Off the wall: Fortune found

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — An Air Force officer says he always thought about finding a small fortune, but when he found it all he wanted to do was get rid of it.

Lt. Col. John Kolar was driving his daughter to a New Year's Eve party when he spotted a small bag in the roadway. Thinking it was "a little kid's toy purse," he picked it up. It contained $1,913 in cash and another $813 in checks.

"You always think about finding a fortune, but when I opened that pouch and saw three inches of solid money, all I wanted to do was get rid of it," said Kolar, who serves as a liaison with the Civil Air Patrol.

Kolar returned the money to the man who lost it, Vito Coraci, 38.

"I never thought there were such good people out there in the world," Coraci said. "Trust in God and trust in other people, too."

U.S. jobless rate drops to 8.2%

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment fell to 8.2 percent in December, continuing the steady improvement from the peak double-digit jobless level of a year ago, the government reported today. It was the best post-recession labor market recovery in over 30 years. Since unemployment hit a post-Depression high of 10.7 percent in December 1982, total U.S. civilian employment has soared by 4 million.

See related story page 2A.

The labor market recovery from the business slump of 1981-82 was at the fastest pace of any post-recession rally since 1951, the Bureau of Labor Statistics noted. In November, some 9.4 million people were officially classified as jobless, even though the unemployment rate dropped to 8.4 percent from October's 8.8 percent. The rate had stood at 9.3 percent in September.

The agency had initially reported that the December 1982 unemployment rate was 10.8 percent, but in today's report, the BLS revised jobless statistics for the past 13 months. The new figures put the December 1982 unemployment at 10.7 percent, rather than 10.8 percent.

Today's report said that more than 335,000 Americans went to work last month, and that the total number of those officially categorized as unemployed shrank by 230,000, to 9.2 million. At the height of the 1981-82 recession, more than 12 million were out of work. The overall unemployment rate, including the nearly 1.7 million military people stationed in the United States, dropped from 8.3 percent to 8.1 percent last month, the report said.

The ranks of the so-called "discouraged workers" — those not counted as unemployed because they have given up looking for jobs — shrank by 100,000 in the fourth quarter, to 1.5 million. Since the first quarter of last year, the total number of discouraged workers has fallen by 350,000.

There have been eight recessions since the end of World War II. The rally in the labor market following the most recent business slump, the one that lasted roughly from July 1981 through December 1982, was at the quickest pace since the 1949-50 recession.

In 1951, the unemployment rate fell by 3.7 percentage points. The 2.5 percentage point drop in 1983 eclipsed the 2.3 percent drop in 1960, following the recession of 1959-60, said bureau analyst Deborah Klein.

Following the 1974-75 recession brought on by the Arab oil embargo, the unemployment rate in 1976 fell by only 0.9 percentage point over the year.

Commenting on the latest unemployment trend, Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, acknowledged that the declining jobless rate might be due in part to the fact that fewer people than expected have re-entered the labor force in search of work.

She said, in remarks prepared for delivery to a congressional committee, that "labor force growth during the present recovery has been somewhat slower than in previous recovery periods. This should have been expected."

Mrs. Norwood said that "youth population is now declining rather than increasing as it did through most of the 1970s."

Many private economists have said that while they're pleased with the falling joblessness, they feel many unemployed Americans are delaying their return to the labor force. Some say the rate could go up this spring if these people return in droves to the job market.

The total number of Americans with jobs last month reached 102.9 million, the highest ever.

State to intensify search for arsenic

By KEELY COGHLAN

KNOTT — An intensive study of contamination in rural water wells will be conducted by the state's water resources department to try to determine the source of arsenic contamination here, state officials said today.

State Department of Agriculture natural resources director Bob King told a group of about 20 farmers gathered at the Knott Co-op Gin this morning that the Texas Department of Water Resources has agreed to get involved in studying the mysterious contamination which has killed cattle in this area.

Agricultural department region director David Davis said that a wider circle of water samples from Coahoma and Ackerly have not shown detectable levels of arsenic. Davis said this indicated that the problem could be limited to the Knott area.

Less than 10 percent of more than 150 wells tested by the Department of Agriculture showed arsenic levels above the Environment Protection Agency's acceptable level of .05 parts per million, he said. About 85 percent showed detectable levels of arsenic.

The levels of arsenic are a concern to the Department of Agriculture but not "cause for alarm," King said.

Local state representative Larry Don Shaw probably will present legislation to have the Department of Water Resources monitor rural water wells for heavy metals and toxic chemicals on a regular basis, said Sandy Burroughs, an aide to Shaw.

The cost of testing should not be See Knott page 2-A

State's schools get poor rating

By DANA PALMER and
JANET WARREN
Harte-Hanks Bureau

AUSTIN — Computer magnate H. Ross Perot, who is pushing for massive public school reform, and the state's highest education bureaucrat agree that Texas' poor educational rating is accurate and comes as no surprise.

But Texas Education Commissioner Raymond Bynum primarily blames a surge in Texas' Hispanic population while Perot maintains that the public school's topsy-turvy priorities are the biggest culprits.

Statistics released Thursday by Education Secretary T.H. Bell rank Texas below the national average in 1982 in Scholastic Achievement Test scores, graduation rates, pupil-teacher ratio and teacher salaries.

Perot, who chairs a state committee engineering changes for public schools, said the report "confirms what we already knew" about Texas schools.

To boost the state's standing, Perot calls for trimming what he called "courses on hunting and fishing." He said children should not be selling cookies and candy during school hours or "taking their chickens around the state."

Such a move, however, will "produce a squeal like you've never heard," Perot said.

Bynum concurred that the report released by Education Secretary T.H. Bell is "accurate" in its Texas ratings. But he said the figures deserve a closer look, claiming that Texas fared well when compared with other large minority states.

"It looks like we have made a huge decline" in some categories, Bynum said. "Two states have gone down more than we have, New York and California, for exactly the same reason. These three huge states have had the big minority increase. They naturally made the biggest change."

Bynum placed secondary blame on school curriculum, calling it "too soft" on the basics. "That's why it's being rewritten."

Perot and Bynum seemed to agree that new money may not be the panacea for public school ills.

Woman busy clowning around

By KEELY COGHLAN

Gail Earls has two faces.

During the day, she works as a secretary for the Howard County extension office. On weekends and special occasions, she is a clown.

She has, by her own admission, three distinct personalities, two of which are clowns.

"It's as if I have sort of a split personality. I do things in front of people (as a clown) that I would never do without my clown suit," Mrs. Earls said. "In the little theater (as Elvira, one of her clown characters), I was a little racy. I swung around and showed off my boobs. I would never act that way normally."

Elvira is the second clown persona Mrs. Earls has created. As Elvira, Mrs. Earls wears a purple dress, tennis shoes, a red wig and carries a large cloth bag.

"Elvira thinks she's something sexy. Of course, she's not sexy. She's anything but. She wears her Big Spring High gold and black knee socks and a purple dress and the wig," Mrs. Earls said.

To complete the outfit, Elvira wears a police whistle around her neck she says Police Chief Rick Turner gave her to prevent anyone from attacking her. And she picks out "a hunk" from the audience and announces to anyone within hearing range that he is her boyfriend.

Elvira began as a joke for a friend's 50th birthday about a year ago, Mrs. Earls said. But she has been clowning for almost four years now, having started as a clown in the rodeo scene of the Iron Horse Review. Friends who had seen her as Santa Claus at a nursing home and as a Keystone Kop in the Centennial Review had asked her to be a clown, but Mrs. Earls said she was unsure.

"I knew Quayle Dobbs (a famous rodeo clown from Coahoma), and I asked him if he thought I could do it. And he said yes, and gave me one of his old shirts and baggy pants and showed me how to do the makeup. And I started," she said.

That first try at clowning evolved into "Happy," a clown who, well, "clowns around" and makes people smile, a community service, Mrs. Earls said, "because there is too much sadness."

Mrs. Earls says she has yet to come up with her own permanent "face." The particular way a clown makes up his or her face is that clown's trademark. "Right now, I'm still experimenting."

State budget scrambled by merger

By Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Somewhat like a white rabbit in a magic act, a $15 million cushion in the current state budget seemed to disappear and reappear this week, and yet nothing really happened.

Comptroller Bob Bullock started the disappearing part of the act with a news release referring to a merger of three prominent Texas electric utility companies, including Texas Electric Service Co., into Texas Utilities Electric Co.

The merger, he said, provides a loophole under which the "new company" wouldn't have to pay as much gross receipt tax to the state as would the three former companies — Texas Electric Service Co., Texas Power and Light and Dallas Power and Light.

In fact, he said, the loophole would eat up the $15 million cushion of revenue over expenses that he projected last October for state finances in the 1984 and 1985 fiscal years.

The tax law says the companies are to be treated as a new firm, paying a minimum tax of $50 for the first quarter of 1984, Bullock said.

The budget surplus reappeared with a statement from George Hedrick, spokesman for Texas Utilities Electric, to the Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau.

The company plans to pay gross receipts taxes on the same basis as before the merger, he said.

Hooper Sanders, division manager of the TESCO Big Spring division, said, "Texas Utilities Electric Company has planned and budgeted the payment of gross receipts taxes on the same basis as before the merger, and will make the next payment when it is due on Jan. 31."

"We are surprised that this issue came up because we never intended to do anything else," Hedrick said in a telephone interview. "We believe that the intent of both the tax laws and the Texas Business Corporation Act is that the tax obligations of the previous companies are assumed by Texas Utilities Electric Co."

John Moore, spokesman for the comptroller's office, said the state assumed the company would take the tax loophole "because they were eligible for it."

He added: "We'll be glad to take (the money). We're glad they are doing this as an act of good corporate citizenship... But the loophole still needs to be closed by the Legislature."

LAMESA — Questions about financial aid will be discussed at an information session at 7 p.m. Jan. 12 in the Lamesa High School Student Center.

Seniors in area high schools and their parents are encouraged to attend. Questions such as, where does financial aid come from, what kind of assistance is available, who is eligible and how to apply will be answered.

A slide presentation, outlining basic facts relative to financial aid, will be shown. The four major financial aid programs, the application process, "packing" of financial aid, common errors in applications, and scholarship information will be covered.

Kathy Rawlings, Learn Educational Talent Search Counselor, will be available for questions. Further information about the session may be obtained from Cheryl Simmans, Lamesa High School counselor, at 872-8385.

FIRST 'TEST TUBE' QUADRUPLETS — These are the world's first quadruplets to be conceived in the laboratory. The baby's arrived today. Their mother asked to remain anonymous. The infants are reported in excellent health.

Test tube quads arrive today

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — The world's first test-tube quadruplets, all boys, were reported in excellent condition after being delivered today, six weeks ahead of schedule, by a team of 28 doctors and nurses.

It was the parent's second attempt at artificial insemination after being unable to conceive during their 10 years of marriage, officials at the Royal Women's Hospital said.

The babies were delivered by Caesarean section this morning after doctors decided the unborn quads were no longer growing inside the mother.

The 30-year-old mother entered the hospital a week before Christmas to prepare for the expected premature delivery and was under general anaesthetic during the Caesarean, doctors said.

Doctors said she reached her 32nd week of pregnancy Dec. 28, and the births were expected any time after that. Women carrying more than one child often give birth before the full term of 40 weeks.

"We are delighted with their condition," said Dr. Neil Roy, one of the physicians involved in the deliveries. "They really are in excellent condition."

Two of the babies have slight breathing problems because of the early delivery, but all four were breathing without the aid of respirators within hours of being born, Roy said.

The physician who headed the delivery, Dr. Andrew Spiers, said the decision was made to perform the Caesarean section after "it became clear the placentas were not supporting the babies' growth." The parents of the quads have not been identified to protect their privacy, hospital officials said. But doctors described the parents as "wildly excited."

The babies will be named Sam, Christopher, Ben and Brett, but the parents had not decided which name to give each baby.

An initial attempt at fertilization last January failed. Four eggs were fertilized with the husband's sperm May 21 and successfully implanted in the womb.

In vitro fertilization, the egg from the mother is joined with the sperm of the father in a laboratory dish and then reimplanted in the mother's womb. Doctors often implant more than one fertilized egg to increase the chance that at least one fetus lives.

Dr. Ian Johnston, head of the hospital's reproductive biology unit, said quadruple births are "fairly unique" in human artificial reproduction.

He said the hospital team would continue implanting women with three and sometimes four embryos, adding that doctors do not really know how the quadruple pregnancy occurred.

"There are indications that we are getting better ..." he said.

Australian scientists have been pioneers in artificial reproduction. The world's first test-tube twins and triplets were born in Australia. Scientists estimate about two-thirds of the world's 500 or so test-tube children are Australian.

Clown

But people do react in different ways, Mrs. Earls said. "Some kids run out in the street to see me. The 7- to 9-year-olds think they are too old for a clown but want to be near me, so they come up and try to play tricks on me. Grown-ups seem more sincere when they shake hands with a clown." Some young children cry at first because they are frightened of the strange, heavy makeup, Mrs. Earls said. To combat that she uses hand puppets to talk to children. "They never look up. They just look at the puppets," she said.

Although she says she enjoys clowning, Mrs. Earls says she doesn't want to become a full-time clown. She clowns for free. She plans to frame the only money she's ever made as a clown, $5 at a birthday party.

"I'm not sure I want to cater birthday parties. That's work," Mrs. Earls says. However, she says she would like to attend a professional clown school some day, but doesn't think she will ever do it.

Nor does she appear as a clown at the rodeo because "that's Quayle's time. I just have fun doing my thing at my time."

Knott

Continued from page 1-A prohibitive, King said, because the Department of Water Resources already tests more than 1,000 wells in the state for mineral levels.

Neither the agriculture department nor the EPA have program for routine monitoring of wells, he said. King hopes to obtain a pilot monitoring program in the area with EPA financial support, he said.

Agriculture officials are uncertain as to the source of the arsenic contamination, partly because wells which are contaminated do not fall into any particular pattern. Contamination may be related to construction of older wells, he said. Wells in which casing is old or not up to more recent standards may have allowed arsenic runoff to have contaminated the well.

At this time, the agriculture department does not think arsenic used in defoliants was a primary cause of the contamination, King said, because testing of the wells behind cotton gins did not show high arsenic contents.

Arsenic has been used in spraying cotton in the area for more than 20 years. "We have to look and see if it is a potential component or a primary component of the contamination," King said.

The contamination could be a combination of several things, including the presence of uranium or other minerals. Arsenic is present in association with uranium mining. There has been some exploratory mining for uranium in this area, King said.

King said he hopes the study will be completed in a few months.

Although Agriculture Department officials have told a few people to consider not drinking their water, he said the water is fine for use in bathing and washing. The water can be used to water livestock, he said.

"There is no problem with water being used to water livestock. Manufacturers say you can feed four parts per million of arsenic," King said.

Texas jobless rate up 1 percent

DALLAS (AP) — Buoyed by good economic news, a large number of people returned to the labor market in Texas last month but failed to find jobs and pushed the state's unemployment rate up 1 percent to 7.7 percent, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics said today.

In November, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate stood at 6.7 percent. In December 1982, the adjusted figure was 8 percent. The latest unemployment figures for Howard County are for November, reflecting a 6.8 percent rate.

"Over the month, the labor force, employment and unemployment all rose," said Bryan Richey, regional commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "The net effect was a one-percentage point increase in the unemployment rate."

Texas saw an increase of 116,000 people in the labor pool, but only one in four of the new job-seekers actually found work, Richey said.

"A lot of people have been drawn back into the labor force because there has been a lot of good economic news. But we (Texas) trailed the nation going into the recession and we trail it coming out."

Richey said the number of part-time jobs to accommodate strong Christmas retail sales was not as high as economic experts had thought.

Without adjustment for seasonal fluctuation, the unemployment rate was 7.1 percent, up from 6.8 percent in November and down from 7.4 percent in December 1982.

Despite the 1-percent jump in unemployment, Richey said experts were optimistic about the Texas economic outlook.

"The trend of employment has been upward," he said. "The Texas economy has produced nearly a quarter of a million jobs since one year ago. Unfortunately, we have not done as well in reducing the number of unemployed."

"We are climbing out of a deep recession," Richey said. "The economy is not yet growing fast enough to provide jobs for everyone who wants to work."

In the fourth quarter of 1982, unemployment stood at 7.8 percent, half a point higher than the last quarter of 1983, he said. In the third quarter of last year, unemployment stood at 7.9 percent.

Survey issued for sewing jobs

Survey forms to poll the job market for interest in industrial sewing jobs are available in local and area grocery stores, LeRoy Tillery, executive director of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, said.

The Chamber is conducting the labor survey for a women's garment manufacturer considering locating in Big Spring.

The manufacturer eventually could employ about 100 people, Tillery said. Anyone interested in an industrial sewing job is urged to fill out a survey form, he said.

Tillery said the firm, which he declined to name, is seeking experienced workers but would provide training for inexperienced workers.

Survey forms should be returned by Jan. 15. If a sufficient number of prospective employees fill out the forms, Tillery said the new plant will begin operation early this year.

Divorce testimony ends

Testimony in the D.L. and Zoe Dorland divorce case ended Thursday afternoon in 118th District Court. However, District Court Judge Jim Gregg is not expected to reach a decision on how to divide community property between the multi-millionaire couple for at least a month.

Final arguments will be presented in writing to the judge. Gregg granted attorney's requests to submit written final arguments because of the complexity of the case and the large amount of property and money to be divided.

Testimony throughout the trial centered on the couple's finances, property and the finances and equipment of Dorland's companies. Among the companies Dorland owns is D.L. Dorland Inc., a Midland-based oil producing company and several partnerships, including one established for tax purposes with Exxon and Gary Turner Properties.

Testimony Thursday continued to concern the couple's expenditures and property, especially a loan from First National Bank of Big Spring at 100 percent interest to secure property in Pilot Point. Mrs. Dorland's attorney, Bob O'Donnell of Dallas, told the court he helped set up the deal, in which the property value is expected to double in five years.

Gregg also heard testimony on a number of cars given as gifts to relatives and friends during the last 18 months, including a $44,000 Porsche to Jan Iden, owner of the Biarritz Gallery at 115 E. Third St. She is now married to Gordon Bristow.

By The Associated Press
West Texas — Cooler Sunday, otherwise partly cloudy. Lows mid 20s Panhandle to mid 30s south. Highs low 50s extreme north to mid 60s extreme south.

Weather remains warm

Dense high cloudiness spread from an upper air low over Baja California across Texas early this morning, keeping temperatures across the state above the freezing mark and promising another unseasonably warm winter day.
And weak south to southwest surface winds kept pre-dawn readings in the 40s and 50s over all but the High Plains.
A weak cold front shifted winds to the northwest behind a Wichita Falls-to-Midland line, lowering readings into the 30s over the Panhandle, midland line, lowering readings into the 30s over the Panhandle.
The warmest spot in the state was McAllen at 57 degrees; the coolest spot was Amarillo at 36.
Elsewhere, it was 43 at Lubbock, 48 at Abilene, 46 at San Angelo, 44 at Dallas, 40 at Texarkana, 38 at Lufkin, 49 at Houston, 47 at San Antonio, 50 at Austin, 51 at Corpus Christi and 40 at El Paso.
Fog lowered visibilities to three-fourths of a mile at Brownsville and shrouded much of the lower Gulf coast.

Homecoming slated

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. — Homecoming ceremonies for Robert O. Goodman Jr., the freed Navy flier, are to be held at his old high school, officials said.
Gov. John Sununu declared the day "Robert O. Goodman Day," on Thursday.
Joining Goodman at his alma mater will be the Rev. Jesse Jackson, the Democratic presidential candidate who helped negotiate Goodman's release from Syria this week, said Ed Theobald, Jackson's state campaign coordinator. He said it is not yet known when exactly Goodman will arrive in Portsmouth, where his wife's family lives.
Goodman, captured by the Syrians when his plane was shot down Dec. 4 during a bombing raid over Syrian positions in Lebanon, was freed Tuesday in Damascus after a plea from Jackson.

Dubious honor

CASCADE, Colo. — Former Interior Secretary James Watt has been given a dubious honor — but then, he's in the good company of former president Jimmy Carter's brother Billy and television's Ed McMahon.
Watt, who resigned his Cabinet post amid controversy, has been chosen to receive the "1983 Medal of Mediocrity" for a "lack of sensitivity below and beyond the call of duty... He managed to offend nearly everyone."
Recipients are picked annually by the Millard Fillmore Society in Cascade.

JAMES WATT

"He (Watt) is the only politician in American history to put his foot into his mouth after shooting a hole in it," Phil Arkow, the society's vice president, said Thursday.
The award will be presented at the organization's Saturday night celebration of the 184th birthday of Millard Fillmore, known as one of America's least distinguished presidents.

Husband sues Heckler

WASHINGTON — Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler, noting that it is a very difficult situation, says she will have nothing more to say about her husband's decision to sue for divorce.
Departmental spokesmen said Thursday that John Heckler, the Cabinet secretary's husband for 30 years, filed for the divorce in Arlington County, Va., Court Dec. 9.
He has remained in Massachusetts through most of Mrs. Heckler's career as a member of Congress for 16 years and in the Cabinet post for nearly one year. Mrs. Heckler has an apartment in Arlington.

Problems lie ahead

Hundreds of Northwesterners who scurried for higher ground when heavy rains and snowmelt pushed rivers over their banks returned home today, but more problems may lie ahead if warm temperatures and ice jams swell already brimming streams.
The Lummi Indian reservation near Bellingham, Wash., remained almost completely cut off by floodwaters today, and four families were left homeless after torrents of mud and boulders destroyed their mobile homes near Sedro Woolley.
To the north, British Columbia residents began cleaning up from heavy rain that washed away highways and railroad lines, with damage to transportation facilities alone estimated at $5 million.
Washington state officials relaxed slightly Thursday night as torrential rains turned to a trickle and surging floodwaters backed off, allowing lowland residents to return home. But flood warnings continued today for the Skagit and Snoqualmie rivers in western Washington and the Methow and Similkameen rivers east of the Cascades.
"Just some light showers are headed for the Northwest," said Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo., today. "Their biggest problem is warming and it will continue, adding to their problems with snowmelt."
There is "nothing that we can see" that would indicate a return to the bitter cold that gripped much of the nation for most of December, Duke said. He added the "very mild weather pattern" could cause some flooding in the Midwest from snowmelt.

Link disputed

WASHINGTON — National Cancer Institute scientists say they have found no statistical evidence that atomic testing in the 1950s led to a major increase in childhood leukemia in Utah, as other researchers contend.
The cancer institute scientists, in a report published today in Science magazine, said an earlier study that is frequently cited as proof of the connection was flawed by invalid assumptions and the use of questionable statistical methods.

However, the researcher who led the earlier study said he stood by the validity of the work and, in turn, questioned some of the assumptions used in preparing the new report.
The possible link between above-ground nuclear weapons tests and cancer has taken on more than medical significance to those who were in the path of the fallout from those blasts.
Some 1,192 residents of Utah, Nevada and Arizona are suing the federal government, alleging that the atomic tests produced radioactive fallout that caused cancer and other diseases in people downwind.

During a nine-week federal court trial in 1982 in Salt Lake City, plaintiffs cited the earlier study as a major piece of evidence for their case. U.S. District Court Judge Bruce Jenkins took the lawsuit under advisement and has yet to render a decision.

Leaders still missing

LAGOS, Nigeria — Reports of arbitrary detentions circulated in Lagos today and the whereabouts of several leaders of Nigeria's ousted civilian government remained unknown six days after the military coup.
In the capital of Africa's most populous nation, businesses operated normally Thursday, streets were crowded, and there were few traces of Saturday's military takeover except an increased number of army checkpoints on roads.
The country's new military ruler, Maj. Gen. Mohammed Buhari, told reporters at a news conference that overthrown President Alhaji Shehu Shagari was "safe and sound" in military custody.
But Buhari, 41, did not comment on the fate of other officials of the former administration.
Shagari's vice president, Alex Ekweme, and the president of the House of Representatives, Benjamin Chaha, were reported taken from their homes by troops last weekend. There was no word on the whereabouts of Senate President Joseph Wayas.

Japanese vote a major setback

The parliamentary elections held Dec. 18 in Japan were a major setback for Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and his Liberal Democratic Party.

And, it was a blow to the United States as well. Nakasone has been a good friend of the United States and President Reagan. He has pushed for more defense spending in Japan and for trade agreements, both of interest to America.

The election was a crushing blow. Liberal Democrats lost their majority in the 511-member lower house. Among those voted from office were three members of the prime minister's Cabinet.

The outcome jeopardizes Nakasone's position as prime minister and is certain to make it harder for him to carry out his administrative goals.

Opponents to the Liberal Democrats had campaigned on the need for Japan to clean up government. They focused attention on former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, who was convicted recently of accepting $1.8 million in bribes from Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

Tanaka refused to sign his seat in the Diet, and Nakasone refused to break ties with him. Still, Tanaka seemed personally untouched by the scandal. Running as an independent, he was elected to his home district of Niigata prefecture by the highest number of votes he has received in 15 elections.

Nakasone called the elections a stunning setback. However, he pledged continued efforts to expand Japan's defense capability in the Western Pacific — a goal long sought by the United States.

In Washington, U.S. trade representative William Brock called the election results "unsettling," but said the United States would work hard to maintain its trade relationship with any Japanese government.

We hope that Nakasone can form alliances with other parties and hold his high office. He has been an effective leader and has shown a high level of international understanding in his 13 months as prime minister.

The GOP is ready for a fight

WASHINGTON — The quadrennial hand has come around again to a presidential year, which for a political reporter is the time of maximum stimulation. It is the time when public interest in political reporting reaches that high plateau normally reserved for sports news and sex crimes.

But in 1984, the presidential-year fever may not spread far beyond the political partisans and activists. The voters at large are not sufficiently frightened by Ronald Reagan or stimulated by Walter Mondale, the two likely contenders, to run up a temperature.

The outlook on this opening day of another campaign year is that President Reagan will be re-elected. Mondale appears destined to become the latest in a succession of undistinguished, uninspiring Democratic candidates of the Jimmy Carter and George McGovern genus.

The Democrats' dream of winning back a Senate majority is also fading. "My judgment now is that a Democratic majority is about a 50-50 proposition," says Brian Atwood, director of the Democratic Senate Campaign Committee.

It had been thought that the retirement of Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., would dampen Republican prospects. But Cici Cole of the National Republican Senatorial Committee now believes, "we'll hold."

Some GOP candidates had been apprehensive about the Reagan shadow; now they are eager to bask in his reflected glow. Asked what would be the single worst thing that could befall his Republican opponents this year, Atwood said dryly, "Ronald Reagan deciding not to run again."

Something is transmitted in Reagan's appearance, demeanor and natural amiability that appeals to the public's need for patriarchal reassurance. He will be portrayed by the Democrats as a president surrounded by plutocrats, without compassion for the poor and the blacks. But Reagan has a capacity to float placidly above the partisan squalls that he may himself stir up.

Mondale, for all of his quiet competence, comes across as the Democrats' answer to Sominex. With his heavy lids and hand-dog expression, he sometimes seems to be putting himself to sleep. His best chance would be to choose as his running mate a woman, who would attract the political spotlight from him.

The battle for control of the Senate will likely be decided in five states where the Democrats are mounting their strongest challenges. My reporters William Montague and Lucas Rivera interviewed political experts in these crucial states. Here's how the races are shaping up:

• North Carolina: Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, darling of the New Right, was 20 points behind his Democratic challenger, Gov. Jim Hunt, a few months ago. But Helms is the acknowledged champion of fund-raisers and, therefore, will be able to outspend Hunt by a big margin. Helms has already closed the gap to nine points in the polls, and he has barely started spending yet.

• Texas: The likely Democratic candidate will be former Rep. Bob Krueger, a moderate who has oil industry support and is close to the state's Hispanic leadership. But his opponent is expected to be Rep. Phil Gramm, the Boll Weevil Democrat who switched parties and won re-election easily as a Republican. Texas has a wide conservative streak, and Reagan is popular. Gramm could ride the president's coattails into the Senate.

• New Hampshire: Conservative Republican Gordon Humphrey's New Right rhetoric — for school prayer and against the Equal Rights Amendment — has alienated many voters. Humphrey is trying to soften his ultraconservative image, and he's sure to outspend Democratic Rep. Norman D'Amours. A toss-up.

• Iowa: Incumbent Republican freshman

Roger Jepsen faces an uphill battle against Rep. Tom Harkin, a popular moderate Democrat. The Democrats hope to court moderate Republicans by painting Jepsen as a puppet manipulated by Reagan. Harkin is ahead.

• Tennessee: Sen. Howard Baker's withdrawal left the Republicans in bad shape, and Democratic Rep. Albert Gore should be an easy winner. He has the name — his father was an immensely popular senator — and solid backing by the party hierarchy. State Sen. Victor Ashe is the GOP front-runner, but he'll need big help from Reagan to upset Gore.

Some other states to watch:

• Minnesota: Republican incumbent Rudy Boschwitz holds a commanding lead, but his support could erode if native son Walter Mondale heads the Democratic ticket.

• West Virginia: Democratic Gov. Jay Rockefeller looks like the next senator, but ex-Gov. Arch Moore would make it a real race if he runs.

• Illinois: Republican incumbent Charles Percy should be re-elected. The Democrats' best hope is for conservative Republican Rep. Tom Corcoran to beat Percy in the primary.

• Colorado: Republican incumbent William Armstrong's New Right views have stirred up the opposition, but he'll probably win anyhow. Likely challengers: Lt. Gov. Nancy Dick or attorney Carlos Lucero.

KUWAIT UPDATE: Officials of the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait, which was recently blasted in terrorist bomb attack, are furious at Washington bureaucrats who failed to approve even relatively simple security measures that the embassy had requested months earlier.

One suggestion was that the front gate of the embassy compound — only a few yards from the nearest buildings — be sealed, and that all entries be made from the rear of the compound. That would have given room to erect obstacles to stop a bomb truck before it scored a hit.

Around The Rim

By RICK BROWN

My wanderlust

It comes every year, but this year it came early.

I'm not talking about Winter's bitter cold, but something that always hits me at the same time as the first frigid wind that pushes down the continent from points north — and hits me with the same bone-chilling ache.

I'm talking about my curse, my wanderlust.

It overtakes me at both strange and obvious times: In airports, for example, or while eating pizza. In a movie or while shaving in a strange bathroom.

I can't fight it and don't want to. I stop in the middle of what I'm doing and let it run through me. It goes from head to heart, from gut to thighs and then the questions hit me.

They seem to be the most profound queries imaginable, yet I laugh at their triviality.

How do they drink tea in Morocco?

Do they wave good-bye in Kiev?

What does Bangkok smell like?

I don't know.

And that's the problem. When my wanderlust comes, I am desperate for a new feeling or a new way of doing something. Frustration reigns and I am filled with a base desire to get out, get moving and just get away.

I feel at war inside myself because I know getting away is impossible. I've got too many responsibilities. I'm tied down to a job that I like and to people I love. These feelings, plus a dozen other rationalizations all add up to one decision: stay put.

No, I would be giving away too much to simply chuck it all and take off to, say, Nepal.

At these times, my saving grace is imagination. I can go to places never seen by looking at them through my mind's eye and I can invent the feelings such places would inspire.

Someplace like Greece, for example. But not Athens. Someplace else, someplace isolated, away. Some island in the Aegean with an unpronounceable name.

I'm in a boat, a fishing boat. I'm hitching a ride with some fisherman and we're going to their village on the other side of the island. Their village is smaller than the main village, the one we're leaving. Their village has maybe a hundred houses. They tell me this in broken English after a lot of chatter and much pointing and laughing at the strange American.

It's sunset and it's warm. The sea spray hitting us soaks our clothes but dries quickly on our skin. The boat is churning at top speed and the engine makes a horrendous noise. There are fishing nets and lines scattered about, but the hull is empty because they've sold the day's catch at the big village. There is wine and hard bread.

I met them at the fish market and there are five of them, fathers and sons from two families.

I wouldn't have been invited if it hadn't been for the one who speaks a little English. He has his own wanderlust and wants to hear about America. To him I am not an individual with my own ideas and beliefs, but a representative of my country, a great and rich land, and am therefore responsible for all its policies and mistakes.

He shouts at me over the noise: "America. Too much bombs."

"Yes, many of us don't like that."

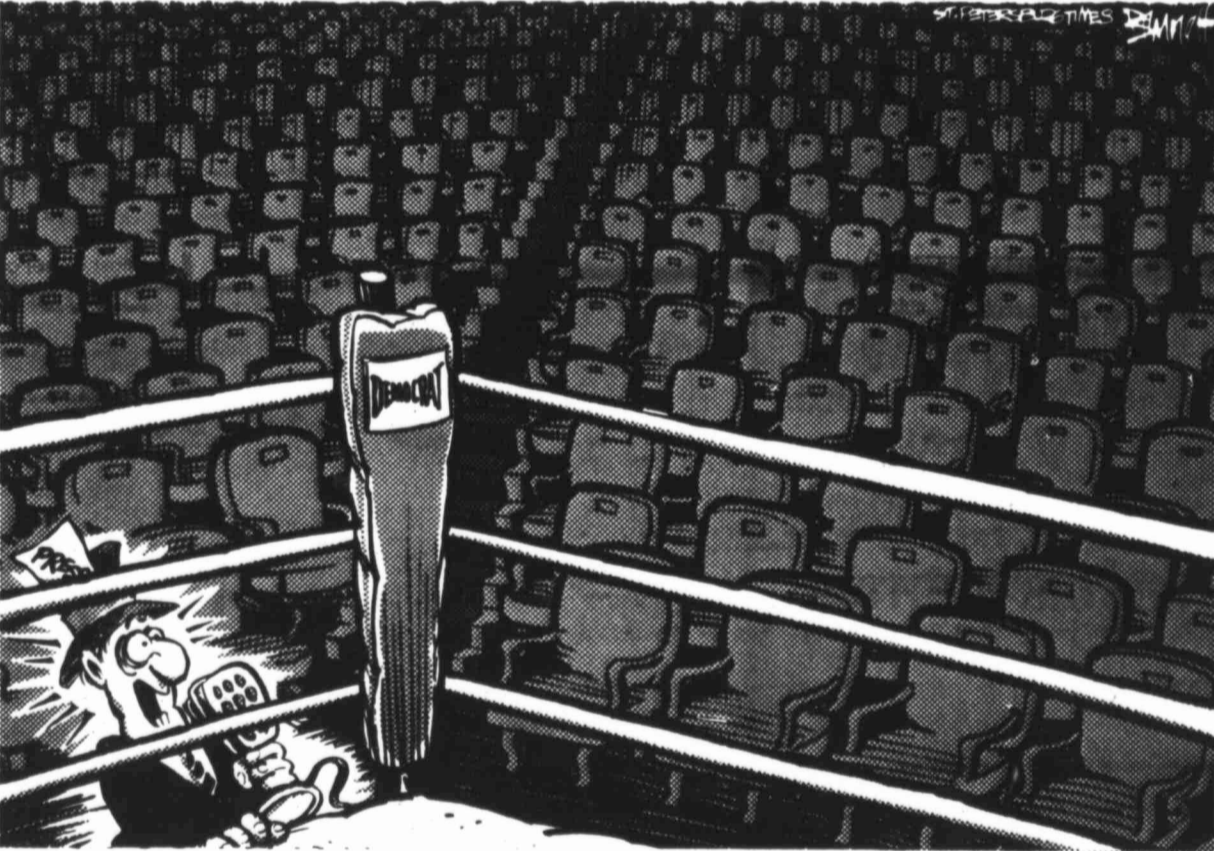

Already I've fallen into speaking for a segment of our population. Dissatisfied that we could never begin to discuss the subject fully, I look off at the approaching village. Stucco houses lined up against the hillside are pink in the sunset and I think it's great to be alive.

We land and I help unload the gear. The sweaty pulling and lifting feels good as I try, as a way of saying thank you, to be a good hand. Unfortunately, I'm in the way more than anything else.

They take my inexperience good-naturedly and the one who speaks invites me to his family's home for dinner and to stay the night. He is intent as he uses hand motions to get his message across.

What strange dishes will I eat and what will I sleep on? I rely on my imagination to provide an answer of some sort.

But to my supreme sadness, it can never really be the same.

... It's a left from Mondale, a right from Glenn, Jackson and Cranston on the ropes... the crowd's going wild...

Ghost of Plastic Man future

Toggle woke up on January 2 bleary-eyed. A man was standing by his bed.

"Who are you?"

"I'm the Plastic Man."

"What the hell is the Plastic Man?"

"I represent American Express, Visa, MasterCard, Diner's Club and every other charge account that uses plastic."

"What do you want from me?"

"The Plastic Man pulled out two fistfuls of flimsy tissues from his pocket. 'You seem to have had quite a Christmas.'"

Toggle took the flimsies and studied them. "It does look like my signature."

"Then there is no doubt in your mind that they are yours?"

"I don't know. I went on a Christmas bender all of December. I remember going into stores and if I saw something I wanted I just bought it. I bought things for my wife, I bought things for my kids, I bought things for my friends, and I think I even bought things for people I didn't know. I had too much good spirits."

"And how did you budget to pay for all these things?"

"It never occurred to me. No one ever asked me for money. They just asked for a credit card. Then they put the card into a machine, wrote something on a form, handed a piece of flimsy paper to me and said, 'Have a Merry Christmas.' Not one person who waited on me ever mentioned the word money."

"Are you trying to tell me that you thought everything you got in a store was free?"

"I'm just telling you I was drunk with spending power. Everybody else in the stores was too. People almost came to blows trying to hand the salespeople their credit cards."

"Do you know what a credit card is?"

"Yes, it's a piece of plastic that has your name and a number and expiration date on it. If you have enough of them it makes a terrible bulge in your pocket."

"A credit card is more than a piece of plastic. It is an agreement between you and the issuer that it can be used in lieu of cash when you purchase something or receive a meal or a hotel room for the night."

"Oh, does my head hurt. Wait a minute, now I remember. I felt so good about buying so many things for Christmas that after I did my shopping I took the family and my friends out to celebrate. Boy, was I drunk, but did I have a great time. You should have been here on Christmas morning. You couldn't get into the living room it was stacked with so much junk. The big joke was all the time I was out using my piece of plastic, my wife was out using hers. We couldn't stop giggling for two days."

"I can appreciate how you felt. Now can we talk about these flimsies?"

"What's there to talk about?"

"We need the money these pieces of paper represent. I believe they total up to $8,760.70. We'd like your personal check or cash."

"I haven't got that kind of money."

"Then we'll have to charge 21 percent interest a month until you pay it."

"That's fine with me."

"It isn't fine with us. We have to pay for all the things you bought because we have guaranteed the stores and restaurants that you would fulfill your financial obligations."

"Well, as long as somebody pays them I guess I'm out of the woods."

"You're not out of the woods, Mr. Toggle. You're up to your hips in debt, and I'm here to collect it. Whether you were drunk or not, we can't accept Christmas hysteria as an excuse for not honoring your flimsies."

"Wait a minute. Don't get excited." Toggle turned over to his sleeping wife and shook her.

"Honey, there's a guy here that wants $8,760 for what we spent for Christmas."

Mrs. Toggle mumbled sleepily, "Well, give him one of my credit cards. They're in my purse on the dresser."

Billy Graham

Living without marriage wrong

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I agree with you that marriage should be an act of real commitment. But that is why I have decided it will be right for me to live with my boyfriend before we get married, because I want to be sure he is the right one before marrying him. Is this wrong? — B.C.

DEAR B.C.: What you are planning to do is wrong, and I pray that you will reconsider it carefully before you do something that you will later regret.

It is wrong first of all because God has made it very clear that the sexual act — which itself should be a symbol of oneness and commitment — is to be limited to husband and wife. One of the Ten Commandments declares, "You shall not commit adultery" (Exodus 20:14). So serious was this, in fact, that in ancient Israel the law decreed that a person caught in adultery should be killed. Yes, marriage is an act of commitment — and because God takes it so seriously, it would be wrong for you to live together without the commitment of marriage.

It is also wrong from a practical standpoint. For one thing, you can never know if a marriage will last just because you have lived together. The key to a successful marriage is not just compatibility (although that certainly can enter into it), but commitment — something you cannot judge in a relationship which is based on a lack of commitment. Also, even if you got married after a year or so, you would discover later that there were aspects to your husband's personality and character that you never had suspected.

There is a far better way for you — God's way. God loves you, and he has a perfect plan for your life — including a plan for your marriage. If you commit your life to Christ and then seek his will, you can be sure he will lead you to the person he has chosen for your future husband, if it is his will for you to be married.

I can assure you from personal experience that there is no greater joy than being married to the person of God's choice. Don't get trapped into thinking you can have a fulfilling marriage or life by leaving God out of your life. Turn to Christ and he will give you the joy that comes from following his will.

Dear Abby

Wheelchair users appreciate common sense, courtesy

DEAR READERS: "Four-Wheelers" asked why someone hasn't written a booklet on wheelchair etiquette. Well, someone has. The Scholtz Medical Center in Waterloo, Iowa, has prepared a pamphlet titled, "What do I do when I meet a person in a wheelchair?" It offers suggestions for non-wheelchair users who encounter wheelchair users.

Below are the 12 guidelines from the booklet:

1. Always ask the wheelchair user if he or she would like assistance before you help. Your help may not be needed or wanted.
2. Don't hang or lean on a person's wheelchair because it is part of the wheelchair user's personal body space.
3. Speak directly to the person in the wheelchair, not to someone nearby as if the wheelchair user did not exist.
4. If conversation lasts more than a few minutes, consider sitting down or kneeling to get yourself on the same level as the wheelchair user.
5. Don't demean or patronize the wheelchair user by patting him or her on the head.
6. Give clear directions, including distance, weather conditions and physical obstacles that may hinder the wheelchair user's travel.
7. Don't discourage children from asking questions about the wheelchair. Open communication helps

8. When a wheelchair user "transfers" out of the wheelchair to a chair, toilet, car or bed, do not move the wheelchair out of reaching distance.
 9. It is OK to use expressions like "running along" when speaking to the wheelchair user. It is likely the wheelchair user expresses things the same way.
 10. Be aware of a wheelchair user's capabilities. Some users can walk with aid and use wheelchairs because they can conserve energy and move about quickly.
 11. Don't classify persons who use wheelchairs as sick. Wheelchairs are used for a variety of non-contagious disabilities.
 12. Don't assume that using a wheelchair is in itself a tragedy. It is a means of freedom that allows the user to move about independently.
- The center will be happy to send the pamphlet free to anyone who requests it with a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope. Write the Public Relations Office, Scholtz Medical Center, Kimball and Ridgeway Avenues, Waterloo, Iowa 50702.
- (Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Samuels enjoys working with young people

By RHONDA WITT
Church Editor

"I really enjoy working with the youth," says Randy Samuels, youth and education minister at Emmanuel Baptist Church. "I just have a special place in my heart for young people."

"The key to my ministry is developing a trust with the young people. When I do that they will follow me. It's almost like a friendship."

"The youth ministry is the easiest ministry because kids are always looking for something to do," he said. "If you show them a little leadership they will follow. I don't ever try to force them into doing anything. The ministry is set up in a way that you don't ever have to force anything on them."

Samuels became interested in the ministry when he was called into it by the Lord. "It is all I ever wanted to be. I enjoy working with people, especially people who need help."

At 15, Samuels decided to go into the ministry while he was at Hillcrest Baptist Church. He began his ministry at Veteran's Administration Medical Center by holding services in alcoholic and drug ward. Before he was 15, he had more than 100 hours of service at VAMC.

While working there, Samuels met Logan Peterson, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church. "That is where I met Logan and really got to know him." Between the time, he worked at VAMC and began his youth ministry at Emmanuel Baptist Church, Samuels lived in Abilene.

Samuels had moved back to Big Spring to attend Howard College when he learned about Emmanuel Baptist Church's need for a youth director. "I heard through a friend that they were looking for a youth director. I called and found out they were also looking for an educational minister."

"They asked me to preach for them and I went and preached for them," he said. "That Sunday night they called me and said they had voted 100 per-

BSSH toured by ministers

The Howard County Ministerial Fellowship met at the Big Spring State Hospital chapel, Nov. 21, 1983. Dr. Ray Tatum of BSSH indicated that the hospital has 458,743 employees and serves 56 counties. Thirty-five percent of the patients have drug and alcohol-related problems.

Mollie Butler of BSSH spoke about treatment methods and the hospital's philosophy. Patients are treated in the least-restricted environments possible. Small, satellite centers are provided in outlying areas for treatments and emergencies. The outpatient clinic in Big Spring treated more than 7,000 persons last year. The average cost per patient is $90 per day.

Fifty percent of the patients are "repeaters." No research or surgery is done at the Big Spring facility. Chaplaincy services are provided at BSSH.

Members of the Ministerial Fellowship were given a guided tour of the BSSH's facility. The tour included the admissions unit, multiple disability unit, adoles-

A dinner will be held at 6:30 p.m. The dinner will be $5 per person. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Jolts, strains are element of growth

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

"I's been a rough year for that big, visionary, ecumenical composite, the National Council of Churches, sometimes lumbering along, sometimes shaken and lurching, but still plowing ahead as a team."

"The council has always had a bumpy ride," says Claire Randall, general secretary of the cooperative association of most of the nation's major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations.

"We have had some tough things to deal with," she adds, "but I think we have worked our way through them in a way that has kept this council in a stable position and kept us able to do our work."

The hard spots came in jarring succession in 1983 — television attacks, an uproar over "desexing" Bible readings, the abrupt resignation of the council's president, conflict over a homosexual denomination, financial problems.

But out of such difficulties, she thinks representatives of the various denominations — Baptists, Lutherans, Episcopalians, Methodists, Eastern Orthodox, Quakers and Presbyterians "experienced a greater depth of what unity and community are about."

"It is not an easy, simple, pleasant kind of thing," she says. "It is a struggle."

But out of it, she adds, came a greater understanding both of "our diversity" and of the means for living with it in pursuing Christian unity. "We found a deeper relationship."

The latest crisis came last November with the sudden resignation as president of United Methodist Bishop James Armstrong of Indiana. But the first vice president, African Methodist Episcopal Bishop Philip R. Cousin of Birmingham, Ala., stepped in to fill the post.

He pledged the council would continue "unwavering in its commitment to peace with justice and to Christian unity."

The council weathered another strained interlude late in the year over the application for membership of a denomination serving homosexuals, finally shelved after two years controversy by deciding simply not to act either way.

Five Eastern Orthodox denominations had served notice they would quit the cooperative organization if it admitted the homosexual-oriented church, and others indicated it would cause severe problems for them. Leaders interpreted the outcome as not spurning persons, but as rejecting homosexual practice.

Earlier, a storm of reaction, mostly negative, arose over the publication by a council committee of a new "inclusive language" lectionary of Bible readings, revised to cent unit, west psychiatric unit, alcohol and drug unit, and outpatient clinic.

Howard College students presented choral and solo readings based on five different Psalms.

The Howard County Ministerial Fellowship also meet at the Spanish Inn, Dec. 19.

Women elect officers

Officers were elected during a meeting of the Women of First Church of God, Jan. 2.

Officers elected to two year terms were Anna Smith, president, Vera Blackburn, parliamentarian, Ethel Hickson, stewardship, Arah Phillips, finance director, Virginia Chappell, secretary, and Kathryn Thomas, historian.

Betty Reagan presented the first study of "New Developments in Africa." The study, "The Masai Story" was written by Paul and Nova Hutchings, missionaries in Kenya, East Africa. The objectives of the study were to acquaint the women with Masai people and some of their history and traditions, to present history about the Church of God in Masailand, and to create a feeling of friendship toward the Masai.

Masailand is a 54,000 square mile area, part which lies in Kenya and part in Tanzania. An estimated 125,000 Masai lived there. A report stated that the Church of God has 28 churches, 21 primary schools, five clinics and two dispensaries in Masai territory.

The next meeting will be Feb. 6 in the church sanctuary.

eliminate asserted "male bias" in Scriptures.

"I think the more agitation you get the more you realize you are hitting at a vital concern," she says. "I think that in the civil rights movement there was that kind of violent reaction to the non-violent efforts of blacks to make changes in power positions."

"I think that this is precisely what's being asked here... And the established power base of male position is not going to easily give up that position."

She predicts that in a few years the lectionary revisions will be considered "quite acceptable."

Another blast came when a CBS television program, "60 Minutes," charged that U.S. member denominations were supporting armed guerrilla movements in Africa through a World Council of Churches special fund.

Subsequent inquiries found that U.S. denominations generally have not contributed to the fund, and Ms. Randall says reaction of church people had been "overwhelmingly supportive" of the council.

The council 250-governing board, made up of representatives of member churches, approved a 1984 budget of $35 million, but about 78 percent of that comes designated for overseas ministries, including the council's relief arm, Church World Service.

But the council's administration and some of its units depend on undesignated "fair share" contributions by member churches, and assessments often have not been met, nor kept pace with inflation, forcing reductions in staff and services.

Ms. Randall says none of the problems, or criticisms, have changed the council's fundamental commitments to Christian unity and to helping the poor, but the council is concerned in overcoming rank-and-file uncertainties and questions.

"We began to understand the gap we had let grow," she says, and to examine means of doing something about it. "Any institution has to renew itself, has to re-evaluate itself."

Explosion baffles Massachusetts officials

NORTH ATTLEORO, Mass. (AP) — A mysterious explosion that apparently occurred in an empty field released a thick, foul-smelling, yellow cloud, and 100 residents were evacuated temporarily, officials said. "No one was hurt," said town health agent Jack Bush. "It's an oddball thing to happen." "The only thing I could think of is that somebody got a big chemistry set over Christmas," he said. "I don't know anything else that could put out that yellow vapor. The vapor had the taste and odor of sulphur." The fire department ordered the residents to evacuate after a five-foot thick cloud formed about 10 feet off the ground over an entire 10-acre vacant field on the outskirts of town, Bush said. All returned home after 20 minutes later, he said. Investigators found no sign of an explosion in the field, which has been cleared to make way for a low-income housing project, Bush said.

Passers to highlight 38th annual Hula Bowl

HONOLULU (AP) — Two quarterbacks who rewrote the NCAA record book will ace each other in Saturday's 38th annual Hula Bowl here.

Ben Bennett of Duke will lead the East attack, while Steve Young of Brigham Young will direct the West in the 11 a.m., HST, all-star game at Aloha Stadium.

Bennett set seven NCAA records, 13 Atlantic Coast Conference and 39 school records. He completed more passes, 820, and gained more yards, 9,615, than any college player in history. He was the ACC player of the year.

Young also set numerous NCAA records, including gaining 200 or more yards in 22 consecutive games, passing for touchdowns in 22 consecutive games, and completing 65.3 percent of his career passes. He was the Western Athletic Conference player of the year, and was runner-up in this year's Heisman Trophy balloting.

Young will be relying on protection from an offensive line that includes Nebraska guard Dean Steinkuhler, winner of the Outland and Lombardi awards. The East offensive line will include East Carolina strongman Terry Long, who was selected over Steinkuhler on the Associated Press All-America first team. Hula Bowl executive director Mackey Yangisawa has assembled 68 of the nation's top football players from 54 schools, the most schools ever represented in the 38 years of the all-star game.

One school not represented is national champion Miami. Miami coach Howard Schnellenberger is coaching in Saturday's East-West Shrine game at Stanford, Calif., and two of his players elected to follow him there, Yangisawa said.

Also at the Shrine game will be Heisman Trophy winner Mike Rozier and Nebraska teammate Irving Fryar, who earlier had signed agreements to play in the Hula Bowl. Fryar said he and Rozier decided to go to the Shrine game so they could stay with Cornhusker quarterback Turner Gill.

But an ankle injury suffered in the Orange Bowl loss to Miami will keep Rozier out of that game.

Rozier and Fryar were replaced on the West team by running back Donald Jordan of Houston and wide receiver Jeff Champine of Colorado State.

Coaching the East will be Vince Dooley of Georgia, assisted by Hayden Fry of Iowa and Joe Restic of Harvard. LaVell Edwards of Brigham Young will coach the West, and will be assisted by Jim Johnson of Oklahoma State and Bill Yeoman of Houston.

RAINY DAY BLUES— Professional golfer Fuzzy Zoeller of Albany, Indiana appears grumpy about the rainy weather during the Pro-Am portion of the $1 Million Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship in Tucson. Rain ended play shortly after noon. The championship continues through Sunday.

Midland nips BSHS for the third time

MIDLAND — The Lady Steers came within 11 seconds of defeating the Midland Bulldogettes for their third basketball district win— unfortunately Midland's Denise Lanz had other plans.

Lanz hit the winning bucket with 11 ticks left on the clock to snatch a near-victory from Big Spring. It marked the third consecutive time that Midland had nipped the Lady Steers at the wire, the last time being a 43-42 heartbreaker.

Big Spring took the lead in the contest 60-59 as Debra Rubio sunk both ends of a on-and-one with 28 seconds remaining. Midland came down and missed the shot which was rebounded by Paula Spears who led all scorers with 22 points. But Spears was whistled for a travelling call which set the stage for Lanz's last second heart-breaker.

Lady Steers coach Annette Fowler called the loss a very frustrating one. "I'm very frustrated, but the kids didn't stand around and let them take charge of the game," said Fowler. "It doesn't help when they have a large crowd and you look up and don't see any fans for your team. The team handled the loss well, we will be able to bounce back."

The Lady Steers JV won their second district game against one defeat with a 49-45 victory. Monique Jones and Monica Lockridge scored 24 and 10 respectively.

In other 4-5A action last night Permian (2-2) downed Abilene (0-4) 65-56 while Cooper (2-2) defeated Odessa (0-4) 61-45. In the battle of the unbeaten San Angelo (4-0) downed Lee (3-1) 67-49.

The Lady Steers will be in action Monday night versus Odessa at Steer Gym.

Watson ready for tour

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — An eager, enthusiastic Tom Watson has one more day to wait before starting his 1984 golf season in the $1 million Seiko-Tucson Match Play Championship.

"I'm very enthusiastic, really anxious to get started," Watson said Thursday when the double-bracketed match play championship — with brackets for both the regular PGA Tour players and the seniors — took a break from competition for the pro-am. The pro-am eventually was rained out.

"I'm really ready to go," Watson said, then flashed that small-boy grin. "I said the same thing last year, but I didn't mean it."

The difference, he said, is a change in his swing, a change that he said "is exactly what I needed to do. 'I hadn't played that well for the last couple of years. I was just gutting it out. It's been frustrating," Watson said.

But it's been frustrating only by his own elevated standards. Watson, who dominated world golf for five years, has won only twice since June of 1982. Both of those victories came in the British Open. "But I haven't won a Tour event in a long time. I've had a real long dry spell," Watson said. "I've made a change I believe will help. I've made a change in my swing that I think is very important. 'It involves pitching and chipping. I wasn't staying down through the ball. I haven't changed my backswing, but I've changed my follow-through, so that I'm keeping the clubhead on the ball longer."

Girls seek improvement

Lamesa boys after district crown

The Lamesa boys will be going for their second consecutive District 2-4A championship while the Lamesa girls will be facing an uphill struggle for survival. Last season first year boys' coach Wayne Roberts led the Tornados to the district championship with a 24-6 season record and a 13-1 district slate. The Golden Tors were defeated by Pampa in bi-district play.

Gone are all-district selections Victor Spencer and Steve Alexander but seniors Mark Murphy and Todd Sons and junior Chris Mason return to the starting lineup ready for another district title. The Tors are currently 12-3 with the three losses coming against 5-A opponents Midland, Amarillo and San Angelo. But Roberts knows the road to the district title leads through Andrews where the Mustangs are ranked ninth in the state. Meanwhile first year girls coach N.D. Cox is in a rebuilding process with his squad. The Tors have only three seniors on the squad. Lamesa will have a hard time challenging district favorite San Angelo Lake View who has been on a roll lately. Junior forward Angela Hawkins (5-8) leads the scoring with 12 points per game. Junior forward Vera Jones (5-9) is averaging 11 points and 8 rebounds. Kelli Gillispie averages 10 points per contest. Other starters are Kelli Emfinger and Gina Gibson.

Hart looking toward USFL

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Add Jim Hart, former star quarterback for the St. Louis Cardinals, to the list of those seeking jobs in the United States Football League.

Hart, 39, insisting he's still feeling spry enough to compete, became available when the Cards unceremoniously cut him.

"I've been waiting for this conversation for a number of weeks," the veteran of 18 seasons in the National Football League said after getting the news from Coach Jim Hanifan Wednesday. "It didn't surprise me."

Hart also declared despite the wear and tear of 198 games and 5,069 passes, he was not ready for retirement.

East-West clash features top stars

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Irving Fryar was slumped to the ground in agony because he felt he'd let his Nebraska teammates down in the Orange Bowl. The All-American wide receiver, no matter how well he does on Saturday, will be helping many people. He'll participate in the 59th Shrine East-West football game, played for the benefit of crippled children who get free care in Shriner's hospitals around the country.

Another player in the game, Florida quarterback Wayne Peace, said after visiting the hospital in San Francisco this week, "It's so easy to think things aren't going well, that you have problems. This kind of thing lets you know that you've got everything in the world."

Things did not go well for Fryar in the final minute of Monday's Orange Bowl game.

THE LIGHT TOUCH

By Sherry Wegner

Time is very valuable, but free, so we throw it away.

Make yourself necessary to somebody.

For every minute of unhappiness, you lose 60 seconds of happiness.

Don't overlook the obvious.

It's obvious that a farmer is going to have to secure his operation in order to stay in business - Crop Ins. may be the answer. See Sherry at Big Spring Seed & Chemical, 602 N.E. 2nd about Multiple Peril (All Risk) Crop Insurance. Don't wait, call now for 1984 insurance info. 267-2549.

HOW TO LAY YOUR BURDENS DOWN

Matthew 11:28-29

Sunday Morning Message 8:30 & 11:30 A.M.
Evening Message 7:00 P.M.

Phillip McClendon

All of us have burdens & heartaches so great that we did not know what to do. Someone said, "Read the Bible and pray and give them to God." You found a passage of scripture and prayed and said, "Lord, I am giving this to you." You described in detail what you were giving to Him. You went to bed - couple of hours passed by, all of a sudden you felt the same thing was still there. You came to the conclusion that you gave it to Him & He gave it back.

How do you lay your burdens down and find victory in a particular area of your life? Dr. McClendon will share principles with you that can bring power and strength for living. Don't miss this message that can make 1984 the best year ever.
