I didn't particularly enjoy watching "The Day After," but I'm glad it was just a movie and my end is not watching it happen for FBI agents discount Brown's story, although they admit Coffelt ranks "in the top 20" among 933 Cooper candidates they have developed over the years.

Brown contends that the FBI has ignored the Coffelt theory because Coffelt spent half of his adult life in prison, the other half in grey areas working for the government.

Cooper has been something of a romantic hero to the public since he tied a sack of money around his waist, strapped parachutes to his chest and back and plunged off the rear stairway of Northwest Airlines Flight 305 on

The incident remains America's only unsolved hijacking.

It began in the twilight hours at Portland International Airport when a man listed on the manifest as Dan Cooper boarded the Boeing 727 with 36 other passengers and a crew of six.

Brown, writing in this month's issue of The Las Vegan magazine, said the craft was only one-third full on the busy holiday eve because Coffelt had made numerous reservations, knowing the no-shows would leave the back of the plane empty for him.

As 305 began its 30-minute hop to Seattle, Cooper gave stewardess Florence Schaffner a note saying he had a bomb in his attache. He demanded $200,000 and four parachutes. She rode next to the hijacker on the brief flight and has said 1954 prison photos of Coffelt, plus later photos taken by Brown, bear a striking resemblance to the man.

Seattle lawyer George LeBissoniere sat three rows from Cooper. He said Coffelt's pictures were "the closest thing I'd ever seen" to the mystery man on Flight 305.

Both had viewed scores of FBI photos in the weeks following the hijacking.

"It saddens me to observe lawyers whom I have known for years ... inflate like bullfrogs the moment

they take their place on the bench," says Justice Jim

"I have never been able to understand how the administration of justice is enhanced by barristers and starched collar, putting on a little bib, enclosing the torso in a vest, then adding a knee-length gown

resembling a dress and garnishing it all with a dandy's

D.B. COOPER REMEMBERED — A dozen years ago this Thanksgiving, D.B. Cooper laden with two parachutes and $200,000 inched his way down the rear stairway of a 727 jet and plunged into the Oregon skies and the history

Retired FBI agent Ralph Himmelsbach of Portland, who spent thousands of hours in pursuit of Cooper, recounted what happened next

"I think he wanted to get out of the plane as soon as it took off, as soon as the plane was high enough to jump," he said. "But he had trouble getting the stairway open. He had to get Tina to help him. Then he was looking out in the dark, the wind blowing like Billy Hell. It took a lot of time to work up his guts.

It took 35 minutes, in fact, for Cooper to depart the craft.

According to Brown, Coffelt recounted to him that as he descended the rear staircase in cold, blinding rain, turbulence jolted the plane and pitched him off before he could sight a beacon marking the location of a waiting

Coffelt talked of tumbling through the stormy sky, trying frantically to open a faulty parachute on his back, then dropping the money as he grabbed for a chute on his chest, Himmelsbach said one of the four chutes was sewn up and given to the hijacker by accident. He denied claims the faulty chute was designed to foil the hijacker, emphasizing that authorities had feared Cooper planned to take a hostage with him.

"We don't have the right to sentence someone to death," the retired agent said.

Coffelt told Brown he crashed to the ground in a canyon miles from his planned landing spot, severely injuring his legs. He was eventually able to rendezvous with his unidentified partner, but neither he, his partner, the Browns nor an army of authorities ever found

Some $5,000 in bills with serial numbers matching those on the money given to Cooper was found on a sand bar near Vancouver, Wash., in February 1980, but the remainder is believed to be moldering in the rugged Cascade Mountain foothills.

Himmelsbach said years of searching for Dan Cooper — who was mistakenly dubbed D.B. when a reporter wrote a story using hearsay information from police - had convinced him Cooper was "a loser, an ex-con who was reaching the end of his string.'

The description fits Coffelt, who was born in Joplin, Mo., in 1916, raised in Picher, Okla., sentenced to a reformatory when he was 15, winding up in federal penitentiaries in Atlanta and Leavenworth.

After leaving Leavenworth he attended the University of Kansas at Lawrence, then lived in Lawrence off and on afterwards.

Robert Hoyt, a Lawrence resident and technical writer for the CIA, said he knew Coffelt for years.

NEW YORK (AP) — A private detective who faked his own death to collect life insurance was sentenced Wednesday to 31/2 years in prison and his wife, who filed the claims, was ordered to serve six months.

Robert Granberg, 51, told a federal judge that responsibility for the scheme lay with himself and not his wife, Judith Brent, 41.

Miss Brent had filed for $600,000 in insurance benefits after her husband faked his drowning death on a fishing trip off the New Jersey shore on July 27, 1981.

Miss Brent, who had changed her name from Judith Granberg, had gotten Staten Island Surrogate Court to declare her husband legally dead. She collected about $200,000 in insurance benefits and had filed suit against a company that refused to pay. Granberg hid out for two years, spending part of the time in London and occasionally meeting his wife. The couple was arrested last summer in New Windsor, N.Y., by state police tipped off by an insurance investigator.

U.S. District Judge Robert W. Sweet ordered Granberg to pay back the insurance money and called the fraud "a curious, cynical and calculated crime.

Noting that the unusual case got nationwide publicity, Sweet said a prison term was imposed "to send some kind of signal" to deter insurance fraud.

Granberg's attorney, Ivan S. Fisher, has said the insurance companies recovered most of the money. He said Granberg has $160,000 in assets to repay if the insurance companies can agree on how to divide it.

Fisher said Granberg, a licensed private investigator who worked for New York state agencies, is remorseful. "I think he was sorry about six months after he did it," he said. "It's the kind of thing, you can't go home again.

He said his client launched the scheme after the defendants were frustrated by their inability to get worker's compensation from about the FBI. I don't know that he was ever seriously involved with them, but they knew every time he came to town.

Coffelt bragged of working with the FBI and CIA and flashed FBI identification, according to both Brown and Hoyt.

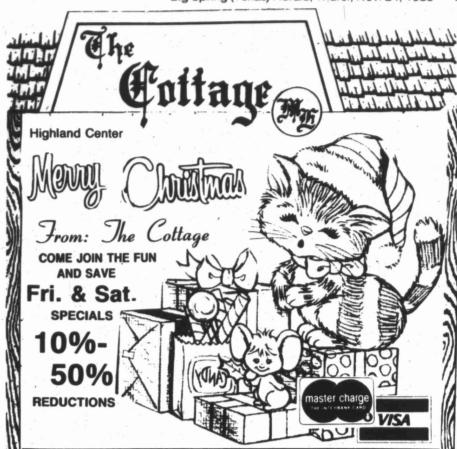

In Portland, Ore., FBI agent Dorwin Schreuder said last week that he had "heard of Coffelt's alleged participation" in the hijacking through Brown's work but when asked whether Coffelt had ever worked for the agency replied, "The FBI never comments on the use of its informants one way or another."

Reached in Hawaii where her husband died of a heart attack in 1976, Tave Coffelt refused to discuss his past.

Robert L. Dobbs, a Memphis attorney who had represented Coffelt, said the ex-con had claimed to do undercover work for the FBI. He said Coffelt once boasted, "With my reputation I can get in with any criminal that they might want to check on.

Dobbs said he knew Coffelt had been in Portland shortly before the hijacking. Could his client have been the elusive Cooper?

"He was the type of person who wanted to do something daring and original before he left this earth," Dobbs responded. "He'd come up with the spectacular, that's for

Dinosaur remains found near Lubbock

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new type of dinosaur, an early mammal-like creature and the earliest snake discovered on the North American continent are among the finds at a Texas archeological site, the National Geographic Society disclosed today.

The fossils were discovered in a quarry southeast of Lubbock by a field party from Texas Tech University headed by Dr. Sankar Chatterjee.

Chatterjee speculated that the animals were drowned in a flash flood 200 million years ago, the mud preserving their bones.

The new type of dinosaur was identified from a piece of jaw and teeth. It was a plant-eating creature about four feet tall that ran on its hind legs to escape predators, according to the society report.

It was the earliest form of ornithischianm, or "birdhipped" dinosaur to be found, according to Chatterjee. Named for their pelvic bone structure, the type later developed into large, lumbering creatures with horns and plates for protection.

The one found by Chatterjee's group is of a type never seen before.

Also found was the a shrew or mouse-like creature called ictidosaur, which has some features resembling a mammal and others that seem more like those of a reptile. These little animals are related to modern mammals and played a role in evolution, Chatterjee

Chatteriee said he also believes he has found the reptile ancestor of Tyrannosaurus Rex, the giant flesheating dinosaur. This ancestor, Postosuchus, was 13 feet long, weighed 600 pounds, and looked like a miniature Tyrannosaurus.

The group found the skeleton of a young Postosuchus and several juveniles, leading to speculation that they hunted in packs.

The group also found the skull of the earliest known snake. The flexible jaw and sharp teeth resemble those of contemporary non-poisonous snakes, and scientists hope the find will help them learn more about the evolution of snakes.

And the skeleton of a land-lizard similar to the modern iguana was also uncovered. This, Chatterjee said, may represent the main stock from which modern lizards developed.

Cosmas Raimondi, a priest who lost his car to the Internal Revenue Service for refusing to pay half his taxes in protest

PROTESTING PRIEST — Father over U.S. military intervention in Central America, blesses parishioner Zola Burtzo, a patient in St. Francis Hospital in

Priest protests military moves by holding taxes

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The federal government has taken the Rev. Cosmas Raimondi's car, but the young Roman Catholic pastor remains driven.

His supportive parishioners make sure he gets around, and he still refuses to pay taxes to support the military. Raimondi said three or four families who attend Holy Cross Church on the city's poor near east side offered to loan him an auto permanently. "I'm beginning to wonder why I even had a car," he said.

Raimondi, an Indianapolis native known as "Father Cos" to parish schoolchildren, has withheld half his federal income taxes since 1982 to protest U.S. military intervention in Central America, the nuclear arms race and draft

Earlier this month, the Internal Revenue Service put a lien of $604.18 -the amount he owed plus interest against his salary and seized his 1980 Hon da Civic when his parish council refused to pay the amount

The car was valued at $2,500, and Raimondi is to receive the difference between that amount and what he owed.

Raimondi says he will respond by taking a pay cut to reduce his taxes or avoid having any taxable income that can be used for purposes he doesn't support.

He now earns $545 a month, plus a monthly stipend of up to $70.

Lack of a car has not hampered his duties. Raimondi said this week at his church, where parishioners were putting donated Thanksgiving food for the poor into 550 boxes lined up in the pews.

"I think it is a protest when you give and organize for the poor," Raimondi said. "It is showing what is happening to people's lives because we don't have enough in our budget to take care of

In contrast, he said, money spent on the military is "sinful."

Loss of a car has made him thankful for his friends and parishioners. About a dozen have loaned him theirs at one time or another, and three or four have offered to lend him their third family car permanently.

"I've not had to ask one person," he

Three people walked out of Mass in protest, and haven't returned, when Raimondi announced to the parish's 179 families that he wasn't going to pay his taxes.

His pastoral assistant, John Girard, 23, said the church has gained more parishioners than it lost, although he cannot say how many

Parishioner Mark Scott, 38, said weekly collections have increased about $200

While young and old in his parish have supported him, Raimondi said the 40- to 50-year-old age group has had difficulty understanding his political views.

"I think it's harder for them because they come from the age of peace through strength which was all fine and dandy in World War II," he said. "We have to learn how to deal more efficiently with the Soviet Union.'

The priest said he believes that "by and large, a lot of people are not happy with our government's defense policies.

Before withholding taxes, Raimondi said he protested by going to peace marches, organizing prayer services on behalf of the people of Nicaragua and El Salvador, and writing Congress. He even met with Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., to discuss U.S. military policies.

No food available for Houston needy

HOUSTON (AP) - Two major Houstonarea food programs are not dispensing Thanksgiving holiday food baskets because their food supplies are nearly exhausted.

"It's going to be a depressing holiday season for a lot of people," says Rina Rosenberg, director of Metropolitan Ministries, a non-profit agency.

More than 2,000 poor families picked up packages of canned goods last Thanksgiving

Another 1,000 people were served last year by Living Word Outreach, a church-run organization. But there will be no such pro-gram this year, said John Counts, pastor of Living Word.

"If somebody's really starving, we'll find a way to feed them," Counts said. "But if you're looking for a Thanksgiving basket, I don't know where to send them.

Both Counts and Ms. Rosenberg said that despite recent improvements in the Houstonarea unemployment rate - now 8.1 percent, down from 10.1 percent in September — the rate of people seeking emergency food supplies remains high.

As a result, they say, food supplies are

Counts blames the shortages on cuts in the government free cheese program and a decline in donations

Through October, Ms. Rosenberg said Metropolitan Ministries had given more than 31,000 people a three-day emergency food supply. During all of 1982, the agency handled 20,000 people, she said.

Of the 75 groups handing out food, 14 reported bare pantries forced them to turn away people, she said. Counts said the food supply crisis has forced his agency to abandon its traditional open-door policy of serving anyone. Living Word now is screening applicants, requiring them to show financial hardship.

"We started finding out that a lot of these families were going from one pantry to another," he said. "We have to be selective."

Counts is hopeful his agency will be in better shape by Christmas and should be able to offer food packages then. But Ms. Rosenberg said Metropolitan Ministries is not as

"We'll have a hard time just keeping up with the daily emergency requests," she said. "We don't know why, but we always seem to get a lot more people who end up broke this time of year. You get desperate people and you don't know what to tell them.

The Assembly of the Academic Senate for the nine campuses of the university will be given a proposal Nov. 30 that would condemn sex between students and teachers as "unprofessional."

The proposal was written by Richard Abrams, a history professor at the Berkeley campus, and approved by a faculty committee.

Abrams admits enforcement would be difficult, but he said he hopes "professionals will behave as professionals" and the idea will be enforced through "moral

The proposal states that it is the policy of the Academic Senate that sexual relationships between teachers and students should be regarded as unprofessional.

It does not suggest that love relationships be monitored or propose a penalty for violations.

Abrams said "mutual attraction between student and faculty" is "a natural sort of thing." But the report said teachers give grades to students and the issue of sexual harassment must be addressed.

"I have many friends who have married their students," he said. But, "we think that it's inappropriate for such relationships to begin from the classroom.

Berkeley student Annie Athon, 21, a senior majoring in English and French, called the proposal "futile."
"It's a very subjective issue," she said. "Even if laws or boundaries are set, I don't think anybody can actually say, 'What exactly is the status of your relationship? Are you meeting for coffee? Are you sleeping

"I myself have had problems in this area," said student Francesca Kuglen, 22, a senior majoring in ethnic studies. "I've had professors overtly and covertly (make) invitations and suggestions ... the same with TAs (teaching assistants).

Ralph Turner, the chairman of the assembly and a sociology professor at UCLA, called the ban proposal a

"I think to establish where there is a need would require some kind of careful research," Turner said. It's more of an appeal to consciousness than anything

Turner said support within the professional community could make "the real difference" in whether such a proposal is effective.

"I certainly haven't had students coming in and complaining to me about faculty members," he said. "All I know is what I would pick up by hearsay in my particular circle. And that is no basis on which to generalize about the need."

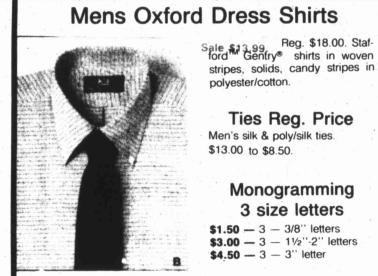

Ray Colvig, a spokesman for Berkeley, said the committee report suggests a teacher-student sexual relationship can "seriously compromise" the relationship of those involved and "impair the educational

It also can give rise to charges of discrimination by students who feel academically slighted by their counterpart's love situation and may "prejudice the faculty member's defense in the event that sexual harassment charges arise from such a relationship."

Dear Abby

Gather your blessings

DEAR READERS: By popular demand, here is my traditional Thanksgiving column:

On this Thanksgiving Day, take few minutes to think about what you have to be thankful for.

How's your health? Not so good? Well, thank God you've lived this long. A lot of people haven't. You're hurting? Thousands — maybe millions are hurting more. (Have you ever visited a veterans' hospital? Or a rehabilitation clinic for crippled children?)

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal cords to utter human sounds, walk to the breakfast table on two good legs and read the newspaper with two good eyes, praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't.

How's your pocketbook? Thin? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. In fact, one-third of the people in the world will go to bed hungry tonight.

Are you lonely? The way to have a friend is to be one. If nobody calls you, call someone. Go out of your way to do something nice for somebody. It's a sure cure for

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern. Concern for fair play under the law. Your country may not be a rose garden, but it also is not a patch of weeds.

Freedom rings! Look and listen. You can still worship at the church of your choice, cast a secret ballot

Mumps-testicle connection overblown

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: DEAR DR. DONOHUE: drinker, but would like to A lady friend wants me to write to ask you the following: She has a friend, now in Eastern Europe, who wants to know about his condition. As a youth, he got a good hard case of mumps, and from that got infection and enlargement of his testicles. Now he is about 40 and wants to know can it be obtained? — J.S. if he can father a child. She will be glad to get your reply. - A.S.P. The inordinate fear of testicular involvement in a mean for you to jump to the mumps infection ignores the actual facts of the mat- miraculous treatment for ter. First of all, testicular damage from mumps, when it does occur, does so only in men beyond puberty. A child, prior to puberty, will not have serious testicle damage from the mumps virus. After puberty, if a male happens to get mumps the testicles will be There's a possibility of affected in only two or three cases out of 10. both testicles are infected,

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: had bleeding hemorrhoids. I went to a surgeon and he suggested surgery, which I wasn't able to have at that time. He told me to start taking Metamucil with water every night. I finally had the operation, and he told me to stop taking the Metamucil in about two weeks. When I did, I had constipation problems. So I started taking it again. I wonder now if Metamucil is habit-forming. Is it? -P.R.K.

Metamucil is not habit forming, not even in the sense that your bowels become dependent on it, as with regular laxatives. Metamucil is just a form of dietary fiber derived from the husk of the psyllium seed. While you may not need the medicine, you very likely do still require some form of fiber. There are other ways to get it bran, fresh fruits, vegetables, unprocessed cereals and grains, for examples.

The use of Metamucil will not cause problems, now or later. Everyone needs a certain amount of fiber for the moisture it draws into the digestive tract. In that sense we are all "dependent" on fiber. The booklet "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids' discusses this. Other readers may order a copy by writing me care of the Big Sprinig Herald, enclosing a stamped, selfaddressed envelope and one dollar.

After reading your article concerning gallstones recently, I have a couple of questions. Doesn't the chenodeoxycholic acid have dangers for the liver? Can you give me some details about how it is taken, how often? How much does it cost? Where chenodoxycholic acid is Chenix. It is a gallstonedissolving drug that has to be prescribed. But I didn't conclusion that this is a all gallstones. Keep these facts in mind: It works best for particular kinds of gallstones, those that are small and contain little calcium. The drug does have to be used for a long time, up to two years for it stone recurrence after it has been stopped. And yes, it may cause liver damage. even though that happens only rarely. Your liver's status is checked through blood tests while you are taking the drug. It may cause diarrhea. And in a very few patients, the white blood cell count has been known to drop.

It is an option for patients who cannot endure conventional surgery for stone removal. The medicine is taken twice a day, the amount depending on the person's body weight. I can't tell you the cost, but your druggist can. The medicine represents a valuable option, not a miracle cure.

FOR P.V.M. - The woman should wait at least three months after getting rubella vacine before becoming pregnant, and of course she should never have it while pregnant. Immediately following her normal menstruation is a good time to get it.

Attorney says he kept son in cage because of psychologist's advice

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) A St. Louis attorney said Wednesday that he and his wife were acting on the advice of a psychologist when they kept their adopted 13-year-old son confined to a playhouse in the basement of their home.

Howard K. Munson, 37, denied police allegations of child abuse and said that he and his wife, Margorie, 35, were only attempting to correct Alonso Richard's severe disciplinary problems.

"We tried for 20 months, in every way we could, to help our child, to take him from what was an unbelievably deprived education, from what was no worse than no home life, including a history of being malnourished and mistreated, and being really more at home on the streets in Colombia, South America, than any place else," Munson said in a prepared statement.

Munson said during that time the family was ir "constant touch" with clergymen to help resolve the child's "very serious problems."

A psychologist recommended the treatment that called for "the addition of privileges and the withdrawal of those privileges in return for what all of us deemed was more normal family behavior," Mun-

He said part of the treatment called for the boy to be confined to the basement.

"On the advice of our psychologist, we limited his access to the rest of the house by providing a playroom in the basement which had been the children's playroom," he said.

The Munsons were arrested and released last Friday by officers who investigated the home after an anonymous caller notified the state Division of Family Services of the confinement.

Officials said Alonso told juvenile officers that his parents had confined him for a month in the crate-like cubicle where he was allowed no books, no television, no radio, no social contacts and no baths.

The boy had been allowed to leave the cage to attend classes at Hazelwood Junior High School for the first three weeks of his imprisonment, police Lt. Richard O'Connor said. But the youth told police he had only been allowed out to go to the bathroom for the last

The boy has been turned over to the custody of the Juvenile Court, police said.

Munson said allegations that the child was being abused were untrue.

ANOTHER MISSION — Members of Swiss rescue organizations along with their "catastrophe dogs" sit on bard an airplane bound for Turkey after the earth-

Catastophe dogs used for rescue missions

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Nac, Nico and Felo are back from their latest mission of mercy.

Eight hours after an earthquake hit northern Turkey on Oct. 30, they were on their way by jet, then by road vehicle and finally an hour's march on foot to the disaster area and began searching for survivors among the 1,330 people killed.

They spent four straight days probing in the rubble with little time for anything else

Nac, Nico and Felo are shepherd dogs, two German and one Belgian. They made up the advance party in the most recent mission of Switzerland's canine elite, the 100 or so specially trained "katastrophenhunde" - catastrophe

They have been credited with saving scores of lives and locating hundreds of dead bodies in the past seven years and have won international praise The "K-Teams," as they are officially called, operated in France, Italy, Romania, Yugoslavia, Algeria and North Yemen before their assignment to comb the devastated villages of northern Turkey.

Training rescue dogs has a long tradition in Switzerland. Saint Bernard dogs had been used as far back as the 18th century to search for lost travelers in the Alps. Saint Bernards, however, no longer are used on any regular basis and cannot meet the requirements to become K-Team members. They are too heavily set and would never pass the rigid tests at the end of years of intensive training of both the K-Team dogs and their volunteer handlers.

'Shepherds, boxers, Swiss Appenzell mountain dogs, and almost any other race of that size could be used if properly brought up and trained," said Urs Ochsenbein of the Swiss Association of Catastrophe Dogs. "Theoretically, even small dogs would be eligible but they do not have the physical strength and stamina.'

Ochsenbein has been guiding the training of dogs for the K-Teams for more than 15 years, devising a set of special workouts to prepare them for searching among dangerous and unstable debris.

The dogs learn not to be frightened by the noise of a pneumatic drill or a bulldozer. They must be able to climb ladders, squeeze through sewage pipes, remain calm on shifting ground and turn around on a narrow

"They must be able to spot a victim in a turmoil of smoke and scents - disinfectants, sewage odors, or decaying cattle," Ochsenbein said in an interview.

Unlike tracking dogs, who rely on the scent left by the hunted in the ground or on objects, K-Team dogs sniff the air for human scents.

Once training is completed, "they virtually never err," Ochsenbein said.

That rule was put to a major test for the first time in northeast Italy after an earthquake hit May 6, 1976, killing 946 people. Twelve K-Teams located 16 survivors and 125 bodies within two days. This, after a message sent to Switzerland by an international relief coordinator said "dogs are not needed."

Association records list many other impressive feats, including spotting survivors under 20 feet of reinforced concrete during rescue work following an earthquake that hit Bucharest, Romania, in 1977. It toppled buildings up to 16 stories high.

"Our dogs visibly enjoy finding survivors," she added in an interview here. "They easily distinguish between the scent from a dead body under the rubble and that from someone alive and they react differently.

Man killed by piano

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A man reclining on top of an elevator piano at the topless Condor Club was crushed to death Wednesday when he became trapped as the piano rose toward the ceiling, police reported.

Mission Emergency Hospital said the victim died at the scene. The coroner's office said no identification was immediately available.

The piano has for years been used by the Broadway club's star performer, Carol Doda, who makes her appearance by being lowered slowly from her dressing room as she reclines on the piano. She exits in the same

Fire Department Lt. James Lyons said he understood the man was reclining on the piano with a woman as it was being pulled toward the ceiling. Lyons said the woman escaped through a ceiling hatch, but

Progress changes small town's one-room school

HOPE, Alaska (AP) - Progress is poking into Alaska's back corners, changing forever those pockets where chainsaws whine and folks still do pretty much as they see fit.

In this snow-shrouded hamlet, it may ring the final bell on one of the state's few remaining one-classroom schools - complete with an American flag on top and a swing out front made of a hank of rope and an old tire.

"I like this old building. I think you're going to lose somewhat of the feeling of family," said Caroline Strong, Hope's only teacher since 1977. "One mother has knitted mittens, scarves and hats with 'Hope School' on them for every student. You don't do that in a big school." Hope sprang up in about 1896 as gold miners swarma into the area. It hunkers in the shadow of mountains, near a road which winds 18 miles through birch. spruce and cottonwood.

The 150 townsfolk are mostly miners, state road orkers or people tired of cities. Hope boasts a bar, a log church served by a visiting minister and a restaurant which is closed on Tuesdays. Crime is unknown. There are no police, no firefighters, no

While Anchorage is only 20 miles to the northwest as the crow flies, it's more than 90 miles through the mountains by car to Hope.

For a time, some say, many in this close-knit community opposed a new school, fearing it would draw more people. But in the last year, growing pains and the desire for a gymnasium have sparked a drive for a larger school. Closed between 1970 and 1977 due to a lack of students, the old, poorly insulated red frame building now boasts an enrollment of 19 - from kindergarten through eighth grade. A poster on the front door greets visitors, "Welcome to the friendliest place around." A brass bell signals the start of classes, and a computer sits to one side of the classroom.

Ms. Strong, who started teaching here when Hope's population numbered about 80, lives upstairs. Her cat, Mon Ami, has free run of building, the smallest and oldest of the 27 schools in the Kenai school district.

It's believed the structure was built in 1933, because that's the date stamped on boards from its old outhouses, says Ms. Strong. But after nearly 50 years of use, the school is bursting at the seams.

"A census shows I will always have about 15 to 20 kids for the next four or five years," she said. "I think the increase in population and the awareness of the people here that we're the only school in the district without a gym has played a role in the effort to get a new school

"On organized sports the students really lose out. The only activities we can have are aerobics in the classroom.

Instead of basketball and other indoor sports available to most of the district's 7,500 other students, children in Hope must opt for skating and crosscountry skiing, said Ms. Strong. For other activities, they must make do in the cramped building. "We use the hallway and stairs," said Elena Denevan, a teacher's aide.

What's needed, they say, is a three-room school on seven acres of borough-owned land nearby.

"They're kind of crammed in there," said Linda Stroker of a parent group pushing for the change. "When you have all those kids in one room, they can't

"A new school will mean a lot more peace for the older kids," sighed John Ducharme, a 9-year-old and one of the school's three fourth-graders.

Kenai School District superintendent Fred Pomeroy says a new school for Hope is part of the district's fiveyear plan, and that he's hopeful it will win state approval because renovating the old building is impractical.

COLLEGE STATION. Texas (AP) — Texas A&M University attracted $46.7 million in private gifts in 1982-83, up a record $6 million from the previous year, school officials said Wednesday.

The money includes $8.6 million in alumni contributions, a figure the school said was among the highest for any public college or university in the nation.

'We have always been the envy of other institutions for the loyalty of our alumni," A&M Vice President for Development Robert Walker said.

According to figures released by the school's Council for Financial Aid to Education, Texas A&M received $14 million from foundations, $12.4 million from corporations, $8.6 million from alumni, $3.1 million from other individuals, and the balance from religious groups, fund-raising consortiums and other sources.

The school said it ranks 16th among all universities nationwide, fifth among public institutions and first among colleges and univer-sities in the South or Southwest in private gifts.

Hurricane looter gets 2 years

HOUSTON (AP) - A Harris County jury has sent a Houston man to jail for two years after finding him guilty of looting a store during the blackout at the height of Hurricane Alicia last summer.

Tevis DeQuincy Nelms, 31, was convicted Tuesday in state district court of burglary of a building for allegedly trying to take two bottles of scotch during the Police saw Nelms leaving a drug store with the scotch, Assistant District Attorney Lee Coffee said. Nelms denied committing the burglary.

Happy Thanksgiving, sports fans. Smell that turkey baking in the oven. Smell those hot buttered rolls. Take a look at that pumpkin pie. Mmmmmmm.... Now think about all those pounds you'll have to work off the next day or the next month, depending on how much you eat.

Eating, recognized as one of America's greatest sports by the Notes staff. Especially Steve Belvin who labels Thanksgiving Day as the "Super Bowl for Those Who Love

Steve should know, he's been All-Pro for 25 years.

What is SMU complaining about? Sure El Paso isn't the party town New Orleans is but look where those poor Ponies are tied up this week. Tokyo, Japan.

SMU is playing a Southwest Conference game Sunday in the Mirage Bowl before 30,000 screaming Japanese football fans. "Ah-so, yook at Yankee run wit fut-bol." Sounds like SMU's athletic program is shambles to me.

You don't hear any bad raps from Houston. The Coogs are glad to be in Tokoyo. Hopefully Lionel Wilson didn't fumble the plane tickets away like he has handoffs this year.

Sure El Paso is a far cry from the Japanese night life. But hey Ponies, life's tough. There are plenty of teams willing to take your place. Like Rice, Minnesota, Tampa Bay, Houston...

Speaking of football, make sure you have your tickets for the annual Fall Sports Banquet at Big Spring High Monday night. Jerry Moore, head football coach at Texas Tech, is the guest speaker.

The last day to purchase the $8 tickets to the event is Friday. They're on sale at J.C. Penneys, Big Spring Athletics, the Choate Company and at the school administration offices. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Athletes in volleyball, football and cross country will be honored.

Well, the 1983 Big Spring Herald "Jimmy the Greek" contest is over. Again, someone else besides the sports editor is best at picking football games.

Bob Carpenter, the Herald's acclaimed Jack of All Trades, finished with an overall record of 227-95 through 12 weeks of predictions. That total -a .705 percentage — topped Jaklewicz who finished a distant second at 225-97.

It marked the second straight year a fellow Herald employee has done in the so-called master. Last year, Cliff Coan nipped Jaklewicz by one game.

BOB CARPENTER ...No. 1 predictor

After an unimpressive start, Big Spring High coach Quinn Eudy finished with a rush to take the bronze medal with a 217-105 record while Dashing Dale Worthan was fourth at 214-108.

As usual, Dangerous Dick Helms collapsed at season's end and made a strong charge for last place.

That honor, however, went to KWKI-KKIK's Devilish Dave Trusty who outsmarted fellow radio chief Dynamite Dick Fields. Trusty missed 124 of 332 games while Fields rallied from last place to get out of the cellar. We've decided to trade Trusty to the Oilers for a crystal ball to be named later.

Winston Wrinkle? The ageless Aggie finished in the middle of the pack, a lofty position taking into consideration his institution of supposedly higher learning and the fact Jackie Sherrill helped with his predictions.

Bob's a lucky guy. He's get last year's CHUMPionship trophy with Cliff's name taken off and his etched on.

Thanks to all the participants. We've proved once again that football is an unpredictable sport and that's what makes it so much fun. - GREG JAKLEWICZ

Hawks feast on Angelo St.

Trio combines for 61 points, Howard downs ASU, 91-63

By GREG JAKLEWICZ Sports Editor

It wasn't the prettiest game but when thoughts of turkey and dressing are circulating the arena, it's hard to keep your mind on basketball.

The Howard College Hawks played Angelo State in a rare pre-Thanksgiving game Wednesday night and recorded their seventh win of the season with a 91-63 victory over the Ram junior varsity.

Jerry Stroman came off the injury list to score 21 and Michael Porters and Al Holland tossed in 20 points each to guide the Hawks. Howard ran off to a 51-24 halftime lead but struggled in the second half as shots that fell in the first 20 minutes only bounced off the iron in the final half of action.

"All of a sudden we started playing poorly," coach Mike Mitchell said of a second half scoring lapse. "The shots we made in the first half didn't go in in the second half. It seems like we had a spell of 8-9 minutes when we didn't make a shot.'

It wasn't quite that bad, coach, but the Hawks did take over seven minutes to reach the 60-point level in the second half. For the last 20 minutes, Howard could sink just 12 of 30 shots for 33 per cent. Add nine turnovers and the Hawks did appear sluggish.

The slow-motion scoring might have been caused by the lack of points by Dwight Harris. The sophomore wing could put only 12 points in the books, his first sub-20-point game of the year. Wing Michael Porter, however, picked up the slack with 20 points and seven

"Dwight's had so many good games," Mitchell said, "that you knew sooner or later he'd have a bad one. Fortunately he had one when we were able to play with a cushion. Porter played well, especially in the second half. He came on to give us a big lift.'

While Porter was doing the job in the second half, the 6-10 Holland was the man in the first half. Holland scored 16 points and had five rebounds in the half, an effort Mitchell labeled "his best 20 minutes of the

Stroman, who injured a hip muscle during the Chaparral Classic in Midland, did not start but came off the bench to top both teams in scoring. He also teamed with Holland for the game's only two slam

The first portions of game's beginning were a see-saw scoring battle. HC led by four, 22-18, midway through the half but put on a 29-6 tear to end the half. Behind the outside shooting of Hercules Miller, the former San Angelo Central standout, the Rams fought back in the second half. Howard's 25-point halftime lead slipped to 14 at 65-51 when Glen Noesen hit a free shot with nine minutes to play. Porter hit two free shots and then connected on a layup following his steal to get the Hawks flying in the other direction. Four free throws by Joe Johnson pushed HC's lead back over 20 points with 5:01 to go. A jump shot by Antoine Morris gave Howard its biggest lead at 91-63 in the last minute

The Rams, now 1-1, were led in the scoring department by Miller, who had just four points at halftime, with 18. Noesen finished the night with 16 and Ken

Herb Turks, who has been a coach in the district for a year, was suspended by school board members who met nearly three hours Monday night to discuss a parent's allegation that Turks sipped beer in front of students.

The suspension is for seven days - three of them without pay.

Several irate parents at the meeting, however, said trustees ignored a more serious allegation that the coach assaulted a 16-yearold boy at an Austin motel where the eight-member girls' team was staying.

Board members said that claim boiled down to the word of the boy's parent, Wes Houchin, against Turks' word.

Houchin said his son Dennis suffered bruises on his legs and neck when he

And North Carolina — the state, that is — is No. 1 in college basketball.

The University of North Carolina won the national championship in 1982 and North Carolina State University won it in 1983. Two years, two championships, two schools, one state.

In the 45-year history of the NCAA tournament, only Ohio can top that. The Buckeye State not only produced national champions at Ohio State in 1960 and Cincinnati in 1961-62, it produced the two finalists all three years.

North Carolina, though, takes its hysteria to new heights.

When ABC first broadcast "Roots," for instance, the network's Raleigh affiliate rescheduled one night of the series to televise an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

ABC officials were reportedly irate that the audience-drawing miniseries was pre-empted - until the ratings showed the basketball game drew more viewers than "Roots."

Rick Ray of Raycom Communications, the company that televises ACC games, says people from outside the state frequently have a difficult time understanding that kind of fanaticism.

'When I was working in Raleigh, I once took an ABC guy to a State game," Ray said. "On the way over, he was telling me that he'd gone to Georgetown, so he knew real cheering when he heard

"When we got in the arena and the teams came out, the crowd just went crazy. The other guy grabbed my arm and said, 'What's going on?' We didn't get any more complaints about pre-empting

North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano said he learned early that "mixed marriages" in North Carolina do not refer to spouses of different races or religions. Here it means one spouse graduated from North Carolina and the other from North Carolina State.

"I got a call one day from a woman wanting to check if there was a mistake on the schedule," Valvano said. "She wanted to check the date of the Carolina-State game. I told her what it was and she said, 'Well, we'll have to reschedule the wedding.' One of them was from State and the other from Carolina and they didn't want to get married the day of the

"It's on 52 weeks a year and I try to talk about other things ... but invariably it comes back to basket-Valvano said. "What amazes me is how closely the fans follow recruiting. We can have a kid at the campus on Saturday and the people that call in Monday night will be asking about it." During basketball season, families often gather following a funeral in front of the television set to watch their favorite team play basketball.

schools) that means that 75 percent of the fans in that opening game have no stake in the schools that are playing," James said. "Other tournaments have people going in and out with who's playing, but not the ACC tournament.' Valvano, a native New Yorker, said people around the country sometimes perceive ACC fans as self-interested provincials who believe their conference is the only one in college basketball.

But he's found that's not true. "People here are just unbelieveable fans of college basketball and some of the most knowledgeable fans in my ex-

Charlotte architect Bonson Hobson, a North Carolina State graduate, fought the fever last year as long as he could. He resisted a friend's invitation to go the NCAA finals in Albuquerque, N.M., until the day before the Wolfpack faced Houston for the championship.

Then, 24 hours before the game, Hobson flew to El Paso, Texas, and drove through a blizzard with his friend to Albuquerque, arriving just 30 minutes before tipoff. The next day they drove back to El Paso and he flew home to Charlotte.

He said he's never regretted a minute of it.

"It was heaven, the way it turned out," he said. "It was like a dream to leave here so quickly and get to see it.'

There are a variety of explanations for the mid-winter fever that hits the state.

One is the ACC tournament, the season finale that gives the winning team an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament. For the conference, the tournament is like an extra season.

"I have seen some prime sporting events around the nation, but nothing like the tournament," said ACC Commissioner Bob James. "The thing that's amazing about it is that every seat is filled from the opening game to the finals. "Since we divide the tickets eight ways (for the eight ACC

perience," Valvano said. "They love it when we play schools from other parts of the country, but there's nothing they'd rather see than a Big Four game. The Big Four is North Carolina, North Carolina State, Duke and Wake Forest —the state's four major college powers.

Ray, who admits spending all night waiting to get tickets to a regular-season Duke-State game, said television helped fuel the mania for basketball, overwhelming the conference's early fears that the sport would suffer from overexposure.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith agrees

"My dad in Topeka, Kan., will be able to watch 22 to 25 of our games this season," Smith said. 'I remember when one of our games was the top-rated show in the state over 'Happy Days,' and that was when 'Happy Days' was really going strong. "If you're a basketball coach and love sports, there's not a better place to be," Valvano said. "The stats show that ACC basketball ranks No. 7 among all syndicated television shows. There isn't another sporting event even close in the ratings "People are incredibly loyal and aren't afraid to wear their school colors and stand up and cheer," he said. "It's just incredible."

HOUSTON (AP) - University of Cincinnati Coach Watson Brown has been interviewed by Rice University for the vacant head coaching job, a source has told The Associated Press. Neither Brown nor Cincinnati Athletic Director Mike McGee could be reached for comment.

Ralph O'Connor, head of the Rice selection committee, declined to confirm Brown's interview but said the committee could be ready to announce its new head coach by Wednesday. 'We've have made a recommendation to our president (Dr. Norman Hackerman)," O'Connor said Monday. "We will let him make the decision. We could have something by as early as Wednesday.

Brown, 33, has been at Cincinnati for one season. In his first game as head coach, Cincinnati scored a 14-3 upset victory over Penn State.

The Cincinnati Enquirer, quoting sources, reported that Rice had been offered a $1.2 million package for

Brown, who returned from Houston in a private jet after meeting with a search committee, could not be contacted. His telephone was busy all Monday

Mike McGee, Cincinnati athletic director, said he had met with Brown.

"I dont want to make any kind of statement right now," McGee said. McGee noted, however, that as of Monday night Brown was "still the head coach at the University of Cincinnati. He has not left.'

On Saturday, Brown was rumored to be on the list of coaches sought to replace the fired Paul Wiggin at Stanford. Brown said then: "It doesn't take long for the rumors to start. I like Cincinnati and plan to stay here and help build this program."

Brown started his coaching career at his alma mater, Vanderbilt, as a graduate assistant in 1973. He served as an assistant coach at East Caolina, Jacksonville State and Texas Tech before getting his first head coaching job at Austin Peay, where he compliled a 14-8 record over the 1979 and 1980 seasons. Brown was offensive coordinator at Vanderbilt for the 1981 and 1982 seasons before taking over at Cincinnati last December.

Brown's name was added to a list of prospects that already included Oklahoma State's Jimmy Johnson and Mississippi State's Emory Bellard.

Johnson said Monday he would like to take advantge of good recruiting seasons at Oklahoma State and had no plans to leave

Judge favors Klan claims

AUSTIN (I.P) - A federal julg Wednesday ruled against the city and in favor of the Ku Klux Klan in a dispute over whether the Klan could get more than one permit per year to march on city

A Klan spokesman said the group will apply "soon" for a march in Austin.

Last Feb. 19 a Klan parade erupted into violence between marchers and anti-Klan demonstrators. Twelve people were injured and 11 arrested in the rock-throwing melee, and afterward, the city council passed an ordinance limiting parade per-

'Marilyn' musical falls flat

NEW YORK (AP) — What becomes a legend most?

Certainly not "Marilyn," the new musical about the late movie legend, Marilyn Monroe, that opened on Broadway on Sunday at the Minskoff Theater.

The $3 million production is not clever enough to be camp, and is not rich enough in music or staging to be great musical theater.

Instead, this show that has 12 producers and five songwriters is a glossed over, shallow chronology of Miss Monroe's career told in a made-for-TV manner, with unmemorable songs and writing so banal, one wonders how the actors can keep a straight face when they say their lines.

At the outset, young Norma Jean, played by Kristi Coombs, gazes at the stars with her Teddy bear. She tells him: "Movie stars are loved. They're loved by everyone and I want to be loved.

Later, when the adult Marilyn Monroe meets baseball star Joe DiMaggio, her future husband, she says: "I only had the love of my fans. I was incomplete, half a woman without you.'

Alyson Reed, through makeup, wigs and mannerisms, assumes the insouciance and wicked sexiness of Miss Monroe. When she is unveiled from behind a chorus line of men to sing "Money, Men and More," the audience gasps, because at first glance, Miss

Reed IS Miss Monroe.

But despite an excellent performance, Miss Reed tries too hard to be Marilyn Monroe. She imitates the breathy voice and wide-eyed wonder, thrusts her bosom to the breeze and rounds her lips to a perfect Valentine. But what emerges is a caricature, not a character with soul.

Miss Reed has a good voice and moves well in the wonderful gowns by Joseph G. Aulisi. And if she had better material to work with, she would have a character with more depth.

The choreography by Kenny Ortega, who also directed, is unimaginative. An early jitterbug scene, "Jimmy, Jimmy," lacked the energy and juice the 1940s dance craze dictated. And the 'Miss Parachute" scene in the war factory could have integrated the parachute prop in the dance.
"Miss Bubbles," a production number at the end of the play, is one of the highlights of "Marilyn." It is a funny and well-executed takeout of the kind of Hollywood bath scenes that kept the censors on their toes. Miss Reed uses just the right amount of restraint and coyness, as she sings from a raised tub with a bubble machine.

Mary Testa and Melissa Bailey are bright moments in this musical with their portrayals of the two Hollywood gossip columnists, Hedda Hopper and

LOS ANGELES (AP) -Actor Donald Sutherland admits that he is an absolute nut over baseball especially Canadian baseball.

"I've got a satellite dish that allows me to pick up all the Canadian baseball games," says Sutherland. "I can get 11 satellites, including two Canadian satellites, although a lot of the stuff is scrambled.

"I can pick up anything, If San Diego is playing in Montreal I can pick up a game I might not be able to get on cable.

But Sutherland says he also subscribes to every possible cable system.

Fosse praises Chayefsky

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bob Fosse, who wrote and directed "Star 80," says his writing tutor was the late Paddy Chayefsky.

"It was Paddy who drew my attention to the story in the Village Voice -- 'Death of a Playmate,' by Teresa Carpenter - and suggested it would be a good subject for a movie," Fosse said.

Fosse won an Academy Award in 1973 for directing "Cabaret." He also won a Tony Award that same year for the Broadway show, "Pippin," and an Emmy Award for the TV special with Liza Minnelli, Liza With a Z.

But his first full writing credit is for "Star 80," based on the murder of Playboy Playmate Dorothy Stratten by her estranged husband, who then killed himself.

So Fosse turned for help to his friend Chayefsky, who won screenplay Oscars in 1971 for "Hospital" and in 1976 for "Network "

"I knew he'd tell me the truth," Fosse said. "In my mind, I'd planned just to write the first draft and then call in someone to help. But Paddy was wonderful. 'You don't need another writer,' he told me. 'Finish it yourself.' So I

USSR lumbers toward progress

EDITOR'S NOTE — Hungary, which 25 years ago symbolized Soviet oppression, is today the East bloc's example of a liberalized success story. This second of a four-part series looks at the Hungarian reform and how the Kremlin controls its empire.

BUDAPEST — "Giving orders from the top according to a plan just doesn't work anymore," said economist Janos Kovacs. He might have been jailed for saying that a generation ago. Now he is reflecting official policy.

Paying conspicuous homage to Soviet Communist totems, Hungarian leader Janos Kadar has embarked quietly on a separate course, decentralizing, opening to the West, even tolerating mild dissent.

Faced with Kadar's success, Soviet leaders are looking closely to see what they can learn to spur their own farms and factories. So are the Poles, the Bulgarians and the Czechoslovaks.

"So long as the East Europeans follow form, adhere to the party and keep order, the Soviets will swallow a lot," said a senior Western diplomat in Moscow. "If Hungary is a showcase, they'll take credit."

The Kremlin's options are more limited than they appear, East European and Western analysts say, since any use of force bears a heavy cost in ideological credibility.

Linguish soars from the investor of Hungary in 1956.

Lingering scars from the invasion of Hungary in 1956 to put down an anti-communist uprising, like the Czechoslovak invasion in 1968 to crush Alexander Dubcek's "Prague Spring," deterred Soviet action against the Solidary trade union movement in Poland far longer than some Soviet leaders thought prudent.
"They did not want to invade, and it took them a long."

"They did not want to invade, and it took them a long time to figure out how to stop Solidarity short of that," a U.S. diplomat said. "We have seldom seen them so worried."

Kadar, reviled when he came to power in 1956 in the wake of Soviet tanks, when Yuri V. Andropov was Soviet ambassador to Budapest, instituted reforms in careful stages.

By what one veteran calls "a sedate dance somewhere between a waltz and a minuet," he gradually reordered the Stalinist command economy system which holds rigid sway in the Soviet Union.

system which holds rigid sway in the Soviet Union.
Unlike others in the East European communist bloc, Hungarians can travel to the West and emigrate if they wish. Their national currency, the forint, is convertible to hard Western money and buys French cognac at Paris prices and Apple II computers.

Enterprising Hungarians can triple their incomes by working overtime on contract or in their own businesses.

"Me? I'm strictly private," said a Budapest hair dresser who runs her own beauty salon, fixing her own prices and hours. "This is almost the West."

But it is not the West, stresses Laszlo Rajk, an architect who is kept off major projects because he criticizes the government and circulates unofficial literature.

Lesser-known dissidents have been jobless for years for supporting human rights activists in Czechoslovakia.

Many new entrepreneurs fear the government might change the rules, and they milk their businesses for quick gains rather than reinvest.

Andras Hegedus, once Hungary's Stalinist premier and now a sociologist, argued in an interview that even Hungary could not survive without a "constructive opposition" permitted to criticize freely.

But dissidents and economists agree the reform has set economic and political examples for others in the communist world.

In Moscow, Georgi Karchin, a senior consultant to the Soviet state planning agency, Gosplan, said in an interview: "It is difficult to say our program will be Hungarian-style but we will initiate new systems, using private enterprises for some services, such as hair-dressing."

Soviet factory managers are given more say in decisions as long as they show profit. If they don't, central control is increased. Bonuses are adjusted to ensure all employees work together rather than sabotaging others for piecework goals.

In Warsaw, officials remark pointedly that Polish economists devised what is now the Hungarian reform, and they are trying to implement something similar.

Professor Witold Trzeciakowski recently told the Krakow weekly newspaper, Tygodnik Powszechny: "What reform should do essentially is to furnish strong incentives for efficient work in keeping with the rule that the more and better you work, the more you earn."

State factory managers are now given wide leeway on products, output, investment, wages, prices and imports. Much of Polish agriculture is already in private hands.

Bulgaria's "new economic mechanism" also seeks to decentralize decisions and offer bonuses to workers' brigades which surpass goals, although a strong element of central control remains. Farmers are growing more on their own to sell privately.

more on their own to sell privately.

Romanian and East German leaders confirmed their faith in central planning, but both are altering their systems to increase productivity. In Romania, the minimum wage ceiling was removed so that if a factory loses money, so do its employees. If a factory fails, workers lose their jobs, as in the West.

Czechoslovakia has resisted reform for fear it might bring a political climate that could revive the climate of 1968. But even in Prague, talk is of change.

Frantisek Vencovsky, economic adviser to the state planning committee, said in an interview: "We want our system to be flexible, with a greater freedom that limits the planning committee only to main trends. If enterprises have more freedom, and are not directed in every detail, it will help us improve our situation."

in every detail, it will help us improve our situation."

Czechoslovak authorities just extended social security benefits to private businessmen in the service

Moscow has sought since 1981 to convene a summit of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (Comecon) to weld Eastern European economies more tightly together, with each specializing in different areas under a central plan.

In spite of the Kremlin's political control, Comecon is far less integrated then the Western Europe's Common Market. The ruble is not freely convertible in the bloc, limiting internal trade.

Governments resist further loss of freedom to Moscow, which has discouraged growing trade with the West. Hungary and Romania have joined the International Monetary Fund, the United Nations-affiliated organization based in Washington, committing themselves to Western meddling in exchange for credit.

Upheaval in Poland seemed to support a widely held view among East Europeans that their societies are separate and not prone to excessive sympathy of shared circumstance

"Hungarians felt the Poles were endangering in their crazy romantic way what they had slowly built up," a Western diplomat said in Budapest. "They thought more about how Solidarity would rebound against them than help them."

The pace and shape of future reform depends on leaders yet unnamed. Kadar is 71. So is East Germany's leader Erich Honecker. Todor Zhivkov of Bulgaria is 72. Czechoslovakia's Gustav Husak is 70. Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania is 65.

Conversations with younger party technocrats suggest a new generation is prepared to push change which many already call inevitable. But, many warn, change in itself is not necessarily improvement.

"Our society is like a complex Gothic roof," said a Czechoslovak professional who knows the West well. "Pull out the wrong leaf and the whole thing comes collapsing

The Russian empire: 'They're almost just like Americans'

EDITOR'S NOTE - A housewife in Prague, searching for a message she hoped a Western reporter would pass on to readers, finally said: "Look, just get across that we are people." This third of a fourpart series looks at how people in the Soviet Empire see their lives.

By MORT ROSENBLUM AP Special Correpondent

MINSK - The Soviet general swallowed hard on learning his bunkmate on the Moscow train was an American. Then, warming up, he offered in pidgin Russian: "Sovietsky, Amerikansky. Bang, bang.

He followed what is known as the Soviet line, but he was convincing. When he was 12, he shot some of the Germans who leveled Minsk and reduced its population by a third. He did not like war.

As the train neared Moscow, he gave the American a brotherly hug and declared: "Druzhba. Friendship.

Sociologists say the Western overlay is largely an aping of forbidden-fruit societies. But people share a wide range of feelings with those of the West.

"I'm amazed at how much we have in common with Americans who pass through," said Lara, a Minsk English teacher. "We don't want war with each other, we only want to enjoy our families, lives and not worry."

Fear of war comes up often in the Soviet Union where graying men wear battle ribbons on tattered coats. Even people born after 1945 talk of the 900-day siege on Leningrad as if it were last week, only partly because leaders keep World War II fresh for political reasons.

On their wedding day, Moscow couples dutifully visit Lenin's tomb and then at the monument to the unknown soldier before hurrying off to consum-mate the marriage. People worry that their forests are dying under acid rain; rivers have been polluted by headlong dashes toward industrialization that left little time for worry about the environment. Russians in particular are concerned by alcoholism, accidents and empty retirement lives that, according to a French study, have cut male life expectancy to 62, 11 years below Japanese males. Human rights, an overriding concern, are mentioned cautiously in fear of secret police ever alert for dissidents. Many who dared press governments to respect human rights accords they signed in Helsinki in 1975 have been jailed, exiled or fired from

Attention focuses on dissidents like Nobel Peace Prize laureat Andrei D. Sakharov, sick and in internal exile, but hundreds of thousands of others suffer discrimination - or worse — in the Soviet empire for taking political liberties.

There is deep unspoken bitterness toward the West for not doing enough. A Czechoslovak woman, tears welling, said: "Never mind that poor Roosevelt was too sick and too tired when he sealed our fate (at Yalta). We are not ants to be stepped on by Americans making foreign policy. If an atomic bomb lands on London or New York, it will be made of uranium mined in

Memories plain as writing on the wall

BOONEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Most people keep high school annuals to help remind them of the past. But Don Dunn decided to keep an old dressing room wall.

The 10-by-12-foot wall has hundreds of names of former Booneville students carved, penned, penciled and painted on its face — the first of the names appearing in the mid-1940s.

Most of the names are of former Bearcat athletes; some are of young lovers.

Dunn, 38, acquired the wall in 1978, the year the old high school was demolished to make way for a new building. "I was on the school board when we voted to tear the old high school down," said Dunn, an insurance agent. 'It was a shame we didn't have the money to keep it up."

Dunn, who had attended Booneville High School in the late 1950s and early 1960s, said he was interested in preserving portions of the old building. "I was buying a lot of stuff out of the school," he said. "I bought various things I just hated to see go."

The wall, however, was not prominent on his mind. "The wall was down in the basement," he said. "We called it 'the catacombs." In fact, it was kind of scary down there."

But the wall brought back good memories, and Dunn decided to have it moved. He numbered each of the 23 pine boards — two of which included his name — and removed them one at a time. They were later reassembled at the Roger's Scout Reservation about 10 miles south of Booneville.

"At first I thought there were only boys" names on here," he said, standing in front of the wooden structure. But he soon found female names scrawled across the boards.

"That's the interesting thing about this," he said. "I see something different everytime I come back here."

Dunn said he hadn't decided what to do with the wall. He said he may lend it for use at future class reunions. Or he may remodel his office, using it to enhance his autographed pictures of Jack Nicklaus and the late Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant.

Barbie designer tackles other jobs

OAKLAND, Ore. (AP) - Like the Barbie doll he designed 25 years ago, Bill Barton has come a long

Barbie has turned a little sexier and overhauled her wardrobe several times to keep up with the movement of women from the home to plants, offices and careers.

Barton, 56, has moved from the toy industry and Southern California to a rural homestead 10 miles north of Oakland, where he works on a new airplane and a new satellite TV receiver.

He spends an average of 16 hours a day six days a week in the 120-foot-by-35-foot shop attached to the house in which he and his wife, Helen, live.

"If you're creative, I don't know if you're ever really satisfied," he said. "I think it's a danger to become complacent and satisfied.'

Barbie is one accomplishment the inventor isn't ready to leave behind, even though he is unhappy about some of the changes she's gone through.

Even as he works on a full-size model, or "master plug," of his airplane, Barbie is still in his plans. The inventor says he plans to write two books on the designing of Barbie for doll collectors in the near

NEVES

WYOMISSING HILLS, Pa. (AP) — Jerome M. Kauffman has built his answer to any gasoline shortage that this country may face.

His 50-miles-per gallon, three-speed car helped the 70-year-old Kauffman drive his way through World War II, when fuel was rationed to help the war effort.

However, Kauffman, of Wyomissing Hills, ran into a road block when the state changed its inspection requirements in the early 1960s, preventing his homemade vehicle from passing inspection.

"I put it in storage for 20 years," said Kauffman, former television and appliance store owner. "Since I retired a few years ago, I finally found time to refurbish it."

To get a street license for his sheet-metal car, Kauffman will have to install new headlights, taillights, turn signals and fenders.

"I always was an automobile nut and I always wanted to build my own car," Kauffman said. He said he began to work on his contraption back in

'When it was first titled in 1941, it was listed as a homemade motor bike. At that time, it was fairly crude," he said.

"It had no self-starter, the engine was smaller than what it is now, and the wheels were smaller," Kauffman said. "The motor and the transmission were in the back, and the battery and the gas tank were under the seat.' During the war, Kauffman, his wife, Miriam, and their two children used the vehicle to stretch their rationed gasoline supply.

"I used it to go back and forth to work every day,' he said.

Although the car seats only one person, Kauffman said he used it to take his family to their new home.

"I designed and built a trailer that we attached to the back of it." he said. Kauffman chuckles when he remembers that it had cost him $5 to license his car, but $10 to license the trailer, which has not survived the intervening years.

When the vehicle code was changed in the 1960s, Kauffman made his first mistake with the car - he stored it with gasoline in the engine and the gas tank.

By the time he took it out of storage this past spring, the gasoline had turned into a gummy mess, requiring a new engine, gas tank and gas line. While he was at it, Kauffman added pneumatic tires, an electric generator, a storage battery, an electric fuel pump, a reliable brake system, and a windshield.

The refurbished vehicle, on display recently at the Fairgrounds Square Mall craft show, also features a Wisconsin engine and a motorcycle transmission.

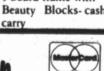

"I've always been mechanically inclined, able to do just about anything I've wanted to,' Kauffman said. "I have to have something to do. I'm always busy. I'll do whatever it takes to get it inspected."

TOKYO (AP) - Few women squeeze into the ranks of Japan's corporate management and those that do say their male colleagues deny them any opportunity to go higher. "Men want women to be their assistants, not their competitors," said one female marketing manager who asked to remain anonymous.

Other women in like positions voiced similar views in interviews.

"Little by little, women are rising to executive positions," said Ginko Sato, head of the Women Workers' Division at the Labor Ministry. "Women are beginning to take important positions, but the speed of career advancement is very slow.'

Her ministry's figures show the number of professional women - teachers, nurses, lawyers, engineers, specialists - jumped from 760,000 in 1965 to 1.87 million in 1981 as the number with executive positions increased from 40,000 to 120,000. Despite the gains, women held only 5.5 percent of all executive slots in 1982, she said in an interview.

Japan's work force remains top-heavy with blue-suited men behind the executive desks and laden at the bottom with young women serving tea and old ones sweeping floors.

Women make up 34 percent of Japan's work force, but their salaries are only 53 percent of what men earn. Many companies refuse to hire female college graduates because they consider them overeducated for the jobs open to women.

'The ordinary Japanese concept," Mrs. Sato said, "is that women should stay at home: 'Women can be good workers, but not good executives because their abilities are limited. They have no ability to make big plans or produce big events. Once they marry, they direct their attention to their households.

Young women find themselves in tentative situations in starting out their corporate careers because male higher-ups wait four or five years to see whether they'll resign to have

In the meantime, Mrs. Sato said, their male contemporaries are shifted around to different jobs, getting the experience they need for advancement.

In addition to those handicaps, she added many private companies — 45.1 percent of those surveyed recently by the Labor Ministry simply do not permit the promotion of women to executive posts.

She is one of the few women who have climbed subordinates at her office in Tokyo, recently. ed on 5.5 percent of Japanese women hold executive positions.

"Since I was a child I always wished I were born a man," said Michiyo Ohuchi, 49.

As a senior managing officer in the personnel division of the Bank of Tokyo - where half the 6,000 workers are women, yet only 0.5 percent of them are executives - she earned her way up over a 29-year-career. 'In this society," she said, "it's rare for me to get this high.

Miss Ohuchi, who never married, said that while she is generally satisfied with her work. "problems do exist since this bank was built up by men.'

She complained that she and other women routinely were kept from meetings and from transferring among bank branches - a regular practice for men.

Nevertheless, when asked what these policies are likely to mean in the future, she replied: "Intrinsically, women are good at building nests and guarding them. Men like to their nests and then go beyond

Fosse ponders show business' underside

BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — The underside of show business success holds a fascination for Bob Fosse. But he doesn't know why

There must be something in my background that bothers me, but I can't tell you what it is," he says. "I'm in my 43rd year in show business — I started at the age of 13. The business has been good to me in many respects; I've received a great deal of satisfac-"I started in the pits of show business, and I've seen the middle and the top whole pecking order. So I've seen people enjoy great success, and I've seen others destroyed.

It's the downside that seems to emerge in his films. "Lenny" traced the decline and fall of the pioneering satirist Lenny Bruce. "Cabaret" depicted the decadence of Berlin and its night life in the early Nazi period. "All That Jazz" related the hard life and early death of a Broadway

BOB FOSSE choreographer.

And now there's "Star 80."

The new movie tells of the short, glittering life of Dorothy Stratton, who stepped from the Playboy centerfold into movie acting. Her career ended with a shotgun blast. Her husband-manager killed her and then himself How did Fosse become intrigued with the saga?

"Two years ago I was having lunch with (writers) Paddy Chayefsky and Noel Behn," he said. "They said I ought to read an article in the Village Voice called 'Death of a Playmate' by Teresa Carpenter, as a possibility for a film. "I read it and liked it. I thought maybe I could do the story in a classy way as a depiction of the Big American dream, the search for love and money. It had two advantages: It had a smashing, tragic climax, and it was about young people.' Fosse said his idea was to focus on Paul Snider, the man who discovered Miss Stratton in Vancouver, brought her to the attention of Playboy chief Hugh Hefner, married her and tried to manage her career.

'I've always been fascinated with 'the man behind the star.' I've seen them all my life, seen how they promote their wives or sweethearts, some with great success, some not so," Fosse said.

'Also, I wanted to do another straight (non-musical) film. It would still have sequences that I am familiar with — the night club, the roller-skating, the whole Playboy scene, which is not show business and yet it

Fosse said his enthusiasm for the project grew as he researched and wrote the script. Then came a blow: a two-hour television movie, "Death of a Centerfold: The Dorothy Stratton Story."

"I was terribly upset," he said. "The TV show was so poorly done that it depressed me. I feared that no matter how well I told the story it would be compared to the TV show. If I hadn't written a finished script and started casting, I might have dropped the whole thing.
"I decided to go on, with that blind confidence that no matter many times a story has been told, I could tell it better. Even Jack and Jill."

Casting of the Stratton role obviously called for a full-breasted young beauty. And Mariel Hemingway obviously didn't qualify. Her breast-implant operation changed the situation.

"I'd like to make one thing clear: Mariel had the operation on her own, before she had the part," Fosse said. "I suspect she would have had it done anyway. 'She read for me three or four times, and I always liked her. She had two things in her favor. One has a marvelous innocence and vulnerability, a sense that she had never been used. Also the fact that she was pursuing the part so hard led me to believe she could portray Dorothy's ambitiousness."

By KEN HERMAN Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — The state of Texas is a multi-million dollar landlord with a heart of gold, providing free or token-rent housing for more than 900 state employees — some of them well paid.

An Associated Press survey shows that housing benefits go to a gamut of state workers, from college presidents in the over $100,000-a-year group to $20,000-a-year park rangers, from the governor to prison guards, and from fish hatchery workers to Texas Youth Commission staffers.

Texas the landlord owns mansions and mobile homes, cabins and dormitories, apartments and cottages.

However, no single agency in the state keeps tabs on all of Texas' residential property.

Starting at the top of the state's 170,000 employees, Texans give their $88,900-a-year governor free use of the 8,920-square foot Governor's Mansion, of which about 2,900 feet are in the "private quarters" used by Gov. Mark White and family.

At the mansion, across the street from the Capitol, the gas, water and electricity bills add up to more than $3,600 per month.

"You've got to remember, it's enormous. And we are taking 1,000 tourists a week through it. It's not only for the benefit of the governor," said mansion administrator Anne Du Bois.

The speaker of the Texas House and the lieutenant governor, who both draw annual salaries of $7,200 a year, have apartments inside the domed Capitol.

Most of the state's highest-paid group of employees — college presidents — are rent-free tenants in home ranging from historic to contemporary, but all

Some of the presidential homes were gifts to the schools. Others were purchased with state money. Either way, the state pays the upkeep.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has 199 residences at its parks, hatcheries and wildlife management areas. Employees living at the homes pay nominal rent, averaging about $40 per month. The average salary of the residents is about $20,000, according to Bob Hauser, chief of park operations.

Hatcheries division chief Bill Rutledge's comments summarized the prevailing thought on why the state gives free or inexpensive housing to certain employees. Tenants become, in effect, 24-hour-a-day employees, according to Rutledge

What could be the state's ritziest house is in the planning stages in College Station, where the Texas A&M System has approved a $1.2 million home for its chancellor. A&M System boss Arthur Hansen is the state's highest-paid employee at $143,100 per year.

"If we don't have somebody on the hatchery, we don't have any fish the next morning," because people love to fish in the hatcheries even though it's against the law, he said.

The token rent charged for Parks and Wildlife homes is calculated on the condition of the home and the remoteness of its

Lawmakers allow the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation to give free housing to 99 top officials. However, MHMR only has houses for 41. The other 58 get $175 a month as a housing allowance.

The free housing goes to top officials at state schools and hospitals. Superintendents at state schools for the mentally retarded earn $46,991 a year. State hospital superintendents get $57,600 a year.

Texas Mental Health and Mental Retardation Commissioner Gary Miller (who gets an annual salary of $68,400) hangs his hat — rent-free — in a 5,000-square-foot home, valued by the state at $148,400, on the edge of the Austin State School grounds.

Miller, his wife and two preschool children live in a two-story frame and masonry home built by MHMR in 1948.
The 13-room house includes four bedrooms and four bathrooms.

The $148,400 value set by MHMR is too low for the stylish West Austin neighborhood, support services director Patrick Terry acknowledged.

Another 91 workers at state hospitals and schools for the mentally retarded live at MHMR facilities, but they pay rent. The monthly rents vary, but are generally in the $175 to $300 range. Salaries of these employees — including maintenance workers and starting MHMR staffers — are as low as $10,800.

Elmer Carlson, chief of wage and salary for MHMR, said housing subsidies may end in coming years.

"There is no effort being made to build housing for those getting the allowance," he said. "It's almost the reverse. There is a general plan to do away with the housing when it becomes substandard or uneconomical to maintain."

As transportation and communication improve, there's less need for top officials to be on hand 24 hours a day, according to Carlson. And some of the officials find living where they work not "especially desired."

Twenty Texas Youth Commission employees are in free housing. The superintendent at the commission's Corsicana facility lives in the system's biggest curiosity — a 17-room (five bedrooms, 3½ bathrooms) mansion built in the 1930s.

If located in a nice part of a bigger city the mansion could bring $250,000 or more, said Ron Jackson, director of the commission, the state's juvenile correction agency.

Like the mental health agency, the youth commission offers housing for other employees too. At its Pyote facility, near Monahans, there's a $15-a-month trailer park and rooms in a converted dorm.

In Huntsville, one of the benefits the Texas Department of Corrections can dangle in front of a prospective director (in addition to a $64,400 salary) is a 5,600-square-foot, five-bedroom, five-bathroom, red brick mansion with colonial-style columns.

At Camp Mabry in Austin, the state's National Guard headquarters, Adjutant General Willie Scott's $52,600-a-year job includes free use of a 5,404-square-foot home valued at $216,160. However, half of it is used as visiting officers' quarters.

In San Antonio, Institute of Texan Cultures Director Jack Maguire lives rent-free in a two-bedroom apartment within the state-owned museum. Maguire said the apartment was set up for the use of then-Gov. John Connally, who wanted some place to stay when he visited HemisFair.

What could be the state's ritziest house is in the planning stages in College Station, where the Texas A&M System has approved a $1.2 million home for its chancellor. A&M System boss Arthur Hansen is the state's highest paid employee at $143,100 per year.

Houston residents Chester and Billie Jean Reed, for whom the ranch-style home will be named, gave $1 million for the project.

"I love A&M," Reed said.

The gift was accepted by the Texas College and University Coordinating Board despite the objection of board member Marshall Formby of Plainview, who told his colleagues, "I just don't want to go down in the record as voting for $1.2 million for a chancellor's house, even though it is a gift.

"The Legislature is trying to find money for salaries and to increase programs, and we are having to tighten our belt. Even though (the chancellor's house) doesn't cost the taxpayers now, it will later, because after it is built the taxpayers will have to keep the house up. I just think we are getting a little out of line," he said.

Formby's "no" was the only dissent. Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline and one of the Legislature's leading pennypinchers, is ready to toss the college presidents out of their residences.

Hollowell is still steamed about the house the University of Texas System built in Austin 12 years ago for its

"The UT regents completely lose reality on things. They're a bunch of rich men, friends of the governor, not in touch with the normal working people of this state," said Hollowell said Hollowell.

The UT System's Bauer House in Austin is somewhat of a legend among state college officials.

"That's the biggest house in the civilized world," exaggerated UT-El Paso news service director Dale Walker. "That's the one where they park the airplane indoors."

University of Texas System spokesman Joe Roddy says it's all very costefficient: a big house can bring in big

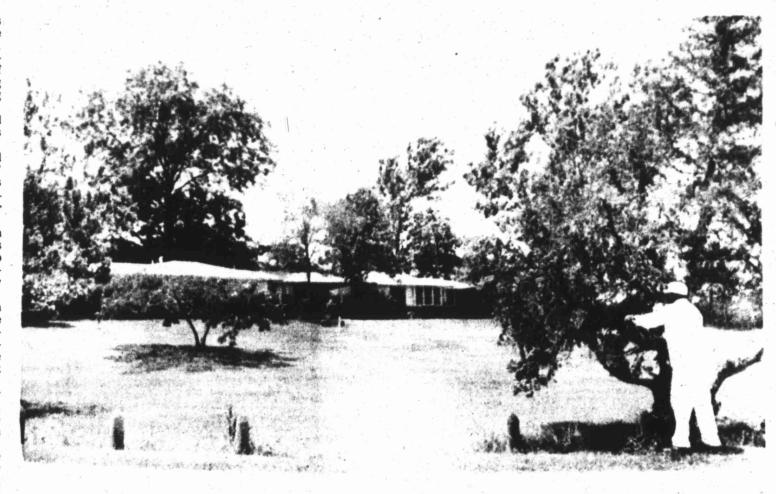

"Somebody figured out a long time ago that part of a university president's responsibility is to entertain. It's cheaper to entertain at home. It's prestigious to invite someone over who may be very benevolent to the university," said

UT System Chancellor E. Don Walker, the state's second highest-paid employee at $132,600, said free housing for college administrators is "almost a universally accepted practice."

Hollowell is unimpressed.

"I'm against giving any university president free housing. They ought to do like the rest of the people in the state — buy their own houses and pay for them," he said. "There's no shortage of university presidents. We can get 5,000 for every job vacated."

England's tea culture is brewing a revival

LONDON (AP) — Britain' seesaw love affair with tea is blooming again with a revival of elegant tea dances, trendy tea shops and even business deals over a 'cuppa" instead of a cocktail.

London's fashionable Ritz and Waldorf hotels are packing in tea-time dancers, who manage to mix several cups of the house brew and cream-covered scones with a whirl around the floor to Glenn Miller's arrangement of "In the Mood

"It's so English," said London travel agent Michael Leach during an orchestra break at the Ritz's ornate 16th centurystyle dining room.

'We like to keep up the tradition. So many things go by the boards these days. You've really got to look to find style. It's better than we expected. In fact, we're wondering what we can do next Sunday afternoon to top it." Specialty tea shops are also doing brisk business. Restaurant critic Egon Ronay said: "It can easily happen nowadays that a deal is closed over a dainty cucumber sandwich while sipping tea instead of over a tournedos rossini gulping chambertin.

Britain first got hooked on tea more than 300 years ago and since the middle of the 18th century, it has been the national drink. But the passion for tea started to wane in the late 1960s and 1970s when it faced stiff competition from coffee and

Now, tea consumption is on the upswing.

Jim Munday, executive director of the Tea Council, said it's because people have tried the alternatives and come back to the old "cuppa" — as tea is called here.

"Today, every man, woman and child over the age of 10 drinks over four cups per day and tea accounts for over half of everything we drink," said Munday.

'Today, every man, woman and child over the age of 10 drinks over four cups per day and tea accounts for over half of everything we drink.'

"The old-fashioned image is rapidly disappearing and tea is becoming positively trendy... Tea consumption among the young is on the up and up, even in the trendy West End. And people are beginning to sample the delights of the more exotic teas, which although a little more expensive still cost less than a cup of instant coffee," he said.

For Britain, tea is big business. This island nation of 54 million is the world's biggest market for tea, buying between 20 percent and 25 percent of world tea exports. Retail sales are worth more than $600 million annually and restaurants sell more than $4.5 million worth of cups of tea every day, according to the Tea Council.

But the world's oldest known beverage is also an institution - especially afternoon tea - and tea dances were great social events in the first half of the

"I hadn't been to a tea dance in nearly 30 years and my children decided this was a treat for me," said Dorothy Jenkinson of London, who was celebrating a birthday. "I think then there was more mixing. I think people are a bit shyer than in

Capt. Henri Bertrand Leitman of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, agreed.

'I haven't been to a tea dance since I wore a uniform in World War II... I think with the tea, they could serve alcohol.'

"I haven't been to a tea dance since I wore a uniform in World War II," he said. "I think this is great fun ... but it's more subdued today. I think with the tea, they could serve alcohol."

For a nation of tea lovers, critic Ronay claims it's still difficult to find a good

"It's the old story of not using the best quality tea or not enough of it, or the fallacy about teabags and the psychological resistance to them. Technical problems of the bags and their perforations having been solved, the tea they yield is just as good as that of loose he said.

In fact, the secret behind Britain's 'Tea Place of 1983," chosen by Ronay, is that it uses 250 teabags every day.

Peter Newens, proprietor of The Original Maids of Honour Tea Shop in Kew, Surrey, said his recipe for success is to use only boiling water, warm the pot, brew the tea for four minutes and stir.

As for serving, he said, use fresh milk - and alway put it in the cup before the

Cuba: 25 years later

Island's isolation beginning to break

By JOHN PLATERO Associated Press Writer

HAVANA - In Cuba, the 1956 Chevrolet is king. A nickel buys a newspaper, a telephone call or a local bus ride. It costs nothing to be born or to die.

Cuba, only 90 miles from Key West, has been isolated from much of the world for a quarter-century because of its communist government, close ties with the Soviet Union and a U.S. blockade, under which any vessel that sails to Cuba loses the privilege of delivering or taking on cargo at U.S. ports.

Cuban President Fidel Castro overthrew the government of Fulgencio Batista in January 1959. The country's two television stations and its newspapers are government-owned. Radio signals from some Miami stations reach Cuba, but only Cubans with shortwave receivers can pull in the Voice of America and other free world broadcasts

Nevertheless, to visitors who have been to the island nation over the past dozen years, Cuba is showing signs of modernization - lines for rationed commodities are shorter, grocery shelves offer more and workers now stop for a couple beers on the way home.

"We still have little in abundance, and there are economic problems. The U.S. blockade made us learn how to do things for ourselves and it doesn't affect us now like it did years ago," said a high government official who, like his peers, could be quoted only if he were not identified.

Cuba has far fewer vehicles than other Latin American countries. A personal car, regardless of condition, is a possession of great value, and more than half the autos on the island were made in the United States before 1959

A 1956 Chevrolet in poor condition sells for 8,000 to 10,000 pesos, or the equivalent of $9,280 to $11,600 in Several models of the Russian-built Lada are the most prevalent late-model cars while another compact car — Moskvich — is available only to professionals, such as doctors, dentists and architects, and outstanding workers.

Medical and dental care is free and since there is no private enterprise the government owns the funeral homes."This is one place you can die and no one has to pay for your funeral," quipped a Cuban journalist.

Cuba has almost no street crime, and assault, murder, rape and child- and wife-abuse are extremely rare. Those who commit such offenses are severely

Slum neighborhoods that crouched behind Havana's glitter and glamor during Batista's presidency were bulldozed after Castro took over. In their place, the communist government built high-rise projects. Rent is the same for everyone -10 percent of a person's

There is no welfare for those who are fit but don't want to work. Since the minimum wage in Cuba is 96 pesos a month, about $111, few loafers are tolerated.

"Technically, there is no unemployment in Cuba," said a government spokesman. "It might be 1 percent, but those are people changing jobs or just reaching the working age." Retirement age is 55 for women and 60 for men with pensions close to full salary

Education, compulsory until the ninth grade, is free through the university level. College students are offered free housing, meals and books and get $35 a month from the government. In return for free schooling, each student must renounce any right to start a private business and work two years for the

The government official explained that some youths fulfill part of their two-year service requirement by volunteering for civilian service abroad as "internationalistas," such as in Angola or Grenada.

Cuba has had rationing for 25 years yet some millionaires still live quietly in plush homes. These, explained a government official, are wealthy people who had faith in the revolution and did not withdraw their money from the banks" when Castro's victory was imminent

Every Cuban family is issued a yearly ration book a page for each month. It lists family members and shows the monthly amount each family my buy of gasoline, clothing, appliances and such foodstuffs as grain, rice, meat and lard.

For years, available commodities barely met the ration limits of four pounds of rice a month or threequarters of a pound of meat every nine days for each person. Rationed meat means only beef and chicken. The latter is weighed and sold alive.

Three years ago, Cuba's gross national product had improved enough that the government established 'parallel markets' and "farmers markets.

Rationed foodstuffs and other goods are available in parallel markets, in unlimited quantities but at in-

Rationed rice costs the equivalent of 23 U.S. cents a pound. In the parallel store, rice costs the equivalent of about $1.15 a pound. Turkey, rabbit and pork are available only in the parallel stores. A live turkey runs $18 to $20 and pork sells for $4.60 a pound.

Each adult is allowed four packs of cigarettes a month selling at 29 cents a pack and four cigars at 37 cents each. The government, however, discourages smoking, and only those who were 16 or over when the revolution took place are entitled to ration prices for their habit. The rest must buy their cigarettes and cigars at parallel stores.

Imported goods are very expensive, and trading of rationed items is common among Cubans.

Cuban-made trousers range from $14 to $35, but a pair of U.S. jeans can easily be sold for $175. American-made goods make their way here through Panama or are items produced in Taiwan, Hong Kong

At farmers markets, farmers are permitted to sell a portion of their harvest at higher prices with the government getting a portion — about 15 percent — of Cuba, discovered in 1492 by Christopher Columbus and settled by Spain, still has its Roman Catholic churches. The Havana cathedral is one of the oldest in the hemisphere, Many Cubans still attend Mass, but modern Cuba is a place where Christmas and other religious holidays are not officially recognized.

Although the U.S. blockade continues, Havana's port is jammed with ships, most from socialist or Sovietbloc nations. The Cuban government official admitted that Cuba would benefit if the embargo were lifted.

"We would like to buy medicines and hospital equip-

9 a.m. 'til 6 p.m.

Associated Press Writer FORT WORTH (AP) - Ever wondered about black snow, green snow, red snow or the coldest temperature ever recorded on the planet earth?

Maybe you're dreaming of a white Christmas? A snowy Thanksgiving? A skiing

Or maybe you're just curious about how much snowfall to expect this winter.

Whatever, with wintertime upon us, you need only to consult the 4th Jacobsen Snow Almanac, a clever little booklet that suggests there's no business like snow business.

Actually, the wintertime 1983-84 almanac is dedicated to the concept that "You never know about snow!

Perhaps that is a subtle disclaimer for the facts and forecasts contained within the 28-page booklet, which predicts that Mt. Washington, N.H., will be the snow capital of the country this winter with 206.9 inches

Of the cities listed, and not all are, nine will receive more than 100 inches of snow, according to Jacobsen.

They are Flagstaff, Ariz.; Caribou and Portland, Maine; Houghton Lake and Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; and four New York cities: Binghampton, Buffalo, Rochester and

The last snowfall of the season will be April 30 in Salem, Ore.

If Jacobsen is correct, the citizens of Amarillo, in the Texas Panhandle, got their first snowfall Saturday, and the folks in Atlantic City, N.J., are getting snowed on at this very moment (Sunday, Nov. 20). Jacobsen reports also that Casper, Wyo., won its 1982-83 "DonnerBlitzen" honors with a 24-hour, Christmas Eve snowfall accumultion of 24.3 inches.

As monitored by the National Climatic Center in Asheville, N.C., Pennsylvania's Allentown and Harrisburg each recorded 24.0 inches on Feb. 11, 1983, losing out to Casper by a mere three-tenths of an inch.

"Special acknowledgement must go to Flagstaff, Ariz., which, on four days last January, registered 92.1 inches...," the Snow Almana disclosed.

There's more:

"The coldest temperature ever registered on the planet earth was at the Soviet Union's Antartic station at Vostok, which recorded a temperature of -128.6 degrees on July 21, 1983.'

"In England's Lake District, on March 31, 1898, there was a 'sharp fall of perfectly black snow.' No one could explain it then. Or now. Greenland and other places in the Arctic, however, sometimes have red and green snow on the ground, caused by microscopic plants inside the snow itself.'

"Where are blizzards most likely to occur? Right here in the good old U.S. of A., it seems. The Great Plains states experience blizzard conditions most frequently, followed by eastern and central Canada, and then by various parts of Russia."

"The record for most snow in a single year was set from July 1970 to June 1971 at Paradise Ranger Station in Washington. The grand total?...1,027 inches.

Jacobsen's "snow dictionary" informs us that the correct name for a snowflake is crystal, from the Greek word kryllos, or frost. Such crystals are formed when hydrogen and oxygen atoms are held together by electric charges, says Jacobsen, adding: "The temperature at which the crystals are formed determines how large and elaborate they will be." Want more?

A snow bunting is a bird generally found in Arctic regions, and, in the United States, only in winter. East Snowdonia is the tallest mountain in Wales. The Snowy Mountains are in Southeastern Australia.

"Slush! Snow with all the fun melted out."-Art Linkletter.

"There's one good thing bout snow - it makes your lawn look as nice as your neighbor's."— Clyde Moore.

Among the 1983 inductees in Snow Almanac's Distinguished Glacier Room are:

Playwright...Noel Coward. Actress...Shelly Winters. Golfer...Don January.

The complete Glacier Room roster: Author, C.P. Snow; Poet, Robert Frost; Theatre, The Iceman Cometh; Actor, Chill Wills, TV Host, David Frost; Royal Connection, Lord Snowdon; Patriot, Nathan Hale; Politician, Aaron Burr; Mythology, Icelus, Greek God of Dreams: Confection, Jack Frost; Comedian, Jonathon Winters; Friend of Dwarfs, Snow White; Seasonal Traveler, Santa Claus

Throw another log on the fire and ponder

"Why did the snowman lose his trousers? "He forgot his snow belt."

"How does the snowman pay his bills? "With cold cash."

Let's quit. Your author's eyes have glazed over and his fingers grown numb.

ALL ABOUT SNOW - Winter is nearly upons us, and for those curious about what's in store, the 4th Jacobsen Snow Almanac is the ticket for weather all over the world or your own backyard. Associated Press writer takes a look at the book in the adjoining article.

One-woman staff prints museum piece newspaper

BERTHOLD, N.D. (AP) — Hunched over an antique type case, rooting through inky metal letters and muttering softly to herself, Joan Cox prepared to hand-set headlines for another edition of the Berthold Tribune, one of the last of its kind.

"I'm just stupid enough to keep doing it, until everything breaks down," said Miss Cox, the newspaper's 59-year-old editor, publisher and printer. "If I can't fix it, that's it."

The North Dakota Newspaper Association wants to turn the two-room Tribune into a showcase of how newspapering once was.

"We want to buy the complete plant, as is, for a Quiseum." said Gene Carr, the association's executive

But for now, this is no museum. It was a Wednesday press day for a weekly paper — and Miss Cox was busy with the painstaking job of setting type letter by detter for her headlines and the advertising.

Miss Cox started setting type for her father, J.S. Cox, nearly 50 years ago. She took over the paper, which is now 82 years old, in 1955. She has no formal journalism training

For the U.S., Canada and Western Europe, hand-setting has become quite rare," said Stan Nelson, museum specialist for the Smithsonian Institution's

National Museum of American History in Washington. Nelson could recall the name of only one newspaper that still used extensive amounts of handset type, The Pocahontas Times in Marlinton, W.Va., where editor William McNeel, 44, was surprised to learn of Miss

As far as we could tell, we were the last newspaper in the country to use any handset at all," he said in a telephone interview. "We handset the type for a very small portion of the front page."

A graying, quick-moving woman, clad in blue jeans and a western shirt, Miss Cox works alone; her last vacation was in 1956. She speaks in blunt, tightly punctuated sentences.

The tin-sided Tribune building stands on a corner of Main Street in Berthold, a northwestern North Dakota farming town of 400.

The heart of the newspaper is the type case, a Linotype, page forms and a desk. In the back room is the flatbed press, which is more than 100 years old and or se belonged to her grandfather in Nebraska, said Miss Cox.

The Linotype casts an entire line of type from molten lead, which she uses for front-page copy. The page forms hold the lead slugs and hand-set letters from the type case, which are carefully put back for use the following week.

Miss Cox does most of her writing at the keyboard of the clattering old typesetter. The editor doesn't cover a newsbeat. "I don't go chasing for it. If they want it in the paper, they bring it in," she said.

Two completed page forms were wheeled to the flatbed press. An inked roller glided across the forms and a two-page sheet was printed. After the first run, the papers were turned over and the procedure was repeated to complete the final two pages.

The operation "depends on how fast I make the motor go," but the flatbed normally prints about 16 sheets a minute, Miss Cox said.

The subscription price is $6 a year, or 10 cents a copy, with 600 copies printed weekly. At that rate, the revenue "is not very ... much," Miss Cox said. "I clear about $4,000 a year.

The front page is filled with local news and usually has something about the weather. "Our weather has been on the cool side this week, and it begins to feel like winter, when the sun isn't shining," a recent issue said.
There's no editorial page. "You don't write editorials in a small town. Not if you want to live

As with most newspapers, readers sometimes want a piece of news left out, and Miss Cox might oblige. "It depends," she explained. "If it's going to hurt a kid, I don't put it in. I try to protect people. In Barb's Cafe, Orlynn Locken, 38, a Farmers Union Oil Co. employee, was sipping coffee. "You read that paper every week," he said. "It don't take very long." Waitress Peggy Schweitzer agreed. "Thursdays you always read the paper. You probably heard it all before, but it's nice to read it.'

Actor fights type-casting

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - "The funny thing is, every time I want to do a part other than a detective, I get a lot of resistance," says Mike Connors. "And my first time at bat as a producer I pick a script in which I play a cop.

Connors, who spent eight years as television private eye "Mannix," produced and stars in the theatrical film "The Doorman." Connors had been wanting for some time to get into independent production and the script was brought to him by his friend, actor Tony Lo Bianco, who was director.

Connors said he is currently negotiating with several distributors and hopes to have the film out after the first of the year.

After the boom

The lights went out in Oklahoma

ELK CITY, Okla. (AP) — The lights have blinked off across the far western Oklahoma prairie, and tumbleweeds kicked along by the cold, fall wind roll unhindered across the scarred landscape.

And although the sign at the edge of town teases, "Get In Bed With Us Tonight," most of the parking spaces around the sprawl of motels remain empty. Paved streets flanked by telephone poles and guarded by swinging lines that carry few calls run through a vacant field that had been destined to become a housing development. "For sale" signs blossom in the yards of hundreds of homes.

"Two years ago people were paying $250 a month to live in somebody's cellar, and they were glad to have it," says Terry Nichols, a convenience store owner. "They were sleeping on tables in the city park and camping along the creeks. And those who were camping and didn't have tents just lived in their cars."

But two years ago was when the lights on the drilling rigs sparkled like jewels in the clear nights and the oil company trucks were backed for up as much as four blocks at the traffic lights along the main street of this and other western Oklahoma towns.

Then was when the dreamers poured their life savings into the holes being punched as much as five miles into the Earth and the jobless from nearly every state drove or hitchhiked in to seek their fortune in the oil

But a mild winter, the slumping price for natural gas, rising unemployment in the gas-using Northeast and the collapse of Oklahoma City's Penn Square Bank turned many of the dreams into nightmares.

"The petroleum industry always cycles," says Rob Snipes. "We didn't cycle. We just fell off at the high point. The industry just collapsed.'

"I had a lot of good friends who were millionaires. and now they're just hardly getting by," adds Nichols, who says his two convenience stores were stuck with more than $30,000 in bad checks and uncollectable debts as petroleum-related industries went into bankruptcy and the oilfield hands just drifted away.

It was a tough lesson for James Dupree, owner of Dupree Oil Co., a Clinton petroleum distributor. He estimates he is "doing about 45 percent of what we were when the boom was here.

Nichols estimates his business is off 75 percent to 80 percent from the boom "when you couldn't get into the parking lot. Back then, he "had 28 people working fulltime. I had two cash registers going and one person stocking shelves fulltime.

"Now I'm down to eight employees and my children come in and stock the shelves after school.

And Snipes, who runs a book store and office supply business, estimates the entire Elk City business community is down at least 45 percent from the peak.

"Back then, the men from the oil companies would come in and say, 'Give me a carton of that and two cartons of that,' Snipes said. "Now they come in and ask, 'Do I really have to buy a whole dozen pens?' Stan Metzger, an Oklahoma City businessman who travels western Oklahoma, said it was nearly impossible to make a call from a car telephone a year and a half ago "because the oil companies had all the lines tied up. Now, you can call any time you want to."

Although some companies brought in wells during the boom, many were capped and remain unproductive because federal regulations keep the price of gas too low to be marketed interstate.

"I don't want to sound callous and I don't want to see old people die in the cold, but we need a severe says Richard Armstrong, president of Heritage Savings and Loan Association. "We need to get the gas reserves flowing to get the economy

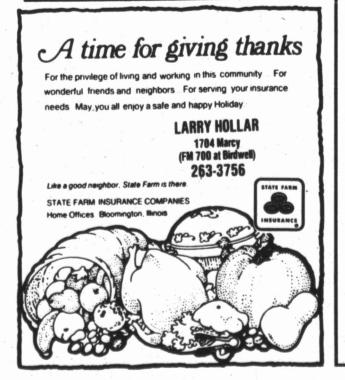

Armstrong doesn't have to go outside his colonialstyle building to see how the bust has hurt.

"In 1981 to 1982, Heritage had savings - from certificates of deposit to little savings accounts — averaging about $1.3 million to $1.5 million a month. In 1983, it is running $200,000 to $250,000 a month," he said.

In addition, Armstrong says his savings and loan had to foreclose on 17 homes during the second and third quarters of this year — this in a city of a little more than 11,000 population. 'We're handling quite a few foreclosures now," says Carlos Hodges, owner of the Clinton Abstract Co. in Clinton, a city of nearly 9,000 about 30 miles east of Elk City. "It's running about six a week, and that's triple of

"The banks are kind of in the real estate business now, with the foreclosures," adds Janice Jett, an Elk City real estate associate. "They're hurting the real estate business to some extent because these homes had insured loans and they can sell them cheaper than

An estimated 400 homes are for sale in Elk City. Nearly 600 houses at the old Clinton-Sherman Air Force Base in Burns Flat, south between Clinton and Elk City, sit vacant, abandoned by the "oilies."

The first of what had been planned as a string of "bunkhouses" — metal buildings offering minimal sleeping facilities - "is just sitting there," says Robert L. Newcomb, an Elk City accountant and rancher and partner in the idea. "We had it fitted out so 48 men could sleep there."

Nearly everyone agrees with Nichols, who said the collapse of Penn Square Bank started businesses toppling "just like a string of dominoes from Oklahoma City

The Oklahoma City bank had a large portfolio of energy loans when it was declared insolvent July 5, 1982. Western Oklahoma banks had participant loans with Penn Square, and when the Oklahoma City bank went under they were caught and had to call in the money they had lent to the drillers and related businesses. Quickly expanding companies were caught in a cash bind and had to file for bankruptcy.

Dupree said he was caught by the collapse of many companies. "They'd owe me money, and the next thing I knew they'd filed for Chapter 11" bankruptcy protec-

"I grew up out here and you learned to take a man at his word," Dupree said. "But when the oil field comes back, the oil companies better come in with a pocket full of money because they're not going to get any

Elk City's sales tax collections and building permit figures paint a grim picture of rags to rags with a touch of riches thrown in.

In August 1981, the beginning of the boom, Elk City had sales tax collections of $243,000. This rose to a high of $682,627 for July 1982, the height of the petroleum activity. By August of this year, the latest figures available, they were back down to $279,224. Permits were issued for $29.4 million worth of construction for all of 1981. This rose to $42.7 million in 1982, with January of that year accounting for $7.6 million alone. For the first 10 months of 1983, building permits totaled only $9.2 million.

Two years ago "the oil companies were sending people door to door to buy the drilling rights on quarteracre home lots," says R.D. Myers, a retired Clinton businessman. "They were paying $1,600 an acre.

"Now those leases are running ou! and the oil companies are between a rock and a hard place trying to decide whether to re-lease or let the leases go.

During the boom times, there wasn't such a thing as an empty motel room in western Oklahama - even in Elk City, which boasts more than one motel room for every resident. Most rooms then were leased by oil companies for six months or more at a time.

"I would estimate that, optimistically, we have a 40 percent occupancy rate at the Elk City motels," says John Schram, manager of the new Holiday Inn.

"We're averaging around 45 percent occupancy now," says Jerry Klemke, manager of the Glancy Motor Hotel in Clinton. "During the boom we were charging $31 a night for a single room. We're down to an average of $24 now.'

During the boom, "four oil field workers would share one little motel room for as much as $80 a day," said Myers. "Some of the smaller motels would double-rent a room, with the night crew sleeping during the day and the day crew sleeping during the night.

Oilman pumps petroleum future

EDITOR'S NOTE — Houston wildcatter Michel T. Halbouty has no patience for the politicians and academicians who wring their hands and worry about the earth running out of oil and gas. To Halbouty, the fun has just begun - nature provided lots more oil, if explorers have the nerve and intelligence to go out and find it.

By PAUL RECER Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Generations unborn will be warmed by oceans of petroleum yet to be discovered, says Michel T. Halbouty, a silver-haired oil patch prophet who finds reason for optimism in a wilderness of energy gloom.

Halbouty, one of the most successful wildcatters in history, believes it is not the sunset of the age of oil, as many claim, but only high noon.

Hundreds of oil fields, he says, are hidden under ice or thousands of feet of water, or beneath mountains or deserts. The oil awaits the probes of explorers with nerves, vision and money enough to go looking for it.

"It's there," says Halbouty, his high, thin voice racing along with excitement. "I tell you, it's there. All we've gotta do is Halbouty has been finding oil since the Born and raised in Beaumont, within hiking distance of the Spindletop oil well that started the Texas oil boom, the 70-year-old geologist sharpened his professional skills on the 1930s East Texas com and has constantly widened his horizons since.

Now he is classed as a world geologist, specialist who views the earth not as a of continents and oceans, but as the planetary result of millions of years of evolution.

New theories of geology, says Halbouty, have swept away the old ideas that the formation of oil is a phenomenon isolated to only a few lucky regions of the world. Oil, he said, was deposited in particular types of formations that can be found vir-

"The prognostication of those who say we are running out of oil was made by those who do not know geology," said Halbouty. In just the last five years, he said, more geological and geophysical concepts have been postulated and proven than all of the 50 years proceeding.

The earth is the same as it was, he adds. But scientists are now looking at it differently. And when they look, they are finding more oil.

"There are about 600 oil basins in the world," said Halbouty. "Of those, 160 are producing oil and gas. Two hundred have had very, very little exploration. And 240 have had practically no exploration at all. So you see, you've actually got 440 basins in the world that have not been adquately

Each of the basins could hold scores of private company. oil fields, some with the potentials of an Alaska or a Saudi Arabia or an East miles awaiting the drilling bit of the Halbouty, using data from satellites and from proven geology, has prepared maps showing in purple where these potential oil basins lie. There are purple smears across much of Siberia, great blotches in central China and Canada, and in Asia, South America and Africa. Continents on his map are rimmed with purple, marking water covered basins along the coasts of the Americas, in the Artic Sea, around Australia and the Pacific coasts of Asia. There were also huge fields of purple marching across the plains and mountains deserts of the Western United States.

'My God, they are fantastic!" Halbouty says, gesturing at the map, his eyes alive with excitement. "Think of it!"

It's such vision that gives the oilman little patience with those who see an end coming soon to the age of oil. The oil is there, he insists, even in areas as heavily drilled as the United States.

"Frankly, I am quite disturbed over those doom and gloom people who are saying that there is no more oil and gas to be found in the United States of any consequence," he says. "I'm not that pessimistic."

Halbouty remembers how wrong the 'experts' have been in the past. Once, he recalls, geologists, using the best knowledge then known, said that East Texas would have no oil, that it would be a waste to even drill there

But hunch-playing wildcatters did drill. And they opened up an oil field that was the richest in the North American continent. Decades later, other wildcatters drilled where experts said it was impossible — on the north slope of Alaska — and they found a field even richer than East

The age of such discoveries is not over, says Halbouty.

There are a hell of a lot of East Texas's waiting to be found," he said. Engineering advances have also opened new energy frontiers.

Oil rigs are drilling in deeper and deeper water, penentrating deeper and deeper into the earth, and in conditions of ice and heat and weather that were once thought impossible to challenge.

Even two years ago, drilling in 200 to 300 feet of water was considered risky,' said Halbouty. "Now we're drilling in 6,000 feet of water and in a few years we'll be drilling in 10,000 feet of water."

And drillers are challenging rock structures once thought inpenetrable. The estern Overthrust of the Rocky Mountains is an example, he said.

Those rugged peaks were once thought devoid of any oil prospect because of the thick mantle of granite.

"If one of my engineers had come to me and recommended we drill down through 10,000 feet of granite to oil, I would have chased him off," said Halbouty. "But then a wildcatter from Fort Worthdid it and he found oil.

Now the Overthrust is considered a hot, new area for oil and gas.

Halbouty estimates that there have been 1.2 trillion barrels of oil produced or discovered since the liquid fuel age began in 1901. Another 1.2 trillion barrels about the same amount that has already been found - are awaiting discovery in basins around the world, says the geologist.

The future is even better for natural gas, he says. There have been about 1.313 trillion cubic feet of gas produced in history. Halbouty believes that untapped basins will produce another 5,081 trillion cubic feet of gas, almost five times the entire amount that has been burned in the st 50 years.

Fuel in such quantities, says Halbouty, will carry the age of oil and gas far into the next century. And if he has his way, he'll still be around to make some of those discoveries

Halbouty lives life at a constant run, regularly working 14 to 16 hours a day at the Houston office building that is the headquarters of his multi-million dollar

He is a striking figure, with flowing silver hair and mustache, and perfectly tailor suits. Halbouty dashes around Houston in a Mercedes-Benz sports car The basins cover vast regions of the and flies off to distant cities in his private earth, millions and millions of square jet, often packing more into a day than many would attempt in a week

"He's got more energy than anybody I know, no matter what age," says a Halbouty employee. "I limit my day to 12 hours. but he's usually here when I arrive and here when I leave.

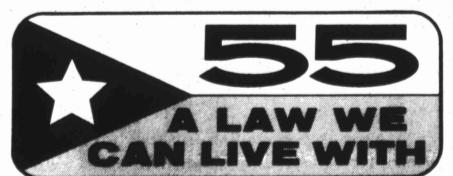

Halbouty has written two books, regularly gives lectures and research papers at professional meetings, and donates hundreds of hours annually as a government consultant. He was chairman of the energy committee in Ronald Reagan's transistion team and the wall of Halbouty's plush office is lined with signed pictures of him with presidents and other government leaders.

He's not the stereotypical wildcatter. The oilman seldom drinks, never smokes and religously starts each day with a rugged 35-minute workout.

Said a oil company employee who knows him well: "He once said he'd like to still be looking for oil at age 110. I think he just might do it."

Halbouty has no doubts.

"I've been in the oil business 50 years." he says, his eyes twinkling and his voice charged with excitement. "And I still think there are a lot of discoveries to be
